Minor incidents mar employe strike

By GARY KORRECK
State News Staff Writer

The third day of a University employe strike progressed for the most part without incident Thursday. At the Stores and Salvage Yard a couple of minor incidents brought word from both sides to keep cool.

Armed with lawn chairs, sandwiches and coffee, members of locals 1585 and 999 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) spent the day watching the traffic at all University entrances and exits.

The Stores and Salvage Yard entrance on Harrison Road, the main delivery depot for campus mail, supplies and perishable goods, was less quiet.

Two men were struck by vehicles during the day and picketers exchanged barbs with drivers making small personal deliveries.

David L. Buell, a 23-year-old picketer, was struck by a panel truck and taken to Lansing's Sparrow Hospital where he was treated and released for knee abrasions.

The driver of the privately-owned vehicle, University employe Robert Weisfogel, told police he was making a personal call at the time of the incident. Police ticketed Buell for obstructing traffic at an unmarked crosswalk.

University police are still investigating an injury report filed by University Health Center on picketer Robert Densmore. Fellow strikers claim Densmore was knocked down by a car driven by Stores Manager Robert L'hullier. L'hullier will not comment on the incident.

Though a cruiser was intermittently stationed at the Stores driveway, University police said they have had no other problems with picketers.

When the strike began Tuesday union officials claimed the University violated its contract with the workers without the required 10-day notice and then locked them out. C. Keith Groty, asst. vice president for personnel and employe relations, disagreed.

"What has occurred is an expiration of the contractual agreements between these locals and the University," Groty said in a public statement Thursday. "Union officials were notified April 24 in writing and verbally on subsequent occasions that the agreements would expire as soon as June 30."

Union officials claim they did not receive word until July 2 that the contract had expired.

Normally, contract extensions would be allowed to workers until fall term, but Groty said the University bargaining agent received "power to negotiate sooner."

Bargaining for both sides is expected to take place this weekend, but union officials and University representatives are silent as to exactly what time the bargaining will take place and what will be discussed.

The strike has already resulted in the shutting off of air conditioning for the University, partly because materials needed to operate are not being delivered and also because there is no one to operate machinery.

As for food services, which feed approximately 1,600 residence hall conference guests daily, Groty said there is no cutback.

Groty said members of Students for a Democratic Society passed out pamphlets Thursday urging student employes not to cross picket lines but most have. Three Holden Hall employes were released from their jobs Wednesday for refusing to comply with reassignment requests.

Mark Cauchy, one of the three, said he, Jeff Gangas and Gary Ventimiglia got their jobs back Thursday.

He added that his building supervisor promised to ask for volunteers for any future job transfers - a compromise which Cauchy said might improve matters.

Ventimiglia said he would not return to work Friday, however, because he sees his compliance to the requests as a form of scab labor.

"I'm looking for another job right now," the part-time employe of Olde World said.

The Teamsters Union has aided the efforts of picketers by honoring the picket lines, and their local branches in Lansing involved with the purchasing department are not driving at all.

Nixon upset at rejection of nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon Thursday bitterly deplored rejection by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of his nomination of G. McMurtrie Godley as asst. secretary of state for east Asian affairs.

In a statement issued at the White House, the President suggested that Godley, former ambassador to Laos, was unfairly being made the victim of Senate displeasure with the administration's foreign policy.

"The consequences of this committee action go far beyond the injustice done to an outstanding Foreign Service officer," the White House said.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania joined in the counterattack. And Secretary of State William P. Rogers said the rejection "raised profound questions for a career service which is charged with carrying out policies under whatever party it serves."

The rejection of Godley Wednesday by a 9-7 vote apparently was the first decision of this kind by the Foreign Relations Committee on a key nomination by any administration. The chairman, Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., who spearheaded the attack, said Godley showed too much enthusiasm for U.S. military involvement in Southeast Asia.

At the same time, the committee approved by a 12-3 vote the nomination of William H. Sullivan, former deputy asst. secretary for east Asian affairs, to be ambassador to the Philippines. The Senate Thursday followed up by confirming the nomination without debate or objection.

Technically, action on Godley was "indefinitely postponed" by the committee. But the action was tantamount to rejection of Godley as head of the State Dept.'s bureau dealing with the Far East.

Both Godley and Sullivan, who preceded him as ambassador to Laos, headed an American operation that involved the use of Central Intelligence Agency commanders with a clandestine army fighting against a mixture of Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese units.

No contract, no work

Striking members of local 1585 continued to picket at University entrances as the skilled tradespeople's strike went into its third day Thursday. Union officials claim that the University violated its contract with the union, and University officials say that the union was given prior notice that contracts would expire June 30. Picketing on Thursday was uneventful except for two minor accidents at the MSU Stores and the Salvage Yard where two union members were struck by vehicles crossing picket lines.

House allots MSU $77.3 million; no funds included for law school

By JOHN LINDSTROM
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan House of Representatives approved a $77.3 million allocation for MSU on Thursday.

The figure, identical to the one passed by the state Senate on June 27, did not include any funding for the proposed MSU law school.

But legislative observers warned that, despite the fact that both chambers approved an identical package for MSU, the University allocation could be cut if the entire Higher Education Appropriations Bill goes into a joint House-Senate conference committee.

The House approved the MSU allocation, along with the rest of higher education bill, by a 73-31 vote, after debating the bill and its 78 amendments for two days.

The State News was unable to contact any University administrators for comment on the House action.

The bill reached the House floor Wednesday after the House Appropriations Committee and Higher Education subcommittee released the bill with their recommendations.

The committee recommended that MSU receive the final $77.3 million figure, along with $6.6 million for the Agricultural Experiment Station and $5.7 for the Cooperative Extension Service.

The committee did not recommend any funds for the proposed MSU law school or the proposed law schools at Western Michigan University and Grand Valley State College.

The Senate Appropriations Committee recommended $77,000 for the MSU law school, some $89,000 more than Gov. Milliken's recommendation of $688,000. They also recommended $200,000 for a Grand Valley law school and $120,000 for WMU. Milliken did not recommend funds for a law school at either school.

However, the Senate narrowly cut all funds for the law schools because many senators said they felt that there were enough attorneys in Michigan already.

The House, concurring with the Senate decision, made no attempt to fund the law schools.

Most House debate on the bill dealt not with MSU, but amendments to the bill in general, and specifically those dealing with Central Michigan University and Grand Valley.

Rep. James Farnsworth, R-Holland and a member of the Higher Education Appropriations subcommittee, began the debate Wednesday by claiming that the Democrats on the committee had created amendments to the bill without consulting with the committee's Republican members.

"There seemed to be concern among the Republicans that the Democrats were trying to railroad the amendments through," Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, said.

Following that debate, several House members succeeded in getting certain amendments cut from the block to be considered separately.

In an attempt to stave off more amendments being separated, causing an intense political battle, Rep. Billy Huffman, D-Madison Heights and chairman of the Higher Education Appropriations subcommittee, moved that the bill not be considered until Thursday. His motion was narrowly passed 46 to 42.

Thursday the House, after considerable debate, approved a bill that ended up cutting the CMU allocation by approximately $900,000 and Grand Valley by $140,000.

And these cuts are the reasons why observers warn the MSU allocation

Nixon ill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon was reported by his doctors Thursday night to be ill with viral pneumonia and has entered Bethesda Naval Center for treatment.

Dr. Walter Tkach said the pneumonia has "no complications." He said Nixon is expected to remain in the hospital for no longer than about a week for rest and medication.

The President complained of discomfort in his right chest at 5:30 a.m. Thursday and a preliminary diagnosis indicated viral pneumonia.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said Nixon was running a fever of between 101 and 102 degrees, but was in "excellent spirits, even though somewhat weak." In response to a question from reporters who were summoned to the White House Thursday evening, Dr. Tkach assured the press that the viral pneumonia was all that is wrong with the President.

DENIES MAKING FALSE TESTIMONY

Mitchell leaves stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Mitchell Thursday disputed a suggestion that he may have testified falsely during the Watergate cover-up, and said investigating senators can judge for themselves his denials that he ever approved the wiretap raid on the Democrats.

So saying, Mitchell left the Senate witness stand after televised testimony that took two full days and most of a third.

The Senate Watergate committee, meanwhile, voted to insist that it is entitled to see every document in the White House or any executive agency that bears upon the case it is investigating.

That is in direct conflict with President Nixon's refusal to yield White House papers or testify himself.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., the chairman, talked with Nixon by telephone, and arranged to meet with him to seek a reconciliation in that dispute.

He said the Senate panel hopes to avoid a constitutional confrontation in its quest for Watergate evidence from the White House.

Committee counsel Samuel Dash challenged Mitchell in the final minutes of his hours on the witness stand.

"... Since you may have given false testimony under oath on prior occasions, is there any reason to believe your testimony before this committee?" Dash asked.

Dash said his question went particularly to Mitchell's earlier denials that he had any knowledge of political spy plans in the spring of 1972, or of cover-up activities.

"I disagree, of course, with your interpretation of those matters which you have just read," Mitchell replied. "As far as the determinations of this committee, I think they can judge the testimony, my testimony, and make their own conclusions..."

Dash then said Mitchell's account was in conflict with the Senate testimony of six earlier witnesses.

"I disagree violently..." Mitchell said.

Richard A. Moore, a White House special counsel, was the next Watergate witness, and testified he believes Nixon was totally unaware of the critical facts of Watergate until last March 21.

