Senate overrides veto; iver bill sent to House

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate assed a $593 million rivers and arbors bill Thursday in its first action a series of bills vetoed by President ixon last October as too costly. The bill was sent to the House by a 3-14 roll call vote, 13 votes more an the two - thirds needed to remide a second veto.

Voting against the bill were 12 epublicans and two Democrats. Final ssage last year was unanimous. The river and harbor bill would thorize future appropriations for 34 ood control, navigation and beach sion projects. Chairman Jennings Randolph, W.Va., of the Senate Public Works ommittee called it the most modest public works omnibus authorization bill since 1948.

In his veto message after Congress adjourned last fall, President Nixon said the measure contained projects never approved by the executive branch, and it also would limit the authority of the president to change criteria for measuring the feasibility of water resource projects.

The President's Water Resources Council had recommended that criteria standards include a factor based on commercial interest rates. This factor could disqualify some marginal projects on the basis of the ratio between costs and benefits.

Drug agency rivalries studied abuse laws. The task force, established without fanfare, was one of the first projects given Ash after his appointment as chief of the Office of Management and Budget, knowledgeable White House sources said. It has no deadline for completion of its work. Charges that federal drug - abuse efforts are beset by lack of coordination and agency rivalry have come from several quarters in recent years.

For example, a private, previously unpublicized study sharply critical of federal drug - abuse programs claims they are marked by "an unusual degree of wasteful duplication, a chronic lack of coordination and a near absence of communication among agencies about related projects."

The 1972 study, commissioned by the American Bar Assn. (ABA) and the foundation - supported Drug Abuse Council, was circulated among government officials and others working in the drug - abuse field, but never released to the public. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

The study, which the ABA and the council say they have neither "adopted nor endorsed," claims that "friction, confusion and jealousies have arisen," between the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs in the Justice Dept. and agents of the Bureau of Customs in the Treasury Dept.

Customs and the drug bureau are the two major narcotics law enforcement agencies.

Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., said in a House speech a year ago that rivalry between the two agencies was at "dangerous if not comic opera" proportions.

Lack of coordination "may even reach the point where, after an arrest, Customs officers find they netted a drug bureau informant trying to make a purchase from a Customs informant," Murphy said.

The recent private study, conducted by 18 law students and a professor, said that despite a presidential directive attempting to define areas of responsibility "greater efforts are

Early in 1970, Nixon gave the drug bureau primary responsibility for international efforts at halting the flow of illicit drugs to the United States. Customs was to play a supporting role.

But Customs officials continued to halt drug smuggling.

A House subcommittee staff report issued early this year quoted Customs officials in Washington and Southeast Asia as complaining "the bureau did not share all of the intelligence that is collected...the bureau is not likely to work on behalf of Customs. As a result, it was decided to send our own intelligence agents overseas.'

The private study described federal drug programs that deal with enforcement, treatment, research and education as reins hampered by "overemphasis on law enforcement; lack of knowledge, absence of long term strategy and short - term priorities, insufficient coordination; lack of bold experimentation; inability and failure to evaluate programs and weaknesses in the budget structure."

Drug abuse programs would receive $179 million for the fiscal year beginning next July 1, according to the budget President Nixon sent to Congress on Monday. That total is nearly five times higher than the amount budgeted three years ago.

Ash, former president of Litton Industries, advised Nixon on questions of government organization while still in private industry.

Vomen attack procedures in

rape trials

By CAROL MORELLO State News Staff Writer

Last in a series

trials have received considerable criticism from women's groups nationwide. Women charge, and prosecutors admit, that the woman is put on trial more than the rapist.

The Women's Legal Defense Fund in Washington D.C. recently for rape law reform, called claiming that rape is the only violent crime where the victim must prove to the jury she tried vigorously to defend herself from her attacker.

"We do not require a victim of robbery or extortion to show that he offered physical resistance, screamed or tried to run away before he 'consented' to part with his property," the group said in a

"Yet we do require this sort of showing from a woman who cooperates with prosecutors attempting to obtain a conviction of rape.'

Raymond Scodeller, Ingham County prosecuting attorney, said that to obtain a conviction on rape, penetration and strong resistance must be proven. He said that resistance may be overlooked if threats, a weapon or a beating were involved.

"Then the question becomes, did the victim really think her life was in danger," he said.

Scodeller said the victim can expect to be cross - examined on her morals.

The victim gets raked over the coals," he said. "Even though the prosecutor makes objections the judge usually allows it.'

Schodeller said leading questions from the defense attorney are "He may say, 'You made other complaints like this before;' or 'You consented then, but now because your parents know about you, you're saying you struggled.

"If the woman has borne illegitimate children, that pattern of cross · examination occurs, too," he added.

But Scodeller said the questions are asked to protect the constitutional rights of the accused, not because it is a "man - woman thing."

He estimated convictions on forcible rape at 40 per cent.

Scodeller said as a prosecutor, he would prefer to see men on the jury in a rape trial instead of women because of the usual cross examination of the victim's morals.

"I think women are harder on women than men on men," he said. "Even a prostitute can be raped, though it would be pretty hard to get a conviction.'

Ingham County Sheriff Kenneth Preadmore recently recommended a revision of rape laws to aid conviction and ease the reporting of the crime for the women

He suggested establishing degrees of punishment. Noting that the penalty for rape in all states is either death or a life sentence, he said extreme penalties are a deterrent to having the rape reported.

Preadmore said if the woman were brutally beaten, punishment should be severe, but said not all situations call for extreme punishment.

"You can murder someone and be walking in seven - and - a - half years," he noted. "Even if the rape is a situation where emotions get control, a man can go for life or until he dies or gets killed in the penitentiary."

Preadmore called for a closer look at the rapist to determine if he needs psychological help instead of a prison term.

