

Nixon to give unsubpended tapes

FROM WIRE SERVICES
President Nixon announced Monday he will give a federal judge unsubpended White House tape recordings and portions of his personal diary file, but said he cannot locate one dictation machine belt subpoenaed by Watergate prosecutors.

Meanwhile, the White House agreed in federal court that it will deliver by Nov. 20 subpoenaed Watergate tape recordings and the other material promised by Nixon. U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica said duplicates of the tapes and other material would be made and originals stored in White House vaults.

Just moments before the White House released Nixon's statement, presidential lawyer J. Fred Buzhardt testified in Sirica's court that the dictation recording of Nixon's April 15 recollections could not be located.

The dictation belt is the third piece of subpoenaed Watergate evidence the White House said does not exist. Earlier, it announced that two key conversations went unrecorded by a presidential taping system.

Seeking to "clear up... once and for all" the controversy about the Watergate conversations, Nixon said in a written statement that he will:

- Voluntarily submit recordings of two April 16, 1973, conversations with then-counsel John W. Dean III, saying they "covered much of the same subject matter" as an April 15 meeting with Dean that the White House said went unrecorded.

- Allow the court to listen to other unsubpended reels of tapes to demonstrate that no recordings were made of the subpoenaed April 15 Dean meeting or of a subpoenaed June 20, 1972, telephone conversation with former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

- Agree that "court-approved independent experts employing the most advanced technological methods" examine all tapes in question "for any evidence of alterations..."

- Supply portions of his personal diary file subpoenaed by prosecutors, including dictation belts containing his recollections of the Mitchell telephone call and handwritten notes of his April 15 meeting with Dean.

After distributing the President's statement, White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the President is considering a meeting with Senate Watergate committee members as part of his effort to clear up the Watergate controversy.

Nixon said a search of his personal diary file a week ago failed to turn up a dictation belt of his recollections of the April 15 meeting with Dean. He said he thought he had dictated his recollections after that meeting, and White House spokesmen said as recently as Nov. 2 that such a dictation belt existed.

Dean has testified that in the April 15 meeting the President admitted discussing executive clemency as part of the Watergate cover-up and that Nixon said he had only been joking earlier when he said it would be no problem to raise $1 million in hush money.

Two weeks ago, the White House disclosed in court that the April 15 meeting was not recorded because an untended tape recorder ran out of tape. Disclosure about that meeting and the Mitchell one prompted Sirica to begin a hearing on the tape recordings.

The fact-finding sessions before Sirica have failed thus far to establish whether two missing conversations between Nixon and his aides went inadvertently unrecorded, as the White House insists, or were conveniently mislaid, as the Watergate prosecutors have suggested but not openly charged.

What the hearings have established is that the security system under which the tapes were kept, both by the Secret Service and the President's top deputies, was so haphazard and the custody records so uncertain that the recordings may have lost much of their potential value as evidence.

To the extent that the tapes ultimately are found to contain incriminating conversations, prosecutors in the resulting criminal trials may not be able to introduce them into evidence because sworn testimony before Sirica during the past two weeks has cast serious doubts on their reliability.

House passes Alaska pipeline bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed the Alaska pipeline bill by an overwhelming margin Monday and sent it to the Senate, which is expected to approve it today.

Before the final 361-14 vote, the House turned down, 213 to 162, a motion to return the bill to a House-Senate conference committee for removal of sections which broaden the authority of government regulatory agencies.

Rep. Charles E. Chamberlain, R-East Lansing, voted to recommit the bill to conference because he does not support the added sections on regulating businesses. However, after that was defeated he voted with the 361-14 majority.

Roy Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget, has said that he will recommend the President veto the bill with the disputed features in it.

But Secretary of the Interior Rogers C.B. Morton, who conferred with pipeline backers on the floor of the House just before Monday's action, has said he will recommend the President sign it in any event.

The White House has not commented, though it strongly supports construction of the pipeline. The line would bring oil from Alaska's north slope to tanker connections at the ice free port of Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska.

Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, said the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., a consortium of oil companies formed to build the pipeline, expects to begin construction in mid-March if the bill is approved promptly.

But he said a delay in passage of the bill would force postponement of the project by a full year because of the short Arctic construction season. Construction is expected to take three years.

The challenged sections of the bill were in the version originally passed by the Senate and were accepted by the conferees, though they had not been in the House version.

Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Ariz., who made the motion to recommit the bill to the conference, said the matter could be cleared up in a day or two.

Steiger moved that the House conferees be instructed to insist on disagreement to two portions of the Senate bill.

One of them would permit the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to go to court on its own, if the Justice Dept. declined to do so, to challenge alleged deceptive practices or price fixing.

The other would allow the FTC and other regulatory agencies to collect information from business firms without approval of the Office of Management and Budget.

Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., said the provisions "would affect every business in the United States from Mom and Pop stores to General Motors and ITT."

The provisions were opposed by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Senate panel ratifies energy bill; Muskie urges clean air rules cut

FROM WIRE SERVICES

WASHINGTON — A bill giving President Nixon emergency powers to deal with the energy crisis was approved by a Senate committee Monday as Congress grappled with the problem of energy shortages.

The emergency powers bill gives Nixon most of the authority he says he needs to handle the energy crisis. Written largely by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the measure provides for the rationing of scarce fuels by priority.

Nixon's chief energy adviser said gasoline rationing is indicated for the beginning of 1974. He said he is pessimistic over prospects of Arab nations ending their embargo on shipping oil to the United States.

John A. Love, the former governor of Colorado, earlier had said it was his personal opinion that gasoline rationing would be necessary by spring.

In Detroit, General Motors Corp. announced that mileage tests indicate that drivers traveling at 50 miles per hour save one-fourth more gasoline than drivers traveling at 70 m.p.h.

The company made its assessment after the first 1,000 miles of a coast-to-coast test drive by eight professional drivers.

The energy bill would also allow Nixon to:

- Restrict fuel from such nonessential uses as outdoor advertising and recreation.
- Limit operating hours of commercial establishments and public services, including schools, to save fuel.
- Reduce speed limits while encouraging the use of public transportation through the use of mass transit fare subsidies and other means.
- Require electric generating plants to convert to coal if possible.
- Adjust the schedules of airlines and

Area homes likely to remain warm

By TOM HAROLDSON
State News Staff Writer

Lansing area residents already receiving fuel oil supplies should have little difficulty keeping their homes warm this winter, area oil distributors and the Governor's Task Force on Fuel Supply reported.

But area residents who are moving into new homes might experience problems in getting fuel oil because of the fuel oil shortage and the federal mandatory allocation guidelines.

Those guidelines stipulate that fuel oil distributors can provide the same level of supply that they did last year, but can not exceed that level. In addition, most fuel oil distributors are not taking new customers, mainly because of a short supply of fuel oil and also because the allocation guidelines encourage this practice.

Even though the state Emergency Fuel Allocation Center cannot calculate how many people from the area will not be able to obtain fuel oil, workers at the center do say that they receive 20 to 30 calls daily from area residents who are concerned with the situation. Most of the calls are from people lacking a full supply of fuel oil who worry that they cannot get any additional fuel.

"Most people who call us are looking for some assurance that they will not run out of fuel oil this winter," Don Myers of the governor's task force said. "In most of these cases, we can refer them to their oil distributor who will handle the situation."

Myers said the Lansing area is in a relatively less dangerous position than Detroit, where a strike by Marathon Oil Co. and the Teamsters Union has curtailed fuel oil supplies to more than 1,000 homes.

Residents moving into a previously occupied home will be supplied fuel oil by the company that provided it to the previous owners, Myers said. Residents who have had credit problems with oil distributors will have to work out their problems with the distributor, Myers said. The under-staffed operations center, which has received calls from worried debtors cannot handle that problem, he said.

"In most instances, we have been able to link callers to distributors without much problem," he said. "In fact, area oil distributors have been very cooperative in helping us with this most critical situation."

The situation is critical for area distributors, as it is for distributors all over the country. Those who supply oil from major oil companies have been required to supply 90 to 100 per cent of the oil they distributed last year. They have also been ordered by the major oil companies not to take on any new customers, as the federal mandatory allocation program suggests.

"We receive calls every day from people who need fuel oil but there isn't anything we can do about it except provide fuel oil to our regular customers," Rob Muth of Muth Oil Co. in Lansing said.

Muth also said, as did other area oil distributors contacted, that he is receiving 100 per cent of the supply he received last year. But if this winter becomes colder than last winter, he said, there will be nothing his company can do to supply additional fuel oil.

They also report that residential homes will be provided with fuel oil before commercial or industrial businesses are. Numerous calls have already come into the distributors and the emergency fuel center reporting a shortage of diesel fuel by contractors and trucking firms. In these cases, there is little oil suppliers can do to help, because they are giving top, and in some cases, sole priority to residential areas.

Such is the case for Consumers Power Co., which has already curtailed natural gas supplies to commercial and industrial demands, including MSU. According to Don Lowell, marketing director of Consumers Power, natural gas supplies should be adequate for the winter even though they have not been able to get extra natural gas supplies from Louisiana.

With Consumer's Marysville plant kicking out 100 million cubic feet of natural gas a day, Lowell expects Consumer's supply to be able to meet the demands of the winter. But it will not be able to meet other priorities until more natural gas is discovered and processed.

Construction completed on entranceway

Asphalt construction on the Collingwood entrance to campus was completed Monday, and a tentative date for reopening the intersection has been set for Nov. 19.

John Baker, foreman for Brown Bros. Construction Co., said Monday that "theoretically" cars could now use the entrance, but that they would not be allowed to do so until next week.

Baker said that police will probably begin to ticket cars attempting to use the entrance before it is officially reopened to traffic.

He explained that incidentals, such as traffic signs, topsoil, grading and general clean-up of the intersection would delay reopening.

"Monday is the earliest possible date that we could have everything ready for use," Baker said. "And you never know how long you'll have to wait for traffic signs to be put up."

Baker said he believes that a stop light would be useful, but that none will be installed at the new intersection.

"This area will always be congested and reckless," he said. "And the solution isn't in reconstruction or regulation of cars. The bicycles cause most of the problems here—the worst I've ever seen."

A sidewalk adjoining the intersection and extending toward the entrance to Mason Hall will be poured today, Baker said, and the incidental work will delay later this week.

U.S. considers treaty to keep Israel secure

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Nixon administration is considering a treaty or some other formal guarantee to safeguard Israel's security if it withdraws from occupied lands as part of a peace settlement with the Arabs, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Monday night in Peking.

He added that the question of a "formal document" should not be taken up until Israel complies with a 1967 U.N. resolution requiring surrender of occupied territory—but without specifying all lands taken in the Six-Day War of that year.

Kissinger met for nearly three hours with Chairman Mao Tse-tung on ways to improve relations between the United States and China.

Senior State Dept. officials said in Washington they hope a formal peace conference between Egypt and Israel will open Dec. 9.

They said they would not rule out the possibility that Kissinger might attend the formal opening of such a conference and that a likely site was Geneva, Switzerland.

Much depends on how much progress can be made during the opening days of the current cease-fire talks between Egyptian and Israeli officers meeting under U.N. auspices west of the Suez Canal, the officials said.

Braniff, head fined for Nixon gift

Braniff Airways Inc. and its board chairman pleaded guilty Monday to federal charges of making an illegal contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

The airline was fined the maximum $5,000 penalty for the $40,000 contribution. The board chairman, Harding L. Lawrence, received a maximum $1,000 fine, but not the year in jail that the law says could also be levied. Lawrence said he regretted the cash contribution.

