Nixon retains powers

The U. S. House voted a one-year extension of President Nixon's economic powers Monday, rejecting all proposals for price freezes or rollbacks.

The House action, following passage of a similar bill by the Senate, gives Nixon a thumping triumph in his confrontation with the Democratic-controlled Congress on the cost of living issue. Some Democrats ruefully noted this during the debate.

Seale may win mayor's post

SEALE

Black Panther Bobby Seale is a leading contender to unseat Oakland, Calif.'s Republican mayor, and leftist radicals could take control of Berkeley's City Council as voters ballot today in the neighboring cities.

"The people are going to make history in Oakland. I'm going to win in a landslide," Seale said in an interview Monday.

Court restricts FBI

The FBI was ordered by a federal judge Monday to quit using telephone records to trace the identity of columnist Jack Anderson's sources.

U. S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica issued the temporary injunction after a hearing in which FBI agent Edward Leary testified his agency traced the identity of 96 callers by using (subpoenaed) toll records.

Workers picket growers

Cesar Chavez' farm worker followers launched a new struggle Monday to represent pickers in the heart of America's table grape country.

With pickets and a threat of a new nationwide grape boycott, Chavez' United Farm Workers Union took the offensive against the Teamsters Union, which announced Sunday it had signed field labor contracts with 85 per cent of the growers in the Coachella Valley.

"The Teamsters have the growers, we have the people," Chavez said. "We think the people are the power."

Demonstrators get money

The Washington D. C. government has agreed to pay $37,000 in damages to a government-sanctioned first aid group whose members were arrested during the 1971 Mayday antiwar demonstrations.

In a consent agreement the city also agreed to go as far as is legally possible to nullify the individuals' arrest records.

The agreement marks the second time money damages have been awarded to persons claiming they were illegally arrested during Mayday.

Discrimination suit filed

United Airlines and five unions were charged by the Justice Dept. Monday with discriminating against blacks and women in their employment practices.

The suit charges that United has engaged in a practice that "limits, segregates, classifies or otherwise discriminates" against employees "in ways that deprive or tend to deprive them of employment opportunities because of their race, color, and sex."

The unions were charged with perpetuating these practices through their agreements with the airline.

Fired prof continues battle

By DIANE SILVER
State News Staff Writer

For more than four years the dispute over the Dept. of Social Science's denial of John Hildebrand's tenure has been dragging on.

While Hildebrand's suit in U.S. District Court keeps officials of the Dept. of Social Science from commenting, Hildebrand recently retold his story.

Since September 1968 the former associate professor of social science and Latin American Studies has been fighting his discharge from the University. Three months ago, he took his fight to the U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids filing a suit against President Wharton, Provost John Cantlon, Edward Carlin, dean of University College, Douglas Dunham, chairman of the social science department, and Clinton Snyder, professor of Social Science and assistant to Dunham.

Hildebrand charged that he was terminated for no legitimate reason, written reasons for his discharge were not provided, prescribed procedures were not followed and he was denied an opportunity to present his case. Reinstatement in the University and $115,000 in damages and compensation are being asked. The case is currently at a standstill while a University motion to dismiss the case is being considered by the judge.

Why does Hildebrand continue his case? "I'm fighting for the basic rights nontenured faculty traditionally have not had anywhere," he said. "I view it as a matter of principle and commitment, not unlike the principles I was fighting for as a combat fighter pilot in World War II, the principles of basic human rights."

Hildebrand believes his discharge was prompted by the tenured faculty's fear of changes he and three other nontenured faculty members, who had just been elected to the departmental advisory committee, might make.

Abolition of the common exam and common textbooks were some of the changes he advocated, Hildebrand said.

"It implies a threat to the power structure, when you get a new nontenured group elected to the advisory committee, which is the most powerful committee in the department," he said.

Though he was the only one of the four discharged, the other three men were threatened, Hildebrand said.

Vincent Lombardi, another newly elected nontenured committee member, was later discharged and then reinstated after several days.

Why was Hildebrand the only one of the newly elected nontenured faculty committee members to be discharged? "I'm confident my discharge came because I was the first one up for tenure," he continued. "Though I suppose there may have been additional fears because I apparently had more support than the other gentlemen in the committee election."

The correct procedure was not followed in his termination, Hildebrand believes. The appendix to the departmental bylaws states that the chairman must consult with either the tenured faculty or the advisory committee in matters of tenure.

"They refused to consult with the committee since a majority of the advisory committee supported me and they failed to consult with all the tenured faculty. They only consulted with the full professors," he said.

In an attempt to get around these rules Hildebrand believes someone typed above the appendix on the original stencil of the bylaws the phrase: "not a part of the bylaws."

After his termination, Hildebrand's first move was to ask for a meeting with the professors who made the decision to deny him tenure. Dunham agreed but stipulated that it would be an informal meeting, with no legal counsel and no witnesses.

"Well, what could I say? I simply agreed to whatever he would give me," Hildebrand said. "I had no authority to get a full formal appropriate hearing."

Prior to this meeting Hildebrand reports he had no complaints about his teaching or research.

"However, at the meeting I learned that I'm not a social scientist. Whatever that means."

The professors refused to look at his publication Hildebrand says.

"In fact one of the senior faculty remarked, 'I don't even want to look at that crap!'"

Furthermore, the professors charged that Hildebrand was not teaching for the common final exam, which was used for social science at that time.

"Dunham brought up the fact that several students complained about it," he said. "I don't know why I hadn't talked to me about it before."

"In any case, I'm not certain what he meant, teaching for the exam. I was on the exam committee and presume I could have stolen the exam questions and given them to the class. But of course I didn't do this."

The meeting upheld the original decision to terminate Hildebrand.

Waste authority plans 'Red Sewer' cleanup

By MIKE LAMOU
State News Staff Writer

The Waste Control Authority along with numerous other sponsors is putting together a river cleanup May 12, which they hope will bring out as many as 1,000 volunteers to clean the "Red Sewer."

"The purpose of the project is to involve as many people as possible in a worthwhile community effort," Melody Weist, authority publicity coordinator for the cleanup, said Monday.

The authority has gained cosponsorship for the river cleanup from Meridian Township Jaycees, Haslett

Okemos Jaycees, local National Guard, local Brownie troops, the MSU Fisheries and Wildlife Club and WVVC - Radio.

Joe Krutinger, asst. director of the authority, said the river cleanup will extend from Potter Park, near South Pennsylvania Avenue in Lansing and will possibly go as far south as Williamston.

He said the cleanup parties will be led by members of the Fisheries and Wildlife Club who will instruct volunteers on how to clean the river without doing ecological damage.

Weist said the University has agreed to provide free buses to transport all river cleaners to various locations along the river.

The cleanup will begin at 9 a.m. on May 12 at parking Lot X, and all students on campus can receive free bus rides to lot X that morning.

