City eyes benefits from federal funds

By JANE SEABERRY
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing residents could benefit from a property tax decrease, capital improvements and more funds for community services due to a spillover of federal revenue sharing funds it was received Monday in the proposed 1973-74 city budget.

The budget was presented to the city council Monday by City Manager John Patriarche. The council set 7:30 p.m. May 1 for the mandatory public hearing on the appropriations, but took no other action on the budget.

Almost all the changes outlined in the budget can be traced to the $658,000 in federal funds the city expects to receive this year and next year. More than half of the sum will go towards capital improvements.

However, the city's original plan of the city bike path system to receive revision after rejection by the federal government for funds. The city rejected the system because of low priority and lack of funds. However, under the proposed plan the city would receive a $5,000 increase in city funding over the Planning Commission's initial estimate of $55,000.

The highest priority in the budget is the city center Phase two project which involves the beautification of the 100 to 200 block of Grand River. The alley would be closed off to vehicular traffic, except for business purposes, to form a pedestrian walkway.

The project is part of several phases to take place during the next several years, as proposed in the 1973-74 capital improvements programs recommended by the planning commission March 27.

Though mass transit received no funds in the budget, proposed allocations to the Drug Education Center would be increased from $18,000 to $47,000 — a 6.1 per cent rise over last year. The Listening Ear would receive $5,350, the Women's Center would get $15,000 and the city work-study program is set for $5,778. The city older persons program would receive $15,280 and the teen center operation would receive $6,000 under the proposed budget.

Funds for mass transit could not be allocated, Patriarche said, until the city's mass transit study is completed in about a year and a half.

Also omitted from the budget were allocations for the Michigan Avenue-Harrison Street intersection improvement plan and the Central School pedestrian overpass proposed in the capital improvements program. Coolidge Road improvements from M-78 to Lake Lansing Road would receive funding cutbacks because of low funds.

However, additional funds for the Abbott Road reconstruction project from M-78 to Lake Lansing Road were recommended for right-of-way land purchases.

City salaries and wages would increase by more than $350,000 but the percentage of the total budget going to these areas would decrease by 4.4 per cent, Patriarche said.

Funds other than federal monies would be provided by the city property tax with a recommended rate of $16.85 per thousand assessed property evaluation, a decrease from last year's $17.45 per thousand.

"I didn't feel most of the revenue sharing money should go into new programs and not give the taxpayers a tax break," Patriarche said. He added, however, that if the tax rate is cut by too much, some of the city's revenue sharing could be lost.

Seasonal snow

Poets often alude to April as the season of fragrance and romance but a student attempting a bit of romance at MSU Monday may well have received a cold shoulder — if not a snow covered back.

Michigan Weather Bureau officials say April is a month when any type of seasonal weather can happen including the unexpected four-inch accumulation of white that hit MSU Monday.

"Snow is not unusual precipitation for this month in Michigan," Howard Chestnut, meteorological technician for the bureau, said.

Chestnut said the snow should readily melt and turn to slush because the temperature is currently ranging from above to below the freezing point.

Snow or rain are expected for the remainder of the week with temperatures remaining cool until Friday when a slight increase in temperature is forecast. State News photo by John Dickson

Boycott stirs buyers' concern

Though the week-long nationwide meat boycott drew strong support from off-campus students, it did not succeed in reducing local meat prices. It did, however, create a public awareness of widespread discontent with high dollar figures on meat counter price tags.

Consumers queried said they believed President Nixon's price ceiling on meat would be beneficial because it would stop the extreme upward spiral of meat costs. Since a ceiling cannot lower prices, shoppers went ahead with the scheduled boycott in the hopes of forcing prices even lower.

Retailers watched their meat sales drop during the boycott. They said, however, that they expected sales to gradually resume their preboycott levels.

Though their actions may not have had long-term effects, by boycotting last week, consumers proved they could unite behind a common cause and make their viewpoint heard.

Louise Mattson, Edmore junior, said the boycott was primarily a symbolic action on the part of consumers against the rising prices.

"The boycott was an indication of how people, especially those from 'Middle America' think about issues that affect them directly, particularly meat prices," she said.

"Changes in the economy cannot be brought about by a boycott," she said. "We're going to have to accept the fact that meat is going to be more of a luxury and that we are no longer an agricultural society."

A State News telephone survey Sunday shows that off-campus students plan to minimize their meat purchases, primarily because they can't afford meat.

"It's just too expensive," Walt Owiesny, Dearborn Heights junior, said. "We can't afford to buy beef."

Owiesny said that he will be buying more fish, ham and other meat items, but not beef.

Many students, though they did not buy meat last week, ate what they already had on hand.

Ann Read, Pinckney junior, said that everyone in her apartment supported the boycott.

"We're going to start buying meat now," she said. "In order for a boycott to be effective it would have to last a month or more. I'm used to meat to boycott any longer."

Many local grocers experienced a drop in beef sales last week. They report that this week's sales are returning to normal levels.

Ken Searson, meat manager at Country Store, 3101 E. Saginaw Ave., said their total sales dropped 18 per cent last week.

Arabs bomb Cyprus building housing Israeli ambassador

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A band of Arab guerrillas blew out the entrance of the apartment building housing the Israeli ambassador with a powerful bomb Monday, and then attacked an oil tanker in an apparent attempt to hijack it before take off.

None of the tenants of the three-story building was hurt.

An Israeli security guard on the El

Al aircraft at the international airport wounded three guerrillas as they fired from a car speeding around the four-engine Viscount.

A Cypriot policeman was seriously wounded in a shootout with guerrillas at the ambassador's residence in downtown Nicosia. Three Arabs were captured there, police said.

A Cypriot government spokesman reported one Arab was killed but there was no confirmation of this from police later.

The police also detained the Israeli security guard who shot the three Arabs at the airport.

Police said they found a note indicating that the Arabs intended to hijack the Viscount. It was signed by a group called National Arab Youth.

TWO AGENCIES, TWO APPROACHES

Escort services--dating or baiting?

By TONI PELLILLO
State News Staff Writer

Dating for pleasure is one thing, but being paid for "escorting" a male is quite another.

That's why this reporter cast aside feminist thought, replaced them with economic ones and applied at two Lansing escort services last week.

Both Kelidas Escort Service Inc., 1609 E. Kalamazoo St. and Executive Escort Service, 2316 Michigan Ave., claim to be legitimate businesses that have sprung up within recent weeks to meet the "demands" of Michigan's capital city.

Dressed in my best duds and with makeup applied as perfect as possible, I set out to discover if the agencies were an easy, painless and legal way for a 21-year-old student to make money.

The results were surprising (at Kelidas) and disappointing (at Executive Escort). The former was very interested in the welfare of the women, but the owner of the latter agency had a "rent-a-chick" mentality.

Employees of Kelidas are paid a minimum of $4 per hour (more if the service is for an event requiring formal wear), while Executive Escort pays a straight $3-per-hour wage.

The clientele of Executive pay $7.50 per hour, for a minimum of three hours. At Kelidas, the fare is $10 per hour with a six-hour minimum. It occurred to me that a total stranger might pay $60 not including wine and dining costs — to have me "escort" him. Who would do such an incredible thing?

All I could think of was dirty — but rich, old men. Shirley Sadilek, part owner with her husband of the Kelidas service, who talked and looked like she could be nominated for a mother-of-the-year award, read my mind.

"Don't worry, dear, our service is completely legitimate. We wouldn't want you to go out with anyone that we wouldn't approve of for our own son or daughter," she said in a very sincere tone.

Her husband Ed told me the same thing over the phone a day earlier. He emphasized that the agency, which is owned by the Sadileks, is recognized by the Michigan Chamber of Commerce.

A plaque in the office reaffirms the claim.

The code of ethics and application form for the Kelidas agency convinced me that the service was not interested in hanky-panky.

"This business is not in any way connected with prostitution, massage parlors, an art modeling type of thing or anything that is illegal. It is definitely to be kept legitimate and clean in every way," reads a section of the 12-point code of ethics.

The thorough application wanted to know everything from the information on my car license plates to whether I was covered by life insurance. The latter put me on edge — was I expected to die fulfilling the duties of the job?

Later I found out that Kelidas has a high-risk insurance policy covering its employees (as long as they remain in public places as the code of ethics requires) in case of an accident — car or other type.

Customers at Kelidas look through a photo album to choose their escort. Employees bring in two photos of themselves. Facts like height, weight, language skills, interests and hobbies accompany each photo. Some of the prospective escorts were men.

"But we haven't gotten too many requests for male escorts," Shirley admitted.

The client chooses an escort from the file, Shirley or Ed dials the escort's phone number and then it's up to the couple to decide on the rest. All connections are on a first-name basis and address of phone number of the escort are never released.

Mrs. Sadilek explained that due to bad publicity (a Lansing State Journal feature blasting Executive Escort) and legal and insurance problems, Kelidas has not sent any escorts out on jobs yet. They hope to begin business sometime this week.

"We just got our insurance

Pope urges Thieu to release captives

VATICAN CITY (AP) — While police and leftist demonstrators battled near St. Peter's Square, Pope Paul VI met President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam here Monday and urged him to release political prisoners.

The papal audience lasted an hour, and a Vatican communique issued later said the Pope "wanted to call to the special attention of the guest of human problem of political prisoners of both sides in Vietnam. The president gave detailed information and explanations on this subject."

What he told the Pope, Thieu told a news conference later, was that there are no political prisoners in South Vietnam and that such reports were "only gross Communist propaganda."

"There are no political prisoners in South Vietnam," Thieu, a Roman Catholic, said in response to a question.

"There are only two kinds of prisoners: 21,007 of common-law and 5,081 Communist criminals."

The latter, he explained, were civilian terrorists.

Several hours before the papal audience, leftist youths who have been demonstrating against Thieu since he arrived in Rome on Sunday, began assembling for another protest. They carried posters reading "down with Thieu" and "Thieu assassin."

Dozens of the protesters fought to break through hundreds of police cordoning off St. Peter's Square and all other entrances to the Vatican. Brief clashes erupted and four youths were arrested. The others fled into side streets.

Protesters unable to get near the square waved clenched fists at the Apostolic Palace, where the audience was held.

