New attacks opened up on Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — U.S. warplanes, flying some last missions before the congressional bombing cutoff, bracketed Phnom Penh with bombs Sunday in dawn-to-dusk raids that jolted the city.

While attention focused on the fate of this refugee-swollen capital of 1½ million, Communist forces opened a new attack to the north along the key road junction of Highways 6 and 7. They besieged the district capital of Skoun with heavy attacks that forced government troops to abandon some positions.

The move appeared aimed at strangling the provincial capitals of Kompong Cham and Kompong Thom, already cut off on the northern front. Skoun is 48 miles northeast of Phnom Penh.

Asked about the Wednesday bombing deadline, Cambodian Premier In Tam said, "The end of the U.S. bombing is not a big matter because President Nixon said he will help our republic forever."

Talking to newsmen during a visit to the northern defense line, In Tam declared it would be a loss of face for the American people if the Americans abandoned Cambodia and "delivered the liberty of the Cambodian people to the Communists."

Associated Press reporter Matt Franjola said government artillery and sporadic machinegun fire broke out less than one mile from the premier while he sat and sipped tea near the market of Prek Pnou village on the Mekong River nine miles north of Phnom Penh.

In Tam said government troops can protect the people after the American bombing halt Wednesday but "we must be careful about the enemy trying to build weapons caches and trying to infiltrate the city."

There are reports of rebel sniper units already in the city.

Col. Am Rong, chief spokesman for the Cambodian command, reported several caches of weapons have been uncovered in the city and more than 20 Chinese have been arrested for hiding weapons in their homes. He said the Chinese were under what he termed Communist influence.

In Tam said the government has no plans to evacuate Phnom Penh if the city is attacked.

"If the fighting comes near my house, I will go out to the bunkers and fight with the troops," he said.

Colburn expected to quit city councilman position

By JIM BUSH

State News Staff Writer

East Lansing City Councilman George A. Colburn, whose political future has been a topic of speculation since his election to council in 1971, will apparently resign his council seat within six weeks.

Colburn's brother, Neal, confirmed Sunday that he expected Colburn to resign within 30-45 days to accept a newspaper job in Chicago or an administrative position at an East Coast university.

Neal Colburn stressed that he was concluding on his own that his brother would resign but added, "I know he's been interviewing all over the place for a job. It's only a matter of time until he resigns."

Colburn, 35, who is currently unemployed, with George Griffiths rode a crest of student support in his election to council in November 1971, was vacationing at Walloon Lake in northern Michigan and could not be reached for comment Sunday.

However, he was quoted in a Lansing newspaper Sunday as saying he was considering "several career opportunities" and would decide within August on his future.

Neal Colburn, who unsuccessfully sought election to the post of Ingham County clerk in 1972, first indicated his brother would resign at the Margaret McNeil - Nelson Brown victory party at 426 M.A.C. Avenue Tuesday, according to sources in the Brown-McNeil campaign.

Neal Colburn also said at the party that he hoped to be appointed to serve the remaining two years of his brother's council term, the sources said.

Neal Colburn Sunday confirmed those reports, but added that he was speaking from his own conclusions.

"I haven't seen my brother in 11 days," Neal Colburn said. "But I know he's looking for a job out of town. It seems a certainty to me that he will resign."

Neal Colburn, who acknowledged that he had been drinking at the Tuesday party and was speaking freely, said he regretted commenting on his brother's future.

"I feel a bit mollified I made my conclusions known," he said, adding that he received a letter from his brother last week after he had announced that George would resign his council seat.

"George said he was disappointed that the possibility of his resigning had leaked out," he said.

Should Colburn resign, a successor to complete the rest of his four-year term through November 1975, would be appointed by the remaining four council members.

Since 1973 is an election year in East Lansing, the timing of Colburn's expected resignation is significant. If he resigns before Nov. 6, his successor will be appointed by the current council. However, if he resigns after the November election, a new council will select his replacement.

The council positions of Mary Sharp and Robert Wilcox will be vacant in November. Sharp is seeking re-election. Wilcox is not.

Incumbent council members Wilbur

Brookover, Sharp and Wilcox all had no comment on Colburn's possible resignation.

Griffiths could not be reached for comment.

Political observers in East Lansing have speculated that Colburn, who has taught college level history, journalism, and American thought and language classes, served as a political analyst for Democrats in the Michigan Legislature.

Colburn may resign

East Lansing Councilman George Colburn, who has served less than two years of his four-year term, is expected to resign from the council within 30 to 45 days, according to his brother Neal Colburn. Colburn could not be reached Sunday to confirm his brother's statement made at a party Tuesday.

SAID UNDER INVESTIGATION

Agnew campaign donors told

(C) Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's Maryland campaign finance reports, subpoenaed Friday by U.S. Attorney George Beall in Baltimore, show a pattern of contributions from persons known to be under investigation in connection with alleged kickbacks and bribes.

The Agnew records, covering his 1966 gubernatorial campaign and his vice presidential races in 1968 and 1972, show that consulting engineers, architects and other contractors doing business with the state contributed significant sums of money. Many, it is known, also helped raise campaign funds from others.

A Star-News study of the records copies of which were obtained before the subpoena was issued, show repeated contributions to Agnew campaigns from at least two central figures in the probe — Lester Matz and J. Walter Jones.

Almost all the donations appear to be in accord with election laws then in effect. The U.S. attorney's office has refused to say whether it has linked the contributions to allegations that apparently have been made against Agnew, even though the subpoenaed campaign records are to be presented to the grand jury Thursday.

Beall, in an Aug. 1 letter to one of Agnew's lawyers, notified the vice president that he is under investigation for possible bribery, extortion, conspiracy and income tax law violations.