In addition to free bus transportation the University has agreed to provide free food for all participants.

Weist said that she is trying to get drink distributors to provide free beverages for the occasion.

Weist said that WVVC - radio will be getting a band to play after the cleanup has been completed, which will serve as reward for the hard work the participants will be doing.

She said Charlie T. WVVC disc jockey, will broadcast the event from the river on remote radio.

"The river cleanup everybody's business," Weist said, and she is planning to make everyone knows about the project by putting posters in all residence halls and buses on campus.

Weist is also getting cooperation from WKAR TV, which is producing commercials to promote the river cleanup, and she is sending 150 letters to other groups asking for support of the project.

Prosecution concludes case in protester's trial

The prosecution rested its case Monday in the trial of antiwar demonstrator John Royal after calling four police officers to the stand.

Testifying were Lt. Ferman Badgley; Donald Cleaves, investigative officer of the MSU Dept. of Public Safety; detective George Groll and James Dunlop, the detective allegedly struck by Royal during a demonstration in front of the Placement Bureau May 1.

Royal, one of 10 persons arrested at that time, is charged with obstructing a police officer and the normal functioning of the University, prohibited by University ordinance.

At the time of his arrest, Royal was a leader of the MSU chapter of Students for a Democratic Society.

Testimony Monday revealed that at no time did either Groll or Dunlop identify themselves as police officers to Royal. Both were in plain clothes and without badges.

Defense attorney Mogill said that Royal's guilt must be proven on three points: that resistance to an officer occurred, that Royal's resistance was willful and that Royal was aware that the officer was acting in the line of duty.

Dively, "Their stories not conflict substantially," Mogill said of Monday witnesses, "but they do conflict with other prosecution witnesses who say Royal never struck anyone."

Ellsberg to resume testimony at trial

Ellsberg after testifying

Daniel Ellsberg leaves the federal court building in Los Angeles after testifying in his own defense. Ellsberg told jurors that once, in his role as a government adviser, he was summoned to Washington to find out if President Eisenhower had given authority to subordinates to use nuclear weapons in case of an attack on the U.S.

AP Wirephoto

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Daniel Ellsberg prepared Monday to resume his testimony at the Pentagon Papers trial as the defense case entered its final week. Ellsberg, who told jurors earlier of his career as a government adviser and the journeys to Vietnam which changed him from hawk to dove on the war, was scheduled to climax that story. The defendant said he would tell jurors how he came to copy the Pentagon Papers hoping he could help end the war.

Defense attorneys estimated their case would be complete by Friday. The government has said it will call rebuttal witnesses to answer the points presented by Ellsberg and codefendant Anthony Russo. The defense began its presentation seven weeks ago and has called 26 witnesses including Ellsberg and Russo.

Original plans to summon two more witnesses to testify following Ellsberg were uncertain on Monday. A defense spokesman said that international law professor Richard Falk of Princeton University is still scheduled to testify. But it appeared that Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., would not be called.

Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had been available to testify Monday. But the illness of Ellsberg's attorney last week set the court schedule back two days, keeping Ellsberg on the witness stand Monday afternoon.

Attorneys said they had virtually decided not to request the senator to rearrange his schedule. There was also some question whether Fulbright's testimony would be admissible evidence.

The senator was to have testified that Ellsberg gave him copies of the Pentagon Papers in 1969 - a key point in Ellsberg's defense case. So far, the judge has not allowed any testimony on what became of the copies that were made.

The 42-year-old Ellsberg, who has admitted leaking the secret Vietnam War study to news media in 1971, has said his original intention in copying it was to get it to Congress.

Ellsberg, on trial with Russo for espionage, conspiracy and theft, seeks to raise the question of whether an American can be convicted of espionage for giving top secret documents to the U.S. Congress. He and Russo are charged only with copying the documents, not releasing them.

Ellsberg's attorney, Leonard Boudin, took ill late last Wednesday and was under medical care.

Area court to try evening sessions

The Lansing District Court will begin night court sessions Monday on an eight to 10 week experimental basis.

Two judges will be holding court from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. each Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evening in an effort to reduce the backlog of cases now pending before the court.

"At a time when it has become commonplace to criticize courts for lengthy delays, poor scheduling, costly operations and rigid adherence to outdated procedures, we are attempting to constructively attack some of these problems," Judge Terrance Clem said Monday in a written statement.

Clem said he and the other judges agreed to work in night court without receiving any overtime payment or compensatory time off for the extra hours.

The Lansing City Council, however, has agreed to pay the other court personnel overtime for their work in night court.

Clem said the court plans to primarily hear traffic and ordinance violations.

"The court will be open during these hours, especially for the convenience of those who find it difficult to appear in court during the day," he added.

Women form self-help clinic

By SUE RICKER

A group of women have banded together to seriously consider some mutual questions concerning the care of their reproductive and sexual organs. The name of the organization is the Women's Self-Help Clinic.

The main purpose of the group is to learn the physical makeup of the body and how to prevent many medical problems that a women shares only with other women.

"We don't want to be at the mercy of doctors," said Cathy Loomis, one of the coordinators. "We want to know our bodies."

The self-help clinic has been underway in East Lansing since January 1973, but has achieved very little headway. The main problem is organization.

"There are self-help groups all over the country now. This area is kind of slow. People hear the word 'self-help' but don't know what it is," Loomis said at one of the meetings.

"It hasn't gotten off the ground," Loomis explained, "because we haven't been meeting often enough."

Scheduled meetings were first proposed on a bimonthly basis but it was soon discovered that the same women didn't show up for each meeting. It appeared that the meetings would have to be set up more frequently and in a more desirable atmosphere. Up until now they have been held at the Women's Center, 547 1/2 E. Grand River Ave., in a bare room with a few cots and less than adequate heat.

Beginning next Thursday night, meetings will take place in designated apartments of group members, dividing up into smaller, more personal groups.

At each meeting a specific subject is discussed. These topics range in scope from birth control to learning how to give physical examinations of women.

Men, of course, are not invited, Loomis said.

"We prefer not to have men at the meetings because it's going to be hard enough becoming comfortable with other women let alone having a man around for increased embarrassment," she said.

Loomis and Annette Felice, another coordinator, feel that there are many medical problems that can be prevented or helped if women learn methods and treatments that they can perform without paying a doctor to give them the same information. They hope to achieve this through the women's self-help group.

Kelley, rep investigate stations on gas pricing

State Rep. Michael Kelley, R - Traverse City, and Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley sent 2,700 questionnaires to service stations throughout the state Friday, in an attempt to determine if litigation is needed to regulate gasoline pricing in the state.

The questionnaire, prepared by the attorney general's office and mailed Friday, is considered important in determining whether legal action should be taken against gasoline pricing in Michigan.

