

Researchers urge public colleges to more than double tuition fees

By LINNEA BOESE
State News Staff Writer

A second research group has recommended that public colleges and universities more than double their tuition fees, but several MSU administrators say this would hurt students from middle-income families.

The Committee for Economic Development, a private research group sponsored by business and industry, called for the tuition hike along with an increase in financial grants based on need and more federal student loans.

The committee recommendations parallel those of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education and the College Entrance Examination Board.

"This system would price higher education out of reach for the middle class," Stephen Terry, asst. vice president for finance, said.

Tuition charges at public colleges now cover 25 per cent of instructional costs, but the recommended hike would increase this to 50 per cent, bringing it closer to the 60 per cent covered by tuition charges at private colleges.

The expanded system of financial grants would give more aid directly to needy students and less aid would be given to institutions. The higher tuition charges would partly make up the loss at public colleges.

The committee said a larger federally operated loan system would benefit middle and upper-income families, who would be paying more of their public college costs but would be excluded from receiving grants.

The report has come under attack nationally by the National Student Lobby and organizations representing public institutions, who have called it an attack on the middle class student and a representation of the views of business and private colleges.

Robert Perrin, vice president for University relations, said Monday the loan and grant system "would certainly exacerbate the problem for the middle-income student, who would have to mortgage himself for years to come."

He said MSU administrators think the current system, with students paying about one-third of instructional costs and state subsidizing the rest, is far more preferable than massive tuition increases to the student.

MSU has an obligation to provide education at the lowest possible cost to the student, he said.

An effect of a change in tuition policy would be to improve the competitive position of private institutions by reducing the gap between public and private tuition.

At private colleges tuition is presently about four times as much as at public colleges. A tuition hike such as that proposed by the Carnegie Commission would make it only about two and one-half times as much.

Terry said that it makes no sense to take money away from public institutions just because private schools are hurting.

"We think it is akin to removing your appendix because my stomach hurts," Terry said.

Private schools should find their own answers to funding problems rather than take money from the public colleges, he said.

ACCUSED OF RACIAL BIAS

Edison Co. found guilty

FROM WIRE SERVICES

DETROIT — Detroit Edison Co. was found guilty of racial discrimination Tuesday and assessed $5 million in punitive damages.

In a 70-page ruling, U.S. District Court Judge Damon J. Keith said Detroit Edison was guilty of discriminatory practices in hiring and promoting employees. He ordered sweeping changes in these practices.

The decision followed a 1971 suit filed by a group seeking better opportunities for blacks at Detroit Edison. The government joined in the lawsuit under provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Detroit Edison employs over 10,500 persons and supplies electricity to 1.6 million customers in south and eastern Michigan.

Keith said the evidence collected during the three-month trial "was overwhelming that invidious racial discrimination in employment practices permeates the corporate entity of the Detroit Edison Co."

U.S. Atty. Ralph Guy said the decision was unusual because it awarded damages to unknown persons — those who may have wanted to work for Detroit Edison, but did not apply because of the company's reputation.

In the ruling, Keith said the $5 million damage award was intended to punish the company.

He ordered the company to place the money in the court, which will screen persons who consider themselves victims of the hiring system before awarding funds.

"We will look at them very, very carefully," a spokesman for Guy said. "We want to see if they applied or have proof they wanted to work at Detroit Edison."

The judge ordered the utility to also make changes in its testing practices.

Company lawyers did not immediately indicate whether they will appeal.

Prison escapees held in 6 Kentucky killings

FORT THOMAS, Ky. (AP) — Two fugitives allegedly shot and killed a minister and his two children, then killed three more persons in an 80-mile flight across Kentucky before their capture Tuesday, police said.

Officials said the federal prison escapees were wearing the minister's clothing when arrested by Fort Thomas Police who were on the lookout for a stolen auto.

The two were identified as Wilmer Scott, 35, Chattanooga, Tenn., and William Sloan, 24, Louisville. Both were charged with murder and moved to the state reformatory at Eddyville, Ky., a maximum-security prison.

They fled the Federal Building in Lexington Monday afternoon along with Roy Collins, 24, Lima, Ohio. Collins broke his leg and was captured immediately by U.S. marshals.

Sloan and Scott commandeered the auto of Mrs. Robert Ewalt as she waited to pick up her daughter and another girl at a school directly behind the Federal Building, police said.

Police said she was forced to drive to her home where the abductors bound her and her other two children, aged 11 and 12, with telephone cord. After stealing a .22-caliber rifle, several kitchen knives and $6 to $8 in cash, the pair drove off in her car. No one was injured.

After the pair was captured at Fort Thomas, across the Ohio River from Cincinnati, they told police of the Lexington killings, officers said.

They found the body of the Rev. John K. Barnes, 47, the nude body of his daughter, Francine, 18, and that of his son, John E., 14, in the bathroom of their home near Lexington. The minister's widow, Mary Agnes, was attending an Episcopal Church convention in Louisville.

Police said the family's German shepherd dog apparently had been beaten severely.

The gunmen also drove to a motel at Falmouth, where the night manager, Elva Harper, 64, and two brothers, David and Monroe Sizemore, Hyden, Ky., were shot to death.

COGS to take IRS to court

By BOB OURLIAN
State News Staff Writer

The Council of Graduate Students (COGS) is planning to take the Internal Revenue Service to court by next March.

The reason behind the court action, some 50 COGS representatives were told at the year's first meeting Monday night, will be to appeal five income tax refund denials of graduate teaching assistants audited by the IRS.

Janet Brashler, vice president of COGS in charge of graduate welfare, told the students that while graduate teaching assistants are required by law to pay income tax, graduate research assistants are not.

"The government claims that graduate teaching assistants are paid for services rendered," she said, "and that graduate research assistants don't pay tax because research is an educational experience."

Beth Andrus, president of the graduate organization, said, "We say there is no difference between the type of work the graduate teaching assistant does and the type of work the graduate research assistant does. The reason either needs the money is to complete his education."

Money for either category comes from two different sources. Graduate research assistants get their money from direct federal aid for the research project, Andrus said, which is treated by the government as a scholarship or fellowship, which is nontaxable.

Graduate teaching assistants, however, are considered to be employed by the University and their paycheck comes out of University funds which come from various sources.

Andrus said that because the money comes from different sources, the IRS taxes one and not the other.

"There's not much difference in what we do," Andrus said, "it is the difference of where the money comes from. And the law assumes that if money comes from a federal grant, it is a fellowship or scholarship."

Last spring there were 1,416 graduate teaching assistants out of 2,300 graduate assistant appointments. The research assistants numbered 811.

Five teaching assistants who claimed full exemptions on their 1973 returns were audited by the IRS and forced to repay their refunds along with interest which the IRS said the refunds had accumulated during the months the teaching assistants had them.

They repaid and Dan McNeal, legal counsel to the graduate organization, filed for another audit to prove the IRS wrong and request a refund for the students.

Requests like this, Andrus said, are "systematically denied" by the IRS.

However, all but one of the denials have been received by the audited students. The last denial is expected by the end of the month, Brashler reported.

This final denial will trigger action by McNeal on the students' behalf. After obtaining the necessary affidavits, McNeal will file with the Federal District Court in Grand Rapids for a hearing. The hearing will come toward the end of winter term at the latest, Andrus said.

Price increase slated for milk starting Oct. 15

By MICHAEL OGOREK
State News Staff Writer

Milk prices may jump 1½ to 3 cents per quart in Michigan supermarkets after a wholesale price increase by Michigan dairymen begins Oct. 15.

Jack Barns, general manager of the Michigan Milk Producers Assn., said the 1½-cent per quart wholesale increase is necessary to compensate for higher costs of feed and for lower production.

The producers association is a farmers' cooperative of 5,600 members, about half of all Michigan dairy farmers, that sells milk to dairies.

Barns said the price increase might offset high costs and low returns that have caused 500 Michigan dairy farmers to go out of business over the past year.

Barns said that milk production in Michigan was down 6½ per cent or almost 10 million gallons — worse than the 4 per cent decrease nationally.

The price increase in Michigan coincides with a nationwide increase in wholesale dairy prices.

An Associated Press survey showed that milk producers across the country raised prices this week, generally about 50 cents per 100 pounds of milk. One hundred

Massage parlor 'students' happy

By ACE BURGESS
State News Staff Writer

Going to a massage parlor is a lot like going through registration, but with a bit more pleasure between coming and going.

That's what this curious writer recently found out while visiting one of several local massage parlors in the Lansing area.

The similarity between the two starts at the door but it doesn't end there. Before entering one of the establishments, I was told that a ticket was needed or — in registration lingo — a permit to enter.

That problem was quickly resolved when a fashionably dressed young man, stationed near the door, took my 50 cents and opened the door.

After he explained that everyone pays this fee upon entering, he directed me through a narrow hallway to a bar-type counter where another young man greeted me.

The second man asked me to fill out a couple of forms — one was a free 30-day membership card.

The membership card was similar in size to an MSU ID and writing on the back said, "This card acknowledges that the holder hereof is a bona fide member of American Massage Parlors, Inc., and that he is entitled, upon payment of club dues and club membership, to enter the club premises and to engage in, upon payment of service fee, services and facilities offered to members."

Getting the membership card free was worthwhile, since the $15 service fee, which covers only 30 minutes of "service," is no small cost.

Ah, the pain of registering. Now only the fun was left.

A lovely lady — let's call her Sue — escorted me through another hallway into a dimly lit room.

I was impressed with Sue, because she was more than I had expected. Instead of being a beat-up old bag, Sue was young, and very much alive in a dark-blue one-piece body shirt. She told me she was about 23.

Upon entering the room, Sue gave me a towel and said to take a shower. That was easy enough to do, since the shower is in the small 6 by 12-foot room. There was also a bed, a blacklight, a desk, a mirror and a laundry disposal bag.

After I took the shower, I listened intently to Sue outline the many different courses available to her "students."

At the beginning of our session, she was quick to point out that for the service fee, she was only obliged to give a topless back rub.