Other companies that have pleaded guilty to making illegal contributions to Nixon's campaign include Goodyear, Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing and American Airlines.

Florida gang sets man ablaze

A white man was set on fire after he and his black wife were abducted by a gang of 11 black men in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., police said Monday.

Brian Barfield, 33, of Fort Lauderdale, suffered third-degree burns to his arm, right leg and back.

Barfield's wife Jeraldine, 26, was not physically harmed in the racially motivated incident, police said.

Mrs. Barfield was ordered to "get out of town" by the gang. Then the couple was released.

Defendant shoots plaintiff, self

"In Albany, I came to expect a fair degree of combat, but nothing like this," commented Manhattan Criminal Court Judge Richard Brown.

He was referring to a Monday incident where a defendant whipped out a revolver, shot a woman who accused him of kidnapping her and then turned the gun on himself. Both were critically wounded.

After William Spruill, 39, a Bronx mechanic, shot Lois Ann Lockhart, 32, from less than three feet away, "he raised the gun toward the rest of the courtroom," Brown said. "At that point, I went under the bench." Before shooting himself, Spruill traded shots with policemen in the courtroom.

Cambodian rebels lose villages

Several insurgent-controlled villages fell to Cambodian government forces, as a new offensive attempted to clear the southern approaches to the capital at Phnom Penh.

Two columns of government troops, totaling 2,000 men, pushed insurgents south across the Prek Thnot River.

Meanwhile, in South Vietnam, the Saigon military command said 3,000 government soldiers were moving toward three outposts on the Cambodian border overrun by North Vietnamese troops in an attempt to open a supply route to Viet Cong strongholds in the area.

U-M hike may cause surplus

The University of Michigan's fall tuition hike, the biggest in the school's 156-year history, could create an unexpected surplus.

The 24 per cent boost, announced by U-M's administration as a means of combating expected declining out-of-state enrollment, might produce $3.75 million more than originally expected — about $100 surplus per student.

U-M officials indicated that a rebate was not in the works. The money will probably be used on a 1,600-person teaching assistant program and on additional staff members to administer student financial aid programs.

Soviets balk; their team barred

By refusing to play its remaining qualifying match in Chile the Soviet national team has barred itself from the final round of the 1974 World Soccer Cup competition, the International Football Federation ruled.

The ruling, announced Monday by the federation from its Zurich, Switzerland, headquarters, automatically gives Chile the coveted place among the 16 countries that will contest the final round in West Germany in June and July.

After being held to a scoreless tie by Chile in Moscow's Lenin Stadium Sept. 26, the Soviet team was scheduled to play the return match in the two-game series in Santiago's National Stadium Nov. 21.

But Moscow balked at playing in a stadium which, it said, had been turned into an "arena of torture and execution of patriots" by the military junta that overthrew the late President Salvador Allende Gossens.

Inmates flee bus, nabbed later

Four Virginia reformatory inmates shot their way off a prison bus Monday, commandeered a general's car in the Pentagon parking lot and fled through Alexandria, Va., before police recaptured them.

The hijacked car crashed into another car in rush-hour traffic near a sewage treatment plant. The inmates fled on foot and were later nabbed.

The escapees had been en route from Lorton Reformatory to District of Columbia jail to await court appearances when one inmate produced a pistol, disarmed a guard and escaped with three others, trading shots with bus escorts in an accompanying car.

Rule against death penalty kept

From WIRE SERVICES

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court refused Monday to ease the impact of its 1972 decision that abolished capital punishment in most cases.

The justices, in a brief order without comment, unanimously rejected a plea that New York be permitted to keep its present death penalty statute.

In its 1972 decision, which came on a 5-4 vote, the court outlawed the death penalty in all instances where a jury or judge had some discretion in imposing it. In effect, the decision invalidated most state capital punishment laws.

Since that decision, many states have attempted to restore the death penalty by making it mandatory in cases involving certain crimes.

But in the New York appeal, the district attorney of Oneida County said the justices should permit some existing death penalty statutes to survive, even though they allow discretion.

The New York death penalty statute allows the imposition of capital punishment in cases involving the murder of a police officer or a slaying committed by a convict serving a life term.

The court also acted in these other cases:

The justices agreed to rule on the right of municipalities to bar political advertising in public transportation vehicles.

The court rejected an appeal by the board of commissioners and school board of Chattanooga, Tenn., challenging a court-ordered desegregation plan that entails considerable busing of children.

It declined to review the Arkansas Supreme Court's ruling that the state's abortion statute was constitutional to the extent that it prohibits laymen from performing abortions.

It affirmed two convictions of persons who refused to submit to induction into the armed forces, rejecting the defense contentions that the induction orders were invalid because the local draft board refused to reopen the question of the draftee's status.

It declined to order a federal district court to set aside its order holding the Ohio obscenity statute unconstitutional to the extent that it permits authorities to forbid the showing of films that have not been determined in a prior adversary hearing to be obscene.

Americans moving north

NEW YORK TIMES

TORONTO — Canadians used to worry about the brain drain to the United States, but no more.

The tide has reversed in the past few years, and the brains are now coming north.

Ten years ago, migration from Canada to the United States was four times what it was in the other direction and the definition of a Canadian, in the words of a popular joke, was "someone who hasn't yet been offered a job in the United States."

Now Canadian immigrants to the United States are outnumbered 2 to 1 by Americans moving north.

"We love city life, and I can't think of too many cities in the United States where it's so much more," said Jerome

Friedland, 42, an advertising executive who brought his wife and three children to Toronto from Detroit three years ago.

Like him, nearly half of the 75,000 or so Americans who have moved to Canada in the '70s have settled in Ontario, the country's commercial center, where the atmosphere seems American.

Almost all the rest of the immigrant Americans settle around Vancouver, which has a breezy lifestyle similar to California's, or Montreal, which has a much more cosmopolitan atmosphere but presents language barriers.

In discussions of why they decided to come north, they almost invariably mention crime.

"We kept moving into higher and higher high-rises but didn't escape from anything," said a former New Yorker, who, like many of the immigrants, took a cut in salary to come to Canada, and still pays higher income taxes.

Two years ago the United States overtook Britain to become the leading source of immigrants to Canada, and last year 19,176 native-born Americans immigrated to this country. In the roughly comparable fiscal year by comparison, 8,951 natives of Canada moved to the United States.

The young Americans who came north to avoid service in the Vietnam War are only a small segment of Canada's rapidly growing American community, probably numbering not more than 10,000 or 20,000.

Several thousand Americans teach at Canadian colleges and universities. Fifteen per cent of the country's college teachers are Americans and 10 per cent are British.

TROUBLES STALL SKYLAB LAUNCH

10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1...crack!

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space agency has called off the Skylab 3 astronauts because of the discovery of new cracks in the Saturn 1B rocket.

SkyLab program director

William C. Schneider said Monday there was a possibility of a Friday liftoff, "but the chances are iffy at best."

"There is some feeling by experts that we could launch with these newly discovered cracks," Schneider said. "But we want to carefully check other areas of the rocket for possible cracks. We'll assess and then determine if we have to delay one day or five days or 10 days or whether we have to roll back to the assembly building."

If the Saturn 1B has to be moved back to the hangar for major repairs or replacement, the delay might be a month or more.

The launching of astronauts Gerald P. Carr, William R. Pogue and Edward G. Gibson already had been delayed five days because of cracks that were found last week in eight stabilizer fins on the rocket's first stage. The fins had to be replaced.

'48 grad heads Secret Service

By LARRY MORGAN

H. Stuart Knight, a 1948 graduate in police administration of what was then Michigan State College has been named head of the Secret Service, the federal agency that guards the President and other high officials.

"He was a very good student academically and had a very high interest in police administration," said Ralph F. Turner, professor of criminal justice and one of Knight's former teachers.

Knight began his career as a policeman in Detroit and Berkeley, Calif., before joining the Secret Service in 1950 as an agent on the White House force protecting President Harry S. Truman.

Knight worked as an agent throughout the United States and in 1965 was selected by the National Institute of Public Affairs for its Career Education Award. He went to Princeton University from 1965 to 1966 doing graduate work in management.

He served as agent in charge of the vice presidential detail for Lyndon Johnson and in 1970 was named special agent in charge of the Washington, D.C. field office.

Knight was asst. director of administration from April 1971 until October 1973 when he was named head of the Secret Service.

"He has had a very successful career as a very capable agent," Turner said, "working his way up through the ranks."

Knight was born in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and raised in Detroit. He attended Detroit Institute of Technology and now resides in Falls Church, Va.

State News gets protest: pile of 42 parking tickets

By AL SMITH
State News Staff Writer

State citizens often vent their spleen by writing a letter to the editor.

But the State News has received a protest in a more concrete form—a stack of 42 parking tickets issued by campus police.

The tickets were delivered to the State News opinion page editor late Sunday afternoon by an unidentified man in his early 20s.

Attached was a letter to the editor which said, "I watched the MSU police putting tickets on cars at the (MSU) Library very methodically. One after another they performed their American deeds."

"Couldn't they put up a sign indicating that unauthorized cars will be ticketed on Sundays?"

Campus police reported that the new signs at the Library do indicate that only faculty and staff cars are permitted between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. on any day of the week.

But Cpl. James Dunlap conceded that the signs look exactly the same as the other green and white signs on campus which permit student and public parking on weekend days.

Dunlap said the Library parking lot used to be a "red area" prohibiting student and public parking at any time, but when the parking code was changed in September, the new signs were installed prohibiting such parking at any time during the day.

State News editors turned the tickets over to campus police who will attempt to contact the owners of the 42 cars ticketed. Upon police request, the editors also attempted to describe the man.

If the car owners cannot be contacted, the tickets will be dismissed, Dunlap indicated.

Detective Larry L. Lyons, in charge of finding the ticket lifter, said "the chances are pretty slim." He was described as a Caucasian, about 5 feet, 10 inches tall, with long dark blond hair.

Malls to reduce heat, lighting use

Local shopping malls, appreciated by shoppers as a warm alternative to cold weather window shopping, are lowering their thermostats and investigating ways to conserve energy.

The Frandor Merchants Assn. acted Friday to reduce the heat on the enclosed mall area to 63 degrees. Vern Alexander, general manager of Frandor Mall, U.S. 127 and Michigan Avenue, said a study is in progress to reduce all unnecessary lighting and heating at the center.

Frando merchants also decided not to display lighted Christmas decorations at the mall during the 1973 Christmas season and that existing decorative floodlights will not be used, except where necessary for protection and safety.

Dennis Harney, general manager at Meridian Mall in Okemos, said mall temperatures were brought down four degrees to 70 degrees immediately following President Nixon's address on energy conservation last Wednesday.

"The tricky part is to keep the mall comfortable and safe," Harney said. "We don't want anyone mugged because of inadequate lighting."

Management at the Lansing Mall could not be reached for comment.

Council to select city mayor today

East Lansing Mayor Wilbur B. Brookover said he will accept a second two-year term as mayor if asked to do so by the city council at an organizational meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the council chambers at City Hall.

Council will select a mayor after John Polomsky and Mary Sharp are sworn in and officially begin their four-year terms as council members.

Polomsky and the incumbent Sharp defeated candidates Nelson Brown and Margaret McNeil in a city election Tuesday.