Agnew has vigorously denounced any charges of wrong-doing against him as "damned lies."

During a nationally televised news conference last week, Agnew was asked if his campaign reports include "gifts from contractors in the State of Maryland."

"I would suspect they do," Agnew replied, "because anyone that's been around the political scene in the United States who would expect that campaign contributions don't come from contractors doing state and federal business is quite naive."

There is no legal prohibition against corporate contributions in Maryland elections.

Among those who have contributed heavily to Agnew's state and federal campaigns:

• Lester Matz, a partner in Matz, Childs and Associates, of Baltimore, a prominent consulting engineering firm that has worked on the widening of the John F. Kennedy memorial highway and construction of approaches to the Baltimore harbor tunnel.

IN TEXAS MURDER CASE

Attorney to submit request for psychiatric examination

HOUSTON (AP) — The lawyer for one of two youths charged with murder in connection with a homosexual torture-killing case said Sunday he will ask for a psychiatric hearing for his client.

The request, to be made on Monday, will come as the search resumes along a narrow strip of beach for additional bodies. The number of victims now stands at 23.

Charles Melder, attorney for Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, said he would ask State District Court Judge George Walker at a hearing Monday to set a time and place for Henley to be examined by a psychiatrist of the youth's choice.

Melder also wants Walker to prohibit police from further questioning of Henley, who is charged with five counts of murder, except in his attorney's presence.

Also charged with one murder count is David Owen Brooks, 18.

Henley has said he shot to death Wednesday morning the alleged key figure in the case, Dean Allen Corll, 33. Henley and Brooks have told police a story of three years of procuring, homosexual rape, murder and secret burials in a Houston boat shed, a Gulf Coast beach near High Island and in the piney woods at Lake Sam Rayburn in East Texas.

Seventeen bodies have been recovered at the boat shed, four at Lake Sam Rayburn, and two near High Island.

Tides, sightseers and lack of progress terminated the island search Friday.

Sheriff Louis Otter of Chambers County said he expected additional bodies to be discovered.

"There are supposed to be two in one grave that we haven't found," Otter said. "There may be four or six bodies left to recover."

Cox to argue executive rights

By DONALD M. RUTHBERG

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox goes into court today to argue that no man, not even the president of the United States, is above the law.

That is certain to be a principal theme in the brief Cox will hand U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica at 10 a.m. EDT.

Cox also is likely to emphasize these points:

• There is no question that a president has a right to withhold certain personal files relating to executive decisions. But that right does not apply when it conflicts with a president's legal responsibilities.

• President Nixon waived any claim to executive privilege for the tapes of Watergate-related conversations when he let aides describe the meetings and when he permitted former White House staff chief H. R. Haldeman to listen to two of the tapes after Haldeman had resigned.

• Contrary to the White House contention that the courts lack the authority to compel a president to do anything, Cox can be expected to argue that the courts have an historic role in defining the legal duties and responsibilities of the executive.

Cox forecast his arguments in his statement announcing he had issued a subpoena demanding that Nixon give the Watergate grand jury the tapes of nine presidential conversations in which the scandal allegedly was discussed.

Cox issued his subpoena July 23. Three days later, the President informed him he would not turn over the tapes and Cox immediately went to Sirica and asked him to order Nixon to obey the subpoena.

Last Tuesday, White House lawyers responded with a long written argument in which they contended the courts and presidency are co-equal branches of government under the Constitution, and therefore, the courts lack the authority to compel a president to obey an order.

The Nixon brief also denied the President waived his right to assert executive privilege when he allowed his aides to testify about the meetings.

When Cox issued his subpoena, he said he had concluded that "any blanket claim of privilege to withhold this evidence from a grand jury is without legal foundation."

The prosecutor emphasized that "the tapes are evidence bearing directly upon whether there were criminal conspiracies, including a conspiracy to obstruct justice, among high government officials."

He cautioned, however, that "none of us should make assumptions about what the tapes will show."

Cox earlier had requested the tapes in a letter to J. Fred Buzhardt, special White House counsel, in which he argued that "furnishing the tapes in aid of an investigation into charges of criminal conspiracy plainly raises none of the separation-of-powers issues" which the White House said were involved in furnishing presidential documents to the Senate Watergate Committee.

news summary

Search for boy continues

A state police sergeant said Sunday the repeated cries of distress broadcast by a little boy calling himself Larry probably was a hoax. But he said officials could take no chances and the search continued for the source of the cries.

State police and the civil Air Patrol units combed the Rio Grande Valley and the Manzano Mountains southeast of Albuquerque. There were no new clues or contacts.

The incident started Tuesday night with a report from a California citizens band radio operator who said a young boy's voice was calling for help, saying he was in New Mexico. The report said the voice indicated his father had fallen over dead in their pickup truck.

No settlement reached

Striking workers at the Chrysler Corp.'s Detroit Forge Plant met with top union officials for more than two hours Sunday, but failed to reach an agreement to end the five-day wildcat walkout.

About half of the more than 500 members of United Auto Workers Local 47 attending the meeting indicated they would not comply with a federal court order to return to work Monday.

U.S. District Court Judge Cornelia Kennedy ordered the strikers Saturday to return to work. Chrysler officials had warned that the shutdown was about to cripple the entire firm because of a shortage of parts produced at the forge plant.

Kennedy said her ruling did not affect a federal law that allows an individual employee to refuse to work if conditions are unsafe. The strike began Tuesday night over health and safety conditions at the plant.

Gas cutbacks threatened

Gasoline station operators in southeast Michigan have threatened to sharply cutback fuel sales if Phase 4 price controls are enforced at their pumps beginning next Sunday.