Extras, she said, would cost anywhere from $15 up. She said last year it was $5 cheaper, but added "the price of meat has gone up."

Sue says most of her customers don't mind the higher price, because they're

S. Viet battle reports disputed

South Vietnamese reports of the heaviest battle around Saigon since the January cease-fire may have been slightly inaccurate. While the Saigon government said Tuesday a regiment of North Vietnamese troops supported by a Viet Cong battalion attacked two government battalions, soldiers who were in the action reported that the battle was set off by a government assault on a long-standing Viet Cong bastion. A spokesman gave final casualty figures of 183 Communist soldiers killed and 100 wounded or missing, though soldiers said a government figure of nine government soldiers killed was too low.

In Cambodia, Khmer Rouge insurgent strength along the capital city of Phnom Penh's southern defense perimeter has reportedly tripled in two weeks.

Soviets nab Jewish protesters

While U.S. Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz talked about trade relations with Soviet leaders, 30 police officers arrested 10 Jewish demonstrators who were protesting antiemigration policies.

"We discussed the principal economic questions in a probing but very, very friendly atmosphere," Shultz said of his talk with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, which followed by a day a less friendly talk with Communist Party Boss Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Meanwhile, the official Soviet news agency, Tass, published a story, "Violence is Typical of American Society," reporting the mugging of Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., in Washington as a "social evil of Capitalist America."

Kreisky rejects Meir request

Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky refused to reverse his decision to close a transit camp for emigrating Russian Jews. Kreisky turned down a request by Israeli Premier Golda Meir, who had flown to Vienna to confer with Kreisky. Kreisky said, after a 1½-hour meeting with Meir, that he had proposed as an alternative that the United Nations take responsibility for the camp. Meir did not comment. The Austrian government agreed Saturday to close the camp in exchange for the release of hostages held by Palestinian terrorists, provoking a strong protest from Israel.

In Washington, the Washington Star-News reported a quiet Nixon administration move to persuade Kreisky to allow Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union even if the camp is closed.

HEW announces new agency

The creation of a new federal agency to fight drug abuse, alcoholism and mental illness was announced by the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). The Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration, made up of three coequal institutes, will be headed by Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, former dean of the school of medicine at the University of Southern California and one-time assistant HEW secretary for health and scientific affairs.

Elks OK change to admit blacks

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks voted overwhelmingly to allow blacks to join. The vote, tabulated at the Chicago national headquarters of the nation's largest fraternal order, was 1,184,675 to 309,276. It ratified a change in rules, deleting the word "white" as a condition of membership. The change was approved at the national convention in Chicago in July.

St. Croix murder toll rises to 19

The murder toll for the tiny Caribbean island of St. Croix rose to 19 in the last 13 months with the slayings of two young American women and an island resident. The Justice Dept. ordered the FBI into St. Croix in September 1972 following eight murders during a robbery of a country club. Five island residents were convicted of the murders. Two months later, two were killed in a restaurant shootout. To offset the island's crime image, Virgin Islands legislators are holding a convention there of U.S. lieutenant governors.

Agnew probers to add meets

BALTIMORE (AP) — The grand jury investigating Vice President Spiro T. Agnew is quickening its pace in search of kickback evidence, by planning two work sessions this week, starting today.

Leading off the new testimony, a source said, will be a reluctant witness, William J. Muth, a former Democratic Baltimore city councilman who has been active in raising funds for Agnew campaigns for governor in 1966 and for vice president in 1968 and 1972.

Muth, apparently resorting to Fifth Amendment protection, refused to answer questions Thursday when the 22-member jury finally started the case involving Agnew. It came months after the vice president was formally notified by a Justice Dept. letter that he was under criminal investigation. The source said that Muth, now office manager for an engineering firm, would be granted immunity and forced to testify under the threat of being sent to jail for contempt. It was not disclosed what Muth is expected to tell the jury about his connections with Agnew.

The jury previously has been meeting regularly only once a week, on Thursdays.

Since Aug. 23, when it handed down a 39-count indictment against N. Dale Anderson, the Democrat who succeeded Agnew as chief executive of Baltimore County in 1966, the jury has been in session only three times — including last Thursday when it

Hearings resume today

WASHINGTON — Donald L. Segretti, the political saboteur who pleaded guilty to federal "dirty tricks" charges in Florida, will be the leadoff witness when the Senate Watergate hearings resume at 10 a.m. today.

The committee is reported likely to shift soon to examining activities of Democratic campaigners in 1972.

Former aides to Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., the Democratic nominee for president in 1972, were questioned by the committee staff.

Britain yields to Iceland's threat, pulls vessels from disputed area

LONDON (AP) — Britain ordered its naval vessels out of disputed fishing waters around Iceland on Tuesday, yielding to the island nation's threat of a diplomatic break.

Prime Minister Edward Heath announced Britain's decision to quit 12 hours before a deadline set by the Reykjavik government for the withdrawal of three Royal

Foreign aid ceiling refused by Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, nearing a final vote, refused by a one-vote margin Tuesday to cut $134 million out of a $1.23 billion foreign economic aid bill.

It rejected, 47-46, an amendment by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, to set a $1.1 billion limit on foreign aid authorizations for the fiscal year ending next June 30.

It adopted, 68-25, another Church amendment to require approval by Congress for the expenditure of some $250 million this year in repayments of foreign aid development loans.

Church said his proposed $1.1 billion foreign aid ceiling, about $400 million under President Nixon's budget, was an attempt to hold the line on government spending without destroying the foreign aid program.

Navy frigates and three tugs.

He did so, he said, on the assumption Iceland will allow British trawlers to go on fishing in the 50-mile zone that Reykjavik has claimed as its own fishing grounds.

"The navy and the tugs will return if this assumption proves to be wrong," Heath wrote to Icelandic Prime Minister Olafur Johannesson.

At the same time he invited Johannesson to summit negotiations in London to get some sort of plan to permit British trawlers to go on fishing in the zone, as they have been doing for two centuries.

He has in mind a catch limitation agreement that would enable the trawlers to bring back something like 130,000 tons of fish a year for the next two years or so. Iceland last year proposed an upper limit of 117,000 tons.

Johannesson accepted Heath's invitation and said he would come to London Oct. 15.

In previous talks with the British, the leader of Iceland's coalition government has refused any commitment allowing British trawlers to go on working the fishing grounds.

The climbdown by the British government took some heat off the United States, now revising a defense pact with Iceland.

Salt damage inspection

The de-icing salt used to keep Michigan roads clear during the winter often ends up on the white pine trees which border many of the state's highways. Some trees, such as the Australian pine, are not susceptible to the salt damage. Experimenters are looking for evergreens which can withstand the splashing of salt water during the winter.

Salt reportedly kills road pines

By CHRIS DANIELSON
State News Staff Writer

Michigan's state tree, the white pine, will not grow along the state highways due primarily to the heavy use of de-icing salt in the winter.

This distressing fact is one of the first findings of a five-year research project which began in 1971 and is being conducted by Harold Davidson, professor of horticulture.

The program, which is designed to specify what types of trees can thrive along highways, has received $50,000 in funding for its first three years. Most of the money is being used to plant test trees in the Detroit and Lansing area, Davidson said.

Appropriations have been channeled through the Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station by the state legislature, he added.

A dissertation prepared as part of the project by former graduate student Luther Moxley shows that salt dehydrates the needles of white pines planted along state highways. When enough needles are lost, the whole tree dies.

Since the salt used to remove ice from the roads is not only splashed on the needles, but also deposited on the tree in atomized form or dissolved into the water supply, most trees susceptible to it are killed.

Davidson noted that some pine trees — such as the Austrian pine — are not affected very much by the salt. As a result of these findings, the only evergreens the Dept. of State Highways plants are Austrian pines, Robert Muller, department landscape architect, said Tuesday.

When federal funds became available for tree plantings in 1966, almost one-half of the evergreens planted were white pinus, but most of these have since died, Muller added.

About 95 per cent of the trees planted by the department are financed through an interstate highway program in which the federal government picks up 90 per cent of the bill, he said.

Since the planting emphasis is upon urban landscaping of interstate highways, Davidson's research project will help the department to determine what kinds of trees to plant, Muller explained.

As yet, there is no feasible alternative to salt for de-icing, Muller added.

Davidson said that the researchers will try to find out what the protective mechanism is that allows some trees like the Austrian pine to be more tolerant of salt than others.

The more than 1,000 test trees planted are also being checked for damage from auto emissions such as lead and other air pollutants, he noted.

While trees attract many tourists to Michigan in the fall, and make the state a pleasant place to live, they also serve as a guide to drivers at night and in snow storms, and can even be used to change snow patterns and reduce noise pollution in massive plantings, Davidson added.

By MIKE GALATOLA

Action on the controversial question of blanket grading was tabled by the Academic Council at its Tuesday meeting.

The Council voted overwhelmingly to instruct the Educational Policies Committee (EPC) to reword its proposed amendment to the Code of Teaching Responsibility that dealt specifically with the practice of awarding a fixed classwide grade.

The EPC's proposal read: "Course grades will be determined by the instructor's assessment of each student's individual achievement, judged by a common standard applied to the class as a whole."

The code presently requires instructors only to inform their students of how the course grades will be determined and of any special attendance rules for the class.

"The amendment represents no change in the grading policy," Harold S. Johnson, chairman of the EPC, told the council. "Its intent is to remind the faculty of the present grading system."

But several council members thought the proposal was too vague.

"What does a common standard mean?" Anne C. Garrison, chairman of the University Committee on Building, Lands and Planning, asked Johnson. "Does this mean grading by a curve or grading according to several sections of a course?"

Parking prohibited on campus streets by Abbott entrance

Rush-hour congestion at the Abbott Road entrance to campus has forced University officials to prohibit on-street parking on campus near the entrance between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. Cpl. George Groll of the Dept. of Public Safety, said Tuesday.

The new regulations go into effect today.

