Tony Cipicchio, left, and Robert Chambers, G34 West Shaw Hall, were housed in a study room when residence hall management began breaking down triples that resulted from overenrollment at the beginning of fall term. The University has since allowed tripled students to break their contracts and move off campus.

Vacated rooms will remain empty

By BOB OURLIAN

State News Staff Writer

Residence hall rooms vacated by students who move off campus or quit school will remain empty under a current residence hall procedure despite the existence of some 300 triples.

Robert C. Underwood, manager of residence halls, said Tuesday this action would start Saturday in anticipation of some overassignment winter term.

However, a source, requesting anonymity, said that the vacant room procedure has been in effect three to four weeks already.

And Peter Eckel, asst. manager of residence hall operations, denied on Nov. 5 that the University was maintaining vacant rooms.

Underwood said one reason vacant rooms are being maintained in the light of triples is that the halls do not want to move a student from one triple into another.

Two sources had informed the State News that triples, in their respective halls, would be maintained as triples even though other rooms in the hall were known to be vacant at the start of winter term.

One woman said there are seven triples on one floor in her hall and even though a room will be vacated winter term by a student moving off campus, none of the seven triples will be broken down.

"I can understand how people can be upset," Underwood said, "but you have to look at it as a numbers game."

"We're damned either way," he said.

Though Underwood said that not many rooms will be held vacant, rooms vacated would remain empty in the event of overcrowding winter term.

However, he said that rooms vacated by one of their two occupants would be filled up.

About 200 students have used the contract release policy to move off campus since it was started Oct. 25.

Gary North, coordinator of residence hall programs, said on Nov. 1 that overcrowding should be finished by the first week into winter term.

He said, however, that some overassignment may be necessary the first week until residence hall assignment determines the location of all the spaces in residence halls.

Underwood, anticipating some overcrowding winter term, described the contract release policy and the alleviation of overcrowding as "going real well."

Fuel ordered for Defense Dept; public gas supply may drop 30%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government tapped civilian and domestic supplies Tuesday to assure adequate fuel for the Defense Dept.

Sources said consumer gasoline supplies may soon be reduced by up to 30 per cent.

The cutback would be twice that announced by President Nixon Sunday night.

Nixon's Emergency Energy Action Group, which met Tuesday, was reportedly considering rationing gasoline or imposing a supplemental tax of 30 to 40 cents.

Meanwhile, Nixon signed a bill requiring him to carry out mandatory allocation of all petroleum products within 30 days. The law, designed to assure adequate supplies of fuel for all parts of the country.

The White House also proposed regulations Tuesday that would require home owners who use oil for heat to lower their thermostats six degrees below last year's settings. The regulations do not provide an enforcement mechanism, and the penalty for failing to cooperate would be running out of fuel.

In its first use of the 23-year-old Defense Production Act, the government commandeered 825.9 million gallons of gasoline and other fuels. The Pentagon estimates the fuel is sufficient for about one month.

By invoking the Production Act, the Defense Dept. authorizes oil companies to break delivery contracts with civilian customers.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger indicated in a briefing with Nixon and 22 senators and House members that the Arab oil embargo is unlikely to end until progress emerges from Mideast peace talks which begin Dec. 18.

One conservation proposal reportedly advanced by the Treasury Dept. would impose a gasoline tax of 30 to 40 cents. It could be coupled with a weekly allowance of 10 to 15 gallons of gasoline, free of the added tax.

Year round Daylight Saving Time was approved by a vote of 311 to 88 in the House.

With the reported increases in gasoline hoarding, people are warned that gasoline vapors escape from cans even in cold weather and can explode.

Gasoline should never be stored in a room with hot water heating equipment.

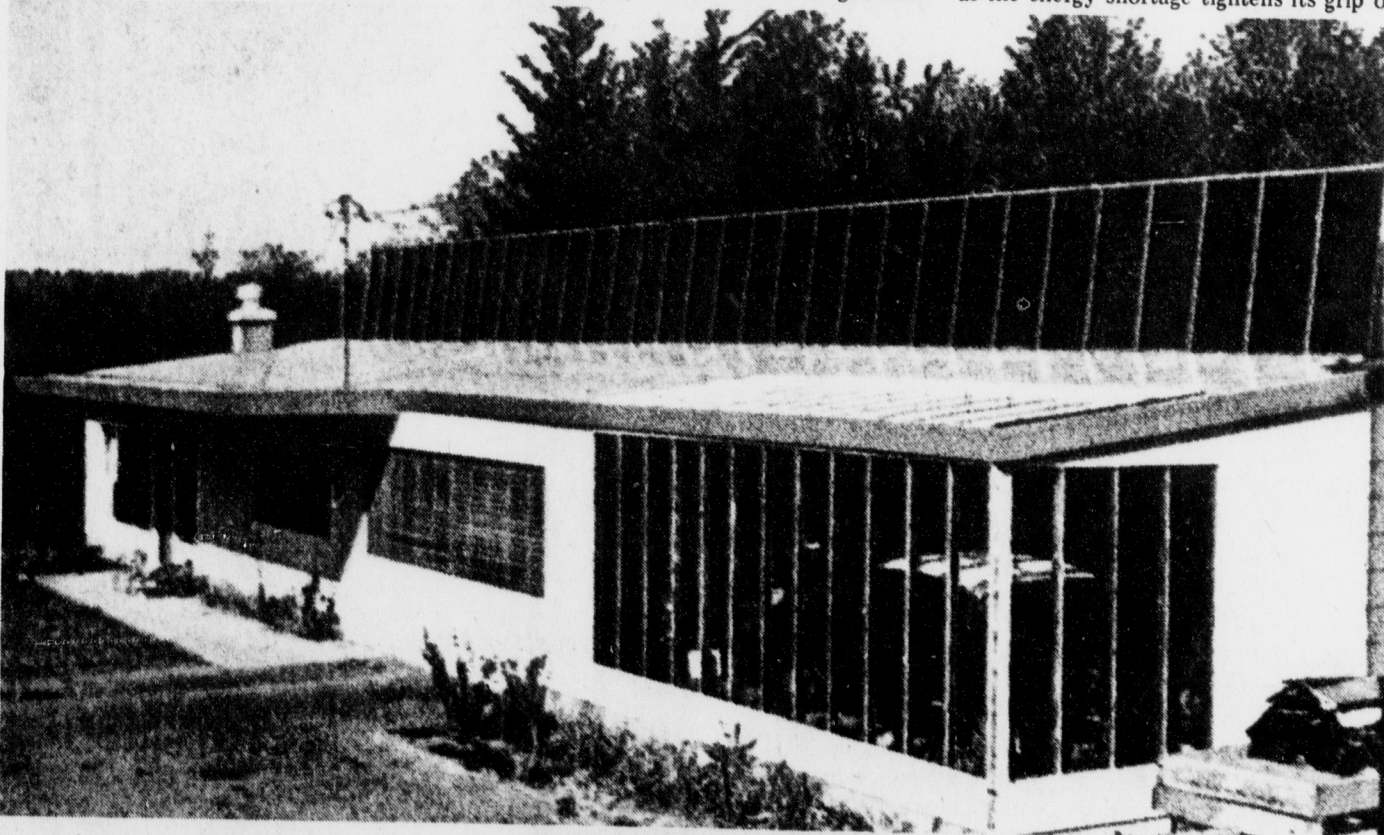

In other energy-related developments: The White House issued final regulations prohibiting electric power plants that burn coal from switching to oil.

John F. Schaefer, of Love's Energy Policy Office, told a Senate small business subcommittee that the current fuel conservation measures proposed are sufficient to deal with shortages caused by the Arab oil embargo.

Senate OKs Ford

House expected to give approval for nomination

FROM WIRE SERVICES

The nomination of Rep. Gerald R. Ford as vice president will go to the House after its overwhelming approval by the Senate Tuesday.

House approval of Ford, expected next week, would complete congressional confirmation as required by the 25th Amendment.

The vote was 92 to 3 in favor of the Michigan Republican. All opponents were Democrats.

During brief debate, Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D - Nev., said he was unenthusiastic about Ford's conservative views but that nothing was turned up by his Rules Committee to require rejection.

But Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D - Wis., opposed the nomination, saying "I don't believe he can provide the type of inspirational leadership we need if he should become president." He cited Ford's votes against civil rights measures and for Vietnam War policy.

Besides Nelson, others voting against Ford were Sens. Thomas F. Eagleton, D - Mo., and William Hathaway, D - Maine.

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D - Mich., said that Ford would make "a steady, decent and believable President," adding "There is nothing the country needs more."

In what members said was probably the most searching scrutiny of any presidential nominee in history, Senate and House committees sent hundreds of investigators looking into Ford's background and studied 2,000 pages of raw FBI files.

Ford spent six days before Senate and House panels, answering detailed questions about his financial dealings, handling of campaign funds and philosophy and winning congressional praise for openness and candor.

Members of both the Senate and House stressed that the proceedings were especially important because of the start of preliminary impeachment proceedings in the House against President Nixon.

The House Judiciary Committee, which woundup its hearing Monday, is expected to vote on the nomination Thursday. Action by the full House is scheduled before Dec. 6.

Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R - Tenn., senior Republican on the Senate Watergate committee, said the approval of Ford could help restore "the confidence of the American people in the ability and willingness of the federal government to effectively deal with the pressing issues of the day."