"Hopefully, the information received will prompt the Attorney General to promptly pursue litigation to solve what his studies have shown to be an obvious problem," Dively said. Kelley issued a cease and desist order last week, which orders service stations to discontinue any false advertising of gas prices and other irregularities discovered by his study and a study by the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan.

Dively has introduced legislation in the House which would regulate wholesale and retail gas pricing and gasoline advertising in the state.

The 42-question survey is attempting to solicit information on the entire operations of gas stations and how these operations influence the price of gas at that station.

It includes questions on the trading stamp policy of the station, possible wholesale pressure on retailers, outside gasoline advertising, the average prices of the different brands of gasoline and several other questions.

The questionnaire must be sent back to the attorney general immediately after it is received and filled out by the station.

Dively said it will answer questions on gasoline pricing throughout the state.

State rep to seek constituent views

The constituents of State Rep. Frederick Stackable, R-Lansing, will soon receive questionnaires asking for their opinions on problems facing the legislature.

The survey deals with problems in education, crime, government and the environment, and it asks general questions which offer a multiple choice of responses.

"I may not follow their thinking on an item, but I would think twice before I voted against something the vast majority of my constituents were for," Stackable said. He added that the results of constituent surveys do not directly influence his vote.

Drug ed: not a cure, but good prevention

Trust the state legislature to come up with solutions to current issues - even when there aren't any issues.

State Sen. Anthony Stamm, R-Kalamazoo, introduced a resolution last week calling for the State Affairs Committee to investigate reports that drug education leads to drug abuse.

After citing an interesting statistic - that physicians abuse drugs 30 times more often than the general population - and a study by some unnamed Washington "drug expert" who suspects, without facts, that antidrug abuse campaigns have led to more drugs use - Stamm asked that hearings be held to find results that will back his surmise and warn Michigan parents of the perils of drug education.

Certainly drug education may lead to drug abuse, just as students taking driver's education may get involved in accidents and ex-CIA men get convicted of breaking into Democratic national headquarters.

Perhaps Stamm expected an education program alone to solve one of society's most chronic problems affecting the matronly pill-popper as much as the teenage junkie. But a bandage on the cancer of drug abuse in the form of drug education is better than no bandage at all.

Hair law needs trim

Hair has no gender.

A man should have the right to have his hair cut wherever he wants, but an outdated 1931 cosmetology statute discriminates against men having haircuts performed by cosmetologists.

This prohibitory act hinders the clientele of cosmetologists though barbers are free to cut the hair of either sex. But the legal action against this discrimination is caught up in delays since the issue is expected to be turned over to the legislature with the rationale that the "people make the laws."

Meanwhile, during the time lag, many cosmetologists are moonlighting by cutting males' hair after hours. In effect, they are risking arrest for a nonsensical infringement of their right to choose customers.

Barbers have not even voiced concern over the possibility of losing business should the laws be revised. Furthermore, many customers and operators do not even know the statute exists.

Without wasting any more time and energy, the courts or the legislature should clip the needless discrimination off the books.

The delicate art of taxing

Monday was the deadline for filing income tax returns. Russell Baker, 47, is a New York Times columnist based in Washington.

WASHINGTON - Taxation is one of the most delicate arts of government - today. It has come a long way from the old days when governments used to break into your house in the dead of night, point shotguns at your wife and children and say "We want it all."

There was no finesse in those crude methods. Tax collectors were so ashamed of their work that when the neighbors asked what they did for a living they would lie and say they were hangmen.

This all ended after the infamous day of terror in Dallas which is still remembered as "Black April 15." On that day, six inexperienced young tax collectors accidentally collected taxes from more than 20 of the President's biggest campaign contributors.

"You can tax some of the people all of the time, but you can't tax some other of the people any of the time."

In the crisis that followed, banks closed and yacht owners began jumping out of skyscraper windows until the President restored confidence by asserting his firm belief that the only thing we had to fear was taxation itself.

Fortunately, Robert Fulton had just invented the powerful House Ways and Means Committee. Racing a salaried wage-earner up the Hudson River, it had easily passed him at 96th Street and crept out of the river at the Bronx, where it waylaid him and withheld 20 per cent of his paycheck at the source.

The cheers in Wall Street soon faded, however, when Fulton's invention crept out of the water at the battery one night, kidnapped a municipal bond and demanded a 20 per cent tax on its earnings. The President refused to deal with kidnappers, and the kidnapped bond was later found floating off a Hoboken pier, trussed tightly with Form 1040. It had been severely taxed.

This might have plunged the country into the panic of 1893 or the Depression of 1929 had it not been for a man named Sutter who had gone to California to look for gold. Panning one day in the Feather River, Sutter noticed something glistening in the sand. It had a Louisiana accent and bore a strong resemblance to the young Sen. Russell Long.

Sutter had discovered the Senate Finance Committee.

Sutter's was the biggest gold strike in history. Thanks to the Senate Finance Committee, everybody who could afford a solid gold cottage at Newport was authorized to file a short tax form after checking line 1A, which said, "I have a friend at the Senate Finance Committee."

Public outcry against these exemptions threatened to bring on the American Revolution until the President, reading a speech he had scribbled on the back of an old Estimated Income Tax Form, calmed the nation with his immortal Taxburg Address's concluding lines - "You can tax some of the people all of the time, but you can't tax some other of the people any of the time."

It was this speech that started the great waves of immigration from Europe. Among the loophole-starved millions drawn to America by stories of streets paved with oil depletion allowances and capital-gains killings were John Connally, General Motors and tiny but heroic little Delaware.

With the tyrant's heel of taxation lifted from the land, there was music in the saloons and dancing girls in the cow towns all along the frontier, where, because of the incentive of the Cow Depletion Allowance, daring American entrepreneurs were

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Will ex-Nixonite sell out? 'Yes and no,' he replies

(C) 1973 NEW YORK TIMES NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON - When word spread like cooling lava through the Nixon administration that I was to become a columnist for the New York Times, speechwriters who stayed behind wanted to know: "Will you continue to stand up for the President, the work ethic and the Nixon doctrine, or will you sell out to the elitist establishment and become a darling of the Georgetown cocktail party set?"

Sipping a bourbon in one of those dreaded drawing rooms - more dens in inequity than iniquity - I was asked substantially the same question by a new colleague in the press: "Will you speak out impartially, without fear or favor, or will you continue to be a slavish, craven parrot of the Nixon line, a flack planted in our midst?"

I have never ducked the tough questions; my answer, in both cases, was "yes and no," which when delivered with crisp authority inspires confidence. Truth to tell, the only way the reader or the writer of this column will find the answer is to watch this space for further developments.

But not on opening day; before pulling a long face to deal with public affairs as befits a serious columnist, let me trot around the bases to get the feel of this place.

On flackery: A young, nervous aid of Henry Kissinger's called me one day a couple of years ago to ask a strange question: "What does the word 'flack' mean?"