Academic Council tables action on question about blanket grading

"Some of my colleagues think the amendment is too ambiguous," Herbert C. Rudman, representing the College of Education, said. "They ask if no distinction is to be made between graduates and undergraduates or between majors and nonmajors in a course."

Johnson said after the meeting that the proposal would probably be reworded to read, "applied to a common standard of performance."

"The EPC may well decide to include in the revised proposal a blunt statement, 'Blanket grading is not permissible under the grading policy,'" Johnson said.

The council also discussed the thorny problem of duplication among University courses. Martin Fox, representative for the College of Natural Science, said a Fisheries and Wildlife course recommended by the Curriculum Committee covered material handled by the Dept. of Statistics and Probability.

"There's also a lot of philosophy of science courses in other departments besides philosophy," Bruce L. Miller, College of Arts and Letters representative, said. "If academic governance can't solve this matter, it's not really working."

The council instructed the Steering Committee to choose a committee to study the problem.

Deputy registrar policy adhered to by city clerk

A recent statement by East Lansing City Clerk Beverly Colizzi that local citizens could become deputy registrars at any time is apparently being adhered to.

A State News reporter had no trouble becoming a deputy registrar Tuesday, despite a report that Colizzi's office had refused to deputize a young man Monday.

Colizzi said last week that it had always been her policy to deputize those who cannot attend a regular group training process as long as they study registration literature and can answer questions about it.

Gail Wernette, 467 S. Case Hall, who tried to be certified as a deputy registrar Monday, told the State News Tuesday that he had been told he had to wait until enough citizens applied for certification to form a 10-member deputy registrar class.

However, a State News reporter — who did not identify herself — was allowed to become a deputy registrar on request Tuesday.

She was earlier told that she would have to wait for a class to be formed. However, when she said she was ready to take the required test, she was permitted to take it, passed it and became an official deputy registrar.

The policy for certifying deputy registrars first came under question Sept. 25, when Colizzi was criticized for rushing city council candidate Mary Sharp through the deputization process.

Carol Smith, a deputy registrar and advocate of Nelson Brown and Margaret McNeil, two candidates opposing Sharp, complained that Colizzi let Sharp become a deputy registrar but refused similar "exceptions" for other people. Colizzi replied that anyone could be excused from the deputy class.

Registration to vote in the Nov. 6 election ends Friday.

Students should pick alternatives to overcome job-monitoring blues

Students suffering from the job-monitoring blues can expect no quick relief, but should be aware of certain alternatives to avoid a repeat performance of last year when 200 students lost their jobs due to Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) regulations on student employment.

What started as a supreme misunderstanding between the financial aids offices of several universities and HEW's Office of Education whiplashed into unemployment for some MSU students and a financial headache for the University.

The entire process stemmed from an HEW regulation which required universities to know the amounts that students receiving federal assistance earned on campus. The basis for the requirement is the belief that a student's job should be computed into his financial "need" package. This meant monitoring on-campus jobs and, for some students who exceeded their "needs," it meant losing their jobs.

Until 1973, according to University officials, this regulation was not strictly enforced. HEW insists this stipulation has always been enforced. A special subcommittee on education for the Committee on Education and Labor in the U.S. House of Representatives is trying to resolve the mess, but is caught in the middle of the conflict.

Some alternatives are now open to students caught in the monitoring bind. A guaranteed Student Loan program will soon be administered through MSU for students who are unable to borrow from regular banks. Eligibility for the work study program and Educational Opportunity Grants has been relaxed so that more students will qualify for these forms of aid.

Most students presently receiving federal aid have a combination package of loans, grants and jobs. Students should watch their packages carefully, and if necessary, see a financial aids counselor and have their package reshuffled. Reducing the amount of a loan to increase job money allotments could be one solution.

It is unlikely that the issue over job monitoring will be resolved in the near future. The best idea for the student affected is to plan ahead and try to take advantage of any flexibility that is offered in a program.

Those job-monitoring blues are being treated, but they are a long way from being cured.

Classroom smoke not just hot air

As students rush into fall term classes once more, the age-old problems of smoke, ashes and sneezing allergies confront both the smokers and nonsmokers.

For the smoker, a few puffs during a boring lecture can keep him awake or calm his nerves before that first quiz that looks like a final exam. For the nonsmoker, the puffing person next door could be dropping ashes all over a $35 purse and creating a smoke screen to boot.

For those who consider the issue full of hot air, it should be taken slightly more seriously. Instructors should take class polls to determine student attitudes toward smoking and, if necessary, have separate sections of the room for smokers and non-smokers.

Individual students who smoke should also take on the personal responsibility of asking the person or persons seated next to him if they mind his smoking. Students probably will not see room monitors enforcing "no smoking" signs in the near future. Only cooperation by both smokers and nonsmokers can lead to a more peaceful coexistence in the classrooms.

The State News welcomes all letters. Letters should be typed to a 65-space line and triple spaced. Letters must be signed and include local address, hometown and student, faculty or staff standing.

Absolutely no unsigned letters will be accepted. Letters may be edited for clarity and conciseness to fit more letters on the page, but definitely will not be edited for content.

Sharp criticizes editorial on new council member

To the Editor:

I may be a "has-been liberal" and a "Johnny come lately" conservative, but I am shocked that the State News sees fit to question and in fact "attack" the appointment of a black woman to the East Lansing City Council, on the grounds she may be "too conservative," before she has attended even two meetings of council.

And to discover that this opinion is based on a review of this person's voting record as a member of the Planning Commission is getting beyond the bounds of credibility when I know her voting record. Do you care to research it issue by issue?

What about her voting record at the Sept. 26 council meeting?

I was only one of four who voted for a new face, a new color, and a new dimension on city council — but who decided a black woman was not acceptable because "her background and political philosophy differs vastly from the student electorate." Says who?

Have the black members of your editorial staff, if any, concurred with your editorial of Sept 25?

Budgetary boondoggling

To the Editor:

Why is it that MSU can spend $40,000 renovating Denny Stolz's office, yet they can't get enough money together to keep the Intramural program alive without a $10 registration fee for each team in each sport?

A recent State News editorial denounced the new assessment as another curse of inflation. May I submit that this kind of budgeting is characteristic of a boondoggling administration, whose priorities are set with virtual disregard for the needs and desires of the students.

Let us not forget that this is the same administration that desecrated a beautiful path along the Red Cedar River by Shaw Hall last spring with a $12,000 slab of concrete. The old argument of trying to please the alumni and other financial sources just will not wash.

This University's primary concern must be its students.

A blowing, decomposing whale wheezes into "thought control"

By WILLIAM SAFIRE
New York Times

WASHINGTON — Like a beached whale, the Senate Watergate committee is wheezing and blowing in its final throes, a hulk that has begun to pall as a tourist attraction and poses a problem in its disposal.

Presidential speechwriter Patrick Buchanan struck a blow for Banquo's profession by sinking a few practice harpoons in the quivering beast Wednesday.

The Ervin committee has degenerated into a congressional method of leaking other people's memoranda; its chairman reiterated his half-hearted objection to the character assassination that is routinely practiced on any witness it calls.

Buchanan, the most effective administration witness to date, pointed to leaks from committee sources that appeared in the nation's most prestigious newspapers, which falsely implied that the conservative writer had a hand in spying activities. The press did not lie about the sources: the sources were the committee staff, busily engaged in its own political "dirty tricks."

Senator Ervin "deplored" the use of leaks to smear innocent people and blacken reputations without recourse; counsel Samuel Dash stoutly denied it; with all the cluck-clucks and tut-tuts and deplorings that went on, it sounded like a barnyard funeral. Everybody agreed with Buchanan that such encroachments on civil liberty were indefensible.

Of course, nobody suggested taking any action to end the character assassination process. The way to do that would be for one of the senators — Howard Baker would be appropriate — to gather up three or four of the leaks, put the committee staff under oath one by one, and find out who is having all the fun.

Under the threat of perjury or contempt, which is what witnesses must face, the people who are being disloyal to the committee and dishonest with the public would soon spill the beans. That is how good judges make sure no leaks come out of their grand jury rooms from officers of the court. Threatening to put a few "reliable sources" in jail would pose no threat to press freedom and would do a service to the Bill of Rights.

Do you suppose Senator Baker will do this? Of course not. He will go on deploring, talking about fairness and withholding judgment until all the facts are in, and doing nothing to stop the perversion of individual rights, for a simple reason: senatorial courtesy. Oath-taking would reveal some of the most notorious leakers to be United States senators and their staffs, and one does not embarrass a fellow senator.

Ironically, in the interrogation of conservative Buchanan, the committee has revealed that its work has taken a dangerously illiberal turn. The search is no longer for unethical acts that require legislative remedies, or for ways to "get to the truth" about Watergate. The search now has reached into political strategy.

What right does any arm of government have to demand to know the political strategy, past or present, of any party or individual? Would it be a good idea to send the FBI over to Senator Kennedy's office to ask for the file on his political strategy? Or to convene a grand jury to look into the political strategy of George Wallace or John Connally or Lowell Weicker? No.

Political strategy should be studied and debated elsewhere: a hearing room is not a classroom, an interrogator is not a teacher, a subpoena is not a library card, and a circus is not a seminar. The crack of a whip is in the air, and the ideas of free men struggling to attain or hold power must never be discussed in that kind of atmosphere.

Pat Buchanan is an honest partisan, an ideologue, a man of thought; his ideas of philosophy and strategy deserve the respect of cogent argument, not harassment.

The Senate's Watergate committee, in grilling non-Watergate-related White House aides to hypo its drooping television ratings, has stumbled into a region — in Senator Talmadge's words — of "thought control." The senators should stop thrashing about and start writing a report with some legislative ideas. A decomposing whale can be a hazard to health.

The Doctor's Bag

By ARNOLD WERNER, MD

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at MSU Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

This summer a half dozen of us hitchhiked to the Rocky Mountains to spend some time camping. One of our group started a rumor that had the girls freaked out and made the fellows reluctant to camp near the women. She maintained that bears are attracted to women during their menstrual period and in more than just an amorous fashion. We knew enough to hang our food up high and away from camp, but with all the stuff about women's liberation, it seemed unrealistic to expect the women to put up with similar treatment. Was there a real need for caution and what could we have done about it?