REPS ANGRY OVER ROSE BOWL

Law school threatened

By MAUREEN McDONALD
State News Staff Writer

The decision to send Ohio State to the Rose Bowl has created a national Brouhaha and MSU's proposed law school and Athletic Director Burt Smith are right in the middle.

"I think the athletic director (Burt Smith) is a horse's ass and I'd like to punch him in the nose for the way he voted," Rep. Hal Zeigler, R - Jackson, said.

The Big Ten athletic directors went into a huddle Sunday to decide which university would go to the Rose Bowl and University of Michigan lost their rosy chance by a reported 6-4 vote.

Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke has said the athletic directors' vote will remain secret; however, an informed University source said Tuesday there was reason to believe the vote went 7-3, so Smith's vote makes little difference.

Though Duke refuses to comment on the vote, football fans are ready to tie Smith to a goal post.

His house has been egged, irate phone calls, letters and telegrams have arrived, and some legislators have threatened to vote against a law school appropriation for MSU.

"If some people are looking for an excuse to ax the MSU law school this will provide them with an opportunity," Rep. Dennis Cawthorne, R - Manistee, said.

Fanning the controversial flames is Rep. Bill Huffman, D - Madison Heights, a member of the House Appropriations Committee, which considers MSU's budget. "MSU did not behave responsibly toward the taxpayers of Michigan," he said.

Considering the potential revenue loss to U - M, in the absence of a Rose Bowl spot, Huffman said MSU should lobby the Ohio legislature for law school funds. Besides, Huffman does not believe MSU should have a law school anyway.

The law school proposal will not face the legislature until February, but Rep. Loren Anderson, R - Pontiac, cautions that legislators have long memories, and feelings are running quite deep against MSU.

"With the heated competition between Western Michigan University, MSU and Ferris State College for a law school, the football decision could be a catalyst," Anderson said, reminding the reporter that he personally was not carrying a vendetta.

Rep. Bill Copeland, R - Wyandotte, the chairman of the appropriations committee which reviews the law school proposals, said he will not permit game hostility to invade an appropriations discussion. "I operate on the merits of each bill and respond to no pressure groups."

But he's doing his best to discourage legislators from voting in favor of the MSU law school. "I've always been opposed to it," he said. "It's not a good idea because of its impact on ecology. MSU is a land grant college and that is the job it should do."

While the legislative quarterbacking goes on, an injunction to prevent Ohio State from playing in the Rose Bowl was asked in federal court Tuesday by a U - M graduate student.

Gerald E. Faye filed the class action suit in U.S. District Court against the Big Ten, charging the conference vote was illegal and arbitrary.

Students face flight cuts; cost of tickets to increase the nation.

A 5 per cent general air fare increase approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board effective Saturday plus a reduction in student fare discounts on the same date means that the average student will pay 16 per cent more to get home this year than last.

A standard ticket costing $100 would have cost the student $83 last year. The same ticket this year will cost him $96.60.

The student traveling on standby will be the first to suffer from the gradual cutback in flights between major cities which has taken place since October when the energy crisis first began to affect air travel.

Paul H. Elmen, city manager for United Air Lines in Lansing, said, "The student is going to have more trouble this year because he's not going to have the variety of flights to choose from."

Elmen said that only a few flights to and from Lansing have been cut.

Locally, both United Air Lines and North Central Airlines said that seats were still available on many flights leaving Lansing during the weekend of Dec. 7 through 9 when the student migration is expected to reach its peak.

Those purchasing or reserving seats for flights after Saturday will have to pay the higher air fares, Elmen said. Student fare discounts will be eliminated entirely by June 1974.

Clash looms on power to ease fuel plight

By TOM HAROLDSON
State News Staff Writer

There is nothing like a crisis to get the wheels of government in motion, and that is what is happening in Lansing this week as state officials try to come to grips with the energy crisis.

Most of the action surrounds getting quick legislation that will establish the administrative channels for coordinating the state's attempts to survive the serious situation.

Gov. Milliken would like to have vested in his office the power to cut highway speeds and to curtail outdoor advertising. He is also working on setting up the state's energy crisis coordination, though his ideas are rumored to be slightly different from some legislative preferences.

In the legislature, most of the crisis preparation consists of legislating power solely to one agency to coordinate the massive efforts that will be needed to deal effectively with the crisis. This may come in the form of legislation sponsored by Rep. William Fitzgerald, D-Detroit, chairman of the joint legislative committee on the energy crisis.

But Milliken and energy legislative leaders have different opinions about where the center of the coordination should lie.

Fitzgerald would prefer to place most of the power in the hands of the Public Service Commission. That power would consist of total coordination of energy information, action and final decision making, with the legislature providing checks and balances.

It is difficult to assess exactly where Milliken would like the power to be, but he has indicated he would prefer to see the power diffused among the Public Service Commission, his own office and a task force on fuel supply, which has handled much of the preliminary action in dealing with the state's crisis so far.

He will further articulate his position this week as aides have said he is currently preparing substitute legislation for the Fitzgerald bill.

Analysis

There is also essential disagreement among legislators and the governor over what powers the central agency will have. All sides agree that the agency should have the power to force disclosure of the supply and demand figures of oil companies and distributors.

"Coordination of energy supply and demand can be accomplished by providing the Public Service Commission the authority to require wholesalers, distributors and agents in the oil business to furnish supply and demand information and provide necessary authority to enforce these information requirements," Milliken said in his Monday night message to the legislature.

The Fitzgerald bill not only specifies disclosure as a requirement of such companies but also dictates that they be licensed by the state. This is one of the main differences now.

Some legislators would prefer to let the federal government handle licensing. They feel that the state could be too punitive in doing this. Fitzgerald thinks otherwise.

"This measure is not meant to be harassment towards the oil interests but rather an information point for us," Fitzgerald said.

Some legislators are also trying to prevent a future crisis from catching the state off guard, as the energy crisis has. State Sen. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, has sponsored legislation which establishes a crisis council to prepare and protect the state from situations similar to the present one.

It is supported by Milliken, and Pursell expects its passage soon, possibly by early next year.

Legislators are predicting that most energy crisis legislation will be on Milliken's desk by January, as top priority is being given to all energy legislation. They will not speculate, though, on how differences of opinion will be worked out in so short a time.

Arab leaders weigh rival claims

Rival Jordanian and guerrilla claims took precedence at Tuesday's session of an Arab summit meeting in Algiers. The explosive issue, Arab leaders feel, must be resolved so a united front can be presented in an upcoming Dec. 18 peace conference with Israel in Geneva.

Kings and presidents from 16 countries met in closed session to hear Egyptian and Syrian reports on the conduct of fighting during the October Mideast war.

The Jordanian - Palestinian dispute is over King Hussein's fears that a Palestinian government in exile may be formed that will claim to represent all Palestinians, who form a majority of Jordan's population. Hussein remained in his capital, but Yadir Arafat and other Palestinian guerrilla leaders came to Algiers. Arafat was reported willing to reconcile with Hussein if guerrillas, crushed in a bloody 1970 civil war, are allowed back into Jordan with full rights and freedom of operation against Israel.

Arab foreign ministers approved a Saudi Arabian proposal to lift all oil restrictions against Japan and all European Common Market nations except the Netherlands, sources said, but made no move to lift the embargo against the United States. The move was to reward Japan and European nations for policy tilts more favorable to the Arabs.

Canada may curtail investors

Canada's door to foreign investors, once wide open, has slowly begun to close.

The House of Commons in Ottawa approved a bill imposing strict controls for the first time on a broad range of foreign investment in Canada. Senate passage is expected.

The bill is a response by Canadian nationalists to the huge share of the country's economy controlled by foreigners - especially Americans. Private U.S. investment in Canada is now estimated at $35 billion. Americans control half of Canada's manufacturing, including almost 100 per cent of the Canadian auto and rubber industries.

Under the bill a foreigner must get Cabinet approval to establish any new business in Canada, regardless of size, or to take over any existing company valued at more than $250,000, or which has over $3 million in annual revenues.

Hijackers snubbed, seek refuge

Three Palestinian gunmen who hijacked a Dutch jumbo jet over Iraq Sunday continued to hopscotch around the Middle East Tuesday in search of a haven.

The gunmen, snubbed by Arab leaders, refueled their plane at the airport in the tiny Persian Gulf shiekhdom of Dubai before heading for Aden, capital of South Yemen at the tip of the Arabian peninsula. The plane circled there for several hours before heading back to Dubai after the Aden government refused safe conduct to the hijackers.

The gunmen were reported negotiating with the Turkish government for permission to land at Istanbul.

Before they reached Dubai the hijackers had made four stops on their zigzag 4,600-mile journey. At Malta, the stop before Dubai, 244 passengers and eight hostesses were released. An extra pilot joined the nine-man crew and a hostage vice president of the Dutch airline KLM.

Pot dealers aid boy's surgery

The generosity of a self-styled marijuana dealer's group will enable 6-year-old Jody Dietrich to get a vital heart operation.

A woman walked into the Sterling National Bank in Davie, Fla., handed the bank president's secretary an envelope stuffed with $2,000 in large denomination bills and left.

A trust fund to raise money for the boy's operation was set up last week after a hospital refused to admit him because his parents did not have either insurance or the $3,000 to cover the cost of the operation. The hospital claimed it did not mention a figure and only asked for a deposit.

"What the hell is happening in this country when a 6-year-old child needs life-saving surgery and is denied treatment because some hospital demands a down payment on the inherent right he was born with to health and happiness?" said the letter accompanying the contribution, signed "Cannabis Rex for the Broward County Marijuana Dealers Assn."