I was gratified to be consulted on a matter of meaning and etymology, a lifelong field of interest, but I had learned the first rule of bureaucratic survival: Never give out information without first finding out why it is being sought. So I misinterpreted the question and replied, "The word 'flack' is an acronym coined in World War II to describe anti-aircraft fire, from the German words fliegerabwehr, kanonen."

William Safire is a New York Times editorial columnist based in Washington. Prior to joining the Times this month, he was speechwriter to the President and has been one of the senior members of the President's research and writing staff since the beginning of the Nixon administration. Safire's column, along with other New York Times columnists, appear occasionally in the State News.

Moments later, the aide called back to say "Dr. Kissinger says he doesn't need you to teach him German, but a columnist just called him 'an administration flack' and he wants to know whether he should take offense."

With that background tucked away for use, I passed along the current usage of "flack": an apologist, or propagandist, with a usually perjorative but occasionally madcap connotation. To cheer Henry up, I added that the role, if not the word could be an honorable one - a skilled advocate was needed to explicate policy - but when I saw him next, he gloomily informed me "I decided to take offense." Perhaps I will, too, someday - but not for a while.

On vogue words: readers of these essays will not be bombarded with any of the "dirty dozen": relevant, meaningful, knowledgeable, hopefully, viable, input, exacerbate, dichotomy, the use of verbs such as program, implement and structure, and ambivalent, though I am of two minds about ambivalent.

I'm pleased to meet you.

Death

To the Editor:

In his Point of View last Tuesday Rep. Kirby Holmes tried to establish a case for reinstating the death penalty. As do all supporters of capital punishment, he failed.

Holmes starts off by castigating the State News for emotionalism in its Jan. 31 editorial against capital punishment. He then proceeds to attempt to capitalize on people's paranoia: "It is not safe to walk on many of our streets day or night," he says. "Skyjackings and attempted assassinations of our political leaders add to the turmoil and unrest that encompass not only Michigan but the entire country." If the State News appealed to emotions, at least it appeal to man's higher emotions - justice and compassion - in a word, his humanity.

Holmes next has the audacity to claim that capital punishment deters crime. There exists not one shred of evidence that this is so, and all the ballyhoo that law and order politicians can spew forth is not going to create any.

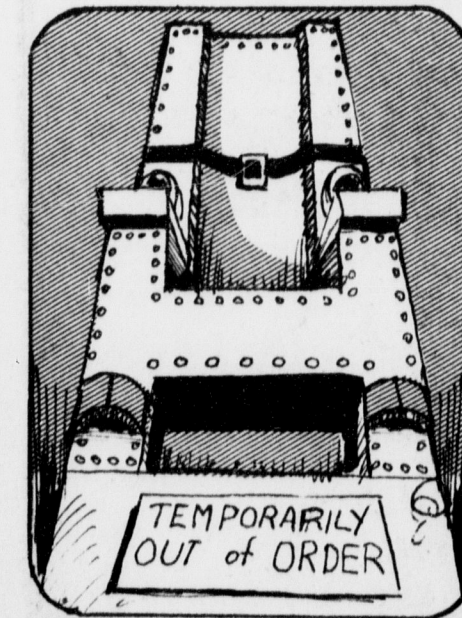

The reason that capital punishment does not deter is simple: In this country only a tiny fraction of serious crimes are ever solved. Since the criminal has so small a chance of being convicted, the possibility of punishment has no effect upon him at all. Murderers could be hung by their thumbs and have bamboo shoots driven under their fingernails, but the crime rate would not drop.

Also cited by Holmes is the 67.5 per cent of California voters who voted to reinstate capital punishment there. He asserts that this reflects nationwide sentiment, and he is probably right. But it is wise to remember that the majority of the people in this country have in the past supported the Vietnam War, Prohibition, and slavery, but their support did not make these institutions right.

The only way that capital punishment can be made an effective deterrent is by increasing to certainty the probability that murderers will be apprehended and executed. Capital punishment would not then be any less bestial and inhuman, but I'm sure that that wouldn't bother Rep. Holmes.

Emotional

To the Editor:

State Rep. Kirby Holmes' remarks on the death penalty (last Tuesday) failed to provide other than an emotional basis for his contention that it serves as a deterrent to murder.

Examinations of the capital crime in states with and without the death penalty have consistently failed to substantiate the deterrent theory. In that light, current efforts to reinstate the death penalty can only be viewed as an appeal to fear.

The possible consequences - institutionalization of the violence we claim to abhor - are unthinkable.

Bull's lib

To the Editor:

This letter is to protest the "exploitation" of the bull which appeared on the supplement in the State News. Advertising stunts such as this annihilate the very foundation the nation is built upon - equal rights for all.

How can bulls respect themselves and their fellow bulls if such pervasive posters as this are distributed? The fact that a woman appeared on the poster means nothing when you consider that the bull was totally naked!

Even though Schlitz went far below advertising standards, I will probably still drink the beer.

SHERIFF'S REPORT SHOWS

County crime on rise

By JANET SHUBITOWSKI
State News Staff Writer

Rising crime in Ingham County parallels figures for the rest of the nation, Sheriff Kenneth L. Preadmore revealed last week in his annual department report.

Comparing figures for the 10 years between 1961 and 1971, the report showed a 13,500 per cent increase in narcotics charges. Crime statistics show only one narcotics charge in 1961 and 136 in 1971. However, narcotics charges dropped to 76 in 1972.

No explanation was offered for the increase in narcotics charges.

Preadmore listed statistics which revealed a 556 per cent increase in breaking and entering, 935 per cent hike in simple larcenies, and a 577 per cent rise in misdemeanors and minor crimes.

The increase in all crimes and the time required to investigate and file reports on them makes proper patrol activities impossible, Preadmore said.

"Due to the increases (in crime) the citizens are being short of the police protection and service they expect, demand and deserve," he said.

With an increase in millage and state and federal revenue sharing funds, sufficient funds exist to provide the necessary manpower and equipment to furnish adequate police services, he said.

"We must increase our patrol activities to provide the enforcement coverage for crime and accident prevention that the citizens of Ingham County are entitled to receive," Preadmore said.

In a letter enclosed in the report, Preadmore said that the future role of the county will necessitate that the Ingham County Board of Commissioners and the sheriff work closely together to provide the residents with adequate police protection.

"Only through this close working relationship will we be able to prove to the residents of this county that we are capable of assuming the role of providing total services," Preadmore said.

In recent weeks the Republican sheriff has charged the predominantly Democratic commission with refusing to cooperate with his office because of partisan considerations.

RESOURCE, TALK CENTER

Women open info room

The Associated Women Student's RAP room has got it all together.

The RAP room, 157 Student Services Bldg., is the only place on campus where information on women is together in one file, Ruth Lezotte, graduate adviser to the group, said.