The prosecution in the Pentagon Papers trial pressed a former Defense Dept. analyst Thursday to retract his story of official orders to bury a study helpful to Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo. The witness remained steadfast.

Retired Air Force Lt. Col. Edward A. Miller insisted repeatedly on cross - examination that there were such orders and that he saw a written memo relating to them.

Miller had been called by the defense Wednesday to tell of his work analyzing the Pentagon Papers for the Defense Dept.

New gun bill introduced

Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D - Ill., introduced a bill Thursday to require registration and federal licensing of all handguns.

He called handguns the chief instrument of crime and violence in America and said 65 per cent of the nation's homicides in 1972 involved firearms, of which 78 per cent involved handguns, even though only 27 per cent of the nation's firearms handguns.

Nixon, Heath begin talks

President Nixon, welcoming British Prime Minister Edward Heath to the White House, urged today that they seek "a common policy for this era of peace" which the Vietnam truce hopefully presages.

The President congratulated the visiting prime minister and his government for not looking inward but outward to the world, as evidenced by entry into the European Britain's full Community.

Heath said in response, "I am confident that the intimacy and freedom of our exchanges will be no less than in the past."

Gasoline shortage predicted

An independent oil marketer predicted Thursday that this winter's home fuel shortages will turn into gasoline shortages next summer.

John G. Buckley of Boston said while warmer weather may ease the home fuel oil shortage, "it is obvious that at that time there will be another , shortage – this time a massive one that will dwarf last summer's." At the very least, Buckley told the Senate Interior Committee, gas prices will rise because big refiners can't make enough to meet the huge demands of vacationing Americans.

City moves step closer o system for cable TV

East Lansing moved a step closer to getting a citywide ble television system Wednesday night as the city's cable mmission got answers to some questions about a proposal build the system.

A meeting between the East Lansing Cable mmunications Commission and Edward E. Drake, ecutive vice president of LVO Cable, Inc. of Tulsa, Okal., s to answer a list of 33 questions the commission sent to ake last week dealing with parts of the proposal the mmission wanted to clarify.

But Drake disputed a study made for the commission last year by Robert E. Babe, asst. professor of television and radio, which gave estimates that National Cable's capital investment should be about $495,000 - which was $498,000 lower than National Cable's estimate.

Drake said Babe's figures did not take rising equipment costs and interest charges on construction loans into account, as well as not being comparable to National's figures, which Drake called "quite realistic" based on past construction experience.

In answer to another question Drake said Married Student Housing residents would be entitled to a reduced rate if the billing work is handled through the Married Housing office.

Married Housing residents who get cable television now pay $5 a month to National Cable, which wired Married Student Housing and part of East Lansing under an old franchise agreement before the new ordinance was drawn

If the franchise is granted National Cable will operate under the stringent new ordinance which takes effect in

The company also agreed to seek permission from the FCC for a higher franchise fee - in effect, asking for a higher tax against its revenue - which would be used by the commission to carry out planned services.

The Rev. Truman A. Morrison, commission chairman, said after the meeting this agreement meant "enlightened self -interest"on the company's part since the services the commission will use the money for will make the company's product - cable television service - more attractive and saleable.

On some questions, such as whether low numbers of subscribers caused high rates meant higher numbers of subscribers than the company predicted meant lower rates, Drake said he had no immediate answers but promised to reply to the commission in writing before the next commission meeting.

Drake called the absence of specific information on minority hiring practices in the proposal "an oversight," adding that the company had a program to recruit and train minority workers before the FCC required it. He said details would be given in his written answers to the

2 month wait seen for abortion ruling

INTERNATIONAL

It may be at least two months before Michigan women and doctors know their legal rights under the U.S. Supreme Court's recent decision striking down the restrictive abortion laws of Texas and

The Michigan Supreme Court has said it will hear arguments in three pending abortion cases during the first week in April and state Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley has said he will not issue a legal opinion until that court rules.

Once arguments are heard and the cases are closed, it is anybody's guess when decisions will be handed down.

Barbara Robb of Detroit, an attorney for a class - action suit challenging the constitutionality of Michigan's 1846 law, said she had hoped the Michigan court would dispense with briefs and arguments and issue an immediate opinion consistent with what the U.S. Supreme Court has set only three will be argued in April. A fourth has been postponed for technical reasons. The three cases are:

 The Robb suit brought by former state Sen. N. Lorraine Beebe which holds that Michigan's law is unconstitutional because it violates a woman's right to privacy.

The appeal of Samuel Bricker, an Oakland County layman who was convicted of illegal abortion because he is not a licensed physician.

•A request by Dr. Duane R. Larkin of Detroit for a permanent injunction against enforcement of the existing law.

Larkin, who has not been convicted of any abortion law violations, names Wayne County Prosecutor William Cahalan and Kelley in his suit.

Though U.S. Supreme Court decisions take precedence over any other court decisions, Kelley said Tuesday it would be "improper and indeed unprecedented" for him to issue an advisory opinion until the cases pending before the state court are settled. But, he said, doctors who perform abortions illegally under the present law "do so at their own peril."

Women's power untapped

Today's world has been constructed largely by men. Some feel that the extreme insensitivity or impersonality of today's world has its roots manifested in men and their aggressive power - mongering tendencies.

I'm inclined to agree. But I'm not about to admit that I or many of my male friends are perpetrating these

The pathology that breeds the exploitation of women in society is certainly not something to be sought after and fought for. Women, indeed anyone who aspires to change the world, should aim to make it a people place rather than a power place.

Women complain of being powerless and defenseless in their struggle to uproot male dominance in society, but I think this notion is foolish.

In American society, women change it, God only knows the mess represent 53 percent of the total per cent of all consumer purchases and yet they say they don't have the roots

If women put their heads together they could change things radically.