Brookover, who has been city mayor during the past two years said Monday that he has informed the council that he would accept his nomination.

Councilwoman Mary Sharp, who has served on council eight years, said the selection of the mayor is "up in the air" but added that she would accept a nomination.

Councilwoman Thelma Evans had no comment Monday on who might be chosen mayor. Councilman George Griffiths could not be reached late Monday afternoon.

Polomsky said that he has been giving serious consideration to who the city's next mayor should be.

"The mayor's job is important," he said. "The new mayor will reflect the direction the council will take during the next few years. We must have the type of person who is agreeable to listening to the citizens."

Council will choose the new mayor from among its five members during the meeting. The council has the option of discussing the choice during its regular session or before the meeting in private.

Higher positions sought; legislative shake-up seen

Though only two state legislators won local municipal posts in last week's elections, the Michigan House and Senate may still be in for a shake-up as several members anticipate seeking higher government positions.

Out of several state legislators running in various local races last Tuesday, Sen. Coleman Young, D - Detroit, and Rep. James Bradley, D - Detroit, were the only victors, winning posts as Detroit mayor and city councilman, respectively.

But two expected federal appointments may result in some special elections that could entice more legislators to give up their state jobs.

The expected confirmation of U.S. Rep. Gerald Ford, R - Grand Rapids, as vice president and the nomination of U.S. Rep. James Harvey, R - Saginaw, as a federal court judge would open two Michigan congressional seats that several state legislators are eyeing.

Eviction leads to request to purchase fairgrounds

The October eviction of 11 families and their horses from the Ingham County fairgrounds in Mason has prompted a Lansing State Journal writer, an avid harness horse racer to offer to buy the grounds cooperatively with other horsemen and investors.

Neil Hunter has sent a letter to the county board of commissioners requesting the sale or long-term lease of the fairgrounds.

The county fair board evicted 11 families of horsemen in October who had been training and stabling their horses and living in mobile homes on the grounds.

"There's a tremendous track going to waste because the county government can't get along with people," Hunter said.

"Horsemen are colorful Damon Runyon types — people of the back stretch. I love 'em."

Hunter said the group does not want to run a trailer park for horsemen or develop a parimutuel track but only use the facility for training.

His letter will be presented at Tuesday's commission meeting in Mason and probably referred to committee. Hunter expects to attend the meeting.

He said the group would make provisions for continuing the annual county fair.

Gov. Milliken also backed the amendment, introduced in the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, must pass both houses before being placed on the ballot for Michigan voters in November 1974.

Sen. Harry DeMaso, R-Battle Creek, believes that Vietnam veterans are "just as entitled to" a bonus by the state as veterans of past wars.

Baron must not ignore curb-cut law violations

The failure of Milton Baron and the Dept. of Campus Park and Planning to comply with a state curb cut law to facilitate the use of sidewalks by physically handicapped students is clearly one of incompetence.

The Dept. of Campus Park and Planning has ignored this law for over six months now, despite reminders and requests to comply from the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students.

On Nov. 5, Baron, director of the Dept. of Campus Park and Planning, admitted the University was in violation of the law, but that there was a problem of interpretation — whether or not good curbing should be torn up when only the sidewalk adjoining the curb was being repaired. The University held this was not necessary.

Yet in a July 3 memorandum from Baron to his staff, stemming from a meeting between the Dept. of Campus Park and Planning and the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students, he wrote:

"... In the future, curb cuts will be provided when repairs are being made to walks regardless of curb condition."

Baron knew of the curb-cut law as early as last May. A May 18 memo from Baron to the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students reads:

"As repairs are made to existing curbs and sidewalks and on our new construction, we shall adapt the layout to accommodate the wheelchair."

Yet, both the Ice Arena parking lot and the Collingwood entrance project were found in violation of the curb-cut statute.

Baron has promised to have the Ice Arena, Collingwood and other violations corrected at an estimated cost of $6,000.

However, there is also a strong possibility that if a handicapped student was injured due to the University's negligence to comply with the state statute, MSU could face an expensive and embarrassing lawsuit.

Baron has promised to comply with the law in the spring, when repairs can be made to the curbing. His promises have been pretty hollow so far, and there is reason to doubt his sincerity. A Nov. 5 memo from Thomas Kehler, landscape engineer for Campus Park and Planning to the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students reads:

"On repair work, (the Dept. of Campus Park and Planning will) keep the Office of Handicapped informed of new curb cuts. Communication need not occur immediately, however, a map should be kept up to date showing the location for these new curb cuts. Then when it is convenient this information should be given to the Office of Handicapped."

Handicapped students should not be ignored, nor should input on curb cut construction be denied the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students. That office should be allowed to make input before, not after, construction is completed.

The overt disregard by the Dept. of Campus Park and Planning of the curb-cut law is a disgrace to the University and a sign of administrative incompetence by Baron, who should immediately move to correct the situation.

Senator should resign

State Sen. Charles N. Youngblood, D - Detroit, who was convicted of conspiring to bribe a public official, should resign.