The Automobile Club of Michigan reported that a survey of 40 major brand stations in southeast Michigan found that 40 per cent indicated they would stop selling gas under the economic controls.

The Auto Club said the other 60 per cent, mostly stations doing repair work, indicated they would remain open, but some with reduced services.

They said gasoline operators were upset with the date picked by President Nixon to set Phase 4 pump prices. Nixon chose Jan. 10 to set the level for gasoline prices — a time when most stations were in the midst of a price war.

18-year-old is candidate

Robert Dickerson announced Friday he's a Republican candidate for the Michigan House of Representatives and claimed he is the youngest legislative candidate in the nation. He is 18.

Dickerson is seeking the House seat from the 26th District now held by Kirby Holmes, also a Republican.

The primary election is more than a year away and Dickerson will be 20 by that time.

"I'm running on the Republican ticket," said Dickerson, "but I don't suppose that really means I'm a Republican. I mean, I'm not an overly strong Republican."

Rustlers released on bond

Two brothers charged in recent incidents of cattle rustling in Clinton County have been released on $1,000 bond pending another appearance in court next week.

Keith Mayers, 25, and his brother, Lyle, 31, appeared in Clinton County District Court Friday on charges of larceny over $100.

The charges stem from a cattle rustling incident at the Eldred farm, five miles outside of St. Johns. The two were apprehended on a tip from a farmer who lost 12 holstein steers and was on the watch for more thefts.

Sheriff's deputies said they obtained a search warrant and found 20 stolen livestock on the Mayers' property Friday.

Clinton County has been the scene of many cattle thefts recently as the price of meat has increased.

MSU OFFICE GIVES STATISTICS

Report cites student decrease

By TERI ALBRECHT
State News Staff Writer

Students, in terms of numbers at MSU, are decreasing.

Statistics for enrollment, credit hours and the number of annual degrees conferred in 1972 are down from past years, according to an annual report sent out last week by the registrar's office.

Royal to defend indigency plea

Convicted war protester John Royal will return to Lansing from Detroit Aug. 27 to defend his petition of indigency against opposition from the Ingham County prosecutor's office.

Royal, who is attempting to overturn his conviction for impeding an officer in the line of duty during a 1972 antiwar demonstration at MSU, said he no longer has funds to retain a legal counsel. Royal's petition was filed last week with Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Marvin J. Salmon.

Royal's former attorney, Kenneth Mogill of Detroit, received little pay for his earlier defense of Royal. He has left the case at the request of the Detroit Lawyer's Guild because he became involved with the defense for 60 Attica prisoners in conjunction with New York attorneys.

Royal said Mogill recommended a group of young area lawyers who specialize in handling appellate cases.

Royal received two years' probation from Salmon in June, but he is still convinced that he can get the conviction reversed though he has been unable to file a formal appeal.

Last fall term 44,409 students were enrolled in University programs, the figure which is most often quoted as the average campus enrollment per term.

But another figure, the actual head count total of students on campus during 1972-73 was reported as 58,391. This number represents a drop from 59,647 in 1971, a fact which officials say reflects a nationwide trend of a slower pace in university growth.

The report also shows that for the first time in 10 years more women were admitted to MSU last year than men, with 3,526 or 51 per cent of the total women admitted as opposed to 3,366 men or 49 per cent. The number of men still retains an edge over women in the number of transfer, readmitted and returning students.

Though the number of students coming and going has dropped slightly, there is noted internal shuffling within individual colleges. The figures given for the annual number of degrees conferred reflect this trend.

The colleges which graduated an increased number of students over the past 10 years are the colleges of Agriculture and Natural Resources (769), Lyman Briggs (88), Engineering (546), Human Ecology (542), Human Medicine (142), James Madison (89), Natural Science (1,034) and Social Science (2,162). The College of Veterinary Medicine graduated 196 students, an increase over the past five years.

The colleges which conferred less degrees than during previous years are colleges of Arts and Letters (1,031), Business (1,125, the fewest since 1965), Communication Arts (521), Education (2,450, the least since 1968) and Justin Morrill (118, the least since its first year in 1967).

The analysts noted that the college enrollments and degree quotas reflect a nationwide trend away from the fine arts into the more technical and professional fields.

In addition, total credit hours for last year are down to 1,755,371, the lowest since 1967. The most hours of instruction for the past 10 years were recorded in 1969 with 1,803,556.

The report also researched figures for the number of out-of-state students and foreign students studying at MSU. The 4,943 out-of-state students, 11.9 per cent, represent a steady decline as the least number during the last 10 years. The 1,095 foreign students 2.7 per cent represent the least enrollment in seven years.

SN board refuses proposal to set up quotas of minorities

The State News Board of Directors Friday refused to consider a proposal that would have established a quota of minority students in each newspaper department and assured that at least one black student was always represented on the board of directors.

Roland Williams, student member of the corporation board, made the proposals because he was concerned that there were no minorities in positions of authority on the newspaper, particularly in the news office.

"If you have nothing but whites on the board they perpetuate a white attitude that can misunderstand black attitudes and ideas," Williams said. "There should be as much opportunity for cross cultural attitudes as possible to be present and discussed."

Williams also said he was not demanding tokenism. "I'm not interested in the methods, I'm interested in results," he said.

Beth Masalkoski, advertising manager, said that she hires people solely on ability.

"I think to hire anyone on any other basis than ability would be a disservice to the State News," Masalkoski said. She added that of the three people she has hired since assuming her position in May, two have been black women.

Bill Whiting, editor-in-chief, said he estimated between 8 and 12 per cent of all State News employees in any given year were minorities.

