Leading issue in dispute over cutting trees shifts

By TERI ALBRECHT
State News Staff Writer

No longer is the issue in the Michigan Avenue - Harrison Road intersection controversy whether to cut or not to cut the trees - it is whether environmental destruction is worth the safe movement of cars and trucks.

With all the data and technical details which have clouded and complicated the controversy, along with the disagreement among experts on environmental and traffic safety points, several aspects of the case have become clearer.

First, many of the trees are in fact diseased with Dutch elm disease. This disease was a point of controversy between tree experts, none of whom took laboratory tests for the disease.

But last week city officials took several samples of trees to William Young, a tree specialist at Geagley Lab (a division of the state Dept. of Agriculture.) He confirmed this week that six of the 10 trees sampled were infected by the Dutch elm bark beetle and four were not.

Robert Bruce, East Lansing traffic engineer, confirmed Tuesday that the trees will be removed. The trees are six of the 14 which would have remained under the modified scheme presented by the highway department, but no date has been set for their removal.

The city, through landscape planner Bruce Mitchell, has designed an extensive replanting program with varieties of trees, low-lying shrubs and flowering bushes and plant life for the median should their project go through. About $7,000 has already been put into plantings on the University side since January, shielding Kellogg Center from the traffic view. Highway officials claim that by channeling the left turning traffic from Michigan Avenue to Harrison Road into four days prior to coming and that he only saw the intersection once before appearing in court, he disputed the theory of putting more controls on traffic movement.

"All that is necessary is to remove the center island and change the lane demarcation on north and south Harrison Road from four lanes to three lanes," Jackman said. His

Aug. 30, highway officials say they are troubled that his plan will create more confusion than already exists.

"How all that traffic which will bunch up in the wide middle will safely move itself into the narrower Harrison Road is difficult to imagine. Plus, those cars will be going in opposite directions and could back up, blocking other traffic," Richard Kusma, traffic safety engineer with the highway department said last week.

Meanwhile, the protest is costing everyone money.

The citizens have already spent close to $13,500 for lawyer services, $1,000 plus about $50 plane fare (which will go higher at the rate of $250 per day plus more plane fare when the hearing resumes) and about $25 in other court fees. The citizens say they are willing to go for an appeal should they lose in the current fight, in which case the bill could almost double.

Robert Carr, attorney for the citizens, said the costs were an estimate of fees "by the hour" and they had not tallied the amount of time. He added that his stint in Grand Rapids federal court in the citizens first court battle was approximately $3,200 of the total lawyer fee.

The citizens have already raised about $2,000 in cash for their debts but other fund-raising projects are still being discussed. One idea was to request ASMSU Pop Entertainment

"There you only have nine - foot lanes while the standard is 12 feet... and that isn't much room for the heavy volume of traffic which flows through there." - Richard Kusma a U - turn angle, they can alleviate driving confusion. This channeling idea is what officials call an "assurance of less confusion and therefore increased safety."

However, William Jackman, a private traffic engineering consultant from Westlake, Ohio, flew up to testify at the last hearing in opposition to the highway plan.

Though he said he only saw plans proposal would cost about $22,000.

But when questioned as to what the traffic would do stranded in the center of the intersection, he called it "quite a football field." He added the design is a technical matter which he did not have to draw, saying his clients "had not paid him to come up with that detail."

Though Jackman will not be cross-examined until the hearing resumes

Easy entrance

MSU road project will claim 19 trees

Before construction efforts at the Collingwood Entrance are completed, a total of 19 trees will be removed to make way for a redesigned intersection.

In the last several weeks nine trees have been cleared to facilitate construction work for straightening the existing intersection, a project costing about $90,000, Milton Baron, director of campus parks and planning, said Thursday.

The project's design calls for widening the entrance to nearly double its present size, creating two traffic lanes into campus and three leading out and putting a median strip in the midst of the traffic lanes.

Physics Road will have a smoother angle into the intersection and the cross-over traffic onto East Circle Drive will be reduced. Bike lanes will also be drawn, Baron said.

Baron said a plaque commemorating MSU professor Levi Taft, the first man in 1889 to use spraying as a protection for fruit trees, will be moved to a safer place at the discretion of the Horticulture Dept.

The trees to be removed (which were authorized as mainly healthy but impeding construction work) are 10 elms, two pines, one clump of Russian olive, one white oak and six miscellaneous trees.

Reaction from area people involved in the Michigan Avenue - Harrison Road intersection dispute was critical of the work at the construction site.

Charles Massoglia, a member of the steering committee for Citizens for a Livable City, said this week the work was "another indication of the secrecy involving environmental destruction."

But observers note that the board of trustees has legal authority to govern the University autonomously and the board approved these plans this year.

SN board appoints general manager

By JOHN LINDSTROM
State News Staff Writer

Gerald H. Coy will begin his duties as the new State News general manager on Wednesday, Victor G. Spaniol, president of the State News Board of Directors, announced Thursday.

Coy accepted the position earlier this week. Spaniol was empowered by the board at their Aug. 10 meeting to approach Coy with an offer for the position.

"I'm looking forward to coming here and working with the students, particularly since I'll be working with the staff of the world's finest college newspaper," Coy said.

Coy will replace Arthur Levin who was fired from the general manager position in April.

"The board feels Coy brings to this paper a wealth of experience from both professional papers and experience on the student-run University of West Virginia newspaper," Spaniol said Thursday.

Coy was selected over 50 other applicants for the job. From that number five were brought to East Lansing for day-long interviews with the board and the editorial, advertising and professional staffs.

The board appointed Coy unanimously.

Coy, 53, formerly general manager of the Daily Journal in Elizabeth, N.Y., has had experience in both the editorial and business aspects of newspapers since 1938 - when he was the circulation manager for the Columbus, Ohio, Citizen.

Since then, he has also worked for the New Lexington, Ohio, Daily News, the Akron, Ohio, Beacon Journal, and has been news editor of the Indianapolis Time, general manager of the New Kensington, Pa., Daily Dispatch and general manager of the West Virginia Newspaper Publishing Co., among other positions.

While in West Virginia, Coy worked with the Daily Athenaeum, the student newspaper of the University of West Virginia.

"The student newspaper ought to be a laboratory experiment station where students can learn the practices of journalism," Coy said Thursday. "They learn the theory in the classrooms and should put that theory to practice on the paper. Our first goal is to turn out people that can work on newspapers."

Pentagon finds hole in bomb ban

by WASHINGTON STAR-NEWS

WASHINGTON - Pentagon lawyers have uncovered a legal loophole which could permit South Vietnam to circumvent a congressional ban on using United States aid to pay for military intervention in support of the Cambodian government.

As the direct U.S. role in Cambodia drew to a close with Wednesday's bombing halt, concern has grown that the ongoing war there would be escalated by a South Vietnamese intervention supported by the massive supplies of U.S. arms to Saigon.

The Saigon government had indicated it has no plans to intervene in Cambodia, and all military aid to South Vietnam for several years has passed Congress with an express prohibition on using the funds "to provide military support and assistance to the government of Cambodia or Laos."

But a letter signed by Deputy Secretary of Defense William P. Clements and received Wednesday by the Senate Armed Services Committee points out a "hypothetical and speculative" situation in which U.S.-supported South Vietnamese could nevertheless come to the aid of a Communist-besieged Phnom Penh, Cambodia's Capital.

In the Pentagon hypothesis, an intervention by Saigon might be legal "if it took such operations on its own initiative" rather than at the express urging of the Nixon administration.

The Clements letter was requested in connection with the Armed Services Committee's continuing probe of covert U.S. bombing operations in Cambodia.

By chance, it was received at the same time that news reports have begun to filter from Saigon of a South Vietnamese airlift to Phnom Penh of several thousand Cambodian residents in South Vietnam.

Trees vs. traffic

The Michigan Avenue - Harrison Road controversy no longer seems to center around the removal of certain trees; some of those trees are diseased anyway. The issue now concerns the feasibility of safe traffic flow achieved with minimal environmental destruction.

SPEECH REACTIONS MIXED

Watergate still issue

(C) 1973 WASHINGTON STAR-NEWS

WASHINGTON - No matter what President Nixon may wish, the first public response indicates Watergate will not go away.

In the wake of Nixon's televised address, reaction has split in the predictable pattern - skepticism from his critics, support from his backers. The one thing clear is that Watergate is still an issue in dispute.

The White House switchboard was swamped with calls of encouragement. But in the Senate, on both the right and left flanks of his own Republican party, Nixon faced defections.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R - Ariz., the GOP's presidential nominee other than Nixon in recent years, said, "In my opinion, the President did not add anything to his other speeches that would tend to divert suspicion from him."

Sen. Edward Brooke, R - Mass., called the speech disappointing and said, "we wanted facts. He gave us rhetoric."

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R - N.Y., added "I welcome the President's call to meet the needs of the nation, but one of those needs is to find out who was involved in Watergate..."

Nixon, at the end of his half-hour speech, suggested Congress should turn its attention to critical issues of economy and foreign policy, and leave Watergate to the courts.

"The time has come for the rest of us to get on with the urgent business of our nation," he said, and appealed to the public with these words: "I ask for your help to ensure that those who would exploit Watergate... will not succeed."