Thieu has avoided appearing in public during his stay here. He commuted by helicopter between the Vatican and the Renaissance villa where he is staying as a guest of the Italian government. He also went by helicopter from the villa to meet President Giovanni Leone of Italy at

BUT WHAT IF SOMETHING HAPPENS TO ME?"

"We feel that to plead guilty to the University ordinance would be to support that ordinance in the future. It would allow the police and administration to feel free to use it as they pleased in harassing demonstrators."

Russia buys more grain

The Soviet Union has agreed to buy $200 million worth of wheat and barley from Canada, Justice Minister Otto Lang announced Monday. The sale includes 1.5 billion metric tons of wheat, or 58 million bushels.

A Soviet grain crop failure last year caused Kremlin leaders to purchase nearly $2 billion worth of foreign grain - about $1 billion of it from the United States.

The first U.S. ship helping to deliver the American grain unloaded at Odessa in mid-December. The American deliveries are expected to continue through June.

Rockefeller retreats

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller on Monday dropped his proposal for mandatory life imprisonment of persons convicted of selling hard drugs.

Instead, the New York governor told reporters, he would seek mandatory imprisonment for a specified period of time and probation or supervision for the rest of the person's life after release from prison.

Atomic pacemakers placed

Doctors in Newark, N.J. implanted the first American-made nuclear-powered pacemakers in the hearts of seven volunteer patients Monday. The atomic devices are expected to last five times longer than battery-powered models. Eight similar operations are planned this week.

The youngest patient to undergo the operation was Roxanne Hutchinson, a 12-year-old school cheerleader from Grand Rapids, Mich., who brought her uniform to the hospital for "good luck."

Reserve may tighten credit

Banks are on notice that the Federal Reserve Board may tighten supplies of money and credit more severely to fight inflation.

Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns issued the oblique warning in a letter, cautioning banks against committing themselves too deeply to business loans.

Burns expressed concern about the heavy volume of bank loan commitments. He was referring to lines of credit - binding commitments by banks to lend customers specified amounts of money upon request.

Third Argentine kidnapping

Argentina's rash of kidnappings continued Sunday night with the abduction of the 57-year-old British president of a tobacco company.

Police said three men and a woman seized Francisco Brimicombe near his home in suburban Tamperley, apparently as he returned from a Sunday outing.

Brimicombe, a Britist citizen, has lived here a number of years and has been president since 1969 of Compania Nobleze de Tabacos, one of the nation's largest cigaret manufacturers. It is owned British and Argentine capital.

Danish strike ends

Workers and employers voted on Monday to end Denmark's biggest labor conflict in 37 years. More than 260,000 workers will return to work today after three weeks of strikes and lockouts.

The state mediator announced that a compromise agreement offering a 7.5 per cent over-all increase of pay and benefits over the next two years was approved 319,702 to 144,404 by the union rank and file, and 454 to 105 by an employers' associations General Assembly.

OBA seeks partial fund release

By LINNEA SLATER
State News Staff Writer

The long struggle between the ASMSU student board and the Office of Black Affairs (OBA) - resulting from the Conrad Hall incident - continued Sunday in a lengthy discussion over request by the OBA for a partial release of its funds.

The previous student board attached a rider to the allocation of $4,900 to OBA stating that only $800 of the funds would be released to the office until the board clarifies the relationship of the ASMSU cabinet to the board. OBA was the only cabinet member to have such a rider attached to its funds.

Joe Davis and Arthur Webb, codirectors of OBA, asked the board to overrule the rider and release $500 more of its allocation so that the office could continue some of its programs.

They said $400 would be used for publications and newsletters and to help other black organizations in need of financial help, and $100 would be used to support a concert sponsored by Black Orpheus.

The board cut the request to $300, releasing that amount for OBA to use for publications and the Black Orpheus concert.

The board objected to the request for funds to be allocated by OBA to other groups on the grounds that all student groups should come directly to ASMSU to request funds. Members stated that it would be "fiscally irresponsible" to allow OBA or other groups to dispense funds at their own discretion.

Davis objected to this sentiment, saying that OBA is the centralized governing body of blacks on campus and one of its functions is to help black groups as needs arise.

"The $800 released for office supplies and OBA staff straight-jackets us," Davis said. "We can't continue any of our programs."

The rider on OBA's funds will not be lifted until the board passes legislation clarifying the board's relationship to the cabinet. Public hearings on this relationship have been scheduled for 6 p.m. April 18 at a location not yet determined.

The question concerning the Cabinet's position was raised after the Conrad incident fall term when black students forced whites to leave a lecture by Stokely Carmichael.

The board decided not to discuss the incident until the Student - Faculty Judiciary had released its decision on it, so hearings were delayed until spring term. The judiciary released its verdict in favor of OBA Feb. 16, saying that no University policies had been violated.

The delay has kept OBA operating without its allocated funds for about two months.

In other business the board passed a resolution opposing the Michigan Bell Telephone Company's proposed rate hikes as unnecessary and as adversely affecting students more than other segments of the population.

The board also approved a change in the telephone system presently in use by ASMSU which will save the board at least $90.

The Residence Hall Assn.'s request for $450 to buy booklets on venereal disease was kept on a committee for more study on reactions of other groups to the booklet.

Ron Wahula, business president, reported that he had authorized a voucher for $1,600 last week to the Mariah Coffee House so they could pay Friday performer, mariah had funds but they were out of "other interests" at the time, Wahula said.

TOO EARLY TO GAUGE EFFECTS

U.S. meat boycott slackens

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Consumers who took part in the nationwide boycott of beef, lamb and pork started back to the meat counter on Monday, but supermarket spokesmen said it was too early to tell whether sales would return to normal.

An Associated Press spot check showed mixed reaction on Monday, the first shopping day in most areas after the end of the week-long boycott and the deadline for posting price ceilings imposed by President Nixon on most meat items.

A spokesman for Grand Union stores said he had talked to personnel from several of the chain's 43 outlets in the Washington, D.C., area and commented: "We've gotten a Monday like we can't remember. Things are jumping."

He said, however, that he would not know until later in the week just how sales would compare to preboycott weeks.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said he was not surprised that Patrick Gorman, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's union, has asked President Nixon to fire him.

Butz said Gorman apparently was disturbed by his Butz' "laying it on the table" about farmers getting only 43 cents of the consumer food dollar while middlemen take the rest.

Gorman asked Nixon to fire Butz because of his views on meat prices and claimed the butchers were unfairly caught in the middle between consumers complaining about higher prices and farmers seeking more money for their livestock. Gorman has said 20,000 of his members in seven states were laid off during the boycott.

Butz came in for more criticism Monday from Lewis H. Young, editor Business Week magazine. Young said in an interview in Phoenix that the secretary "is guilty of mismanaging the Dept. of Agriculture and his own agency."

"Every time he has a speech stating administration would freeze food prices, it's been a green light to those prices."

Indians take demands, problems to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) - Indians took their grievances to a congressional hearing Monday as efforts continued to break the stalemate on negotiations to end the occupation of Wounded Knee, S.D.

Russell Means, a leader of the American Indian Movement, said at a news conference here that the militants occupying the village have agreed to stack all unlawful arms if the White House will meet with their representatives.

Means said he is prepared to continue the siege at Wounded Knee for the rest of his life if the White House balks at discussing what the Indians say is denial of their treaty rights.

The government has objected to meetings unless the Indians surrender their arms.

At the Capitol, the House Indian affairs subcommittee opened three days of hearings on the Indian problems.

The first witness was Toby Eagle Bull, a longtime Oglala Sioux tribal officer who spoke for the tribe rulers.

"Our reservation has been invaded by outsiders," said Eagle Bull. "Some of them are Indians and some aren't."

"The issue at Wounded Knee is jobs," he also said.

"Give us jobs and you will have any Indian problem."

About 60 per cent of Oglala Sioux Indians are unemployed, Eagle Bull said.

He said the tribe caused even more harm on the reservation previously existed: children are forced to stay away from schools, businesses are inoperable and "we have a financial disaster."

Rep. Lloyd Meeds, Wash., the subcommittee chairman, listed a half dozen groups, including Civil Rights Groups and Landowners Group on Oglala Sioux Reservation and asked Eagle Bull to characterize them as any common denominator.

Eagle Bull said all are enmeshed in "tribe politics."

Milliken aide hints inquiry

By ELLEN E. GRZECH
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken will probably look into charges that a member of his executive staff is receiving $18,462 a year for doing nothing, but no formal investigation has been planned, one of Milliken's staff members said Monday.

Dale Arnold, asst. press secretary, said Milliken deals with only a handful of his staff directly, but that the governor will try to find out something about the matter.

"His (Milliken's) interest has been heightened by the article," Arnold said. "It's really a staff thing that the governor can deal with directly."

Arnold was referring to a Detroit Free Press article that claimed Glenda McGuire, a girlfriend of Recorder's Court Judge James Del Rio, is being paid to informally talk with people in the Detroit area to discover their opinions on public issues.

The Free Press article said McGuire has had no direct supervision in her job and that there is no written evidence of her project. The article also suggested that she may have been hired as a favor to Del Rio, who supported Milliken in his 1970 race against Democrat Sander Levin.

John Dempsey, one of Milliken's top policy consultants, hired McGuire to conduct a study of how people look at government.

Rep. Dan Angel, R -

Marshall, said he contacted people in the Governor's office, and that he is investigating the charges himself.

"I wanted to verify what had happened," he said. "If the story is accurate, it's deplorable, it hurts the public trust and it should be investigated."

A House source said immediate formal action, such as a request for an investigation, would be unlikely. The separation of powers and the question of what would be gained by a resolution other than political grandstanding would prevent action.

"I would not recommend a resolution to censure the Governor," H. Lynn Jondahl, D - East Lansing, said. "That's just political rhetoric."

But Jondahl said the truth of the allegations should be examined.

"The governor has to be willing, particularly in light of his frequent comments on ethics in government, to address the questions raised by the article," he said. "If the governor wants to continue talking about government integrity, he's got to find some way to make this clear."

"The truth of the charge needs to be known by the legislature as we address appropriations," Jondahl added.

Rep. Perry Bullard, D - Ann Arbor, said the appropriate House committees might be able to look into the matter.

"But the ball is really in the governor's court," he said. "He's going to have to justify what's happening, and his responses will come faster than the legislature can move."