Nixon travels far on weekends

Talk about staying close to home during the energy crisis: President Nixon has spent only four weekends at the White House of the 44 weekends so far in his second term in office. Twenty were spent at his Camp David, Md., retreat, eight at his waterside home in San Clemente, Calif., 11 at Key Biscayne, Fla., and one weekend he was hospitalized with viral pneumonia at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Nixon, who has urged Americans to stay at home over the weekends to conserve fuel, made two round trips to Camp David last week, using up 300 gallons of gasoline to ferry the presidential party by helicopter.

Nixon's Air Force Boeing 707 that carries him to Florida uses up about 4,000 gallons of fuel one way at the 475 m.p.h. speed adopted this month. The trip to California burns up 10,000 gallons.

Watergate tape buzzes, hums

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the famed White House tapes was played in public for the first time Tuesday but the only question it settled is that there is indeed a humdinger of a hum.

It lasted, as the White House said, 18 minutes and 15 seconds.

To straining ears in U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica's crowded courtroom, it sounded like electric clippers in a barber shop. Here and there, before and after the hum, the voices of President Nixon and aides John D. Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman could be heard in snatches of conversation.

"What the hell does that show you?" a voice like the President's said once. "I'd like a little of that consomme today." A voice sounding like the President said again.

There was some whistling, but tune and whistler were unidentified.

Then the long buzz, loud at first, then a little lower and then loud again.

Meanwhile, the Senate Watergate committee acknowledged that its investigations of the mil' fund and the Hughes-Rebozo money were not going well and postponed further hearings at least until January.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., and vice chairman Howard H. Baker, Jr., R-Tenn., attributed the delay to witnesses who have failed to appear under committee subpoena, White House refusal to turn over some documents and an admission by the staff that it wasn't ready to proceed.

The two senators left open the possibility that the panel would go out of existence on Feb. 28, 1974, without holding further hearings.

Committee chief counsel Samuel Dash said, however, there will be further hearings before the panel is phased out. But Dash also said in an interview that the staff soon will begin trimming both clerical and investigative personnel in preparation for the Feb. 28 shut-down.

President Nixon was pictured by the White House Tuesday as being undecided about making public some of his federal income tax returns though one Democratic senator, who met with Nixon, said that the President had promised such a move.

Gerald L. Warren, deputy White House press secretary, told reporters Nixon will make available "complete information" about his personal finances but would not say if release of actual tax forms would be part of the operation.

The tape, of a meeting in Nixon's Executive Office Building suite on June 20, 1972, was played as the President's secretary, Rose Mary Woods, was on the stand.

It was the 10th day of a hearing that began as an inquiry into two subpoenaed Watergate tapes the White House said were nonexistent. It changed in character after the White House disclosure last week that the Haldeman conversation was missing the 18-minute segment.

Special Watergate prosecution force lawyers say that the part obliterated was conversation about the Watergate break-in that occurred only three days before the conversation was recorded.

Expert fears recession

By STEVE REPKO

The United States is due for an economic recession in 1974 which the energy crisis will only make worse, Mordechai Kreinin, professor of economics, said Tuesday.

"The U.S. would have suffered a recession in the consumer sector due to government monetary policies, interest rates and consumer demands in any case," Kreinin said. "The energy crisis will carry it into other sectors of the economy."

Kreinin said in a telephone interview that Michigan will suffer heavily during the recession because of the auto industry's reliance on a steady flow of gas and oil.

Kreinin said that he had predicted a recession long before the current energy crisis.

"There is a six- to nine-month lag between the initiation of a fiscal or monetary policy by the government and a determination of its effects on the economy," he said. "A restrictive policy will drag down the economy about six months later, as it is now."

Kreinin cited the tight money policy of the Federal Reserve Board and resulting high bank interest rates as current restrictive policies on the economy.

He also said that high interest rates make investors switch from stocks to bonds, and that the present drop in the stock market was predictable.

"The recent drop of stock averages was due both to the energy crisis and an anticipation of worse things to come," Kreinin said.

He added that the stock market is not the best indicator of the state of the economy.

"Consumer anticipation, investment plans (collected and released by the Dept. of Commerce), purchase orders and backlogs are much better economic indicators than the stock market."

"I would have expected investments, inventories and exports to remain strong and confine the recession to the consumer sector. With the energy crisis these will now be affected," Kreinin said.

PIRGIM finds toy safety improved, but dangerous items still in stores

By SUSAN BURZYNSKI
State News Staff Writer

The cute little doll you purchase for your sister for Christmas may not be as harmless as it looks.

The Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM) is now completing a toy safety report which shows that many defective toys including dolls with flammable clothing are on the market in the East Lansing - Lansing area.

A follow-up in five Michigan cities — including Lansing - East Lansing — to the 1972 PIRGIM toy safety study says that the danger of some infants' and children's toys, especially in the areas of projectiles (dart guns), flammables (doll clothes) and electrical toys (irons), has not been improved.

Only one out of 10 dolls purchased by the 10 PIRGIM volunteers wore clothing which was not flammable, Joe Tuchinsky, executive director of PIRGIM, said. None of the dolls, including the well-known Barbie, contained even a warning about the doll's clothes, he said.

Tuchinsky said though there has been a great improvement in toy safety since last year, these areas have no public standards.

Seven stores in the area were visited by the volunteers, who examined toy shelves for items banned by the Consumer Product Safety Commission. These were items which fit general areas of defectiveness that are not specifically listed on the banned list and toys which are clearly dangerous but are not under any public standards yet.

PIRGIM found that one store, the Topp Village Toy Market, 3105 W. Saginaw St., carries the "Little Angel Suction Toy," which has been legally banned by the safety commission.

The suction toy for infants broke into several pieces after being dropped four times from a four-foot height, Tuchinsky said. Tiny beads which could cause choking inside the bell-shaped toy spilled after the toy was dropped. The beads also had sharp edges after breaking which could hurt an infant.

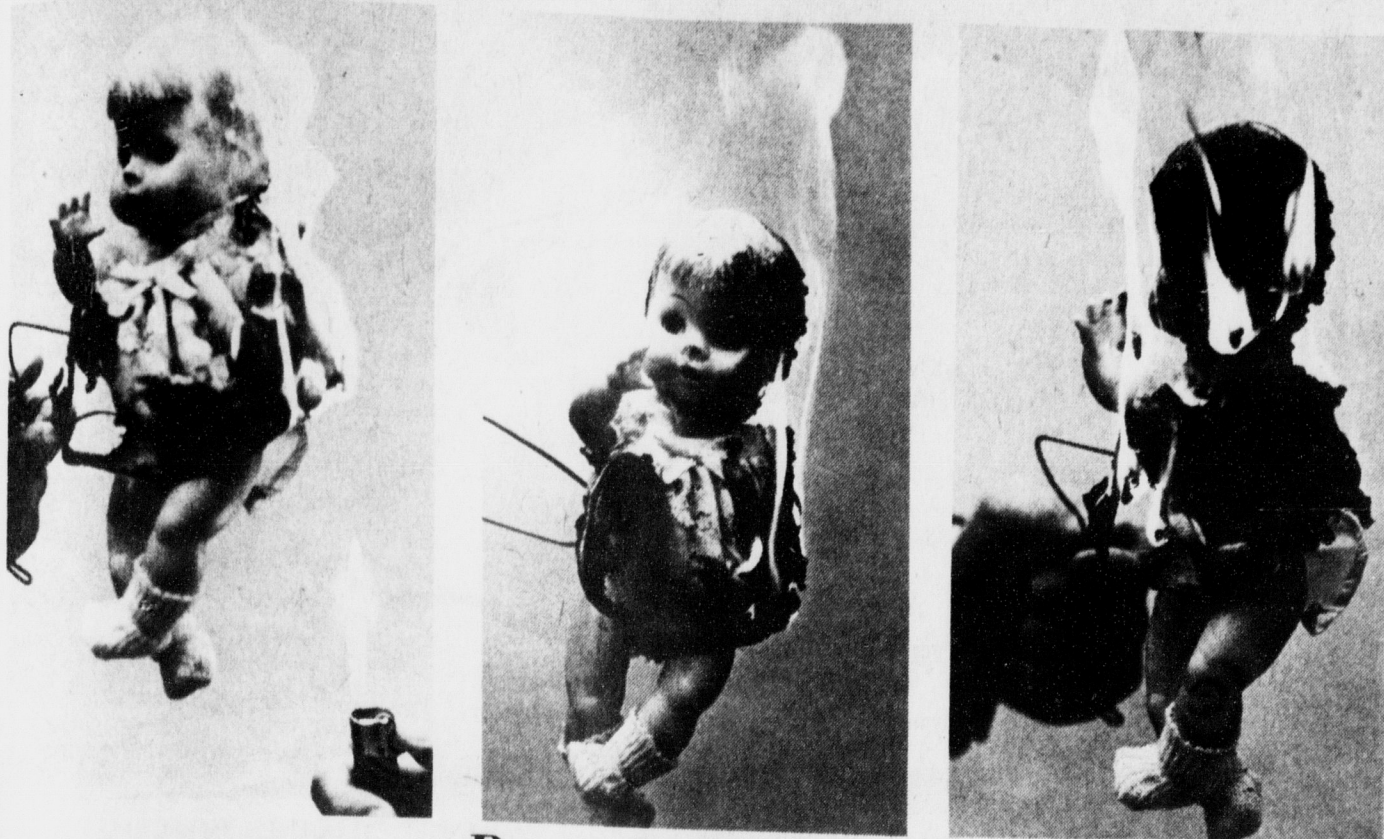

The six other stores included in the study — J.C. Murphy and Woolco in the Meridian Mall, Meijer Thrifty Acres in Okemos, Hobby Hub in Frandor, the Knapp store in downtown Lansing and K-mart, 5625 W. Saginaw St. — carried at least one toy which fit into the dangerous toy categories, Tuchinsky said.