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D - N.M., a member of the Senate's Watergate committee, called the speech a rehash, and said from his home in Santa Fe, "I think the President was being very prayerful in trying to get the pressure off of him."

Fellow members of the Senate panel were more guarded. The chairman, Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., D - N.C., had no immediate comment. Most of the others also were silent. At his home in Huntsville, Tenn., the ranking GOP member and vice chairman, Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., issued a noncommittal statement:

"I welcome any information that the President can give us on the matter which is now under investigation. His comments (Wednesday night) along with any future statements will be given every consideration as the committee attempts to write a meaningful report."

The Nixon speech found supporters in his own cabinet, in his party leadership and other GOP quarters in the Senate.

"Credible and very reasonable," said Republican National Chairman George Bush. "Frank, candid, honest and as much as should be required," said Sen. John Tower, R - Texas. A "forthright stance," said Sen. Strom

Chrysler plant reopened

With about 1,000 union loyalists at plant gates to ensure peace, workers returned to their jobs Thursday at a Key Chrysler plant shut for nearly 30 hours by a radical labor group.

"They are in and they are working," said a spokesman for Chrysler shortly after the first of 2,625 workers returned for the first shift.

The Mack Avenue stamping plant was closed Tuesday when maverick workers occupied the sprawling plant on the city's heavily industrialized east side in defiance of the company and their union, the United Auto Workers.

Some 1,000 UAW loyalists from throughout Detroit met at a nearby Local hall in the predawn hours and marched en masse to four plant gates scaring away the handful of dissident pickets who continued to march in front of main gates in an effort to keep the plant closed.

Woman joins Economic Club

U.S. Rep. Martha W. Griffiths was elected to the board of directors of the Economic Club of Detroit Wednesday, becoming the first woman to hold that position in its 39-year history.

The club, which formerly barred women from the organization as a matter of policy, lifted the restrictions to elect Griffiths.

Economic Club president Russel A. Swaney said qualified professional women in all fields may now join the club if nominated and seconded by active members and approved by the board.

The club meets for a weekday luncheon once every week from September to May to hear speeches from noted politicians and business leaders.

Libyan hijacks jet to Israel

A slightly tipsy Libyan gunman hijacked a Lebanese jetliner to Israel on Thursday "to show that not all Arabs want to throw the Jews into the ocean."

The Boeing 707 of Middle East Airlines was released nearly seven hours later and flew safely to Beirut with 125 crew and passengers aboard.

Police who arrested the skyjacker, identified as Mahmoud Toumi, 37, quoted him as saying he did it in the interests of Arab-Israeli brotherhood.

"Some Arabs believe Israel must have a country, but Cairo prevents the Arabs by force from showing this," Toumi said.

It was the third Mideast hijacking in less than a month and the first time in more than 25 years of Arab-Israeli feuding that an Arab airliner had taken off from Israel.

Bribery probe continues

The Justice Dept.'s top prosecutor met in Baltimore Thursday with U.S. attorneys and lawyers for two Maryland businessmen who reportedly implicated Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in an alleged bribery and kickback scheme.

AGNEW

The high-level meeting, the second in two days for Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen, head of the Justice Dept.'s criminal division, came amid reports that indictments may be returned shortly.

Petersen and his special assistant, Philip White, spent several hours with U.S. Atty. George Beall.

A special grand jury hearing testimony in the case met for two Thursday and then adjourned. The only witness seen entering the hearing room was an unidentified tax agent who has been working with the prosecutors on the case. Beall said the jury probably would not come back into session until next Thursday.

Skylab launch set Nov. 9

Officials said Thursday astronauts on the last Skylab mission will observe "the comet of the century," a brilliant space traveler that may light up the December sky like a Christmas star.

Skylab 3 will be launched Nov. 9, officials said, a date that will place astronauts in orbit during the dazzling pass around the sun of a comet experts believe may be the most awesome of the 20th century.

Council to hold naming member

By JIM BUSH
State News Staff Writer

The successor of George Colburn, who resigned his East Lansing City Council seat Monday, will not be named before Sept. 4.

That was the message from the remaining four council members following a private work session at City Hall Thursday afternoon.

Councilmembers George Griffiths and Mary Sharp indicated that council will not name Colburn's successor before then, so council can receive community input on the types of qualifications the public wants the new council person to possess.

"I intend at Tuesday night's meeting to ask the public to submit names and suggest qualifications on who we should appoint," Griffiths said.

Griffiths and Mayor Brookover added that no one would be appointed Tuesday to succeed Colburn, who served less than two years of his four-year term, merely because Sharp will be gone on vacation.

The four remaining council members, under the city charter have 30 days from the official receipt to Colburn's resignation—which will come at Tuesday's council meeting—to name his successor.

That means council has two other meetings to make the appointment—September 4 and 18.

A coalition of liberal groups, including Project: City Hall, the Coalition for Human Survival, the Convention for a Responsible Council and the Nelson Brown-Margaret McNeil campaign have scheduled a press conference for this morning to announce that they want council to seek public input on Colburn's successor and also delay his or her appointment until after Nov. 6 council election.

That delay would be a violation of city law.

Griffiths, who lauded Colburn for initiating "innovative solutions" to city problems, said he would like Colburn's successor to reflect Colburn's age, political viewpoint and competence. In an Aug. 1 confidential memo to council members, Colburn indicated he might resign soon and specified that he would like his successor to be a young person with experience in the city decision-making process.

Griffiths in an interview Thursday blasted the Lansing State Journal for speculating in recent months that Colburn had accepted a position at Illinois State University—from which he resigned in June—so he could be tutored by the Illinois university's president, David Berlo, who formerly worked at MSU, about a future campaign for the state senate.

"The State Journal's inference that George went to Illinois to be groomed by Berlo for that position is a bunch of garbage," Griffiths said.

Colburn, 35, had been considered an unannounced candidate for the state senate seat now held by Republican Philip Pittenger. However, Colburn consistently denied the speculation.

"The State Journal's speculation—more than anything else—brought about the conditions that made it necessary for George to resign," Griffiths said.

He said the newspaper's comments dried up job opportunities for Colburn in the Lansing area because he was considered a political aspirant.

County court may use voice machine in case

By GARY KORRECK
State News Staff Writer

The spectograph, a device which diagrams the human voice, may be used for the first time in Ingham County court history in the case of Wayne J. Chaisson, a former MSU student charged with the June 18 larceny by trick of $9,840 from Michigan National Bank.

Asst. County Prosecutor Tom Kulick is considering the use of voice identification following pretrial testimony by witnesses from the MSU Dept. of Public Safety, which was involved in the case.

A male caller, using a pseudonym, had a department vehicle deliver the money to him. His call was recorded as it is department policy to tape all incoming calls, pretrial examination witnesses said. Kulick could use the tape in conjunction with the voice print method promoted locally by MSU audiology and speech scientist Oscar Tosi.

Chaisson's examination resumes Aug. 27 and District 54A Judge Charles Filice will have to decide whether the voice tape can be admitted as evidence. That is, if Kulick decides to use it.

"I won't affirm it and I won't deny it," Kulick said when asked if he would use a voice print to try and identify Chaisson as the caller.

"There is still more testimony to be heard and it would be unethical for me to comment on the situation at this time," Kulick added.

He did say that Sgt. Ernest Nash of the Michigan State Police, a pupil of Tosi's who has done the final voice analysis in other cases, is scheduled to testify "and you are free to draw any conclusion you wish from that," Kulick said.

Tosi spent the entire afternoon Tuesday on the witness stand attesting to the validity of the method. He has already performed 3,000 voice examinations for the Michigan State Police in field cases.

Tosi has also defended the method in 40 cases throughout the nation and has been successful in 39 of them. A recent case involving a California Superior Court ruling went against the voice print method by dismissing it as evidence in a bomb threat trial.

Tosi said the California ruling should not hurt the future of voice identification as evidence and blamed the ruling on "a combination of poor prosecution, poor credentials of defense witnesses and the current sentiment against electronic devices of any kind stemming from the Watergate story that caused the ruling."

If strict guidelines are observed, the process is effective, Tosi said.

Included in Tosi's guidelines are:

•Both aural and visual comparison of tapes and prints of the known voice with the unknown voice.

•A qualified examiner with at least two years of practical experience in an apprenticeship program.

•In positively identifying a voice, the examiner cannot have the slightest hint of a doubt.

Five alternative conclusions are available to the examiner, Tosi said, ranging from positive identification or elimination to no decision.

County sets up consumer division

By JIM BUSH
State News Staff Writer
The Ingham County prosecutor's office now has a consumers' division, following action by the county board of commissioners Wednesday night.

The commissioners voted to approve a contract with the state Office of Criminal Justice that establishes two new positions in Prosecutor Raymond Scodeller's office. The two positions — an investigator — attorney and administrative assistant — will be wholly assigned to investigate cases of consumer fraud, help resolve grievances between businessmen and consumers and educate the consumer on his rights.

Scodeller said the two new employees will speak to citizen groups and seek to publicize through the news media ways the consumer can utilize his rights in the marketplace.

"We have here the basic foundation of a group that can take a big step in this county towards showing consumers the resources they do have in getting action on their complaints," Lansing Commissioner Gordon Swix, R - District 13, said.

"This office will help show county residents the ropes to use in presenting their complaints," he added. "People will know they are not getting cheated out of their money."