Women fully support the billion dollar cosmetic industry. Hence, If they refused to buy cosmetics for a year, causing that industry to approach bankruptcy, you can bet your last nickle that cosmetics lobbyists in government would get the wishes of women in America taken care of.

Final peace found in amnesty

By RICHARD K. FREER Social Work graduate student

The Vietnam war is over. The devastation and bloodshed of the longest war in American history has ended. Col. Nolde, the last victim of the conflict has been buried. Now it is time to patch our wounds, welcome our Pows back to their homeland, try to learn how we ever made such a monumental blunder as to become involved in Vietnam, and vow never to make that mistake again. Now is the time to focus on the chasm that divides this nation's war supporters and war protesters. Now is the time to restore peace and prosperity at home and tend to problems on our own shores. But we cannot. The business at hand is the unfinished business of the war in Vietnam.

The last victim of the Vietnam war has not been laid to rest. He is not even dead, nor is he likely to be for some fifty years. The last victim of this war is alive in Sweden and Canada we might have peace. This country cannot expunge Vietnam from its conscience, it cannot remove the spectre which haunts it, it cannot reunite its peoples until the last victims of Vietnam, the living and suffering exiles, are granted full and unconditional amnesty.

Now is the time to do our unfinished business, to wage a final peace of Vietnam. Now is the time to bring, not just the POWs, the soldiers home, but all our brothers who have suffered because of this war. Now is the time for those vets against the war, the students and professors, the

Refund

To the Editor:

After reading the article on Jan. 24, 1973 concerning Carol Langham's problems in obtaining a refund from Student Tours, Grosse Pointe Woods, may we offer this advice, since the same thing happened to us.

We were canceled 12 hours before our flight was scheduled to leave Detroit Metropolitan airport. They called at midnight to inform us. The next morning we called both the local and main offices and spoke to every one around including the janitor. He suggested we go down to Grosse Pointe and pick up our money. After a select conversation and a stop at the local bank, we were on our way home from Grosse Pointe with the cash.

Distraction

To the Editor:

East Lansing, your poor manners are showing! The Lecture - Concert Series has a long history of late arrivals but the disgusting practice seems to have reached a peak at the Vienna Choir Boys Concert. I was so upset I wanted to leave but the thrill of having such talent right there in front of me prompted me to stay. It is a terrible distraction to have people crawling over you to get to their seats after the performance has started. And if it's distracting for the audience, just think of how bad it is for the performers.

The practice of seating late arrivals only between selections is admirable. This system works fine when a couple people are late. The plan readily breaks down when 20 or 30 people clamor at the door demanding their seats after curtain time. The lecture concert series does a tremendous job of bringing outstanding entertainment to this campus. This is especially noteworthy given the meager appropriation granted by the University. The very least we as patrons can do is make an effort to be on time. We owe this simple courtesy to both the other patrons and especially to the entertainers.

The interruptions pointed out something very basic; that it is human nature to take advantage of special favors, much to the disadvantage of everyone else. When a privilege is grossly abused it should be withdrawn. The student ushers do a fine job of getting people to their seats, but they need your help. You have to be there. Unavoidable circumstances do arise occasionally causing a late arrival. In case this happens to you, be decent enough to stand along the side aisles until intermission. This is indeed a very small inconvenience for you compared to the grief you cause others by taking your seat after the performance has begun.

Free press

With regard to John Braden's comment in Tuesday's paper, "Get your digs in while you can...", it can only be said to illustrate both a callousness with regard to human dimension and a remarkable assumption concerning the function of a free press. To relegate the criticism of an event of catastrophic human and social cost such as the Vietnam War to mere "yellow yournalism" requires both blindness to fact and insensitivity to suffering. As the student newspaper of MSU, the State News reflects the views of the students therein. One of those feelings is a deep disturbance over the role of the United States in Vietnam. If a member of the University is in disagreement with the expressed opinions, he is in his right to write letters of objection, stating his views on the subject in dispute. However, in an institution of higher learning, one expects those views to have a semblance of reason. Name - calling

Indeed, the commissions and councils in state government are not as well - known as the legislature, but the various appointive boards may possess the power and responsibility to regulate cemeteries, accountants, civil rights, elevators, hearing aid dealers, marriage counselors, plumbing, bean promoting, ski area safety or the veterans' trust fund. These are only a few of the more than 100 groups created by statutes and filled by the appointments made by the governor. The governor also has responsibility to fill judicial vacancies. Milliken has started a new trend in appointments to state university and governing boards, by appointing individuals under age 30 and often, recent alumni of the institution.

Recently, the governor has put a 22 year - old woman on the Central Michigan University Board of Trustees, a 25 - year - old man on the Lake Superior State College board, and a 27 - year - old woman on the Western Michigan University board.

"The governor has gone out of his way to solicit youthful applicants," Braithwaite said. "He is restricted by an attorney general's opinion from putting students on governing boards, but he usually tries to name recent students."

Milliken makes appointments to 11 four - year colleges in Michigan, but not to the big three which have elected governing boards - MSU, University of Michigan, and Wayne State University.

When a vacancy occurs, Braithwaite's desk becomes littered with letters of application for the post, written by individuals seeking appointment or people nominating other persons. A committee from Milliken's staff then screens the applications, making recommendations to the governor.

Firms open doors to women

By LAURA MILLER State News Staff Writer

Employment opportunities for women are increasing every day, Gail Morris, asst. director of the Placement Bureau, told women Wednesday.

"Whatever avenue you explore, you're going to get a better reception than you did five years ago," Morris said, at the third of six discussions of "What Every Woman Needs to Know", sponsored by the Residence Halls Programs.

corporations, she said, and even women without specific training in business fields are getting industry jobs because of the great demands.

