

Nixon agrees to release tapes, papers

Information on tapes may solve questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon capitulated Tuesday and agreed to surrender Watergate-related tapes and documents to a federal judge.

Nixon scheduled a nationwide radio and television address on the issue for 9 p.m. EDT today.

"This President does not defy the law," Nixon's lawyer told Watergate Judge John Sirica in announcing that the President will comply in full with a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals order requiring him to deliver White House tapes and related papers.

Nixon's earlier refusal to comply with the order led to his firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and precipitated a crisis of confidence in his administration.

The decision to turn over the tapes was expected to ease the clamor for impeachment.

There was growing support in both houses of Congress for legislation to establish a special prosecution force to replace Cox and to assure its independence from the White House.

Vice President-designate Gerald Ford said Tuesday that a constitutional crisis was avoided by President Nixon's decision to release Watergate-related tapes to a federal judge.

The veteran congressman from Michigan predicted that President Nixon will be vindicated "after the smoke has cleared."

The announcement was made in a packed federal courtroom where Sirica had been expected to hear a White House explanation of why the President did not abide by or seek Supreme Court review of court orders to surrender the tapes.

Nixon announced a compromise offer Friday which he said Cox had rejected but the Senate Watergate committee leaders had accepted. That plan was to turn over the President's written version of what the tapes contain after Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., authenticated it.

He had Cox fired the next day for refusing a direct order to accept the plan and to drop judicial pursuit of the tapes and other White House files.

Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson resigned and his deputy, William D. Ruckelshaus, was fired for refusing to carry out the dismissal order.

Ruckelshaus told reporters Tuesday either Congress or the courts should now set up a new special prosecution force.

The trial of former Cabinet officers John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans was postponed again with both the prosecution and defense still seeking a White House tape and presidential documents.

U.S. District Court Judge Lee P. Gagliardi in New York set Jan. 7, 1974, as the new date for Mitchell and Stans to be tried on charges of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury in connection with a secret $200,000 campaign contribution by fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco.

On the New York Stock Exchange, prices rallied in late trading on the news that Nixon agreed to turn over the tapes. The Dow industrials closed up 5.94 points. Volume rose nearly 3 million shares from Monday's sluggish trading.

In other developments, the dairy industry promised President Nixon $2 million in re-election contributions two weeks before the President imposed import quotas on ice cream and other dairy products, it was disclosed Tuesday.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader's Public Citizen Inc. filed suit in federal district court here charging that the firing of Cox was illegal.

WASHINGTON (AP) — At the heart of the constitutional crisis which has rocked the government for the past five days are nine tape recordings.

What do they contain?

Attempts to obtain an answer to that question have cost the United States an attorney general, his deputy and its special Watergate prosecutor and stirred serious talk about presidential impeachment.

The existence of the tapes was disclosed to a stunned Senate Watergate committee July 16 by a former White House aide who said President Nixon had bugged conversations on his telephone and in his offices.

The recordings were sought by former special prosecutor Archibald Cox in his investigation of wrongdoing during Nixon's re-election campaign last year.

Here is some of what Cox had told the court he had hoped to learn by listening to them.

•Extent of discussion of the Watergate break-in and cover-up among the President and former aides John D.

Ehrlichman and H.R. Haldeman in the President's old Executive Office Building office on June 20, 1972.

•What former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, the President's campaign manager, told Nixon during a four-minute telephone conversation later that evening.

•What the President, Mitchell and Haldeman discussed for an hour and 15 minutes in the President's Executive Office Building office on June 30.

•What the President said during a meeting Sept. 15 with former White House counsel John Dean and Haldeman in the Oval Office. Dean told the Watergate committee the President congratulated him on the "good job" he had done and said he was pleased that the Watergate case had "stopped with Liddy."

•What the President told Dean at the White House on March 13. Dean told the Watergate committee the President said he had approved executive clemency for Watergate defendant E. Howard Hunt and that there would be no problem raising $1 million in hush money for Hunt and the six other Watergate defendants.

Impeachment inquiry will continue in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — House leaders decided Tuesday to go ahead with an inquiry that could lead to President Nixon's impeachment despite his agreement to release the White House Watergate tapes to a federal judge.

They had already announced the start of the investigation before Nixon's about-face on the tapes, and said they would continue at least until the effect of his action becomes clear.

With the controversy over the tapes apparently stilled, Nixon's critics in the House said their major concern was to assure the continuation of an independent prosecution of the Watergate case and its many offshoots.

Nixon abolished the special prosecutor's office when he fired its director, Archibald Cox, touching off the uproar that led to the move for beginning impeachment proceedings.

"By giving up the tapes he showed Cox was right in insisting that he comply with the court's order," said Rep. Donald W. Riegle, D-Mich., in a House speech.

A chief criticism aimed at Nixon during an emotional House session was that he had refused to comply with an order of the court.

Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif., who introduced the first of several impeachment resolutions in the House Tuesday, said Nixon's decision was an indication the President intends to comply with the law. But Waldie said he wouldn't withdraw his resolution "until I see the contents of the tapes and documents."

The tumultuous day began in the House with an announcement by Speaker Carl Albert, joined in by the House Republican leadership, that the House Judiciary Committee would begin an investigation to determine whether grounds exist for Nixon's impeachment.

After Sirica meeting

President Nixon's lawyer Charles Wright leaves U.S. District Court in Washington Tuesday after meeting with Judge John Sirica. Wright told the judge President Nixon has agreed to let him hear the Watergate tapes.

Bill to pick vice president offered

By MICHAEL OGOREK
State News Staff Writer

A Michigan senator wants to do away with the smoke-filled rooms, political jockeying and ticket balancing in selecting a vice president.

U.S. Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., introduced a constitutional amendment Tuesday to transfer selection of a vice president from the voters to Congress and the president acting jointly.

His proposal provides that vice presidential nominees would be named by the President after his election and then confirmed by both houses of the new Congress.

Griffin said his proposal would give the people a stronger voice in the selection of vice president through their representatives in Congress.

"As a practical matter, the people have no voice in the selection process as now operates," he said.

"Instead of nominating a vice president cause his selection at the convention would balance the ticket or pay off a political debt," Griffin said, "my proposal would emphasize and focus upon the national need to select an outstanding vice president who would be highly qualified to step into the shoes of the president of the United States, if necessary."

Griffin said his proposal would assure a careful selection of the vice president and would give Congress a significant role in the process. Griffin's amendment would extend the 25th Amendment procedure now being used to confirm a successor to Spiro T. Agnew to the selection of all vice presidents.

The 25th Amendment now provides for a vacancy in the office of vice president to be filled by a Presidential nominee after the nominee is confirmed by a majority vote of both houses of Congress.

Griffin said his proposal would allow the President and Congress "ample time for sober reflection, thorough investigation and deliberate consideration in choosing the vice president."

Griffin said the resignation of Agnew and the case of Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., who withdrew as the Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1972 after his history of mental treatment was revealed, show the need for this amendment.

Griffin's press assistant, Pete Teeley, said Tuesday in Washington that the proposal will be well received in light of the Agnew resignation.

Teeley said there is a possibility that a Congress dominated by one party would be called on to approve a vice president of another party, the same situation now confronting the nation.

But he said that there is usually a period of cooperation between a new president and Congress before extreme partisanship occurs. Teeley said the selection of a vice president would take place within this time.

Griffin's proposed amendment, should it get out of committee, would not be approved overnight.

