Federal laws may kill bill to OK hitchhiking havens

BY MAUREEN McDONALD State News Staff Writer

Statewide travel could be as easy as an outstretched thumb oninterstate highways. Shelter at strategic interchanges with plenty of pull - off space could be built for hitchhikers and motorists who would be encouraged to pick up travelers to share the limited energy.

But the onset of the fuel crisis is apparently not enough to pump up legislation to make this scenario a concrete project. A bill recently introduced by state Rep. Edgar Geerlings, R - Norton Shores, and co - sponsored by Rep. Perry Bullard, D - Ann Arbor, proposes such a hitchhiking haven, but the measure may never get out of committee because of federal roadblocks.

John Knecht, asst. director of the State Highway Dept. said Monday that federal laws prohibit hitchhiking on interstate expressways. The state would lose federal funds if it opted to allow pedestrian traffic. Additionally, state highway funds stipulate that the money be used for "highway purposes," and Knecht said he does not consider hitchhiking a highway

Hence lawmakers would have to look elsewhere for funding pedestrian shelters, and would also have to contend with the safety factor. A spokesman for the Michigan State Police said, "It's not safe out there for hitchhikers, even with a 55 m.p.h. speed limit."

Both Geerlings and Bullard have a private interest at stake in the bill. Geerlings was ticketed two years ago for dropping off a hitchhiker on the highway and Bullard was ticketed while thumbing his way home from a legislative conference.

MSU students who hitchhike across the state contend there is little danger. Ray Brown, 212 E. Wilson Hall junior, said he has never witnessed an accident with a hitchhiker and claims the thumb method is a great and cheap way to travel. He said he would support legislation to provide hitchhiking shelters on major thoroughfares.

Ken Gregory, 259 Snyder Hall sophomore, agrees. He says he frequently hitchhikes from his parents home to campus and says it's a great way to exchange ideas with new people.

Bullard scoffs at critics of the measure. People do hitchhike, he said, though there is a risk. There is also a risk just driving on expressways, he adds.

"Some people don't like hitchhikers," Bullard said. "They think hitchhikers are suspect since they don't have cars and are probably shiftless, dangerous people. The oppostion is mindless.

But some opposition is based on fact, said East Lansing Deputy Police Chief Bob Foster. Rear - end collisions abound in the city when drivers suddenly pull over to pick up a hitchhiker, Foster notes.

Using state highways, such as Grand River Avenue, for hitchhiking routes with shelters and pull - offs might legal, but Geerlings declined to write that idea into his bill. Besides, East Lansing council members have been reluctant to give the idea their blessing.

Both Mary Sharp and Wilbur Brookover say the measure should be studied in depth, considering the safety factor and the congestion caused by hitchhiking.

Bekah Dannelley, a Midland junior who says she frequently hitchhikes around town, said that designated hitchhiking stops may diminish the chances for a person to get picked up.

World drowns in oil, Nader tells Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal Energy irector William E. Simon told Congress Monday the nation is threatened with 'dangerously low levels" of petroleum roducts, but consumer advocate Ralph Nader said the world is "drowning in oil." Their sharply conflicting views were resented in testimony before a House - enate economic subcommittee looking nto the accuracy of government energy "While many doubt the accuracy of the ata being provided by the industry," imon said, "there is no doubt in my mind that we do indeed have a serious shortage. "As of Dec. 29, the American Petroleum Institute reported we have only slightly over 30 days' supply of the major petroleum products. The shortage caused by a full effective embargo will quickly reduce these to dangerously low levels unless we act quickly to reduce demand and equitably allocate the available supplies," he said. Nader described America's energy problem as "unarmed robbery by oil companies in collusion with government support." Denying an energy shortage exists, he said everything that has happened in the name of the energy crisis has been to the advantage of the major petroleum companies.

"The world is literally drowning in oil," Nader said. "Any government agency can create a shortage simply by announcing Nader said geologists believe that less than 25 per cent of the world's oil reserves have been discovered, and that the reserve figures supplied by oil companies and the government actually represent only about 10 per cent of real proven reserves.