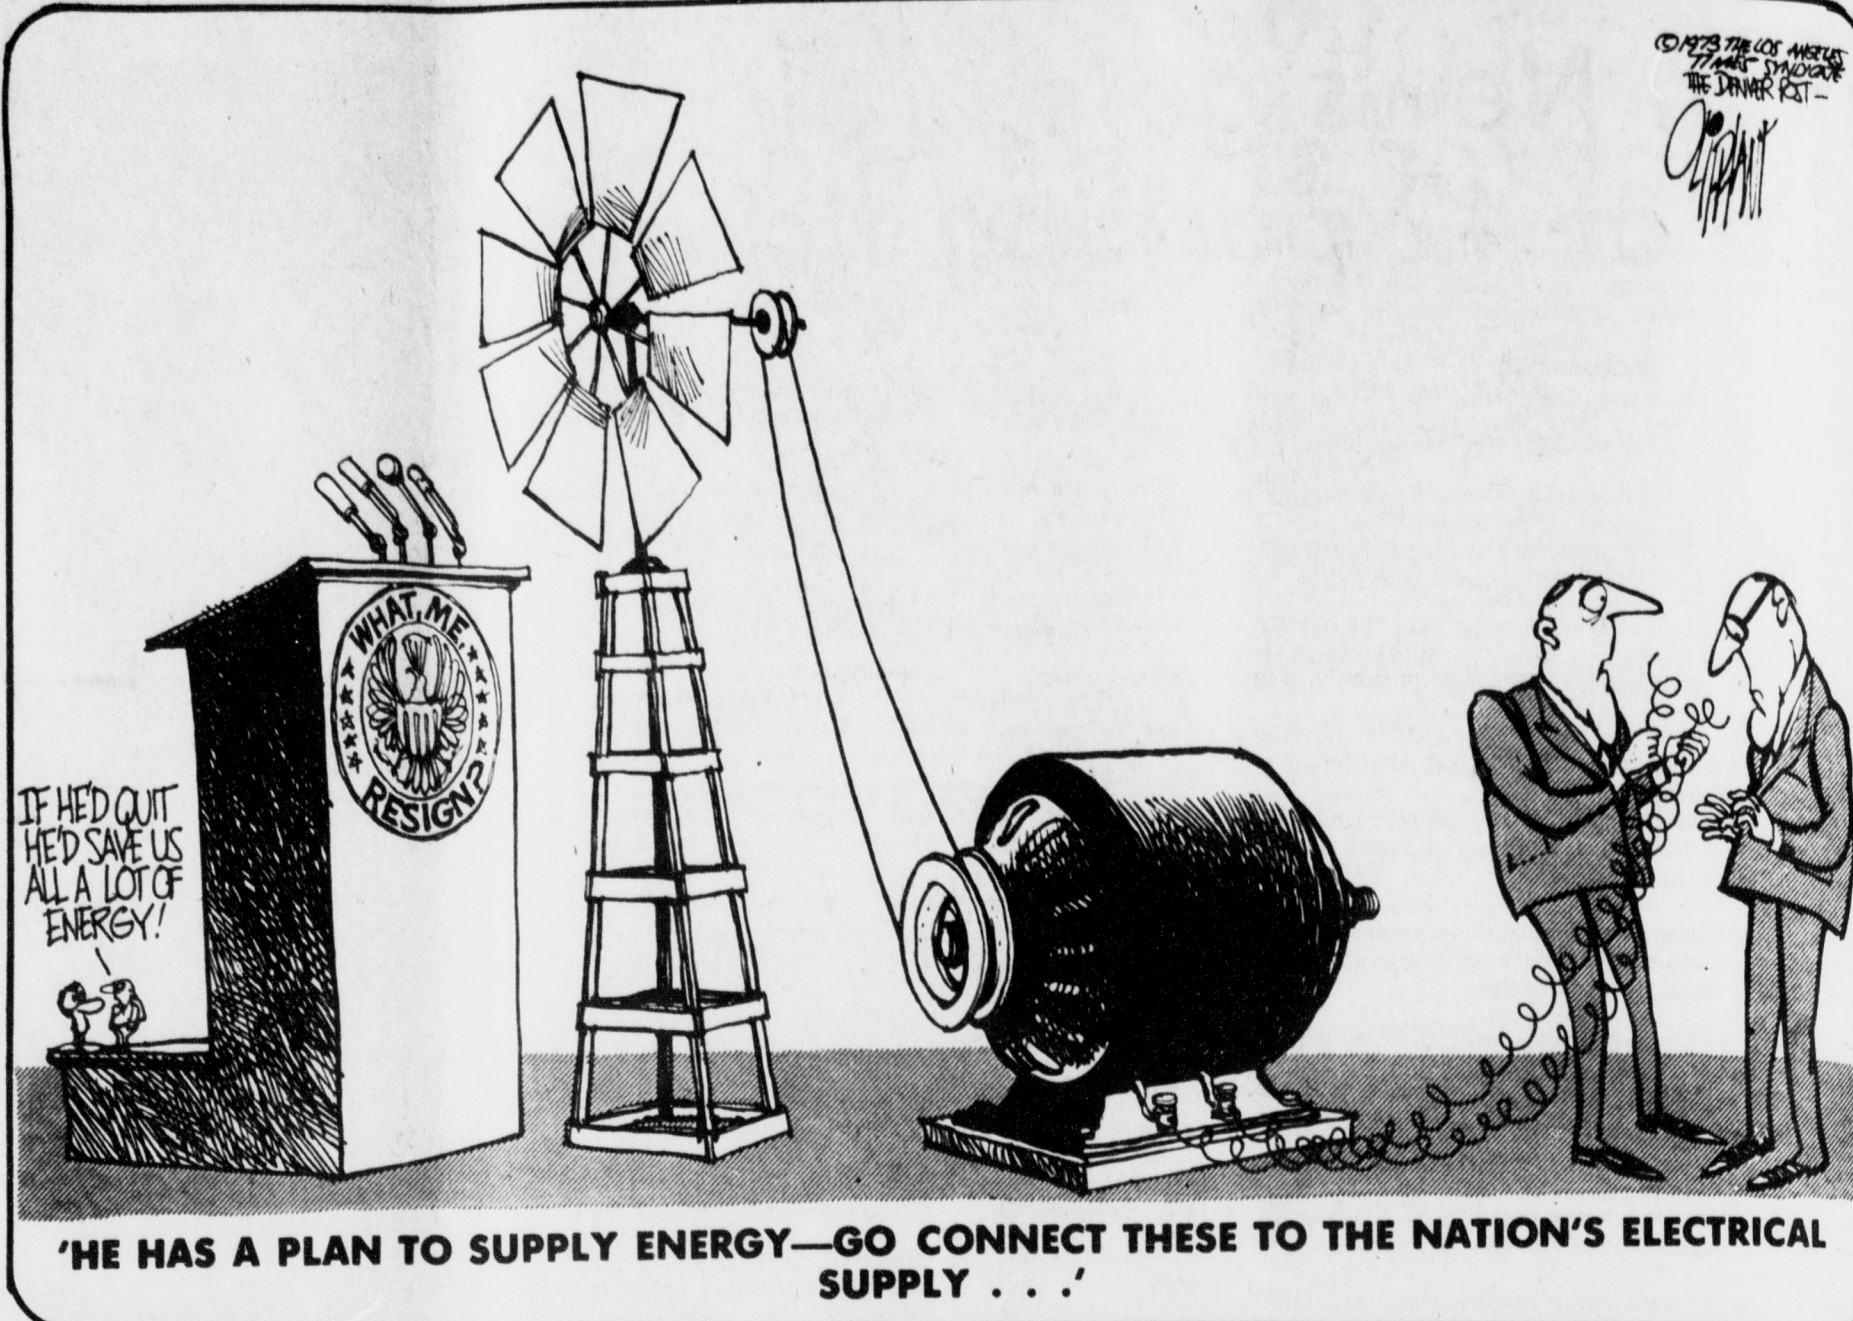

Youngblood was convicted Oct. 17 of conspiring to bribe a state liquor commissioner. The state constitution expressly forbids any person convicted of a felony involving breach of public trust to serve in the Michigan Legislature. But Youngblood still retains his seat.

Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley ruled that the Senate will have to determine if Youngblood should remain. A committee composed of three Republican and three Democrat senators was formed to investigate the question of Youngblood's resignation.

Youngblood currently is in the process of appeal, but the fact remains he was convicted of a felony involving breach of public trust and, therefore, should resign.

If Youngblood refuses to step down, the Senate committee should force his resignation. Public trust in elected officials has been assaulted too many times in recent months. It should not be flaunted again.

POINT OF VIEW

Organic foods free of pesticides

An article on Nov. 7 entitled "Researchers fail to find high value in natural food," is extremely misleading.

Donald Isleib, a "scientist" with the Michigan Dept. of Agriculture is quoted in an attempt to show that organic foods have no higher value nutritionally than commercial foods. The chief advantage of organic foods is that they are not sprayed with poisonous pesticides or adulterated with preservatives, colorings and flavorings that are in most cases toxic and, in many cases, cancer-producing.

Government agencies, such as the departments of agriculture (state and federal) and the Food and Drug Administration, speak primarily for multibillion dollar food processors, whose chief concern in such matters is to eliminate the profit loss caused by home gardens and health food merchants. The expediency of Isleib's statements is not surprising when you consider he was addressing a convention of food processors responsible for poisoning our food with dangerous additives.

There are a great number of books and periodicals which provide factual information about health and nutrition. They are devoid of the special interest ties which underlie the propaganda spewed by Isleib and many of the government-subsidized textbooks used in "nutrition" courses at MSU.

If the State News seeks to serve the student community, its writers should utilize information from unbiased sources. The presentation of factual information is crucial if you intend to educate readers in the practices of good health, rather than to indoctrinate them toward being good consumers.

How about bike racks in married housing areas?

To the Editor:

In the last year there has been a tremendous increase in bicycles. In married housing areas this has caused a problem: there is no place to put them.

There is not a single bike rack in Spartan Village, Cherry Lane or University Village. Students are forced to store bikes in front of their apartments, chained to trees and poles, in stairwell and mail box areas and in bedrooms.

This has caused not only an eye sore but a serious hazard.

The solution is bike racks, but not just racks. There must be a roof and adequate lighting before people will take their $100 investments out from under crowded balconies and into bike racks.

If you agree please speak up and put some pressure on married housing by either writing a letter to: Office of Married Housing, 1205 Harrison Road, East Lansing, or calling 355-9550.

Israel has right to exist, but not worth risk of war

To the Editor:

Sherri Gold, in her letter of Nov. 7, finds something reprehensible in "the anti-Israeli tone" of Melissa Payton's column. Actually, I deemed Payton's column a restrained expression of the fact that there is also an Arab side to the Arab-Israeli dispute, hence a partial corrective of the 99.9 per cent pro-Israeli view the news media gives us.

Even if the article were anti-Israeli, so what? Is Israel the 51st state of the Union which an American would be disloyal to criticize? On the contrary, it is just another foreign nation, as subject to an American's criticism or dislike, as any other from Russia to Bulgaria.

Melissa Payton has as much right to find fault with Israel as Sherri Gold has to defend it.

As to Israel's right to exist, a nation has the right to exist if it can exist. There was once a kingdom of Armenia and there are still Armenians, but Armenia no longer exists.

The Baltic states — Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia — which gained their independence after World War I and which, in my judgment, had a greater right than Israel to exist, could not survive when conquered by Russia at the end of World War II. Though deploring their demise, the United States quite properly did not consider their survival worth a war with Russia.

Israel, I submit, is not worth the risk of a war with Russia or the Arab world. Our recent experience with Vietnam should reinforce the lesson that we cannot fight for the survival of every small country several thousand miles away.

I am distressed at remarks erroneously attributed to me in an article in the State News Nov. 8.

Ruined by voter lethargy

To the Editor:

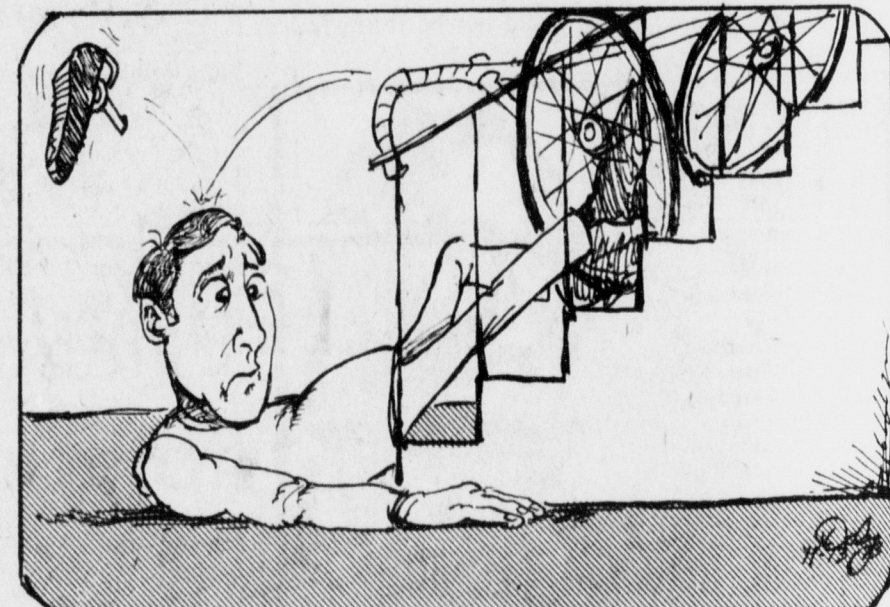

Is all desolation? We have seen "the best minds of our generation destroyed by madness" and voter lethargy.

Students, how can you think our city is paradise when the degradation of vision becomes the supreme authoritarian power? Can you only wallow placidly in your own alienation and poverty, letting Sharps and Polomskys paint the city cold and hoar; pulsating with gangsterism and starchy jealousy?

The day dawns Urizen, mountainous, cementing desire, joy creation, identity, imagination. We assert forever, though death forces of reason and reaction threaten and overwhelm, "the soul of sweet delight shall not be defiled!"

Energy contingency plan

To the Editor:

Reliable sources not under indictment inform me the following contingency plan has escaped the paper shredder!

In accordance with the presidential proclamation of an energy emergency, these steps are to be instituted:

1. To conserve heat, Nixon will stay at the warmer Florida and California white houses, rather than return to the adverse climate in Washington, D.C.

2. No news conferences will be held. Lights and cameras consume too much energy.

3. The White House plumbers will be recalled to oversee the machinery of government guarding against any sudden loss of power. Their most important function will be to monitor the Oval Office environment and adjust the air conditioning so that the President may confidently state his motto: "The tougher it gets, the cooler I am."

4. White House tape recorders will be kept inoperative for playback, thus saving electricity.

5. For massive nationwide energy conservation, major TV networks will remain off the air for one hour each night, preferably during the evening newscasts.

6. Government allocation of scarce newsprint and paper may curtail publication of the New York Times, Detroit News, Denver Post and Time Magazine.

Closer to home, MSU residence hall officials may be forced to turn down thermostats. If that occurs, they remind students that triples and quadruples will be warmer thanks to accumulated body heat, especially in smaller rooms.

No energy shortage at all

To the Editor:

As a young child I was indoctrinated, as all good school children are, in the belief that America was great and good because we have a responsive democratic republic.

Richard Nixon (to call him President implies nobility) last Wednesday night asked me to turn down my heat and drive my car slower for the good of the nation. My initial reaction was to reach for the thermostat and to plan for a little longer traveling time.

Initial reactions are subject to change. This reaction experienced such a change. Righteous indignation flowed from my mind.

With all due respect, I did not believe him. Nixon, in his four years and some months in office, has dispelled my faith in government, at least as far as he is concerned. Too many times I have been told by our responsive government of things that have been kept from us "for the good of the nation."

I have found our open system to have a lot of secrets. I figure there is bound to be an awful lot that is still not known.

In a way I am afraid to find it all out. Childhood impressions are hard to break. I might even be painful.

I do not think it too horribly far-fetched to speculate that maybe there is no energy shortage at all.

Maybe Nixon has lost his ability to govern.

Contraceptive services sought for state's minors

By ANGELIA CARROLL
State News Staff Writer

A bill allowing physicians to dispense contraceptive services to minors faces stiff debate on the floor of the Michigan Senate this week.

The bill, SB-558, is one of three bills being considered by the legislature this year which deal with contraceptives and sex education in schools. One of the bills, which would have allowed public displays of prophylactic contraceptives—condoms—if accompanied by general disease information died on the Senate floor Thursday.

The availability of contraceptive information is severely restricted by Michigan law. This lack of information is frequently cited as one of the causes of recent rises in illegitimate birth and general disease rates. Contributing factors to the lack of information include:

- Prohibition of the teaching of birth control in Michigan schools, though the basic facts of animal and human reproduction may be taught.
- Reluctance of many doctors are to give contraceptives to minors without parental consent, even though they are not specifically barred from doing so, because they fear damage suits from parents.
- Prohibition of public display of prophylactic contraceptives for men in pharmacies, even though such devices may be sold to minors. Embarrassment at having to request them aloud in a public place prevents many men, adults and minors alike, from using such contraceptives.

Condoms are the only commonly used means of contraception which also lessen chances of venereal disease such as syphilis or gonorrhea.

Annual reports of cases gonorrhea in Michigan have doubled during the past decade, from 11,000 in 1962 to 24,000 in 1972.

In 1971, 472 Michigan girls 14 years of age or under gave birth according to state health department figures. The father's name was not known, or was not acknowledged on the birth certificate in 34 of these cases.