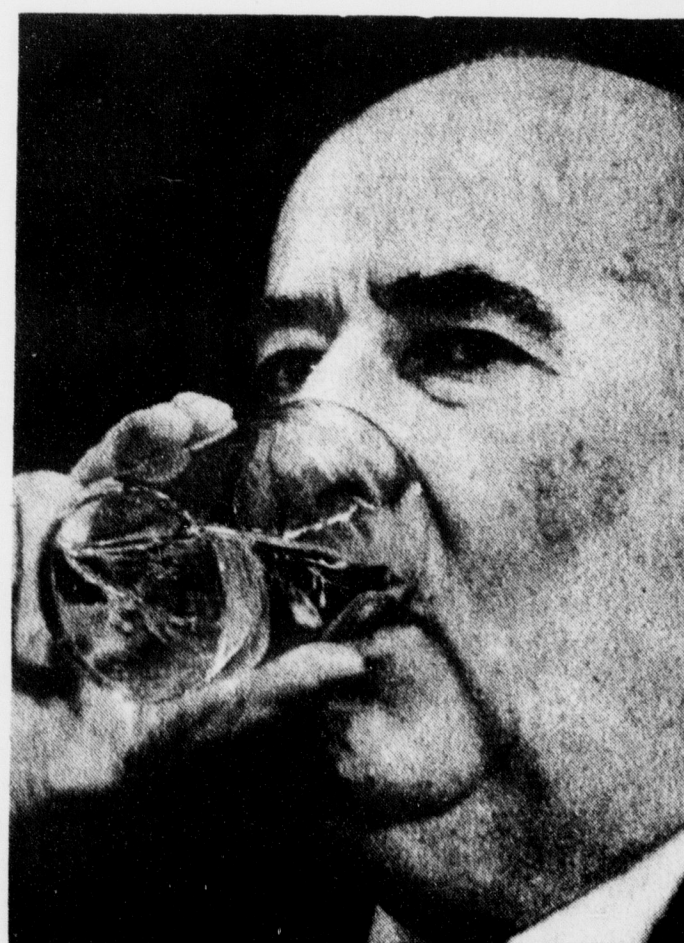

Dash added new questions about Mitchell's past testimony. He asked Mitchell if he lied last year when he swore he had not been briefed about the Watergate involvement of G. Gordon Liddy, when he swore he didn't know the circumstances of Liddy's hiring by the Nixon campaign and when he told FBI agents that the only knowledge he had of the break-in at Democratic headquarters was what he read in the newspapers.

Mitchell said his answers had been truthful in a narrow context. "At that particular time we weren't volunteering anything," Mitchell said.

John N. Mitchell cools off from testifying.

Alaska pipeline plan blasted

The Nixon administration Thursday was accused of making false statements about the proposed Alaska oil pipeline and withholding information that would promote development of an alternative pipeline route through Canada.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., made the charges in a speech on the Senate floor. He said it is "common knowledge" that the administration has given its allegiance to the oil companies that want to build the pipeline across Alaska.

Earlier, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., accused the major oil companies of deliberately creating an oil shortage to spur development of the proposed pipeline across Alaska.

Cox seeks $2.8 million

Special prosecutor Archibald Cox asked a Senate Appropriations subcommittee today for $2.8 million to continue his Watergate investigation in the fiscal year that began July 1.

He testified it is too early to report on the progress of his work, which also touches on other related matters. He sought authority for a staff of 90.

"The work of the Watergate special prosecution force is a task of the highest national priority," Cox told the subcommittee.

"The effort must be organized and conducted with adequate support in order for the special prosecutor to fulfill his responsibilities and duties."

Elderly woman murdered

A man killed a 78-year-old Ohio grandmother with a meat cleaver and then wounded her teenage grandson when he came to her aid, State Police said Thursday.

The slaying occurred shortly before midnight Wednesday in a summer home on Lake Mullett in the Northern Michigan resort area in Cheboygan County.

The victim was Mrs. Rose Ellen Sampson, of Middletown, Ohio, who was spending the summer at the two-story resort home with her two grandchildren, 17-year-old Bruce Sampson, and his 14-year-old sister, Diane.

After fighting with Bruce, the assailant fled on foot from the cabin. Bruce alerted his sister, who was unharmed, and she called police from a neighbor's home.

Housewife wins lottery

Evelyn Hubble, a housewife who works part-time in a bowling alley, today won $200,000 in the super drawing of the Michigan lottery.

Mrs. Hubble, 44, of Wayne, won the top prize in the drawing being held in conjunction with the National Cherry Festival in Traverse City.

Prior to the Super drawing, the regular lottery drawing was held. The winning numbers are: 031 131.

Military records burned

A fire that a federal official said could have been caused by arson swept through the sixth floor of the huge Military Personnel Record Center in Overland, Mo., near St. Louis, Thursday, destroying or damaging thousands of records. The documents stored in the center include military, medical and service records essential to applications for retirement and disability benefits, among other things. Many of the pre-1960 records are not duplicated elsewhere.

A spokesman for the General Services Administration, F. Howard Whiteley, said in Kansas City that federal agents were investigating arson as a possible cause.

Whiteley said it "will take some time" to assess the damage to the office building. He said the loss of the voluminous military records — many without duplicates — would be "quite a setback."

Food cost rise predicted

A spokesman for the nation's food chain stores said today the public can expect food prices to rise as much as 15 per cent on some items when the current price freeze ends.

"Higher prices are guaranteed by the freeze," Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Assn. of Food Chains, told a House Judiciary subcommittee studying the increase in food prices.

Adamy said the highest price increases will be for fresh fruits and vegetables, which are not now controlled at the production end, but that an overall increase on all market items of 4 to 5 per cent can be expected.

RECHANNEL INTO MASS TRANSIT

Board asks shift in federal funds

By JIM BUSH
State News Staff Writer

The nation's automobiles may be running out of gas, but mass transit is picking up steam.

The Ingham County Board of Commissioners voted Tuesday night to direct their energy toward rechanneling federal funds away from interstate highways and into mass transportation development.

The commissioners adopted, 17-4, a resolution calling for a breakup of the federal Highway Trust Fund, which takes four cents from every gallon of gasoline sold in the United States and spends it on the construction of the interstate freeway system.

"With the interstate system nearly complete, mass transit is the logical place to spend these monies," Lansing Commissioner David V. Buhl, R-District 16, said. "I certainly don't expect Congress to repeal the tax."

The commission's resolution, which reflected the largely urban composition of the board, specifically asked the National Assn. of Counties to reverse its stand against busting the trust and support mass transit use of the highway fund.

Discussion of the trust fund is expected at the association's July 22-25 convention in Dallas.

One opponent of the county resolution, Alfred Wardowski, R-District 3, said federal gas tax money should be used to improve secondary roads, instead of mass transit, once the interstate system is complete.

However, Commissioner John Veenstra, D-District 6, a district which includes East Campus, disagreed. "It's painfully obvious, with auto pollution and the gas shortage, that we can no longer stay with the auto," Veenstra said.

He added that if gasoline is to be preserved for such essential purposes as powering farm equipment, mass transit will have to be developed as an alternative to the automobile.

Federal law now requires that the government's share of gasoline taxes be used, through the Highway Trust Fund, for highway transportation systems.

This is bad budgetary practice, East Lansing Commissioner Richard Conlin, D-District 10, said.

"There is no way that changing national priorities can be reflected in such a system," he said. He said the highway trust must be opened up if mass transit is to receive the highest priority in transportation funding.

The resolution, of course, has no power other than to exert some pressure upon Congress to modify the fund, which was established during the Eisenhower Administration.

In other action at its regular monthly meeting in Mason, the 21-member commission agreed to spend $3,500 to send 100 county children to day camp and directed Drain Commissioner Richard Sode to begin efforts to restore Lake Lansing in Haslett.

The board instructed Sode to determine the normal level of the lake, which is located three miles northeast of East Lansing. Establishment of the lake level is the first step in a lengthy $1 million project to reclaim the lake and enhance its recreational value.

Lake Lansing is currently dying from eutrophication, a condition in which algae and weeds choke fish from the lake. Sode is seeking 75 per cent federal funding of the project, which will include dredging to eliminate excessive plant growth and the construction of a dam to control the lake's level at legally established depths.

Wilderness survival course: a lifesaver for MSU graduate

By CYNTHIA STANTON

A MSU course on wilderness survival helped save the lives of a recent MSU grad and his companion when their vacation camping trip in the Canadian wilderness turned into a 12-day test of endurance.

"I was always under the impression that I wouldn't really use it (the course), but I thought there just might be a time in our civilized society when I might need it—a time when all our modern conveniences might not be there," said Walt Walbert, a building and construction major and a June graduate.

He was right. Walbert and Ron Stricker of Saginaw ventured out on a camping trip to an area near Terrace Bay, Ontario, on June 14. They were due back in Saginaw by June 30 for the wedding of Walbert's sister, but they didn't make it.

When they didn't return, their families became concerned and notified Terrace Bay authorities.

On June 23, their kayak had jammed on some trees on the Steel River and flipped over, dumping out all their supplies. Luckily, they escaped injury and managed to salvage two packs, an air mattress and their torn tent.

"At this point the most useful thing learned in the survival course was to use my head and keep cool," Walbert said.

The two set up camp near the river, using the tent remains for shelter, and started a fire with some salvaged matches.

Toad stew and some dried milk that Walbert had stowed in his personal belongings provided nourishment.

Walbert tied a red kerchief to a branch over the river and another marker between two trees.

Their rescue finally came the morning of July 5 when a pilot spotted their marker.

According to Paul Risk, instructor in MSU's wilderness survival course, Walbert and Stricker had all five of the essentials needed in a survival situation: shelter, fire, water, signals, and food.

Risk pointed out that food is the least important item on the list because a person can live 30 days or more with only water.

He said the aim of the course is to develop the kind of confidence needed to get along in the outdoors to promote survival in any situation no matter what the climate may be.

"The most common mistake people make in a survival situation is to panic. Survival is an attitude—the ability to remain calm," Risk emphasized.