But Simon testified that what appears in industry reports to be an ample supply is actually a result of conservation efforts and an unusually mild winter, as well as some continuing supply of oil from the Simon, acknowledging that a credibility problem existed, said there is "a tremendous misinterpretation that we are trying to manage the energy crisis through price mechanisms.'

Nader recommended vigorous antitrust actions against major oil companies, particularly severing pipeline from producing functions, and creation of a federal corporation, modeled after the Tennessee Valley Authority, to produce oil and gas from federal lands. He urged that Congress give consumers the right to sue to redress grievances caused by price - gouging on oil and gasoline, and called for a selective, short - term rollback of fuel prices.

In other energy developments Monday: The Supreme Court agreed to resolve an industry dispute over revised federal regulations governing natural gas rates in southern Louisiana, source of one - third of domestic gas production. Government lawyers said the case could have a broad national impact and urged a speedy settlement "because of the urgency of the current gas supply shortage.' The court agreed to review challenges to a decision by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans upholding a rate structure imposed by the Federal Power Commission in 1971 on natural gas producers in southern Louisiana, including offshore areas in the Gulf of Mexico. While the Soviet press savors each new themselves are now being advised to turn off that extra light bulb to save electricity.

The Soviet Union takes pride in having enough energy for its domestic needs, but it is being pressed to meet its export commitments to Eastern and Western Europe, particularly of oil and natural gas.

Authority plans to expand recycling as value of used paper skyrockets

By CHRIS DANIELSON State News Staff Writer

The skyrocketing value of used paper oducts has spawned plans for massive pansion of the University recycling ogram in the future.

Since Feb. 1, 1973, the price of used ewspaper alone has increased 700 per nt from $6 to $42 per ton, while those for cardboard and computer material have at least tripled.

Administrative details of the three phased expansion plan - which is designed to boost the amount of material recycled by the MSU Waste Control Authority from fall term's 190 tons to a staggering total of more than 6,750 tons - are currently being reviewed by Executive Vice President Jack Breslin. In phase one of the plan, which should be implemented by spring, the authority will acquire a building, a baler and a forklift truck through the revenue generated by the recycling program.

The initial cost of this expansion phase could be arranged on a lease - purchase basis with Michigan Carton Co. of Battle Creek, which now buys newspaper and computer material from the authority, an authority statement said.

The authority has already been loaned a small baler which will be operating on a trial basis by the end of the next week, authority director Mark Rosenhaft said

Monday. Baled newspaper is worth a whopping $60 per ton, and 24 tons of it can be taken to Battle Creek in one truckload instead of the present 12 tons, Rosenhaft

The baler also would reduce storage problems currently faced by the authority. The building, to be acquired, which will probably be located on south campus, will house the baler, will be used for storage and eventually could serve as a drive through dumping station where paper and other recyclable materials would be separated out from the loads of MSU garbage trucks. Starr Keesler, asst. executive vice president and chairman of the 10 member authority, said that such a system - to be instituted under the third phase of the expansion program - has received favorable informal response among University administrators.

"There's a crying need for paper products, and it would be really good if a significant percentage of our solid wastes can be separated out and sold, rather than the University paying for it to be transported and dumped somewhere," Keesler added.

However, Robert Underwood, residence halls manager, said that it may prove difficult to recycle residence hall waste.

"Even though the wet cumbersome cafeteria garbage can be separated out from the rest of the waste rather easily, trash from the rest of each hall also could contain food wastes," Underwood, one of four members of the authority's recycling subcommittee, explained.

The subcommittee and the authority both approved the expansion program by a unanimous vote in December. It is not clear, since Breslin was unavailable for comment Monday, what additional University approval is required.

The second phase of the program involves the recycling of office waste, and would require the cooperation of the University community in sorting paper from garbage before the waste could be thrown away. Though the authority now recycles over 50 per cent of the State News issues, only one per cent of the waste paper generated on campus is now recycled. Rosenhaft would like to increase this figure to 20 per cent.