It is not uncommon for a woman to be offered several jobs and then upon accepting a position, being lured to another company with a better offer, Morris said.

Women are highly sought after in the job market, she noted, because they have proven they can do the same jobs as men and do equally as well.

Morris said that over 50 per cent of the married women Women are being recruited vigorously by most large in the United States work and more than 40 per cent of Michigan women work.

At MSU, only 130 out of 6,000 women graduates reported last year to a placement bureau survey that they were housewives, she said.

Two MSU graduates, Adrienne Seabright and Beverly Kirkpatrick, talked about their uniqueness as the first women in their job area.

"I started in July and the guys just didn't know how to accept me," Seabright said, the first industrial engineer hired by Motorworld Corp. in Lansing. "But I'm right out in the factory every day with them, getting dirty."

Kirkpatrick also said the men at her office did not know what to expect of her.

"My manager said he usually hired men who had been in sports because they were go - getters, but when it came to women, he didn't know what to look for," she said.

When she started her job, Kirkpatrick said, men would bump into each other in the halls trying to get a look at women, Morris said, explaining that the most wide - open areas are in business, management, marketing, engineering and accounting. Departments at MSU are particularly interested in recruiting women, she said, citing the College of

Meditation induces unique relaxation has been "enjoying the ritual" of meditation since July, alertness' reached through meditation in which the body "meaningless sound" given to the meditators at the onset of

Four years ago, Max R. Raines, professor of ministration and higher education, began practicing the of transcendental mediation. Since that time his whole nily has begun the practice and his son, Rick, has become neditation teacher in the Lansing area.

How has transcendental meditation affected Raines?

My family, who knows me normally as a high - geared son, say they think I am more relaxed these days," the fessor says with a smile.

William H. Barr, asst. director of Student Government.

1968. He finds it "relaxing and calming," and claimed to "feel better physically."

An associate professor of American thought and language, Courtney Johnson is a two year veteran of transcendental meditation. Finding it interesting while investigating a sensitivity encounter group in Ann Arbor, Johnson feels meditation courses on campus "would be wonderful" and would like to teach it.

What is this phenomenon causing so much local and national interest? Fred Rosenberg, a local transcendental meditation teacher described it as "a unique state of 'restful gains extraordinarily deep rest, while the mind remains

"Transcendental meditation is a natural way to unfold the full potential of the mind," he said. "It reverses the accumulation of stress. Even those most skeptical experience benefits from it."

The meditators are the first to admit the benefits are what it's all about and they are as wide and as varied as the

"For a long time, I didn't notice anything," Johnson states. "But gradually, it's as if the axis my life turns on is shifting so that it turns another direction. I don't think as much about yesterday or tomorrow."

He believes that when a person mentions things like meditation in this country, people think you're crazy, speaking of mysticism, ghosts or apparitions.

'Interested people need lecturers to talk with them for an hour. In class there's not enough time to make it clear," Johnson said.

Raines is more cautious about explaining the benefits to nonmeditators, or promising them that big changes in their lives will occur. For him, he says, meditation is just a very, very pleasant experience.

"It's bound to be good for you in every way physically, mentally, and emotionally - to calm down a couple times a day," he said.

"If people go into meditation with large expectations, after trying it for four or five months and getting used to the practice, they'll give it up," Raines explained. "They are missing out on the real value of the meditation that rests in a long term commitment."

If you ask a meditator, the "commitment" involves "mantra," which varies from individual to individual, is a the practice.

Barr said he finds transcendental meditation a social movement that wants to change the American culture. He said through the practice meditators are developing a climate oriented around the systematic exploration of an individual's inner space, a systematic access to being.

"Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, who introduced transcendental meditation to this country, claims that if you meditate you will be happier, more creative, and more efficient as an individual," Barr explains. "He predicts that as a great number of people learn transcendental meditation our society will experience cultural renewal and we will enjoy

"These are utopian ideals and promises, and I think that is a pretty big load to deliver."

But individually, Barr admits that the practice of transcendental meditation is a beneficial thing. He adds, "I am just trying to understand the movement, and I vascillate between the individual and national point of view.

Alternately, Johnson views the individual side of transcendental meditation as "simply a process of getting closer and closer to yourself."

"As you meditate through the years, you become more and more aware, of yourself, of others around you, of your environment," Johnson claims. "Those who object or are puzzled or think transcendental meditation might lead them astray, must remember that the essential thing it promises is to show you yourself!"

As Paul Keil, editor of California Business Magazine, recently wrote, "Studying a subject like transcendental meditation may sound 'far out' to many of our readers, but as another editor recently pointed out, what is far out sitting quietly twice a day and saying a "mantra." The today is ordinary tomorrow and the time lag between the two is almost nonexistant in modern life.

'Magic Afternoon' plot mimics TV soap opera

"Magic Afternoon" by Wolfgang Bauer opened Tuesday night in the Arena Theater. For the sake of the Dept. of Theater, it should have closed that same night - not because the play is so shocking or offensive, but simply because it's so boring and contrived.

Book traces city's race split

Not blatant, yet not subtle, Kathy Cosseboom's book "Grosse Pointe, Michigan: Race Against Race", pinpoints the dilemma of the racial situation in the white, affluent Detroit suburb by arriving at the conclusion that there is no

A former resident of Grosse Pointe herself, Cosseboom zeros in on the contradictions and hypocrisies which abound in the community - especially those centering on housing, religious activities and education.

suburban society paper, The Grosse Pointe News, during the summer of 1966. Her savvy led her to investigate police reports on her own, tracking the events which surrounded the first black family's move into Grosse Pointe. Through interviews with blacks and white residents two years later, she investigated the after effects, the attitudes and feelings in the allegedly racist community. Contradictions fill the book, not from faulty writing but from circumstances in the community. Cosseboom emphasizes how these contradictions point out the hypocrisies in dealing with the racial situations.