The RAP, a resource and talk center boasts almost every important book on women's concerns including "Open Marriage," "The Feminine Mystique" and "Sisterhood is Powerful." The center also has materials on almost all aspects of the feminist movement, women's caucuses and sex stereotyping in schools.

The subscription list of journals includes almost every important publication on women, Lezotte, one of the editors of the association's newsletter, "MSU Woman," said. Materials may be checked out for three days.

The RAP room and files started three years ago under the name Resource and People Center. The association established the room as a place for women to share thoughts and resources, Mildred Etling, adviser to the group said.

Most of the center's resources are newspaper articles, and the room needs any newspapers other than the State News and the State Journal, Lezotte said.

While most of the center's resources are on women, there are files on men's consciousness-raising and books including "A Man's Guide to Women's Liberation" and "Unbecoming Men." Men are always welcome at the RAP room, Etling emphasized.

The RAP room of the Associated Women's Students in the Student Services Building has an extensive collection of books and literature on women's issues, including the Unicrap machine which is programmed to answer questions on women's issues.

Activist tells blacks to identify with Africa, teach themselves

By ABDUL JAMAL
State News Staff Writer

Black artists who produce material about the black community and sell the material back to the black community at a high price are not revolutionary black artists, Don L. Lee, black poet and political activist, told a large audience at the Lansing Public Library Friday night.

Black artists should reproduce the material en masse and sell it back to the black community at the lowest possible price, he said.

Lee appeared as part of the library's week-long observance of National Library Week.

"Black artists must reflect the life and death struggle of the black community in their work," he added. "Black people in America have been taught to work from a white frame of reference. We have been taught to hate ourselves and to love white people," he continued.

"Some black people have been taught to think of themselves as Negroes or Afro-Americans," Lee said. "There is no such thing as a Negro and an Afro is a hair style — there is no Afro person."

"We are an African people and we must think from an African frame of reference," Lee asserted. "We must establish a cultural and economic relationship with Africa like white folks have with Europe."

"This country has been systematically geared toward dominating black people," he said. "You find that most of the prisons are filled with black men."

Black people must develop a Pan-African ideology which means the unification and liberation of African people wherever they are, he continued.

"We can't build a movement based upon anticapitalism," he said. "We must build a movement based upon the love for our people."

The capitalist system that exploits black people in South Africa is the same system that systematically exploits black children in American schools, Lee said.

"We must educate ourselves," he continued. "Jews don't send their children to Arabs for education, so why should we send our children to white folks for an education?"

Lee told the group that if black people were talking about liberation they would have to begin to control the institutions in the black community that control the lives of the people there.

"Drugs and education are the two biggest killers in the black community," he said. "The only way our liberation struggle can reach its goals is to establish a black value system."

Cross-campus parade planned to herald spring

Parade lovers will have a chance to take out that old gray bonnet with the blue ribbon it, their Mouseketeer hats, or anything else at hand and join a cross-campus march sponsored by Phillips-Snyder Hall to be held in the early afternoon on May 5.

Ann Arbor freshman Janet Morgan, a parade organizer, said she hopes the procession will gather people as it moves along around campus. Costumes, marchers, instrumentalists and at least one horse are expected to be on hand for the "creativity free-for-all," she added.

An organizational meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. April 23 in Phillips Cafeteria, Henkel another parade organizer said. Morgan noted that 30 people have already expressed interest in the activity and that a parade permit had been obtained from the Dept. of Public Safety.

Undefeated women netters meet Central today at home

By PAM WRIGHT
State News Sports Writer

The undefeated women's tennis team is going to try to continue its winning streak today against Central Michigan University.

The meet will begin at 2 p.m. on the varsity tennis courts.

The Spartan netters have defeated Calvin State College and Purdue University and tied Indiana University in season matches so far.

"I don't think we'll have too much trouble with Central," Elaine Hatton, coach of the women's tennis team commented. "The girls are enthusiastic about playing and getting some more experience for the Big Ten championship meet."

"We should do really well against Central," sophomore Sue Selke, the number one singles player commented, "but we have to be careful. Sometimes the easiest teams can prove to be the most difficult. We're forced to change our games and style."

The team has been working mainly on improving its serves and overhead shots during practice last week.

"The girls have improved tremendously since the beginning of practices," Hatton said. "I think their performance this weekend against Indiana and Purdue has given them the confidence they need to continue to do well."

Freshman Allison Scruggs, the number four singles player, agrees with the importance and effect that confidence can have on a player's game.

"During season games, I more or less try to get my mind together," Scruggs explained. "I think how well we do has a lot to do with going into the game with the right idea and having the confidence."

Starting in the number one position for the Spartans will be Selke. She was undefeated last year in season competition and has continued her winning streak with a 4-0 record.