He estimates that the expanded program could eventually produce an annual revenue of more than $300,000. some of which would cover operating costs - including the wages of an expanded student work force. The present revenue is less than $30,000 annually.

Earnings would likely accrue to the University's general fund, Keesler said.

Trailer fires prompt advice on protection

By L.A. WESTON

State News Staff Writer

Following the rash of mobile home fires in Michigan since Christmas Eve, safety officials and local trailer park managers have offered advice on fire prevention to local trailer - dwellers - which includes many students.

"The prudent person can buy a smoke detector for around $40 to $100," Robert C. Hilprecht, executive director of the state Construction Code Commission, said Monday. "The new emergency regulations which are not yet in effect do not cover mobile homes made prior to the effective MSU senior Dexter Sweitzer, who lives at Trailer Haven, 2780 E. Grand River Ave., said that "Nobody has expressed any kind of paranoia" about fire danger in the trailer park he lives in.

"We had a furnace inspector out to check our furnace troubles and he said we had a system with automatic safety features," he said.

Two local trailer park managers, who have students among their residents, said trailer owners have been concerned recently about fire safety.

Floyd Hewitt, the manager of Mobile Homes Manor at 2756 E. Grand River Ave., said he does not know how many of his residents have fire detectors.

"Mobile homeowners should have a fire extinguisher and an alarm for protection,' he said. "For around $8 to $12 you can buy a one - shot, bomb - shaped extinguisher to be placed near the bed and the kitchen for emergencies."

Hewitt contended insurance companies do not give enough financial benefit to mobile home owners with protective appliances like fire alarms and extinguishers. The manager of Trailer Haven, Gary

Lueck, also could not say how many fire alarm systems are used by mobile home "I would suggest that a new mobile home owner ask the management for advice based on experience, instead of coming into trailer ownership cold," Lueck said.

"The state legislature or local municipalities should deal with fire prevention of mobile homes now,"

Hilprecht said. Hilprecht said that though carbon monoxide poisoning was a threat to mobile home safety several years ago, fire prevention is now the number one safety concern for mobile home residents.

Raymond Breuthkuer, Meridian Township fire chief, likes the idea of fire detectors

"I would say these would be a good investment," Bruethkuer said. "They are really early warning devices. Some detect smoke and others are heat detectors.' Bruethkuer said there have been two mobile home fires in Meridian Township since he became fire chief last March. No one was injured in those fires, he

Disbar Agnew, judges urge

A special three - judge Maryland panel recommended Monday in Annapolis that former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew be disbarred from practicing law because of deceitful and dishonest conduct.

The recommendation goes to the Maryland Court of Appeals for a final decision. The appeals court appointed the special panel to hear charges against Agnew brought by the Maryland State Bar Assn., whose grievance committee and board of governors unanimously recommended disbarment.

Agnew resigned Oct. 10 and pleaded no contest to a charge of income tax evasion. He was fined and placed on probation.

At disbarment hearings Dec. 18, Agnew made an emotional plea to the three - judge panel not to strip him of his means of livelihood, and he promised that he would conduct himself in a way to bring credit on himself and his profession.

"I have respect for the law. I have great love for the law," said Agnew, a lawyer since 1947, who argued for a "suitable suspension."

He has 30 days to challenge the panel's decision and ask for a hearing.

Skylab 3 breaks space record

Skylab 3's astronauts became the world's longest - flying space travelers at 9:10 p.m. Monday when they surpassed the record of 59 days, 11 hours and nine minutes set in September by the Skylab 2 crew.

Astronauts Gerald P. Carr, William R. Pogue and Edward G. Gibson have traveled more than 24.5 million miles since their launching Nov. 16. They are orbiting toward their goal of 84 days, with splashdown set for Feb. 8.

While in space, the crew has been conducting experiments, taking pictures and observing Kohoutek's comet.

Skylab 3 is the last American manned space flight until a joint U.S. - Russian mission in July 1975.