Up to 800 students each quarter enroll in MSU's survival course, said Risk, making it one of the most popular elective courses on campus. The course is offered by the Dept. of Parks and Recreation Resources in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Asked what prompted him to take the survival course, Walbert replied, "It seemed like an interesting course."

Committee slates 2nd free concert

Wondering what to do on a lazy weekend afternoon? If you'd like to get some sun and take in some music at the same time, you may be interested in the free concert planned for Sunday afternoon at East Lansing City Park.

The Mojo Boogie Band from Ann Arbor along with Sky Song and Justice Myles from Flint will perform at this summer's second free concert starting at 3 p.m.

Mary Kay Wickens of the Free Concert Committee announced.

City Park is located at Alton Road and M-78, south of Burcham Drive between Abbott and Hagadorn roads.

Wickens said the committee is attempting to raise $250 for materials so the group can build a portable stage to use at future concerts. She said the committee hopes to sponsor free concerts every Sunday throughout the summer.

About 500 people attended the first concert on June 24 in Valley Court Park.

Local businesses to hold street fest

The downtown businesses of East Lansing are throwing a party for the community Saturday.

The second annual Bastille Day will be from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. Saturday on M.A.C. Avenue, which will be barricaded between Albert Street and Grand River Avenue.

Bastille Day, the July 14 celebration of independence in France, translates in East Lansing to a street festival with exhibits and relaxation. Entertainment with folk singers will be provided in the city's new mobile band shell.

A new fire truck, police car and rescue vehicle — along with the fire and police department officials — will be on hand for children.

A nostalgia corner with East Lansing historical items ranging back 100 years along with a free bike clinic will interest older folks. Rounding out activities will be pop, beer, and grilled hot dogs for sale by the Bastille Day sponsors, the Central East Lansing Business Assn. (CELBA).

The theme of the celebration is a salute to East Lansing's civil servants, according to CELBA President Paula Johnson.

She anticipates thousands of people to attend the street celebration. There will not be any retail business associated with Bastille Day, she said, though Olde World Restaurant on M.A.C. Avenue will have special French decor.

Unit plans return of passenger trains

By LAURIE WINK

Next spring will be the likely starting point for what a Michigan State Highway Commission spokesman described Thursday as a pioneering effort to restore railroad passenger service to Chicago for Lansing residents.

The Commission Wednesday approved the railroad passenger plan along with 11 other projects in an effort to improve Michigan public transportation systems.

The commission also approved a $73,243 state fund grant to Lansing for improvement of the local bus system. Funds would be used to purchase nine buses and five bus shelters along with miscellaneous maintenance and safety equipment.

The 12 projects would be financed by the General Transportation Fund, made up of one-half cent of the state gasoline tax under a package approved by the legislature last December. The fund is expected to accumulate about $22.5 million a year.

One of the 12 experiments approved is a Port Huron to Chicago Amtrak passenger route, to pass through Lapeer, Flint, Lansing, Charlotte, Battle Creek and South Bend, Ind. Amtrak is the federal government's railroad corporation.

Service on this route was previously offered by Grand Trunk Western Railroad but was discontinued on May 1, 1971.

A spokesman for the Michigan State Highway Commission said customers had complained about the poor time schedules and rundown coaches of the former service. "Amtrak offers fast, efficient service that could attract customers," the spokesman said.

"Right now the project requires a lot of negotiation between our commission, local jurisdictions and Amtrak," the spokesman explained.

Highway department staff members estimate that half of the operating costs will come from passenger fares, though rates are as yet undetermined. The state would pay $136,350, with the rest of the $187,500 cost paid by Amtrak and $238,650 by regional governments.

The projects await approval by the legislature when it reconvenes after the summer recess. The programs will automatically become operative if the legislature fails to act otherwise within 30 session days.

Rail service was also approved for commuters traveling between Ann Arbor and downtown Detroit. Eight trains would be provided on weekdays and four on weekends and holidays.

Eight smaller Michigan cities would receive assistance in establishing Dial-A-Ride Transportation (DART). Under these systems, customers dial a telephone number to obtain rides on small van-type buses. Experience in other cities have shown DART to be less expensive and more flexible than regular bus systems, according to the Highway Commission. Owosso is on a list of 22 cities eligible for such service.

Funds were approved for preliminary design and engineering of an automated transit system, or people-mover, in the city that submits the best proposal to the commission. The system of small cars operating on a fixed rail would provide new means of transportation for congested urban areas.

KENNEDY MAKES DISCOVERY

Company solicits fuel

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy,

D-Mass., has released a letter revealing that a major oil company is soliciting new heating fuel business at the same time that supplies of independent fuel dealers throughout New England are being cut drastically.

The letter, dated last month, is from the Atlantic Richfield Co. (ARCO) and is addressed "Dear Realtor."

"Atlantic Richfield Company is vitally interested in securing new home heating oil accounts," the letter begins. "You as a Realtor, are in an ideal position to assist us in securing new business.

"For every new customer that we secure, as a result of your information, we will remit a check in the amount of $15 after the first oil delivery is made," the letter continues.

The letter's release coincided with a report by Kennedy that several independent heating oil dealers have 86 per cent less no. 2 fuel oil inventories than they did a year ago.

Specifically, he said, last year the independents had on hand 2.4 million barrels of home heating oil compared to this year's stock of "barely" 355,000 barrels.

These same companies provide about 40 per cent of the home heating oil for New England families, he said during hearings Thursday of the Senate Antitrust Subcommittee.

"What is absolutely clear is that major oil companies have acted to drive the independents to the wall, denying them an adequate supply of oil and selling them the supply they do make available at higher prices than they are selling to their own distributors," Kennedy charged.

Kennedy reportedly will ask appropriate federal authorities to look at the solicitation letter to see if charges should be filed.

Daniel Saks, of the MSU Economics Dept., had hoped to rent his house while he was away on sabbatical leave. His appeal to the Zoning Board of appeals was turned down because his house lacked adequate parking space. A number of concerned citizens attended the meeting to question the legality of rental of a private residence to unrelated persons such as students, but found that it is legal to rent such a house to up to five unrelated persons.

MSU to offer master's degree in public administration in fall

By FRAN MURRAY

A new master's program in public administration will be offered in September by the Dept. of Political Science for persons preparing to enter public service or already in mid-careers in government employment.

The Public Administration program, already approved by the Academic Council provides a required core of political science courses including an internship in a governmental agency, related electives and studies in one of eight possible fields of application.

Areas of specialization available will be comparative and developmental administration; judicial administration; natural resources and agricultural administration; organization and management training for public service; policy planning, analysis and evaluation; public health administration; state and intergovernmental administration and urban administration.

The internship in a government agency will account for 12 of the 37 credits offered in the required core of six courses.

MSU's proximity to the state capitol will be particularly useful to the graduate students, according to Herbert Garfinkel, professor of political science and director of the new program.

Garfinkel was the first dean of James Madison College, the undergraduate residential college which deals with the study of public policy problems within the framework of the social sciences and related disciplines.

The department previously had a master's program in public administration but discontinued it in the mid-1960s when major emphasis was placed on Ph.D. programs.

The growing interest and employment in state and local government warrants the resumption and revision of the earlier program, Garfinkel said.

Both University and unions must negotiate in good faith

As far as the University is concerned, the strike of MSU's 1,200 maintenance workers and 225 skilled tradesmen couldn't have come at a more advantageous time.

Fall term, when the University is operating at full gear, is still two months away. It makes more sense for University officials to force contract negotiations to come to a head now—even if it means a strike—instead of in the fall when a strike would effectively cripple or shut down the University.

The striking workers are members of locals 1585 and 999 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. Both unions have been working without a contract since June 30 when their old contract expired.

The University has offered local 1585 a 12 per cent wage hike on a two-year contract, and two per cent of that raise would go to some employees to bring them to the top of the wage rate in their job classifications. The rate increase seems equitable but union leaders are angered at the University because some 250 workers have not been paid at the top of their scale for several years.

Keith Groty, asst. vice president for personnel and employee relations, is in charge of University efforts to smooth out contract negotiations. His position is relatively new in the University's complicated bureaucracy, and is one reason why labor relations are more forceful and well-planned than ever before.

Contrary to union charges, Groty says the University did not arbitrarily terminate union contracts and precipitate a lockout. He says union officials were notified on April 24 that contracts were set to expire, and negotiations began for a new pact with them in early May.

Student workers have been trapped in the middle of the strike. Each student affected by the strike is forced to decide to continue his job or not to cross picket lines and face a temporary layoff.

Both unions and the University have been mum as to specific issues involved in the bargaining. For the strike to be settled as quickly as possible, both sides must be honest and cooperative at the bargaining table.

Spartan Village needs a pool

The death of an inquisitive five-year-old is a tragedy that the University and Spartan Village residents should not take lightly.

Neither is the lack of supervised recreational facilities at married housing or an open, rock-strewn field filled with potholes and waterholes that is an open invitation for curious children.

Monday night two little boys marched across this field, climbed a five-foot fence and crossed the 1-496 expressway. One of them never made it back.

These two boys may never have gone exploring if there was a wading pool in the Spartan Village complex. Such a high concentration of families live there that it's a shame more recreational facilities aren't provided.

A small, shallow wading pool could give children a welcome relief from summer heat.

Parents could relax in the sun and watch their kids.

Married housing residents who would like a pool have to voice their concern to John Roetman, manager of the married housing complex.

Toward the west end of Spartan Village is a large field where Midwest Construction Co. recently installed an underground sewer line that hooks up to the campus Water Quality Treatment Project. The work for the most part is completed, except for treatment lakes that Midwest Construction has just begun digging.

Even though the field is an explorer's gold mine for little kids, high fences have been built around the lakes. The construction is due to be completed in August when the firm must clean up its mess and fill in the potholes and waterholes.

The sooner the work is over the safer the field will be. And the sooner a wading pool is installed in Spartan Village, the better.