Williams' proposal failed for lack of a second. In other action, Blair Whitney, acting as chairman of the board, brought up a proposal that board members be paid a total of $25 for each meeting they attend.

"I was asked by chairman Vic Spaniolo, before he had to leave that this proposal be brought up," Whitney said.

However, other board members said they thought that it would be inappropriate for board members to be paid for their activities, so the motion failed.

Board members are currently reimbursed for expenses incurred for travel to board meetings.

Paper probes Kent State shots

By THE STATE NEWS

In a news article published Saturday, the Christian Science Monitor casts doubt on the theory that a "security agent" may have fired the shot that unleashed national guard fire into the crowd at Kent State University in 1970.

The Boston-based paper used access to two interviews with Terrence B. Norman, a Kent law enforcement major in 1970, who claims he had a right to carry the gun, but did not fire it May 4 when four students were killed on the Ohio campus during antiwar demonstrations.

The Monitor asserts that the Norman incident may be only a sidelight to the tragedy and may distract the Justice Dept. investigators.

The Kent State case was reopened Aug. 3 by Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson, who said, "There are some areas where additional inquiry is desirable."

The possibility that Norman fired is significant, reporter Trudy Rubin wrote, because national guard spokesmen initially claimed sniper fire may have caused them to shoot. Norman was the only person other than the guard who is known to have had a gun on campus that day.

The still-secret 8,000-page FBI report on Kent State however, says "there was no sniper." Witnesses who saw Norman at Kent State were not interviewed by the FBI.

Nevertheless, some people, including Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Indiana, believe Norman caused the shooting. Reports on the reasons for Norman's presence on campus conflict, Norman told the House subcommittee on civil rights that he was entitled to carry a gun because he was working as a security agent to the Blossom Music Center in Akron.

In an interview with the Ohio State Highway Patrol on June 1, 1970, he claimed he was on campus to take pictures free lance and for "the campus police and people of higher offices."

Norman entered campus on May 4 with the aid of a security officer who told Sgt. Michael Delaney that Norman was taking pictures for the FBI.

It still has not been determined whether Norman fired, however.

Government hopes Phase 4 will end wage, price controls

WASHINGTON — The government hopes Phase 4, beginning today, will be the last phase in its wage and price control program, but experts still do not know how it will affect prices.

Food prices, partially unfrozen July 18, have risen faster than had been expected and the government isn't sure when they will stop.

"It's like cotton candy," said a Cost of Living Council spokesman. "It's pretty hard to put your finger on what's going to happen."

Since July 18, among the larger price hikes, the price of a dozen eggs has gone up nearly 33 per cent, and the price of pork has also increased.

East Coast bakers say the price of loaf of bread may jump up to four cents because the price of wheat is increasing.

"We expected an increase... but food prices clearly have gone up higher than we expected," said Kenneth Feder, director of the Office of Food Price Monitoring in the Cost of Living Council.

"We are concerned over the continued increase in the price of hogs and pork," he said. "We hope it will turn around or flatten out."

The economic controls, which began two years ago Wednesday, have limited wage and price increases to varying levels and with varying degrees of enforcement.

As Phase 4 begins, the administration is withholding predictions of its results. No target for the rate of inflation by the end of the year has been set, partially because it is hard to predict, but also because economists fear setting a target figure and then having the program judged a failure when the figure isn't met.

President Nixon has said substantial price increases can be expected for the rest of the year, but he said the program should bring about a more moderate inflation on rate by next year.

The administration says the goal of Phase 4 is to permit inevitable price increases to occur gradually.

The cluster plan, the implementation of which led to the recall in November of five school board members, provides for gradual integration of schools over a four-year period through limited busing. During the first year the program involved 900 students at eight schools, most of them black. Tails coming year, 1,340 students from 13 schools will be affected.

Fox's decision was in the form of a preliminary injunction. He ruled that the nullification of the cluster plan by the school board was an unlawful segregation.

The ruling set the stage for a trial to determine if the Lansing school system is unlawfully segregated.

Better integration plan sought

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Victorious in their court effort to reinstitute Lansing's limited school busing program, NAACP attorneys said Friday they may seek a more comprehensive remedy to segregation in the Lansing school system.

The disclosure followed a ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Noel P. Fox in Grand Rapids instructing the Lansing Board of Education to continue its four-year school cluster program.

The program, adopted on a voluntary basis at the beginning of the 1972-73 school year, was later rescinded. However, the return to the old system was not to take effect until this coming September.

School board attorney Fred Newman said he would seek an emergency stay of Fox's ruling with the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, Ohio, though conceding his chances of succeeding were "less than 50-50."

NAACP attorney John Davis said the school board decision to seek the stay leaves the civil rights organization "with no recourse but to seek what we consider to be constitutionally mandated, even if it is above and beyond the cluster plan."

LUXURY WITHIN REASON. THE VOLVO 164.

People who buy luxury cars can be unreasonable. They want to sit on leather. They insist on air conditioning. They want power steering, power-assisted brakes, a choice of transmissions. Sometimes even a tachometer.

The people who build Volvos understand. That's why they build all those features into the 164. And add fuel injection, an electric rear window defroster, unit body construction and four-wheel power-assisted disc brakes. We're your local Volvo dealer. All we add is a reasonable price.

Meridian pornography ban an attempt to dictate morals

The Meridian Township trustees soon may have the dubious distinction of being one of the first local units of government in the country to pass anti-smut legislation based on the new Supreme Court community guidelines.

And if the township trustees do vote to put pornography into back rooms or under the counter, they will be guilty of trying to make others conform to their narrow interpretation of what material is obscene.

The ordinance the trustees are considering seeks not to curtail the sale of sexually explicit material but to hide it. Shopkeepers would not be allowed to place pornographic materials on public display, but instead would be required to place obscene books, magazines or other subjects face down or in an area away from general public view.