More than one out of three of the 28,480 children born in 1971 to Michigan females aged 15 to 19 years were illegitimate.

Far too many girls receive their first information about contraceptives from abortion clinics or from Planned Parenthood when they go for pregnancy testing, Vickie Neuburg, of the Michigan Women's Commission, said. "Then, it's too late."

Abortion may now be the most readily available form of birth control for minors under a January U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing abortion on demand in the early months of pregnancy to any woman, regardless of age. Minors may have abortions or be treated for venereal disease without parental consent under current Michigan law.

The contraceptives-for-minors bill passed the Senate last year, but died in joint committee at the end of the session when legislators could not agree on amendments by the House that would have defined "minors" as persons 16 and 17 years of age.

A bill that would permit public schools to teach birth control as part of sex education has been stalled in committee for several sessions. Any student would be excused from such classes upon the written request of a parent or guardian.

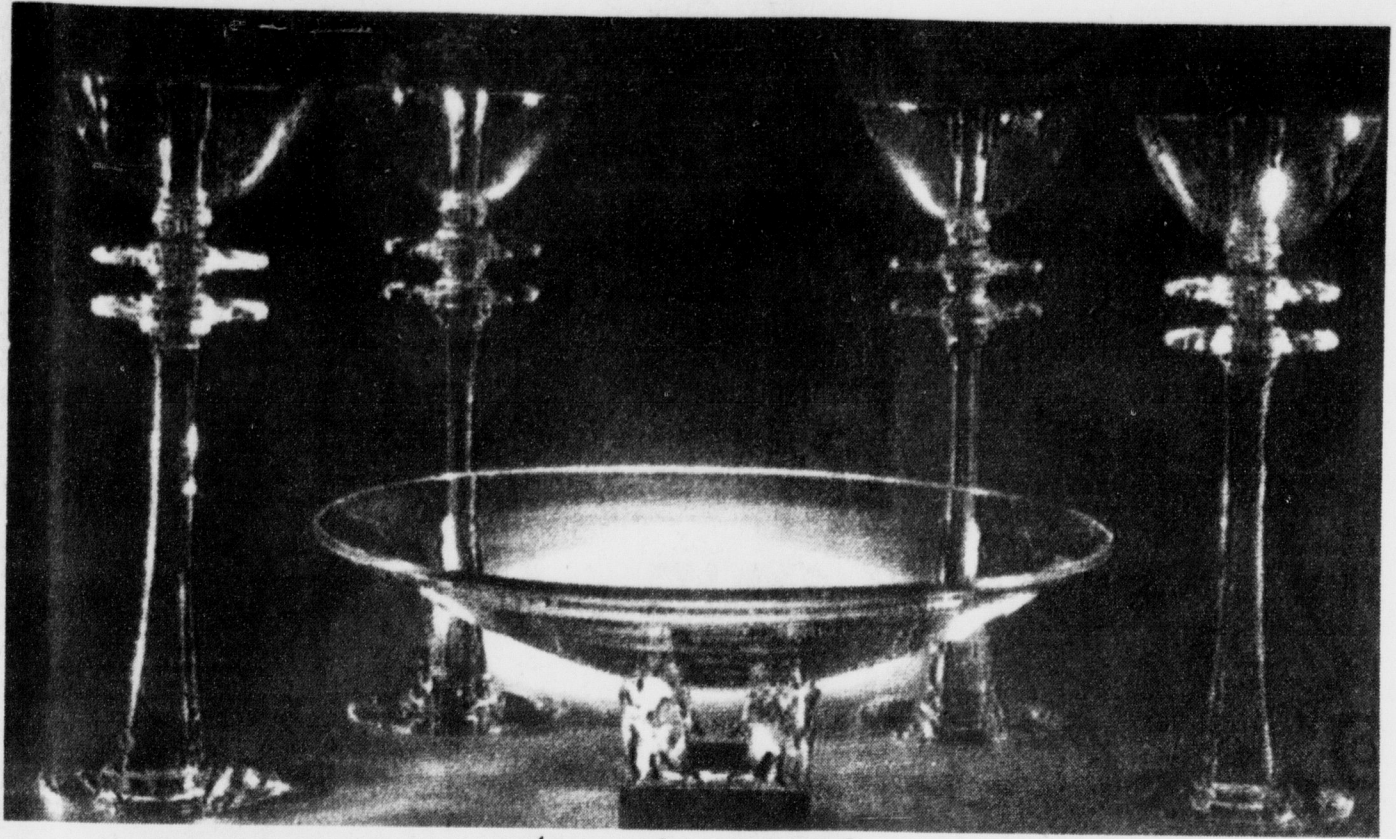

A leading opponent of the proposed legislation has been Sen. Gary Byker, R-Hudsonville.

Byker objects to the bills as further evidence of the state interposing itself between parent and child.

"I don't believe the state should enact laws which encourage sinful behavior," Byker said Monday. Byker said it was "irresponsible on the part of the state to enact laws which encourage sexual permissiveness."

Byker has proposed an amendment to the contraception-for-minors bill which would allow physicians to prescribe birth control for minors with the advice and consent of the parents.

The bill's sponsor, Sen. William Ballenger, R-Delta Township, is not overly confident about the bills chance of passage.

Edgar Cayce groups initiate 'soul growth'

By DENI MARTIN

"We're not concerned with reaching the masses," said Louie Lynch, council chairman for four Edgar Cayce study groups in Lansing. "We're trying to open a channel for people interested in understanding their spiritual self."

Every Sunday afternoon Edgar Cayce study groups meet at St. John's Student Parish, 327 M.A.C. Ave., to explain the ideals of meditation and Cayce's readings to potential members.

Cayce, a psychic in the 1900s, said he would come back to life in the year 2020 after certain earth changes occurred. Cayce predicted in 1940 that in 1969 Atlantis would arise. He died in 1945 at the age of 67.

"The Sunday Inquirer's group is the Lansing council's first attempt at recruiting for the study groups," said Lynch.

Louie Wilson, council vice chairman, said, "We're still trying to get organized. We have several new people interested in our study groups."

Growth in the number of Edgar Cayce study groups in the Lansing area has been phenomenal. Three of the four current study groups started last March. The first Lansing group is two years old.

The four study groups and their members are part of the Assn. for Research and Enlightenment. This organization was formed by Cayce, after he organized his first study group in 1931 at Virginia Beach, Va.

From this study group "A Search for God" was written. The book was based on 130 of Cayce's readings. These readings are the guidelines for study group work.

Basically, each study group attempts to develop a spiritual consciousness or soul growth within each member through the use of meditation and Cayce readings.

"We are not an encounter, sensitivity or therapy group," explained Lynch. "Meditation is the basis of our study, but we also put equal emphasis on the readings."

The number of members in a group ranges from three to 10. When a group becomes too large, another group is formed to make individual and group participation easier.

Every meeting begins with a moment of silence followed by a few short announcements concerning future activities. Members of the group are then given time to share their own experiences related to what they have learned in the readings.

"Recently, we've been reading a chapter a week in the New Testament and applying it to our readings," said Lynch.

A 20-minute meditation period ends each session. Most of the Cayce members agree that the meditation aspect of the study group scares people away.

"It relieves tension," said Dick Edgerton, a member of the East Lansing group. "It is a mechanism to be used. It's no more unnatural than walking or talking."

MSU energy cut impact unknown

Though residence halls, classrooms and office buildings are cooler now under lower energy - conserving temperatures, University officials say it will be days before the impact of these measures is known.

"Yesterday was only the first day the campus was under these measures and it will probably be sometime later this week before we know what impact they have had on energy consumption," Howard Wilson, associate director of the Physical Plant, said. "But based on our similar experience in 1971, we expect good results."

"So far there appears to be excellent cooperation by people across campus," he added.

Wilson said maintenance crews will have the thermostats in most buildings lowered and fresh air intake reduced by today.

Wilson also said that even though thermostats are being lowered in buildings, the actual temperature may go up to 74 or 75 degrees because of occupants' body heat, lights and heat produced by equipment, in the recirculated air.

Those buildings on campus heated by the old direct steam radiators, like those in Morrill Hall, present a small block to energy conservation, Wilson said.

"There is very little we can do with them, the radiators are either turned on or off. However, these buildings are relatively small in number and small in size," he said. "They make up a small proportion of the energy consuming space on campus and we expect them to have little impact on conservation."

One other energy conserving measure now in effect is to turn off the outside lights highlighting Beaumont Tower, the auditorium and Jenison Fieldhouse at night, Wilson said.

Prof gives views of Quebec election

By MICHAEL FOX
 State News Staff Writer

Despite a decrease in the number of seats captured by separatists in the Quebec provincial parliament in last week's general election there, the political party advocating a break with the Canadian confederation appears to have established a large electoral following.

This is the assessment of Gordon T. Stewart, associate professor of history, who teaches several MSU courses on Canadian history.

The separatist Parti Quebecois dropped from the seven parliament seats won in the 1970 election to six seats, but its percentage of the overall provincial vote rose from 23 per cent to 31 per cent.

"The situation in Quebec has polarized," Stewart says. "Before there were four political parties. Now there are only two parties with the separatists becoming the loyal opposition party for the first time."

Quebec, located about 450 miles northeast of East Lansing, is the largest Canadian province and is the nation's industrial heartland and contains almost one-third of Canada's population. French is the principal language of 81 per cent of the province's 5.6 million citizens.

"The French-Canadians have always felt a strong cultural identity and a corresponding desire for cultural autonomy from British Canada," says Stewart. "In the 1950s and 1960s we saw the decline of the Roman Catholic Church and other Quebec institutions which had always served to maintain the French Canadian identity."

"The Parti Quebecois emerged in 1967 as a political force which argued that as long as the province remained in confederation it would continue to become anglicized," he said in a recent interview.

Canada was established as a confederation of provinces within the British Commonwealth in 1867. The French had controlled what is present day Quebec province until 1760 when a British sneak attack force seized Quebec City.

In last week's election, the pro-confederation Quebec Liberal party captured 100 of the 110 seats in the provincial parliament but only 55 per cent of the total vote.

The increase from 72 seats in 1970 for the Liberal party was significant, but party leader Premier Robert Bourassa has strong appeal due to his emphasis on the concept of French cultural sovereignty. Several newspaper reports say Bourassa promised to make French the language of the working class. A September article in 'Saturday Review/World' Magazine reported that in factories, 55 per cent of the French-speaking workers use English on the job, a bad sign to separatists.

"To many youth today, however, the only solution to the problem of French-Canadian identity is political," Stewart says.

There were four major political parties after the 1970 provincial election, but the Union Nationale has dropped from 17 seats to no seats and the Creditistes has dropped from 12 seats to two in this election.

Background

Canadian political parties at the provincial level do not always correspond to national level parties, though the Quebec Liberal party is the main base of support for Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, a French-Canadian who opposes separation.

"Probably the reactionary Creditistes party and the once-powerful Union Nationale didn't want to split the liberal vote," Stewart said.

"I don't really see it as a setback for the separatists," Stewart says. "Of course, the leadership of the Parti Quebecois is young now and may not continue their activism forever."

The fact that the separatist Parti Quebecois could capture a high popular vote and only a few seats indicates that the redrawn electoral districts still do not equally represent the voters. This is especially true in urban areas other than Montreal where the separatists have high support, Stewart said.

"There must be an election every five years in the province, but Bourassa called the election 18 months before he had to in order to take advantage of increased employment and other economic advances which he is big on," Stewart said.