For example, Cosseboom quotes a member of the Grosse Pointe Property Owners Association saying, "Realtors are showing homes now to Negroes," but she directly adds his prejudicial afterthought, ". . . they have to."

With a straight, simple style she makes an impact on the reader in describing the stagnant situation of Grosse Pointe at this time. She quotes Martha Wylie, currently president to the Michigan Human Relations Council and chairwoman of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, as positively saying that "realtors have expressed an intent to obey the law" but she lowers the boom by adding that they have "taken little affirmative action."

Contradictions leading to no conclusions are persistent evident when some residents such as Mayor William But cry, "Go easy on Grosse Pointe; we're so beaten a pummeled, we're pulpy" while others such as John 0 admit that by leaving the city and moving to Grosse Poir he felt like "a rat leaving a sinking ship. . . I get a hopel feeling, don't you?"

Claudia Cooper, a black student teacher from MSU w taught a semester at Grosse Pointe South High Scho pointed out how favorable her memories were of her stay the suburb, a good balancing device by Cosseboom to apt prove that the entire community is not a den of bigots.

However, Cooper, after saying that she would anyone who made a negative generalization about community, admits she would never encourage and teacher to work there. Cosseboom concludes with overview that Grosse Pointe is waiting, as many suburbs waiting, for a time when the old attitudes and fears will erased. She presents clear efforts at integration but the moves are, of course, counteracted by paternal prejudi and suspicions. Cosseboom does not have any profou answers but she succeeds in giving Grosse Pointe a startli reflection of its sheltered and discouraging situation:

Rather, he allows us to believe there is a way to live and work together for the benefit of all. Not easily accomplished, human understanding is a struggle towards a spiritual affirmation.

Whether by coincidence or not, two of the finest films of the past year, "Sounder" and "Pete 'n Tillie," are both playing at the Spartan Twin Theaters. It is not an accident, though, that both films are products of the same director, Martin Ritt.

Icers ready to meet Wolves

By STEVE STEIN State News Sports Writer

MSU hockey coach Amo Bessone may have been repeating an old cliche when he said that "every series from now on is very important", but the veteran Spartan mentor was quite correct in his analysis.

The first of MSU's five remaining weekend series (there is also a Wednesday game later this month) will be against the WCHA cellar dwelling Michigan Wolverines tonight and Saturday night in a pair of two - point contests.

U-M will face the Spartans at 7:30 tonight at Demonstration Hall, while both teams will move into the Michigan Coliseum in Ann Arbor for the Saturday battle, which has an 8 p.m. faceoff time.

The Spartans have shuffled their lineups partly due to injuries in an attempt to recover from last week's losses.

On the defense, Paul Pavelich will probably not see action this weekend. The sophomore is still recovering from an ankle injury suffered against MSU, which lost its Michigan in the middle of January.

> Norm Barnes will not given a game misconduct must miss the next contest after a fight with the Irish's Eddie Bumbacco last Saturday.

this weekend, North Dakota with Bob Boyd, Chris Murfey and Uve Drews.

Tom Ross, the center of MSU's freshman line, should play despite a badly bruised right foot.

"He's still limping and the foot is all black and blue, but I think that he'll play," Bessone said. "If he can't, then Darl Bolton will take his spot."

MSU's first two lines will see changes.

Due to Daryl Rice's broken leg which will keep him out for the rest of the season, Denny Olmstead will take his place at left wing on the Spartans second line. The line also includes MSU's leading goal scorer, center Steve Colp (21 tallies in all games), and right winger Mark Calder, the icer's co - scoring leader with 34 points.

In an effort to get MSU's first line rolling, Frank DeMarco has been moved into the left wing spot, play tonight because of the moving captain Bill Sipola WCHA ruling that a player to center. Michel Chaurest remains at right wing.

Ron Clark will start in also. Barnes was tossed out the nets for MSU (3.8 goals against average), opposing Michigan's scrappy Robbie Moore (5.8).

Don't toy with the questions too long, because alone they're not that significant.
The story of Dan Werner, however, is interesting and merits an expose.

Werner's last starting performance came late in the 1969 season against Minnesota. That game, along with Werner's name, has pretty much been clouded in obscurity. His only claim to recognition came the week before the Minnesota game.

The Spartans were at Purdue and it was sophomore Werner who came off the ench to fire 35 passes, completing 16 for an Werner, a eighth round surprise pick y Dallas in the football draft, watches is name come over the UPI wire. State News photo by Bruce Remington

4 yards. That set a MSU passing record d came within two yards of breaking the en existing Big Ten mark for single game ssing yardage.

The Spartans lost though, 41-13, Werner as injured in the Minnesota game, MSU ent back to its running and Werner was werneeded again. Wednesday, the 6-4 205 - pound Werner came needed. Not by MSU, but by the allas Cowboys who though enough of emer to grab him on the eight hround of e pro football draft.

"I was going on the positive indication ven to me by the Dailas scout that I rainly would be drafted and that I ouldn't be a late rounder," Werner said. But knowing the talent of the college ayers, I took it with a grain of salt.

"I suppose you let your expectations n wild or hope that the very best will ppen," he added. "I was hopeful of ing selected in the draft. The position of selection was a bonus.'

The eighth round draft of Werner came quite a surprise to most. He was the ath collegiate quarterback to go, being picked ahead of Southern Cal's quarterback Mike Rae and Penn State's John Hufnagel. Hufnagel, who led his club to two consecutive bowl invitations, was not "The guy's a big kid, he's got a good arm and he's smart," Gil Brandt, director of Cowboy player personnel, said of Werner.