Outdoor pornographic movies would also be prohibited. That means the Crest Drive - in Theater had better stick to showing R-rated blood baths and shy away from the likes of "Deep Throat."

Township attorney Theodore Swift has hailed the ordinance as a step in the right direction, but actually it is more of a flying leap into the past. The ordinance is a serious infringement on a person's constitutional right to read or view the material of his choice.

There is little moral ground for a governing body to fashion a rule designed to "protect" the citizen against literature or movies offensive to those who temporarily occupy the seats of the mighty. What is obscene or pornographic is a relative term, but all too often those who control political power attempt to dictate a community's moral and ethical standards.

The proposed Meridian Township ordinance is a serious blunder; pornography and sexually explicit materials will not be cured by hiding them under a bookstore's shelves.

Hopefully, the township trustees will have enough sense on Aug. 21 to veto the plan instead of trying to interfere in what basically is a personal decision.

Bombing for a 'durable peace'

By ANTHONY LEWIS
(c) New York Times

WASHINGTON — Why is the United States bombing Cambodia? That is the question we ought to be asking in these last days before the Aug. 15 bombing cutoff fixed by Congress. Unfortunately, attention has been distracted from the real question by an unseemly flurry in the Supreme Court.

On July 25 Orrin Judd of the Federal District Court in Brooklyn held the bombing unconstitutional.

A court of appeals panel thereupon stayed Judd's decision until it could review the case.

LEWIS

Douglas removed that stay, thus putting into immediate effect an injunction against the bombing — until his colleagues in turn overruled him. He said he was not deciding the merits of the matter. Just as any judge would hold up a prisoner's execution to hear the appeal, he said, he would act to prevent the deaths of Cambodian peasants or American flyers.

But the analogy fails. Douglas was not just preserving the status quo, as in the ordinary capital case. He was effectively deciding the merits of great constitutional issues — the President's war-making power and the authority of the courts to regulate it. However much one credits him for courage and sincerity of feeling, his opinion was utterly unpersuasive.

Why does the U.S. government want to bomb right up to the congressional deadline?

President Nixon and Henry

Kissinger said originally that the bombing was essential because delicate contacts looking to a Cambodian settlement were underway. And bombing kept the pressure on for agreement. Neither side in Cambodia has shown any interest in talking to the other. Prince Sihanouk made his feelings insultingly clear by arranging to be away in North Korea during a planned Kissinger visit to Peking.

The other day the President, in an attempt to blame Congress for whatever may happen in Indochina, attacked the Aug. 15 bombing cutoff as "Abandonment of a friend." He assured "the brave and beleaguered Cambodian people" that he would "continue to work for a durable peace."

Well, the poor people of Cambodia have had a fair taste of Richard Nixon's friendship, enough for a lifetime. He bombed their country for 14 months in secret. He gave quick support to the coup that deposed Sihanouk and shattered Cambodia's relatively peaceful neutrality — indeed American agents did not act in the coup. He invaded Cambodia in 1970. He has bombed it again now, in gross violation of the law.

Why? Because bombing is what Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger can think to do in their frustration. It cannot preserve the Lon government. At this point it cannot produce any effects except death and destruction.

The truth they have not recognized is that "durable peace" Cambodia and elsewhere in Indochina can come only when the United States gives up its fateful pretensions to power there. The cruelty and absurdity of American policy will be dramatized by two last days of bombing for the sake of bombing.

Nixon must tell all

At this point in time President Nixon can no longer afford to play games of deception with the American public. He owes the country a complete, detailed explanation of the Watergate affair and must address himself to the truth in his long-awaited response to the Watergate hearings.

The President spent the weekend at his Camp David retreat preparing a statement on the Watergate affair. He is expected to make a mid-week, nationally televised speech that will, hopefully, satisfy the public on a fairly simple question: Did Nixon know in advance about the break-in and did he take part in the cover-up?

Now more than ever the President must speak the truth. His earlier Watergate statements raised as many questions as they answered or disguised the fiasco under the cloak of national security. Now is the time for Nixon to answer all the questions.

Nixon has in his possession the best evidence to dispel the cloud of suspicion lingering over his head. The President must make the tapes of conversations with John Dean III public or turn them over to the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Practices.

If the tapes remain secret, continued doubt will be cast on the President's involvement in Watergate.

Nixon's speech this week is crucial: He must tell the whole story as he knows it or forever lose his chance to regain public confidence.

Why not a trimester plan?

For several months now I've been trying to convince the solons that run this rag to come out editorially endorsing a switchover from MSU's present four-quarter system to a trimester system.

But, thus far the editors won't even consider my suggestion. They all say they don't want a trimester system, mutter something about a shorter Christmas vacation and switch the topic of conversation to a comparison of beer prices.

So I is, without waiting for my fellow drunks to editorially endorse the suggestion, saying that it would be in the best interests of MSU students for this school to switch over to a trimester system.

Why? There are several reasons why I think we should switch over, the major one having to do with that term-end agony called final exams.

Now, finals are more than just a nuisance, they can have definite physical and mental effects on a student. I know several people who become seriously ill from overwork and stress during finals week. And they suffer this way every finals week.

Obviously, the trimester system won't eliminate final exams. What it will eliminate is the necessity of the average student enduring finals three times a year. In a trimester system students would only have to take final exams twice — which is no small consideration if you are or know one of the many students who suffer bad effects from final exams.

Another thing, a trimester system would probably create several reading days before the start of finals for students to fully prepare themselves for the exams. This makes far more sense than ending the term on Friday and beginning exams on Monday when everybody knows the students will probably go out on a two-day drunk celebrating the end of the term and be in no possible shape to take a Monday exam.