Bullard added that there might be a question of executive privilege.

"I don't think executive privilege should be used to shield such actions," he said.

"The Executive Office has a fantastic amount of power we're not able to scrutinize in the legislature," Jondahl said. "It's difficult to keep careful tabs on what's happening with the governor's staff."

Official disputes VC claim

SAIGON (AP) - A Canadian peacekeeping investigator charged Monday that the ceasefire commission helicopter shot down in flames Saturday was fired upon by a heat-seeking missile while flying over Viet Cong-held territory in South Vietnam.

Maj. Gen. Duncan McAlpine sharply disputed the Viet Cong claim that the incident in which nine passengers, including a Canadian and two American civilian pilots were killed was accidental.

"An accident?" McAlpine snapped. "Surely, with everyone in the area knowing this was an approved flight, and with verbatim reports of the survivors, I think otherwise."

"The fact is that the helicopters...did in fact sustain a heat-seeker."

Canadian Foreign Secretary Mitchell Sharp said Monday Canada will withdraw from the Vietnam peace commission unless conditions "improve very substantially" following the death of a Canadian truce observer.

Sharp told the House of Commons that without an improvement, Canada would be involved in watching a war "at totally unjustified human risk," instead of monitoring a ceasefire.

Reports that the aircraft was hit by a missile were a "distortion of the truth," the Viet Cong declared in a statement.

The Communists also denied that their forces fired Monday on a third helicopter which South Vietnam reported was hit by six rounds of enemy small-arms fire while on a peace-keeping mission over the Mekong Delta.

Protester goes on trial Thursday

By JIM BUSH

State News Staff Writer John Royal, one of the persons arrested during war demonstrations at the Placement Bureau last week, goes on trial Thursday in Lansing Circuit Court.

Royal, a former MSU student, is charged with obstructing a police officer during his arrest May 1 and with trespassing and obstructing the normal functioning of the university.

An informational picket in support of Royal is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. at the Administration Building. The picketing will be sponsored by the Political Defense Committee, formed last year to assist the 10 defendants. The three men and seven women were arrested at different times during a weeklong series of demonstrations at the Placement Bureau last May. As many as 60 demonstrators gathered at the bureau's lobby in the Student Services Building during that week to protest the presence of military recruiters on campus.

Dale Scott, former MSU student and one of those arrested, said Monday the demonstrations were staged because the University, while proclaiming its neutrality, was actually acting in support of the Vietnam War by allowing the recruiters on campus. He said the demonstration sponsor, the Coalition to End the War, hoped to make it more difficult for MSU and the armed forces "to persist in these unjust actions."

Royal and the nine others were singled out by MSU police because of their past involvement in antiwar activities at MSU, Scott said. Royal was a leader of the MSU chapter of Students for a Democratic Society when he was arrested.

Capt. Adam J. Zutaut Monday denied the charge but admitted that all the alleged offenders probably were not arrested.

"It's impossible to arrest everyone in a crowd as big as that one was," Zutaut said. "Besides most of the arresting officers did not even know who they were arresting."

Another demonstrator, Sandee Soloway, also a former MSU student, has already been brought to trial on the charge of obstructing an officer. Her case was dismissed in October by Lansing Circuit Court Judge Samstreet Hughes.

Hughes said he dismissed the charge because the prosecution had acted in bad faith by not making a serious attempt to find any witnesses for Soloway's alleged crime.

Royal's attorney, Edward Noonan, tried to get Royal's charge, which is identical to Soloway's, dismissed for the same reason. However, a different Judge, Marvin J. Salmon, rejected Noonan's motion.

Scott said the evidence against Royal and the eight remaining defendants is flimsy and the charges constitute undue harassment of the defendants by the University administration.

Obstructing the normal functioning of the University is prohibited by University ordinance.

"In reading the University ordinance," a statement from the Political Defense Committee said, "it becomes obvious that if MSU decides to enforce this ordinance which they do arbitrarily, then demonstrators do not have the right to assemble on the MSU campus."

"We charge that this ordinance is vague and overbroad and can be used to arrest demonstrators at any time," the statement added.

Scott said that the prosecuting attorney, at the insistence of the trial judge, has been trying to work out a deal with the defense to drop the charges of obstructing an officer and trespassing in return for guilty pleas to the lesser charge of obstructing University functioning.

However, a spokesman for the Ingham County Prosecutor's Office denied the assertion. Scott said that the trials have been delayed since last spring because of the attorney's haggling and because the defendant's all demand jury trials.

"We feel that to plead guilty to the University ordinance would be to support that ordinance in the future," Scott said. "It would allow the police and administration to feel free to use it as they pleased in harassing demonstrators."

MASTER OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS DEGREE PROGRAM of the School of Public and Environmental Affairs

At

Indiana University

The Master of Public Affairs degree is a comprehensive 48 credit - hour program which prepares individuals for careers in public affairs. Available on several campuses of Indiana University, it offers a balanced consideration of theoretical, analytical, practical and professional preparation for public service. Because the emphasis of the School is interdisciplinary, there is no requirement for a specific undergraduate major.

The three main areas of study are...

*Basic Analytical Skills

*Public Affairs Systems and Settings

*Public Policy Concentration

The public policy concentration gives the student a focused educational experience in a substantive area of the student's interest. Concentrations include...

*The Management of Public Affairs

*Environmental Policy

*Policy Analysis

*Public Safety Policy

*Urban Policy

*Public Financial Policy

Specially - designed concentrations may be constructed to meet the needs of students whose areas of interest differ from predesigned policy concentrations.

Electives may be used to develop further any one of the three primary facets of the degree program or in any other relevant course or field work acceptable to the student and the Chairman of the Graduate Program.

Some fellowships, scholarships and assistantships are available. For further information, including an application, please write...

Nixon pushes U.S. into Asian conflicts

President Nixon finally brought the prolonged American entanglement in Vietnam to a halt, but his tenacious stand against Communist aggression Cambodia threatens to reinvolve the United States in the continuing small-scale conflicts in Southeast Asia.

The fragile peace accord initiated by Henry Kissinger and Lo Duc Tho in Paris on Jan. 27 put a tenuous end to over a decade of American military action in Vietnam. More than 100,000 American troops remain in Indochina and fighter-bombers daily fly raids against Communist forces in Cambodia.

Nixon has justified the air strikes in Cambodia through a broader interpretation of his powers as commander-in-chief. He insists the recent peace agreement is threatened by the enemy's offensive in Cambodia and attaches great importance to the protocol in the 1954 SEATO treaty.

However, without setting a date, the Vietnam peace pact stipulates that foreign forces must withdraw from neighboring Laos and Cambodia. The SEATO agreements are largely a fiction used by the United States at its convenience. They do not apply to the internal matters of a country and have no bearing on the logistic support North Vietnam has been giving to the Khmer Rouge forces in Cambodia.

Apparently, the United States has one reason for its presence in Cambodia: to shore up a tottering regime whose fall would mean that the Communists could put added pressure on the corrupt Thieu dictatorship in Saigon.

About 48,000 American troops are positioned in bases in Thailand where 600 bombers and fighter-bombers are maintained to discourage any mass offensive in South Vietnam by the North Vietnamese. Another 30,000 troops are aboard the 7th Fleet just off Vietnam, and can be employed within minutes should Nixon decide to punish the Viet Cong for repeated truce violations.

The stockpiling of American manpower and military equipment in Indochina and the daily death and destruction by repeated air assaults in Cambodia are difficult to legitimize.

President Nixon owes the country a personal answer on Cambodia, not just a parroted speech filled with diplomatese from one of his special advisers. That answer is needed promptly before Cambodia begins to fester like another tragic sore - Vietnam.

State needs bike routes

To any person who maneuvers a bike through traffic, the need for safe bike paths is obvious.

The State Highway Commission is finishing up public hearings this week on suggestions for a statewide bike path system. Any interested cyclist who cannot get to Grayling or Escanaba for the remaining two hearings can write the highway commission in Lansing.

Already the commission has received a 21-page position paper written by Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley which deserves careful perusal for its constructive suggestions.

At the same time it should be realized that the highway commission's commitment to a statewide system, while welcome, will not mean an unbroken route from Detroit to Sault Ste. Marie in the near future. Only one-half of 1 per cent of the motor vehicle highway fund, about $2.5 million, is allocated for nonmotorized transportation. Of this amount the state controls $1 million directly and parcels the rest among 83 counties and over 500 cities, towns and villages, so a few places may have just enough to buy a used 10-speed.

There have also been questions raised about whether cyclists or horse lovers will get the bulk of the nonmotorized transportation money as the horse lovers have been more vocal at the public hearings.

POINT OF VIEW

Death penalty deters murder

By Rep. KIRBY HOLMES
Utica Republican

As a state official speaking for a large percentage of the Michigan population, I question the rationale behind your Jan. 31 editorial criticizing efforts to reinstate capital punishment. Your picture of capital punishment as "blind ignorance" and as "a cruel, barbaric relic of the Dark Ages" points out the emotionally based appeal you are trying to influence your readers with.

Most people assume that the death penalty is dead because of last June's decision by the U.S. Supreme Court in the Furman vs. Georgia case. The basic problem with the five to four decision handed down by the nation's Supreme Court objecting to capital punishment is that it does not outlaw capital punishment but only narrows its application.

The U.S. Supreme Court has questioned the very core of our law enforcement programs throwing confusion over the entire subject. This necessitates a need for clarification which must come in the form of a constitutional amendment either on the state or national level.

Crime in the streets of every major city in America is on the increase. It is not safe to walk in many of our cities day or night. Skyjackings and attempted assassinations on our political leaders adds to the turmoil and unrest that encompasses not only Michigan but the entire country. This is not the time to relax law enforcement but a time that we need capital punishment and strong, stringently enforced laws more than ever before.

The most important result of reinstating capital punishment is that it serves as a disciplinary action in deterring death by imposing the threat of death itself. The threat to execute it is reserved for only a fractional proportion of this nation's criminals who are a threat to the preservation and well-being of life as we know it. Governmental officials across the country are beginning to take action following the Supreme Court's 1972 ruling. California was the first to act in the passage of an amendment to their State Constitution reinstating capital punishment. The 67.5 per cent of California voters that supported capital punishment showed the strong feelings that are now being experienced in many other states including Michigan.