The longer I write this column the more I become convinced that the questions are actually much better than the answers. This particular concern sent me scrambling for some data which turned out to be hard to come by.

One summer in the late 1960s two women backpacking in Glacier National Park were attacked by a grizzly bear. One of the women was menstruating at the time. The wildlife expert I spoke with confirmed this story and recalled hearing one or two other similar reports. Needless to say, the fact that the women were menstruating and were subsequently attacked by the bear does not necessarily indicate a causal relationship. It easily could have been a coincidence.

As well, the bear might have been attracted by bacon or other odoriferous food stuffs, a more likely occurrence when the natural food supply for animals is sparse.

Grizzly bears are known to attack even though apparently unprovoked but the more usual black bear found in many parts of this country, including Michigan, does not attack unless bothered. Getting between a bear and its cubs constitutes being bothered.

Attacks by animals on campers, including backpackers, are extraordinarily rare. On this basis alone, it would seem there was little source for concern. Camping in the more populous parts of the country would give little reason for concern, the greater threat to tranquility coming from other campers. I cannot give you absolute reassurance on the behavior of grizzlies in the Rocky Mountains.

My husband is a graduate student who has just been awarded a minor but significant honor. He is pleased and proud and I am trying to think of a surprise celebration, but my husband doesn't like to celebrate anything — birthdays, Christmas, weddings, graduation, anything.

Why is it that some men are simply unable to loosen up and enjoy being fussed over, or to enjoy making a fuss over someone else? It is frustrating to be so excited for my husband and yet to know that a gift, party or a dinner out would meet with polite indifference.

This is a complex problem. Some people, and it seems to be men more often than women, have been brought up to believe that the expression of feelings, happy ones as well as sad ones, is generally unacceptable. Such people are made very uncomfortable by attention or recognition which would call forth from them some expression of appreciation.

On the other hand, tremendous uncertainty about one's own abilities can result in significant feelings of discomfort every time a success occurs. Since such people might not feel they deserve success, any fuss made over them just increases their discomfort.

In the statement about your husband being proud of his accomplishment this certainly does not appear to be the case.

I have seen it happen that such an incredible fuss is made over all events, be they anniversaries or accomplishments, that all but the most vain would be acutely embarrassed. A few such occurrences can easily condition a person to prefer a private sense of self fulfillment rather than other people's overexuberance. Rather than take responsibility for making a fuss over your husband, you might try giving him an opportunity to plan with you in doing something special you both enjoy as a private and personal celebration.

Determined critics hunt down Agnew

WASHINGTON — You come into Washington from the United States and it's crazy. The big thing is Agnew. A vice president. You've heard of him? Right. Of the United States. Mildly interesting man. A lot of people went very big for him when he used to give it to the press. All right, the media. Really laid it on with a dictionary. Same guy. Interesting man, big spokesman for the good old days, good old ways. Really like to go back there myself, and who wouldn't? Anyhow, Agnew could warm you up about the chances of getting back there, though he didn't have any real suggestions how to make the trip. And for that matter, would you really want to go if he did? I mean, it was great back there in the good old days, but you had to know how to use the clutch, and the TV was only seven inches big, and they still hadn't invented the frozen French fry.

By RUSSELL BAKER
New York Times

And there was no Super Bowl. In school you still had to learn Latin.

Anyhow, that was Agnew's big thing, and he was vice president, a big man in his way, but still . . . Only a vice president. Hannibal Hamlin was a vice president, and Thomas Hendricks, and Levi P. Morton and Garret A. Hobart.

That's right. Of the United States. Of course, that was in the good old days.

Still, only a vice president, yet there it is — the whole city of Washington talking of nothing but Agnew, and will he quit, and who will the President make the new vice president if Agnew does quit. And if Agnew doesn't quit, will anybody answer the phone at the White House when he calls up? And what about the right wing? And while we're about it, what about the left wing? And the single wing?

I go on like this to suggest to you how crazy it is, this city where nobody is interested in anything quite as much as in this poor guy who is in a pickle, and is nothing more than a vice president. And will he quit?

You would think that the big subject would be, is the President going to quit? And if not, why not? And if he is not, and if the Congress doesn't throw him out, why doesn't the Congress quit? Those are interesting questions because the President really amounts to something, and even the Congress amounts to a little, whereas the vice president in this situation doesn't amount to anything more than a red herring, which is a very small fish. So here is the center of the universe as it fancies itself; a place interested only in power as it is always telling you and what it is crazy about is not big fish, but Agnew.

A vice president. May have made a little private money out of public business some years back. May not have. Compared to what the important people in Washington have been up to, it is like being accused of disturbing the peace, driving without a license and committing a nuisance in the park.

That sounds soft on Agnew? In a place like this when the big powers set out to get a man, especially somebody as miserable as a vice president, the inequity may make you a bit indulgent. There is a lot of the bully here. They use B52s on farm animals, cannon on mice, media megatonnage on vice presidents and then lie about it, while insisting their motives are excellent.

Agnew, alleged receiver of Baltimore County peanuts, makes a target for overkill. The small takers, they say in Washington, are always the easiest to destroy. People — that's us — aren't supposed to care about big takers, because we are too small-scale to comprehend the really big private siphonings of national wealth committed by the big timers. The small takers we can understand — we, theoretically, being as small-bore as your average small taker.

So Agnews are the conventional targets for the high rollers. In Washington they have seen this happen too many times. They know how easy it is to commit ruination on the small taker, how hard it is to bring down the people who only take big. After seeing so much floundering in the Watergate business, which involved the ultimate powers, it is reassuring in a place like Washington to see the hunting of a vice president. Vice presidents make easy fall guys.

Thus, Watergate: out of the headlines and into the hunting of the vice president.

POINT OF VIEW

Support your local administration

By C. PATRICK LAROWE
Professor of Economics

I'm out in my backyard, tokin' on a number and baggin' rays, my neighbor comes over.

"Didn't see you at the trustees meeting, Lash," he says. "You missed a real swingin' session."

"What'd I miss?" I ask.

"First off," he says, "they decided abortions can be done at Olin."

"Whew!" I exclaim. "That'll be mighty good news for my chick."

"Gee," he says, blushing. "All this time I thought she was your daughter. Anyway, right after that, Trustee Thompson blew up at Dr. Stack."

"Doesn't sound like Thompson," I says. "He's every other inch a gentleman. Stack must've gotten way out of line to provoke him."

"I dunno," he says. "Trustees were getting set to vote on this new distribution and solicitation rule the administration proposed. Stack wanted to amend it so it wouldn't prohibit petitions or voter registration in the residence halls."

"Sounds right on to me," I says.

"That's when Thompson hit the ceiling," he says. "He said Stack's amendment was irrelevant. He said it was a good example of the board's lack of faith in the administration."

"Thompson said one of the problems this University has is that the trustees aren't standing up for our new prexy."

"What'd Stack say to that?" I ask.

"He said public members aren't elected to constantly rubber stamp the administration's program."

"I have to go with Trustee Thompson on that one," I says.

"How come, Lash?" he asks. "With your record on civil liberties and all, I was sure you'd line up with Stack."

"Look, bub," I says sternly. "You're new here, so I'll give you just a few examples that'll show you why Thompson's right."

"Couple years ago," I begins, "these honky students were having a rap session in the Union on what to do about racism. 11 p.m., when the building closes, comes and goes, they're still in there, having this heavy rap, not noticing the time."

"Our prexy realizes you let folks violate the rules just 'cause you agree with what they're doing, you can't enforce the rules while the next somebody else violates 'em. Called the cops, they surrounded the building, hauled every one of those students off to the can."

"Now I see why you're always praising President Wharton's dynamic leadership," he says.

"Yeah," I says. "But you should have heard the howl the bleeding heart liberals put up. Said the students shouldn't have been busted. New prexy took a lot of heat on that one. Did the trustees come to his aid? No, sir. Not a peep outa 'em."

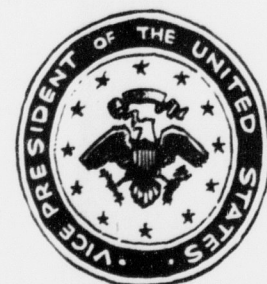

"But the time the trustees really let him down," I went on, "was when he put on that salute at halftime to the prisoners in 'Nam. That was a real clever caper. Got his pals in the Air Force to send four Phantom jets over the stadium in the missing man formation. They make a couple passes, one peels off, in tribute to the prisoners."

"And when your pointy-headed liberals bellowed that the prexy put the 'U' on the side of the war, where were the trustees then? Why, they didn't even pass a resolution praising Wharton for his show of patriotism!"

"Gosh, Lash," he says, "I wasn't here at the time, but that doesn't sound like the kind of thing Wharton would do. Isn't he always saying the 'U' has to be neutral on political issues?"

"Oh, sure he is," I says. "But when he talks about neutrality he's like Nixon talking about law and order."

"You watch what he does, boy, not what he says."

The Vice President and Mrs. Agnew cordially invite you to their home for dinner on a date which is convenient for you.

Nominations for Teacher-Scholar Awards for Junior Faculty and Excellence-In-Teaching Citations for Graduate Teaching Assistants

The undersigned committee solicits nominations for Teacher - Scholar Awards and Excellence - In - Teaching Citations from faculty and students.

Teacher - Scholar Awards are given to faculty drawn from the ranks of instructor and assistant professors who have earned the respect of students and colleagues for their devotion to and skill in undergraduate teaching. To be considered for the award, the candidate must have served on the faculty for at least three terms, but no more than five academic years.

Excellence - In - Teaching Citations are awarded to outstanding graduate teaching assistants who have distinguished themselves by the care they have given and the skill they have shown in meeting their classroom responsibilities. To be considered for the citation, the candidate must have held a half - time graduate teaching assistantship for at least two terms. In addition the candidate must have assumed a significant measure of responsibility for the conduct of undergraduate courses.