The new office is chiefly funded by state and federal monies. In other action at its regular monthly meeting in Mason, the board:

•Narrowly rejected a bid by four commissioners to support the national boycott of nonunion lettuce by directing county agencies to limit their purchases to union lettuce or lettuce from nonboycotted states, like Michigan.

•Listed eight "high priority" items for the use of Ingham County's expected $2.2 million in 1973 revenue - sharing funds.

•Rejected, on a tie vote, a resolution denouncing the alleged pollution of Lake Superior by the Reserve Mining Co.

•Appointed 12 county residents to the new Advisory Group on Nonmotorized Transportation, which is directed to devise a system of nonautomobile transportation routes in the county.

•Authorized $3,500 to finance a feasibility study for a county day care system.

One of the four sponsors of the lettuce boycott measure, Patrick J. Ryan, D - District 19, said California lettuce workers are denied the traditional rights of labor groups to organize themselves and decide on their own what union will represent them.

"I don't mean to be telling the state of California how to operate its work force, but there is a tremendous injustice being done to these workers," Ryan said.

He added that Ingham County, by buying nonunion lettuce is supporting the lettuce growers and encouraging an injustice against the lettuce workers. Opponents of the resolution called the lettuce workers' dispute a mere jurisdictional fight between the AFL - CIO and the Teamsters Union, who both have organized some lettuce workers.

The measure failed, 10 - 8.

The setting of priorities for the county's federal revenue - sharing funds reflected input from two public hearings on the fund use, one of which was held in East Lansing last spring.

"This simply allocates as high priorities those things suggested by county residents at the two hearings," Hope explained.

The commissioners attached priority to eight items, totalling $357,988 of the expected $2.2 million in federal revenue - sharing funds the county is slated to receive in 1973.

The commissioners approved funds for mental health programs, the MSU Volunteer Action Corps, the day care study, legal aid, an aerial tax mapping program, jail recreation facilities and courthouse renovations.

Detroit VVAW member may get trial subpoena

By United Press International and the Associated Press

A Detroit member of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War said Thursday he has learned he will be subpoenaed to testify before the "Gainesville 8" trial in Florida.

Bill Marshall of Detroit said he will be subpoenaed by the defense counsel for eight veterans accused of conspiracy to interrupt the 1972 Republican Convention to deny a charge he was among the planners.

Marshall was Michigan state coordinator for the veterans during the GOP convention, and his duties included organizing a peaceful demonstration against the administration's war policies.

He has been named by some prosecution witnesses as the one who planned disruption of the convention.

Marshall said he expects the eight accused veterans will get a fair trial and will eventually be found innocent.

Meanwhile in Florida at the trial, the judge in the Gainesville Eight trial said Thursday he was considering taking action against defense attorneys for a 60-second silent demonstration marking the end of U.S. bombing in Cambodia.

U.S. District Court Judge Winston Arnoff had told the attorneys Wednesday that he would drop the matter and not take any action against them after they refused to answer his questions on Fifth Amendment grounds. But Thursday he told them he had changed his mind overnight and that he now "had the matter under consideration and may take action at a future time."

The defense attorneys, sympathizers and seven of the defendants stood silently Wednesday morning after Arnoff denied a request by defendant Scott Camil that the court permit 60 seconds of silence for prayer and meditation to commemorate the bomb halt.

With the jury out of the room, Charles Henry Becker of New Orleans said he called the FBI twice after he was arrested and jailed in March 1972, for carrying a concealed and loaded pistol.

But Becker said in cross-examination that he spend five days in jail because no one posted the $500 bond required.

Becker, who was on the FBI payroll at the time, said he never asked for FBI intervention in the case.

Guru disciples hold 2 for beating pie thrower

DETROIT (UPI) — Disciples of the 15-year-old "boy god" Maharaj Ji said Thursday they were holding in custody two men who allegedly beat a reporter critical of the religious movement and its gang leader.

The reporter, Pat Halley, who works for the underground newspaper the Estate, was listed in satisfactory condition with fractured skull.

Followers of Guru Maharaj Ji, who claims he is a "perfect knowledge," said two disciples confessed they had Halley early Wednesday.

A police spokesman said charges were filed including questioning of Halley, who smashed a living cream pie into the man's face last week at Detroit City Hall.

Halley had warned earlier that followers of the guru would try to "kill me" in retaliation for the throwing episode.

The attack, Halley said, came when two men struck him in an empty apartment at a rendezvous they set up in order to gain more knowledge of the guru.

The mission's headquarters are in Denver where the teenaged mystic issued a statement there saying he deplored the attack.

Detroit members of the sect, which claims five million members around the world, did not identify the two men they held.

"We said we would say nothing until the police decide whether to arrest them," said Richard Royal, 25, who described himself as the leader of the Detroit Mission.

Halley's newspaper had strongly assailed the guru, who it calls "the kid." It called his teachings "a spiel."

Halley said he was telephoned Tuesday by a man who congratulated him on slapping the pie into the guru's face. That incident received nationwide publicity. The guru refused to prosecute Halley.

Halley said the caller offered to "expose" the mission and the guru. Eventually he met two men and went with them to an apartment where they said they would demonstrate the mission's rituals.

Some of Halley's friends became suspicious and jotted down the license number of the car the two men used.

Inside the apartment, Halley said, the men asked him to sit down and close his eyes — "so they could demonstrate the guru's rituals."

"I heard a jingling noise," Halley said. "One of them was behind me. He smacked me on the top of the head with something that felt like a hammer. I fell over."

Halley's friends gave police the license number and police discovered it was owned by the mission.

Trustees now must consider allowing abortions on campus

It's about time the board of trustees stopped fiddling around and considered allowing abortions to be performed at the University Health Center.

Almost eight months ago, the U.S. Supreme Court voted 7-2 to recognize the right of women to have a medical abortion during the first six months of pregnancy. Since that time there has been unlimited speculation over whether abortions could be performed at the Health Center, but the trustees have remained silent.

Abortion is a simple surgical procedure and should be available at the Health Center as an extension of health care for students. The center has the necessary operation rooms, the proper equipment and the services of trained physicians. There would be no danger of an abortion being administered in a germ-infected back alley.

And by law, abortions can be made available to women upon request in a public medical institution like the University Health Center. MSU is a part of Michigan — not an ivory-towered island sitting by itself — and deserves the same consideration on establishing campus abortion procedures.

For five regular monthly meetings now the trustees have ignored facing the decision of allowing abortions at the health center. The heated political implications make abortion a touchy topic, but silence by the trustees is a disservice to the urgent health care needs of the University community.

Maybe the trustees are fearful that the University Health Center would be turned into an open-door abortion clinic. They would be better off looking at abortions on campus as an added health care service available at a fee to the University community only and not worrying about MSU becoming an abortion haven for the State of Michigan.

Next Wednesday's special meeting of the trustees was called by President Wharton to discuss urgent budget matters. Allowing abortions at the Health Center must also be considered.

The trustees have shunned their responsibility for too long. It is time they faced the issue.

COMMENTARY

Agnew stands on his own feet

By JAMES RESTON
(C) New York Times

WASHINGTON — What this town has been hoping for recently is somebody, anybody in power, who would stand up and give plain answers to hard questions. Vice President Agnew has finally done it.

When the Justice Dept. informed him officially that he was being "investigated" for using his influence and taking bribes on government contracts, he didn't duck for long behind legal barriers, but called a press conference and said it was a "damned lie."

He didn't hide for weeks or months behind "executive privilege" or issue proclamations about his "legal rights." After a short delay, he saw the reality: The headlines in the newspapers made him look like a crook, so he came out fighting.

RESTON

The courts will decide later whether there was any wrongdoing in this case. The only point here now is how a public official should react when there is even a suspicion of wrong-doing, and Agnew demonstrated how to do it.

He didn't ask, but told the President, he was going to call a press conference at 3 the next afternoon. He didn't have a few "friends" in the press around to hear his story, but a bribe to use his influence in public office? Yes, once when he was too inexperienced to know what was happening, but it had nothing to do with this case. Had he thought of resigning or standing down while these charges were going through the courts? Certainly not, he didn't believe he would be indicted.

The contrast with President Nixon, who hasn't had a press conference

"The only point here now is how a public official should react when there is even a suspicion of wrong-doing, and Agnew demonstrated how to do it."

invited everybody, TV cameras and all. He asked for the tough questions, and he got them.

Had he ever taken any money from government contractors? No! Was there a problem about politicians and government contractors? Sure he said, you would be "naive" if you didn't recognize it. Had he ever been offered during the Watergate crisis since last March 15, was unavoidable. So maybe something important is happening here, probably as a result of Watergate.

Even at the top of the Nixon administration, officials are beginning to speak out. The new Att. Gen. Elliot Richardson didn't ask whether the Agnew "investigation" would embarrass the President or the vice president, but simply advised Agnew that he was being investigated for possible criminal action. Also, Richardson has instructed his colleagues in the Justice Dept. to keep a careful record of anybody, including members of Congress, who try to influence decisions in the Dept. of Justice.

Vice President Agnew's press conference is only one important symbol of this change. He has been a loyal member of the "Nixon team," and he went out of his way in his press conference to express again his conviction of the President's innocence in the Watergate disaster, but at the same time, he insisted on protecting his own integrity by facing the charges against him in public.