Here in Michigan two major pieces of legislation have been proposed. I prefer my measure over that of Rep. Joyce Symons. Under her measure she allows capital punishment for certain public workers including firemen and policemen.

I want equal justice for all. Under my principle a constitutional amendment would be imposed to impose the death penalty on conviction of first degree murder. Murder in the first degree is a planned murder which involves a thinking process. The murderer is aware of what he is doing, before, during and after his action. The only way to cure premeditated murders in Michigan is to reinstate capital punishment on a mandatory and uniform basis.

Grapevine invitation

To the Editor:

We at Project Grapevine were first of all glad to learn that John Braden reads the Grapevine Journal and has noted the progress that we have made since our beginning.

However, we also wish that last Friday's letter had reflected a better understanding of the process involved in the actual operation of the paper and the project before accusing us of ripping off the ASMSU student dollar.

Braden's misunderstanding is not his alone. Unfortunately, it is undoubtedly shared by a number of students on this campus.

To clarify the situation, The Grapevine Journal will host a coffee hour at 2 p.m. this Sunday in the Grapevine Journal's office, in 25 Student Services Bldg. for Braden, the newly elected members of ASMSU and all students interested in or curious about Project Grapevine or The Grapevine Journal.

Staffs of both the Project Grapevine and The Grapevine Journal will be present as well as representatives of WMSN and the Volunteer Bureau to explain our operations.

Project Grapevine hopes that as many people as possible will attend to find out what the Project's goals are and how we are working towards them. We strongly encourage Braden and all interested students to attend.

Project Grapevine is an organization dedicated to the education and involvement of minority students in all aspects of mass media. We also feel that we serve a unique function on this campus.

Project Grapevine involves white students in its functions and serves the predominantly white campus with minority news. The Journal serves as an alternative news source bringing needed news to both black and white students.

Whether Braden and those who attend this Sunday see this situation as so, or if they still see us as having a "gray...train run at the student's expense" we will expect them to respond to this letter in writing as to what the true facts are.

If Braden is serious in his challenges to The Grapevine Journal, Project Grapevine and the credibility of ASMSU, we expect that he will attend to find not only that we have no icing on our cake, but that we have precious little cake at all.

Depraved

To the Editor:

As I have looked through the State News these last few days, I noticed the Beal Film Group's advertisement for their erotic cinema films. This is such a striking example of moral pollution that it calls for comment.

This is a manifestation of moral uncleanness, and moral uncleanness will be punished. Before God sent the Hebrew people under the leadership of Moses into the land of Palestine to exterminate its peoples and occupy the territory, He told Moses why the peoples of Palestine were to be wiped out.

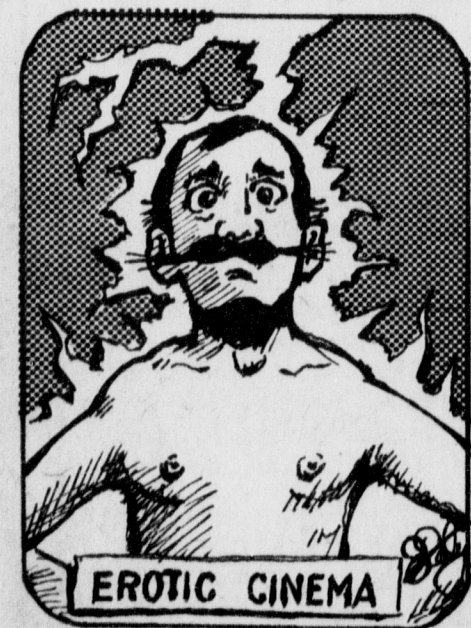

After delineating different iniquitous practices which were forbidden to God's chosen people (among which are incest, adultery, sacrifice of children, sodomy, and bestiality) God said, "Do not defile yourselves by any of these things, for by all these the nations I am casting out before you defiled themselves; and the land became defiled, so that I punished its iniquity and the land vomited out its inhabitants." (Leviticus 18: 24, 25)

The Beal Film Group, and other groups who show this sort of depraved "entertainment," and the State News, which advertises it, and the MSU students who patronize it are in danger. God may cause our land to vomit us out. God the Creator is also the Upholder of the Moral Order of the Universe, and He cannot let such depravity go unpunished and remain true to Himself.

His hatred of sin and His determination to punish it are grounded in His terrible Holiness, which does not change. Some deny His existence, or His moral nature, or His interest in this world, or plead His indiscriminate love.

To all who take refuge in such excuses, His answer is "These things you have done and I have been silent; you thought that I was one like yourself. But now I rebuke you, and lay the charge before you." (Psalm 50) He is merciful and kind, but "He will by no means clear the guilty." (Exodus 34)

God the Creator has clearly revealed that He is also our Judge. We will all have to stand in His court one day. This should spur those who reject Him to find out how they may make peace with Him, and should encourage those who trust in Him to live in such a way that our behavior will be both a manifestation of God's beauty and holiness, and an open rebuke to a world which views erotic cinema as entertainment.

Handshake

To the Editor:

Hats off, and a hearty handshake to Maureen MacDonald. The article in Friday's State News about the clerical-technical worker's plight at MSU was the best in the series that has appeared to date. It was as unbiased and factual as any item should be concerning the issue.

Such an article does much for those clerical-technical workers interested in collective representation. Facts are vital to any subject, and unbiased factual reporting commendable. I sincerely hope that future coverage of this subject will be as concise and direct.

Humanities

To the Editor:

In Thursday's "Point of View" column J. David Johnson comments that humanities classes should be integrated. To arrive at this, he suggests that blacks talk to the professors about incorporating "relevant" contributions of our race in classroom lectures, and the separate humanities courses would encourage racism.

I disagree on every point. We should blacks be forced to take humanities courses irrelevant to the cultural background?

Also Johnson, if you so strongly feel that learning only black history only white history would develop one-sided views, I suggest that you encourage everything you and the blacks in your classes have been taught has been white orientated.

Further, learning about one's own culture would not encourage racism but increase understanding.

As far as "relevant" contributions you should take a course in African history and culture and realize for yourself that the contributions made by blacks are indeed relevant.

Your "alternatives" are weak. The simple reason that they do not focus on the issue, and the issue is the blacks at MSU want opportunity to choose a humanities course which places emphasis on the cultural background in a less rigid University departmental requirement.

State News Staff Writer

The Atomic Energy Commission - not often lauded by conservationists who regard its work as detrimental - is supporting programs at MSU that may help increase food production and quality of plant life.

The commission's plant research laboratory, under the direction of Anton Lang, professor of botany and plant pathology, is now conducting research that could possibly increase the amounts of food that can be produced in the world, using biological and physiological means to this end.

"Little attention has been paid to the quality of plants," Lang said. "Our plants have been bred for more productivity."

Lang and his associates in plant research are striving to gain maximal growth of plants while using minimal resource materials.

A particular strain of corn the researchers are experimenting with that was initially discovered at Purdue University can increase the amount of protein in the corn by advancing the production of the amino acid lysine.

With more protein present in the corn, less corn would be needed to meet the diets of animals and humans and perhaps less land would be needed for corn production that could be utilized for other purposes.

Lang said the so called "green revolution" that has increased the productivity of such crops as wheat and rice has perhaps not been well thought out.

'Green revolution'

He noted that the increased productivity through the green revolution is due largely to use of increased amounts of fertilizer, but said there is not an inexhaustible source of fertilizer in the world.

The MSU researchers are experimenting with breeding techniques that could increase the growth of plants and at the same time require less fertilizer, thus less water.

"We must consider," Lang said, "that one third of the water in the atmosphere goes directly to industry, including agriculture, and only two-thirds of the water remains."

With the advent of possible water shortages, the MSU researchers have decided to work on something almost unheard of - water economy in plants.

The scientists are now studying stomates, the tiny pores on the bottom of leaves that regulate the amounts of water in plants, to try to discover if they can control the opening and closing of the stomates and thus regulate the amount of water the plant loses.

If the scientist can develop a way to control the water amount, significant amounts of water could be utilized in other capacities. However, this type of regulation could only be studied in controlled environments.

Lang said the scientists have connected the production of the hormone abscisic acid to the control of stomate opening and closing.

He said plant hormones are integrated controllers of the overall condition of the plant.

Plants contain fewer hormones than human beings do and these hormones serve multiple functions, Lang said.

The scientists hope to learn how to control the production of hormones. The growth control hormone in the plant, the gibberellins, is being experimented with in floriculture, Lang said.

Growth retardants

The scientists are experimenting with growth retardants that limit the growth of flowering plants.

Lang said that these growth retardants have been used successfully in planting along the roadsides of highways because they conserve time normally used in trimming roadside foliage.

Another phase of plants which the scientists are studying is the influence of environmental conditions on plants, done in control situations in the laboratories.

Light, temperature tests

Experiments with light, length of sunlit day, and temperature toleration help scientists determine the optimum growing conditions for plants and discover additional locations which can support plant life.

"Man messes up nature," Lang said. "But plants can remove some of the problems men create."

He noted that plants utilize carbon monoxide that automobiles produce - a major pollutant. Plants also carry out the water cycle and the nutrient cycle, he said.

Lang said that all information the Atomic Energy Commission project is working on is "strictly unclassified" and available to the public.

'U' HEALTH CENTER

Unit urges abortions

By LAURA MILLER
State News Staff Writer

The Women's Advisory Council came out in support of performing abortions in the University Health Center.

In its first action after months of controversy over the selection of members and several procedural matters, the council agreed to send a letter to President Wharton supporting abortion procedures on campus.

The council said abortions should be available to the campus community because they are legal, valid medical practices.

The council stressed that it was not taking a moral stand on abortions but was advocating the availability of standard medical procedures on campus.

The Women's Advisory Council and Residence Halls Assn. are supporting abortion procedures on campus, but Robert Perrin, vice president of University Relations said the president's office had received 135 letters against performing abortions on campus.

At the meeting, Mary K. Rothman, director of women's programs and head of the Women's Advisory Council, also released a progress report from her office.