Several newspaper editorials outside Quebec hailed the triumph of the Liberal party as a vote of confidence in the Canadian confederation. Stewart explains there is widespread apprehension in British Canada about the French identity cause.

"Economically, much of the nation's leading business, such as Canadian Pacific railroad, is headquartered in Quebec," Stewart said.

"Also, the rich French history of Quebec provides much of the heritage of all Canada," he said. "In size and historical importance, it would be similar to a separation movement by New York or California in the United States."

Since October 1970 when French Canadian terrorists kidnapped two government officials, killing one, there has been a growing awareness of the need for a bilingual country, he said. Even government officials in British Columbia, the far western Canadian province, are expected to know both French and English now.

Viewed against the cultural backdrop of a strong French Canadian identity, Stewart predicts the separatist cause in Quebec will continue to grow and achieve more concessions such as bilingual government officials from the national government in Ottawa.

"We still have hope, but it is hard to know how or when this hope will be realized," said separatist leader Rene Levesque quoted by the New York Times following the Liberal landslide.

Stewart, 28, is a British citizen from Scotland who attended college in Canada and has been at MSU since fall 1970.

Student electronic shop reportedly $1,100 in debt

The Student Electronic Repair Shop, which is sponsored and funded by ASMSU, is reportedly $1,100 in debt. The shop is nonprofit and is expected to break even after each term.

ASMSU President Ed Grafton said he would not comment on whether ASMSU would continue to sponsor the shop.

"I didn't even know they were in debt," Grafton added.

The shop, located in 326 Student Services Bldg., will repair faulty televisions, stereos and radios for students with a valid MSU identification card.

MSU students work on the equipment and labor charges are $8.50 an hour. Off-campus repair services usually charge about $13 an hour.

The shop said it usually takes about two weeks for the students to do the repairs, compared with three weeks for off-campus shops.

"We do good work and don't rip you off," Fred Shell, manager, said. He said he does most of the work himself. Shell is in the shop from 4 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The Student Electronic Repair Shop is a cabinet service of ASMSU and has been in operation for about three years.

The shop is open five days a week. All students faculty and employees may utilize its services.

Track repairs to shut lanes on Hagadorn Road

The northbound lanes of Hagadorn Road crossing Grand Trunk Railroad tracks south of main campus will be closed Tuesday through Friday while the crossing is being rebuilt.

The northbound traffic will be rerouted onto one of the southbound lanes, and motorists can expect more congestion than usual near the crossing during rush periods.

Social work pay bias indicated

By MELISSA PAYTON
State News Staff Writer
Among college graduates social work majors have surprising success in getting jobs.

But women social workers, who have earned more than 80 percent of the degrees in social work from MSU in the last 25 years, face salary discrimination and are more likely to quit early in their careers.

These are some of the findings of a two and one-half year study by Bill Padberg, asst. professor of social work at MSU.

Padberg sent questionnaires to every recipient of a B.A. in social work at MSU from 1945

- 1970 whose names were on a list kept by the alumni office. He got 725 responses, about 68 per cent of the total questionnaires sent.

Padberg said that the most surprising result of the study was that 77 per cent of the respondents found at least one job in social work after graduation.

Less surprising, he said, was the fact that women social workers were discriminated against in salary levels.

In their first jobs after graduation, men's starting salaries were higher than women's. After several jobs, however, men's starting salaries were even higher than women's top salaries after the same number of jobs after graduation, his study shows.

The percentage of men in the field is increasing slightly, Padberg said, though 86 per cent of the respondents to the questionnaire were women. At the M.A. level, about 60 per cent of social work majors are women, he said.

One reason women dominate social work, Padberg says, is that "it's a generally low-paying profession. The typical role of the male is that he supports the family, so he may not go for a field that isn't as lucrative."

The study also shows that men tend to stay in the field longer. In their first jobs after graduation, about 12 per cent of the males had jobs that lasted more than six years, while only 3 per cent of the females did.

The reasons most frequently cited for leaving the field were family moves and family responsibilities, Padberg said. He added that women are affected more often.

Padberg's research indicates that public assistance (welfare) is the most disliked area of social work. Social workers cite poor working conditions, including red tape, large case loads and "bureaucratic messes" as the reasons for disliking the work.

His research will be the basis of his doctoral dissertation on social work at Columbia University. Padberg chose to study MSU alumni he said, because "I happen to be employed here as a teacher and MSU has one of the oldest and largest schools of social work."

Ford employees reject contract, sources say

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s 28,000 skilled trades workers have rejected a tentative national contract by a 3-1 margin, sources close to the union said Monday.

They said the overall vote, including maintenance and production workers, was very close and could go either way.

The United Auto Workers union failed to release results of ratification votes by 185,000 Ford employees after announcing the tally would be ready Monday. The union refused to comment on the reports of the rejection and said votes were still being counted and that results could be expected on Wednesday.

Some local union leaders, meanwhile, speculated that the contract had been rejected. One said the Ford agreement, announced by the union leadership Oct. 26, was "endangered."

Sources said the union knew as early as Friday that the skilled trades workers would reject the three-year pact, but that the UAW leadership was withholding the vote because it had not decided on its next step.

"In my opinion, the vote was negative, especially among skilled trades, and the international doesn't know what to do about it," said Bill Oshinsky, local union president at Ford's Sterling Heights Chassis Plant.

Dissatisfaction with the Ford pact surfaced more than a week ago. Skilled tradesmen complained about a provision allowing the company to assign production workers to do the work of tradesmen who turn down voluntary overtime assignments.

Most other provisions of the agreement are parallel to those accepted by the UAW membership at Chrysler Corp. in September. Some Ford workers have criticized the proposed three per cent a year wage hike as meager and the limits of mandatory overtime as too weak.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock last week attributed opposition to the agreement to "confusion over a complex package."

Skilled trades workers contend their rejection of the agreement reopens both the production and skilled trades parts of the pact to renegotiation.

But Woodcock has said rejection by skilled tradesmen would not apply to other Ford workers. Bill Leonard, UAW local president at the Ypsilanti Parts Plant, said union officials told him the vote is "close, but the agreement looks endangered."

Oshinsky said workers at Sterling Heights rejected the three-year agreement by a 6-1 margin among production workers, and 25 to 1 among skilled tradesmen.

The UAW is trying to fit the Chrysler pattern to 415,000 General Motors workers in bargaining before next Monday's strike deadline there.

Student papers want Nixon out

Student newspapers at 84 colleges and universities across the country have called on Congress in a joint editorial to impeach President Nixon.

The State News, which wrote its own editorial calling for the impeachment of President Nixon on Oct. 22, declined to support the editorial written and distributed by editors of the Amherst College Student.

A majority of the editors of the State News felt that the joint editorial was erroneous in stating that Nixon is "no longer a legitimate leader."

They felt that Nixon still is the legitimate leader because no formal charges have been brought against him, Bob Novosad, opinion page editor, said.

"Richard Nixon rules by fiat and force. He is no longer a legitimate leader. The President must be impeached," the Amherst joint editorial said.

The University of Michigan was the only college in Michigan to sign the joint editorial.

Hubcaps, tires go in weekend auto part heists

Rip offs of car parts resulted in at least $80 in losses and $20 in damage over the weekend.

A set of hubcaps valued at $50, was stolen from one vehicle and a set of wheels of undetermined value, from a Datsun were taken from Lot I.

Another Datsun at Baker Hall was damaged when someone tried to remove the windshield wiper arms.

In lot X, $30 worth of "beauty rim" hubcaps were taken from a Pontiac.

Looming library

This pattern of balconies and staircases is part of New York University's Elmer Bobst Library on Washington Square. The structure, its massive bulk looming over the low buildings that traditionally have lined the square in Greenwich Village, has been a focus of controversy since 1964, when plans for the library were announced.

FBI to open '40s, '50s 'conspiracy' files

NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON — The FBI's secret files on Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers — 53,000 pages long and holding, historians hope, some keys to the 25-year-old debate over the innocence or guilt of Hiss — are about to become public.

So are the secret FBI files on Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, the American atom spies, who were executed June 19, 1953.

And so, to some extent, are the files on Ezra Pound, the legendary and greatly influential expatriate poet who was accused of treason but was never brought to trial.

The FBI is releasing these documents after years of insisting that they should never be released — and in the Hiss case in particular, after fending off as recently as spring a lawsuit designed to open up the files.

Indeed, the FBI now plans to begin processing the Hiss papers for delivery to a Smith College professor, Allen Weinstein, as soon as the Justice Dept. and the American Civil Liberties Union sign a consent decree in federal court closing the suit.

The Justice Dept. feels "the case is mooted," Asst. U.S. Atty. Michael J. Ryan, said last week, because FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley agreed several weeks ago to make the Hiss papers available. The consent decree is expected to be filed in 4 weeks or two.

Hiss had been a government official in President Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal administration.

When he left the government he became president of the Carnegie Foundation. But in the late '40s he was accused by Chambers, an admitted Communist agent, of having become an undercover Communist and of having turned over to Chambers classified State Dept. documents.

Hiss insisted he was neither a Communist nor a spy. But he was not believed, and his insistence on his innocence was used as the basis of perjury charges. He was tried, convicted and sent to prison.

Naked came the stranger to Lansing intersection

A 30-year-old man disrupted pre-rush hour traffic on the outskirts of Lansing Monday when he took off his clothes in the middle of an intersection, police said.

"We got a call that there was a guy walking down Saginaw Street taking his clothes off," said a spokesman for the sheriff's department in neighboring Eaton County. "So we sent a car over there and, sure enough, he was."

The spokesman said the incident occurred at about 7:30 a.m. and "created quite a scene." Though it was quite windy at the time, the temperature was a relatively mild 43.

"Somebody called in and said he was jumping on cars, but I don't know whether he was or not," the spokesman said.

When the man saw the patrol car, he ran out onto a golf course, the spokesman said.

"The officer followed him and he turned around and jumped on the hood of the patrol car," he said.

Officers from the Lansing Township Police Dept. then arrived at the scene and the man was taken into custody. He was being held for psychiatric examination Monday at St. Lawrence Hospital.

3 Dog Night concert good, but dragging

By MIKE LANOUE
State News Reviewer

Perhaps the greatest surprise to come of any concert this season was Pop Entertainment's presentation of Deodato Sunday night on a bill that topped a Vegas-type Three Dog Night.

The concert resembled a martini but the drinker got to eat the olive before the drink was finished, which turned out to be Deodato, and had to drink the dry vermouth later, which happened to be the dragging performance of Three Dog Night.

Deodato played a proud one-hour performance that was extremely loud and equally good. The expansion of themes through sound conveyed that the group is off into its music and the volume created a halo of oblivion around every member.

When Eurim Deodato, pianist and leader of the group, introduced members of the band, he came to the lead guitarist and said, "John Tropea, lead guitarist, from outer space." And he was great.

His licks were verk quick, comparable in speed and raunchiness to Alvin Lee of Ten Years After, and his rhythm excelled Carlos Santana.

A bravo has to go to the fine conga players in the Deodato group. They sparked the group's pace and played remarkably well together.

Deodato's arrangement of the Moody Blues' tune "Nights in White Satin" was an excellent interpretation of music. Often, new interpretations of old music are shoddy, superficial and just do not do the original justice, but the Deodato version was as enjoyable as the first.