Now there are those who claim that

Beautiful, natural best

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the Citizens for a Livable City. Due to the efforts of your group and the expenditure of a mere $13,500, you have saved a few diseased elm trees at the Michigan Avenue - Harrison Road intersection from the ignominious fate of being replaced by younger shrubs and trees and a few feet of extra pavement.

The project as I recall would have been just about finished by now, or at least well along, but for the restraining order you succeeded in getting last June. I hope you didn't miss seeing that intersection at its beautiful, natural best Friday night, Aug. 3. I couldn't quite take in all the scenic splendor in quick glance but the three police cars, ambulance, stretcher and whoever they were pulling out from under the dash of that mutilated car should certainly make you all proud of your efforts on behalf of the trees.

the students these are many inconveniences.

Finally if we went to a trimester system we would get out of here earlier in the year, sometime around early May probably, which would give us a better shot at summer jobs.

For two summers I had to work without work because all the people from the University of Michigan at other trimester schools got out two months before I did and were able to grab the available jobs.

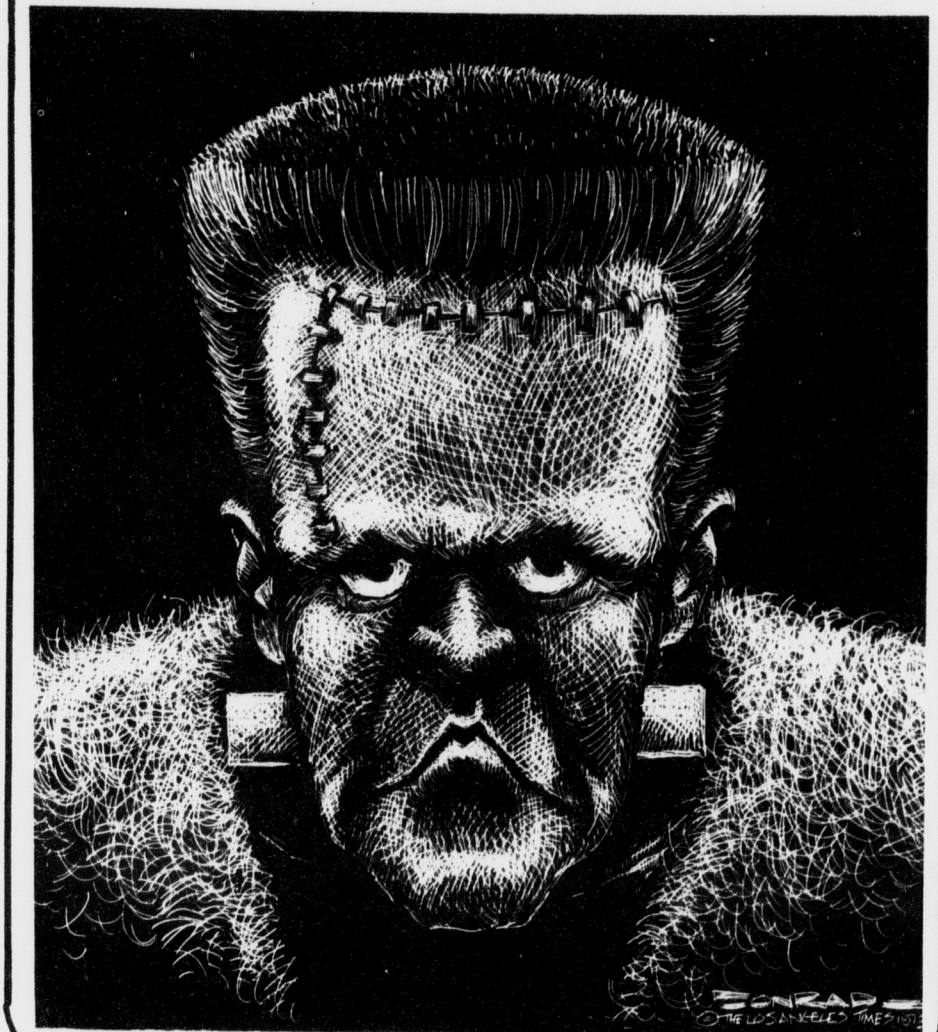

Employers are not going to wait until mid-June for help if they get it in early May.

Obviously, switching over to a trimester system would create some problems. It would necessitate changing the whole current of structure system, changing the pattern of degree programs, catalogues, scheduling, etc., etc.

For the first year or so it would be inconvenient for all persons concerned because we would be working under a new system that we weren't used to. But these are simply short-term problems. There are always difficulties to encounter when one shifts to a new system or method of operation.

But these considerations should outweigh the facts that students — faculty — would gain greater benefit from working under a trimester system than we do working under the present system.

Nixon should listen to Burke's law

By JAMES RESTON
(c) New York Times

WASHINGTON — If President Nixon were merely faced by a legal tangle over letting the courts and the Congress see the relevant parts of his Watergate tapes, his argument before the U.S. District Court here might help him in his present predicament. But that is not really or even mainly his problem.

His problem is not primarily legal but moral, psychological and political. He is faced by a troubled and divided nation, seething with doubt and suspicion over the current scandals. The people are asking him to relieve their anxieties, to clear away their doubts by the records in his possession, to do what is right, and he has answered with a mystifying proclamation on his legal rights.

During the great struggle with the British before the founding of the republic, King George III had many legal rights but Edmund Burke, arguing in his speech on conciliation with America said: "It is not what a lawyer tells me I may do, but what humanity, reason and justice tell me I ought to do."