He said, however, only a fraction of the amount of dangerous toys found last year were available this year. He credited the improvement in toy safety to pressure put on toy manufacturers, legislators and the safety commission by Public Interest Research Groups and other consumer groups across the country.

He also linked improvement to more standard setting done by the safety commission, which was formed this year. Previously, the Food and Drug Administration handled the banned toy list and safety standards.

Tuchinsky added that inspection of toys on the shelves does not appear to be improved.

"If untrained volunteers like those in PIRGIM could find such a great number of defective and dangerous toys, trained professionals could probably find many more," Tuchinsky said.

Groups oppose bridge project

By MARK KELLY

Two East Lansing citizens advisory commissions came down hard Monday night against the plan to widen the Kalamazoo Street bridge and rechannel the Red Cedar River.

The eight-member East Lansing Environmental Quality and Aesthetics Task Force met for four hours in City Hall and voted unanimously to oppose the Ingham County Road Commission's present plan for a $700,000 construction project.

The East Lansing Traffic Commission also announced its opposition to the proposal after a lengthy meeting. "There's just no way we could accept this plan," traffic commissioner Charles Massoglia commented.

The County Road Commission already has indicated it would drop the plan if both East Lansing and a group of MSU experts opposed the plan. The East Lansing City Council is expected to act on the recommendations of its advisory groups late this month or early in January.

A survey of 26 engineering and environmental experts conducted by the environmental task force and read at the meeting Monday found general agreement that the bridge project would disrupt the environmental balance in a surrounding 46-acre woodlot.

Some of the experts polled said that construction would alter breeding habits of some 44 bird species living in the area and ruin plant life for several miles downstream.

Environmental task force members also questioned whether there was a real need for the project.

The new bridge was proposed to avert traffic disruptions during flood periods in the Red Cedar, but task force members questioned whether either the flooding or the traffic flow on Kalamazoo was heavy enough to justify the project.

Asst. city engineer Gordon Melvin asserted that the rechanneling phase of the proposed project was not really proposed as a flood control measure, but rather to make the bridge reconstruction itself more convenient.

Mark Scherer, curator of the Fenner Arboretum, told the task force, "If we destroy this area and others like it, we are destroying an experience of future generations and the knowledge they might have gained from such discoveries."

East Lansing needs buses badly but University unwilling to share

Last summer East Lansing approached the University with a request that MSU extend its bus service into the city. The University quietly demurred, and nothing further has been done on the matter.

Now that East Lansing has had trouble setting up its mass transit system with the Capitol Area Transit Authority, the need for increased University cooperation with East Lansing for the development of a mass transit system must be reexamined.

MSU has a transit fleet of 23 buses. Between three and 10 of these buses are available only for charter each term. This is a great luxury in the East Lansing area, where mass transit is limited. In this age of an energy shortage, perhaps luxuries like charter buses must be given less importance.

The University is not an ivory tower; it has a responsibility to help the community of which it is a part. Perhaps MSU should cut its charter fleet or extend some of its present bus routes into East Lansing.

This could mean buses run less often on campus, but this is a small price to pay for a mass transit system for the entire area.

MSU officials fear the bus system will lose money if it is expanded off campus. However, no matter how many buses were run off campus by the University, the city of East Lansing would still have to pay for the service.

If MSU did extend its services, there is a chance it could get state and federal mass transportation funds through the auspices of the city.

Legal problems surrounding the extension of MSU's bus service are entirely unclear. Apparently the University has never asked Leland Carr, University attorney, for an opinion on the matter because it has never seriously considered extending its service.

Jack Breslin, executive vice president, said: "To my knowledge there has been very little work done by MSU or the City of East Lansing on the problems of extending service."

The University, at least, should begin to work a little harder.

Get tenants' bills out of committee

There are four bills in the state House Committee on Urban Affairs that could offer much relief to tenants in rental units, when and if they ever get out of committee and on the floor.

As it now stands, no action is scheduled to be taken on these bills until next year. It seems the urban affairs committee has a whole bookful of bills on its calendar.

Rep. Perry Bullard, D - Ann Arbor, and Rep. Daisy Elliott, D - Detroit, are two representatives sponsoring the bills. Bullard's bill is a little more comprehensive, but both are worthy of consideration, if the legislature ever gets to them.

One of Bullard's bills would require landlords to pay a 5 per cent interest rate per year on tenants' security deposits. This would be an especially helpful way for students to earn money on their deposits. Since the money belongs to the renter and not the landlord, it makes sense to have the money working for the renter's benefit.

The other bill in Bullard's package would permit tenants to form collective bargaining units to negotiate with landlords. This bill also would allow tenants to participate in a protected rent strike. This basically means a tenant group could pay rent into a special bank account instead of a landlord's until differences are settled.

This could give tenants some leverage in dealing with landlords in disputes, a power sorely lacking under current laws.

Elliott's bill is very similar to Bullard's, but not as detailed. It calls for recognition of tenants' unions in landlord-tenant disputes, setting up of negotiation committees and allowing tenants to take their cases to circuit courts if negotiations fail.

However, it really does not matter which bill is more detailed if both sit in committee. The track record of the legislature on tenants' rights is already blotted with the passage last April of a watered-down security deposit bill. This record will not be improved if this much-needed legislation is allowed to languish in committee.

A falling leaf, crashing waves tell you where you want to go

Eastern Airlines, the Wings of Man, is now offering to flutter around inside your head and tell you exactly where you want to go.

For a $1 fee, they will feed your secret fantasies and dreams to their computer, which they claim is chock-full of the thousands of vacation experiences which Eastern offers.

Then, lo and behold, they will tell you where you want to go (and, of course, how much it will cost). Not where you THINK you want to go, but where your innermost self has always yearned to go for true peace and contentment.

Eastern's questionnaire, which wrings your mind of its fantasies and idiosyncracies, was stuffed in Saturday editions of the Detroit News and is also available "at your travel agent's."

"What sounds like you?" it asks. Pictured are a trumpet, a falling leaf, crashing waves and a fierce lion.

This presents a problem for the Eastern computer. Is a latent leaf sent to New England in the autumn to be with other leaves, or to tropical Tahiti to feel unique among the jungle flora? Is a potential trumpet sent to Bourbon Street, New Orleans, or to an empty Shea Stadium where he can fully express his inner self?

Another question, which remarkably resembles those posed to Miss America candidates, asks "Which animal would you like to be?"

Eastern's computer also demands that you rate the degree to which you are a PTA parent, a permissive parent, a pennypincher, a paranoiac, a hypochondriac, a loner, a miser, a dedicated dieter, a boozier ("happiness is a double martini at the end of the day" - strongly agree, tend to agree, etc.), a Ben Franklin fan, allergic to sunshine, allergic to work, allergic to humidity, allergic to hot weather and allergic to seafood.

Perhaps the six pages of honest responses, when considered by a competent computer, do reveal something about a person which he could not himself compute.

Maybe the right check mark next to "I phone a physician whenever I am feeling ill" will send you to sterile Seattle and keep you away from those nasty, infested Caribbean islands.

Maybe a "strongly agree" on "Blue jeans are all the clothes I want" will keep you out of the Regency Hyatt House and urge you to stay at a comfy YMCA instead, where you can "take in the sounds and smells of the city."

But maybe any half-intelligent person could save himself $1, save the world some computer energy and make those decisions himself.

Sure, it's easy the Eastern way. One need not think, plan or feel excited. One must simply wait 10 days for the computer to sift through its wealth of experiences and voila, the vacation is set.

There are some risks, however.

Eastern does not guarantee its perfect vacations. There is no pink - and - white coupon reading: "If your inner self is not totally satisfied with your perfect vacation, we will gladly refund the $6,542 you spent on it. We reserve the right, however, to keep the $1 fee our computer."

Another note of caution - Eastern, according to the reliable Yellow Pages, flies to 105 American cities, Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Bermuda, the Bahamas and Jamaica.

Note that Eastern does not fly to Moscow, Cairo, Belfast, Calcutta, Tokyo, Rome, Madagascar, Sicily or Sydney, Australia.