Article V of the Constitution provides that an amendment must first be approved by two-thirds of both houses of Congress, and then ratified by three-fourths of the states.

It can take months or even years to ratify a proposed amendment. The Sixteenth Amendment, for example, was proposed on July 12, 1909, but was not ratified by the necessary three-fourths of the states until Feb. 25, 1913.

The president and vice president are now elected indirectly by voters to four-year terms. A majority of votes in the electoral college, or, if there is no majority, a vote in the House of Representatives, must then ratify the voters' choices.

U.N. approves cease-fire requested by U.S., Soviets

FROM WIRE SERVICES

As the fourth Middle East war since 1948 raged on Tuesday, the United Nations Security Council approved a new U.S.-Soviet call for a cease-fire.

The two superpowers had placed a resolution before the Security Council, meeting in emergency session in New York, calling for U.N. observers to be dispatched to Middle East battlefronts to see that the cease-fire is carried out.

The vote was 14-0, with China not participating. The Chinese delegate called the resolution a scrap of paper and said the council was being juggled at will by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, in Washington, postponed his planned sixth trip to China as a result of the renewed fighting that followed Monday's abortive cease-fire.

In Moscow, the Soviet government blamed Israel for renewing hostilities and warned of gravest consequences if fighting persisted.

Egyptian and Israeli warplanes and armor clashed in hard day-long fighting along the Suez front. Syrian jets and cannons tangled with Israeli air raiders and advance artillery on the northern front.

Israeli spokesmen reported artillery duels along the Syrian front and claimed their raiding warplanes scored "exact hits" on a fuel depot 12 miles north of Damascus.

Syria charged that about 60 Israeli warplanes streaked in over the Golan battleground "in waves" to bomb civilian targets north of the Syrian capital.

The Damascus command said its Soviet-supplied MIGs roared up to meet the attacking jets and drove them off before they could carry out their mission in dogfights that sent 11 Israeli planes crashing to the ground.

But Tel Aviv claimed 10 Syrian jets were blasted out of the sky in the aerial combat and mentioned no losses of its own.

Committees to investigate aspects of Kalamazoo Street construction

By CHRIS DANIELSON
State News Staff Writer

Several aspects of preliminary county plans to widen a half-mile stretch of Kalamazoo Street and rechannel part of the Red Cedar River are coming under heavy attack as committee review by MSU East Lansing officials continues.

The six-member Committee Relating to Natural Areas — made of faculty members from various natural science departments — recently recommended that the river channel be left where it is and that the road be widened without raising its grade level eight or ten feet.

Though the new bridge constructed to carry the widened highway across the river would partially alleviate the flooding that besets the road several days each year, the perennial flooding problem — which is one of the major reasons for the project — would not be eliminated completely under the committee's proposal.

Kalamazoo Street crosses the Red Cedar River flood plain. The committee's suggestions will be forwarded to the board of trustees, along with other committee recommendations.

The Building, Lands and Planning Committee has already approved the preliminary plans in concept, but is expected to study project further.

The East Lansing Environmental Quality and Aesthetics Task Force received the tentative plans from the city Planning Commission Tuesday night, and will consider them at its November meeting.

Both the University and city traffic commissions also are studying the plans.

Approval by both the trustees and the city council will be necessary before contractors' bids can be taken for the construction project.

O. Schaeffer, chief engineer of the Ingham County Road

Commission, the project's sponsor, said that the bids must be accepted before July 1, 1974, due to federal stipulations governing the $700,000 project.

About 55 per cent of the total cost of the road work would be paid by the federal government, he added.

Schaeffer said the preliminary plans can still be altered, and that the state and federal highway officials have approved the tentative plans and a negative declaration on the project's environmental impact.

A negative declaration means that officials judge that the project will have no appreciable effect on the environment, and that an environmental impact study will not have to be performed, Schaeffer explained.

He said that while the declaration is very short — in this case two pages — an impact statement could be as long as a Sears-Roebuck catalog.

"What use is there in getting some experts to wade around in a marsh doing a study for $10 to $15 an hour when the plan might be rejected?" he added.

"We will drop this project flat if the local units are not interested," he said.

The project's negative declaration states that the project will not affect wildlife feeding, breeding or other behavioral patterns.

However, Donald Beaver, asst. professor of zoology, said the proposed removal of up to 90 trees and the rerouting of the river would eliminate at least 10 per cent of the bird habitat.

"There are 37 nesting species and 113 migrating species of birds in the Red Cedar River natural area," he said. "It is the most productive area on campus in terms of wildlife, and it is the only flood plain students can see without taking a bus."

He noted that the area is used by several zoology classes.

Last of '73 Nobels awarded

The Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences rounded out its 1973 Nobel awards by naming American, Japanese, British and German scientists Tuesday as winners of the chemistry and physics prizes. Japanese Leo Esaki, 48, and Norwegian-born American Ivar Giaever, 44, shared half the $120,000 physics prize. Brian Josephson, 33, of Great Britain, received the other half. Esaki and Giaever had done pioneering investigations into the electronic phenomena of "tunneling," where runaway particles penetrate barriers without leaving a mark. Josephson predicted a new phenomena in superconductors. Geoffrey Wilkinson, 52, of London's Imperial College, and Ernst Otto Fischer, 55, of Munich, Germany, shared the $120,000 chemistry prize for independent research on organometallic (sandwich) compounds, the basis of antiknock ingredients in lead-free gasoline.

Tho hits warfare, rejects prize

Hanoi Politburo member Le Duc Tho, claiming violations by the United States and South Vietnam of the cease-fire, rejected the 1973 Nobel Peace Prize he had won. But Tho indicated, Radio Hanoi said, he might accept the prize if "peace is really restored" in South Vietnam. Tho, who was awarded the prize jointly with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger for their work in negotiating the Vietnam cease-fire, sent a message to the Nobel committee in Sweden thanking them and "to renew to you the assurances of my high consideration." Two members of the peace prize committee quit to protest the award to Kissinger and Tho.

Uganda warns of 'invasion' plan

Uganda warned that a force of American, British and Israeli commandos were getting ready to parachute into the country — but made no explanation why the United States, Britain or Israel would want to attack. Radio Uganda said any planes flying over the eastern African nation without the country's knowledge would be shot down, and any "mercenaries" in the country without identity cards will be arrested. The government in Kampala said it learned of the plot from "reliable sources in the U.S.A."

2 French network figures fired

A struggle over political control of France's state-owned television and radio led to the firing of both antagonists. Minister of Information Philippe Malaud was shifted to a minor cabinet post. Arthur Conte, director of the national broadcasting network, was fired after serving 16 months of a three-year term. Conte had assailed the government for "intolerable" political interference with coverage of the Mideast war and touchy domestic issues. Malaud had called one of the network's radio services "a den of Communists" and claimed leftist tendencies in television news reports of current events. The network, a state-owned monopoly of French radio and TV, had come under fire for alleged financial mismanagement because of its mounting deficits. It has often been criticized by the French press for timidity, dreary programing and lack of intellectual substance.

Did TV movie spur torching?