The highlight of the Deodato performance came on the famed rendition of Richard Strauss' "Also Sprach Zarathustra."

The crowd obviously dug the work because it stood clapping to it for about three minutes and called Deodato back for an encore aptly titled "Do It Again."

The Steely Dan tune was again well rendered to the audience by Deodato who left the capacity crowd at Jenison Fieldhouse with ringing ears, hoping for more.

Then came the biggies—Three Dog Night.

Some of the wildest costumes and garb they did wear. Some of the finest stage presence and professionalism they did display. But some of the most mediocre and dragging music they did play.

Nothing can be taken away from the way Three Dog Night goes about putting on a gig. They do it up right, clown around a lot, make the people love them—almost to the point of being obnoxious.

Perhaps their type of act would better serve a night club in Las Vegas, catering to the over-25 crowd who possess lots of money or, perhaps, to those under 18.

At any rate, the music that Three Dog Night plays seems to circumvent the collegiate audience.

They did do a marvelous lampoon on the nostalgia kick of '50s rock 'n roll. However, gay members of the audience were probably offended by the airs of pink suits and limp wrists which somehow seemed in bad taste. Perhaps this was Three Dog Night's attempt at being hip to bisexuality and glitter.

But maybe their attempt at glitter came when a member of the band introduced some cat called the "Wizard."

Decked out as Merlin the magician, the Wizard, all sequined, benefitted by some fine tapes and did some good work on the mellotron to serve as comic or maybe cosmic relief while the band changed into their groovy '50s outfits.

The singers in Three Dog Night were continually plagued with their inability to hit the high notes but people sitting in the top bleachers of Jenison Fieldhouse probably didn't even notice because the sound system failed to balance the voices with the instrumentation.

Another hassle with the concert indicated the power shortage has hit home. Every time the organist in Three Dog Night began to play, the lights would drain the power from his organ, which caused the organ to drop in pitch and the resulting sound was bad.

The selection of songs the group played from their vast store of hits was pretty well done. In fact, the whole concert they did may well have been entitled "Three Dog Night's Greatest Hits plus a few Side Shows."

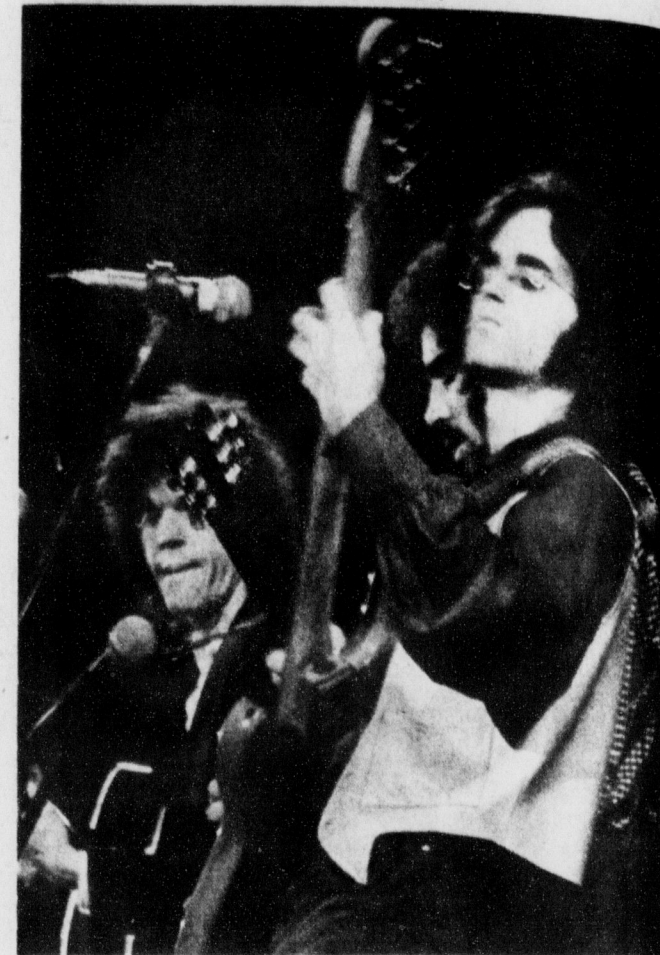

A large group within the crowd was high school students and in general, the crowd was youthful.

Apparently the crowd was well pleased with the performance of Three Dog Night as they politely held lit matches in a sense of vigil and the performers returned to the stage to do their biggest hit, "Joy to the World," for an encore.

Well worthy of mention was the performance of Touchstone, the folk-country group which played prior to Deodato.

Touchstone is a tight group and the songs it does are mostly originals written with imaginative lyrics.

However, the acoustics of Jenison Fieldhouse are unkind to the soft, impressionistic mood that Touchstone creates. Touchstone can be heard at Hobies on Monday or Tuesday nights—an atmosphere more conducive to its type of music. The variety of the concert was certainly dynamic and anyone that went surely found something to enjoy.

Touchstone

This group can be seen on Monday or Tuesday at Hobies Restaurant on Trowbridge Road.

Devastating

Eurim Deodato, pianist, and guitarist John Tropea, the main ingredients of the Deodato group, combine together in a jam that literally devastated the ears of those attending the concert that billed them second. Many listeners said they enjoyed Deodato the best of all.

Fabulous '50?

As part of their Vegas-like getup, Three Dog Night pulled off a 10-minute clothes change and came out on the stage with pink suits and limp wrists as singer Cory Wells went through a series of dances, including the Twist and the Mashed Potatoes.

Improved relations

Senate committee ratifies energy measure

The bill provides for state regulation of strip mining under guidelines imposed by the Interior Dept. The Senate Commerce Committee, meanwhile, wound up hearings on legislation for year-round Daylight Saving Time during the energy crisis. Winter DST was endorsed by representatives of the cities of New York and Los Angeles and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn.

Also in the Senate, a subcommittee was urged by the Nixon administration to approve a bill authorizing temporary suspension of clean air standards for individual power plants and factories. The proposal, introduced by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D - Maine, would allow suspension of all clean air standards, including those designed to safeguard public health and safety.

Love declined to speculate on how long rationing would continue but said that even prior to the Arab - Israeli conflict and the Arab embargo he had said there would be no substantial increase in energy supplies for three to five years.

Despite the cease-fire, he said, there is no indication of a quick change in Arab policy.

Love acknowledged there has been talk about increasing gasoline taxes so as to curtail demand but left little doubt that action will be necessary before a tax measure could move through Congress.

There have been suggestions of tax increases as high as 30 to 40 cents a gallon.

Ford's history audited in quotes

NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON — Following are some of the observations made on various issues over the years by Gerald R. Ford, the nominee for vice president.

The presidency

"I believe the power of the presidency has become so intoxicating for Lyndon Johnson that he believes he can accomplish anything he sets his mind to. The result of this presidential arrogance, this mistaken exercise of excessive power, is a crisis in our economy." — Oct. 18, 1966.

"I said earlier that I believe President Nixon, like Abraham Lincoln, is a man uniquely suited to serve our nation in a time of crisis. Every action taken by Mr. Nixon since he took the oath of office as President bears out the confidence, the feeling of trust I have in the man who now leads this nation." — Feb. 10, 1969.

Executive privilege

"To maintain that the executive branch has the right to keep to itself information specifically sought by the very people the executive is supposed to serve is to espouse some power akin to the divine right of kings. Congress cannot help but conclude that executive privilege is most often used in opposition to the public interest." — April 3, 1963.

Impeachment

What, then, is an impeachable offense? The only honest answer is that an impeachable offense is whatever a majority of the House of Representatives considers it to be at a given moment in history." — April 15, 1970.

Morality in government

"We have strayed from the rule of law. Our government leaders, by dealing in half-truths and misinformation, lead us to believe that honor and justice are just words. The message is that the end justifies the means." — Oct. 18, 1966.

"Any analysis of today's political picture in America of necessity revolves about a single phrase — 'crisis of confidence'. The American people are constantly engaged in a search for truth — for political truth, for moral truth, truth in government, for verities in our international relations... the credibility gap continues; the crisis of confidence grows." — March 2, 1967.

"We must, as a nation, elevate the moral and ethical attitudes of our people. I am sure that our new chief executive (Nixon) will be deeply concerned with the moral tone not only of the presidency but of the nation. Above all, he will seek to lead, not to dictate." — Dec. 4, 1968.

The Vietnam War

"The well-intentioned, but unrealistic, placard-carrying marchers who bear no public responsibilities cannot alter this country's policy in Vietnam." — Nov. 8, 1965.

"It is President Johnson's war, because the President plays everything too close to the vest. He has an unhealthy passion for secrecy." — June 18, 1966.

"The American people will not stand for a long drawn-out large-scale military conflict." — June 20, 1966.

Communism

"I personally believe that the Communist powers of the world implicitly seek the downfall of the Free World nations — chiefly, the United States." — Feb. 2, 1968.

"President Nixon no longer sees the Communist world as a monolithic enemy alliance but as a group of nations whose common ideology is transcended by powerful nationalist inspirations. In line with that view, the President is adopting United States policy to those nationalistic interests." — May 7, 1970.

Campaign fund-raising

"In baseball, you get three strikes. The President's Club (a campaign fund-raising operation) doesn't deserve more than four. It was a mistake from the outset, as I am sure President Johnson now realizes, to mix money and honor under the symbol of the White House, which belongs to all the people." — Aug. 31, 1966.

Political ambitions

"Asked if he would accept a vice presidential nomination: 'I would say no. I mean it. I like being in the House. There are many people in the Republican party better qualified than I am.'" — Aug. 4, 1968.

"I love the House of Representatives, despite the long, irregular hours. Sometimes, though, when it's late and I'm tired and hungry — on that long drive home to Alexandria — as I go past 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., I do seem to hear a little voice saying if you lived here, you'd be home now." — March 9, 1968.

The vice presidency

"What makes you, Jerry Ford, qualified to be Vice President of the United States? My answer is that I believe I can be a ready conciliator and calm communicator between the White House and Capitol Hill, between the re-election mandate of the Republican President and the equally emphatic mandate of the Democratic 93d Congress." — Nov. 1, 1973.

"Perhaps the worst misgivings I have about the vice presidency are that such contacts with all kinds of people would be very difficult — and that my friends might stop calling me Jerry." — Nov. 1, 1973.

U.N. begins carrying out truce

Self-confidence revealed by '71 freshman in study

By MAUREEN CAMPS

Despite ominous warnings about the rigor of college studies, 76 per cent of the freshmen who entered MSU in 1971 predicted they would do better than average in their course work.

A study of the 1971 freshman class, released in October, found most students extremely confident about their ability to excel in any academic program offered by the University.

Though the women's movement is urging an improved self-concept for women, only 65 per cent of the female freshman saw some chance to be more successful than most of their fellow students, while 80 per cent of freshman males saw it as a possibility.

The study showed female freshmen do not rate themselves as highly as males in any academic area except reading.

Fifty-one per cent of the women surveyed said they considered marriage a possible reason for dropping out of school while only 29 per cent of the men saw marriage as a reason.

"Females are compelled less by the necessity of becoming a 'provider,' and therefore are more free to pursue cultural rather than material interests," the study states as a reason why more men indicated material goals over the social and intellectual objectives chosen by women.

Similarly, more men indicate they think they will graduate with honors.