Murderer on the run

A report issued by Louisiana Atty. Gen. William Guste says that the shooting deaths of two Southern University students last November were unjustified.

In that case, when will the deputy sheriff who pulled the trigger and killed the two students be brought to trial on a charge of murder?

Police were called to Southern University on Nov. 16, 1972 to head off a student disruption. Police swarmed over the campus armed with submachine guns, shotguns, rifles and tear gas guns.

One deputy sheriff lost his cool and fired a deadly shotgun blast, killing two students. When will this man be brought to trial?

Two Cents Worth

LETTER POLICY
The State News welcomes all letters. Letters should be typed to a 65-space line and triple spaced. Letters should be signed and include hometown, student, faculty or staff standing and local address. No unsigned letters will be accepted. Letters may be edited for clarity and conciseness to accommodate more letters on the page, but definitely will not be edited for content.

Record Eagle covered Kalkaska dispute well

To the Editor:

In your Monday, July 2 edition under an eight-column headline proclaiming "Union Picketing Slackens in Kalkaska," a story bylined by Michael Fox and Beckie Hanes contained the following paragraph:

"The Friday and Saturday editions of the daily Traverse City Record-Eagle, which is published only 25 miles away and calls itself 'Northern Michigan's Greatest Daily,' had absolutely no comment or coverage on the Kalkaska labor troubles or the negotiations."

While this statement fulfills the letter of the truth, it definitely implies that this newspaper has been remiss in its coverage of the Kalkaska troubles. While we had nothing in the editions your writers mention, there is no happening in the area that has been given greater coverage—all of it front-paged—than the Kalkaska labor disturbances.

We have been covering this scene regularly since last February and have published numerous stories relating to all phases of the occurrences. In addition to the news stories, we have also published at least one editorial urging that both parties in the dispute take the action finally recommended by Judge Noel Fox.

While our selection of the times we publish stories may not meet with the approval of your writers, I submit that it is our privilege to make this judgment. If your writers had been half as eager to learn the truth as they apparently were to take a wholly unnecessary and unkind dig at another newspaper they would have obtained a wealth of background material for their own article.

They could easily have found this material in back issues of the Record-Eagle. We also were supplying information on the disturbances to United Press International on a regular basis. Incidentally, our latest story was front-paged July 3.

The photographers and I have been on the Kalkaska scene amid the violence but we don't recall seeing Fox or Hanes there. Half-truths and snide innuendoes, while sometimes impressive and often cute, are not very good substitutes for accurate, responsible reporting.

Personally I feel sorry for them. I hope they will sin no more.

Trainers

To the Editor:

I wish to express my thanks to all the trainers (Gayle Robinson, Clint Thompson, Jerry Kimbrough) for all the help they have given to the athletes at MSU.

They do a great job and receive no praise. They are there to help athletes prepare for a contest, help with injuries and help to put them in the right frame of mind.

I feel that, though they have not had to help me, I can say that they have done a great job. You are doing a helluva job, trainers, and just keep up the good work!

Kids have complex ideas that parents can't ignore

The other day I had an assignment I doubt many reporters would relish.

A five-year-old boy had been found dead and I was supposed to cover the story. This meant talking to the boy's mother and friends.

I survived the ordeal but I probably won't forget it. Especially the way it happened.

Two kids, four-and-a-half and five years old, had made their way nearly three-quarters of a mile away from home, crossed fences and an expressway and located a water-filled gravel pit surrounded by a high fence with barbed wire at the top. They got through that, too.

It made me think about the kind of ideas kids have when they're young, ideas they often don't get credit for. Ideas that can amaze as well as kill.

"Kids fantasize a great deal and I imagine he wanted to see the pond," the dead child's mother told me. They do fantasize, but they also have some idea of reality.

"Chrissie couldn't swim but I could," the four-and-a-half-year-old who made it home said. This boy claimed to be adept at jumping fences twice his height and though he didn't have full comprehension of what happened, he was aware his friend would not be coming back.

The point here is that kids are not just little bundles of flesh to be swathed in snowsuits or have a toy stuck in their hand. By the time they are able to talk they begin to realize what is about them and they become capable of fostering complex ideas.

Chris' mother knew this. Her son had been involved in the Montessori teaching method which aims at self-education by the child, and had developed a number of creative skills at his early age. Even she admitted surprise at the length and difficulty of the adventure he nearly managed to complete. Certainly, children should not be commended for wandering away from home, for whatever reason, nor praised for undertaking journeys dangerous even to adults, but they should be listened to.

A clean home and good food are not always enough for a young person who is finding out new things about life every minute he lives it. Children have their own sense of logic and while their imaginations should be encouraged into artistic areas, their ideas should be cultivated by interested parents.

Too often I've heard the bromide "they grow up so fast" and often it's because there is no real communication between parent and child until the latter is nearly an adult.

It's not easy talking to children; it can be time-consuming and sometimes uneventful. Mostly, kids say things grandmothers and aunts label "cute," yet a child's mind is also filled with problems. Some he can express and some he can not. He may have a hidden fear, an important question or even an intelligent insight to reveal.

The adult who tells this child to go out and play or not to bother him is defeating his purpose. Speech, hygienic habits and manners are not the only things a child should learn.

If anything, he needs to develop a sense of understanding; how to live and work with others. This includes communication.

A child needs to learn respect, not how to knuckle under. Giving him credit for an undeveloped, but real, intelligence, it is more likely he will follow the dictates of a request explained to him on his own level than an order followed by threat of punishment.

But even constant communication cannot always prevent what happened to Chris. Being a parent is not easy and the most receptive of children can succumb to curiosity.

"A child has a mind of his own," Chris' mother said. He does, but it doesn't have to be his alone. Someone willing to share his thoughts may just learn something.

Defenses for Nixonites

(c) 1973 LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON - These are difficult times for people who are defending the Nixon Administration. No matter where they go they are attacked by pseudo-liberals, McGovern lovers, heterosexual constitutionalists and paranoid John Dean believers.

As a public service, I am printing instant responses for loyal Nixonites when they are attacked at a party. Please cut it out and carry it in your pocket.

- 1—Everyone does it.
- 2—What about Chappaquiddick?
- 3—A President can't keep track of everything his staff does.
- 4—The press is blowing the whole thing up.
- 5—Whatever Nixon did was for national security.
- 6—The Democrats are sore because they lost the election.
- 7—Are you going to believe a rat like John Dean or the President of the United States?
- 8—Wait until all the facts come out.
- 9—What about Chappaquiddick?
- 10—If you impeach Nixon, you get Agnew.
- 11—The only thing wrong with Watergate is they got caught.
- 12—What about Daniel Ellsberg stealing the Pentagon Papers?
- 13—It happens in Europe all the time.
- 14—People would be against Nixon no matter what he did.
- 15—I'd rather have a crook in the White House than a fool.
- 16—LBJ used to read FBI reports every night.
- 17—What's the big deal about finding out what your opposition is up to?

18—The President was too busy running the country to know what was going on.

19—What about Chappaquiddick?

20—People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.

21—McGovern would have lost anyway.

22—Maybe the Committee for the Re-Election of the President went a little too far, but they were just a bunch of eager kids.

23—I'm not for breaking the law, but sometimes you have to do it to save the country.

24—Nixon made a mistake. He's only human.

POINT OF VIEW

Care for a womb?

By MIKE LANOUE

Allen Park junior

Why do people enjoy going to the beach or listening to the ocean? Are there reasons beyond suntans, socializing and lack of something to do?

There are those that say the sounds of the ocean or great lakes continually rapping the shore remind people of the sounds they heard prenatally, in the wombs of their mothers and thus are a very soothing sound to the ear.

The gentle rest one gets at the beach could take us to our prenatal selves—basking in the sun, developing a warm body and listening to the sea wage its war with time. The splendid nature that surrounds most beaches perhaps reminds us of the complacent comfort that we had before we were born and subjected to the external world.

Swimming itself offers us security and a breath of rejuvenation. The lake or ocean, representing the fluid within the mothers' uterus, feels sensuous and inviting upon entering the water. When leaving the water, one feels as though he is being reborn—cold, sensitive and fresh to the exposure of the elements.

One can really get a lot done while on the beach. The atmosphere is so easy that one can sit down and read an entire D.H. Lawrence novel in an afternoon and get a tan to boot.

Maybe the reason why people do such off-the-wall things like build sand castles, bury people or dig "humongous" holes is because they feel relaxed and secure at the beach.

Things one never does anywhere else are done at the beach, but could this relate to one's prenatal environment? Is there any validity to this argument?

One sure way to find out is to try going to the beach and seeing for yourself. The pleasure is there for the taking.

Why don't you pick up a bucket of chicken and a six-pack and whatever other goodies you like and make an afternoon of it, just getting back to nature and self-discovery.

Author backs science fiction, describes 'survival' lifestyle

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

"Theodore Sturgeon is not just a writer, he is an artist."

That's the way one student at the Clarion/East SF Writing Workshop on campus describes the current visiting writer.

"Science fiction is my best friend and my worst enemy," Sturgeon said Wednesday. Sturgeon has won the International Fantasy Award, the Hugo Award and the Nebula Award for his science fiction writing.

"It's hard for a professional science fiction writer to be taken seriously by the critics," he explained. And this "science fiction ghetto" attitude remains, despite the fact that mainstream fiction is full of science fiction themes.

"Day of the Jackal" is an alternate worlds story," he noted. "And 'Lord of the Flies' is a fable about origins."

Part of the problem is that though Sturgeon's Law ("90 per cent of everything is crap") applies to the mainstream as well as science fiction, critics aren't willing to forgive the crap in science fiction and focus on the first-rate works, he said. "Science, at base, means knowledge," Sturgeon said.

"So science fiction is knowledge fiction."

"The three main elements of science fiction are 'what if,' 'if only' and 'if this goes on' (better credit Isaac Asimov with that last phrase)."