'Stats ordered down 6 degrees

WASHINGTON AP — The Federal Energy Office issued regulations Monday night officially requiring owners of oil - heated homes to lower their thermostats six degrees, but giving gasoline stations a more reliable supply than previously proposed.

In a major change from its earlier proposal, the final regulations sent to the Pederal Register for publication allocate gasoline service stations as much gasoline as they received in 1972, the FEO said through a spokesman.

Previously, service stations had no special priority and were allocated whatever was left over after priority bulk purchasers were served.

Taking first priority for gasoline are essential services which purchase in bulk, including agriculture, emergency services, energy production, sanitation services, telecommunications and passenger transportation.

Grechko calls for arms buildup

Soviet Defense Minister Andrei Grechko called for a buildup in Soviet military strength, noting that improvements in East - West relations "must not blunt the revolutionary vigilance of the Soviet people."

In a speech in Kazan, 450 miles east of Moscow, that reached the Soviet capital Monday, Grechko ignored arms limitation talks in Vienna and a Geneva conference on European security by saying, "The conditions of the international situation demand that the Soviet people preserve high vigilance and tirelessly strengthen the defense capacity of the Soviet state."

Grechko, who represents the military on the party's ruling 16 - man Politburo, sided with President Nikolai Podgorny and other Politburo members cautious about the direction of Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev's "peace policy."

N. Viet troops increase activity

North Vietnam is reportedly building up troops and supplies in preparation for an attack around the three-day Tet lunar new year festival which begins Jan. 23.

A South Vietnamese commander said two North Vietnamese regiments have moved as close as 20 miles to Saigon, but made no mention of any threat to Saigon.

Lt. Gen. Pham Quoc Thuan, commander of the 3rd military region, said the two regiments plan to attack the Bien Hoa air base, South Vietnam's largest.

In Cambodia, about 200 Phnom Penh government soldiers along with workers broke a siege at a cement factory 85 miles southwest of the capital.

Tunisian foreign minister ousted

Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba fired Foreign Minister Mohammed Masmoudi Monday. Masmoudi reportedly was the architect of the Tunisia - Libya union agreement.

Some Western diplomats believe the firing may signal a turnaround by Bouguiba, who on Saturday signed an agreement with Libya's president, Moammar Khadafy, to unite the two countries into a single republic with one constitution, army and legislature.

There was no official explanation for Masmoudi's dismissal.

Deal feared in man's return to fairgrounds in Mason.

This winter, however, wagers at the fairgrounds may center around speculations on the political lifetimes of several county officials.

Years of residence at the fairgrounds were terminated for 11 families who raised harness horses at the fairgrounds when they were evicted in October.

Rounds of charges from the tenants, who contended they were being treated unfairly, and countercharges from fair board members, who said the "horse people" acted detrimentally to the grounds, preceeded and followed the board's eviction order plunging the county into one of the most intense squabbles of the year.

The evicted trainers, some of whom were living in mobile homes on the grounds, said that Charles Cassagranda, who leased the horse barns and the mobile home lots from the fair the Ingham County fairgrounds board, was not properly maintaining the property especially the track which they said had large stones in it that could cause a horse to stumble and break a leg.

Cassagranda, who also had six harness horses and lived in a mobile home on the premises, subleased the barns and lots to the 11 families who were later forced, as was Cassagranda, to

But on Dec. 31 Cassagranda moved back - free of charge with a Fair Board contract under his hat, though the 11 families had offered to pay more than Cassagranda had originally had.

When Mason school officials learned that Cassagranda had moved to Eaton Rapids and that his children were still in the Mason schools, Donald Dexters, asst. principal at Mason High School, investigated and was assured by Cassagranda that his move was only temporary and that he would be coming back.

Commissioner Ted Fay, R-Stockbridge, said that Cassagranda was considering the purchase of a farm in

But other commissioners, particularly Patrick Rvan. D -Lansing and a full - time MSU student, said that the deals were preconceived and that Derwood Dickinson, fair board chairman, had assured Cassagranda that he could move back onto the fairgrounds eventually.