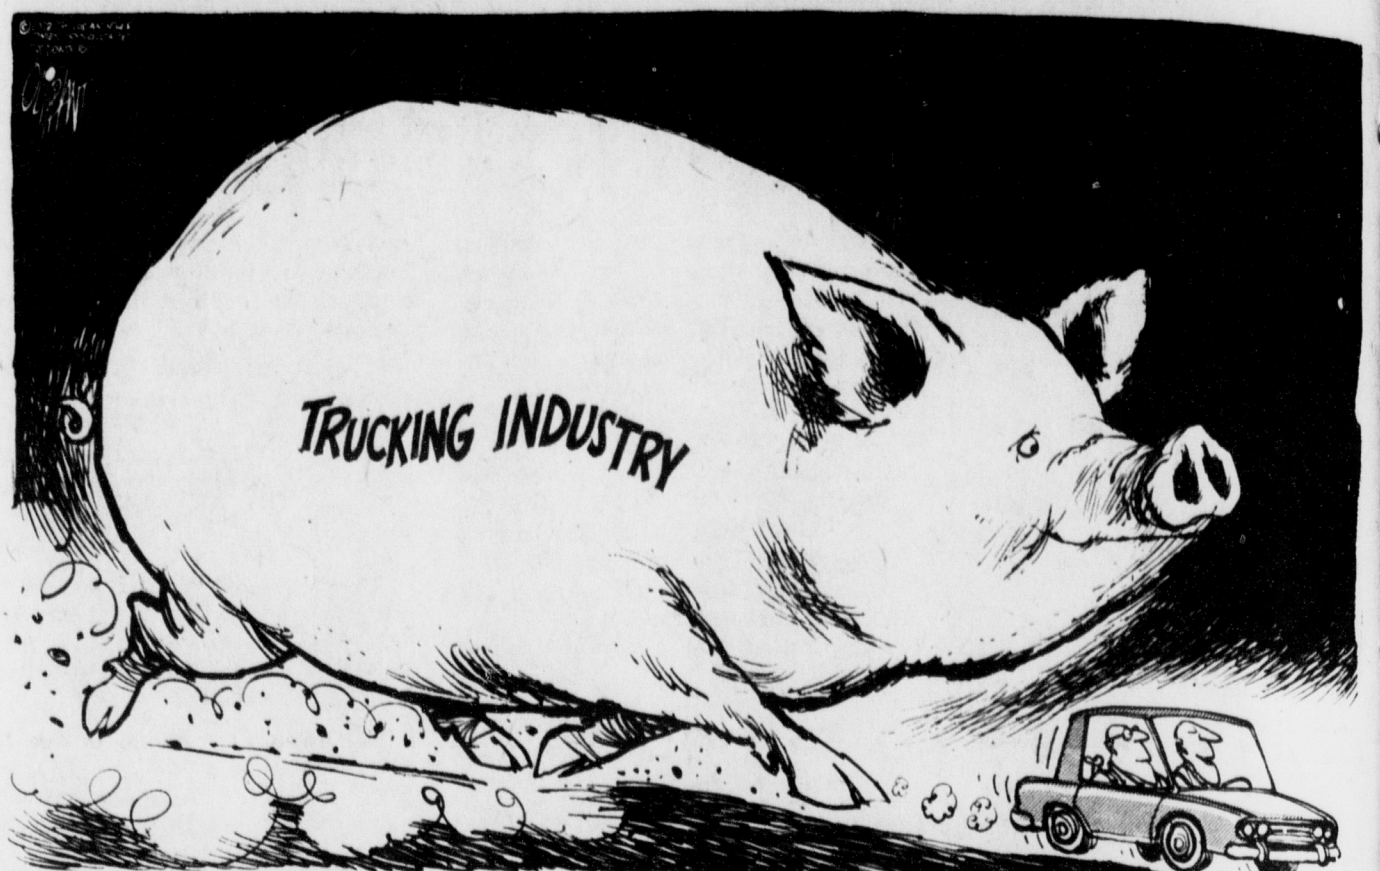

Thus, your perfect vacation will never occur in any of those spots. Even if you indicate that you hate hot weather, would like to be a polar bear, would enjoy living in a commune and hate to follow the crowd, they will not send you to Siberia or Reykjavik, Iceland.

Perfect vacations just do not happen in such places.

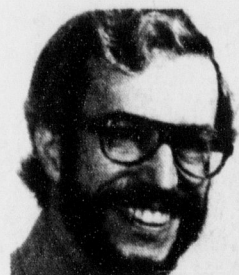

A more perfect solution to the growing crisis of mediocre vacations lies in establishing a rent - a - vacation agency, the American Vacation Invention Service (AVIS). Its supercomputer - storing not thousands but millions of vacation experiences offered by all airlines, bus lines, train tracks, taxi routes and bike paths - would, for a minimal cost, invent a one-of-its-kind collector's item vacation for you to enjoy at, say, $500 a day.

The vacation would then be retired like Gordie Howe's number, guaranteeing that your slide shows will be totally unique, never to be duplicated by even your most green - with - wealth - and - envy friends.

No longer need travel be tedious, grimy, slow or disappointing. And even if it is, the envy of friends is worth the cost.

... BUT IF EVERYONE PULLS HIS WEIGHT, I'M SURE WE'LL GET THROUGH THE CRISIS OK!

The Doctor's Bag

By ARNOLD WERNER MD

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at MSU Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

When I stopped breast feeding my baby, my breasts became smaller than they were before I became pregnant. Is this usually more common among women who breast feed, or is it just a natural occurrence for anyone who has a baby? Once the breasts become smaller, is there any way to regain the original size? I would not be so concerned but now that my husband knows what he is missing, he feels a little gyped.

Breasts do change with pregnancy. Early in the pregnancy breasts become larger and firmer. This effect is due to hormones which are preparing the breast to produce milk following delivery of the baby. Following childbirth, if the woman breast feeds the infant, the breasts remain enlarged and firm. If the woman does not breast feed, or when the breast feeding stops, firmness and size decrease.

The breasts do not become smaller than they were before the pregnancy but there may be a loss of firmness. Thus, they may droop or lie flatter against the chest walls than they did previously and give the appearance of reduced size. There may be a somewhat greater loss of tone in women who breast feed, but this is highly variable.

Breast changes following pregnancy tend to be fairly permanent but, in many ways, only represent the occurrence of the inevitable since most women's breasts tend to droop and sag as they age. While no solution, temporary respite from the condition will more than likely occur with the next pregnancy.

What causes sleepiness besides simple physical exhaustion? I often become sleepy in class, while reading and even while participating in sex. It does not seem to be related to the amount of sleep I had the night before. Sometimes I feel good all day after four hours of sleep, while other times I am sleepy after eight hours.

Individual sleep requirements are a mysterious matter. About 90 per cent of people usually need between six and nine hours of sleep to function well. There are a few people who function well on a continual basis with less than six hours sleep and there are some unusual people who require more than nine hours sleep a night.

Sleepiness during the day is often a matter of how involved a person is with what they are doing and boring activities tend to increase drowsiness. It is not uncommon for people to feel very sleepy after eating as well. You are, however, the only person I have heard of who complains of falling asleep during sex.

Usually people feel sleepy or contented or relaxed after intercourse but are too involved to fall asleep during intercourse. There is a condition known as narcolepsy in which a person has episodic uncontrollable sleepiness which can occur anytime including during intercourse. Such a condition should be investigated by a physician experienced in dealing with these things; this is usually a neurologist.

Several weeks ago my boyfriend and I engaged in anal sex. Since then I have had a bad case of constipation. Drug store laxatives seem to have no effect on me. I was wondering if my experience of a couple of weeks ago could possibly be related to my present difficulties as I have never been greatly constipated before.

Anal intercourse can result in a tearing of the skin that lines the anal sphincter which would result in painful defecation until such tears are healed up. Painful defecation almost inevitably leads to constipation. On the other hand, anxiety can work wonders in producing constipation and lasts a great deal longer than it takes for a superficial skin tear to heal.

Anal intercourse without the use of a condom carries with it a very real risk of urethral infection in the man; serious vaginal or bladder infections in the woman can occur if genital intercourse follows under these circumstances.

Workers strike for decent life

By WILFRED SKUBI
Seattle, Wash., graduate student

For 18 months more than 3,000 Mexican-American workers have been on strike against the Farah Manufacturing Co., a giant maker of men's pants with plants in Texas and New Mexico. They are involved in an epic struggle to win a decent life for themselves and their families.

The issues are basic. Farah has been fighting unionization with all the power at the command of the company - including the use of vicious police dogs, mass arrests of strikers at night on trumped-up charges and the firing of workers for union activity, actions which are in violation of the human and legal rights of the strikers.

The Catholic bishop of El Paso, Sydney Metzger, who investigated the grievances of the strikers and endorsed both the strike and the boycott, found that the average take-home pay for Farah workers was $69 per week, while unionized clothing workers in El Paso received an average of $102 per week. Bishop Metzger concluded that the strikers had not been receiving a living wage.

Farah workers had no job security: they were fired at the will of a foreman, and in 50 years of operation not one worker has ever received Farah's retirement benefit of $20 per month. As soon as a woman approaches retirement age, or can no longer meet the outrageous production quotas demanded by the company, she is fired or harassed into quitting.

"Farah workers had no job security: they were fired at the will of a foreman, and in 50 years of operation not one worker has ever received Farah's retirement benefit of $20 per month. As soon as a woman approaches retirement age, or can no longer meet the outrageous production quotas demanded by the company, she is fired or harassed into quitting."

Because of the atmosphere of fear and intimidation created by the company, and the long list of grievances neglected and unresolved, a spontaneous walkout jumped from one Farah plant to another early in May of 1972. Soon workers in all the plants were out on strike.

Willie Farah, the president of the company, described the thousands of his employees who walked out as "filthy, saying that the plants would be more cohesive without them. Using scabs, many brought from across the Mexican border in buses driven for the company by El Paso police, the company was able to resume production.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers AFL-CIO stepped in with aid for the strikers and a call for a national boycott of Farah pants to bring the company to terms with its unfair labor practices (violations of federal labor relations laws so that an election, a free election, might determine whether Farah workers want the union to represent them.

Unions, religious groups, civic and civil rights groups and students have responded to the call for the boycott of Farah pants. In response to community requests hundreds of major stores across the country have agreed to stop selling Farah pants for the duration of the boycott.