In short, good science fiction is good fiction, with a certain element beyond mere storytelling, he said.

Sturgeon has nearly three and a half decades of experience in the field. His works include the novels "More than Human" and "Venus Plus X" and the short stories "Slow Sculpture," "Maturity," "Killdozer," "Case and the Dreamer" and "The Man

Who Learned Loving."

He has written TV scripts for "Star Trek" and "The Invaders." He has also sold and written the screenplay for a movie version of "Killdozer."

He is also "negotiating" for movie versions of "More than Human" and of "The Education of Drucilla Strange," with a possible TV spinoff from "Drucilla," he said.

But for Sturgeon, his "most significant" current activity is simply his own lifestyle. It is a lifestyle which has attracted regional attention under the catch phrase "the people who boycott everything," he said.

"My wife Wina and I are into eliminating the middlemen," Sturgeon said. "We're survivors."

"Most people are at the mercy of the contents of their own stomachs. When that's gone, they have to go to a store, and if for some reason there weren't any stores or their money weren't any good, they wouldn't know what to do."

"We do."

At their home, only 10 minutes from the center of Los Angeles, the Sturgeons raise rabbits for meat and have a varied vegetable garden the size of a large living room ("We do have a pesticide in our garden—100 toads"). They recycle their organic waste so well that it takes five weeks to fill one garbage can.

"I am not crying disaster," Sturgeon said. "We use the modern conveniences—I'll hang light to my electric typewriter—but we do it mindfully."

Sturgeon said his survival lifestyle is a direct result of his marriage.

"I've had this in my head for several years, but never concreted it," he said. "It's Wina that made this happen."

The Sturgeons decided to marry five years ago on the basis of exchanging letters. They had never met.

Sturgeon's attitude of quiet self-reliance coupled with a deep regard for humanity soaks through his stories and comes through strongly in personal conversation.

All this, in addition to his comments on the Clarion writings, has a deep effect on the workshopers. As one of them commented:

"I'll go home when this is all over and say I met Ted Sturgeon and he changed my life."

Milliken receives bill to fund junior colleges

INTERNATIONAL

The Michigan Legislature sent Gov. Milliken Thursday a budget bill providing $65.9 million for operation of the state's 29 junior and community colleges in 1973-74.

The House approved a compromise version of the spending bill 95-4 while the Senate passed it 35-0. It was the first major budget bill to be sent to the governor's desk this session even though the new fiscal year began July 1.

Appropriations for the colleges are: Alpena, $1.2 million; Bay De Noc, $757,000; Charles Stewart Mott, $4 million; Delta, $3.5 million; Glen Oaks, $457,000; Gogebic, $762,000; Grand Rapids, $3.2 million; Henry Ford, $4.4 million; Highland Park, $2.2 million; Kirtland, $548,000; Lake Michigan, $1.3 million.

Lansing, $4 million; Macomb County, $7.8 million; Mid-Michigan, $880,900; Monroe County, $821,000; Montcalm, $572,000; Muskegon, $2 million; North Central, $557,000; Northwestern, $1.7 million; Oakland, $6.5 million; St. Clair, $1.6 million; Schoolcraft, $2.8 million; Southwestern, $892,000.

Washtenaw, $1.9 million; Wayne County, $5.4 million; West Shore, $482,000; Jackson, $2.3 million; Kalamazoo Valley, $2 million; Kellogg, $2 million.

Workshop emphasizes creativity

By JOHN BORGER

State News Staff Writer

Twenty-five aspiring writers and six professional science fiction writers have descended for a second year of the Clarion/East SF Writer's Workshop at MSU.

Technically, a class called JMC 410 Studies in Composition, the six-week workshop is "the most exciting writing course in the nation" in the words of Theodore Sturgeon, who is just completing his week as visiting writer.

Robin Scott Wilson, who started the Clarion workshops at Clarion State College in Pennsylvania in 1968, began the current workshop session last week.

Writers Ben Bova, Harlan Ellison, Damon Knight and Kate Wilhelm will participate in the coming weeks.

Leonard Isaacs, director of the workshop and associate professor in Justin Morrill College, said Thursday he hopes to have Ellison, Knight and Wilhelm present evening public lectures on the current state of science fiction.

Ellison is tentatively scheduled for July 25 and Knight and Wilhelm for Aug. 8. Time and place are still being arranged.

Isaacs said the workshop represents "six weeks of nearly total immersion in the creative demands of writing."

"It's a tremendous pressure cooker, and that's one of its strengths," he said. "The other strength of the workshop is that the students are getting constant criticism from professional writers and fellow participants, and it's totally honest criticism, not dulled by worries about hurting someone's feelings."

Though billed as a science fiction workshop and taught by science fiction writer, the workshop stresses writing, not any particular genre, Isaacs said.

Many of the stories produced are not readily identifiable as science fiction, Isaacs said.

The field itself could now be more accurately labelled "speculative fiction," Isaacs said.

"The best SF is using the future as a new mythology in which the present is heightened," he said. "Mainstream novels, have not really dealt with the metaphors of the age we're living in."

Students in the workshop spend three hours each morning going over their stories as a group with the visiting writer. Afternoons and evenings are spent writing and in small group discussions. The sessions and writing efforts frequently extend until 3 or 4 a.m.

"They attend to you like a bunch of vacuum cleaners," Sturgeon said of the workshopers.

The professional writers have responded in kind. Ellison has started a tuition scholarship for one of the workshop participants, Isaacs said.

Almost one-fourth of the workshopers at previous Clarion sessions have become regularly published writers.

Clarion/East is sponsored by Justin Morrill College and co-sponsored by the provost's office, the Dept. of English and Lyman Briggs College. It runs from July 1 to Aug. 11.

Urban college's fight for funds ending

By ABDUL JAMAL
State News Staff Writer

The fight for funds for the College of Urban Development may be in its last few rounds. On Thursday, the state House of Representatives passed a $77.3 million appropriation for MSU including almost $1 million for the new urban affairs college.

The bill, which was passed by the House, matches the amount passed by the Senate. The bill will now go to a House and Senate Joint conference committee to work out a compromise between differences in funding for universities other than MSU.

The future of the College of Urban Development had begun to look dim when the Senate Appropriations Committee removed a portion of the monies appropriated to MSU.

One senator charged that the College of Urban Development should not be funded because it was a place where people with political aspirations could go to get a degree.

"Whoever heard of a guy looking for a job with a degree in urban affairs," Sen. John McCauley, D-Wyandotte, said. McCauley Thursday denied that he had made the statement which was reported in the June 29 State News.

The word fight is not new in terms of the College of Urban Development. The College of Urban Development and its mother, the Center for Urban Affairs, was started during a time when fights between the administration and black students were just beginning.

The College of Urban Development is an outgrowth of the Center for Urban Affairs which was established in 1968 under then MSU President John A. Hannah.

The Committee of Sixteen was organized after black students marched on the old administration building demanding that the University become more responsive to their needs. The march came shortly after the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The Committee of Sixteen recommended that the urban

ASKS CITY TO REZONE

Unit supports Oakhill

East Lansing's Planning Commission took a first step toward possible rezoning of the Oakhill Avenue neighborhood Wednesday night.

The commission recommended that city council introduce a rezoning ordinance for the area, which has been the goal of a neighborhood citizen group effort to prevent apartment construction.

If council directs the city attorney to draw up the ordinance, public hearings will be held, where council will gauge citizen response to the commission's plan.

The commission adopted the planning staff recommendation to re-evaluate the goals of zoning patterns in the area, which now permit apartment development. Staff director Michael Conlisk suggested that the commission consider rezoning the area selectively, prohibiting all but single family homes on some streets and recognizing existing multiple dwellings, like fraternity and sorority houses and apartments.

The objective of the center was to work with various departments and colleges of the University to stimulate programs in the area of racial and urban affairs.

The first director of the center was Ron Lee, who is now postmaster general. Shortly after Lee became director he resigned, saying that the University community was not responsive to the center.

Robert Green was then appointed acting director and appointed director of the center in 1969. Green is now acting dean of the College of Urban Development.

In May the College of Urban Development was approved by the board of trustees. The vote was 6-2 with trustees Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, and Frank Merriman, R-DeKerville, opposed.

The new college is composed of two departments: the Dept. of Urban and Metropolitan Development and the Dept. of Race and Ethnic Studies.

Wilbur Brookover was recently appointed acting chairman of the Dept. of Metropolitan Development and Jack Bain was appointed acting chairman of the Dept. of Race and Ethnic Studies.

Late in February four trustees -- Huff; Merriman; Kenneth Thompson, R-East Lansing; and Clair White, D-Bay City -- had sent a letter to President Wharton opposing the proposal to create the new college.

The four trustees also said that they opposed any assumption that Green should be named dean of the new college, adding that "we oppose naming Dr. Green the dean of any college."

SN objects to proposal to remove student fee

State News representatives met Wednesday with the ad hoc committee studying revision of the State News fee to voice their objections to a proposal to remove the $1 per term student fee.

Beth Masakoski and Bill Whiting, State News co-general managers, told the trustee-appointed committee that such a move would do great damage to the paper's ability to provide news coverage and services to the University community.

The committee took no action on the proposal but invited State News representatives to return for another meeting next Wednesday and submit a position paper detailing objections and offering alternatives.

Committee members were uncertain whether they would submit a proposal for consideration by the board of trustees at its meeting July 20, though Trustee Aubrey Radcliff, R-Lansing and committee chairman, indicated he felt that would not be possible.

The proposal calls for a complex dual committee system to be set up to disperse funds for student journalistic and literary efforts. Publications would have to submit periodical requests for funds based on a guideline rating system.

Funds for the proposed system would come from an increase in student fees.