Nine copies (original + 8 copies) of the completed application forms and supporting letters are required. Any additional supporting documents may be submitted in single copy. Nomination packets should be certified by the appropriate department chairman and forwarded to: Dr. Dorothy Arata, Assistant Provost, 443 Administration Building.

DEADLINE for receipt of nominations: Monday, 5 November 1973.

MSU vehicle congestion frazzles nerves

Relaxed rules, bikes blamed for problem

By TRISHA KANE
State News Staff Writer

Each class day the supposedly serene MSU campus erupts into mass confusion as cars, buses, bikes and pedestrians battle for valuable sidewalk and road space during class breaks.

Twenty minutes seems a reasonable amount of time to get from one class to another, but with liberalized motor vehicle registration codes and more students and bikes at MSU than ever before, it could take an entire class break to walk a few blocks.

If the congestion has frazzled your nerves and wasted your time, and if you're tired of dodging cars on Grand River Avenue and fighting the masses on the Farm Lane Bridge, don't sign up for 10:20 a.m. classes.

According to Lynn Peltier, asst. director for Institutional Research, 47 per cent of the student body is on campus at 10:20 a.m. Monday mornings, with over 3,500 students concentrated in the Kedzie-Bessey halls area alone.

And a consensus of police, bus driver, motorist and pedestrian opinions say the bicyclist is this year's congestion villain.

Hordes of sidewalk walkers respectfully plod along, grinning and bearing the slow pace, but bicyclists seem to operate with total disregard for traffic regulations and common sense.

A campus bike count conducted by the Grounds Dept. each year shows that bikes on campus have tripled in three years, from 5,100 in 1970 to over 16,000 last spring.

Milton Baron, Campus Parks and Planning Dept. director said only 8,200 bikes were registered by Sept. 28. The remaining bicyclists did not receive rules or maps of bike paths for sensible, lawful operation.

Baron said all campus bike paths have been extended, widened, and renovated with concrete replacing asphalt.

"But bike riders still insist on using roads and sidewalks," Baron lamented, "when the paths are exclusively for their use."

He said $200,000 is currently invested in improvement of bike storage areas with more lights and racks.

Adam Zutaut, public safety captain, said both bicyclists and cars violating motor vehicle codes will be ticketed.

"With 41,500 students and 10,000 staff people on campus almost simultaneously," he said, "controls must and will be enforced."

Just off campus, the congestion on Grand River Avenue is a continuing headache for City Manager John Patriarche. He said chain barriers and shrubbery have been utilized in the past to direct students to crosswalks.

A proposed overpass at Grand River and M.A.C. avenues would only accommodate a small percentage of students who usually cross there, Patriarche said, and would do nothing for bicyclists' problems.

Travel patterns are random and uncontrolled on Grand River Avenue, he said, but youthful speed - sprinting keeps the pedestrian-motorist accident rate low.

Suggested solutions for the congestion include:

- Requiring bicyclists to take written examinations like those required of motorists, including vision and hand-signal testing.
- Requiring bikers to purchase bright rear flags for easier detection by buses and cars.
- Stressing correct utilization of bike paths to keep cars and bikes out of competition for road space.
- Ticketing careless or ignorant motorists and bicyclists.
- Patience, cooperation, respect and common sense.

24 hours a day

When 47 percent of the student body is on campus, getting to class often takes more than 20 minutes. The combined presence of bikes, pedestrians, buses and cars leaves little room to maneuver without fear of accident. The various modes of transportation meet and compete for space in front of Bessey Hall.

State News photos

by Dale Atkins

Congestion villain

Bicyclists must brave busy campus thoroughfares to get from class to class. The number of bicyclists on campus has tripled since 1970. The congestion problem is compounded by some bike riders who ignore traffic regulations.

Common sense

The improved campus bike paths are not being used extensively, and the added load of bikers makes parking bikes more difficult. About $200,000 is being spent to improve bike paths and parking facilities. Common sense is essential for safe negotiation of the campus.

Fuel allocation program bared

FROM WIRE SERVICES

WASHINGTON — The White House announced controls on the distribution of propane gas Tuesday and said regulations to allocate home heating oil will be ready in two weeks.

John A. Love, director of the White House Energy Policy Office, said imposition of "mandatory allocation" may not avert fuel shortages this winter, but would at least distribute available supplies fairly.

Heating oil is needed especially in the Northeast and Upper Midwest where winters are severe, while propane is vitally needed by farmers to dry crops and by residents of many isolated or mobile homes.

The White House unveiled its allocation program as Congress put the finishing touches on legislation that would require the President to set up a comprehensive mandatory program to allocate fuels.

The House is expected to pass such a bill this week, and its action could be quickly approved by the Senate, which already has passed a similar bill.

The measure would require the President to act within 10 days after it becomes law.

Priorities in the House bill would go to the fuel needs of public health, safety, welfare and national defense facilities. Public transportation, government facilities, utilities and agricultural operations would also receive priority.

Both the congressional activity and the White House moves have been spurred by a report from the Interior Dept.'s Office of Oil and Gas predicting a shortage of about 100,000 barrels of heating oil a day even if cold this winter is normal.

Love told newsmen the allocation program would not directly affect fuel prices, still controlled by the Cost of Living Council, but he has recommended that these price controls be removed, both to stimulate additional production and to reduce demand.

A source said President Nixon had decided two weeks ago to impose mandatory heating oil allocation but waited to determine whether it would be necessary to allocate all products.

An Interior Dept. spokesman said his department could handle gasoline allocation if necessary, but that the administration would wait to see if the more limited distillate - oil allocation program would work before considering expansion to other products.

Also anticipated within the next few weeks is an order barring large boilers from abandoning coal and other plentiful high-sulfur fuels and switching to scarce low-sulfur petroleum fuels because of environmental restrictions.

CUTBACKS SAVE POWER, MONEY

Director gives fuel usage tips

By MAUREEN MC DONALD
State News Staff Writer

Students can save money on heating costs this winter and help avert a fuel shortage at the same time by following seven basic steps toward conserving fuel, Barry Brown, director of the Michigan Dept. of Labor, said.

Brown has temporarily resolved the age-old battle of the thermostat, using tests conducted by the National Bureau of Standards. Parents have argued with their children for years about the merits of lowering the thermostat at night. Brown says heat is conserved when the temperature is lowered.

The standards bureau recently conducted tests on a fully furnished four-bedroom townhouse and learned that a saving of 12 per cent heating energy per day is found when the thermostat was lowered 10 degrees for an eight-hour period during the night.

"Proper weather stripping and caulking can eliminate up to 30 per cent of the average heating bill," Brown added.

He said consumers could aid in the conservation of energy this coming heating season by the following means:

- Placing weather stripping and caulking around all windows and doors.
- Installing storm windows or using insulating glass.
- Installing overhead and individual insulation.

- Maintaining an efficient heating plant by keeping air filters and heat transfer surfaces clean as well as providing sufficient air for combustion.
- Closing window draperies at night.
- Reducing air leakage to attics and crawl spaces by sealing all openings around ceiling vents, light fixtures and duct work.
- Turning off utilities when they're not in use.

The labor director stressed the importance of turning off all electric lights, television sets, radios and other appliances when not in use and added "even as small an item as the repair of leaking hot water faucets can save the taxpayer money."

Brown recommends closing off rooms that are not used in the winter but cautioned that if water pipes are exposed, the temperature in the sealed-off rooms should not be allowed to drop below freezing.

On the statewide scale, Gov. Milliken, in urging the heads of all state agencies to work toward solutions of the energy crisis, has stressed the importance of providing sufficient fuel this winter for the food-producing industries.

Michigan Dept. of Commerce Director Richard K. Helmbrecht has called for a "shift in attitudes" on the part of the oil industry while Public Service Commission Director William G. Rosenberg has suggested a conservation program. Public utilities in the state are also proposing energy conserving methods for industry.

State appeals court rules gas tax not subject to vote

By UNITED PRESS
INTERNATIONAL

The State Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday that the two-cent tax increase enacted last year is not subject to a vote of the people.

Part of the two-cent tax is slated for funding urban public transit systems, including one currently planned for East Lansing.

The ruling by the three-judge panel thwarts the petition effort of citizen groups who are attempting to put the issue on the 1974 general election ballot. However, Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley said he would appeal the decision to the Michigan Supreme Court as quickly as possible.

"This decision involves the right of referendum, one of the basic rights reserved by the citizens of Michigan when they adopted the 1963 Constitution," Kelley said.

"Because the constitutional right of the public to reject laws enacted by the legislature is involved, I will move as quickly as possible to secure a review of this decision by the state's Supreme Court so that Michigan's highest court will have a chance to pass on this matter."

The legal action was brought by a number of county road commissions who objected to the diversion of one-half cent of the tax increase for mass transit programs.

Part of this general transportation fund is to be used by municipalities for development of local public transit.

East Lansing officials are counting on the fund to help pay for a planned citywide bus system, which was scheduled to begin operation this week but which has been held up by a lack of available buses.

The appeals court said in its ruling the diversion of the funds raises "a serious constitutional question," but noted that the question had not been raised before the court.

"We therefore refrain from consideration of this issue and leave it for determination in another action or by the Supreme Court," the ruling said.

In early August Kelley

asked the Supreme Court to decide the constitutionality of the referendum, bypassing the appeals court. However, the Supreme Court declined to act at that time.

The suit contended that since the two-cent tax increase came as part of a legislative package appropriating the money raised by the tax, it is an appropriations bill. The Constitution forbids petition challenges of appropriations bills. The appeals court upheld this contention.

The defendant in the case was the State Board of Canvassers, which must validate petition signatures before an issue can be placed on the ballot.

Of the Model 201 cassette deck with chromium tape, Stereo Review in its October 1971 issue said: "The sound quality, especially with the finest play-back amplifiers and speakers, was literally awesome, as was the total absence of audible hiss or other background noise... ## Garfunkel album:natural

By MIKE LA NOUE
State News Reviewer

Allot two years for creation and forget the fact that Paul Simon has produced two solo LPs and listen to "Angel Clare," Arthur Garfunkel's first solo effort since the S and G split. One would probably think that "Angel Clare" is a natural transition for Simon and Garfunkel.