This has been the missing principle in the President's defense of his administration all along. He has taken refuge in narrow legalities, giving ground to truth only when compelled to do so, and not always then, and the result is that each grudging statement, including his legal brief on the tapes, merely perpetuates the mistrust that is crippling his government.

It is conceded in the President's brief that Nixon could voluntarily make available relevant parts of the tapes, but this he refused to do, thus confronting the Congress and even his own prosecutor with the problem that he won't give the tapes voluntarily and that they can't compel him to give them up.

Unfortunately, this only makes the outlook even darker than it was before. For his argument seems to be that to submit to decisions of the court would make the presidency subservient to the judiciary, and this implies that even if the Supreme Court ordered him to hand over portions of the tapes, he would defy that order.

The reference to impeachment in the President's brief is even more ominous. "The President of the United States," the brief states, "is not above the law. He is liable to prosecution and punishment in the ordinary course of law for crimes he has committed but only after he has been impeached, convicted and removed from office." Meanwhile, the brief argues, the President, and the President alone, must be the sole judge of what private papers he discloses, even if he knows they contain evidence of criminal action.

On the basis of all the evidence here, the Congress has no heart for such a struggle. It is doubtful that such a bill on impeachment would ever be passed by a majority of all members and sent on to the Senate for judgment. But it would divide the country even more than it is.

Accordingly, the hope here is that he will not take the route of defiance, but will, again in Burke's words, recognize that "All government, indeed every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue and every prudent act, is founded on compromise..."

There is, however, no sign of compromise in his legal argument. He is reversing Burke's principle. He is following what "a lawyer tells me I may do" rather than "what humanity, reason and justice tell me I ought to do."

Guru fails to appear at Detroit engagement

The estimated five million devotees of the self-proclaimed Messiah of the 1970s have a slogan: "The Guru Maharaj Ji is here and now."

Saturday night in Detroit, however, the 15-year-old guru was not "here."

About 5,000 young people, middle-aged women and some entire families filled Detroit's Cobo Hall Ballroom Saturday expecting to see and hear the guru, who claims to have the perfect knowledge necessary for personal and world peace.

But instead they respectfully heard the guru's brother, Shri Raja Ji, 17, and former antiwar activist Rennie Davis explain that the guru, whose followers have opened 280 chapters of the Divine Light Mission in the United States, has begun a movement that will bring worldwide peace through the diffusion of perfect knowledge.

Davis, who was one of the defendants in the Chicago 7 conspiracy trial, added that the guru will sponsor a "soul rush," entitled "Millennium '73" for over 100,000 followers at the Houston Astrodome on November 8-10.

The guru reportedly cancelled his Detroit appearance because he needed rest from his whirlwind American tour. He was hit with a pie in the chest Tuesday during an appearance before the Detroit Common Council.

MSU swim coach to guide U. S. team

MSU swimming coach Dick Fettes will serve as assistant coach for the U.S. swim team that will compete in the world championships in Belgrade, Yugoslavia in September.

The Yank unit will be selected at the U.S. National Championships scheduled for Louisville, Ky. Aug. 21 to 24 and will consist of 24 men and 21 women performers. Fettes and Don Watson of Hinsdale, Ill. High School will be assistants to Gus Stager of Michigan who will head the U.S. group.

The American team will depart from Louisville Aug. 31 in Belgrade. Competition will run through Sept. 9.

Prior to heading for Louisville, Fettes will have another team coaching assignment. He and Ann Arbor Pioneer High School coach Dennis Hill will direct the Michigan swim entry in the National Junior Olympics scheduled for the Michigan campus in Ann Arbor Aug. 13 to 17.

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Skylab's astronauts explored the American Southwest with space cameras Sunday and said they've gotten the hang of things enough to do more work.

During the photorun, astronauts Alan L. Bean, Jack R. Lousma and Dr. Owen K. Carriott, gathered data on California, Nevada, New Mexico and Texas. They took pictures of mountains, forest and deserts and studies on water and land use, farming and geology.

"We're gonna whistle over this desert and grab some data on it," said Lousma as the spacecraft passed over the Smoke Creek Desert.

New jury to act on Watergate

(C) Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON — A new 23-member federal grand jury will be established today to consider and act on almost the entire Watergate scandal, outside of the actual Watergate bugging and cover-up. The new jury was requested last month by Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox, and since then members of Cox's office have made it clear they intend to use the jury for four of the five task forces Cox has established. Though other areas of interest might be added later, Cox currently has groups working on the Watergate case, the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. controversy, campaign financing, political sabotage and espionage (or "dirty tricks") and the special White House investigations unit known as "the plumbers."

A number of grand juries around the country are already looking into cases which fall under these general categories, and most of these will be allowed to continue. Cox will continue to keep an eye on them.

But parallel and even duplicate investigations might be undertaken here. Thus, persons under investigation or indictment elsewhere might also become targets of the new jury.

The grand jurors selected today will serve an 18-month term.

Cox's office also has jurisdiction over possible acts of perjury committed during the hearings of the special Senate Watergate Committee.

J. Walter Jones, President of the Maryland National Bank, a close Agnew friend and fundraiser. Jones said last week that he and Agnew are under investigation "in connection with past fund-raising efforts." But as did Agnew, he denied any wrongdoing.

Certain problems are associated with a community college that are not found in a four-year institution. "We run into some problems with student participation in events," Cathy Jones, student government vice president, said. "We have scheduling problems also."

Student government provides weekly movies which are free to students, offers a fine arts series where students can attend programs at the Ledges Playhouse, Community Circle Theater, Lansing Symphony, Town Hall speakers series and other events for 50 cents.

The student government has an advisory committee to the board of trustees elected from the students at-large and chaired by the president of student government. They meet monthly with the members' trustees to effect better understanding and communication between the students and the board.