The committee has been meeting in closed sessions since being appointed at the June meeting of the trustees. Representatives of the Grapevine Journal, a black student newspaper, have attended all but the last two meetings.

Kim Heron, Journal editor, and Charles Massoglia, Off-Campus Council president, were both asked to leave before Wednesday's meeting began.

When questioned by Massoglia, Radcliff said that the committee would have a meeting for public input before a proposal is recommended to the trustees. Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said, however, that the committee needs only to report to the trustees. No date was set for an open meeting.

Radcliff has stressed that the current proposal is not final and is subject to revision before putting it to a vote of the trustees.

Women in top 'U' positions increasing

By TERI ALBRECHT
State News Staff Writer

Women in top-level administrative positions at MSU are slowly but significantly increasing, reflecting a nationwide trend in state and land-grant colleges. Though only three women now occupy major administrative positions at MSU, only one occupied a significant job role a year ago.

MSU's upper-most crust of women administrators includes Judith Turk, special asst. to President Wharton, Dorothy Arata, asst. provost and Kay White, asst. vice president for student affairs.

These women were counted in a recent study of 94 institutions in 1972-73 by the National Assn. of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Nationally, the report cited only 179 women who hold top-level decision-making positions, or only about 1.9 women per institution.

But progress in bringing women into the top-level ranks is evident because only 70 women held the same positions two years ago.

Three women nationally hold positions as heads of three schools including the president of Hunter College of the City University of New York, the president of the Texas system nursing school and the chancellor of Regional College Administration, Indiana University.

The report cites the position of assistant to the president or chancellor as becoming a popular slot in efforts to hire women in major capacities in central administration. Currently 43 women occupy positions of this nature while only six held comparable positions in 1970.

Turk said Thursday she did not feel she should be listed in this category though she does occupy a presidential assistant role.

"With a presidential assistant job one has more variance and probably not as much responsibility as an assistant vice-president or assistant provost would have. Those jobs are more clearly defined and hold more authority," she said.

Arata, who is considered the highest ranking woman administrator on campus, said Thursday that women have failed in the past to see themselves as capable of assuming leadership positions and because of social conditioning have been trained only for supportive roles.

"The internship program which we have established to train some women administrators has a built-in purpose of changing our self-concepts to show we do believe we can perform competently in decision-making roles," she said.

The report also stated that women as vice presidents or vice chancellors are still rare, with only nine reported among all the schools responding in the survey. However, there were only three in these roles in 1970.

Schools which were listed employing women in these positions were Alabama A&M University, University of California, Irvine, University of California, Los Angeles, University of Maryland, University of Nebraska, Rutgers University, Kent State University, University of Texas at Austin, and the University of Utah.

White, who holds an assistant vice president position, said Thursday that MSU's Office of Student Affairs traditionally hired the highest rate of women administrators of any other unit on campus.

"We have almost an equal number of women and men administrators, but this is partly because of the traditional separation of dean of women and dean of men students," she said. The University no longer has these posts, however.

She said that a reason so few women seek top roles is partially because they do not wish to compete with men. She attributed this to the American socialization process.

White added that her position gives her authority to reprimand male subordinates who are unaccustomed to the reversed role situation.

"It's difficult for some men to respond to me as their superior if I have a criticism of their work performances," she said, "but that is their sexual male hangup, not mine. But it is evidently easier for a woman to adjust to reprimands from a male superior than vice versa."

The study concluded that women are most likely to hold certain types of middle-management jobs, especially in positions categorized as directors of student services, registration and admissions, affirmative action plans, public information services, counseling, library, nursing, housing and food services.

MSU did not place in the top 10 list in terms of numbers of women administrators, partly because other schools were multi-campus institutions reporting data for all campuses.

Arizona State University was the only single campus institution in the top 10 list, with 22 women as administrators, though not necessarily all in top-level positions.

MSU currently employs approximately 20 women in administrative positions.

Among those women at MSU who hold policy-making posts are Nancy Elliott, director of investments and trusts (who is also the highest ranking woman in an administrative-professional position), and Lois Lund, dean of the College of Human Ecology.

Elliott said Thursday that she found more women to be considered for upper-level jobs than in previous years, but that openings for jobs are tight and that she did not see any major upward moves within the near future for women at MSU.

On Sunday, the Masters Festival of Music will touch down at Pine Knob bringing Chet Atkins' guitar, Boots Randolph's sax and Floyd Cramer's piano.

Closer to home, the old favorite "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" finishes up at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at Waverly East Junior High School on West Michigan Avenue on the west side of Lansing.

The ribald play "Mandrill" finishes up at the Ledges Playhouse in Grand Ledge this weekend.

The mandrill is a herb to which folklore attributes the power of giving fertility to a woman but ordaining the death of the first man she makes love to. The play, at 8:30 p.m., is in the playhouse in Fitzgerald Park.

The playhouse's third show, "Black Comedy" by Peter Shaffer, opens Wednesday for a two-week run.

For the curious, the Library now has an exhibit called "Faraway Places" featuring maps, travel accounts and other guides for the traveler.

Finally, those eager to visit the wilds of northern Michigan apparently need not be discouraged by the gas shortage.

"Gas is plentiful in the Upper Peninsula," gloats a press release from the St. Ignace Area Chamber of Commerce. "Gas shortage! The truth of the matter is the tourists are becoming wise to the situation that we are the victims of the major corporations' propaganda."

Jumbled heads

In the Summer Circle Free Theater's production of "The Jumbled Heads," Paul Oppenheimer and Dale Orrin take center stage as the horse and the narrator.

The play, by Indian writer Girish Karnad, will be presented at 8:30 tonight and Saturday in Kresge Court.

Quietly, almost imperceptibly, "The Jumbled Heads" by Girish Karnad, the second production of the Summer Circle Free Theater Festival, begins. The narrator with a white dhoti around his waist and an embroidered cloth about his shoulders walks to the front of the bare stage and lights three flames as a star begins to play.

Musicians enter and take their places, and homage is paid to Ganesh, the elephant-headed god of India before this unique production starts. And once it does, the audience is in for a rare treat: An evening of theater decidedly different from anything they have seen before.

"The Jumbled Heads," as directed by Farley Richmond, emerges as a splendid blend of comedy and tragedy, made singularly appealing by Richmond's faithful adherence to the traditions of Indian theater being coupled with the modern euphemisms found in Karnad's work. Admittedly, a certain amount of previous knowledge of Asian theater and all its facets would enhance the enjoyment of the production.

At times the references to different gods or ancient legends prove confusing and almost irritating, but this is minor in light of the opportunity to view a unique type of theater.

"The Jumbled Heads" is clever, original and hilarious; childish and obvious, yet filled with such poetry, insights and feeling that it proves totally disarming.

A word of caution seems appropriate here. Do not go expecting a traditional boy-meets-and-gets-girl-or-this-is-a-wacky-household type of comedy, for if anything, "The

State News Reviewer
"Jumbled Heads" is as far from that as Earth from the Sun.

Instead, two stories exist almost side by side. One dealing with a man with a horse's head who yearns to be complete. The other, the main body of Karnad's work, tells how two men cut off their heads for love, then awaken only to find their heads attached to the wrong bodies due to the bumbling of the woman they both love and a divine act by the goddess Kali.

The playwright makes his strongest points via this tale, using Sanskrit to provide thoughtful insights into the areas of love, the intellect and marriage.

Among the three principals involved in this tale of love and bloodshed, Tyrone Wesley and Debbie Tomlinson imbue their scenes with depth and develop full-bodied characterizations.

Tomlinson makes the poetry within the play come alive and achieves the dignity and beauty of spirit her part ultimately requires her to have. Wesley ably plays both buffoon and martyred lover, slowly eliminating the farcical elements of his character to attain a tragic stature by the play's conclusion.

Thomas Ferris, however, stands as the weakest link in the triangle Karnad presents. His characterization of the intellectual elicits little empathy from the audience and is not possessed with the degree of passion his fellow actors have brought to their roles.

Others of special note in a uniformly fine cast are Dale Orrin as the calm, assured narrator and Paul Oppenheimer, who provides much of the comedy as the man with the horse's head.

Pact facilitates transferring from two-year college to MSU

Community college graduates will find transferring to MSU next fall easier, thanks to an agreement formulated this year for easing the transfer of general education credits.

Under the agreement, the state's four-year institutions pledge to accept the general education requirements of the community college as equal to their standards.

MSU officials signed the contract last November, with several other institutions signing last week, bringing the number of participating schools to 24 four-year institutions and 20 two-year institutions.

After five years of negotiations, led by the Michigan Assn. of College Registrars and Admissions Officers, the agreement was designed to eliminate institutional differences in general education requirements, thus making possible a smooth transfer of credits. Only students with associate arts or science degrees will be involved in the agreement.

But what effect the agreement will have on MSU is not clear, because students will not begin applying to MSU under the agreement until September, Richard Hensen, associate director of admissions, said Thursday.

Hensen added that the only work which MSU has done on the agreement since taking action last November was to consider ways of forming an evaluation process for the success of the plan. Presently this is still being discussed.

Hensen said that he expects more institutions to sign the agreement in the future, but many have not completed their studies of the unprecedented pact.

Red-hot Weiskopf nabs slim British Open lead

TROON, Scotland (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf moved a step closer to his first major golf title today by firing a five-under par 67 to give him a three-stroke lead at 135 over Bert Yancey and Johnny Miller, the U.S. Open champion, at the half-way stage of the $125,000 British Open Golf Championship.

Weiskopf was nine under par through 36 holes to increase his first-round lead by a stroke as tournament favorite Jack Nicklaus fell four strokes behind after an erratic 70 spoiled by three bogeys.

Miller birdied four holes to put the pressure on the 30-year-old Weiskopf, who comes from Nicklaus' home town of Columbus, Ohio. Miller's 68 set the early pace on the 7,064 yard par 72 seaside course but Weiskopf, who said he wouldn't be where he was but for his notorious temper, hit back with birdies of his own on the 3rd, 4th, 7th, 11th and 16th.