Miami authorities believe a television movie may have spurred three boys into allegedly sprinkling a derelict with lighter fluid and burning him to death. The children — whose names were withheld because of their age — are also charged with assault for allegedly setting fire to two other men behind an abandoned building over the weekend. The other two men beat out the flames with their hands, but Charles Scales, 38, died in a hospital. The boys had earlier used their stolen lighter fluid to set fire to a cat, police said. The movie depicting such burnings, "Fuzz," was also linked to the death of a young woman in Boston three weeks ago. Youths abducted her, forced her to pour gasoline on herself and then set her ablaze.

Jury finds KKK leader guilty

An all-white federal jury in Detroit found the former head of the state Ku Klux Klan guilty of tarring and feathering a Willow Run High School principal. The Klansman, Robert Miles, of Howell, already awaits sentencing on his conviction of the 1971 bombing of empty school buses in Pontiac. Three other men pleaded guilty last week in the tarring and feathering of R. Wiley Brownlee in April 1971, and face maximum penalties of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000. Charges were dropped against a fifth man. Miles' $10,000 personal bond was revoked and he was taken to Wayne County Jail to await sentencing by U.S. District Judge Charles Joiner.

Kerner's lawyer denies bribe

A lawyer for former Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner argued that he never knew he was taking bribes when he accepted race track stock at bargain rates. Kerner, a federal judge, was convicted Feb. 19 of bribery, fraud, income tax evasion and perjury in race track stock dealings while Illinois governor. His lawyers are arguing before a special appeals court panel in attempts to overturn the convictions.

College for prisoners to open

A new state college, its student body entirely prison inmates, will be approved today by the trustees of the State University of New York system. The fully accredited two-year college for men and women prisoners at Bedford Hills in Westchester County will be the first of its kind in the country, officials said. It is scheduled to open in February. Prisoners at Bedford Hills will be selected from among 13,000 confined at prisons around the state, and will need either a high school diploma or an equivalency certificate to enroll. The prisoners who become students will have sentences ranging from a year to life and will be eligible to participate in educational programs regardless of the offense they were convicted on. The college will be tuition-free.

Wages of sin? He wants share

A Nevada man wants a $250-a-week divorce allowance and $5,000 in lawyers' fees from his wife. But Calvin J. Sandau said he was not asking for too much because his wife's brothel is doing a booming business and showed a 23 per cent net profit for 1972 of $31,406. An accounting of Nellie Sandau's Kit Kat guest ranch near Carson City showed 91 per cent of the income listed as coming from "guests." Costs for the ranch included $1,568 for advertising and $26,077 for "labor." Prostitution is legal in Nevada.

Obscenity ruling called vague

FROM WIRE SERVICES

WASHINGTON — Four justices of the Supreme Court complained vigorously Tuesday that the Court's obscenity rulings in June were too vague to be enforced.

The new clash on the issue came in dissenting opinions about the effect of the June decisions, which gave local authorities wide power to crack down on allegedly obscene books, magazines and films.

The dissents came as a court majority — Chief Justice Warren Burger and Associated Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and William H. Rehnquist — dismissed or returned to lower courts appeals of 11 obscenity convictions for further proceeding in the light of the June rulings. In the case of a convicted Alabama bookseller, Justice William O. Douglas said: "The exception to the First Amendment written into the Constitution by the majority, which we now ask the court below to apply ... could not more clearly exhibit these evils of vagueness."

Douglas was joined in the dissent by Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Potter Stewart and Thurgood Marshall.

The obscenity decisions in June provided local juries with broad discretion in deciding what is unlawfully obscene material.

"Every author, every bookseller, every movie exhibitor and, perhaps, every librarian is now at the mercy of the local police force's conception of what appeals to the prurient interest or is patently offensive," Douglas said.

"The meaning of the standards necessarily vary according to each person's own idiosyncracies," Douglas said. "The standards fail to give adequate notice and invite arbitrary exercise of police power."

Brennan, in a series of his own dissenting views, argued that state obscenity statutes should not apply to allegedly obscene material that is kept from juveniles and not consenting adults.

In other cases, the justices:

- Refused to interfere with the conviction of two Baton Rouge, La., newsmen who defied a federal judge's ban on reporting about a public court hearing.

- Unanimously upheld the right of Kansas to bar Amtrak, the national passenger train corporation, from serving liquor on its trains traveling through the state. Amtrak brought the appeal.

- Set down for full review the Nixon administration's appeal of a lower court decision which upset the military conviction of Capt. Howard Levy, who refused in 1967 to give medical training to Special Forces troops.

- Agreed to rule on the constitutionality of laws that give tax breaks to widows but not to widowers.

- Agreed to review a murder conviction in which the prosecution told the jury in summing up that "I honestly and sincerely believe there is no doubt in this case" and that the defendant hoped to be found guilty of a lesser degree of the crime.

- Let stand a sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for a Louisiana man convicted of importing bingo equipment across state lines.

Machines to scan prices

By LESLIE WESTON
State News Staff Writer

Price stamps on supermarket items may soon be sacrificed to computerized checkout systems.

The system would employ a scanner to "read" the manufacturer code and compute it at the checkout counter, possibly saving time and labor costs and eliminating human error. Prices would be posted on shelves.

"Before such a system is implemented we would want a guarantee that the consumer is sufficiently aware of the individual prices and is able to make a valid comparison between items," James Hunsucker, legislative analyst at the Michigan Consumers Council, said.

Virginia H. Knauer, President Nixon's special assistant for consumer affairs, has urged packaging industries to consult consumers before implementing this new system.

"The price on each item facilitates the consumer's choice," Hunsucker said. "There is no assurance that reduced labor costs would result."

"Random weight products, like meat, must have the price marked with its weight computed," Ronald M. Leach, chief of the food inspection division of the Michigan Dept. of Agriculture, said. "But there is no law requiring the individual price marking on prepackaged items."

"A computerized system could be helpful to the retailer and the consumer with more efficient rotation of foods," he said.

"Basically our advice would be for the consumer to beware until it's debugged — any new system would have a lot of bugs at first," Bonny Miller, consumer information specialist at the Michigan Consumers Council, said.

Aid to colleges may rise if Milliken OKs tax credit

MSU could get a substantial increase in private donations if Gov. Milliken signs into law a bill which would allow a state income tax credit for people making contributions to Michigan colleges and universities.

State Sen. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, sponsor of the legislation, said the bill is intended to encourage citizens and business to contribute to colleges and universities in Michigan by giving them a break on their state income tax.

"I think it will help colleges and universities a great deal by increasing private contributions," Pursell said.

The legislation, approved Monday by the House of Representatives and earlier this year by the Senate, would allow individuals to claim a credit of up to 20 per cent of their tax liability up to $100 and allow businesses or trusts to claim a maximum credit of 10 per cent of tax liability up to $5,000.

University officials would not speculate on how much of an increase in donations the bill would bring, but Robert Perrin, asst. vice president for University relations, said MSU favors any legislation "that makes it easier for people to contribute to the University."

Plan to create county executive expected to face voters next year

By R.D. CAMPBELL
State News Staff Writer

The chairman of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners said Tuesday he expects the commission to present a plan for a county executive to the voters next year as a result of a bill passed in the state Senate Monday.

The measure permits counties to appoint or elect a county manager or executive to serve as the administrative head of county government. The bill has been sent to Gov. Milliken for his signature.

"This legislation is a step in the right direction. It's a place to build from," David C. Hollister, D - Lansing and chairman of the county commission, said.

The county executive would supervise, direct and control county departments except those headed by elected officials, coordinate the various activities of the county and unify the management of county affairs.