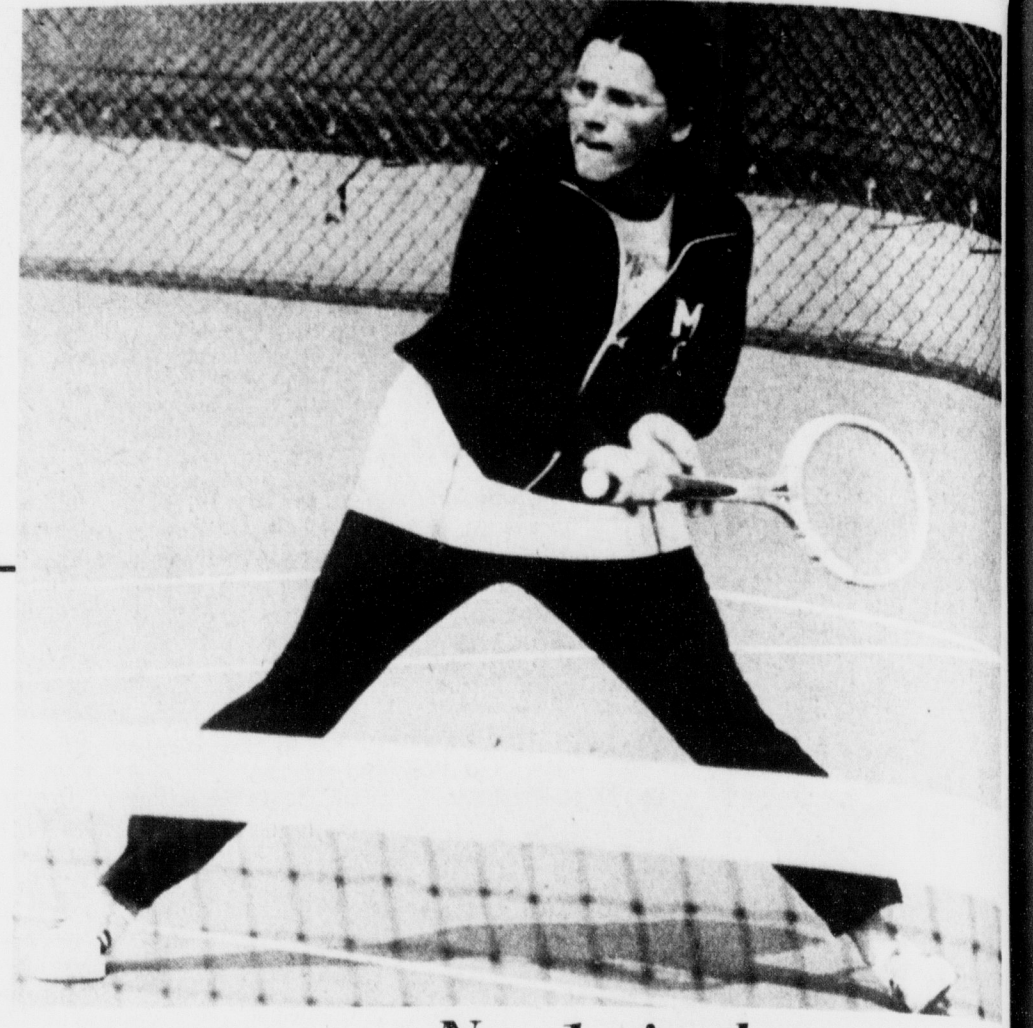

Junior Diana D'Angelo will be MSU's number two singles player, sophomore Cathy Stephenson will be the number three player, Scruggs will be in the number four spot. Sophomore Beckie Dickieson will be in the number five position and freshman Kathy Jo Bock will start in the number six spot.

If the weather is bad the meet will be moved to the courts in Jenison Fieldhouse.

Detroit sophomore Sue Selke stands ready to return her opponent's shot. Selke, the number one singles player, was undefeated in last year's season competition and has yet to be beaten again this year.

Sailers capture cup

MSU's sailing club captured the annual Stroh's Cup of Intercollegiate Sailing this past weekend on Lake St. Clair.

The regatta is sponsored annually by Wayne State University, the Stroh Brewing Co. and the Bayview Yacht Club. It attracted the top sailing teams from the Midwest and Canada.

Sunfish champion Derek Fries and crew John Walton sailed to five first places. Despite a disqualification, Fries captured honors as the outstanding skipper of the series.

Pete Rodin and crew Laura Spangler took third in the B division.

There were light winds on Saturday and heavy winds Sunday which resulted in several capsize.

Lifters take titles

Three MSU weightlifters took individual championships at the annual Michigan AAU Senior State Weightlifting Championships at Highland Park Sunday.

Howard Wandell at 132 pounds, Gary Hunter at 165 pounds and Leonard Espinosa at 181 pounds all captured the titles of their weight divisions.

Also competing for the Spartans at the championships were Randy Hunter, at 165 pounds, Brian Dyke and Dan Gillis, both competing in the 181 pound weight category.

Men's IM

Team schedules for all softball leagues will be ready after 5 p.m. Wednesday. All team managers should pick up a copy at that time.

The umbrellas may be popping, but MSU will try to treat the home fans to some baseball at 1 p.m. today, facing Albion in a make-up doubleheader at Kobs Field.

The game was originally scheduled for April 4 but the rain and snow over the past several weeks forced the delay.

Should today's games be rained out, the two teams will play Thursday at the same time.

Don Ballard and Steve VanderLaan will handle the starting mound duties for the Spartans.

The squad's hitting hasn't given coach Danny

Litwhiler anything to worry about except possibly in a couple of cases.

"Ron DeLonge is hitting the ball really well, but they're just not falling in for him," Litwhiler lamented. "And Steve Cerez should hit .300 normally but I'm not worried about him. He's capable of taking off and hitting .500 the rest of the season."

The team is in excellent physical condition with the possible exception of catcher Bailey Oliver. Oliver spent the entire weekend nursing a slight cold but still managed to catch all four weekend games.

"He's strong and likes to play and he's the kind of guy you like to have behind the plate," Litwhiler said.

The Albion twinbill is just a preview of what's in store for the home fans

Friday and Saturday at Kobs Field.

Iowa faces the Spartans in a doubleheader Friday and the Minnesota Gophers invade East Lansing in a Saturday twinbill.

"Minnesota on paper didn't appear to be as tough as last year," Litwhiler noted, "but Iowa appears to be as tough. They have a lot of guys back."

Iowa was first in the Big Ten last year; Minnesota fourth.

IF FIELD IS DRY ENOUGH

Batsmen open at home today

SOUTHFIELD Mich. (UPI) - JOHN WILSON painted a comic portrait of front office interference and said Monday he would have quit even if he had been rehired as coach of the DETROIT RED WINGS.

"At one stage of the game I did quit," said Wilson, fired Friday after slightly less than two seasons of coaching the National Hockey League team.

Front office personnel Ned Harkness and Jim Bishop were always "suggesting" who to play where and when to play them, Wilson said.

"And only one or two times did they call on Gordie Howe. Gordie has accumulated more knowledge in his little finger than anybody in the entire building. In fact, I think he's responsible for every brick in the building."

Asked if the Red Wings' front office was the laughing stock of the NHL, Wilson said, "Let me answer that in one word - Yes."

BOSTON - Two four run explosions, the second highlighted by Willie Horton's first home run of the season, powered the DETROIT TIGERS to a 9-7 victory over the BOSTON RED SOX Monday in the traditional Patriot's Day morning game.

All eight runs were charged to Boston starter and loser Marty Pattin, who lasted 3 2-3 innings after waiting nine days to make his second pitching appearance of the season.

Competing in the 155 pound weight class, MSU's FRED LOWE placed second in the Jean Dan Invitational held in Paris, France April 7. Lowe's attempts of 281 in the snatch and 363 in the clean and jerk were enough to earn the runner-up spot behind the current Olympic champion from Bulgaria.

MSU grad JOYCE KAZMIERSKI finished second to Hall of Fame Mickey Wright in the $135,000 Colgate-Dinah Shore tournament over the weekend.

Kazmierski led by two strokes after two rounds and by four after 54 holes. Her 72-hole score of 284 was two under par, good for second place and $15,000.

A DOOZEY, HAZELUJAH!

A wonderful work. I left Marjoe grateful for an absorbing film and convinced, ironically, that I had been in the presence of a truly amazing grace, a wonder, and a mystery.

Marjoe is both electrifying pop art and savage sociology. A razzle-dazzle feature.

One of the most extraordinary and compelling non-fiction movies ever made.

Not since Spencer Tracy has the screen presented such a spellbinding Jekyll and Hyde. Marjoe is already a superstar.

I love it! Absolutely spellbinding. A fascinating pip!