"I don't think I would be where I am today if it wasn't for my so-called temper," said Weiskopf, the former West Point cadet whose temper has often made more headlines than his golf. "I won't consider myself a great player until I've won a major tournament."

Nicklaus started three strokes behind Weiskopf but had to play with Yancey in the worst of the day's changing weather when the wind rose and the rain came down in mid-afternoon.

He bogeyed the 2nd, 10th and 15th holes and came in shaking his head ruefully.

"I haven't played very well. In fact, I haven't felt that I've played well both days. I have played too many bad holes, too many bad shots on the back nine," said Nicklaus.

Yancey birdied the 6th, 8th, 18th for 69 and a six-under par 138.

Two former British Open champions — Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino, the current holder — found trouble. Palmer caught two sand traps on the 126-yard par three eighth and took a disastrous seven to end with a 76 for a 148.

Trevino scrambled for his 73 and another 148.

Weiskopf's 67 — a course record later tied by Briton Brian Barnes — spreadeagled the field of 153 with four Americans heading the list and only veteran Irishman Christy O'Connor, with a 68 in a late round, in a position to challenge with a three-under par 141.

British Ryder Cup player Bernard Gallacher was on 142 while Brian Barnes, who equalled Weiskopf's 67, led British colleagues Neil Coles and Peter Butler on one-under-par 143.

Lanny Wadkins had a one over par today with a disappointing round marred by four bogeys to drop to even-par 144.

Gene Sarazen, who Wednesday had a hole-in-one at the "postage stamp" eighth, today bunkered his tee shot there — only to hole out from the sand trap for a birdie two. "I guess I like that hole," said the 71-year-old former U.S. Open champ who ended with an 81 for 160.

Britain's Tony Jacklin, the former U.S. and British Open winner, had a one-under-par 71 turned into a 73 by a two-stroke penalty at the 12th when his ball went down a rabbit hole.

Bent on Competition

Jack Nicklaus, left, places the ball for a putt on the 16th hole while fellow American, Bert Yancey, picks up loose grass in Thursday's British Open Championship at Troon, Scotland. Nicklaus finished the second round with a 70 for a two-day total of 139, while Yancey had a 36-hole total of 138. Tom Weiskopf led after Thursday's round with a 135. AP Wirephoto

Falcons obtain Gallagher

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Falcons signed offensive guard Frank Gallagher as a free agent Thursday and sent defensive tackle John Small to the Detroit Lions in what amounted to a trade.

Gallagher played out his option with the Lions and became a free agent as of May 1 but under National Football League rules, Detroit had to be compensated for losing his services.

Small, who played high school football at Augusta, Ga., and was a linebacker at The Citadel, was a No. 1 draft choice of the Falcons in 1970.

Intramurals

Entries for Saturday's intramural golf tournament must be submitted to the men's intramural office by 5 p.m., Wednesday. All MSU students, faculty and staff are urged to compete. Prizes will be awarded for low student individual gross, low faculty — staff individual gross and team best ball.

The tournament will be handicap with both net and gross scores counting. Green fees will remain the same — $2.25 for 18 holes for students, $3 for faculty and staff. The Callaway system will be used for the two-man teams, individuals may also enter.

A special family swim from 4 to 5 p.m. will be held Sunday and continue on all following Sundays at the outdoor pool. Children three years of age and older will be admitted for 50 cents with a maximum charge of $1.

Small refineries blamed for oil crisis

WASHINGTON STAR-NEWS
WASHINGTON — Environmentalists may have been unfairly blamed by major oil companies for causing current fuel shortages, according to a study done by members of the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) staff.

The study — a preliminary report of an investigation into oil company practices — points out that insufficient refinery capacity is one of the major reasons gasoline is in short supply this summer.

"Spokesmen for several major oil companies argue that the lack of (refinery) expansion can be attributed directly to environmental problems," the report says. "However, now that import controls have been removed, and governmental intervention into the industry has become a strong threat, these companies have suddenly overcome their environmental problems," it says.

In a related development, the Justice Dept. today confirmed reports that it is "currently engaged in an intense study to determine if the current fuel shortage is a result of collusion or other antitrust violations."

A department spokesman said the investigation began in early June and that it is directed at several oil companies and at a "variety of operations."

No grand juries have yet been convened, the spokesman said.

Within the last two months, when gasoline shortages began appearing nationwide, Exxon, the world's largest oil company, and several other oil giants have reported plans to build more refineries or expand existing ones. The FTC staff study, made public by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., also raises the question of whether practices by companies themselves, aided by favorable government policies, have abetted the fuel shortage — or at least its sudden advent.

"With their advanced econometric models and computer simulations, the major oil companies should have been able to predict the current increase in demand for petroleum products," the study said.

"Whatever their forecasts showed, however, they failed to expand refinery capacity sufficiently to meet this demand."

At another point, the study speculates on "the root causes of the current product 'shortage'" and then lists, presumably as possibilities, "mismanagement, poor forecasts, price controls, import quota or contrivance."

As reported earlier this week, the thrust of the study is that major oil companies cooperate rather than compete, manipulate their operations to protect profits and to try to exclude independents from entering or operating in the business. And government regulations contribute to these practices, the study says.

Minor incidents mar employe strike

the stores charged that secretaries and other University employees were making small deliveries on their own.

L'hullier would not say whether the drivers were secretaries, faculty or nonstriking workers. A number of cars were seen leaving the Stores laden with small packages, mostly office supplies.

The picketers say they speak only to ask drivers to honor their lines, yet they are unsure of what long-range effect their strike might have.

Robert Dow, a 30-year employee of the University, said he does not know how long the strike will last or if his efforts will challenge the administration.

"I know they've got a stack of mail to take care of and drivers are honoring the line. I think they did this to us in the summer so they wouldn't have to worry about it in the fall," Dow said.

"They think we're dumb but I've been here long enough to see what happens," he continued. "I was supposed to get a rocking chair seven months ago and still haven't. I'm going to ask for a wheelchair soon."

Bob Gordon, Local 999 representative, visited picketers at the Stores and reminded them both sides have a peace to keep if any progress at the bargaining table is to be made.

At other sites, picketers marched some, but mostly sat and waited for their relief.

As they watched, a member of Ann Arbor Local 1583 drove by and told them his union was coming up for support.

Strikers generally agreed that more help was necessary and several were anxious to receive the support of the clerical-technical workers and student employees on campus.

A joint statement by Kellogg Student Employee President Tim Cain and Claude Hersh, acting president of the MSU Student Employees Union, offered support, though no present willingness to strike.

The statement reads:

"We wish to express our support for the efforts of locals 999 and 1585 of AFSCME at MSU. We urge the University to demonstrate its good faith by maintaining all former contract provisions including collection of Union dues while collective bargaining continues. For the duration of the strike, we urge all students to be adamant in refusing to perform the jobs of striking workers. We also urge all members of the University and faculty to honor the picket lines."

House allots MSU $77.3 million

could be cut in a joint Houseconference committee.

The bill as passed by the House is different than the Senate's version. The Senate must now review the bill. If it disapproves of the House version the bill goes into a conference committee to work out a compromise.

One probable member of that conference committee is Sen. Charles O. Zollar, R-Benton Harbor and chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee who actively tried to cut the MSU allocation in the Senate.

The appropriations committee originally recommended that MSU be allocated $1.9 million less than Milliken's recommendation of $78.1 million.

The Senate disagreed with the committee, however, and passed a bipartisan supported block of amendments that raised the MSU appropriation back to the governor's recommendation. After the new school was cut that left MSU with $77.3 million.

But after those amendments passed, Zollar introduced his own amendments that would have again cut the MSU allocation. These were soundly defeated.

But observers have said that if Zollar is on the conference committee he might try to cut the MSU allocation again, possibly using MSU and other school appropriations as political tradeoffs with the other members in an effort to reach a compromise.

However, both houses would have to pass any motion brought out of committee and could reject the committee's compromise.

But the possibility also exists that they might accept such a compromise so that Michigan's public colleges would have some money for the fiscal year that began on July 1.

Technically the schools have been operating without money since then.

"Do you draw a distinction between lying and volunteering?" Dash asked.

"It depends on the nature of the subject matter," Mitchell said.

Amid the dispute over executive privilege and presidential documents, the White House said Nixon would meet with Ervin "as a matter of courtesy," but restated its refusal to provide the material the committee wants.

Ervin sought the meeting after the full, seven - man committee unanimously endorsed a letter to Nixon urgently requesting a meeting to head off a confrontation between the President and the panel over Nixon's refusal to testify or to turn over documents.

But Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said "there will be no change" in Nixon's refusal to testify or his refusal to give the committee notes, letters and other documents it has requested.

The committee warned Nixon of "the very grave possibility of a fundamental constitutional confrontation between the Congress and the presidency." An Associated Press poll of committee members has shown the panel is likely to muster a majority in favor of issuing a subpoena for the White House documents it seeks, though not for a subpoena to compel the President to make a personal appearance.

IT'S WHAT'S HAPPENING

Announcements for It's What's Happening must be received in the State News office, 341 Student Services Bldg. by 1 p.m. at least two class days before publication. No announcements will be accepted by phone.

Green Earth is arranging rides for the Organic Garden Club field day on Sunday. There will be no regular meeting.

Free U is now offering guitar for beginners and intermediates. For information call the Free U office.

Tai Chi Chwonn, a dance class, 6 p.m. today outside between the Union and Beaumont Tower. Taught by Beng Oh.

Sode says drain job misunderstood

By JIM BUSH
State News Staff Writer

He says it's the understatement of the year to call his job "misunderstood."