Outside the 21-man board of commissioners, Ingham County's elected officials include the prosecuting attorney, clerk, sheriff, treasurer, register of deeds and the drain commissioner.

The county executive would not have control over these nor several other county boards.

Commissioners Patrick J. Ryan, D - Lansing, and Pamela H. Stern, D - East Lansing, also favor the executive plan.

"There are many things that part-time commissioners can't do in coordinating between committees and other governmental agencies that an executive could do," Ryan said.

The executive would be authorized to enforce all orders, rules and ordinances of the county board of commissioners and laws of the state which fall under his jurisdiction. He would also have certain appointive and budget preparation duties.

An elected county executive would have considerably more power than an appointed county manager since he would have veto power over decisions of the county board which could be overridden only by a two-thirds vote of the commission.

Kenneth VerBurg of the MSU Institute for Community Development and Services, said that the executive's powers would be almost nil, though Hollister thinks VerBurg will work with the county on developing a county executive plan for the voters.

Commissioner John R. Veenstra, D - East Lansing, is leery of the bill because of the money it would take to support a countywide campaign for voter approval. He questioned the power special interest groups might have in electing an administrator.

The bill was approved by the Senate after the House added several amendments including one which allows voters to reject the executive system.

Robert Gorsline, legislative aide for Sen. Carl Pursell, R - Plymouth, the bill's sponsor, said the bill is a start in a series of steps that give counties the framework for establishing more efficient government.

"It's the first statutory change from the legislature concerning county government in the last 60 to 70 years," he added.

Campbell Hall fire

More than 300 women were evacuated from Campbell Hall on West Circle Drive Monday night as firemen searched for the cause of smoke which filled a third-floor washroom. The women, many of them in night clothes, returned to the building an hour later when firemen discovered and put out a small wastebasket fire in a first floor men's washroom. The cause of the wastebasket fire was unknown according to the East Lansing Fire Dept., which sent four pieces of equipment to the scene. Damage was estimated at $2. The fire occurred several hours after a general fire drill had been held in the residence hall.

Ecological impact reports asked

By TOM HAROLDSON
State News Staff Writer

Environmental problems of the state could be dealt with more effectively if the state legislature adopts a comprehensive statutory system, Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley said Tuesday. And one local environmentalist couldn't agree more with Kelley.

In a 27-page report, Kelley proposed that all environmental projects that require state funding or approval conducted not only by state agencies but also by private developers would need to be accompanied by an environmental impact report 30 days before the project is to begin. The impact statement, made by the state agencies involved in the project, would be available for public inspection within 30 days before the project is approved.

Citizen and environmental groups, after reviewing the environmental impact statement, could challenge the project in court if the statement concludes that there would be no environmental impact. Kelley also proposed that the court could order the project to be stopped or redesigned.

Jim Anderson, MSU asst. professor of humanities and leader in the fight to stop highway construction at the Michigan Avenue - Harrison Road intersection, said he was delighted with Kelley's proposals.

"If these proposals were instituted a year and a half ago, we could have saved thousands of dollars and endless time that we put into fighting the Highway Dept.," Anderson said. "I just hope that the proposals aren't lost in a maze of bureaucracy and shipped to obscurity."

He added that his group will support Kelley's proposals as much as it can to insure that the concept of environmental impact reports is taken seriously by state government.

Kelley said the environmental impact reports and a strong statutory system are necessary because current state laws regulating environmental protection are inadequate. Environmental problems are handled through executive orders which advise that an action be stopped.

But the executive orders are purely advisory and apply only to state-level projects. Kelley's plan would include all levels of development - state, local and private.

His proposal would attempt to halt environmental projects that citizens want stopped before the actual project reaches the construction stage.

"It would place focus on the planning stage of a project when there is least damage to the environment and least expense to the developer," he said.

State officials contacted who are working in the environmental area welcomed Kelley's proposals but added that they are being investigated and to some extent initiated already for some state projects.

BENT BUMPERS AND frayed tempers caused by freeway commuting may be a thing of the past if a rail commuter service gets state subsidy.

The State Highway Commission has provided partial subsidy for a Penn Central commuter line utilizing 16 trains a day between Ann Arbor and Detroit.

LEGISLATION AIMED at reorganizing energy regulation and providing for the development of new energy reserves will be introduced in the state legislature this week.

The main emphasis will be on reorganizing the Dept. of Natural Resources and the Public Service Commission to avoid overlapping and ambiguous powers between the two agencies.

ATTY. GEN. FRANK KELLEY's office confirmed Monday that it has filed an appeal with the state Supreme Court that would allow a vote of the people on the two cent state gas tax increase enacted last year.

The suit, filed Friday, is aimed at overturning the state Court of Appeal's Oct. 2 ruling that the tax is not subject to a popular vote.

THE FIRST STEP toward a complete reform of Michigan's courts was made Tuesday when the House of Representatives passed a bill to abolish municipal courts in the state and transfer their duties to district courts.

If approved by the Senate and the governor, the legislation would eliminate municipal courts in 28 Michigan cities over the next three years.

THE Closing of the Door SINO-AMERICAN RELATIONS 1936 - 1946 by Dr. Paul A. Varg

Dr. Paul Varg's book on Sino-American relations of the 1940's is the first to appear since all American documents have become accessible.

The author discusses why the door on Sino-American diplomatic relations closed when the government of the People's Republic of China assumed power in 1949.

The focus is on the internal developments in China immediately after World War II. Deep economic, social and political forces far beyond the control of any foreign power spelled doom for the Kuomintang and victory for the Communists.

Hiring, firing powers not council's authority

A proposal by Nelson Brown and Margaret McNeil, candidates for East Lansing City Council, to take control of the hiring and firing of city administrators from the city manager and give it to the city council instead, gives cause for several objections.

The proposal is not necessary and threatens to bring a spoils system to East Lansing government. Presently, City Manager John Patriarche is responsible for the hiring and firing of the city's eight department heads. Brown and McNeil, in their campaign platform, contend that the present system is unresponsive to public concerns. They suggest that the city council be given direct authority over city administrator's jobs.

Their proposal is not necessary. City council presently has means for removing incompetent department heads from their positions by simply ordering the city manager to fire them. And if the city manager does not obey council's orders, the council may fire him.

Brown and McNeil have yet to prove that the present system is ineffective. Patriarche is an experienced and competent city manager who has adjusted rather well to the changing political tides in the city council.

The suggestion also invites the possibility of a political spoils system where jobs are allocated not just on ability, but also on political beliefs. And even if such a politicized system was not actually used, the fear of it by competent administrators could cause them to shy away from jobs in East Lansing.

Brown and McNeil feel that the change is necessary because certain city administrators have attempted to make policy decisions, a duty reserved for the city council.