John Hayden, Williamston, told other commissioners after the December meeting of the Special Committee on County Operations that a deal was being arranged that would bring Cassagranda back onto the grounds, Ryan said.

Ryan's statement was verified Monday by Mary Schoemehl, D - Lansing, who said Hayden told her in confidence after the meeting

Bill to ban nonreturnable bottles could conserve fuel, environment

A bill sponsored by state Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D - East Lansing, proposing the ban of nonreturnable soft drink and alcoholic beverage containers in Michigan, has the potential for preserving both the environment and energy. However, the bill should be carefully reviewed.

Presently, the cost of a disposable beverage container is passed on to the consumer, who disposes of the nonreturnable bottle either by throwing it away or by recycling it.

Such a system is costly to the consumer and the environment. Consumers pay for the waste glass and metal when purchasing the container, and the environment suffers from litter and the necessity for solid waste disposal.

The bill, if made Michigan law, would attempt to force beverage bottlers to use standardized usable by more than one company - and reusable containers. There would be a five cent deposit on standardized reusable containers and a 10 cent deposit on nonreturnables and unstandardized containers.

Used containers, both standard and unstandard, would eventually return to the beverage distributers, usually wholesalers, who have reusable containers is essential. As the bill now proposes, producers are not required to increase the percentage of reusable

Some small beverage companies feel that the bill would put them out of business, since they would not have the resources to make the switchover from cans to returnable bottles. There is merit to this

A public hearing will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. Wednesday in the House Chamber at the Capitol for further discussion of the bill. The meeting should be attended

All beverage containers in Michigan would have to be marked "Michigan" so out - of - state bottles could not be traded in for a deposit which was never initially

The intent of the bill is to save energy by promoting the use of returnable containers. The average returnable bottle is used 15 times, and there is energy saved by reducing the amount of melted down recycled glass.

The bill also is intended to reduce litter and solid waste disposal by making it more inviting for consumers to turn containers back in, rather than throwing them

The bill may succeed in the second purpose more than the first. In order to have a significant energy saving, the cooperation of the beverage industry to produce more argument, and it should be heard.

and both sides of the issue heard.

of some faculty members and the Academic Council as to whether students should have access to instructor and course evaluation

The subject came up recently when the Educational Policies Committee recommended to the Academic Council that the current Student Instructional Rating System be replaced by two separate evaluation forms, one on the instructor and one on the course.

There is no University regulation forbidding or requiring access of evaluation forms to students, and what each department does with the forms is up to its discretion. Only Lyman Briggs and Justin

There is a question in the minds Morrill colleges and the Dept. of Political Science now make evaluation forms available to > College deans, when polled on the matter, have little or no objection to making evaluation *forms available. But some professors are opposed even to allowing department chairmen to see the forms, let alone to allowing students to view them.

One can only ask what instructors are attempting to hide by opposing evaluation form disclosure. One professor at the Academic Council meeting said instructors are at a disadvantage because they do not know the expectations of their students in regard to a class. Other instructors feel disclosure would cause a popularity contest between instructors when students select their courses.

What the faculty is afraid of is not a popularity contest, but an un - popularity contest.

But those who teach in an unfair, unorganized, or uncreative manner (and know it) rightly fear they will be teaching very few students if evaluation forms are disclosed.

Currently, students have to depend on one or two friends for information about a course, or risk taking the course without any prior information about it.

Students should have access to professor and course evaluation forms. It is time departments opened up their files and let students choose courses and professors on the basis of merit, not

Principle of PIRGIM deserves support

To the Editor:

As one of the students who contributed one needy but significant dollar to PIRGIM at registration, I fail to understand the mentalities of students who did not contribute.

Perhaps many students feel they cannot personally benefit from PIRGIM. Perhaps they feel they will never need PIRGIM defense lawyers or have never considered purchasing the numerous toys sold in local stores that were found legally unsafe by

Yet the principle of the organization is entirely deserving of every student's dollar. PIRGIM is a nonprofit service for the human being. If for nothing else, I donated my dollar for this ethic, and when shelling out over $200 for the average credit load at registration, one more dollar hardly makes any difference.