At Michigan State University, the Committee to Aid the Farah Strikers seeking broad support for educational boycott activity both on and off the campus.

Until then, "Viva La Huelga," (suppose the strike!) - don't buy Farah pants.

Streamlining report blasted

By MIKE GALATOLA
State News Staff Writer

Academic Council members fired objections Tuesday at the controversial report that recommends streamlining the council and its standing committees.

Both faculty and student representatives objected to the report of the Ad Hoc Committee to Review Academic Governance, claiming it supported sacrificing faculty and minority student representation in the name of efficiency.

Members also complained that the special committee's suggestion of combining the current 12 standing committees into six and restricting membership to council members instead of inviting any faculty and students to participate would create an intolerable work load for council members.

The special committee had recommended cutting the 85 faculty representatives to 63. Though it suggested increasing the total of student members from 36 to 38, the committee recommended decreasing the five nonwhite and five female seats to four nonwhite and two female seats.

Jack Stieber, College of Social Science representative, said the committee's proposed 25 per cent reduction of faculty members was unnecessary to improve communication.

"I don't understand the rationale of easing communication problems by drastically reducing faculty members while increasing student members," Stieber said. "The actual decrease in number is so small that communication problems can't be the reasons."

Ad hoc committee chairman Lester V. Manderscheid replied that the committee was not concerned with what the balance of votes would be among faculty, student and administrative members.

"We asked what should be the best number to insure a diversity of opinions and yet make the council and its committees effective and efficient," Manderscheid said.

Ron Bowden, at-large member, complained that the reduction of minority seats was premature.

"I don't agree with the committee that the University community has matured in its attitude towards minority representation," Bowden said. "I think the current minority representation is still necessary until more evidence of such a change in attitude appears."

Bruce L. Miller, co-chairman and secretary of the ad hoc committee, said the minor reduction was a necessary shift away from the quota system.

"If we don't start to reduce the special distinction between minority, female and other representatives, we'll never move away from quotas towards an open attitude," Miller said.

Manderscheid said that the committee had no magic formula for arriving at its number of representatives.

COGS votes to support idea for student liaisons

By MELISSA PAYTON
State News Staff Writer

The Council of Graduate Students (COGS) voted Monday night to support the concept of student liaison members on the board of trustees.

In other action, a provision of the COGS-funded short-term loans that bars using loans for payment of abortion fees was changed.

Debate on the student liaison proposal, initiated by ASMSU to place four nonvoting students on the board of trustees, centered on whether to support the entire proposal or only the concept of placing students on the board of trustees.

Several COGS members attacked the proposal during the Nov. 14 meeting as poorly written and a duplication of existing channels. Critics during Monday's meeting said the proposal did not include provisions for faculty or alumni representation on the board.

Trevor Gardner, COGS appointee to the Academic Council, said, "We are going to need the support of the faculty to get a proposal like this through the Academic Council."

President Beth Andrus urged members to take a stand on the proposal so that input from COGS could be used during the next Academic Council meeting.

Opponents of the proposal as written agreed with a motion to support only the concept of student liaisons. The motion passed unanimously.

COGS also voted unanimously to change the provision of COGS loans that says that the loan may be used for any legal purpose except for the payment of abortion fees.

Members attacked the singling out of abortion as arbitrary and unreasonable.

Policy for short-term loans like COGS, which are available to graduate students and have a $250 maximum and 60-day period, is set by the financial aid administration group.

COGS will have to petition that group in order to change the policy. Loan policy was changed for COGS before when they asked the group to let the University administer COGS loans between terms.

Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president for student affairs, says that the policy may be a holdover from the years before abortion was legalized in Michigan and "students might have asked for loans to go to New York for abortions."

COGS voted 15-5 to urge reinstatement of the priority status of graduate assistants for married housing on campus. Graduate assistants had priority in married housing assignments over other graduate students until a 1971 rule change.

Fuel crisis may hurt state tourism

By MAUREEN McDONALD
State News Staff Writer

The powder may stay fresh on Michigan ski slopes with the pinch on energy, and this could in turn portend economic disaster for tourist attractions which rely on such business.

"The travel industry, which employs more than 500,000 Michigan citizens, should not be made a scapegoat of a gasoline shortage in this state or in the nation," said James Hall, executive vice president of the East Michigan Tourist Assn.

Meet scheduled on signs in city

A host of community organizations and local businesses have been invited to a discussion workshop tonight on East Lansing's proposed ordinance to increase city control over outdoor sign display. The meeting, which is open to the public, is at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall, 410 Abbott Road.

He said weekend business often amounts to 90 per cent of sales in many northern Lower Peninsula and Thumb communities, and a reduction in Sunday driving "could reduce business as much as 45 per cent."

Richard J. Allen, director of the Michigan Tourist Council had even stronger words on the subject.

"Banning Sunday travel is as logical a method of reducing energy consumption as banning Saturday eating or Wednesday manufacturing," Allen said.

Fewer than 10 states are as dependent as Michigan on the travel industry, Allen noted. The whole concept of differentiating nonessential or pleasurable from essential in our attempts to meet the energy shortage is faulty, he added.

"Can you tell me that a trip to Mio—a trip that puts a few dollars in a very poor area of the state, into the hands of a waitress trying to feed her children or a small motel owner trying to eke out a retirement living is nonessential?" Allen queried. "At the same time are you going to say that driving to work or operating a factory is essential if the product of that work is deodorant spray or silk ties?"

Meanwhile, the MSU Ski Club plans to keep the ski resorts in business by chartering buses rather than joining car pools for weekend trips, Bill Motz, club president, said.

"With the price and the availability of gas, not to mention wear and tear on the cars, it will be easier to rent buses," he said.

How GM is responding to the energy problem.

Over a year ago, we asked our plant engineers to establish an energy conservation program to cut waste, improve utilization and generally increase the effective use of our energy resources.

In our plants we're instituting programs to salvage oil and other combustible materials that were once thought to be waste materials of the manufacturing process. Then we're using those former waste materials to fire boilers in some plants and in others we're cleaning the oil and selling it to local power generating stations. It's a method that has been tried and tested. It works. It's even economical.

A system developed by General Motors engineers for "scrubbing" the sulfur dioxide out of coal smoke is moving at an accelerated pace. As the technology is proved out, we're making it available to anyone who can use it. There are large deposits of coal in the United States that will become immediate substitutes for oil when we can make sulfur-bearing coal an environmentally acceptable fuel.

We are working toward improving the gas mileage in the cars we design and build. Wind tunnel experiments, weight reduction programs and major programs for the development of more efficient engines are all being pushed ahead.

And we are preparing ourselves to satisfy any increased future consumer demand for smaller, more energy-efficient engines and cars.

Properly utilized, mass transportation systems are also highly efficient users of energy. GM is engaged in major research and product development programs to improve bus transportation, the most flexible, easiest and quickest to implement of mass transportation systems. Those programs include the design of buses, new methods for the efficient operation of buses on reserved or exclusive lanes into and through downtown areas or central business districts, and the automated control of rubber-tired transit vehicles on special guideways. Long range plans for mass transportation developed by GM were displayed in Washington at Transpo 72.

In addition to building standard rail commuter diesel electromotives, we have initiated efforts to produce locomotives powered only by electricity. GM, over many years, has done creative research which has been utilized by government agencies and transit operators in improving public transit. As urban transportation systems are designed and approved by the various levels of government, GM will be ready to build the hardware.

Energy can also be conserved by the more efficient use of the cars and trucks now on the road. It is in everyone's interest to get maximum gas mileage by maintaining cars and trucks in good order, avoiding excessive speeds and quick starts, and by sharing the ride whenever convenient and practical. For instance, driving at 50 mph rather than at 70 mph could increase gas mileage by about 20%. We are taking steps to remind our customers of these good driving practices.

GM is determined to do its full share in the resolution of the energy problem.

We also pledge our complete support for all reasonable government efforts to increase available energy and maintain maximum consumer choice.

Protests hinder road projects

By CHRIS DANIELSON
State News Staff Writer

It is unlikely that all roads will ever lead to MSU.

In view of the adverse response by some segments of the East Lansing community to several road construction projects proposed in recent years, highway engineers may be wondering if they can even get a bicycle path on campus. The first explosion of emotion against road construction occurred in 1970 over the proposed extension of M-43 from the intersection of Trowbridge and Harrison roads across south campus to the intersection of Grand River Avenue and Park Lake Road. Though this scrapped cross-campus route is now just another fading memory, it marked the first victory for area environmentalists.

Several ad hoc groups composed of students, faculty and city residents managed to persuade both the board of trustees and the East Lansing City Council to rescind their previous approval of the project which had been planned since 1949.

Last summer opposition to a project of a much smaller scale — at the Michigan Avenue - Harrison Road intersection — led to a physical confrontation between environmentalists and saw - wielding construction workers. It has resulted in six months of court battles. The case is now before the Michigan Court of Appeals.

Whether the reconstruction of the intersection will be completed next spring is still anyone's guess.

Monday night a tentative plan to widen Kalamazoo Street near University Village and to construct a new bridge 200 feet east of the present one — which would necessitate the rechanneling of a 600-foot segment of the Red Cedar River — suffered a double setback when it was rejected in its present form by two city council advisory committees.

The question in the minds of some officials is how many citizens the environmentalists actually represent.

engineer of the Ingham County Road Commission which formulated the Kalamazoo Street project, said that the commission has never before experienced the amount of negative response that has been generated by the project.