In her progress report, Rothman summarized her office's action on women's grievances in the past two months. Rothman said she had spent a half-day at the Spartan Village Day Care Center discussing day care needs of the University with the director. She has also contacted departments concerning faculty recruitment of women. Her office has compiled a list of qualified women to fill faculty vacancies.

Rothman said she has also discussed career ladder possibilities for women with the Personnel Dept. and is conducting a survey of all faculty to compile a list of women's studies classes. Mary Sharp, asst. director of women's programs, is conducting a survey of individual female faculty salaries and temporary and part-time faculty.

Rothman's summary also included reports on progress in admissions and financial aid, health care, women's groups, secretarial role models and continuing education.

In other action, council member, Ruth H. Useem, professor of sociology, requested a review of academic honoraries to determine possible discrimination against men or women. Rothman said she will initiate a study of policies of various organizations.

This week Rothman and three council members representing nonfaculty, faculty and students will interview candidates for an assistant to women's programs.

Future of women's programs in doubt

By PAM WRIGHT
State News Sports Writer

The idea of women participating in noncontact sports along side the men scares a lot of people. Not only do some think that a mixed varsity sports program is unrealistic but many are working hard to prevent such an occurrence. The major complaint against the ruling allowing women to join a men's sports team is the fear that it will cut back on the women's participation in sports. Some fear that many will take the attitude that if women can go out for a men's varsity sport then there is no need to provide an extensive women's program.

"I don't like the ruling," Carol Davis, the MSU women's athletic director commented. "I'm afraid that some might use it as an excuse not to run a good women's program."

Davis believes strongly that it is necessary to provide a separate women's sports program because very few women are capable of competing on the same level as men.

"With all our scientific knowledge of anatomy we can safely conclude that women are just not able to compete with the same strength and power as men," Davis explained. "They are still not running as fast, swimming as fast, jumping as high nor throwing the put as far."

"Women couldn't be competitive on that level," Mary Fossum, coach of the women's golf team agreed. "The men are able to hit so much farther that the women just couldn't cut it. It would be a tough struggle for the women because of the efficiency of the men."

Discrimination and equality were major factors involved in the controversy and the decision later to allow women to compete with men, however, many are using these same arguments to contest the ruling.

"I think the ruling will hinder rather than expand women's participation in sports," Al Rufe, athletic director of East Lansing High School said. "We're interested in broad participation more than anything else so we would rather have both a strong girl's and boy's team."

Rufe said though there might be a few women who are able to compete with men, that the majority would be eliminated and eventually deprived of the opportunity to participate in sports.

"Though a mixed varsity team would help the super women athlete," Fossum injected, "we would be forsaking the good. More people would be eliminated from the program."

Another complaint against the ruling is that women might be apprehensive about going out for a mixed varsity team. Others might become discouraged with being only "second string" instead of excelling on a women's team.

"Most women would rather be the best on the team," Davis commented. "They could get tired of being third string on a men's team."

"I think the ruling could hurt in some sports," Heidi Pudliner, member of the formerly all male tennis team at Okemos High School, agreed. "I don't think I'd like it if the boys started going out for the women's teams. It might hurt our chances of excelling."

Those who are against the ruling propose an expanded women's sports program separate from the men's.

"I think we are much better off having both a women's and men's sports program," Al Busch, president of the Michigan High School Athletic Assn. commented. "Most women are just unable to compete with the men and so a separate program would allow a greater number to participate."

The problem is, however, that as it stands now the women do not have the same opportunity as men to participate in sports. If the women are in fact unequal in strength and power and unable to compete on the same level as the men they are forced to enter a women's program which is by

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) - TOMMY AARON, best known for a career of second place finishes and his scorecard error that decided this tournament five years ago, shot a four-under-par 68 Monday to win the Masters by one stroke.

Aaron, winner of only one tournament in this country in a dozen years on the PGA tour - compared to 14 second place finishes, birdied two short par 5 holes on the back nine at Augusta National to slip past J.C. Snead and Peter Oosterhuis and earn the traditional green coat of Masters champions.

Aaron, who had earlier rounds of 68, 73 and 74, finished with a five-under-par 283 total for 72 holes.

MIKE ROBINSON and BILL KILGORE both gained honors on the composite 1973 all-Big Ten basketball team.

The team was based on both the Associated Press and United Press International Big Ten teams. Robinson was named to the first team on both the AP and UPI squads, while Kilgore gained honorable mention.

Robinson is the only member of the first team who will be returning next season. Others included Ron Behagen, Minnesota; Nick Weatherspoon, Illinois; Jim Brewer, Minnesota; Steve Downing, Indiana; and Allan Hornyak, Ohio State.

A BIG TEN Service Bureau survey of the recently completed NFL draft indicates that Big Ten seniors dominated the selections in both quality and quantity.

Of the 442 senior athletes drafted in the 17 rounds, 52, or 11.8 per cent, hailed from Big Ten schools and every conference school was represented by at least two selections.

In the first round of the draft, six of the 26 players selected were from Big Ten schools. MSU let with 10 draftees.

'TEAM IS EAGER'

Stolz eyes early drills

MSU International Center.

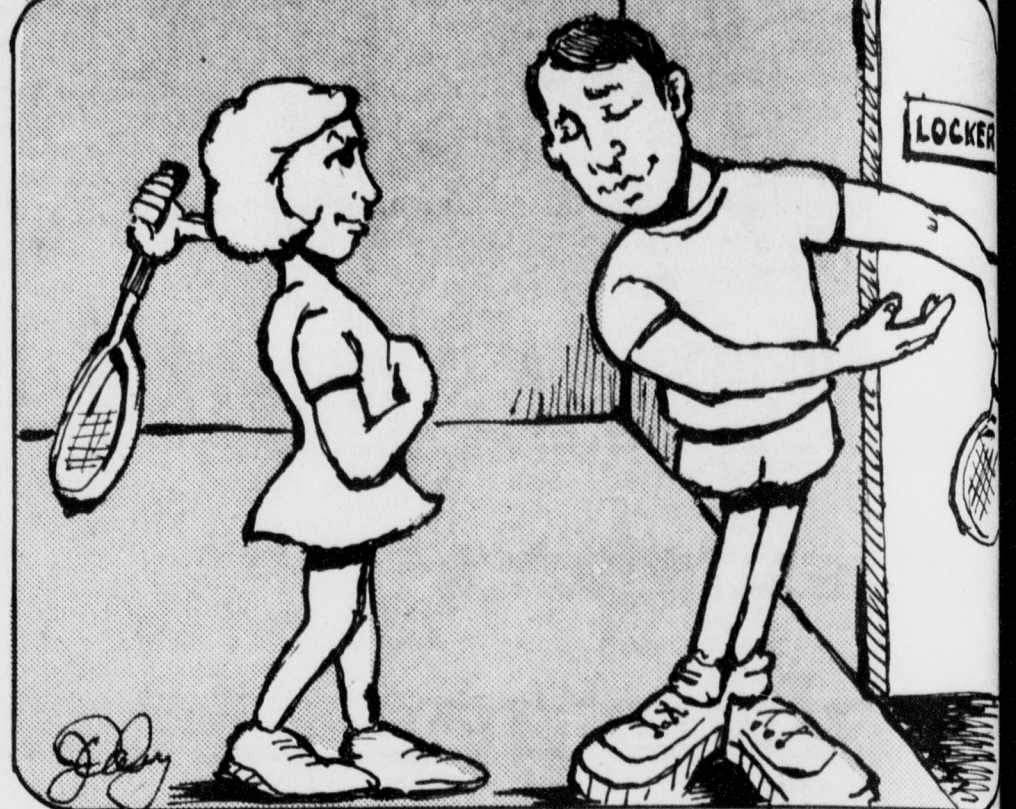

"We have a great deal of material to look over. But the team seems eager to get going with the new coaching staff. The most important thing for us right now is developing an attitude change."

Stolz said the team's eagerness may have been spurred by the availability of starting berths.

"No one has any position secured as of right now," he said. "In the past couple of years this hasn't been the case. But now it's going to be a wide open spring."

Stolz listed his two chief objectives this spring as implementing a successful offense and rebuilding both the offensive and defensive lines.

"Our line is the real key as far as the offense is concerned," Stolz said. "If we can't get the ball back to the line of scrimmage we're going to be in real trouble. When you lose personnel like Joe DeLamelleure it's going to hurt. That's where we are right now and I'm deeply concerned about that phase of the offense."

Stolz

The Wishbone T, apparently back in Texas, Stolz plans to implement the Power I offense this spring.

"This formation will put a fullback and a tailback behind the quarterback with a flanker and a split end," Stolz said. "We are quite fortunate to have quality material in the backfield with which to take advantage of this formation. It will enable the quarterback to come back from the line of scrimmage into the backfield. This will give the quarterback an opportunity to do more things with the ball."

Despite problems with both the offensive and defensive lines, the Spartans are strong in "perimeter" people.

"We call them skill people or perimeter people," Stolz explained. "Offensive backs and the like are what we're referring to. But we need help in the trenches. Stolz also spoke about the importance of defensive unit. The defensive coordinator at Okemos High School, Duffy Daugherty, commented that the defense's role is underrated.

"Defense just doesn't get the publicity that offense does," he said. "But the greatest feeling a coach has is to walk on the field with the knowledge that defense is there. The offense can fumble and make kinds of little mistakes with a tough defense can make up for these things."

The Spartans are also twenty practice sessions which will be conducted Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays for the next month with Green and White slated for May 12.

"It's too early to evaluate anyone just yet," Stolz said. "We can't ability into a player. We have to play against someone else before we evaluate them fairly."

Outward Bound

On the top of a steep bluff in the San Juan Mountains, participants in a Colorado Outward Bound summer course relax and survey the surrounding terrain before determining their next move.

WITH OUTWARD BOUND PROGRAM

Student finds self in nature

By BOB OURLIAN
State News Staff Writer

Outward Bound would be difficult if not impossible to describe to the average college student of the 20th century city dweller.

"It's something you have to experience," says Chuck Bond, Livonia junior and recruiter for the recreation program. "To really understand it, you'd have to experience it."

Colorado Outward Bound, a program located in Southern Colorado's San Juan Mountains, involved extensive wilderness training. The program runs four times for 23 days during the summer and costs $450. Seven-day river trips are also offered, at the cost of $350. The fees cover food and all clothing and equipment except hiking boots.