Nearly 50 per cent of University of Michigan students believed this principle deserving of their dollars, undermining MSU not only in football but in altruism. Now, when PIRGIM faces possible extinction because of insufficient funds, I question the principles of tightwad students who pocketed those undonated dollars. Or does it just illuminate their base laziness?

Nonreturnables limit litter

To the Editor:

Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl's bill limiting the use of nonreturnable beverage containers should be passed.

Obviously, this will mean more work for beverage companies and retailers and less profit for the bottle and can people, but it is doubtful that it will mean higher prices for beer. In fact, if you buy it in returnables it will cost you less.

Experience in Oregon proves such legislation works in controlling litter. Let's face it, we cannot go on living in a throw away world.

Ban on nonreturnable bottles may save necessary energy

There's a story going around about a man who recently was rescued after being stranded for six months on a small island off the Oregon coast.

Since he was surrounded by a dozen empty bottles, his rescuers asked him why he had not sent out a message for help. "I'm going to return these and get my deposit back," the man replied. While not every Oregonian is such a fanatic about returning beverage containers, Oregon's successful effort to ban nonreturnable cans and bottles has won widespread public support. However, a similar program has not fared so well in Vermont - the only other state to implement such legislation so far - as the beverage industry has been uncooperative and consumers have continued to buy nonreturnables outside the relatively close state borders. The essential difference, of course, is that the Oregon market is much larger than that of Vermont - a fact which backers of similar legislation in Michigan are well aware of. Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D - East Lansing. says the Michigan beverage industry will probably do everything it can to keep a bill he introduced in the House banning nonreturnables from being enacted - even to the point of implying the industry will find ways to circumvent the law if it is passed. Similar threats were made by the Oregon beverage industry before that state's law became effective Oct. 1, 1972. but most segments of the industry have not lost money - some have even profited - by complying with the law. Johndahl admits that passage of the Michigan bill could result in some short term job and profit losses, but he feels more jobs will be created in the long run if the bill is passed. Michigan Highway Dept. officials support the bill because they feel it will lessen the highway litter problem - which costs the state $1 million annually - and make it easier to keep the grass cut on road rights - of - way.

Letter policy

The Opinion Page welcomes all letters. Readers must follow a few simple rules to insure that as many letters as possible appear in

All letters must be typed to a 65 - space line and triple spaced. Letters must be signed and include local address, hometown and student, faculty or staff standing.

Letters may be edited for clarity and conciseness to fit more letters on the page, but definitely will not be edited for content. Letters should be 25 lines or less.

Absolutely no unsigned letters will be considered for print.

Jondahl says he has received moreletters about the nonreturnable bill than on any other issue he has been involved with. Support has come from city councils, county commissioners, newspaper editorials and individual citizens balanced industry and some labor elements. The aim of the bill is to get bottlers to utilize reusable bottles, which would save a lot of energy since the average reusable only by opposition from the beverage bottle is used 15 times. Even though bottle manuafacturers would not make as many bottles, they would get a higher price for the heavy duty reusables and probably capture a large share of the can market - which is what happened in Oregon.

The Oregon bill, however, outlawed the convenient pull - top cans - the tabs have been found to damage wildlife - and the House bill as it now stands would not do

The pull - top question may be a moot point, as cans with push - holes are now on the market in Oregon.

The major importance of the whole issue is that it is one of the first Michigan skirmishes in the war between the Throwaway Society and the Conservation

Most people now recognize that steps to conserve the earth's finite energy store are long overdue.

The philosophy adhered to immediately after World War II when the bottle manufactureers decided 15 was better than one, and chain supermarkets decreed that convenient throwaways - while making the product more expensive - were preferable to the energy - saving reusable, is now outmoded.