"If the majority of people don't want something, we're not going to ram it down their throats," Schaeffer said.

"This project would benefit 250,000 people, but only those people who don't want anything to change show up at public hearings," he added.

Village road plan begun

By TRISHA KANE
State News Staff Writer

The All - University Traffic Committee and the East Lansing Traffic Committee have jointly developed a map for proposed reconstruction of the Spartan Village north entrance adjoining Harrison Road to help relieve traffic congestion.

Milton Baron, director of the Campus Park and Planning Dept., said because the city of East Lansing has jurisdiction over Harrison Road and the University owns Spartan Village, any reconstruction to improve the north Village entrance would have to collaborate funds and plans between the city and the University.

"We've been trying to design an improvement for that area because peak periods of traffic have resulted in property damage and several collision accidents," Baron said.

"It is extremely difficult to make right - or left - hand turns in the crossover of traffic because there is no traffic aisle and no stop light. Visibility problems there are compounded by human error and impatience."

Baron said the East Lansing committee must first approve the plans and then adopt a city council resolution stating that the project should be a joint effort with MSU and deciding how much money each will allocate.

If and when those decisions are made, Baron said, the University committee then must approve city plans and also decide whether the project is acceptable to MSU and what share of the funding the University will accept.

He said that no funds are available at the present and that no University money has been budgeted for the reconstruction, but that a special request for extra funds would be made if the city agrees to share costs.

"We can't go it alone financially," Baron explained. "If for some reason the city decides not to approve plans, we will have to use alternate methods of improvement discussed at University traffic committee meetings."

Committee secretary Robert Bissell, Dept. of Public Safety records manager, said one alternative plan involving no reconstruction would be to block off the north entrance of Crescent Road, forcing Spartan Village residents to use only the south end of Crescent Road for entrances and exits to the Village.

Bridge plan praised, criticized

By CHRIS DANIELSON
State News Staff Writer

One year from now plans for the $700,000 Kalamazoo Street road construction project will be in the hands of either the contractor or the trash collector.

Proponents of the project say that it is necessary to improve traffic flow and contend that it will not seriously affect the environment.

Critics of the proposed plan argue that traffic flow on Kalamazoo Street — located between U.S. 127 and Harrison Road — is minimal compared to Grand River and Michigan avenues, and that the harm to the environment and the esthetic appeal of the area outweigh what they call the questionable traffic improvement resulting from the project.

The Ingham County Road Commission's project — which has been in the planning stages since 1970 — would be primarily funded through the Federal Aid Secondary Program, and the federal deadline for letting contracts on the project is July 1, 1974.

But before bids can be taken for the construction work, it is necessary for the board of trustees and the East Lansing City Council to approve the plans, since the project involves city right-of-way and the Red Cedar Natural Area, part of the MSU campus.

Advisory committees of these two units have been studying preliminary plans for the project during the last two months.

The East Lansing Environmental Quality and Aesthetics Task Force and the city traffic commission both recommended that council reject the project Monday night, minimizing chances that the construction work will ever be undertaken as currently proposed.

The University Building, Lands and Planning Committee has not yet made a final recommendation on the project to the board, and several committee members have questioned some aspects of the preliminary plans during open hearings on the proposal.

"How the University can be in favor of the Kalamazoo project because of rare flooding... while ignoring the problem of railroad crossings at (other) roads that cut off everyone south of them from essential emergency services... is a mystery to us."

— ASMSU position paper

Even if the concept of the project is eventually endorsed by the city and MSU, final plans will have to be drawn up and approved in their turn.

During an informational meeting held recently by the committee, Robert Schaeffer, chief engineer of the road commission, said that several aspects of the tentative plan — including a controversial proposal to rechannel a 600-foot segment of the Red Cedar River — are being reconsidered by commission engineers.

He also conceded that a supplementary environmental impact statement on the entire project probably will have to be drawn up.

The original statement, dated April 2, 1971, — which declared there was no significant environmental impact — was written four months before stringent guidelines for impact statements went into effect, and has been strongly attacked by local environmentalists.

Schaeffer told the committee that the project was desirable because it would curtail the annual spring flood closings of the road and reduce the danger of the bridge washing out, as well as facilitate the steadily increasing traffic flow.

However, Steven Doud, representing the MSU married Students Union, says that the long construction closing would probably outweigh 50 years of flood closings.

He adds that raising a dip in the road near the bridge could eliminate the flooding problem.

Answering critics of the project who minimized the flooding problem, Schaeffer says spring logjams caused by the present bridge's inadequate water passage capacity could eventually produce a much bigger problem than the current one.

"If the bridge ever washes out due to a back-up of water and debris, Kalamazoo Street would be closed for a lot more than the few days flooding stops traffic now," he explains.

Some people have questioned the priorities involved in selecting Kalamazoo Street for road construction.

Part of a statement concerning the ASMSU position on the project presented at the committee meeting read: "How the University can be in favor of the Kalamazoo project because of rare flooding that cuts off no essential services, while ignoring the problem of railroad crossings at Hagadorn, Farm Lane and Harrison roads that cut off everyone south of them from essential police, fire and ambulance services each and every day, is a mystery to us."

Several groups say that project would damage the esthetics of the area.

"Widening of the roadway would bring about the inescapable loss of the welcoming canopy effect produced by overhanging trees," James Anderson, faculty adviser to Friends of a Livable City, said.

Proposed rechanneling of the Red Cedar River generates opposition.

Baron adds that the University has recently purchased 52.8 acres in Holt for ecological studies, supplementing land already owned by the University.

However, several natural sciences students and faculty members say that the Red Cedar Natural Area is unique in some respects, and is the only area of its kind convenient to classes and individual students near campus.

Employment called top problem for gays

By LARRY MORGAN
State News Staff Writer

Employment is the biggest problem confronting approximately 15 million homosexuals in the United States, Franklin E. Kameny, president of Mattachine, a Washington, D.C., gay organization said.

Kameny, speaking Monday night before an audience of 40 gays and nongays in 100 Engineering Bldg., said if a gay person were recognizable on sight there would be 15 million unemployed homosexuals in the United States.

"Every employed homosexual works with a dagger hanging over his head," Kameny said.

This is contrary to the popular conception that social acceptance is the homosexual's biggest problem.

Once fired himself by the federal government for homosexuality, Kameny said the process of passing laws abolishing discrimination against homosexuals is making slow progress. The most notable progress is in Washington, D.C., where, by law, employers cannot discriminate against employees for any reason including homosexuality, he said.

The Mattachine Society, one of the two most active gay liberation organizations in Washington, D.C., was one of the first gay liberation groups formed. It was established in 1951. It was disbanded and was recreated as a local organization by Kameny.

The name Mattachine comes from medieval court jesters who wore masks and costumes and who could make remarks ordinarily not allowed by common citizens. They kept the truth of their identity by hiding behind masks or costumes.

Kameny said there are now 800 to 900 gay groups in the United States, including 200 on university campuses. He said there are also some high school groups beginning to form.

He said onlookers who judge the gays, and not the gays, are the ones who should be studied when analyzing the social problems of gays, who are the "second largest minority group in the country behind blacks."

"Homosexuality is still enshrouded with taboos and fears," he said, "and is just being opened to rational thinking."

"It (homosexuality) is not an inferior state. Homosexuals are first-class human beings and first-class citizens."

He blames most of the misconceptions about homosexuals on reports written by psychiatrists and psychologists who, he said, use poor scientific techniques when doing their research.

Kameny said psychiatrists' and psychologists' techniques include a definition of homosexuality parallel to sickness, disorder and illness. They use poor logic in that they assume homosexuality is psychoanalytical. "If you assume homosexuality is psychoanalytical, you can prove anything, he said. They must prove their assumption first."

Worst of all, Kameny said, is their sampling technique which, he said, is to use patients who go to psychiatrists as their sampling group.

"Everything that can be read on homosexuality is from one small segment of homosexuals," he said. "You can take almost all literature and dump it in the trash and be better off."

ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S Strangers On A Train

In this taut and psychological suspense drama, two men meet while traveling on the same train and the end result is a pact involving murder. Using Raymond Chandler's screenplay from the Patricia Highsmith novel, Hitchcock has fashioned a macabre exercise about honor in gentlemen's agreements. STRANGERS ON A TRAIN follows Alfred Hitchcock's tradition for concluding his films in unique settings, for it ends with a harrowing fight on a whirling merry-go-round. With Robert Walker and Farley Granger. (1951) B&W 101 minutes

Test schedule corrected

Final exams for classes meeting on Tuesday and Thursday at 1:50 p.m. will not be at the time listed in the fall term schedule book. They are to be held from 5:45 to 7:45 p.m. on Monday.

Early registration will be held Monday through Friday of next week in the Men's Intramural Building, from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4:30 p.m. daily. Reservation cards, available in Demonstration Hall, are not usually necessary after the first two days of early registration as fewer students register then.

A reservation card can, however, guarantee a student's ability to register at a particular time.

A special drops and adds sessions for students who early register will be held during evening registration on Jan. 2.

Early registration and payment of fees is open to readmitted students and all students who participated in early enrollment. Details of early registration and drops and adds procedures are on pages 9 and 10 of the 1974 winter schedule book.

MSU's Simpson only Spartan on league team

Defensive back Bill Simpson was the only MSU player named to the all-Big Ten football team announced by UPI Tuesday. The squad was dominated by Ohio State and Michigan as the Buckeyes placed 10 men on the team and Michigan added six.