But Garfunkel, drawing from the talents of composers like Jimmy Webb, Randy Newman and Van Morrison has done it on his own, creating an album that just could be better than "Bridge Over Troubled Waters."

Every song is carried with the beautiful tenor voice of Garfunkel and he adds the St. Mary's Choir and several female vocalists who create a vocal blend unsurpassed in any Simon and Garfunkel album that preceded.

The highlight of the album is a song composed by Webb entitled "All I Know."

Art Garfunkel seems to be a lover type of singer — love songs become his style and "All I Know" is a beautiful love song telling of an uncompromising idealist who says "I love you and that's all I know." The song has the ethereal quality present before in the song "Bridge Over Troubled Waters."

"Another Lullaby," also a Webb composition is a song that gives the listener inner strength like the strength of reassurance that a lover gives to his love in a time of need.

If you can buy a copy of "Angel Clare" or borrow one from a friend, just listen to this song before you go to bed.

A must to hear if you're an old S and G freak, is a song called "Old Man." Written by Newman, the tune is told by a young man who's telling his old man goodbye. But the goodbye is strange, "You don't need anybody, nobody needs you," the young man says.

The songs' peculiar morbidity reminds the listener of the theme used in "Most Peculiar Man."

Like any other Simon and Garfunkel release, "Angel Clare" has no bad songs. All songs are well composed. Some are thought provoking, many are ballads, while others like "I Shall Sing," a Van Morrison contribution, add a lightness like the song "Cecilia" added to "Bridge Over Troubled Waters."

A bravo to Roy Halee for excellent engineering is in order.

The Greek instruments, mandolin, bouzouki, the South American charango, the congo drums, plus string orchestrations make a wonderful blend of good vibes.

The church like quality of some songs can be attributed to the fact that part of the album was recorded at Grace Cathedral in New York.

Rules for travel agencies eyed

By DANIEL DEVER
State News Staff Writer

New legislation to regulate the practices of travel agencies in Michigan may soon be forthcoming from a special committee of state legislators investigating consumer complaints against the industry.

State Rep. Casmer Ogonowski, D - Detroit, said Tuesday some legislation will definitely be introduced in the legislature in the near future, even though some spokesmen for the travel industry strongly oppose it.

He said travel agencies who testified at a public hearing in Detroit Monday denounced any possible state legislation in favor of federal regulations now pending before Congress.

But Ogonowski said the federal government has been slow in acting on legislation governing travel agencies.

Meanwhile, Michigan consumers are being cheated and stranded in foreign countries because of the practices of some disreputable travel firms.

Sally Folley of the Consumer Protection Division of the attorney general's office said that so far this year her office has received more than 96 formal complaints about the practices and advertising claims of travel firms operating in Michigan.

She said her office received 186 similar complaints in 1972.

"This does not represent the complete number of complaints because often one person will sign a complaint on behalf of an entire group," Folley said.

She said her office also receives hundreds of telephone inquiries and complaints about travel firms each year.

The special committee will hold two additional public hearings today to hear testimony from travel agencies and consumers. The hearings will be at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. in the House of Representatives chamber in Lansing.

Several local travel agencies contacted, however, said their representatives will not be attending the hearings.

Nancy Washburne of Washburne Travel Center in Lansing said she will not testify mainly because she is not convinced that any legislation will eliminate the problems.

"I am not sure if more bureaucratic red tape will eliminate the fly-by-night travel operators," Washburne said.

Gary Crawford, manager of College Travel of East Lansing, said that some regulations are needed but said he will not attend the hearings.

"Something has to be done but I am not sure legislation should be as harsh as some proposals," he said.

Studentours, an East Lansing travel firm which was the subject of several consumer complaints printed by the State News during the past year, has since filed for bankruptcy.

Folley said Studentours was a subsidiary of the bankrupt firm Vacation Travel of Grosse Pointe. She said Vacation Travel has also operated under the names of Sun Tours and South Wind Tours.

State Sen. Philip Pittenger, R - Lansing, introduced a bill earlier this year which called for the licensing and bonding of anyone selling travel arrangements in Michigan.

A substitute bill has since been introduced, however, which would exempt anyone belonging to two or more travel trade conferences.

State Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D - East Lansing, a member of the special committee, said most travel agencies in the state would not be covered under the bill because of the exemptions.

"The bill seems to exempt everyone but the consumer," Ogonowski said.

Sex discrimination probed by PIRGIM

The City of East Lansing is being accused of using illegal sex discrimination in its hiring practices by the MSU chapter of PIRGIM.

A letter containing the investigative reports and the initial complaint will be read Tuesday night at the East Lansing City Council meeting by Francienne Walker of the PIRGIM - MSU Board of Directors.

PIRGIM claims that East Lansing uses two separate applications for employment. One is a standard application while the other is entitled "Female Employment Applicants Office Skills."

PIRGIM has decided to investigate the matter of separate forms, because of a woman's complaint of what she felt was a discriminatory procedure.

PIRGIM then sent representatives to investigate the forms, by applying for work to the City of East Lansing, and to find out who they gave the office skills sheet to.

PIRGIM claims that only female applicants were given the office skill sheet, even when the position they applied for did not require office skills.

U-M president cautions about higher school cost

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — Without mentioning Watergate by name, University of Michigan president Robben Fleming says he wonders why American universities had so little impact on persons involved in "political deceit, criminal behavior and unethical conduct."

Fleming said in his annual State of the University address Monday night he hopes American schools and colleges "would devote some time and effort to the value area" when planning their curriculum.

"Many of the young people who have testified to political deceit, criminal behavior and unethical conduct are fully equipped with degrees from distinguished American universities," Fleming said. "Why did we have so little impact on them?"

In another area, Fleming warned that students, who now pay about 20 per cent of the total cost of their education, may pay as much as one-third or one-half in the near future.

"Low income families will either find it impossible to send their children to school or find a growing resentment on the part of the lower middle class when a means test gives outright grant money primarily to low income students," Fleming said.

Part-time students now eligible for grant, work-study program

By DIANE SILVER
State News Staff Writer

Part-time students are now eligible to receive money under both the Educational Opportunity Grant (EOG) and the work-study program.

This and several other changes in the guidelines controlling the programs were recently put into effect by the federal government.

The new guideline concerning part-time students

(8 credits or less) is a departure from the former policy which automatically canceled all aid to a student who dropped from a full-time to part-time status.

"This new guideline is helpful to the student taking remedial courses who has been advised to drop a class and concentrate on the one course," William Kenney, associate director of financial aids, said.

Kenney noted that the normal part-time student is working full-time and does not need the money while a full-time student who is forced to drop a class and needs the money loses his aid.

The rule limiting the students who are eligible for the grant to those whose parents contribute $625 or less has also been dropped. Students are now only judged on their need. Needy students are defined as those who could not continue their education without the grant.

The grant can only be awarded to a student after all other possible financial aid programs have been used up.

Modifications of the work-study guidelines include the dropping of the stipulation that eligible students must have a family whose income is $7,500 or less.

In place of the income rule, MSU is now stipulating that eligible students can only receive a contribution from their parents for $725 a year or less.

This new rule does not tie the determination of a student's eligibility to a set income figure, William Wagner, asst. director of financial aids, said. That practice often discriminated against a student whose family had a supposedly high income but had other expenses, such as other children.

This loosening of the financial aid guidelines seems to indicate a trend towards a general relaxation of the strict rules set by the federal government. However, Kenney warned that the prospects for that are dim.

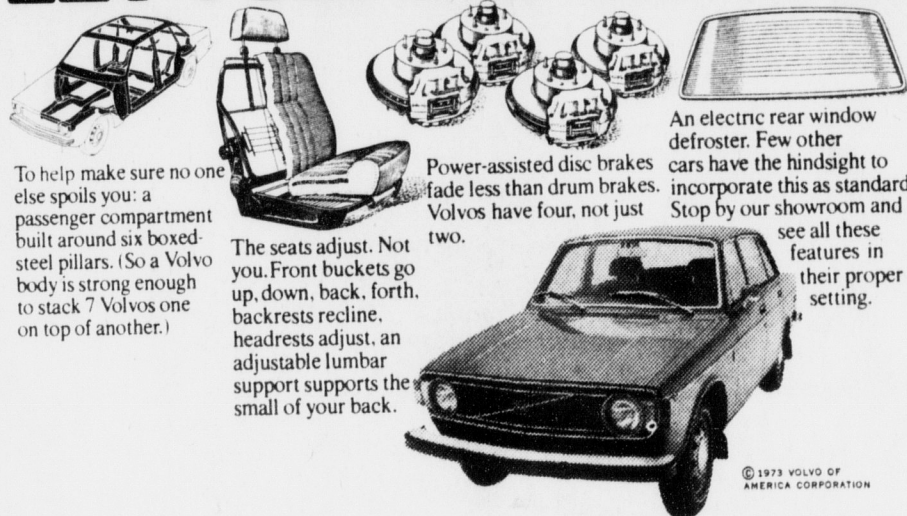

"The rules have loosened up but the Nixon administration is still trying to phase out the grant and the National Direct Student Loan. So, the rules are relaxing but if you have no funds for your aid program it is of no value whatsoever," he said.

GARY SCHARER

Sideline days
over for Niesen

Mark Niesen stood dejectedly on the sidelines Saturday, shoulders slumped and head bowed. He was miserable. He was also embarrassed.

Niesen has played a starting role since coming to Michigan State. He quarterbacked the freshman team three years ago and started at either quarterback or defensive cornerback in his first two varsity seasons. This fall marks his third year as a starter.

But he didn't start against UCLA. You could tell it bothered him. It just wasn't natural for him to be on the sidelines.

Two years ago Niesen didn't start at Wisconsin because he was switched to quarterback only a few days prior to the game, but he came back to start the second half at his defensive position. There has been no other time when Niesen was kept from action.