While some changes may be in order for House Bill 4926 - such as extension to cover at least milk and fruit juice cans and bottles and adoption of a pull - top bansuch legislation deserves the support of Michigan's citizenry, as well as cooperation and short - term sacrifices by the affected

Blatant emotionalism in Sinclair's article

By MARK LARSEN

I wish to comment on last Tuesday's opinion piece by Mary Sinclair, criticizing the development of nuclear power sources.

I protest the use of blatant emotionalism in her poorly supported attempts to "prove" her points. For example, her article opens with two out of - context quotes deploring nuclear power by flaunting such emotion - charged words as "most dangerous" and "biggest single risk." However, Sinclair fails to even include the complete sentences from which the quotes were taken and finds it necessary include words of her own choice ("Nuclear power is...") before each

I also question the logic of Sinclair's arguments. She states "the Atomic Energy Act of 1954... charges the AEC not only with the regulation but the promotion of nuclear power. Therefore, there has never been a single license denied for a nuclear power plant as the result of a public hearing."

Obviously, the premise has nothing whatsoever to do with her presumed conclusion. She has so clouded her mind with emotion that she fails to see that she has merely assumed a cause - and - effect relationship without a shred of backing. I challenge Sinclair's contention that

"AEC Rules of Practice... handicap intervening citizens." In fact, Sinclair with her interveners and attorneys has held up the construction of the Midland nuclear power plant for at least four years.

In this time span the projected cost of construction has doubled. Now if this isn't an example of the power which just a few citizens can wield, I guess I just cannot comprehend her conception of citizen

I question the implication raised by Sinclair that the AEC is confused about its policies and that its months-long licensing delay was the result of this confusion. perceive, rather, that it is she who is confused.

She states that the interveners are handcuffed by AEC regulations, and then she later turns around to criticize them for delaying while they carefully review their procedures. I would ask of her: What do you want out of the AEC and the power companies?

I say the enlightened people in this country will not stand for her scare tactics, and I shall only reconsider my opinion when she presents something other than emotional diatribes and doomsday predictions of "ultimate catastrophe" catastrophe."

$10 million in taxes go to Nixon's homes

Alex Terpay... No. 2 but happy

It is one of the hazards of being an assistant hockey coach that Amo Bessone's cigar is probably better known among MSU fans than is Alex Terpay.

Not that Terpay resents it. He likes Bessone too much, and his job even more. And if it was publicity - or money - that determined if Alex Terpay remained at MSU... well, Terpay would have been gone a long time ago.

"Right now it's been 10 straight nights of hockey," Terpay sighed while sending the Spartan JVs through a workout Monday. "Six games in four nights plus recruiting.

"Now I'm looking forward to going home tonight and watching "Gunsmoke."

Such is life for Bessone's right - hand man. Coaching. Recruiting. Teaching hockey classes. Terpay is a busy man but loves every minute of it.

"It's really easy to work with Amo," he acknowledged, lighting up a King Edward. "Amo and I share each other's thoughts. I suppose it's kind of a father image. We communicatevery well."

Bessone would agree. It is no coincidence that Michigan State's hockey program has risen measurably since Terpay became Bessone's first asst. coach in 1969. That came four years after Terpay had completed a couple of varsity seasons as the Spartan

Terpay came to MSU in 1965 from Buffalo, N.Y., on a partial baseball - hockey scholarship but with no intentions of becoming the Spartan goalie. Then came a night against Michigan. "We were losing 2 - 0 after just a couple of minutes of play and no reserve goalie," Terpay recalled. "Then I caught Amo looking down the bench at me. I looked down, too, but it did no good. The game turned out, 7 - 4, so I gave up five goals but I made about 45 saves.

"I came out of the game like I was in a fog. I was so excited I couldn't eat.'

Terpay then worked on his masters, helping Bessone coach the freshman team and c teaching hockey classes - all for free - before he was hired as an assistant in 1969. death of 19 - year - old Altagracia De La Cruz, who was shot in

ALEX TERPAY

Now he handles the bulk of the recruiting and he doesn't strike out much. Five of the seven top players that Terpay recruited for this year's team he got. Money is the reason Bessone and Terpay must be so selective in the number of players they recruit. Basketball, for instance, has four times as much recruiting money.