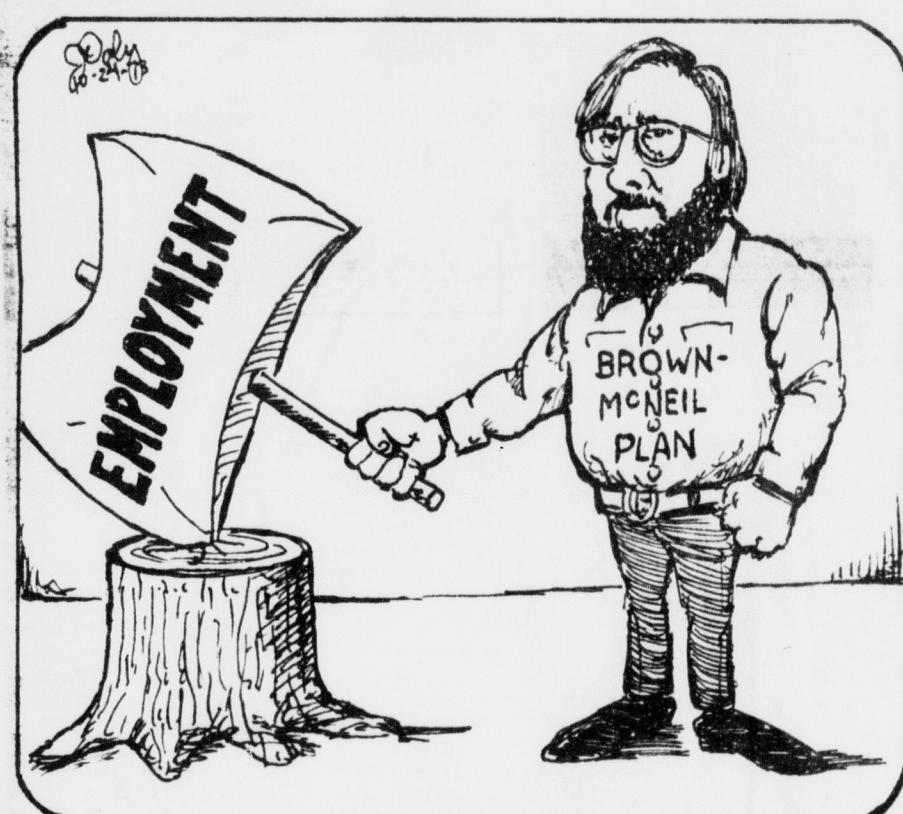

The primary target of this charge is City Clerk Beverly Colizzi who, according to Brown and McNeil, has made it as difficult as possible for students to register to vote during the past two years.

The proposal to give city council direct hiring and firing capabilities is Brown and McNeil's solution to a lack of public input in city government.

Brown and McNeil are indeed touching upon a problem in city government. The city clerk has done as little as possible to encourage student voter registration, even though such action is not responsible to the public's interests.

But it is questionable whether the Brown and McNeil solution is desirable. It would require a charter change in East Lansing, when perhaps the problem is not with the present system, but with council members who are unresponsive to citizen concerns.

City government can be made more responsive by those who run it rather than attempting to change the structure of the system itself.

Kill death penalty idea

The death penalty, dead in Michigan for well over 100 years, is enjoying a brief interlude of prominence again thanks to one man.

Rep. Kirby Holmes, R-Utica, is again trying to have the death penalty reinstated in Michigan. He is spearheading a petition drive to have the question put on the November 1974 ballot.

Why Holmes must continually subject the people of Michigan to this insane proposal is beyond all reasonable comprehension. Suffice it to say the people of Michigan are not interested in resurrecting this archaic form of punishment.

Michigan, in 1848, was the first state to do away with the death penalty. There were attempts in 1931 to have it revived, but these also failed. Now it is 1973, supposedly the age of reason.

Efforts should be made to rehabilitate criminals, not to kill them. The "eye for an eye, tooth for tooth" concept of punishment went out many years ago. Let's keep it out and Holmes' proposal with it.

COMMENTARY

President begins his own end

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

WASHINGTON — During his few minutes as acting Attorney General, William French Smith had a telephone call from the White House Chief of Staff, Gen. Alexander Haig. Haig conveyed President Nixon's order to fire Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor. Ruckelshaus, like Elliot Richardson, refused. Then Haig said:

"Your Commander-in-Chief has given you an order."

There it was, naked: the belief that the President reigns and rules, that loyalty runs to his person rather than to law and institutions. It is precisely the concept of power against which Americans rebelled in 1776, and that they designed the Constitution to bar forever in this country. It is in fact a form of power that no English monarch has exercised since George III.

Haig's military phrase was significant in another sense also. Over this extraordinary weekend, Washington had the smell of an attempted coup d'etat. Like the plotters in a novel, Nixon and his men invoked threats abroad. They skillfully enlisted political elders enfeebled by years of subservience. They tried to cut out the judges, the lawyers, the constitutionalists. They sent the police to seal the dangerous files. Cox's assistant, Henry Ruth, caught the feeling when he said: "Maybe it isn't 'seven days in May,' but it is one day in October."

But short of a real military coup, the attempt has failed. Most important, the issue facing this country has been made so clear that no one with eyes to see can avoid it any longer. That issue is the legitimacy of this President.

The American system gives enormous presumptive weight to the legitimacy of any president, and rightly so. Fixed presidential terms and orderly succession have been anchors of stability in our turbulent history. But the framers of the Constitution did not stake all on the chief executive, they did not make him absolute or irremovable. In the end, they rested their faith on law.

By his acts of the last few days, Richard Nixon has made manifest his contempt for law and for the very tripartite structure of our government that he so often invokes. He has sought to teach Americans the lesson that the great among us may choose whether and how to obey the law. He has broken a solemn promise made to the U.S. Senate — the promise to let the truth of Watergate be discovered and the law enforced.

It is impossible now to resist the inference that Nixon has been trying to conceal evidence of his own violations of the criminal law. That would explain his dogged refusal to disgorge not only the White House tapes but much other documentary material — and explain his fear of Archibald Cox.

Much that has happened in this last week was really designed to get rid of Cox. So obsessive had that aim become in Nixon's mind that it was like the cry of Henry II about Thomas Becket: "Who will free me from this turbulent priest?" Eventually someone was found to wield the dagger. His name was Robert Bork, but it will count no more in history than the forgotten names of Becket's murderers.

Oct. 20 was a frightening day in Washington. But it was also profoundly encouraging to those who have maintained their faith in the American system during the horrors of the Nixon years. For there were men who, despite the most terrible pressures, followed the path of honor and the law.

No one who watched Archibald Cox could be altogether cynical again about the good that lies in the American character. It was "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," for real: the almost naive decency, the sense of duty, the care for personal kindness even in that extreme situation. And then came the redeeming support of Elliot Richardson and William French Smith.

Nixon will try to meet the crisis now with one more effort to rally the country behind his person. The answer to that is that royalism has no place in America — and besides, the king is dead. We must look elsewhere for continuity, for legitimacy.

The struggle of the next few days and weeks will require many of us to give up comfortable assumptions. Government officials will have to think again about where their loyalties lie. The lawyers of this country will have to speak out. Constitutional conservatives, above all Barry Goldwater, will have to recognize that Nixon has betrayed them especially.

Today even Congress, which so often rolls on its back like a spaniel, is beginning to face the necessity of impeachment. It need not come to that; for the good of the country it should not. Rather, before long someone in Richard Nixon's shrinking palace guard will surely tell him that he must listen as the country sends him the same cry that went across the floor of the House of Commons to Neville Chamberlain in 1940: "In the name of God, go."

The Doctor's Bag

are pumped into the air conditioning and heating ducts and that air temperature has very little to do with catching a cold. Who is right?

Score one for the office manager. Repeated experiments have shown that colds (upper respiratory infections) are not related to room temperature. In fact, recent evidence suggests that the transmission of colds, which are caused by a virus, results from the direct introduction of the virus into a person's respiratory system. This can occur because the virus is introduced into the nose by one's fingers. The cold causing virus can stay alive for a reasonable period of time on many surfaces and on the skin. Undoubtedly another major factor in the susceptibility to colds is the general health of the infected person.