The advisory board members have no vote on the board nor are they allowed to attend closed board meetings, Jones said. "I think we have to recognize the needs of a heterogeneous student population," William Schaar, dean of student personnel services, said.

"We have what I feel is a very extensive counseling system," Schaar said. "LCC operates three counseling

Van Malsen said. "It is really a benefit to the student."

After a student is admitted to LCC, a pre-enrollment interview with a counselor enables him to discuss his educational goals and to plan a program of study for enrollment, Schaar said.

"We are one of the few colleges in Michigan which has had an enrollment increase in the past few years," Van Malsen said. "We like to think it is because of our quality education."

Their projected enrollment by 1980 is 12,000 students.

"If we continue to grow at the rate we have been, we will reach the projection sooner than 1980," Van Malsen said.

LCC has not had a tuition increase in three years. Tuition is $7 per credit hour for students from within the tri-county area and $13 for students outside the district.

LCC: booming area educational force

By LYNDA ECKERT
State News Staff Writer

MSU, may believe it has the educational market sewn up in the Lansing area, but it does not.

Lansing Community College is a booming, if lesser known, educational force serving area residents.

While MSU's enrollment has reached a plateau, LCC's enrollment is growing rapidly.

LCC opened its doors in 1957 with 190 students and five full-time faculty members and has since grown to a college with 8,773 students and 120 full-time faculty members.

What was once a one-tenanted building campus has blossomed into a 30-acre urban campus on North Washington Avenue with 10 brand new major buildings and two about to be constructed.

LCC's student body composition is vastly different from MSU's. Seventy per cent of LCC students attend part time, 41.9 per cent take night courses and the mean age is 25.5 years.

"Lansing Community College deals with the practical application of knowledge," says Wesley Van Malsen, director of public information.

"Basically, LCC is two things," Van Malsen said. "First, we are a vocationally-oriented community college, and, secondly, we have a strong two year associate degrees transfer program."

"We intend to continue in this way, and to expand or contract as necessary to meet the demands of students," Van Malsen added.

Over 1,000 MSU students traveled to LCC winter term to take courses. Many students took electives such as art courses which are very difficult to get into at MSU or practical courses in auto mechanics or building trades courses.

"The actual number varies from term to term, but traditionally we have had many MSU students taking courses here each term," Van Malsen said.

LCC operates about 290 different programs from fully accredited transfer programs to certificate programs in areas such as auto mechanics, banking management and dental assistantships.

LCC's board of trustees recently authorized the purchase of $9.4 million of bonds for the construction of a new vocational building for the Division of Applied Arts and Sciences.

"We hope to break ground in September and it will take about two years to complete," Van Malsen said.

The Division of Applied Arts and Sciences offers training in more than 120 careers, with courses being offered when needed by the local community and industry.

LCC is governed by a seven-member board of trustees and is partially funded through a millage on property owners in Ingham, Clinton and Eaton counties.

LCC's operating funds budget has grown from $100,000 in 1957 to $7.5 million in 1972-73.

LCC receives funds from students tuition, state aid based on the number of full-time equated students, local millage and from federal funds, gifts and bequests. Van Malsen said LCC does not solicit donations.

About 500 tri-county residents serve on advisory committees at LCC to receive input and information on how to keep the programs updated.

Each of the four divisions within LCC is served by an advisory committee, as is the board of trustees.

"When a person leaves LCC, he or she has the best and most recent information in their given area," Van Malsen said.

All faculty members are required to have a master's degree in the area in which they will be teaching.

"We feel this is good because we get a better brand of teacher this way," (continued on page 7)

IN CONTROL, ENROLLMENT

College setups differ

Community colleges differ greatly from four-year public institutions.

One major difference is that community colleges are established by a vote of the local citizens, and residents serve on their board of trustees and various advisory boards at the college.

Four-year public institutions are established by the state, with governing boards elected statewide or appointed by the governor.

There are 29 community colleges in Michigan compared with 13 four-year public institutions. Estimated enrollment at community colleges in 1972-73 was 128,137. Estimated attendance at four-year public institutions was 209,826.

Over one-half of all freshmen entering Michigan colleges attend community colleges.

Enrollment at community colleges now accounts for about 38 per cent of the total enrollment at all community colleges and four-year public institutions.

Since World War II, 20 community colleges have come into being in Michigan.

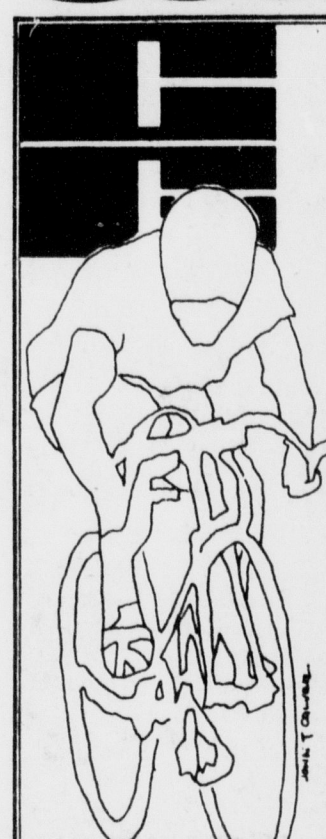

Lansing Community College is the sixth largest in Michigan, with an enrollment last year of 8,773. Oakland Community College is so large it now has three campuses in Oakland County.

The State Senate Education Committee will hold hearings later this month on the reorganization of Michigan's community college districts.

The bill would put all Michigan residents within a community college district, thereby replacing county divisions.

The bill also contains a provision to levy taxes of up to two mills without a vote of the people.