Colorado Outward Bound began in 1962 and is the largest of six outward bound programs in the United States. These programs are offshoots of the Outward Bound program that Great Britain started in 1941 to prepare men for war and its hardships by confronting them with physical and psychological pressure.

Though the program has changed since 1941, the basic tactics remain the same. "It doesn't promise you anything," he said. "It's there for what you take out of it."

Outward Bound still confronts participants with physical and psychological pressure, says Bond, but if there is any intention, it is to alert people to other people. "The big thing is the people thing," he said. "They want you to realize that others are there."

For instance, a group may be canoeing down the Colorado or Green River when a rapids appears just ahead that looks dangerous enough to swallow the entire expedition. The initial impulse of most people who have never been faced with such a situation before is likely to be concern for the self - insuring one's own safety.

"But the instructors say to you 'think about the other guy,'" Chuck said, "and pretty soon, it gets so it doesn't have to said. You develop a real compassion for other people. And I think that has to be one of the primary objectives of Outward Bound."

However, Lewis and Clark did not blaze trails through the North American continent with interrelationships as the primary concern in their minds. Consequently, any wilderness training program must also have a large emphasis placed on physical achievement, Bond said.

Students trim food costs at co-op

By SHARON HANKS
State News Staff Writer

The stew over high food prices has sprouted a sudden growth of soybean lovers in East Lansing.

As students try to cut the fat off meat bills, soybeans, brown rice and granola have entered kitchens - possibly as permanent dishes.

"Soybeans are going like crazy," a local health food store manager said. Within the past week, the volume of health food sales has increased over 15 per cent in East Lansing and nearly 100 per cent at the Green Earth Food Co-op.

Green Earth Food Co-op, which offers an alternate way of buying food, has sprouted new branches of 40 to 50 members within the past week.

"If volume increases, we will definitely have to expand and find a new location for distribution," Tori Shade, a co-op coordinator said.

The co-op has grown slowly and steadily within the past two and one-half years, and its membership now totals about 500.

Each new member or household is assigned to a buying group of about 20 people. The buying groups have names such as Cheap Thrills, Albert Street Gang and Spartan Village.

By buying in large quantities from Detroit, the co-op is able to reduce some of its food prices.

However, each group representative is expected to help with the unloading and packing of the food. Sometimes it involves only an hour a month for each member.

As a nonprofit organization, the co-op's overhead expenses are the coordinator's salary, rental of the truck and a few supplies. This usually adds up to about $70 a week.

"We've been breaking even so far," Shade said. But the co-op is starting to feel the pinch of inflation. As of next week, food prices will be marked up 4 per cent.

Orders from the co-op can be placed at 311B Student Services Bldg. on any Tuesday night or Wednesday afternoon. On Saturdays, the food is delivered to a garage at 420 1/2 Evergreen St., where it is picked up by the group representative.

Levees holding flood water

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Army flood control experts said Monday one of the century's great Mississippi river floods was still safely squeezed within the levees - but they're girding for higher water.

"I can't tell you now whether we're peaking out or whether we're going to get a worse situation before we're through," Maj. Gen. Charles C. Noble, president of the Mississippi River Commission, said.

Much depends on the runoff from thawing snows and spring rains in the river's 1.24 million - square - mile watershed area, especially along the Ohio, he said.

"Right now I am preparing myself for more water than we now have predicted," he added. "I will then be in a position to do something if this thing changes rapidly - as it has been changing."

Meanwhile, north - easterly winds gusting over 40 miles per hour whipped Lake Erie waters inland at numerous points near Monroe, Mich. Authorities said the Lake Erie beach communities of Stony Pointe, Luna Pier, Estril Beach, Grand Beach, Bolles Harbor and Detroit Beach, were all besieged by floodwaters similar to the flooding that caused millions of dollars in damage last November.

Waves 10 to 15 feet high were hitting breakwaters at some points and splashing onto land.

Some evacuations were under way and at least two schools in the area were opened for those forced to leave their homes.

One earth dike gave way separating Bolles Harbor and Avalon Beach.

In New Orleans, Noble was inspecting part of the four corps of engineers districts in his area, which is the entire length of the swollen lower Mississippi, from Hannibal, Mo., to the sea.

He estimated that backwater from the river's choked tributaries has temporarily forced some 6,000 families from their homes - mainly in sections near St. Louis, Mo., and in Mississippi.

Noble ordered the opening of all 350 panels of the Bonnet Carré Spillway dam Sunday to ease the pressure on levees protecting New Orleans.

POLICE BRIEFS

A MAN WAS arrested at 2:25 a.m. Monday in parking lot C for smoking marijuana, a violation of the controlled Substances Act.

The man was released on his own recognizance and the Ingham County prosecutor's Office was notified.

The book was valued at $9. Police said they have no suspects.

A TAPE DECK, valued at $54.95, was stolen from a student's car parked in front of Bryan Hall sometime between 9 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Sunday.

A STUDENT TOLD campus police that someone stole a book belonging to her from the reference section of the MSU Library Sunday.

MSU VD rate lower than most universities

By LAURA MILLER
State News Staff Writer

The rate of venereal disease at MSU is lower than at most other universities around the country, Dr. James S. Feurig, director of the University Health Center, says.

Feurig said total statistics for the University are not known, but the health center's findings are based on the students they see.

"We are not naive enough to think we see all the cases of venereal disease on campus," Feurig said. "But we think we have a pretty good pulse of the situation."

Feurig said the incidence of venereal disease at MSU is lower because of the type of environment, the students and the locale.

"Some other schools seem to have a bizarreness that MSU does not have," he said. "They are likely to show more social diseases because they are less sexually conservative."

MSU is a little conservative, he said, and does not have the Haight - Ashbury, Greenwich Village type environment that has higher rates of venereal diseases.

Metropolitan and inner - city schools also usually show a higher rate of venereal disease, because they include numerous ethnic groups and a variety of life styles, he said.

Feurig said the health center is conducting a far - reaching and relentless program against the disease. The center distributes literature and uses presentations in residence halls, he said.

"It is very important to relate in treatment that you are sincere," Feurig said. Treatment is confidential and is not reported to any other sources, he emphasized.

While the health center reports its findings are low compared to other schools, the Ingham County Health Dept. reported venereal disease is increasing in the area.

In 1971, 1,072 cases of gonorrhea were reported. In 1972, 1,286 cases were found. At the end of last month, 455 cases were reported which is substantially up from the same time last year, a health department spokeswoman said.

The health department is also conducting a vigorous campaign against the disease which is in epidemic proportions. Ingham County department operates a clinic for diagnosis and distributes numerous pamphlets.

The Residence Halls Assn. is planning to distribute a pamphlet on venereal disease and is requesting funding from ASMSU to purchase literature.

Student backed for LCC board

The Human Rights party of Greater Lansing has endorsed James A. Cotton Jr., Lansing senior, as its candidate for a seat on the Lansing Community College Board of Trustees.

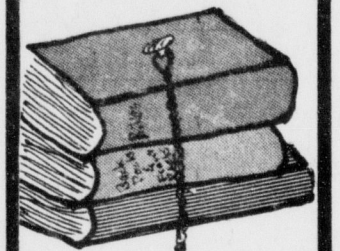

Three of the seven seats on the board are open. Two incumbents, Dave Froehle of East Lansing and James Dart of Lansing, are running for re - election.

East Lansing will be included in the election, which will be held June 11. The Human Rights party indicated that it would conduct an extensive campaign to get MSU students to vote by absentee ballot since spring term ends June 8.

Cotton feels he is aware of the problems faced by the college's student body because he was a student there for two years. He was a student representative to the board last year, but he had no vote.

There will be 15 school districts involved in the election. They are: Bath, Dansville, DeWitt, East Lansing, Grand Ledge, Haslett, Holt, Lansing, Leslie (except the portion in Jackson County), Mason, Okemos, Stockbridge (except the portions in Jackson and Washtenaw Counties), Waverly, Webberville and Williamston.

Lansing acquires sculpture for mall

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The city of Lansing announced Monday it has purchased a curvilinear metal sculpture for $90,000 to place in the center of the downtown mall now being built.

The sculpture is 60 inches wide, 45 inches high and 38 inches deep. It will revolve on an eight - foot high base in the middle of the Washington Square Mall and is expected to be installed by late summer.

The sculpture is the work of New York artist Jose De Rivera.

FROM OUR WIRE SERVICES

DETROIT — A 36 - year - old man who has spent the last 18 years of his life confined to state mental institutions for a 1954 murder and rape in Kalamazoo was to be released Monday by a Wayne County Circuit Court panel.

But the man, who has come to be identified only as Mr. L. because of the controversial suit against proposed brain surgery for him to curb his aggressive tendencies, has become the subject of yet another controversy because of his planned release.

Kalamazoo County Prosecutor Donald A. Burge said during the weekend he planned to investigate the possibility of instituting murder charges against Mr. L. if such charges are found to be legal.

Mr. L. was ordered released by Wayne County Circuit Court Judges Horace W. Gilmore, George E. Bowles and John D. O'Hair, who are weighing the ethics of psychosurgery. They ruled March 23 that Mr. L. had been unconstitutionally committed to Ionia State Hospital under an outdated state criminal sexual psychopath law which was repealed in 1968.

In ruling Mr. L.'s confinement unconstitutional, the Wayne County panel called upon a U. S. Supreme Court decision that using different standards for committing and releasing persons in civil and criminal cases resulted in a violation of the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

The judges considered continuing Mr. L.'s confinement through a civil commitment, but decided to order his release after hearing psychiatric testimony that Mr. L. is no longer a menace to society.

Two months ago, Mr. L. was a willing candidate for experimental surgery on his brain to change his behavior.

Last week he took the stand and told the Circuit Court that he had changed his mind and wanted an opportunity to go out into society and see if he could build a new life by undergoing conventional psychotherapy.

The turnaround in Mr. L.'s life has been dramatic — he

Vet clinic to hold yearly open house

An exhibit on the theory of toxoplasmosis, which postulates that pregnant women can suffer miscarriages by handling cats, is just one of the features of the annual Veterinary Clinic open house to be held from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday at the clinic.

The 1973 Vet - a - visit program is designed to inform the public on current topics in veterinary medicine, and is a part of the MSU Health Professions Day.