"He's a long shot," Brandt admitted. "When you get down to the eighth round, you're taking chances." Werner's reaction varied.

"I'm the first athlete to be drafted out of high school," he laughed.

Perhaps some semblance of truth lies hidden in that laugh. The former Cleveland St. Ignatius star has stayed on the MSU scene for five years (an extra year was awarded him because of the injury). But Werner, as a passing quarterback, was never able to sell the wares of his ability to Duffy Daugherty. Thus, he has been virtually inactive since his high school playing days.

"Not playing definitely hurts you in certain areas," Werner said. "Quarterbacking is more than just performing at a position, it involves a sixth sense of feeling what to do at moments of crisis, and extreme pressure and reacting automatically or almost mechanically

"That is where you get rusty," he said. "Feeling comfortable and relaxed in the role of quarterback doesn't come as fluidly when you don't play." Another reaction to his selection takes root in Werner's philosophy.

"A quarterback, of necessity, is self assured, arrogant, and confident in his ability, and regardless of how much he plays or what others see, he has to rely on this inner - force to keep him going," Werner said.

"You can't rely on coaching or the press. As a quarterback, you have to be responsible to your own expectations," he continued.

"I definitely feel that I have the potential to be the best quarterback in the country," he added. "I feel, from the draft, that Dallas has shown that they have this confidence in me."

The trust shown by Dallas in Werner was what he liked most.

"They're the first people to show confidence in me in football for a long time." Would he have come to MSU knowing what was in store for him here? "Anywhere but Michigan State," he first said. Then he emphasized his choice as one where he would have been given the opportunity, one as prominent in football as MSU and one that had the academic reputation as MSU has.

"I would have gone to a school that could've utilized my ability as a passing quarterback," he added.

Werner could be motivated to make good in the pros, thereby making MSU look bad, but he said "proving something for us" (he and his wife) is his priority.

"I could show up Michigan State, but really, what does that mean? The coaching staff is gone. I don't feel revengeful against

MEET NCAA, BIG TEN CHAMPS

Tankers face Spitz-less IU

By JACK WALKDEN State News Sports Writer

The powerful Indiana swimming team comes to MSU Saturday to take on the Spartans at 1:30 p.m. at the Men's IM Pool.

picked until the 14th round. Rae went the country and is favored to take its 13th straight Big Ten title and sixth straight NCAA title.

Indiana boasts nine Olympian swimmers and one Olympic diver on its roster. The loss of Mark Spitz should be eased by the return of the Olympians of which two are freshmen.

Olympians John Murphy, Gary Conelly, John Kinsella, Gary Hall, Mike Stamm and freshmen Fred Tyler and Scott Cranham, a diver, all appeared in this past summer's games in Munich. In addition to those, Indiana has Larry Barbiere, Jack Horsley and Santiago Esteva who all swam in the 1968 Olympic games in Mexico City. Murphy won a bronze medal in the 100 breaststroke and captured a gold medal as part of the record - setting Medley relay Conelly made the Olympic team as an alternate on the 800 relay team, while Kinsella won a gold medal as part of the same relay team.

Stamm took silver medals in two backstroke events and a gold as part of the medley relay team, while Hall had a very disappointing Olympics.

The freshmen Tyler also fared well as Tyler brought home a gold medal as part of the 800 relay team and Cranham was the second best platform and third best springboard diver in the Olympic trials while diving for Canada.

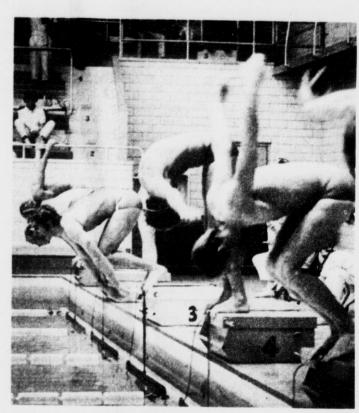

The Hoosiers will be out after their eighth straight win this season and will attempt to extend their overall string to 83

MSU will take a 4-2 dual mark into the meet after back to back wins last weekend against Purdue and Texas.

When asked how he prepares for a meet like Indiana, Spartan coach Dick Fetters replied, "You don't. You just keep on swimming. There are a few people you ease off on and the rest just keep on swimming."

Probably the three events which MSU has the best chance of winning are the diving events and the 200 butterfly.

Ken Winfield will swim the 200 butterfly for the Spartans and, while Mark Spitz won't be there to oppose him, Indiana will be in the very capable hands of Bob Alsfelder, who finished second to Spitz in the Big Ten last year.

State News Sports Writer Many of the young and inexperienced swimmers will have a chance to compete today when the women's swimming team faces Central Michigan University. The starting time for the meet will be 3 p.m. at the Women's IM.

"I will be swimming most of the girls who haven't had much of a chance to compete yet this season," Joan Barch, coach of the women's swimming team said. "This will give them some experience and confidence for later meets."

Barch is confident that the team will do well against Central.

"We've been swimming very well," Barch commented. "I have been pleased with the team's progress and their season performance so far. I don't think that we will have any problem with Central tonight."

Barch said that she is especially pleased with the diving of Jane Manchaster. Manchaster is undefeated so far this season. She took first on both the one and three meter boards in the International Swimming and Diving Championship held Jan. 12-13. Manchaster also took first in the one and

Wrestlers vie with top teams in Big 10

By PAT FARNAN

State News Sports Writer Wrestling buffs might call it a carnival weekend. But coach Grady Peninger more aptly terms it, "the most important weekend of MSU wrestling season to date."

Minnesota and Iowa, challenging the Spartan grapplers for top billing in the Big Ten, storm East Lansing this weedend for a pair of pivotal matches.