Nixon asks sale of stockpile

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon asked Congress Monday for authority to sell $4.1 billion of the government's stockpile of metals and raw materials no longer considered vital to the nation's defense.

By selling in the open market the hoarded supplies of such commodities as tin, platinum and copper, Nixon said, "we can strike a critical blow for the American consumer."

But the administration indicated that the impact on the rate of inflation generally would be small. It said the stockpiles would be sold gradually over several years.

The President has already announced plans to sell $1.9 billion of the stockpiles. If Congress approves, and the administration should sell the entire additional $4.1 billion, the government would have $700 million worth of the stockpiled metals left.

This would be enough to cover material requirements for the first year of a major conflict in Europe and Asia, Nixon said. If there were a longer conflict, there would be enough time to build up the supplies.

Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements told newsmen that "this is a long-term project. These stockpiles are going to be carefully drawn down. I would look at this in terms of a several-year effort."

Herbert Stein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said he would not give an estimate of the impact of the sale on prices.

"If the result is small, we can use that. We can use a lot of small effects," he said.

Clements reported that the National Security Council felt a one-year contingency would be sufficient, adding, "we just feel like the atmosphere in the world today is vastly different than it was in the years gone by."

In the past few weeks the administration has sold increasing amounts of the hoarded supplies, including zinc, lead, and cadmium. There are more than 90 different commodities in the stockpiles, including metals, minerals, rubber, industrial diamonds, feather and silver.

Stein said that, in their raw form, prices of the commodities account for 3 to 4 per cent of the wholesale price index. In selling the commodities he said, the administration would consider market disruptions.

Stockpile proposal

TEXAS SCIENTIST FINDS

Hormone tied to aging

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) - A key hormone produced by the thymus gland is directly related to the process of aging, University of Texas scientists reported Monday.

The scientists said that blood levels of the hormone, called thymosin, decrease dramatically with age and that this appears to be a major factor in the aging process.

Lowered thymosin levels contribute to aging by retarding the ability of the body's natural defense mechanism, the immune system to combat disease, according to Dr. Allan Goldstein.

"It has been found," Goldstein said, "that thymosin levels decrease significantly between the ages of 25 to 45 in normal individuals. This direct evidence provides a testable hypothesis that decreased immunity with age is due to a defect or inability of the thymus gland to produce thymosin."

Goldstein, 35-year-old director of the biochemistry division at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, described the research to the 57th annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

"We hope," Goldstein said, "to find a way to increase a patient's immunological response to diseases by manipulating the amount of thymosin in the blood. We know that the injection of mice with thymosin increases their immunity and resistance to disease, and we have good reason to suppose it will do the same in man."

The thymus gland, which is beneath the breast bone, apparently is the master gland of the immune system, Goldstein said. Thymosin, he said, appears to be the controlling agent of the part of the immune system concerned with what is called "cell-mediated immunity," the resistance to viral and fungal infections, organ transplants and cancers.

Goldstein told a news conference that patients with Hodgkins disease and chronic leukemia, both forms of cancer, have low blood levels of thymosin.

"Recent experimental and clinical studies," Goldstein said, "have shown that the failure of the thymus gland to function properly is a major factor in a number of debilitating and often fatal diseases of children and adults. This includes a wide variety of autoimmune diseases and cancer."

An autoimmune disease is one in which the body's defense mechanism, specifically the white blood cells processed by the thymus gland, fails to recognize its own tissue and tries to destroy it as though the tissue were a foreign invader.

The Texas report was the latest in a series of steps in the rapidly growing field of immunology.

Ford announces plans for smaller Mustang II

DETROIT (UPI) - Ford Motor Co. has confirmed that it will introduce a completely restyled and smaller version of its popular Mustang this fall.

Known as the Mustang II, it will mark the first time the car has been completely restyled since it was introduced on April 17, 1964.

The announcement was made at the ninth birthday party for the Mustang by Ford President Lee A. Iacocca, who is regarded as the "father of the Mustang" because the original sporty car was developed and introduced while he was Ford Division manager.

Since the introduction of the original Mustang, it has grown in size and lost ground in sales to smaller cars. The Mustang II will be based on the current Pinto though its styling will be much different.

"Mustang II will be the first of a new generation of little Mustangs that we predict will set a new luxury and quality standard for all cars sold in the United States, including foreign cars," Iacocca told newsmen.

Pointing out that small cars represent the fastest growing segment of the auto market, Iacocca said, "Smallness is a virtue to many Americans."

MSU workers reminded to file tax forms

April 30 is the deadline for University employees on the student payroll to turn in federal income tax exemption certificates (Form W-4E) for the coming year to the MSU Payroll Division, 350 Administration Bldg. The deadline for graduate assistants is May 7.

Anyone who incurred no federal income tax liability last year and expects to incur none this year is eligible to file an exemption certificate.

No federal income tax will be withheld from the paychecks of students who file the form.

Sex equality legislation in Michigan helps topple barriers

of the 1948 Public Accommodations Act resulted from their complaints. Now only rooming facilities, restrooms and locker rooms can be segregated by sex in Michigan.

Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley has ruled that department stores may not refuse a woman credit on sex grounds, Linda Joy, his press secretary, said.

"Kelley's ruling is important because it gives women who are denied credit some legal recourse," Silea said.

"Unfortunately, some stores are still not aware of the act," she said. "We must continue to put heavy pressure on stores who will not grant credit to women in their own names."

"Just last week a woman told me that after she insisted on having her own name on her charge card, the store sent her a bill addressed to Ms. John Smith," Silea continued.

"We still have a long way to go."

Public schools and colleges are covered by the law, too, as U-M - Flint administrators discovered earlier this month.

The sociology department at U-M - Flint, following a stipulation by the Michigan Dept. of Corrections, decided not to admit women to an innovative criminology class where students and inmates of the Pontiac Honors Camp would explore social problems. The corrections department said some "undefined security contraband risks" led to the decision.

Some women got wind of the policy. An anonymous group called the Flint Feminists asked the Genesee County prosecutor to bring criminal charges against the faculty involved for violating the Public Accommodations Act, Jean King, counsel for the feminists, said.

Violations of the act are punishable by fines of not less than $100 or imprisonment for not less than 15 days or both.

The prosecutor inquired, and he got quick results. King said, "The Genesee prosecutor wrote me that U-M officials were unaware of the applications of the Public Accommodations Act, and when they found out they were in violation, they said they would take immediate action."

"The incident apparently raised consciousness a lot in Flint," King said. "Three of the four women who were later admitted to the class were not known to the feminists. We regard our work there as done."

"Slowly it's going to dawn on the teachers in this state that they can't have mechanics classes for 'boys only' or cooking classes for 'girls only,'" she said.

The Public Accommodations Act may also have a bearing on hospital's decisions to perform abortions.