"I can't remember when the last time was," the quiet Niesen said. "I never sat on the bench either in grade school or high school."

Niesen, a former prep all-America selection from Manistee Catholic Central, was MSU's second leading rusher last season and one of the top tacklers two years ago. In between he has bounced back and forth from the two platoons like a yo-yo.

Versatility always created a starting position for him. Last week the Spartans coaching staff informed Niesen about his reserve role for the Bruins. A sore shoulder was partially responsible for that decision, but there was another consideration.

"They told me that I wasn't hitting as well as I should be," Niesen acknowledged. "They thought that playing quarterback so long may have taken some timing away."

Shocked

Niesen's reaction was expected. "I was shocked," he said. "I didn't say anything. I knew they were disappointed with our performance at Syracuse, but I didn't think that they would shake things up like that."

It was hard for Niesen to stand there watching where he had been playing for so long. It was also hard to accept.

"You don't really feel like you're part of the team," Niesen admitted. "You can't bring yourself to realize that you won't be put in."

The veteran ace didn't think other substitutes would share the same attitude and he offered an analogy.

"If you've never been rich it isn't that bad being poor, but after being rich it's a pretty low feeling when you hit the bottom," he said.

"If I would have never played it would've been different."

Substitutes important

There are others, many who want to play just as badly as Niesen does. But there are only so many positions to fill. For each home game the Spartans dress 80 players, 40 might get in the game. Some never play. Their dreams of grandeur and stardom before 80,000 end in practice sessions and empty stands.

But they're important. They prepare the first two teams for game competition. Sometimes a break and determination moves them up a string. In the meantime the coaches need to keep the "team" in high spirits. It's one of those myriad challenges facing coaches.

Niesen was in a better mood Monday after being told that he would be starting again at Notre Dame. But his reaction wasn't that strong.

"It's made me realize that I have to hit somebody, but I'm not going to do anything different — except for maybe getting a bit more vicious," he said.

Niesen said he couldn't change his game or play somebody else's since that kind of consciousness would result in mental errors and mistakes coming from trying too hard.

Watching a game from the sidelines instilled a feeling that will probably stay with Niesen.

"It was like a bad dream — a real bad dream," he said. "I wonder if he'll have time to remember that feeling against the Irish Saturday."

MSU's intramural program has added many new dimensions in recent years, but probably the most recent expansion has been that of the recreational program.

The program was created with the intent to "provide men and women a chance to compete in activities together and to meet new friends," program supervisor Rich Hoehlein said.

The co-rec program started two years ago with an emphasis on fun and not so much on winning.

"Virtually anyone on campus can participate in the co-rec program including faculty members, graduate students, undergrads and spouses," Hoehlein said.

There have been two main changes in the co-rec programs from last year. Last year you couldn't play on both a co-rec team and an intramural team. This year you are eligible to play on both.

The other change from last year is in the use of the IM facilities. A year ago the women's and men's IM facilities were available for co-rec use only on weekends. This year they are available every day with the exception of the pools.

The co-rec is offering a number of sports this year and Hoehlein says that program officials are very anxious to offer new activities if people are interested in them.

Presently the co-rec's main sport for fall is volleyball. During the winter, basketball, innertube water polo and paddleball will be offered.

Spring term, one-pitch softball, bowling and innertube water polo will be on tap.

"Some interest has been expressed in a touch football league," Hoehlein said. "If the interest is there we'll be glad to start a league."

In addition to the IM activities in the co-rec program, Hoehlein said, "There are about 20 sports clubs available on a co-rec basis including karate, sailing and skiing."

The co-rec program has also expanded into other activities on a weekly basis due to the cooperative efforts of the Married Students Union, the dean of students and the IM office.

From this group's efforts, the gym at Spartan Village Elementary School has been opened from 8 to 10:30 p.m. Monday and Wednesday for recreation activities such as volleyball, table tennis and badminton.

Also, beginning Oct. 11, the same school will be open from 7 to 10 p.m. on Thursday and Friday for the same purpose.

Activities planned for the future include special interest classes and clubs to be conducted in the married housing area beginning winter term.

Anyone wishing information on the various co-rec programs should contact Rich Hoehlein (355-4710) at the Women's Intramural Building.

New Champion

Manono Beamer, senior, displays the form that captured the 1973 Midwest Regional medalist honor for her. Beamer is the fifth Spartan in a row to take the Midwest title. Recent graduate Bonnie Lauer held the title for the first four years.

Beamer emerges as champion, takes golf team's leadership role

By PAM WARD
State News Sports Writer

It's not easy to follow in the footsteps of a giant. It's even harder to emerge as an uniquely talented champion in your own right. Golfer Manono Beamer, a senior, has done both.

For four years MSU was led by recent graduate and four-time Midwest title winner Bonnie Lauer who gained national and state prominence.

This season Beamer had little trouble filling in Lauer's leadership position, becoming the fifth Spartan in a row to capture the Midwest medalist honors.

"Manono is an excellent golfer and a wonderful leader," Mary Fossum, coach of the women's golf team said. "We were very proud of her at the Midwest tournament."

Beamer is new at being No. 1 and her refreshing humility shows it.

"This was the first time I ever won anything that big," Beamer said. "I've taken a lot of second places behind Bonnie (Lauer). I really enjoyed playing with her, though. It gave me something to work for."

Beamer, a food science major, has been playing golf since she was eight years old but views the game more as a source of pleasure than competition.

"I like the competition," Beamer said. "but I like the compatibility the game of golf gives me the most. I enjoy being out there and meeting new people on the course and being able to talk to them about the sport."

Fossum says the Spartans couldn't have a better public relations woman working for them than Beamer.

"Manono has a lot of wonderful qualities besides being a good golfer," Fossum said. "She made many friends for the MSU golf team and has helped our image tremendously."

Beamer's personality and leadership netted her the job as the team's captain this season which she takes as an important responsibility.

"It's important for me to instill some competition in the team, to make them get going," Beamer said. "But our team doesn't really need what I call a leader. We have a good team and a good time. We just need some encouragement."

Beamer hopes MSU, after taking the Midwest title, will be able to win its remaining season matches. She says the Spartans are capable of doing it, but she gives most of the credit to Fossum.

"A major part of our team is our coach Mary," Beamer said. "We couldn't do it without her. She's such an optimistic person who always looks for the best and never cuts us down. It's a good feeling to know that she's pleased with us."

Fourth Bull Bowl
to benefit ALSAC

Comedian-singer Danny Thomas will be on hand at Spartan Stadium for the fourth annual Bull Bowl football clash Sunday at 1 p.m.

The same will pit the Pigs against the Freaks and all proceeds will go to Aid Leukemia-Stricken Children of America (ALSAC).

Composing the Pig team will be area police officers from all ages, while the Freaks team will be made up of young males age 18 and over. The Freaks hold a slim one-game margin in the three previous games, coming up with victories in the first two affairs but losing last year.

Thomas, who has been a staunch supporter of ALSAC for many years, will present special awards during the midway mark of the game.

Game coordinator Mike Harrington is confident of a good turnout this year.

"We have been successful in the past and I don't see any reason why we couldn't get 40 or 50 thousand fans out there Sunday," Harrington said. "We think that having Danny Thomas on hand will be a big asset to the public's impression of this affair."

Tickets are on sale now for $1 and will also be sold at the gate for $2.

Outlets in the East Lansing area for tickets are: Campbell's Smoke Shop, the Brewery, Campus Bookstore, Canterbury Shop, Beggars Banquet, Campus Sport and Surplus Shop, State Discount and Brother Gambit Slick.

DuPree named
Cowboys' MVP

DALLAS (UPI) — Former MSU tight end Billy Joe DuPree the first rookie to become a starter with the Dallas Cowboys since 1970, was named the team's most valuable player Monday for his performance in Dallas' romp over St. Louis Sunday.

DuPree caught six passes and scored three touchdowns in the Cowboys 45-10 victory and was awarded the game ball.

DuPree was the Cowboys No. 1 draft choice last season. He is the first Cowboy rookie to become a starter since 1970 when Cliff Harris and Duane Thomas turned the trick.

"He has a lot of work to do, a lot of hard work, but he can be a great tight end, a great one," said former tight end Mike Ditka, now a Cowboy coach. "He has to improve his blocking and I think he will."

DuPree almost caught seven passes in the Cardinals game, but he dropped one throw.

"He had that one drop and as good hands as he was, this shouldn't happen," Ditka said. "I think he just took his eyes off the ball." "But the kid really has potential. He needs a lot of work on his techniques. He also was a great ability a lot of tight ends don't — the ability to catch the ball in a crowd. Nothing disturbs him. He can also run when he gets the ball. When he started he'd get hit and go down but not now. He's hard to bring down."

Ali to meet Joe

By GREG GALLO
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — After nearly three years, former heavyweight champions Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier will meet in a return 12-round match at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 4, it was learned Tuesday by United Press International.

The Garden has called a major press conference on Thursday to announce the rematch.

Ali and Frazier will receive a lot less money this time than they did when they met in the Garden on March 8, 1971. That night each man collected $2.5 million but this time around they're getting $850,000 or 32½ per cent of everything, whichever works out as the bigger figure.

Both fighters earned every penny in their last fight as Frazier, then the champion, outlasted Ali over 15 brutal rounds to defend his title in what many boxing observers called one of the greatest fights in history.

Since then, however, both Frazier and Ali have fallen on rocky times, each apparently suffering after-effects from their gruelling struggle.

Frazier, in fact, spent a week in the hospital after the last fight and then knocked out Terry Daniels and Ron Stander, two nobodies, before signing to meet big, strong George Foreman in Kingston, Jamaica last Jan. 22.

Foreman pounded a sluggish Frazier to the canvas six times and finally stopped him in the second round.

Frazier, whose long-time friend and manager Yank Durham died last month of a stroke, has had one fight since — a 12-round win over European Champion Joe Bugner in England this summer. Frazier was way ahead on all scorecards but was hurt by the light punching Bugner several times, lending evidence that he had yet to return to his best form.