Over 25 student exhibits will be displayed throughout the clinic, and the animal wards also will be open to the public. Another purpose of the program, which is free of charge, is to familiarize people with the animal care services the clinic offers.

The Pre - Vet Club will present continuous showings of "The Covenant," a documentary film dealing with veterinary medicine. Exhibits on large animals — such as horses and dairy cattle, small animals — including dogs and cats, physiology, anatomy and surgery also will be on display.

Several thousand people are expected to attend the event, including many prospective veterinary students from high schools and junior colleges. MSU has the only veterinary college in Michigan, and one of only 18 in the entire nation.

Free shuttle bus service will be provided between the buildings involved in the Health Professions Day.

Ex-POW says nation, world

more tolerant

YPSILANTI (UPI) — Marine Capt. James Howie Warner is home from Hanoi.

But the 32 - year - old officer who spent more than 5½ years as a prisoner of war told a crowd of 1,000 who gave him a hero's welcome "I would willingly do it again" to preserve the growing attitude toward tolerance in the United States.

Warner's helicopter landed at Shadford field, a high school football field, and he stepped out of it 50 pounds lighter than when he had left for Vietnam during his years in captivity. But his voice was strong when he told the crowd one of his strongest impressions was regaining his freedom was that "the world is more tolerant."

"People seem willing to talk to one another," he said. "For the first time in history, a nation at war allowed a debate to take place within its boundaries."

Mental patient may face trial has gone in a few months from being considered a hopeless criminal psychopath with little chance of being released, to being given a chance to rehabilitate himself through conventional therapy.

His experience brought many of the questions that are posed by psychosurgery being performed on involuntarily confined patients down to a concrete level. The court up to that time had been examining these questions in a broad philosophical fashion.

Psychosurgery, an experimental technique that has been performed on about 500 persons throughout the world involves the destruction of small areas of brain tissue in the hope that this will alter the behavior of persons with severe mental problems that have not responded to traditional treatment.

Mr. L. testified that since the court case he had read newspaper articles about it, magazine articles and a book on psychosurgery. He said that after thinking about it he had become more aware of some of the risks and had changed his mind about the experiment.

Watson testified that Mr. L. had signed the consent form to show the hospital authorities that he was being cooperative and improve his chances for release.

Mr. L. also talked of the many frustrations and uncertainties he had experienced during his 18 - year confinement.

He was first sent to a mental hospital in Kalamazoo, when he was 15. He was sent there for breaking into the bedroom of a girl he went to high school with and hitting her with a croquet mallet when she awoke. He hid in a closet in the house where he was found by the girl's parents.

He was sent to the hospital and five months later he raped and killed a nurse. He has since been confined as a criminal sexual psychopath.

The court will hear final arguments on the case for psychosurgery at the end of May. For Mr. L., however, it has already brought an enormous change in his life. "I'm capable now of going on the streets and living," he said.

Rep calls smoking ban absurd; urges repeal

The anti-smoking law for persons under the age of 18 is causing more trouble than it's worth, a Saginaw lawmaker said recently.

Rep. Bert C. Brennan, a Republican, said he plans to introduce legislation this week to drop the cigarette smoking prohibition.

"In no way am I trying to encourage smoking by anyone of any age," Brennan said. "I don't smoke myself, but there are some provisions of the smoking law which are absurd and unenforceable."

"As a matter of fact, I am finding that school administrators are spending too much time enforcing the no-smoking law. The law says anyone under the age of 18 caught smoking is subject to a fine of up to five days in jail. Persons who sell or give cigarettes to those under 18 face up to 30 days in jail."

"Under the terms of the law, persons who harbor youngsters under the age of 18 for the purpose of smoking would face the same penalties as the sellers of cigarettes," Brennan said.

"Yet the law provides that these same restrictions do not apply within private homes. School administrators, it seems, are the only ones made to enforce the law, he continued. "A youngster is allowed to smoke at home, but is not provided place to smoke in school. The provision of harboring minors for the purpose of indulging in the use of cigarettes is one of the most ridiculous portions of this out-dated law."

Brennan said many school administrators are forced into closing lavatories to escape punishment under the law.

"In the meantime, those who do not smoke are deprived of use of the lavatories...this just isn't fair. If smokers had designated place to smoke, it would take the pressure off the students who don't smoke."

Brennan introduced the same legislation last year to the House. It passed the House but was killed in the Senate.

STATE LEADERS TO MEET

Forum to focus on services

Legislators and state leaders in the areas of human services will discuss salaries, taxes and human services at the annual legislative forum sponsored by the Michigan League for Human Services Wednesday.

The forum, which is open to the public, will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Olds Plaza hotel.

Among the speakers

ed to appear are House

aker William Ryan, and an Dempsey, director of

Bureau of Budget and Programs.

Legislators and leaders in areas such as social services, vocational rehabilitation, housing and criminal justice will explain how federal budget cuts and Gov. Milliken's new budget will affect their programs.

The registration fee for both the morning and afternoon sessions, which does not include lunch, is $4.50. Students may register for $1. A $7.50 registration fee includes lunch.

Herb Yamanishi, senior planning and research associate for the League for Human Services, said the forum is an opportunity for citizens to listen to what legislators have to say about programs dealing with human services.

Yamanishi says the league attempts to focus on issues which are currently important to the public.

The league, a United Fund agency, was formerly the Michigan Welfare League. It is a planning and research organization which educates the public and legislators in the areas of human services.

TO AVOID DELAYS, MISHAPS

Cyclists offer traveling tips

By SHARON HANKS
State News Staff Writer

Students contemplating a bicycle trip in the near future should be careful to avoid delays or accidents, and to deter dogs from chasing them.

Seven Lansing cyclists offered some advice for prospective bikers after pedaling to Memphis, Tenn. in 28 days last fall.

"It was great!" exclaimed Bob Danielson, former MSU student, "You're only young once."

Take only essentials

They traveled as light as possible, taking only the essentials.

Each man took along some food, clothes, and a light-weight pup tent and sleeping bag. They also carried some tools for bicycle repairs as well as five small gas stoves - all packed into wagonlike carriers called buggers.

Danielson had one suggestion for would-be long-distance bikers: "Don't just sit around thinking about it - do it!"

"We had talked about the trip for a long time and finally we just packed up and left."

Adams said that the trip taught him that he doesn't need a lot of money to have a good time.

Danielson agreed and said, "It certainly reinforced some beliefs and values I had."

Danielson and Adams emphasized that a knowledge of bicycle repairs is vital to avoid delays.

"Also, keep an eye out for free services, such as free maps, food and lodging,"

Adams added.

Planning ahead is important. Danielson had planned a rough route beforehand and had contacted state highway departments for possible routes.

For safety they recommended wearing light-colored clothes, which are easily seen by motorists. Squirt fast dogs

As another safety precaution, Adams, the caboose of the bike train, had a "slow moving vehicle" sign on his pack and a red handkerchief trailing behind it.

The men said that interference by dogs can be alleviated effectively by a few squirts of water.

The group passed through cities of populations less than 5,000 and stayed on less-traveled roads. "Stay away from the metro areas," Danielson and Adams emphasized.

"We became almost like a side-show for the people in small towns," Danielson smiled. "Reporters would interview us wherever we went." The cyclists said that throughout the trip people were friendly. One man let them stay at his house for a night.

They often waded through rivers or lakes to keep clean.

Adams and Danielson both agreed that the trip was relatively cheap. They estimated that they spent $2 a day for food and lodging.

Most of the time they camped out, but a few did stay at a drop-in center at Albion College and in a ditch the first night. Danielson said that colleges are good places to visit because of the ease in finding places to stay.

Destination: Mexico

The group left Sept. 24 and averaged about 40-70 miles a day. They were destined for Mazatlan, "a beautiful, primitive paradise in Mexico," but because of the lack of time and money they decided to split ways in Tennessee.

Some of the pedalers continued as far as Louisiana, Texas, and Arkansas, but eventually all shipped their bikes home and hitchhiked to their original destinations.

Obstacles that interfered with their trip included weather and bicycle repairs. Weatherman uncooperative

A constant downpour in Trenton, Ohio, stranded them at a state park for three days. They stayed in restrooms.

"People would come by and were amazed that we were still in the park," Danielson said. "And it was so cold and rainy, we had to sleep on the cement floor."

They were also delayed by bicycle breakdowns ranging from flat tires and broken derailleurs to bent frames.

They admitted being tired and frustrated at times, but on the whole, they said the trip was "an unforgettable experience."

Panel asks for step-up in energy crisis study

WASHINGTON (AP) - A House task force Monday recommended a $1 billion a year step-up in research to meet the energy crisis, including a crash program replacing petroleum with synthetic coal gas.

The chairman, Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., said the crash program on synthetic gas is needed to reduce U.S. dependence on oil from the Middle East.

McCormack said America is dependent on Middle East oil imports until the mid-1980s but should be able to fuel its central power plants with coal if Arab nations cut off oil supply.

For the long term the task force recommended stepped-up research to bring solar, geothermal and cheap nuclear energy into practical use by the mid-1980s.

McCormack said development and eright of a national energy policy should be focused in the White House. And it said a federal agency should be set up to channel money into priority research that will bring practical new power supplies on the line fastest.

McCormack and other members of the task force also said at a news conference that power companies should be given tax breaks and antitrust exemptions that would specifically encourage development of more power sources.

The task force recommended no specific incentives but its report said the present oil depletion allowance is justified to stimulate exploration and said other incentives could include a tax write-off for companies' energy costs.

McCormack said the additional $1 billion a year for energy research should be paid by both government and the power industry.

The report said available information indicates the research priorities should go to:

- Development of synthetic gas from coal, which McCormack said would be cleaner than natural gas besides reducing U.S. dependence on Middle East oil.
- Solar energy "because of its continuous and virtually inexhaustible nature."
- Geothermal energy, which is the use of underground heat to run power plants.
- Controlled thermonuclear fusion in the long run and development of dependable liquid metal fast breeder reactors.

Wherever you're going, you're going to have to eat when you get there, and we're giving you money off on food too. Restaurants across the country will be honoring your card with a 10% discount.