State Sen. William S. Ballenger, R-Ovid, has requested an analysis by Kelley of a Senate bill which would "permit hospitals, clinics, institutions or facilities or any person connected therewith to refuse to perform or participate in the termination of pregnancy." Carol McIntosh, Ballenger's administrative assistant, said.

Ballenger's Committee on Health and Social Sciences is waiting for Kelley's ruling before they give the bill further consideration, the aide said. The traditionally male sports empire may also feel the influence of the act.

Vicki Lange, an Ann Arbor secretary, is considering filing suit against the state Dept. of Natural Resources, charging that men may buy fishing licenses for themselves and their wives but that women may not purchase licenses for themselves and their husbands.

Under current regulations, a resident fishing license entitles "a man and his wife" to take fish from state waters. The application form required the husband's signature.

Lange said that when she tried to get a license for herself and her husband, she was informed that her husband would have to do the applying and signing. She was not permitted to take out a joint license under her signature.

In all these cases, the Public Accommodations Act has given women legal access to areas not previously covered by statutes. But perhaps the most far-reaching result of the act is that Lansing women have learned to lobby.

"Because of my experience at Brauer's I became aware of how to gain access to government," Hellman said. "We are repeating the same steps with other legislation."

"But the Public Accommodations Act does not apply to housing," Hammond said. "Now we are going to need sex amendments to the open housing law."

Pentagon to reduce jobs on bases

total long-range $1 billion savings from the cutbacks.

The Pentagon said the cutback is the biggest since March 6, 1970, when it announced cuts at 371 installations eliminating 68,000 civilian and 35,300 military jobs.

The new cuts were reported to congressmen Monday but are not to be announced officially by the Pentagon until today.

The costliest cuts in civilian jobs are the close-down of the Boston Naval Shipyard, eliminating 6,099 jobs; and the Hunters Point Naval Shipyard near San Francisco, eliminating 5,184.

But the Pentagon list says closing of the two shipyards and such related facilities at Chelsea Naval Hospital in Boston will save $41.9 million a year.

The Navy is closing major naval bases including air stations at Long Beach, Calif., and Newport, R.I., for what it calls a savings of $30 million. Ships and air squadrons are to be dispersed to other bases up and down the East and West coasts.

The Laredo and Ramey

Air Force bases in Texas and Puerto Rico are to be closed down along with the Fort Wolters Army helicopter training center in Texas.

Naval air stations to be closed down besides those at Newport and Long Beach include the ones at Imperial Beach, Calif., Key West, Florida; Albany and Brunswick, Ga.; and Quonset Point, R.I.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., applauded the base closings as "a painful but necessary first step" to keeping the military budget in line.

and the programs of the board."

Another area of concern to Grafton is the inadequate services rendered by University Health Center. He asserts that the center is insufficiently staffed in regard to number of doctors and nurses expected to serve a university of 40,000 students.

"As much as I like hockey," Grafton said, "it disturbs me that the University has enough money to build a new ice arena but can't find funds to expand our health care facility."

In an effort to explain the function and the role of the student government to the students, Grafton plans to conclude an ASMSU information booklet that he and past president Ron Wahula began last year.

The booklet outlines various services the student can use through ASMSU and explains the function of the board, cabinet, standing committee members and other governmental agencies.

Grafton's final area of concern at this time is the implementation of a student trustee on the board of trustees.

At a recent meeting, the trustees offered to investigate the possibility of including a nonvoting student on the board. At present, it is unconstitutional for any of the "big three" Michigan universities to have a voting student member on its controlling board.

of the 1948 Public Accommodations Act resulted from their complaints. Now only rooming facilities, restrooms and locker rooms can be segregated by sex in Michigan.

"The act is really a landmark for women," Patricia C. Silea, executive director of the Michigan Women's Commission, said. "We are just beginning to realize how many applications it has. It is opening doors in many areas that were closed before."

Since the bill was passed, the law has been used to help women get credit from department stores and end sex discrimination in the classroom. It also may be used to prevent Michigan hospitals from refusing abortions for women and to throw out a fishing license law.

"Unfortunately, some stores are still not aware of the act," she said. "We must continue to put heavy pressure on stores who will not grant credit to women in their own names."

"Just last week a woman told me that after she insisted on having her own name on her charge card, the store sent her a bill addressed to Ms. John Smith," Silea continued.

"We still have a long way to go."

Public schools and colleges are covered by the law, too, as U-M - Flint administrators discovered earlier this month.

The sociology department at U-M - Flint, following a stipulation by the Michigan Dept. of Corrections, decided not to admit women to an innovative criminology class where students and inmates of the Pontiac Honors Camp would explore social problems. The corrections department said some "undefined security contraband risks" led to the decision.

Some women got wind of the policy. An anonymous group called the Flint Feminists asked the Genesee County prosecutor to bring criminal charges against the faculty involved for violating the Public Accommodations Act, Jean King, counsel for the feminists, said.

Violations of the act are punishable by fines of not less than $100 or imprisonment for not less than 15 days or both.

The prosecutor inquired, and he got quick results. King said, "The Genesee prosecutor wrote me that U-M officials were unaware of the applications of the Public Accommodations Act, and when they found out they were in violation, they said they would take immediate action."

"The incident apparently raised consciousness a lot in Flint," King said. "Three of the four women who were later admitted to the class were not known to the feminists. We regard our work there as done."

"Slowly it's going to dawn on the teachers in this state that they can't have mechanics classes for 'boys only' or cooking classes for 'girls only,'" she said.

The Public Accommodations Act may also have a bearing on hospital's decisions to perform abortions.

State Sen. William S. Ballenger, R-Ovid, has requested an analysis by Kelley of a Senate bill which would "permit hospitals, clinics, institutions or facilities or any person connected therewith to refuse to perform or participate in the termination of pregnancy." Carol McIntosh, Ballenger's administrative assistant, said.

Ballenger's Committee on Health and Social Sciences is waiting for Kelley's ruling before they give the bill further consideration, the aide said. The traditionally male sports empire may also feel the influence of the act.

Vicki Lange, an Ann Arbor secretary, is considering filing suit against the state Dept. of Natural Resources, charging that men may buy fishing licenses for themselves and their wives but that women may not purchase licenses for themselves and their husbands.

Under current regulations, a resident fishing license entitles "a man and his wife" to take fish from state waters. The application form required the husband's signature.

Lange said that when she tried to get a license for herself and her husband, she was informed that her husband would have to do the applying and signing. She was not permitted to take out a joint license under her signature.

In all these cases, the Public Accommodations Act has given women legal access to areas not previously covered by statutes. But perhaps the most far-reaching result of the act is that Lansing women have learned to lobby.

"Because of my experience at Brauer's I became aware of how to gain access to government," Hellman said. "We are repeating the same steps with other legislation."

"But the Public Accommodations Act does not apply to housing," Hammond said. "Now we are going to need sex amendments to the open housing law."