Ali has stayed active since the last fight, traveling around the world and scoring unimpressive victories, then in March losing a 12-round decision to Ken Norton. In that shocker, Ali suffered a broken jaw. Their rematch on Sept. 10, saw Ali avenge his second lifetime defeat by earning a split verdict.

Many newsmen at ringside had Norton ahead on points and Ali showed his displeasure with his performance that night by taking a swing at his cornerman Budini Brown after the final bell.

Both Joe and Ali are looking to meet Foreman in a title bout, but Ali has openly said he wants Frazier more than anybody else.

Negotiations for the Ali-Frazier return have been going on for two months and Bob Arum, Ali's attorney, only last week admitted Muhammad had agreed to terms and all that remained for the deal to be sealed was for Frazier to put his name on the dotted line.

Meetings

A Confederation of Club Sports meeting will be held at 7 p.m. today in 215 Men's Intramural Bldg. All officers are welcome to attend.

A meeting for anyone interested in platform tennis will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in 327 W. McDonell Hall.

Wilt's new look

State's utilities agency faces rift

By BILL HOLSTEIN
United Press International

At a time when Michigan's utility-regulating agency faces new and major challenges, there are increasing indications of a political and philosophical rift between its one Democratic and two Republican policy makers.

The most visible evidence of a split on the Public Service Commission was a recent request by the commission's lone Democrat, William R. Ralls, for a legal opinion from the attorney general defining the role and powers of the chairman Republican William G. Rosenberg.

Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley, a Democrat, has frequently intervened in rate cases before the commission to oppose rate hikes.

Another sign came earlier this month when the commission ruled 2-1 in favor of granting Detroit Edison a temporary revenue increase of $26.8 million, with Ralls dissenting. Siding with Rosenberg was Lenton G. Sculthorp, the other Republican commissioner.

The differences are emerging at a crucial time for the commission itself because Rosenberg is attempting to restructure it to better enable it to meet challenges brought on by consumer and environmental pressures.

He has brought in new staff members, including the commission's first nuclear scientist, and has plans to make greater use of computers.

"I am a little bit sorry that, during the restructuring of the commission before the record is in, we are having little squabbles," Rosenberg said.

Ralls also has ideas for restructuring the commission. He is pushing for a division to deal with consumer complaints among other things.

The three members of the commission are gubernatorial appointees.

Their job is to regulate gas, electric, telephone and water rates.

The commission makes decisions that Ralls says "are going to touch the pocket books and lives of people in the state as no other state agency does."

The commission is administered under the Dept. of Commerce, but in practice is given a good deal of independence, including its own budget. By law, both political parties must be represented on the commission. Therefore, 2-1 votes along party lines are not unusual.

Some observers feel the heart of the problem is the competition between Ralls and Rosenberg.

Another possible source of personal friction between the two men is the fact that Gov. Milliken went outside the commission to appoint Rosenberg chairman, overlooking Ralls.

Sculthorp says Rosenberg has given the commission "strong effective leadership." He criticized Ralls for allegedly trying to limit the chairman's authority through a ruling from Kelley.

Rosenberg said the apparent friction may subside after the commissioners adjust to each other and that it may be good because it "keeps each of us on our toes."

Panel alleges violations; Penn Central faces suit

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Michigan Public Service Commission has asked Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley to initiate legal action against the Penn Central Railroad for ignoring safety-related directives of the commission.

Commission Chairman William Rosenberg said Monday that Penn Central has failed to respond to 25 orders of the commission in the past year. Most pertained to improper signals at railroad crossings and repairs needed on tracks, he said.

"It's a very dangerous situation; very, very dangerous," Rosenberg said.

Rosenberg said Kelley will either file suit in a state court or intervene in a federal bankruptcy case under way in Philadelphia, where the financially distressed railroad is headquartered.

"We think safety is as high a priority as anything they can spend money for," Rosenberg said.

Kelley charges firms in alleged sales plot

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley charged three out-of-state firms Tuesday with deceptive advertising in an alleged sewing machine and Florida land sales scheme.

The companies, Equitable Development Corp. and Vacation Incentives and Properties Inc., both of Florida, and Market Development Corp. of Ohio, have been cited for unfair advertising and failure to comply with the Federal Trade Commission's rules for games of chance. They were also cited for operating in the state without a license to do business.

Kelley said the companies falsely notified consumers, by mail, that they had either won a prize and a contest or were eligible, as the result of a contest, to receive a prize.

"Consumers were informed that a computer had selected their lucky number as a prize winner in a sweepstakes when, in fact, the so-called sweepstakes was a systematic marketing scheme which resulted in the sale of vacation land and sewing machines," he said.

Victims of the sewing machine promotion were given a $100 cash merchandise certificate which could be used toward the purchase of a zig-zag sewing machine. The price before the discount, however, was artificially inflated, Kelley said.

Many Michigan consumers also were told they had won a two-day Florida holiday, he said. Consumers who accepted the "free" trip found they were required to pay transportation to and from the resort and on specified dates and times were also forced to pay for lodging. Once in Florida, Kelley added, the "winners" were subjected to a high pressure sales pitch designed to sell subdivided or raw land in Florida and Nevada.

The Listening Ear offers anyone who calls 337-1717 someone with whom to talk. Located at 547½ E. Grand River Ave., the center has volunteers manning the phones 24 hours a day. Volunteers go through a 60-hour training program before they start taking calls, which are kept confidential. Here, a volunteer fakes a call for the photographer.

Work on road prompts bus stop, route changes

Starting Monday, the Berkey Hall bus stop will be temporarily inoperative, forcing students to walk some to reach classes there and leave a bit earlier to allow for the short hike.

Due to the major road rerouting project at the Collingwood entrance interchange, Circle Fee and Brody buses will omit the Berkey stop, but will make two other stops instead, campus bus services supervisor, Jack Spencer, said Tuesday.

Both buses will stop in front of the Natural Sciences Building and in front of Eustace Hall, just before the junction of East Circle and West Circle drives, he said.

Fences built to block off the construction project will obstruct the buses' present route along East Circle Drive. Instead, they will pass through parking Lot G north of the Physics - Astronomy Building, then will travel on West Circle Drive until it meets East Circle Drive. Both routes will then continue as before.

Spencer said the temporary stops will be eliminated and the Berkey stop restored when the construction, expected to take six weeks, is completed.

Buses will run on approximately the same schedules as before despite the two added stops, he assured.

Coke available, official insists

By TRISHA KANE
State News Staff Writer

Empty pop machines in many campus buildings are an optical illusion, Robert Herron, manager of MSU Food Stores has said.

Herron claims that despite the 10-day strike of Coca-Cola truck drivers, members of Local 93, AFL-CIO retail wholesalers and distributors union, all machines on campus have had Coke in them at some time or other in the past week.

Coca-Cola route drivers, delivery men and repairmen have been striking since Sept. 21, but three Lansing Bottling Co. supervisors are supposed to be keeping the campus supplied.

Herron said because the supervisors have other full-time jobs, they cannot possibly provide fast service, though they have been doing their best to keep machines filled.

Ten students interviewed said that there had been no pop of any kind during the past week in machines in Berkeley, Bessey, South Kedzie and Wells halls and the Journalism, Natural Science, Students Services and Womens Intramural buildings.

The only reported Coke supplies in campus vending machines were in the Union and Case Hall.

Forest Leasure, Lansing Bottling Co. plant manager, said the reports of empty machines were inaccurate and anyone claiming to be looking for Coke on campus and not finding it was "crazy, wrong and blind."

Herron said that if and when a machine is empty, the delivery men notify a vending service secretary by telephone and the shortage is immediately taken care of.

An unidentified secretary for the vending line said she receives less calls than she should.

"Even before the strike, each delivery man would wait for the next guy to call in about an empty machine," she said.

Robert LaSoy, an officer of striking Local 93, said some machines in heavy traffic areas must be checked as often as three times a day to be kept filled.

"Three supervisors moonlighting as delivery men could not hope to keep machines filled," LaSoy said. "It's a hell of a job for the regular workers to keep up with."

LaSoy said Local 93 decided to strike after five bargaining sessions with Coca-Cola. He said the drivers' demands, originally a 28-point list, were reduced to 10 points for a faster settlement, but a bargaining stalemate brought on the strike.

"Our main demands are for sick days seniority rights, and a cost of living adjustment clause in our contract," he said.

LaSoy said he hoped bargaining would resume later this week but he feared Coca-Cola was hiring men to replace the strikers.

Because repairmen as well as delivery and route men are striking, LaSoy said students will encounter not only empty but also broken vending, cafeteria and grill machines.

Herron said the students are lucky to be getting any Coke at all, but many thirsty students weren't aware that they were so lucky.

Additional drawing planned for lottery

Michigan Lottery tickets going on sale this week will offer ticket buyers a second chance to win a major lottery prize.

Lottery Commissioner Gus Harrison said that beginning with the Oct. 11 drawing and subsequent drawings, two additional numbers, besides the main drawing numbers, will be drawn. Persons matching both numbers will earn $5,000.

Regular weekly number winners will always advance to the subsequent Super Drawing.

Changes in brief called unessential in extradition

Deputy Atty. Gen. Stanley Steinborn said Tuesday that the legal brief tampered with in the case of Robert Williams was not an essential part of the decision to extradite him to North Carolina on kidnapping charges.

"Williams' lawyers had submitted a brief to the governor so the governor asked our legal opinion on the matter," Steinborn said. "As far as extradition proceedings go the governor acts as judge and jury."

Steinborn said that Leo E. Maki, who wrote the original report, was in Grayling at the time the report was finalized.

He said the person who edited the report apparently deleted a portion of the report which said the governor could order the circumstances of Williams' arrest added to the original warrants.

Steinborn also said he believed the point deleted from the report was made to the governor by Williams' lawyers at the extradition hearing.

Williams contends that the Attorney General's Office changed the report in a conspiracy with the State of North Carolina to get rid of him because of his political beliefs.