And the reaction to this was startling. For even without knowing the facts in Agnew's case, the feeling after his press conference was very much in his favor — in fact, that finally in this town somebody in power had talked up with candor and passion, and taken the risk of telling the truth.

Give Spiro a point

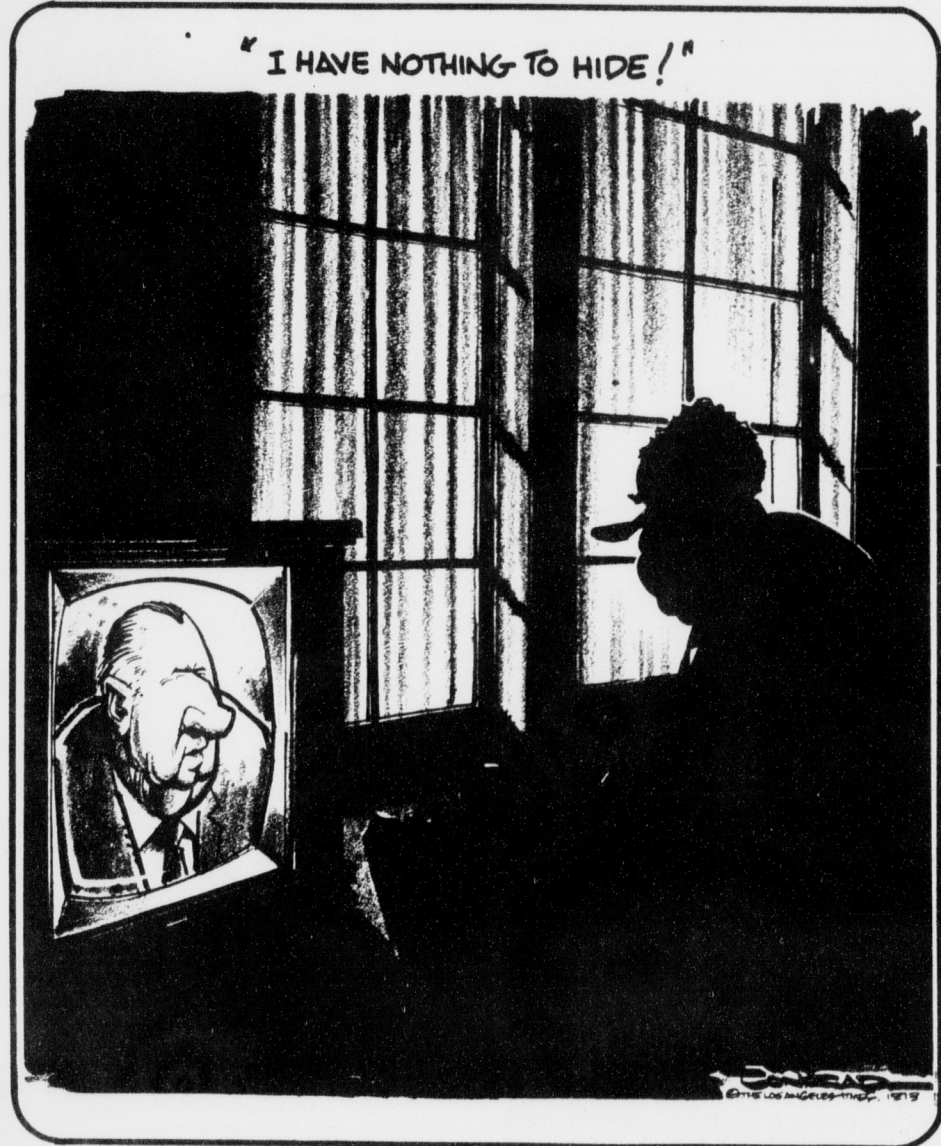

Vice President Spiro Agnew made precisely the right move in offering to answer questions personally and to open his financial records to the United States attorney who is conducting an investigation into charges of political corruption in Maryland when Agnew was governor.

Agnew's speedy move to disprove the allegations of extortion, bribery, tax fraud and conspiracy is especially welcome against the backdrop of the Watergate scandal that has encircled President Nixon. The vice president apparently knows that administrative silence only makes the seeds of suspicion grow faster.

However, Agnew curtly avoided acknowledging the grand jury's right to subpoena his personal records or to call him for trial while he serves as vice president. By avoiding these constitutional questions until later, Agnew avoided dampening the President's fight with the Senate Watergate committee and special prosecutor Archibald Cox over releasing the White House tapes.

Too bad Richard Nixon doesn't take a lesson on candor from his vice president.

POINT OF VIEW

Speak out to expose the Shah

By the IRANIAN STUDENT ASSN.

In the July 27 issue of the State News the Iranian Student Assn. published an article titled "U.S. sale of arms to Iran may start a new Indochina." This article was written on the eve of the Shah's official visit to America to buy more arms from the Nixon administration.

We were surprised to see a reply in the State News of Aug. 6, 1973 by the so-called "majority" of Iranian students in this area (as they claimed, MSU and the greater Lansing area.) This article titled "Not to criticize but to learn," was in no way a response to the points we made in our point of view. It was purely a series of childish accusations and empty charges. Here, therefore, we try to answer some of these charges and allegations.

Unlike the so-called "majority" who stated that understanding political situations in Iran requires "continuous involvement and possession of a vast amount of knowledge," we believe that no degree of political sophistication is required to feel and see the appalling conditions of human misery, poverty, injustice, inequality and repression in Iran.

They charged that those involved in our association are here to stay and are not planning to return to Iran. The fact is that so far all the members of the association who have graduated have returned home and the present members will do the same upon their graduation.

The Iranian Student Assn. of MSU which is a member of the World Confederation of Iranian Students (the largest student organization in the world) is trying to raise the level of consciousness of the Iranian students, especially in regards to the problems of Iran. Despite the fact that our organization has been outlawed by the Shah's military regime, hundreds of newly arrived Iranian students, who spent most of their lives under one of the most repressive governments in history, join the organization every year.

The so-called "majority" concluded that a student should concentrate his efforts in studying his textbooks and learn what is being taught. This is exactly what the Shah's regime is trying to promote by encouraging the many thousands of Iranian intellectuals to submit to this process of depoliticization in an attempt to perpetuate the present regime and preserve the rule of the selective few who run the country.

Aristotle over 2000 years ago believed that man is a political being; it is surprising to see that in the 20th century there are some "highly educated" individuals who advocate the opposite. We are "advised" by the so-called "majority" to keep silent while the regime is spending billions of dollars on arms while little is done to eliminate hunger and poverty, illiteracy and diseases.

How can one keep silent while the Shah spends millions of dollars which rightly belongs to the impoverished people of Iran on his extravagant celebrations (the 25th anniversary of his rule, his coronation, the 2500th anniversary celebration of monarchy in Iran and his birthday parties)?

How could anyone keep silent while there are over 25,000 political prisoners in Iran, many of them under severe torture? How could anybody keep silent while last year alone 109 of the most educated and dedicated intellectuals were tortured and executed by the firing squad?

We believe in a country in which over 75 per cent of its population is illiterate, we are fortunate to have the opportunity to get a higher education. We owe this to the toiling masses of Iran.

Therefore, it is our primary duty while living abroad to expose the true nature of the Shah's regime. We conclude by paraphrasing the German poet and playwright Bertold Brecht who said: "those who don't know the truth are ignorant, but those who know the truth and keep silent are guilty."

The Doctor's Bag

By ARNOLD WERNER, MD

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at University Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

Does sexual stimulation affect the growth of breasts? My breasts were small until seven months ago when I began my first sexual encounter. About three months ago my boyfriend and I noticed the increase of my breast size. Actually, I have grown to a C cup from the A cup I have worn several years. I am almost 20 years old.

Fortunately or unfortunately, depending on your point of view, sexual stimulation does not affect the growth of breasts. Nor does it affect the growth of penises, incidentally. Increasing from a A cup to a C cup in three months is an interesting observation which prompts me to make several inferences. I assume you would have been kind enough to let me know if you gained 20 to 30 pounds during this period of time, so I will eliminate simply obesity as a possibility.

Since you have been having sexual intercourse I hope you and your boyfriend have been sensible enough to use contraception. If you began to take the birth control pill about the time your breasts started to increase in size, it would explain much of what you describe. Some women experience more breast enlargement with the pill than others. On the other hand, if you have not been using birth control, it just might be that you are three months pregnant as breasts enlarge during pregnancy. In any case, the dramatic increase you describe is most unusual and if it continues, I would suggest a visit to a physician.

What are the chances of becoming pregnant 15 months after menstrual cycles cease? In other words, when is it safe to discontinue contraceptives?