Both contests will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Men's IM Arena. The Gopher skirmish is slated for Friday with the Iowa tussle set for Saturday.

The Iowa encounter will mark the final home meet for seniors Tom Conrad Milkovich, Calander and Bruce Zindel.

"It's really tough going out," Milkovich said. "The blood, sweat and tears will be all over but so will the thrill of wrestling before an MSU crowd. They've been a temendous inspiration to me and the entire team over the years.'

In retrospect, Milkovich commented that his four year stint with the Spartan wrestling program has been "an extremely enjoying and satisfying experience.

Wrestling has been my life." The two Big Ten foes are have the individual considered prime threats to the Spartans string of eight consecutive conference championships. "We're going to find out a lot about ourselves this weekend,"

The Spartans competed against both squads earlier this year in the Midlands tournament and placed ahead of each of them. But Peninger spoke of this weekend's clash with guarded optimism.

Peninger commented.

"This will be much different than a tourney such as the Midlands," he said. "Some teams are tougher in tournaments and some are stronger in dual meets."

Minnesota is a dual meet team. The Gophers are currently 13-0 on season and coach Wally Johnson describes his teams unblemished record as "a pleasant surprise."

"We're a balanced squad and that's our chief asset," Johnson said. "There aren't any superstars on this team like the Milkovich's, but we're improving steadily and getting a lot of mileage out of these kids.

MSU's gymnastics team faces that infamous combination of travel and top notch competition this weekend, which has spelled doom for lesser teams.

The team travels to Kalamazoo Friday afternoon for a triple dual meet against the always tough Illinois State University and host school Western Michigan University.

After Friday's encounter, the Spartans return home for a Saturday night battle with powerful Indiana State University. Starting time for Saturday's meet will be 7:30 at Jenison Fieldhouse.

Since the team's first meet of the year, MSU has suddenly run into a string of very tough teams.

First, the Spartans met defending Big Ten champ Iowa in a triple dual meet at Wisconsin and nipped the Hawkeyes by less Suddently, eyes were raised and MSU was looked upon as a possible contender for the Big Ten crown.

The following week the Spartans went from Big Ten champ to NCAA champ Southern Illinois University. MSU went down to defeat despite scoring its highest point total of the year.

Big Ten foe Indiana then dropped the Spartans from the unbeaten ranks by upsetting MSU and establishing itself as a team to reckon with at the Big Ten meet in As if the aforementioned teams weren't tough enough, both Illinois and Indiana State have been picked by some coaches to finish high in the NCAA finals this year.

Indiana State, in addition to averaging close to 160 points per meet, brings with it two NCAA finalists in Tom Morgan (second place, still rings) and Ed Slezak (third place, side horse).

In previous competition against Indiana State, MSU's record stands at 3-2. In Friday night's meet, the Spartans will be meeting WMU and Illinois State for the first time.

Van Pelt faces ultimatum

By LYNN HENNING State News Sports Writer

Brad Van Pelt has a dilemma.

A bit more substantial than when he was in high school and trying to decide which college to go to - MSU or U-M. In the next four or five months Van Pelt must decide whether to charge into a pro football career that offers him a better chance of becoming an immediate star, or sign a pro baseball contract and face the likelihood that he will spend some time in the minor leagues before becoming a solid major league pitcher. Van Pelt won't come out and say it, because he's sincerely not sure yet...but the New York Giants may have a linebacker of the future in the Owosso senior.

The Giants selected the Spartan star in the seond round of this week's pro football draft to nicely accompany his baseball offer picked up when the St. Louis Cardinals tabbed him in last month's free agent draft.

"There'll be no agents or no signing until at least after baseball (MSU)," Van Pelt said in answer to a question when he would make his decision.

Surprisingly, Van Pelt doesn't think that money will be much of a factor in his ultimate decision.

"No," he said during a break at Spartan basketball practice, "I just have an idea they'll be close. I like a lot of things about sports. It's the team aspect in football. And I like the pitcher vs. the batter in baseball. Basketball has its good parts, too."

Van Pelt was the first pick of the second round in the football draft and the speculation continues that he'd have likely been a first round selection were it not for his possible career in baseball. "It didn't matter which round I went in," he declared. "I just wanted to be drafted. I know a lot of scouts called before the draft and asked me what sport I was more interested in, though.'

The Giants drafted Van Pelt as a linebacker even though his three varsity seasons were spent as safety. Pro scouts listed him as a linebacker, generally agreeing he might lack the speed to be a pro safety but not the size to be a

"Most of the scouts talked about the possibility of me playing linebacker. It doesn't make any difference to me as long as I get a chance to play."

What will determine Van Pelt's ultimate decision?

"It's going to come right down to which sport I want to play as a professional," he explained. "I've got to make up my mind which sport I want to play eight months out of Athletics have taken up a majority of the young man's time over the years and he's already looking ahead to the free time that a professional career will offer.

"I'm looking forward to taking those four months off a year. The family is used to going up to the lake for two months every summer and I haven't done that for five MSU will not be without its fond memories, Van Pelt said.

"Yea, I've thought about it and I'd even like to start all over again," he said, half - smiling. "I've had a lot of fun

So have the Spartan coaches who have watched Van Pelt display his talents at MSU for four years.

"Several years ago, Dr. Wharton urged as many offices as possible to remain open during the lunch break," Perrin said. "In some cases, this just wasn't feasible."

The Comptoller's Office, which has only two secretaries, closes completely. But, explained secretary Jean Darrows, the office never has a lot of students. The payroll office, cashiers office and the scholarship office remain open during the lunch

Asst. Director of Admissions and Scholarships, Kathleen Large, emphasized the public service aspect, saying, "We are serving the public and they do have to get in between 12 and 1 p.m."