With the increasing likelihood of fuel conservation efforts, you may as well take up the cry of winter which is going to be: "Let them wear sweaters."

Are periodic sperm counts recommended following a vasectomy? If so, how often? I had a vasectomy in Jan. 1972 complete with singed and tied tubes and remain sterile. I remember the doctor saying that the tubes could possibly grow back together and allow sperm to get into action again, but I am not keen on the hassle involved in periodically taking sperm specimens to be checked.

With the older style vasectomies in which the tubes carrying the sperm were merely cut apart and tied off, up to 5 per cent of them reformed an effective channel. With the newer type of vasectomy, which is what you describe, in addition to the tubes being cut, their openings are destroyed with an electric cautery and then they are tied off. With this technique, in only one to three cases per thousand have the tubes reopened. Following vasectomy, about 10 ejaculations are necessary to clear the system of sperm. A check at this point indicating the absence of sperm should be considered sufficient for the future. Annual checks would be only considered worthwhile if a pregnancy would have absolutely devastating effects such as threatening the life of the woman or if the vasectomy was done to prevent the transmission of a hereditary illness.

State News advertising practice unfair

To the Editor:

This is a reply to your recent refusal to print our advertisement.

In developing one of the largest libraries of research material in the country, Research Assistance Inc. of Los Angeles has begun to fill the deficit that exists in available reference materials. This educational tool frees the student from much of the tedium of information retrieval and allows more time to be devoted to creative learning processes.

Our up-to-date, mail order catalog of 4,500 research papers is sold for research-reference purposes only. We question your refusal to print our advertisement. The highest goal of education is to provide the tools to enable the student to think, evaluate, judge and decide for himself.

Your exercise of censorship by not permitting our advertisement appears to be diametrically opposed to an essential right of the student: freedom of choice.

It is up to the student to accept or reject; it is not the function of a free press or a free university system to arbitrarily decide for others.

Lifeguards earn award

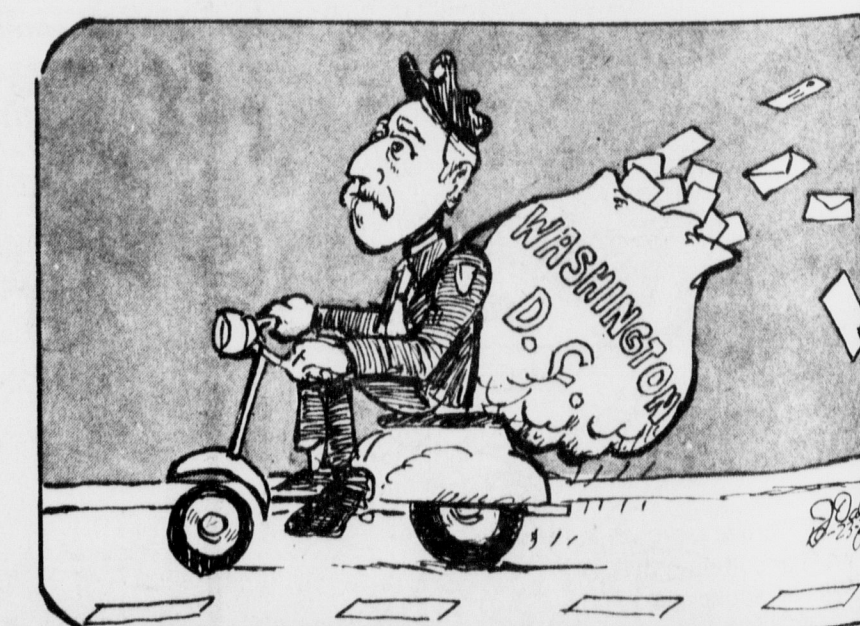

To the Editor:

I was pleased to read that various University police officers were given life saving awards for their rescue of Donald E. Hamachek at the IM outdoor swimming pool last summer. I witnessed this incident, and I too wish to commend these officers for their prompt and efficient action.

However, there were several lifeguards involved who also deserve credit for the rescue. It was the lifeguards who found Hamachek at the bottom of the pool and brought him out, not the officers, as reported in the State News. It was also the lifeguards who started resuscitation, which greatly contributed to the saving of Hamachek's life.

It would be very nice to also give recognition to these young men who together with the police officers prevented a tragedy from occurring.

Political communications

To the Editor:

Many people are unaware that a "public opinion message" may be sent by telegram to the President, vice president, members of the cabinet or any member of the U.S. Congress at a cost of only $1.25.

Though the 15-word text limitation restricts you to the essence of your opinion, it is vastly better than waiting to write a letter which usually fails to materialize. Messages should be addressed to the President (or the vice president), the White House, Washington, D.C. 20510; your senator, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510; your Congressman, House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

If recent events in Washington have aroused your concern, perhaps an inexpensive telegram could convey your feelings to some official ear.

Council hopefuls hold hall forum

By MICHAEL FOX
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing's four city council candidates formally launched their fall verbal offensives Monday night to capture the sizable student vote in the upcoming Nov. 6 election for two council seats. About 30 students at a Mason Hall candidates forum listened and asked questions as the four candidates — Nelson Brown, Margaret McNeil, John Polomsky and Mary Sharp — debated council's September appointment of a replacement for George Colburn, whether council should hire and fire city administrators and how to provide students with low-cost housing.

Most of the dozen questions asked by the audience came from persons identified with the Brown-McNeil campaign and generally were slanted against Sharp and Polomsky. Reportedly, the Brown-McNeil campaign staff has been told to ask only one question each at such forums.

Brown, McNeil criticize MSU as 'slum landlord'

Nelson Brown and Margaret McNeil took their city council campaign to the students Tuesday with a soapbox rally in front of Bessey Hall where they promised to put city pressure on the University to alleviate crowded residence hall housing if elected on Nov. 6.

Brown and McNeil told about 30 students gathered between classes that the city should protect its residents on campus from a "slum landlord" by pressuring the University to allow students in triples to break their hall contracts and move off campus by taking the University to court in a class action suit.

"The University is a landlord and an employer," Brown said. "When it acts against the interests of citizens, we want to do what we can to support them."

"Students are citizens of East Lansing whether they live on or off campus," McNeil said. "The city should protect them from slum landlords. We would do everything we can to take the University to court if it won't obey the law."

"MSU is nationally known for its dorm system," she said. "But it brings people to the city, promising them adequate housing, and then puts them in triples."

One woman in the audience asked how each candidate would have hypothetically voted on Thelma Evans' appointment to fill Colburn's council position. Evans, a black, has been criticized by self-professed youth candidates Brown and McNeil.

"I think it is unfortunate that the person appointed is in no way representative of Colburn's philosophy," McNeil said. "I would like to see the council explore the idea of going back to a special election to fill such vacancies."

Candidate John Polomsky, asst. professor of engineering instructional services, said, "Maybe it could have been possible to appoint someone closer to George. However, I do not think Evans' appointment is a campaign issue."

Sharp, the only candidate of the four who actually participated in the decision to appoint Evans, said she was satisfied with Evans. At one point, when Brown told of his work to change city marijuana penalties, Sharp confused some years.

"George Griffiths fought for over a year with other council members to get a compromise $5 pot ordinance," Brown said.