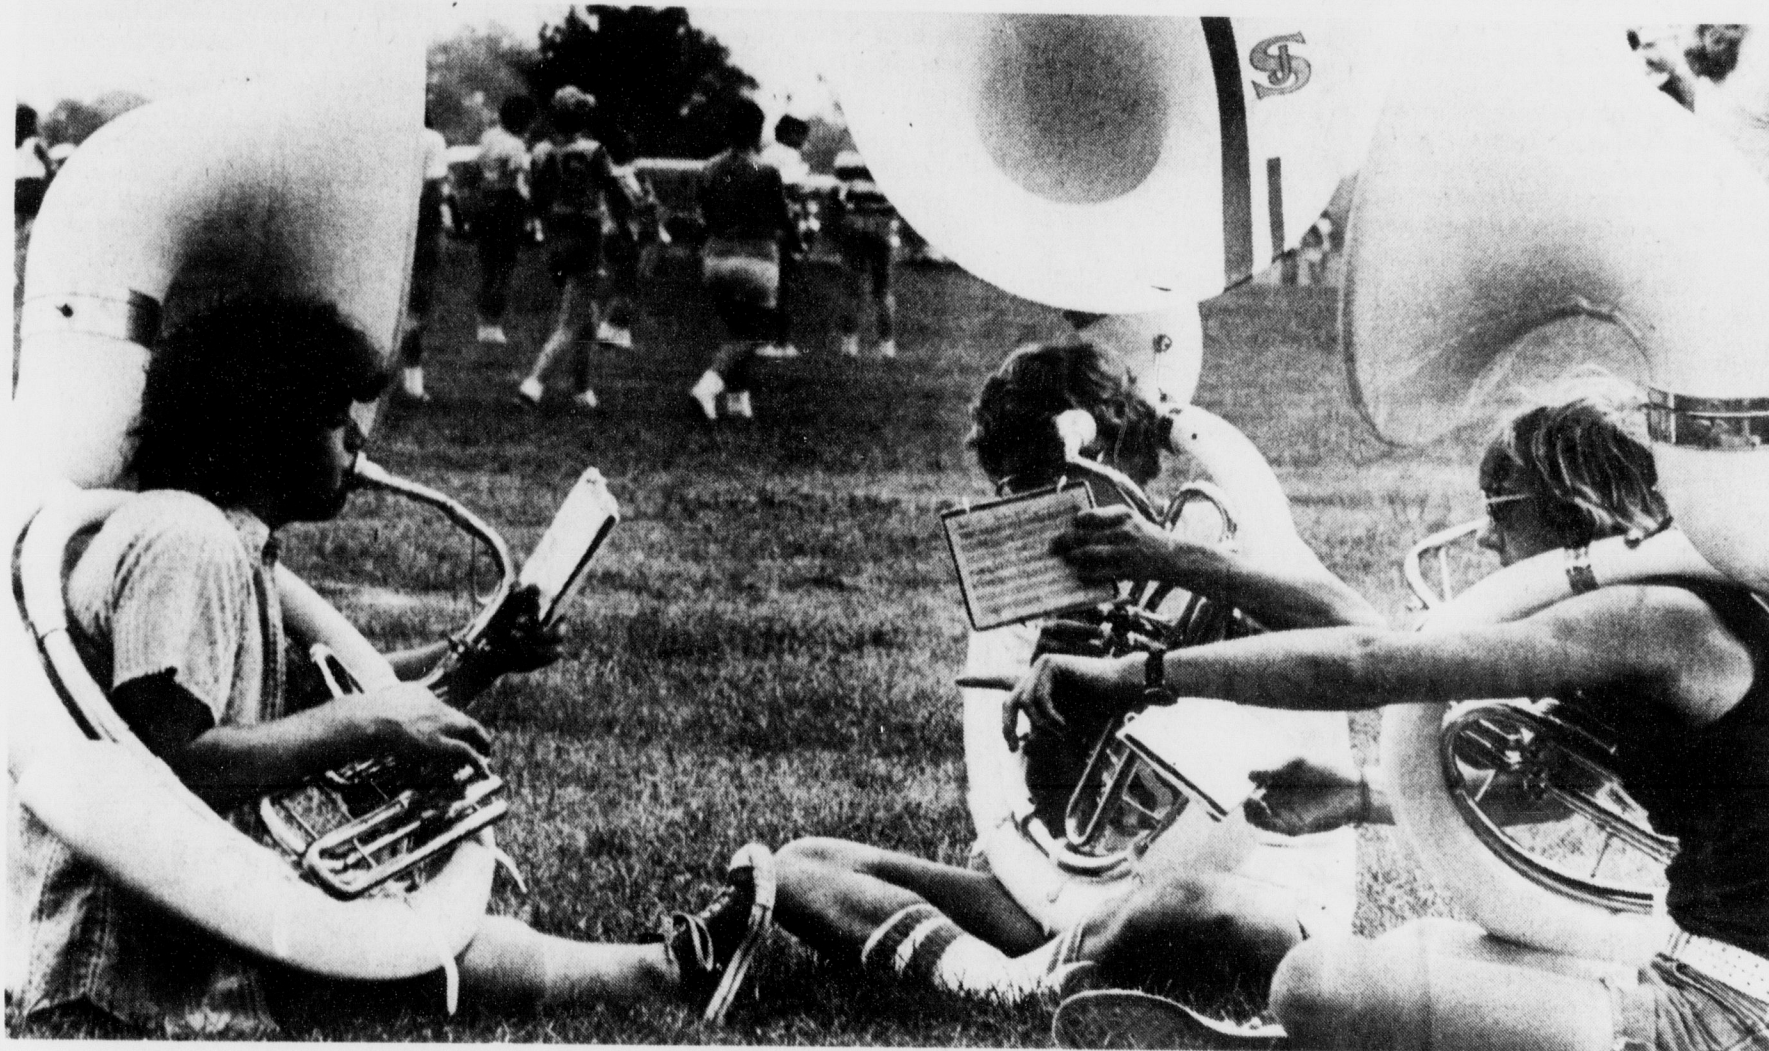

When a woman enters menopause (time when periods cease) which is usually in the 40s, she faces an especially tricky time with regard to contraception. Ovulation during this time can still occur but can be very irregular. This can result in an unwanted pregnancy much later in life than is acceptable to the couple and cause a fair amount of distress. These pregnancies are also attended by much higher risk of abnormalities in the baby, especially Mongolism. By the time you reach 15 months after the menstrual periods have stopped, the risk of pregnancy occurring is quite low, but not unheard of. Many doctors recommend use of contraception several years after signs of the beginning of menopause. Some physicians prefer the use of oral contraceptives for this purpose as these drugs also supply estrogen which diminishes naturally during menopause. Copyright 1973.

Rep calm after arrest for heroin possession

By PAUL VARIAN
United Press International
State Rep. Dale Warner, back on the job just one day after his arrest on heroin charges, had some advice for his friends: "Don't worry about it. Everything's going to be all right."

This was the message he passed on time and again Thursday in response to telephone queries from concerned colleagues and loyal friends.

"I've got all these people worried about me. I don't know what they think," the 32-year-old lawmaker confided to a reporter between phone calls at the Capitol office.

"I'm spending just about all my time comforting people. This has all been so interesting."

Warner, a Republican from nearby Eaton Rapids serving his fourth term in the House, was arrested in a raid on a Lansing motel room Wednesday on charges of possession and use of heroin.

A female companion, Nancy Witherspoon, 24, Lansing, also was arrested. Witherspoon was arraigned Thursday on a charge of possession and ordered held when she was unable to post $1,500 bond. A third person in the room, Greg Bailey, 25, Lansing, was detained briefly and later released.

Warner, arraigned Wednesday and released after posting $3,500 surety bond, said he was "personally very confident" that he would be cleared in the case. He also said he felt the incident would ultimately serve a positive purpose.

"Something keeps coming to me — that something good, really worthwhile, is going to come of this," he said. "It's a feeling I have. I think this is going to work out."

Though he acknowledged his political future has been brighter, Warner said he has no plans to resign from office. He displayed an aura of calm and did not seem worried about the prospect of spending up to four years in jail. He said that even after his arrest, "It took me two hours to realize that they were serious."

"All I took yesterday was a Contact," he said, exposing his arms for examination.

The lawmaker disputed the official version of the details of his arrest, but said he had no intention of publicly airing his version.

However, a House colleague, Rep. De Forrest Strang, R-Sturgis, said he and others felt Warner's arrest may have been set up.

"There's a lot of feeling that this could be a frame-up," Strang told Warner during a visit to his office. "I mean it."

Ingham County Prosecutor Raymond L. Scodeller, when told of this sentiment among some lawmakers, said: "Who's going to bother framing him? He's peanuts. Just because he's a legislator, so what?"

Scodeller said a state police crime laboratory analysis of a syringe Warner allegedly was trying to dispose of when arrested showed there was heroin in the syringe. He said results of a blood test taken on Warner proved negative or showed there was no evidence of the drug in his body.

As a whole, state officials reacted to Warner's arrest with shock.

Gov. Milliken called the incident "unfortunate and tragic" and said that until proven otherwise "we should assume he is not guilty." House Speaker William A. Ryan D-Detroit, offered similar advice.

MAGRUDER'S ATTORNEYS GIVE TERMS

2nd guilty plea entered

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jeb Stuart Magruder, former deputy director of President Nixon's re-election committee, pleaded guilty in federal court Thursday to a single conspiracy charge in connection with the Watergate case.

Magruder was the second former Nixon campaign aide to agree to cooperate with federal prosecutors in exchange for being allowed to plead guilty to a single charge.

Frederick C. LaRue pleaded guilty on June 27 to a single count of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica deferred sentencing of Magruder until after any future Watergate trials.