All four of the University College departments, American thought and language, Natural Science, Social Science and Humanities, remain open. There is a strict staggering of lunch hours among the employes and the only office that's not open during the lunch hour is that of the dean.

Office, 265 Student for the lunch break, Robert Services, is open "99 per Perrin, vice president of cent of the time" one secretary said. If there's a high rate of absenteeism, we are closed, she explained.

There's always one counselor and one secretary on duty at all times of the day in the financial aids office, she asserted.

In contrast, the department office of Sociology always closes for the lunch break. There are only three secretaries, and they don't use the lunch shift system.

The president of labor relations, C.K. Groty, said that about two years ago, students made a formal complaint about the lack of office hours from noon to 1 p.m. A decision was made that those offices used heavily by students were to remain open continuously from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The union contracts provide no guidelines or rules for the opening of offices during the lunch drafted up to a century ago.

One of the main targets for reform in the bill, which seeks to protect "the freedom of the individual to sexual determination" and "the unhindered sexual development of the young person," is a paragraph in the 1871 penal code banning procuring in any form.

The provision is so widely defined that it can be used to prosecute wife - swappers

Before another 20 years an additional costly expansion may be necessary assuming present factors of population increase and excessive water use continue to rise, according to Bruce.

A daily 45 minute shower, excessive running of water to get it cold or hot, the flushing of a toilet that uses over a guart of unnecessary water and simply leaving the faucet on may not seem significant enough to label the individual a polluter.

But multiply these daily activities by 40,000 MSU students and then again by the rest of the East Lansing population and the excessive use of water becomes a

They carried attache cases and small pieces of luggage. Some had rucksacks and at least one carried an automatic weapon. They were housed in Camp Davis, a former U.S. Signal Corps installation of the Tan Son Nhut base. Tra's absence has prevented the military commission from carrying out its responsibilites, including preparing for prisoner exchanges and assuring the security of the International Commission of Control and Supervision.

The international body, made up of representatives from Canada, Indonesia, Hungary and Poland, says it has been unable to begin field operations because the military commission has not provided the required security and support. The agreement called for international field teams to be operational as of last Tuesday. The military commission also has responsibilty for agreeing on the spots where prisoners will be exchanged and insuring the safety of personnel engaged in the the Saigon government delegates to peacekeeping military commission with unnecessary immigration requirements, to give South Vietnamese forces more time to seize areas under Communist control. The South Vietnamese government protested to the International Commission of Control and Supervision the North Vietnamese units attacked just below the demilitarized zone shortly after the 8 a.m. Sunday deadline for halting the fighting. It was the first official protest made to the international body. Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, chief spokesman for the Saigon command. acknowledged that South Vietnamese marine elements have retreated from positions re - established just before the cease - fire went into effect as a new eastern anchor along the northern defense line, at the mouth of the Cua Viet estuary four miles below the demilitarized zone. Hien said heavy North Vietnamese artillery attacks forced the South Vietnamese back and that the government forces suffered more than 100 men killed, wounded and missing. Field reports said the losses were higher.

The Communist side charged that it was Saigon that violated the truce by concentrating thousands of marines and tanks "into Vietnamese and Viet Cong operations attempting to take control of the area north of Quang Tri."

The U.S. Command out its weekly closed casualty summaries, listing 45.941 American servicemen killed in action in Indochina between Jan. reported killed and 105 1, 1961, and the start of the cease - fire Sunday. The University of Minnesota has announced a temporary hiring freeze on all but emergency faculty and staff positions due to drops in state and federal funding and a decline in student enrollment.

Marquette University in Wisconsin will raise its tuition next year because of a sharp drop in federal aid.

Here in Michigan, Eastern Michigan University is running $200,000 below its anticipated revenues because of an unexpected decline in enrollment.

The Indiana (University) Daily Student sketched the university president sitting up nights pondering a $3 million discrepancy between his budget and state appropriations which threatens that university with larger classes, less qualified faculty members and poorer physical facilities.

Students at the University of Minnesota want to have a say about faculty tenure appointments.

The University Senate, composed of faculty and students, last week voted 55-48 to add four students to the seven faculty members serving on the Committee on Tenure.

Student senators also are pressing for student participation in drawing up a new tenure code, student evaluation of courses taught by tenure candidates and the right for students themselves to recomment faculty members for tenure.

Indiana University's vice chancellor for Afro-American Affairs, Herman Hudson, is calling for the appointment of about 30 more black faculty members to tenure to equalize Whose rights come first? Women's liberationists at the University of Wisconsin are protesting that a woman assistant to the president for women's affirmative action is being paid only $15,000 a year while a male presidential asssitant for minority affairs receives $27,500 annually.

The Women's Alliance at the University of Southern California (USC) has won a sweeping victory against male chauvinism on campus.

The University Judicial Council has banned the sale of a fraternity poster featuring a nude girl because it "did in fact libel the Women's Alliance by degrading them in the eyes of the university community.'

A fraternity spokesman said, "There was no malicious attempt to slander women at USC. We just wanted to make a few bucks."

The president of the Undergraduate Student Government at Ohio State University is demanding that the campus bookstore offer a 5 per cent discount on books to all students in place of the 15 per cent discount now offered only to faculty and teaching assistants.

The war over books took another turn at the University of Wisconsin where students, tired of waiting months for missing books at the campus library, finally convinced the library committee to institute faculty fines.

The University of Wisconsin has assigned a campus policeman in plain clothes to patrol one of its dormitories at night in an effort to prevent thefts, vandalism and molestings.

Karl Kimball, asst. director of residential life at California's Pierce College, said that the death of a fraternity pledge left stranded in the Angeles National Forest by fraternity members probably will hurt the fraternities in future rushing efforts on campus.