"Just a minute," Sharp said. "There was already a $5 fine for marijuana on the books for over a year when your group was pressing for a $1 ordinance."

"Then why did George Griffiths fight so hard for it if there was already a low fine?" Brown replied.

"I wondered that myself," Sharp said.

However, several members of the audience said there was a $100 marijuana fine before the $5 fine was adopted in 1972 as a compromise to Griffiths' $1 proposal.

"Gosh, you might be right," Sharp said.

On another issue, McNeil suggested that the city attorney could be made more of an advocate for citizen problems.

"We need to protect students from the University which is both a landlord and an employer in our community," she said.

Polomsky, however, said that organization of student employees should be done by those workers and not directed in any way by city government.

On the proposal by Brown and McNeil to increase council power and activity, Sharp declared: "I hope that progressing towards utopianism and socialism as advocated by two candidates does not lead us down the road to 1984 where government runs everyone else's life. I want to run my own life."

Soapbox rally

Margaret McNeil, right, and Nelson Brown, candidates for East Lansing City Council, promised students they would put city pressure on the University if elected Nov. 6. The candidates spoke at a soapbox rally in front of Bessey Hall Tuesday.

MESSAGE FROM GOLDA MEIR PLAYED

Israeli sympathizers hold rally

By MELISSA PAYTON
State News Staff Writer

A quiet, solemn group of 150 Jewish students and faculty members assembled Tuesday in a solidarity rally to pray for peace, sing and hear a prerecorded message from Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir.

After the noon rally, however, about 25 MSU Jewish students gathered at the state Capitol steps to try to enter

Gov. Milliken's office en masse. They planned to ask Milliken for state support for the Israeli war bonds and "a show of active and open interest in support of the state of Israel's existence," said Harry Hamburger of Radical Jewish Students, but they were told that the governor could not see them immediately.

Inside the Capitol, the students tried to put up signs and unfurl an Israeli flag, but were stopped because it is illegal to display a foreign flag in the Capitol.

They also talked to several state legislators about supporting a resolution introduced that day by state Rep. Joseph Forbes, D - Oak Park, to ask Congress to supply military and economic assistance to Israel.

Organized by Hillel Director Rabbi William Rudolph, the hour-long rally at Beaumont Tower featured a few signs calling for U.S. support of Israel but no slogan chanting or outward displays of emotion from the crowd.

The aim of the Israeli people, the prime minister said in her phoned-in statement, "is to make this the last war. We will win because we must. There is no alternative for us."

"The young men (fighting on the Israeli side) know how few they are, know how great the arsenal of destruction is, but they know the life of their country, maybe the life of the entire Jewish people, depends on them."

Abba Eban, Israeli ambassador to the United Nations, said in a recorded statement following the prime minister's that "Israel is surrounded by a lynch mob atmosphere" in the United Nations.

"The world is standing by, apparently ready to see us die. The United States and the Jewish people are the only sources of strength," Eban said.

In the rally's opening prayer, Rudolph said, "In keeping with our tradition, we are responsible one for another. We pray for the promise and fulfillment of peace."

Solidarity for Israel

Rabbi William Rudolph, director of Hillel, talks to a group of 150 Israeli sympathizers at a rally he organized at noon Tuesday at Beaumont Tower. Recorded messages from Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir and Abba Eban, Israeli ambassador to the United Nations, were played at the meeting.

state of local health care

One of the biggest problems for married students' families is finding a doctor who is taking new patients.

This problem will be explored at a conference on the local health care situation at 8 p.m. Friday at the Cristo Rey Community Center, 1314 Ballard St., Lansing.

Panelists at the conference will discuss the need, interest and support for an alternate health care system for area residents including in-patient and out-patient care. The emphasis of the conference, which will also feature a number of workshops, will be on community reaction to a prepaid group health practice including budget medical costs and preventative and emergency care.

Herman Schmidt, director of Group Health Assn. of America in Washington, D.C., will be the featured speaker Friday night, talking on "Why's and How's of Health Maintenance Organization."

He will be joined in a following panel discussion by Rep. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing; Sister Mary Janice Belen, director of St. Lawrence Hospital; Al Jones of Capitol Area United Way and Dr. D. Bonte Hiscio, a local surgeon.

Follow-up workshops on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Ingham County Health Dept., 808 Southland Ave., Lansing, will feature Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, and Joseph Tuchinsky, executive director of PIRGIM.

Icers slate Green-White game

By STEVE STEIN
State News Sports Writer

In preparation for its earliest season opener in history, MSU's hockey team will play its annual Green and White intrasquad game tonight at the Demonstration Hall Ice Arena.

The contest, sponsored by the Varsity Club, begins at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $1.

Coach Arno Bessone, entering his 23rd year at the helm of the club, has divided his roster into two squads. He will coach the Green team while asst. coach Alex Terpay will handle the Whites.

Bessone will be looking to see how well the lines and defensive combinations work and also help determine the varsity roster for the Spartans' season-opening games with Western Ontario here on Nov. 2-3.

The Spartans finished with their best overall record in the club's history last season 23-12-1, and tied for third place in the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA).

MSU lost only two seniors from the squad, Frank DeMarco and Bill Sipola, though winger Michel Chaurest is only eligible until the end of December.

Returning will be a fine group of sophomores who pushed their way into the starting lineup last year and a good contingent of upperclassmen.

Bessone is also very happy with his recruiting this season.

The squad's most serious problem will be replacing all-WCHA defenseman Bob Boyd, who signed a professional contract with the Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Assn. this summer.

"We've been concentrating on defense in practice," Bessone said.

Boyd played defense, and was also used on the power play and penalty killing teams, sometimes being on the ice for as much as 40 minutes a game.

Each team is headed by a line which returns from last season.

The line of center Steve Colp (who scored 35 goals in his freshman season last year—a team record), Mark Calder and Daryl Rice will play for the Greens. Norm Barnes will head the defense with Ron Clark and Tom Bowen in the nets.

The all-sophomore line of center Tom Ross, John Sturges and Brendon Moroney will be on the White team along with senior defenseman Chris Murfey. Freshmen Gary Carr and Greg Maas will play goal.

Tough harrier practices worth 'price of an apple'

By BILL COSTABILE
State News Sports Writer

If you wouldn't "Walk a mile for a camel," how about running six miles for a Coke and an apple?

If that sounds pretty harsh, then don't bother trying out for MSU's cross-country team. That's coach Jim Gibbard's idea of a just reward for his team after a day's practice.

The grueling practice sessions Gibbard puts his charges through quickly remove the image of a cross-country runner being "a guy running around in his shorts for six miles."

"Running is what cross-country is all about," Gibbard said. "The team usually warms up with a 10-mile run every morning. There's nothing like getting up at 6:30 a.m. and running a few miles."

"After classes we meet at the golf course and run another 10 miles. But we don't run just 10 miles and quit. We run half-miles, miles and three-miles. We don't run for conditioning at this time of year. We keep track of our times and try to cut down the time splits.

"After practice we run four 300-yard sprints. This helps us get a stronger kick at the finish. After sprints we go into the clubhouse and lift weights. Nothing real heavy, only about 75 pounds. We do that to develop upper body strength. Without a strong upper body you'll never be a good runner."

The harriers' day doesn't end with weights either. There's still the long jog back to Jenison Fieldhouse where the team goes to the steam room and then swims in the indoor pool to loosen up. The whole routine is done Monday through Thursday.