The judge read a letter from Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox to Magruder's attorneys which gave the terms under which the former administration aide agreed to cooperate. In exchange, the prosecutor agreed not to pursue any other potential charges against Magruder arising out of the Watergate affair.

He was charged with conspiracy to unlawfully intercept wire and oral communications, to obstruct justice, and to defraud the United States.

The prosecutors charged that Magruder and unnamed co-conspirators carried out "a strategy to unlawfully break into the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee . . . and unlawfully intercept various wire and oral communications." As part of the conspiracy, the charge said that the co-conspirators broke into Democratic Party headquarters in May and June of 1972 and that on June 17 "certain of the participants in this activity were apprehended at the scene of this break-in."

Authorities vote to stop gas sales

DETROIT (UPI) — A group representing more than 40 per cent of Michigan's service station dealers has voted overwhelmingly to stop selling gasoline the week of Aug. 19-25 to protest federally ordered price rollbacks.

The action will "tie the Detroit area up in knots," predicted Charles Shipley, executive director of the Service Station Dealers Assn. of Michigan Inc.

The vote came Wednesday night at a meeting attended by some 400 service station dealers. The resolution to stop selling the gasoline in protest of the Cost of Living Council's order rolling back gasoline prices was passed without dissent.

The council, under Phase 4 of President Nixon's economic controls program, ordered dealers to decrease prices beginning Sunday so that the markup is the same as was in effect Jan. 10.

Shipley called the council's decision on gasoline "shocking and completely unexpected."

He claimed the new regulations will force many dealers to sell at a loss and will drive "the good dealers out of the retail gasoline business."

At the meeting, Shipley predicted the oil companies would "within 30 to 60 days drive the gasoline price up at least one cent higher a gallon than it is today."

"There isn't going to be any money ending up in the retailer's pocket and the consumer isn't going to save anything," he said.

He explained the service stations will remain open for maintenance and repairs, and would also sell gasoline to "persons engaged in public health and safety."

He said the dealers did not want to inconvenience the public, which he termed "our best friends," but "there is no other way to dramatize our problem."

Delivery of local mail by business will begin

By GARY KORRECK
State News Staff Writer

By mid-September, the Independent Postal Service of America hopes to be servicing a number of area businessmen, its chief operating officer Robert Sutter said.

The Lansing-based operation, located at 5800 Executive Drive, is the first independent branch outside of the Detroit area in Michigan and will eventually serve as the base of operation under its new title, Independent Postal System of Michigan.

Sutter, an MSU graduate, said responses from area merchants has been good and he is busy planning a grand opening.

"I've been out about three or four weeks now and I have been very well received," Sutter said. "Mostly, we'll handle third-class mail to begin with but in a few months we think we'll be ready to handle other types."

Currently, the independent service is allowed to handle only second-, third- and fourth-class mail, but only about 10 per cent of the U.S. postal system's business is in first-class mail.

"The U.S. Postal System is headed for disaster," independent service founder Thomas Murray said, "and we have a lot to offer as far as speed and efficiency goes."

"We're inspired to do a better job without the giant bureaucracy and red tape around our necks," he said.

Rates vary on a complicated scale, according to Sutter, but he indicated that they are still less than those of the U.S. postal system.

"We're handling mostly third-class mail right now and our basic rate for a package three ounces or less is four cents. The U.S. system charges 4.8 cents and up," Sutter explained.

Despite the fact that the independent service is admittedly in competition with the U.S. postal system, local officials say they have had no problems thus far.

Sutter said there were no hassles or resentment in the area and pointed to a recent visit from a U.S. Post Office Dept. public relations man as evidence of good relations.

"He was very nice," Sutter recalled. "Basically, we're doing the same things and though they won't admit it, I think they're glad to get someone to take some of this mail off their hands."

From its base in Lansing, the independent service will begin by servicing the areas in and around Lansing and East Lansing including Okemos, Haslett, Dimondale, Grand Ledge and Eaton Rapids.

Murray also has plans to locate the organization's computer operations in the Lansing area and establish offices as far north as Sault Ste. Marie.

"Right now, we've got between 150 to 175 routes," Sutter said. "We're concentrating on an area which includes around 60,000 homes. Eventually, we'd like to have 8,000 routes each servicing 400 homes."

People from Chad fighting starvation

ROME (AP) — People living in Africa's drought-stricken Chad are fighting starvation by eating tree leaves and roots, the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization said Thursday.

The organization said it would begin increasing its emergency food airlift today.

The U.N. organization has hired a DC4 from Norway to airdrop food grains in the Salamat area in south-central Chad. The Norwegian plane already has picked up 4½ tons of baby food in Geneva. The food was donated to Chad by the League of Red Cross Societies.

Belgium has placed a Hercules C130 U.S.-made supply plane at the disposal of the U.N. organization. The plane will fly food from Khartoum, Sudan, for airdrops in Chad starting Tuesday, the organization said.

The U.N. agency has been flying food supplies from Sudan to Chad with one chartered plane.

A message arriving at the U.N. food organization's headquarters from the U.N. Development Program office in Chad reported that the situation in Salamat "has become desperate. The local population is eating leaves and roots."

The U.N. Development Program report estimated the number of people in Chad affected by famine to be 100,000.

Torrential rains, too late to break the drought with fresh crops, have isolated many parts of Chad, the report said.

Chad appears to have the worst drought conditions of the countries hit by the drought in Africa, a U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization spokesman said.

FOR LECTURE-CONCERT SERIES

Sales up for season tickets

Season tickets sales for MSU's 1973-74 Lecture-Concert Series are 15 per cent ahead of last year, indicating the largest advance sale in the series history.

As of this week, only 25 per cent of the season tickets remain available, said Ken Beachler, Lecture-Concert Series director.

Season ticket sales continue until Sept. 7, but, said Beachler, "there is a possibility we may sell out before that date."

The best ($20) season tickets for both the "University Series" ("A") and the "Lively Art Series" ("B") are completely sold out.

With several weeks to go, current advance sales almost equal the record season ticket sales for the 1965-66 Lecture-Concert season.

"It is interesting to note," said Beachler, "that pianist Van Cliburn was an attraction on the 1965-66 season as he is this year." His performance Saturday, Oct. 27, will be the second attraction of the "University Series."

Among the numerous attractions on the two series are pianist Rudolf Serkin, dance companies such as Agnes DeMille's Heritage Dance Theatre and Maurice Bejart's Ballet of the Twentieth Century, and such theater productions as "No, No, Nanette" and "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

City housing unit meets, organizes

East Lansing's new housing commission, created by city council to help improve local living conditions, has begun its work.

The nine-member group met twice this week to organize itself, learn about state and local housing laws and get ready for its first public meeting in late September.

Created by city council resolution on June 26, the commission will work to bring local rental housing up to new, stricter city maintenance standards and density requirements.

The nine members, who were appointed by council on August 6, have been directed to monitor enforcement of the new standards, arbitrate tenant-landlord disputes and promote low cost rental housing programs and recommend to council ways to bring East Lansing's rent levels into line with the lower rents that typify the Lansing metropolitan area.

Two student renters, one landlord, three homeowners and three housing professionals were appointed to the commission.

CBS still intends to show 'Bones'

By JAY SHARBUTT
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The CBS Television Network says it still intends to show "Sticks and Bones" tonight, despite a lack of sponsors and the fact nearly half of CBS' 184 Friday night affiliates won't carry it.

The show, postponed in March, isn't pleasant. It's a strong, bitter drama about the homecoming of a blind Vietnam veteran who ultimately commits suicide at the encouragement of his family.

With such a play, no sponsors and mass defection of affiliates, why is CBS still broadcasting it? The network says it's simply because CBS' president Robert D. Wood, is keeping his word that it would be shown.

He made that promise in March when he postponed the play. He explained then that CBS felt the show might prove "unnecessarily abrasive" to millions of Americans whose attention at that time was focused on the return of U.S. prisoners of war from Southeast Asia.

He said that though the drama concerned "some of the uglier aspects of human nature," it nonetheless "had great creative integrity."

He said it would be broadcast "when the context of its showing will be less distressing and its possible application to actual events less immediate." So it's on tonight.

But a CBS spokesman says at least 91 affiliates declined to carry it, 20 more refusals than last March before its postponement. He said the stations gave no reason for their refusals, nor is it customary for them to do so when rejecting any CBS show.

A network source said there's no indication the stations were pressured by outside groups to reject the show. "I think they just hated the thing," the source said, referring to station managers.

The show was adapted for TV last year by Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival, which produced the award-winning Broadway version of "Sticks and Bones."

Papp, who says CBS paid $525,000 for the TV version of the play, sharply criticized the network when the show was postponed. This week, he was less critical.

"It wasn't done in the spirit of saying 'well, this must be shown because it's an important work,'" he said. "I think it's being shown because they didn't want to carry the onus of not having put it on the air."

WKZO refuses to run program

MSU television viewers won't be able to watch the controversial "Sticks and Bones" show on either of the two CBS affiliates carried in the East Lansing area.

Both WJIM-TV, Channel 6 in Lansing, and WKZO-TV, Channel 3 in Kalamazoo, have refused to run the controversial show which was postponed March 9.