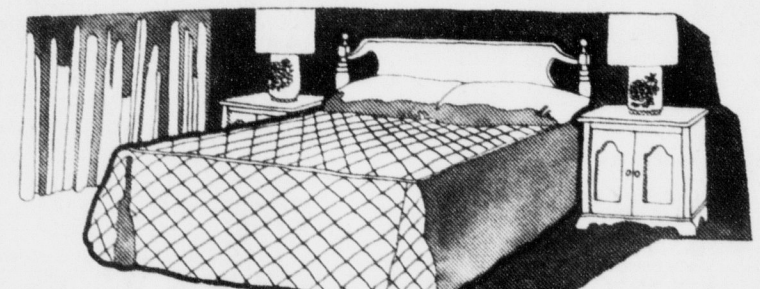

10-25% off

If your idea of a good time is seeing new sights, our idea of a good time is seeing new sights at a savings. From New York to California we give you museums, boat rides and guided tours. And you can save up to 50%.

40-50% off

If you're planning on seeing New York, you can plan on seeing some good theater. We've set up a theater club that allows you as much as 50% off on Off-Broadway and Broadway shows. There will be a special number to call in New York City to find out what's available.

20% off

If you don't have a friend's place to sack out in, we'll also provide you with a roof over your head. Twelve leading national chains of hotels and motels will give you 20% off, on a space available basis.

Russo recalls activities

morale. Russo said he encountered the prisoner he never forgot.

"I don't remember the man's name," he said. "I remember his Rand file number. He was the strongest man I ever met, I mean by constitution, personality. It had quite an effect on me. This was in the summer of 1965..."

The man, he said, had been a soldier since 1948 and was captured in 1965. His job with the North Vietnamese had been as an "education cadre," teaching young people theater and songs to sing.

"He was very committed and very sincere. We talked for two whole days. It was from him that I learned first what the people in the villages really thought. People in the villages are the people whose voices are never heard."

Earlier, Russo had explained how he and Ellsberg copied the Pentagon Papers and observed that at one point he thought Ellsberg wasn't handling the top-secret documents carefully enough. He referred to a day when Ellsberg showed the papers to a visitor.

"I remember thinking to myself," Russo said, "my goodness, those things have top-secret markings. We ought to be more careful." The visitor he referred to was Vu Van Thai, a former South Vietnamese ambassador who was named as an unindicted coconspirator in the case because his fingerprints were found on a volume of the Pentagon's top-secret study of the Vietnam War.

Thai, a friend of both defendants, came to visit, Russo said, on one of the eight nights that it took to copy the Pentagon study at a Hollywood advertising agency.

"I had been sitting in the next room talking with Thai," Russo recalled. "I was talking about a paper I had written about the Vietnam War...My paper showed that the United States was in Vietnam fighting a war against the poor people..."

"Dan, who was in the other room at the Xerox machine, said, 'Hey, Thai, look at this. Read this. Isn't this interesting...Thai read a page and handed the volume back...'"

Russo said the only others who helped copy the papers were Ellsberg's teen-aged son, Robert, and unindicted coconspirator Lyndia Sinay Resnick, Russo's former girl friend.

The soft-spoken Russo is charged with espionage, conspiracy and theft along with Ellsberg. Though Ellsberg, 41, had admitted releasing the papers to news media in 1971, the charges do not mention that act. The indictment deals with the duplication of the papers in 1969.

Arabs bomb diplomat's apartment

It was not immediately known if the group had any ties with the Black Septemberists who carried out the Olympic massacre and the slaying of two U.S. diplomats and a Belgian envoy in Sudan last month.

It was the fourth attack on Israeli diplomats abroad since September and the first major Arab-Israeli encounter on Cyprus, a Mediterranean island with deep troubles of its own.

Police gave this account of the Arab guerrillas' attacks:

A group of Arabs drew up in a car in front of the Israeli residence, a three-story apartment house. One ran up to the front door and left a bag of explosives there. He then rushed back to the car, but Cypriot security guards opened fire as the car started away and three of the Arabs were seized.

The bomb went off, tearing open the front of the building and blasting out the rear wall on the ground floor, so that it looked like a tunnel.

The Israeli ambassador, Rahamin Timor, said later he had left his residence on the third floor for his office just before the blast.

Since September, Arabs have carried out these attacks on Israelis abroad:

● In mid-September, an Israeli diplomat was shot to death in a cafe in Brussels, Belgium.

● A week later, the agricultural attache of the Israeli Embassy in London was killed by a letter bomb.

● On Dec. 28, Black Septemberists seized the Israeli Embassy in Bangkok, Thailand, and held six hostages for 10 hours before agreeing to exchange them for safe conduct to Cairo.

Pope asks for prisoner release

Castel Porziano, Leone's summer residence.

Leftist groups, including many priests, had sent a letter to the Vatican calling on the Pope to avoid seeing Thieu. They alleged that Thieu is responsible for holding thousands of political prisoners in jail or concentration camps in South Vietnam.

Dozens of priests and well-known Roman Catholic laymen marched in Rome on Saturday with the names of jailed Buddhist monks written on their cassocks and jackets.

The 1972 platform of the Coalition for Human Survival will be introduced by three Ingham County Commissioners who were elected on it last November to the board of commissioners Tuesday as an outline of programs they think the county should adopt.

Commissioners James Heyser, D-District 8, Pamela Stern, D-District 7, and John Veenstra, D-District 6, will introduce the platform for the consideration of its long range goals as a part of the future county policy. By introducing it this week, they hope many of the programs will receive appropriations in the 1974 budget.

"All too often the party platform is ignored once the people get in office," Veenstra said. "We feel that since this is what we ran on, we must carry it through."

Veenstra said the whole coalition platform is being introduced at the same time. Then it will be referred to the proper committees to study the separate proposals and gather information as to their expediency and cost. The three commissioners hope the committees will also draft several of the proposals into programs to be presented to the commission.

"We had to introduce the whole platform," Veenstra said. "We thought we were getting bogged down in the business of county administration and we weren't introducing any new programs."

"We're trying to bring forth the idea that the county is a whole. It's made up of many different departments and programs, but it's all part of the same thing," Heyser said.

The commission will also consider creating two new assistant prosecuting attorneys. The resolution was introduced at the March meeting and was sent back to the committee for further study and information.

"The proposal was introduced," Heyser said, "but we weren't given data as to why two new men were needed."

Heyser said that though the commissioners have been given additional information since then on the necessity of creating these two positions, he said there is still some question as to what the total cost will be.

The two positions were actually created in January when the personnel director, Dan Curry, negotiated an agreement with the county prosecutor shortly after their one-day walk out, Veenstra said.

The contract, which the 1972 board signed at the end of January, said the prosecuting attorneys would be paid overtime for preparation until these positions were created.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the commissioners' room at Mason City Hall.

Meat boycott arouses consumers' concern cent last week. He expects sales to return to normal this week.

"Beef prices will drop 4 to 5 cents per pound," he said, "but not any more than that. People are just going to have to eat less meat."

Bruce Goodrich, meat manager at Spartan Shop-Rite, 940 Trowbridge Road, said that people have started buying beef again but in lesser quantities. This is what shoppers should have done in the first place, he said.

"Consumers are going to have to start conserving and stretching their meat dollar," he said. "If people resume their tremendous demand for meat it will create a shortage."

John Putnam, MSU agricultural economist, predicts that since the boycott is over, the whole issue of high meat prices will now boil down to an endurance contest.

Consumers will wait for lower retail prices before buying meat. On the other hand, farmers will hold out for higher market prices before selling their livestock.

"Time is on the side of the consumer," he said. "Farmers can only hold their livestock so long once the cow reaches his optimum weight."

Consumer groups responsible for spearheading the original boycott have suggested that consumers carry the action through by refusing to buy meat on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Apparently the boycott has increased public awareness of the problem of rising meat prices on the part of both the consumer and the farmer. It is doubtful that the boycott will have any lasting effect of prices, except to make those who set them more sensitive to consumer reaction.

Escort services--2 approaches

approved and now we're all set. Our daughter and son-in-law now Kelidas Escort in Detroit and they were having problems too, trying to prove to the public that we're legitimate," Shirley said.

Pictures of grandchildren adorn her desk and make it hard to doubt her sincerity. The scene at Executive Escort was quite different. A busy young woman wearing a tight sweater and hot pants took my application while a short, chubby, mustachioed man with blond hair sat on a plush loveseat and scrutinized another applicant and me.

The form requested only my name and phone number. Other vital statistics included bust, waist and hip measurements and my zodiac sign.

"Do you like men?" read one question. Feeling brave, I said aloud: "What kind of question is that?"

Terry Schoutles, the one with the eagle eyes and the owner of Executive Massage Parlor and Art Studio, in addition to the escort service, was quick to reply. "Some girls hate men but will go out with them for money, if you know what I mean," he said. I knew, and returned to filling out the application, determined not to ask any more stupid questions.

Next question, "Do you like to drink?" Yes, especially Manhattans. "Do you like to be noticed?" Doesn't everybody? Here comes the clincher - "Are you proud of your figure?" Hesitation. I decided to be consistent with all my other "yes" answers. Besides, I had slacks and a long-sleeved jacket on and figured he would never get to know the truth anyway.

Schoutles assured me and my best friend, who I dragged along for moral support, that his business was on the up and up. Just like his art studio that advertises nude body painting and feather rubs, I thought.

Bragging about how well his massage parlor was doing, Schoutles said he hoped to make nearly half a million dollars in one year. Asked if he ever got any hassle from police on the legitimacy of his operations, Schoutles replied: "Not when you know the chief of police."

Thomas O'Toole, Lansing chief of police, Monday denied any association with the owner of the Executive Escort Service.

"I have never seen the man or talked to him and couldn't recognize him if I did see him," O'Toole said.

Schoutles said last Wednesday he had gotten word that his parlor was due for a raid, but he doubted it would ever happen. Two days later, the massage parlor was raided by Lansing police.

After frankly telling us that the escort job could entail some problems with drunken businessmen or unruly guys that get fresh, Schoutles stressed that the woman's judgment determines the course of the date.

As we sidled toward the door, he took one last glance and said: "If you girls think you can work topless, let me know. I can get you more money that way."

I told him we'd think about it and left.

If a client from the Kelidas agency calls to arrange an escort, I don't think my wallet could refuse.