But if anyone can explain his work to his constituents — and make it sound ecologically crucial as well — it's Dick Sode, Ingham County's charismatic drain commissioner.

Sode, 30, puts in 70-hour work weeks trying, he says, to bring his often-ridiculed, supposedly boring job "into the 21st century." It's working.

In the four and a half years since he was first elected to his $17,325 position, Sode has earned a reputation as one of the most progressive drain commissioners in the country.

He's working at such environmental plans as a federally commended solid waste disposal system and the reclamation of Lake Lansing in Haslett for recreational use.

In addition, he's already implemented a computerized method for construction of storm drains aimed at ending flooded basements, backed-up sewers and muddy subdivisions and adopted computerized office accounting methods, which, he says, are "second to none" in the nation.

"We've tried to respond to environmental concerns even before they became a top priority nationally," the image-conscious Sode said.

Sode's environmental responsibilities make his job a lot more comprehensive than just operating and maintaining county drains.

As drain commissioner, Sode is also responsible for solid waste disposal in the county, resource recovery (recycling), and, in cooperation with local governments, waste water treatment.

"This is what drives me nuts in this job," Sode, who attends MSU part-time, concedes. "This office is so diverse that it takes a good manager to run it. I'm glad I'm not an engineer or technician."

Sode, who worked at a radio and television station while still in high school, knows the value of the communications media. He's making sure the Ingham County voters know about him, his plans and his accomplishments.

A visitor to his office in Mason finds his name written in script on the door of the drain commissioner's car, on the door to his office and on matchbooks strewn about the room.

The matchbooks sport a photograph of Sode and say, "Help stop pollution — join our team, help keep Ingham clean."

Sode's information effort doesn't stop there. He's prepared an abundance of press releases, lengthy letters on the Lake Lansing project and on his efforts to secure a site for his solid waste landfill, and 150-page annual reports.

"I believe in communications," Sode, an influential county Republican, says. "People are generally upset with government. If you get your ideas through to people, the facts will speak strongly enough for themselves."

"If people aren't overcome by egotism and emotionalism, we'll get our projects accepted," he added. "Otherwise, we're probably wrong anyway."

Sode is consistent in his expressions of faith in democracy. His 1972 annual report begins with a Baruch quotation: "Government is not a substitute for people, but simply the instrument through which they act."

Despite such extensive public relations, despite his active Republicanism — the value of private enterprise keeps cropping up in his monolog — and despite his relative youth and good looks, Sode maintains he does not aspire to higher political office.

"I couldn't effectively do my job of running this frustrating office if I were thinking of running for anything," Sode said.

Various newspapers have suggested he will seek a state Senate or U.S. Congress position in 1974. In fact, Democrat Robert Carr, an announced candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives, on one occasion took a potshot at Sode.

Asked if Watergate-type activities might be going on in Ingham County, Carr replied that he is sure voters know people with Sode's "mentality" couldn't handle the Watergate brand of political unscrupulousness.

Sode, who says he was amused by Carr's comment, conceded he might change his mind about running.

"A year from now I might be after something," he said. "But I know I'll get defeated someday and I'll be out of politics looking for a job."

Now a senior in Justin Morrill College in his eighth year of part-time schooling, Sode said he wants to teach.

"I'm starting to get turned on to the idea of teaching the handicapped," he said. "But basically I just want to be aware of the world around me — politics is not for me forever."

Sode was county chairman of President Nixon's prenomination campaign in 1968 and has a picture of himself shaking Nixon's hand hanging in his office to prove it.

He says it would be silly for anyone to condone Watergate, but his faith in Nixon is unshaken despite it.

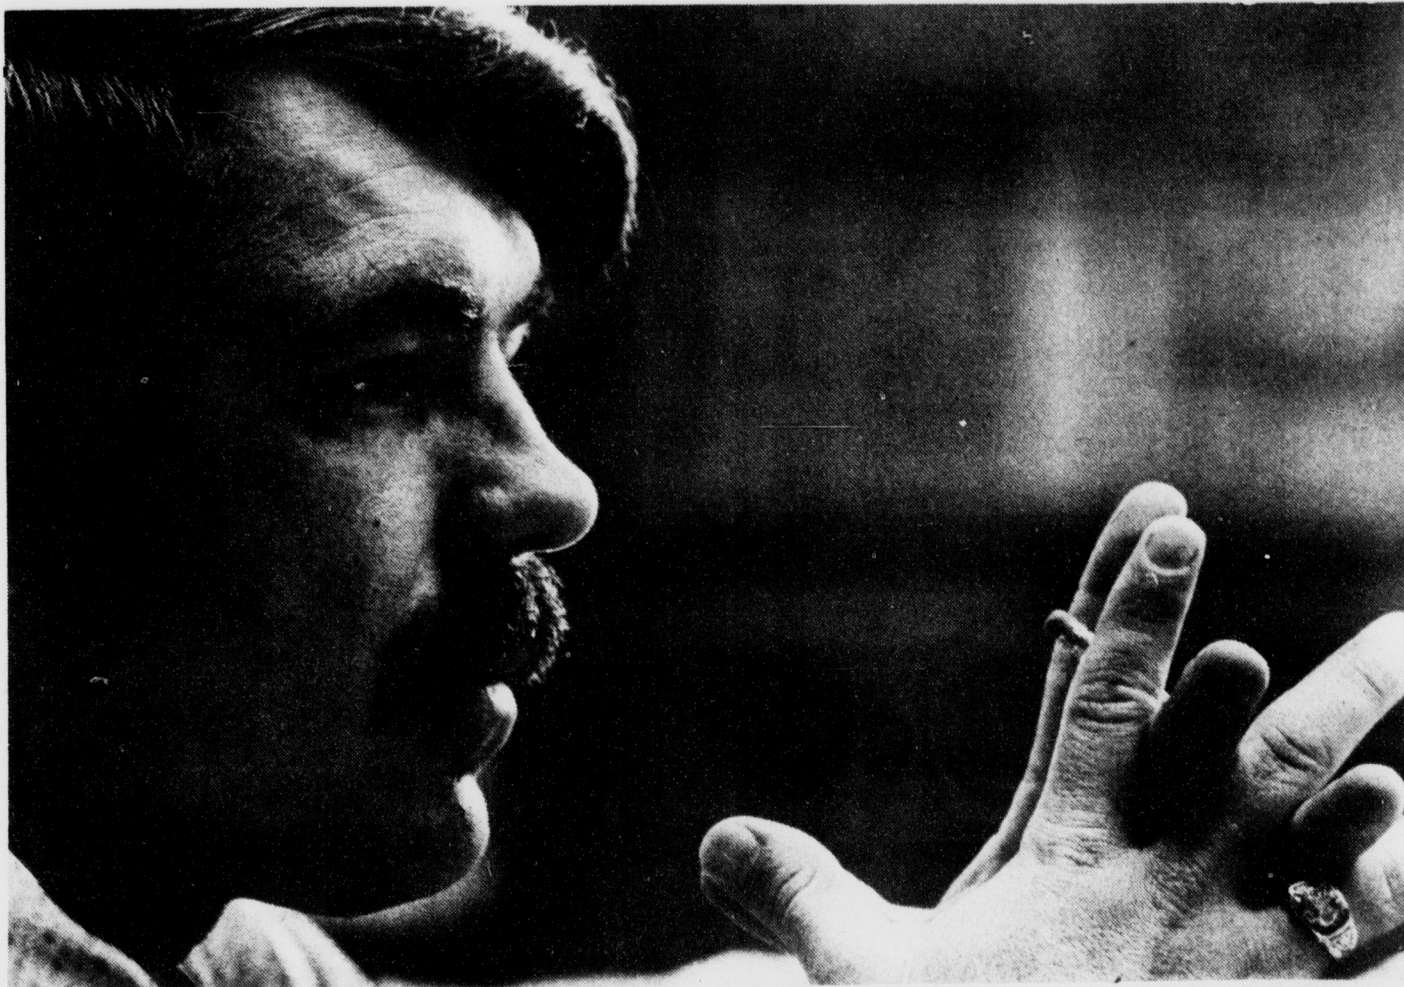

"I haven't really been one to abandon any of my friends when they're in trouble," Sode said. "We're only as good as the people around us, however, and the President has had some bad people working for him."

He said the Watergate hearings are confusing.

"We get so many half-truths out of Washington these days and they're all out of context," he said. "It's hard to tell what really happened."

Sode, who was elected to his second four-year term last November, runs an office staffed by eight employees, part of a total staff that includes 150 project consultants.

His employees apparently think a lot of him. They recently got him selected WILS "Boss of the Day."

Drain brain

Dick Sode, Ingham County drain commissioner, shows all the signs of an aspiring politician. He's young, good-looking, image-conscious, active in Republican politics and is working to make a name for himself as a progressive environmentalist. But he says his goal right now is to be a teacher.

Drain commissioner replies to critics of proposed landfill

Ingham County Drain Commissioner Richard Sode has responded in classic fashion to one of his biggest headaches — the current lack of a public, solid waste disposal facility.

Sode Tuesday night released a 12-page letter responding to critics of the proposed 176-acre site for a new sanitary landfill in Alameda Township, just south of I-96.

Sode has been clamoring especially hard for township approval of the site since the July 1 closing of Ingham County's only public dump.

In his letter, Sode said the Alameda site is the best of several because it is large — which promotes long-life and scale economies — it's centrally located and the soil structure is the best there.

Residents need not fear a landfill in their neighborhood, Sode said, because all waste will be delivered by covered trucks and be covered by dirt daily. Also, the landfill will be lower than road level, and state health regulations would prohibit a landfill that was unsanitary.

Only Delhi Township has so far given its approval to a landfill within its borders, but Sode believes the Alameda site is better. Since the old county dump closed area governments have been forced to use private waste facilities, which cost taxpayers more than a public landfill would.