WJIM just announced Monday that it would not air either "Sticks and Bones" or a rerun of a two-part "Maude" program. In Kalamazoo, WKZO administrative vice president Gordon Anderson said Thursday the station had previewed the show twice and each time decided it was inappropriate for broadcast.

Channel 3 is one of 10 channels carried by National Cable in East Lansing.

The Detroit CBS affiliate, WJBK-TV, Channel 2, will carry "Sticks and Bones" but it cannot be viewed on the East Lansing cable system because the cable company does not have permission from the Federal Communications Commission to carry the Detroit CBS affiliate.

The State News incorrectly reported Wednesday that WJBK was carried by cable television serving married housing.

ASMSU to debate trustee advisers

The ASMSU board is expected to discuss and approve a proposal to put student liaison - advisers on the board of trustees at a meeting scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday in 328 Student Services Bldg.

The proposal will allow ASMSU to appoint three undergraduate students and the Council of Graduate Students to appoint one graduate student to sit with the board in public meetings of the trustees and be included in some private sessions.

Also headlining the agenda will be the expected vote approving several committee appointments to all University committees.

The board was supposed to have voted on both of these items during its July meeting but failure to achieve a quorum prevented the voting.

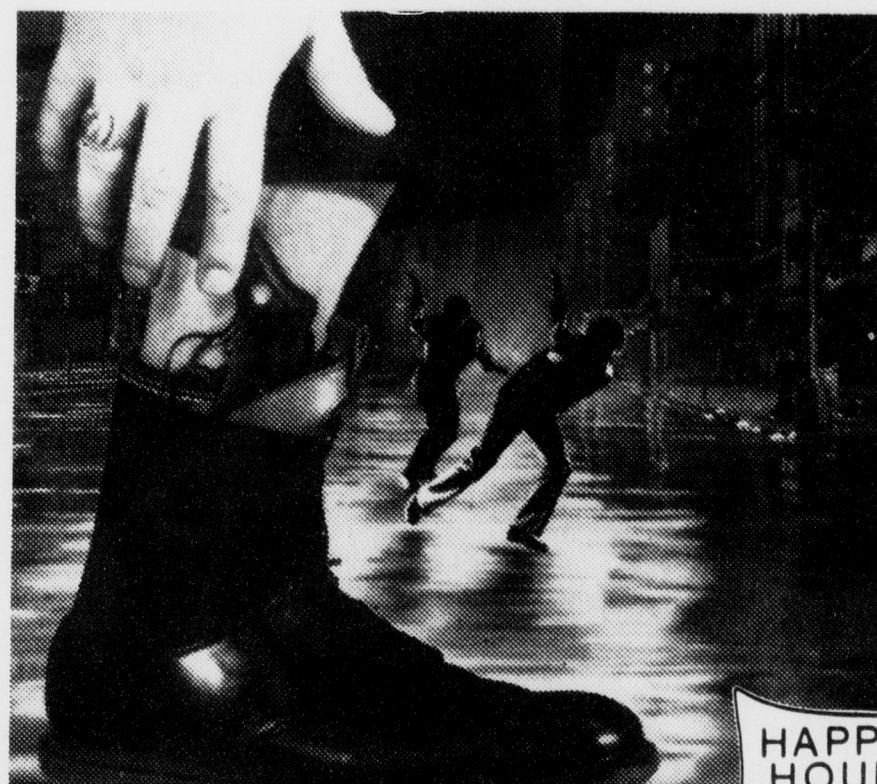

ASMSU President Ed Grafton is also expected to report to the board on his activities with the Student Publications Committee.

Off - Campus Council representative Charles Massoglia had challenged Grafton's participation in the committee's closed hearings in July, charging that he would initiate recall proceedings if Grafton did not make the committee activities public to the board.

Massoglia, however, said this week he will not be at the meeting.

'MORNING NEWS' NOT LIKE 'TODAY'

CBS show offers no competition

By KATHY ESSELMAN

State News Reviewer

The "CBS Morning News" with Hughes Rudd and Sally Quinn premiered Monday, Aug. 6 and it is unfair to review any series before it has had time to settle in.

With this in mind, it seems that at this time the "CBS Morning News" offers no competition to the NBC "Today" show.

For 20 years the CBS network has tried to loosen NBC's grip on the early - morning ratings. This time CBS took triple precautions.

They hired a beautiful blonde newswoman away from the Washington Post. They publicized the show heavily. And they premiered it during a black week, when ratings don't appear. You don't have to worry about Nielsons then.

Executive producer Lee Townsend, former editor of the New York World Telegram & Sun, seems to be styling it after "60 Minutes." Yet, at best, it seems a flabby imitation. Thursday morning after the President's Watergate speech offers a good example.

The "Today" show which runs from 7 to 9 a.m. devoted their second hour to the speech with the exception of a fifteen - minute segment committed to a live interview with an author.

The "CBS Morning News" from 7 to 8 a.m. committed most of their program to the address.

However, they cut away from Watergate to a weekly compilation of news footage gathered by affiliates in the Midwest. A worthy feature, but it could have waited until tomorrow. And Maria McLaughlin had a feature on Babe Ruth's old home in Baltimore.

"Today" show featured live interviews with commuters

PIRGIM's latest price survey indicates food price increase

PIRGIM's fourth grocery store survey in the Lansing area once again showed an increase in food prices since Phase 4 began. The results released Thursday from this survey showed a 6.2 per cent increase. A similar survey released Aug. 2 revealed a 5 per cent increase.

This week's survey differed from previous surveys in that Meijer's in Lansing who had been the lowest priced store in the three earlier surveys, was replaced by Wrigley's at South Cedar Street in Lansing as the lowest with a market basket of $43.48. Meijer's on West Saginaw Street was second with $43.55 and A&P at North Grand River Avenue third with $43.62. At the opposite end of the survey, Eberhard's at South Logan Street had the highest market - basket of $47.41 with Kroger's at South Logan Street and Eberhard's at West Saginaw Street following with baskets of $46.35 and $46.00 respectively.

PIRGIM's "Project: Grocery Prices" is aimed at supplying the consumer with information necessary to help combat high food prices and cause consumer pressure on stores to help keep food costs down.

According to project coordinator Ron DeCook, since the beginning of Phase 4 the lowest increase in the market basket is 2.5 per cent and the highest is 10.6 per cent.

"The most ambitious blue movie yet made—and the first that women appear to enjoy as much as men—is 'The Devil in Miss Jones.' Written and directed by Gerard Damiano and photographed with exceptional elegance by Harry Flecks, it makes the usual materials of hard-core porno serve a dramatic purpose every bit as valid as the country-house garden parties of Henry James. Mr. Damiano is at once a moralist (suicide is the unforgivable sin on which the plot of the movie turns) and a hedonist, for whom the naked human body is the beginning and end of joy."

in a Chicago subway station. They showed the reactions of two families to President Nixon's address, one positive and one negative, one Northern, one Southern, both Nixon supporters. They reflected the spectrum of congressional response. And they emphasized at least four times that public response had favored the President. It was a textbook example of good electronic journalism.

CBS, unlike NBC, doesn't seem to take its morning news show seriously. They interviewed only Daniel Inouye of Hawaii on the Nixon address. As a member of the committee subpoenaing the tapes, he registered disappointment about the President's reluctance to release them.

The lack of fresh material in CBS's newscast bespeaks a lack of commitment. Certainly CBS could compile a tough, incisive look at public and governmental response to the President's address on Watergate if it were broadcast in prime time.

to hold a benefit concert which would possibly draw up to $15,000 in revenue. But officials from Pop Entertainment were unavailable for comment on the feasibility of that suggestion.

Legal fees

Carr said, however, that James Anderson, leader of the citizens' group, has agreed to payment by December. Carr would not comment further on what action would be taken if the citizens do not have the necessary funds.

Taxpayers, on the other hand, are paying for city and highway department bills throughout the suit. In addition to the legal fees (being handled through state attorney general's office, amounts for which were unavailable), the highway department will have to reimburse the T.A. Forsberg Construction Co. of Okemos for labor costs incurred by the delay.

Forsberg engineer Charles Klepak said this week he could not run the computer to tally the costs they would assess the state because the entire amount could change if the court rules in favor of the alternate plan. He said the costs would be chiefly for labor, and added the firm would be available to complete the project in the fall.

Accidents

Meanwhile, as of this week, 11 accidents have been reported at the intersection since June 13, the day the protesting began.

Highway officials cite about 227 accidents in the past five years and say the intersection is the third heaviest accident area in East Lansing. He also said the design of the intersection is outdated by 40 years.