For Simpson, it was the second straight year he's received first-team honors.

The Spartans placed tackle John Shinsky, linebacker Terry McCowery and defensive back Mark Niesen on the second team.

Why attack Burt Smith?

And the war rages on... The glamor of the Rose Bowl this year will be washed away because of the tear bowl being waged in Detroit and Ann Arbor.

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler deserves little sympathy for his spurs of anger and bitterness. His charges of "petty jealousies and petty politics" leveled at MSU and its athletic director Burt Smith are unwarranted.

Smith followed the dictates of his conscience. He was obligated only to vote for the "best team." A former Wolverine himself, a Smith loyalty vote for Michigan or a vote for Michigan only because it may have benefited the state would have been a petty politics vote.

But Smith voted according to Big Ten stipulations. And he chose to vote for the team that he thought would be the best representative of the Big Ten conference.

The blind sentimentality of that vicious faction against Smith is based on ignorance. Instead of attacking the root of injustice, which they claim exists, they have opted to lash out against one of the majority who thought Ohio State was the best team.

It is that same emotion that prompted several individuals to pelt Smith's house with garbage two nights ago. I feel sorry for that kind of emotion because it's without substance or resolution.

The trouble lies in the bureaucratic structure of the NCAA. The rule prohibiting a football playoff or sudden death situation when necessary, belongs to the NCAA. It should be changed. That is the clear evil here, not Burt Smith.

But bitches always come too late. The Great Depression would have been avoided had responsible persons acted before it hit. The energy crisis could have been prevented had measures been taken 10 years ago. The 10 - 10 tie would not have happened had those now crying pressured for change. Will they blast the NCAA? Probably not, since they have already indicated what they will do, and the victim has become Burt Smith.

Ohio State was the Big Ten's defending champion. The Buckeyes rolled over each opponent in their quest for another Rose Bowl berth. They were not beaten, yet there are some who want to strip them of their title.

Put a champion in the ring and throw a challenger at him. The challenger must decisively defeat the champion to take away the No. 1 spot. If the decision is a draw, the champion's title is not stripped.

Apparently Michiganders would want to do that to Ohio State. The Wolverines could have won the bowl trip with a victory. But it failed. Now they're venting their frustrations this way. Their athletic director Don Canham has used adjectives such as stupid and bush in his outlashes against Smith.

The Detroit business world is riled up and the state legislature may consider cutting appropriations for MSU's proposed law school.

How sad.

Big Ten basketball scene changes from height to speed, quickness

By CHARLES JOHNSON
State News Sports Writer

The Big Ten coaches and writers met last Sunday in Chicago to discuss the conference outlook for the coming season and for the first time MSU coach Gus Ganakas didn't come away sick.

"I'm more optimistic about this team than any I've had before," Gus said emphatically. "After listening to the other nine coaches give sketches of their teams' strong points, it seems that the Big Ten will be a conference of speed and quickness this season — and, fortunately, that's what we do best."

The Spartans are closing out their final days of practice in preparation for next Tuesday's season opener at Central Michigan and Ganakas will field a starting lineup with a miniscule average height of 6-2.

"We're going to start a relatively small lineup in the early going and hopefully our speed will be enough to overcome our height deficiency," Ganakas explained.

"We could play a much bigger lineup, but I don't know if I would be willing to give up some of our quickness just to have more height on the court," he said. "Just because a team has a lot of big guys doesn't necessarily mean that it will be better off."

Two-time Big Ten scoring champ Mike Robinson will be paired in the backcourt with letterman Bill Glover, a 6-2, quick-handed junior from Pontiac Central High School.

Holding down the starting front-line spots will be 6-5 sophomore ace Terry Furlow and 6-4 junior Tom McGill. Furlow is expected to be a key figure in the Spartans' offensive attack and will also be counted on to put his great jumping ability to use under the boards. McGill, a fastcomer in fall drills, has sharpened up his jump shot and should add some scoring punch to the green and white outfit.

MSU will go with 6-7 junior Lindsay Hairston at the pivot position, who will enter the season as the most important key to the Spartans' success.

"We're going to live and die with Lindsay," Ganakas said. "A lot depends on how well he plays under the boards."

League-leading Badgers next for icers

By STEVE STEIN
State News Sports Writer

Amid all of the Ohio State - Michigan Rose Bowl controversy, MSU's hockey team is preparing hard to face last year's NCAA champion Wisconsin Badgers in Madison Friday and Saturday.

Coach Bob Johnson's club leads the WCHA with 12 points in the standings, with a 6-2 record, and it is currently ranked No. 1 in the Houghton radio station national hockey poll.

The Spartans are trying to get back on the right track after dropping two games to Minnesota Nov. 23 and 24. After winning its first four games, MSU has now lost three of its last four.

"We're going to work hard in practice," coach Amo Bessone said.

Wisconsin won its first national championship last March, and Johnson said there definitely is some added pressure on the Badgers this season.

"There's no doubt about it," the Wisconsin coach said in a telephone interview. "They all want to be the team that beats you. We've lost a couple this year, so we know we are not invincible."

The Badgers split road sets with Notre Dame and U-M. Wisconsin's fans (8,000 jam its arena) are probably the most boisterous in the league, and they got some adverse nationwide publicity last season from a Sports Illustrated story.

"Our fans have been tremendous," Johnson countered. "But it's a tragedy that a certain section (behind the opposing team's bench) was so bad."

Johnson said the team receives some abuse on the road because of the publicity.

"They take it out on the players for what the fans did," he said. "But we are used to it by now."

Johnson said that section has been replaced this year.

Peter Gonzales, a representative of the Farah slacks company of Texas, waits before presenting the company's views on a labor dispute which prompted a boycott of Farah products. Gonzales and other Farah representatives spoke at an ASMSU meeting Monday night.

Farah strike committee criticizes ASMSU action

The Committee to Aid the Farah Strikers has accused ASMSU of "willfully and deliberately" concealing from the committee that representatives of the Farah slacks company would appear at an ASMSU meeting.

The Monday night meeting was visited by members of the pants company who explained their side of a dispute which has resulted in a nationwide boycott.

Will Skubi, coordinator of the boycott on campus, presented the anti-Farah argument to the student board on Oct. 28 and asked the board to vote in support of it.

However, Deane Sweet, president of the Intrafraternity Council, refused to vote in policy committee until ASMSU heard the Farah side of the controversy.

Sweet said he called the company in Texas and they agreed to send up two spokesmen to speak with the student board. But Sweet said he did not find out for sure that the Farah people would come until Monday morning.

Skubi charged that ASMSU's failure to inform the Committee to Aid the Farah Strikers "was due to the bad faith of Deane Sweet." Skubi said he talked with ASMSU representative Charles Massoglia Monday morning and Massoglia referred him to Sweet. "Sweet," Skubi said, "in a call just before the meeting failed to inform me that the subject would be raised, despite the fact that he had arranged to have the Farah representatives there."

Sweet, however, said he called the committee's office and received a tape recorded message asking callers to leave a message. Sweet said he left a message asking Skubi to call him back.

Skubi also said there was no anti-Farah representative "to raise a reasoned debate for the committee."

"The reason for having those people up here was to hear the other side," Sweet said. "It was not meant to be a debate."

Insurance fee refund maintained by House

The proposed rebate to Michigan drivers who paid the uninsured motorists' fee in 1973 found new life Tuesday when the House voted against a committee amendment to reject the fund.

The House Appropriations Committee voted Nov. 14 to delete the refund provision of a bill intended to clarify some of the legal conflicts between the new no-fault insurance law and the laws applying to the uninsured motorists' fund.

But the House Tuesday failed to approve the committee's action and left in the refund section in the bill.

The proposal, introduced by Rep. Mathew McNeely, D-Detroit, would refund $22.50 to all Michigan drivers who paid the $45 uninsured motorists' fee for 1973 but were forced to buy private insurance Oct. 1 when the new no-fault law went into effect.

The bill will probably face final approval sometime this week. But opponents of the rebate are planning a move to reconsider Tuesday's vote and delete the refund provision from the bill.

Those opposing the rebate need only gain three additional votes to kill the refund portion of the legislation.

Capital Capsules

THE MICHIGAN SENATE has approved and sent to the House a bill to put a $500 bonus for Vietnam era veterans on the November 1974 ballot.

Michigan voters turned down a similar bonus in 1972, but the current bonus proposal would cost $81 million less.

THE HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS Committee has reported out a bill to combine the departments of Public Health, Mental and Social Services into a single state superagency.

The bill would coincide with Gov. Milliken's executive order to create the Dept. of Human Services to go into effect July 1, 1974.

A BILL BACKED by the governor to open campaign finance books and impose heavy penalties on violators could see action before the end of the year, said Sen. Milton Zaagman, R-Grand Rapids, chairman of the committee which received the measure Monday.

THE STATE SENATE refused to reconsider a bill Monday that would have allowed doctors to administer contraceptives to minors without parents' permission.

- 11 Missing Presidential Tapes

"The tougher it gets, the cooler I get." (The quote I have what it takes)"

Richard M. Nixon, October 26, 1973

I HAVE WHAT IT TAKES...

Yes, Richard Nixon has what it takes. The extent to which he has violated his trust to the American people, has completely eroded his influence as a leader that people are able to believe and hence to follow.

If you have what it takes, send the coupon below along with $2.99 and let others know where you stand. By return mail you will receive the certificate illustrated above (8 1/2 x 11) suitable for framing.