The study, prepared by Arvo E. Juola, professor of evaluation services, and based on student self-estimates, indicates that 76 per cent of the freshmen rate themselves above average or in the top 10 per cent in academic ability compared to their classmates. In writing and math ability, too, over 50 per cent rate themselves above their peers.

It seems irrational to have so large a group consider themselves the best.

"The thought of not succeeding academically is difficult to accept because of their high commitment, and to regard themselves as lacking required abilities is even more threatening," the study asserts.

In nonintellectual areas an unusually high proportion of freshmen rate themselves above average or in the top 10 per cent of the class on a number of traits.

Sixty per cent of freshmen rate themselves highly in the categories of stick-to-it-iveness, drive to achieve and understanding of others. In areas of practicality, sense of humor, leadership and sociability, 40 to 50 per cent of those surveyed evaluate themselves as above their peers.

Traits in which a smaller percentage of freshmen rate themselves highly were attributes such as artistic and mechanical ability, defensiveness, sensitivity to criticism and political conservatism.

The study points out that these are traits "where it is more fashionable or at least not ego shattering to be regarded as less than superior."

Only time will tell if the actual performance of students will match self predictions, but high confidence and very favorable self-images prevailed when the 1971 class entered MSU.

Male and female differences are also apparent in other areas. Ultimate objectives sought by incoming students and their professional, political and societal goals all point to a basic difference in the attitudes of men and women.

Men indicate material goals as reasons for attending college. These included a better job, more money and status improvement. Women seem more concerned with intellectual and societal objectives, such as increased awareness of different lifestyles, skill in getting along with others, and community service.

Defense officials say ex-POWs recovering

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense officials say former U.S. war prisoners have recovered "exceptionally well" from the physical and emotional effects of their captivity.

"They came through better than we expected," one official said Monday in discussing recently analyzed results of medical and psychiatric examinations and treatment since the release of 566 American POWs from Communist Vietnamese prisons.

The anxieties and confusions involved in readjusting are now behind the former POWs, the official said.

Last spring Pentagon medical authorities said all the POWs showed signs during preliminary check-ups that they had suffered "stress reaction," including depression, after coming home.

But now officials said mental and emotional problems have turned out to be "far less than we got ready for."

Only one man has been discharged for a psychosis and two others still are hospitalized for the same reason. However, these two men are described as "coming along very well."

Only about 20 men were diagnosed as having neurosis and "most of these conditions have been resolved by now," officials said.

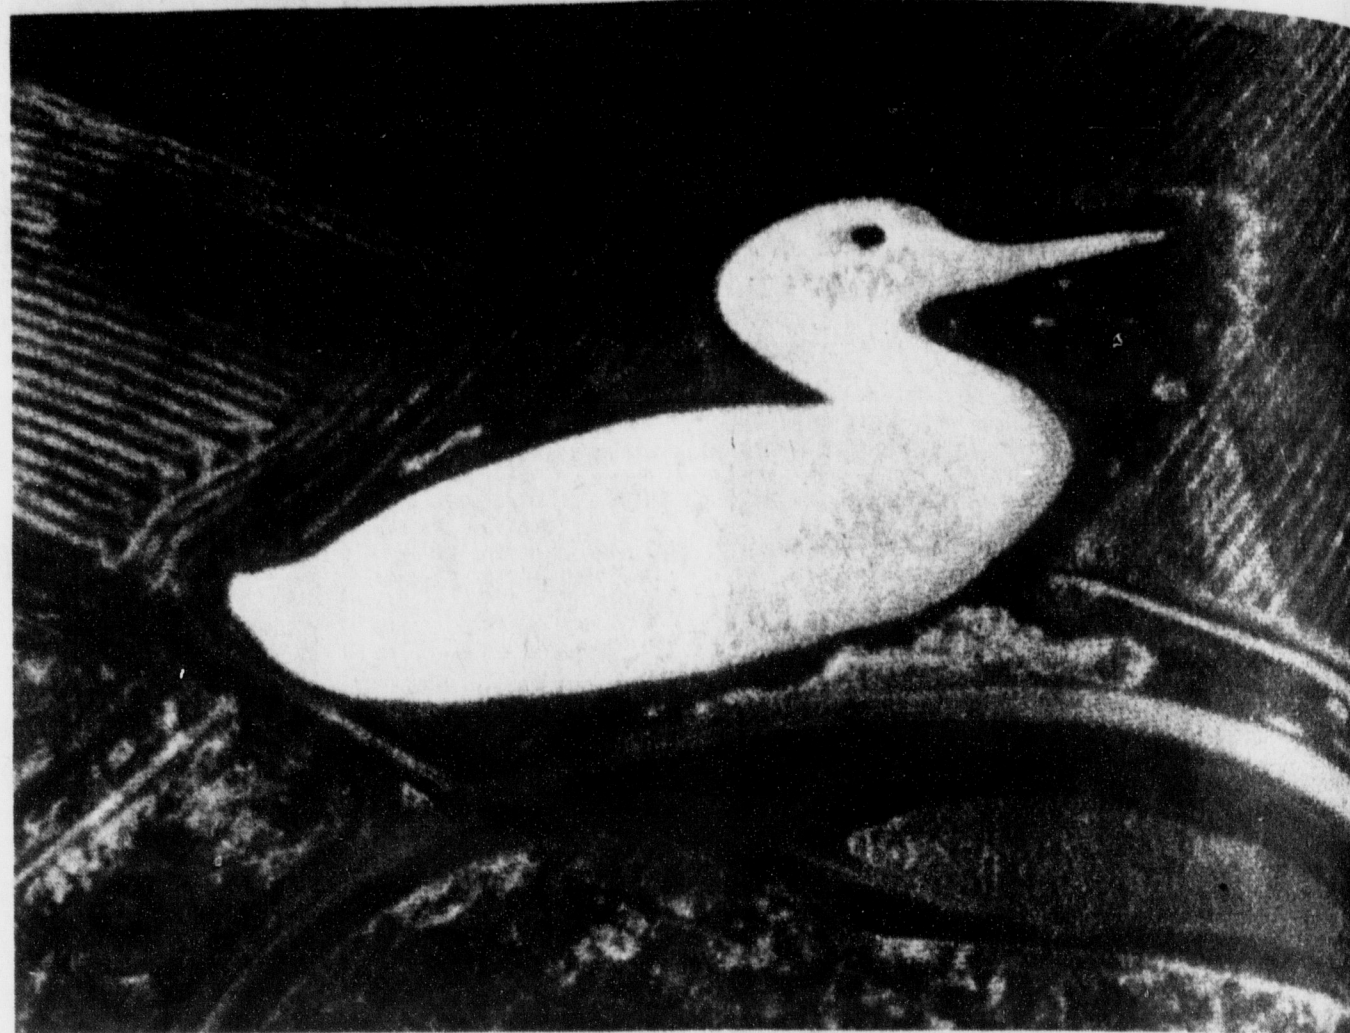

On the physical side, officials said that former POWs have been purged of various kinds of worms and there should be no further recurrence of malaria.

There will apparently be lasting physical effects for some, including arthritis developed in prison and damage to knees, elbows and shoulders suffered by air crewmen who ejected from their planes and made bad parachute landings. But few of these will be disabling, officials said.

Where possible, military surgeons are correcting the results of fractures and other injuries.

The Air Force has returned 290 of its 325 former POWs to duty, though not all are flying again yet. The Navy has 104 of its 138 former prisoners on duty, the Army 39 of 77 and the Marines 12 of 26.

Another 64 men have been honorably discharged or retired from the service.

Losses from bad debts suspected of business administration office

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the Small Business Administration (SBA) said Monday there appear to be "substantial losses" in bad debts incurred by the Richmond, Va., SBA office.

Administrator Thomas Kleppe said in an interview, however, that he was not alleging criminal misconduct on the part of the Richmond area director or his regional boss in Philadelphia.

But he said, "the over-all situation looks like we have some bad credit decisions. We have some bad loans on the SBA portfolio and we are going to sustain some losses."

Kleppe recalled both the area director, Thomas F. Regan and the regional director, Russell Hamilton, to the Washington office Monday in the wake of a revelation during the weekend by the House banking subcommittee on small business that it had uncovered what appeared to be substantial criminal abuses in SBA field offices.

The subcommittee recommended that Congress not pass a Senate-approved bill to increase the SBA loan authority from $2.3 billion to $6.6 billion, until criminal investigations into the allegations are complete.

Kleppe criticized that decision and said, "we've got a problem with credit in Richmond. We know it and we're doing something about it."

But he said that was no reason to cut off funds to all other SBA operations.

A subcommittee member had told the Associated Press that the allegations in the Richmond case include possible organized crime influence in the SBA loan program, the discovery of millions of dollars of loans in default and considerable cases of conflict of interest on the part of some SBA administrators.

Kleppe declined to comment on the possible tie-in with organized crime. He also said he couldn't comment on the probable size of the bad loans in Richmond other than to say they would be "substantial."

Kleppe said Hamilton notified his subordinates of problems in the Richmond office Oct. 25.

The next morning, Kleppe said, "I called Henry Petersen at the Justice Dept. and told him he would be receiving from us a recitation of the charges. And they were delivered later that day."

He said he also suspended Regan from day-to-day supervision of the loan business and appointed Alan Harris of the Atlanta SBA office to temporarily take over.

"Since then Regan has been in general limbo," Kleppe said.

Asked about allegations that Hamilton and others had recommended removal of Regan before and had been overruled by Kleppe, the administrator denied it.

In an interview in Philadelphia, Hamilton said he had recommended that Regan be removed in 1970 and again in 1971 "and the administrator turned it down."

"This thing is serious as hell," Hamilton said, adding that the Richmond situation was "so wild nobody would believe it." He would not elaborate.

Program slated to raise funds for drought victims

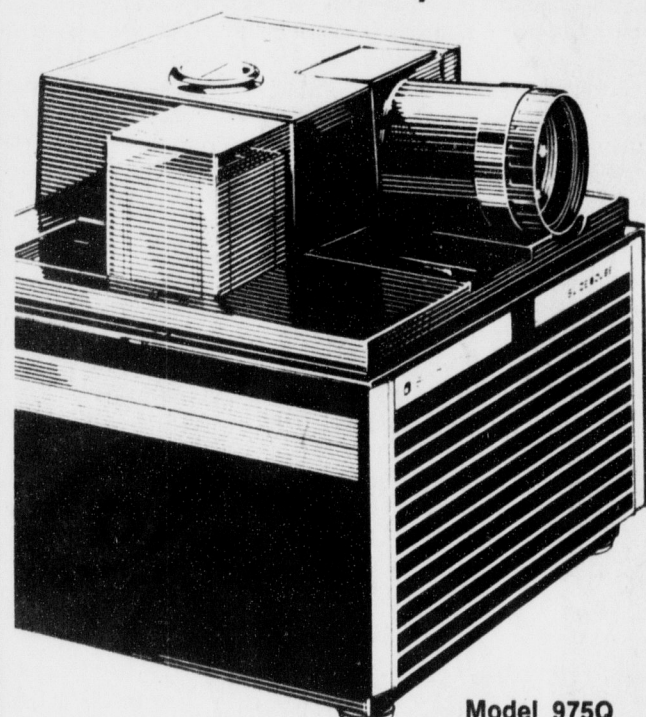

Speakers and a film will highlight Id Mubarak Karamu, a fund-raising program sponsored by the Office of Black Affairs to inform the public about the current drought in Africa.