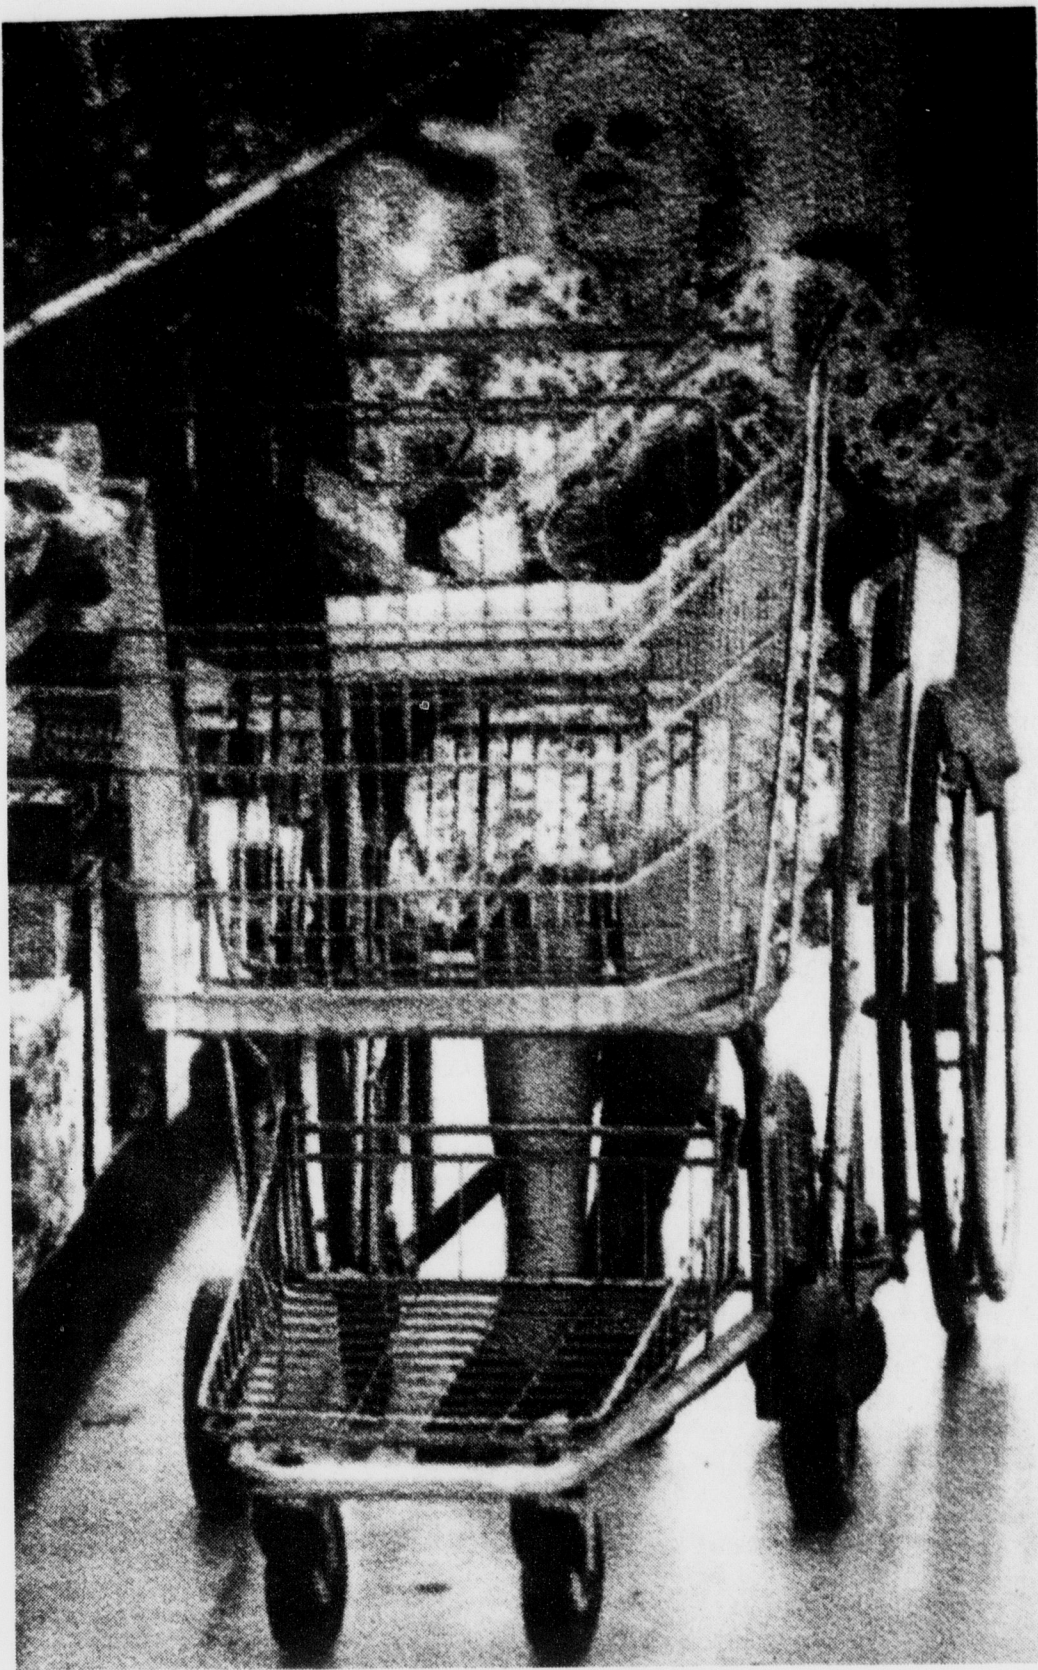

"There you only have 9-foot lanes while the standard is 12 feet. Subtract a couple of more feet for curb space and that isn't much room for the heavy volume of traffic which flows through there," Kusma said last week.

The modified proposal will cut exactly .19 of an acre off the green median or a 10 per cent loss of the median area. But officials are quick to add that this will in turn widen the lanes to 12 feet with the left turning lanes narrowed one foot to 11 feet.

Improvement

Technically, the data show that the intersection is highly in need of improvement. Experts say a measure of the quality of an intersection is its capacity to handle a given amount of traffic at a given time in the day.

William Taylor, professor of civil and sanitary engineering, explained last week that determining this</

HIGHER FOOD BILLS OCCUR

Effects of devaluations felt

News Analysis

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — American consumers are now feeling the worst economic consequences of two dollar devaluations: sharply higher food bills.

Few people inside or outside the government foresaw that result when the U.S. currency was first devalued by President Nixon in December 1971 and again in February this year.

But now the Nixon administration and many economists and businessmen share the view that the dollar's steep tumble in the past two years has had a significant impact on U.S. food prices.

How much, nobody knows. It is not the only, and perhaps not the major, reason why food prices have climbed as sharply.

But the government's attitude about the effect on the U.S. economy has changed dramatically since 1971. John B. Connally, then serving as treasury secretary, remarked that most Americans wouldn't notice the dollar had been devalued.

A spokesman for President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers said the administration now sees devaluation as an "important" and substantial factor in the food-price spiral. Consumer food prices have increased by more than an annual rate of 20 per cent since January.

The two devaluations, along with a third big decline in the dollar's value this spring, came at a time when nations around the world were beginning to experience tighter food supplies and rising incomes.

The dollar's drop in value suddenly made U.S. agricultural products relatively cheaper overseas. This fueled the already high demand for American food products, stepped up exports from the United States, and reduced available supplies here.

Tighter supplies of agricultural products, including such key commodities as feed grains, have driven up prices in this country.

The administration believes that food prices would have gone up anyway, even if the dollar had remained stable. But Americans might have been spared part of the overall increase if the dollar had remained stable, McKnight said.

The Agriculture Dept. said that exports of U.S. farm products rose by a stunning 60 per cent in fiscal 1973, reaching a record $12.9.

It gave three reasons: failing crops in some countries, rising incomes and the dollar changes.

Among those airing the view that the dollar's decline has affected U.S.

food prices are economist Paul Samuelson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, former Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin, and Dr. Sidney Jones, assistant secretary for economic affairs in the Commerce Dept.

The dollar was devalued by 8 per cent in December 1971 and by 10 per cent in February. In addition, the values of several key currencies were increased in relation to the dollar.

The dollar dropped steeply in value in recent months after most major industrial nations decided to let their currencies rise and fall freely against the greenback.

"The dollar is a badly undervalued currency that is hurting our economy," Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns told Congress recently.

The show is directed by Mark Lerner, a former Waverly High School student.

The show will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Aug. 24 and 25 at Waverly East Junior High School.

Survey shows sex attitudes becoming much more liberal

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The latest Gallup Poll shows American attitudes toward premarital sex, topless waitresses and nudity in magazines have become much more liberal since a similar survey four years ago.

The new poll shows 48 per cent of those questioned believe premarital sex is "wrong," compared to 68 per cent who expressed that opinion in the 1969 survey.

The people surveyed this year were asked: "Do you think it is wrong for people to have sex relations before marriage or not?"

In addition to the 48 per cent who said it was wrong, 43 per cent said it was not wrong and the remainder had no opinion.

Fifty-five per cent of those surveyed in the latest poll said they would be offended by nude pictures in magazines and 59 per cent by topless waitresses. The comparable percentages for the 1969 survey were 73, magazines, and 76, topless waitresses.

The polling organization noted that American opinion on nudity in magazines remains more puritan than attitudes in Britain, where a recent poll showed only 28 per cent objected to nude magazine pictures.

Forty-five per cent of Roman Catholics found premarital sex "wrong," while 53 per cent of Protestants expressed the view. The attitudes were reversed in the 1969 poll, when 72 per cent of Roman Catholics and 70 per cent of Protestants said they thought sex before marriage was wrong.

The poll showed most tolerance toward premarital sex among people in the East, where 38 per cent of those interviewed found premarital sex wrong. The percent with that view was 41 in the West, 51 in the Midwest and 58 in the South.