Following each Saturday's meet, Gibbard gives his team a break by requiring them to run only 15 miles—on Sunday! But what about the Coke and apple?

"After each practice the guys are entitled to a Coke and an apple as sort of a reward for a day's work," Gibbard explained. "It's nothing fancy, but they really look forward to it after practice."

It's quite a price to pay for a measly Coke and an apple, but all the members of the cross-country squad agree with Gibbard's theories on running. Sophomore Fred Teddy thinks Gibbard's ideas have paid off.

"If you want to be a good runner, plain hard work is the only answer and we get plenty of that," Teddy said. "It gets a little hectic sometimes, but when we win it's worth all the time we put into it. An apple and a Coke may not seem like much, but after practice it sure beats water."

Women tie EMU, 0-0

The women's field hockey team fought to a tough 0-0 tie against Eastern Michigan University Tuesday night at Old College Field. Mikki Baile's team is now 2-0-1 for the season. The Spartans' next game will be Thursday at Central Michigan University.

Spartan defenseman Norm Barnes awaits a faceoff during an MSU hockey game last season. The squad will play its annual Green and White intrasquad game at 7:30 tonight at the Demonstration Hall Ice Arena.

Roacho draws small Brewery crowd

By JACK BODNAR
State News Reviewer

Every gimmick imaginable was used to make Monday night at the Brewery a memorable one for El Roacho, a southwestern rock band. Columbia Records had plenty of El Roacho records and stickers to give away at the door, and the price to see the group was only $1. It should have been for free and eventually was as people stayed away from the Brewery in droves. Nobody wanted a bunch of used roachos.

A typical sign of how the concert was going occurred in the El Roacho dressing room between sets when the group couldn't even get themselves busted. Two Lansing policemen walked into the smokey, dope-filled room, asked for a light, and walked out without a word.

Actually, El Roacho wasn't a bad warm-up band. They have backed up the likes of Three Dog Night, Freddie King and Tower of Power, but they aren't at the star-billing stage yet. And that was what Columbia Records and the Brewery were trying to sell Monday.

Onstage they sound like a good studio band, with a measured tightness surrounding their original material. Songs like "Sautéed Roachos," "Good Friends" and a piece stolen from the "Sorcerer's Apprentice" were well done and taken from their first album "The Best of El Roacho's Greatest Hits."

The less than capacity Brewery crowd made a good stab at trying to get into the band, with as many as 17 couples dancing. But that didn't leave too many people left in the seats to listen to the band.

"My mother told me there would be nights like this," said Brewery co-owner Paul Kacer. "El Roacho is definitely in rock and roll heaven, and I'm sure that they will remember the Brewery long after this date. Seriously, maybe everybody burned themselves out yesterday at our spaghetti special."

Quite truthfully, El Roacho was more interesting offstage than on. The oldest dude in the group was sax player Curtis Massey, 29. A dropout from the Houston Symphony Orchestra where he played oboe, he used to babysit for the lead guitarist's sister. The musicians eventually met, decided that electric music was more undead than classical and

Demand for Mideast cease-fire approved as war rages

Premier Golda Meir said in Jerusalem that Israeli forces will keep on fighting so long as the Egyptians do and that "no Israeli soldier will withdraw from position until a binding peace settlement has been signed."

The Pentagon in Washington announced the United States has reduced its airlift to Israel, apparently in an attempt to pressure Tel Aviv to slow the pace of the Mideast fighting.

Officials declined to say how much the airlift, which has been running at approximately 20 flights a day, had been reduced.

A Pentagon spokesman said it was understood that the Soviet Union has also slowed its rate of delivery of arms and equipment to Syria and Egypt.

Area retailers say thefts down

Rip-off artists are busier than ever this year, but not on Grand River Avenue.

East Lansing Police Dept. statistics show shoplifting is increasing 60 per cent a year, but area merchants believe their problems with thieves are decreasing.

Police records indicate a decline in thefts from Grand River Avenue stores, with ripoffs increasing in larger department and grocery stores inside city limits.

In East Lansing, 122 shoplifting arrests were made in 1971 and 182 in 1972. Significant numbers already reported may make 1973 a record high year for ripoffs.

Student Book Store Asst. Manager Dennis Browers said no arrests have been made there yet this term and he believes shoplifting is at an all-time low.

Browers has worked at the store for five years and said the decline is probably due to widespread publicity of the use of mirrors, plainclothes detectives and security guards in the bookstores.

Shoplifting goods valued under $100 is classified a misdemeanor, but Browers said store owners can be nasty and charge shoplifters with larceny from a building, a felony.

Police records secretary Toni Michaels said the penalty for misdemeanor shoplifting is a maximum $100 fine, 90 days in jail or both.

She said East Lansing judges are quite lenient with first offense shoplifters and usually assess a small fine, but Browers said students have been fined $100 for stealing text books worth $2.

Every arrested shoplifter is booked and fingerprinted, Michaels said, and then has a permanent police record.

State Discount Manager Dennis King said shoplifting in the store has decreased tremendously this year, possibly because students are aware of the utilization of a second story room at the rear of the store where employees sit behind a two-way mirror and watch for shoplifters.

Tog Shop owner Sam Kaufman said he believes college students are the most frequent shoplifters and they usually have enough cash on them to cover the cost of the stolen merchandise.

He believes poor people know the risks involved in shoplifting and also know they cannot afford a court fine or criminal status.

"I have no sympathy for shoplifters; there is no excuse for it," Kaufman said. "I prosecute them to the limit and think they should be tarred and feathered, given a hair cut, and hung by their toes on Grand River Avenue."

Not all local merchants prosecute shoplifters, however. Discount Records Manager Jim Lindsay said when his salespeople see shoplifting, they merely regain stolen albums and tell thieves never to come back.

Lindsay attributes this lenient policy to the lack of expensive merchandise in the store, which he said has an average 2 per cent annual loss of albums and tapes.

The Disc Shop manager, who chose to remain unidentified, said felony charges have resulted from arrests of persons attempting to steal stereo equipment from the store.

Several clothing stores, including Green's, Kay Baum and Hosler's have installed expensive but very effective detection devices.

Tags on clothing are removed by saleswomen when items are purchased, but will electronically trigger buzzers if a shoplifter attempts to leave the store with stolen merchandise because detection boxes are placed at all exits.

Only a few Grand River Avenue stores, including Maurice's, Scotch House and Jacobson's, have reported shoplifting increases this year. Owners said the increases were only slight.

Because police and merchants have waged an intense war against Grand River Avenue shoplifters, the five-finger, 100 per cent discount is not as much fun, as easy to maneuver or as common as it used to be.

Married students' group to elect representatives

An election for representatives of Married Students' Union will take place from 2-4 and 6-8 p.m. Thursday in married housing laundromats. Fourteen candidates are running for the 15 representative positions.

The Married Students' Union, which represents concerns of married students and their spouses, has been in existence for three years.

Spouses of students as well as students themselves may vote in the election for representatives of their married housing complex. Cherry Lane has two representatives, University Village has three and Spartan Village has 10 representatives. The union has a budget for which 75 cents is collected yearly from each family. The complex representatives determine how the money is to be spent.

The union also plans activities oriented to the married housing family.

Past accomplishments of the married students union include a family swim program, programming on closed circuit TV to married housing sets, recycling projects in married housing complexes and a pilot health care program for married students and their families.