Indeed, it is a good thing Terpay won $50,000 last year in the Michigan Lottery. At $8,800 he is the lowest paid assistant coach at Michigan State.

"We've got a happy hockey program here," he said, looking out over the ice at the players warming up. "This goes right back to Amo. I think the program we're running is one of the fairest in college hockey. We encourage as many people to play as

HAVE AN IDEA, Terpay is now thinking, like any assistant coach, what it would be like to be a head man. He is in no hurry, but the satisfaction, the money, his own success,...all seem to say Terpay is headed for a head job somewhere.

When Bessone decides to step down in a few years, and if Alex is still here it would be nice to see him get the job. After all, once in a while, nice guys finish first.

Spartan coaches tighten belts as energy shortage hits home

By BILL COSTABILE State News Sports Writer

With all the money that MSU teams bring in, the MSU Athletic Dept. should be able to shrug off the present energy shortage,

If the answer is yes, then Santa Claus must be buying all the equipment and supplies and picking up the tabs for travel

For Bill Beardsley, asst. athletic director, the main problem involves team travel.

"We anticipate that charter flights are out for travel this fall," Beardsley said. "For short trips we may get a charter, but it will be one - way. We'd like to travel by bus and then fly back after

"This fall we'll have to arrange a commercial flight for our trip to UCLA. We won't save that much, but every little bit helps the "One inconvenience for this office is that service for supplies has slowed down. We've already ordered our application forms for football tickets. We have to order these things more in advance than in previous years.'

While there is little to do but tighten their belts, most coaches have accepted the fact that they must make some changes to stretch their respective budgets as far as possible.

Equipment supplies are the biggest headache for baseball coach Danny Litwhiler and his staff.

"The increased shortages are killing me," Litwhiler said. "The nylon netting we have in the Tartan Arena in the Men's Intramural Building has to be replaced soon. Not only is the cost going to hurt us, but the stuff may not even be available when we

10 cards at once! Enthusiasts vie for cash prizes

By LIZ DRISCOLL State News Staff Writer

If you feel you have a leprechaun's luck or you're just plain tired of sitting around, Bingo may be just your game.

But if so, watch out! There are rules and tricks you should know to make it worth your while.

At each Bingo you attend you will receive a number of cards for the $1 admission charge. At most places one or two bingo cards are given, which entitles you to play regular games. Prizes for regular games start at $10.

In addition to these cards, the player may purchase more cards for 25 cents each which are also used for regular games. These prices vary somewhat at different

If you feel really lucky, you should purchase a jackpot card which costs a mere 75 cents. This card has three Bingos on it and may be used for both regular and jackpot games. The jackpot prize is $500.

To pocket that $500 all you must do is play the card throughout the evening. If you can cover the numbers on your card within 48 calls then the big green stuff is

If you cover the card after 48 calls you will still receive a consolation prize of

Now if all this should seem rather bland, hold on, because there is more. Players may also purchase "Paper Specials," which include nine Bingo cards for $1.50. These are thrown away after the game, while other cards are used again. The "Paper Special" games include "Four Corners," where the player must cover the four outer corners of the card to win. "Around the Free," where the numbers around the center free spot must be covered; "Around the World," in which covered; and of course the "Gover All." If you fail to win at Bingo the first time around, do not be discouraged, because sometimes "Buddy Bingo" is played. In this game, if the person sitting next to you wins, you receive $1 just for being his

the outside numbers must be completely

If you are going to become a regular Bingo player it is probably a good idea to purchase your own markers. Most of the 24 Bingo outlets in the Lansing area sell plastic markers for about 75 cents per package and have an advantage over the cardboard markers provided by the

"bouse" because you can see your covered numbers. Also, a liquid dobber can be purchased for the "Paper Specials" which also allows the player to see his numbers. These dobbers sell for 75 cents also.

To win any of these games the player must call "BINGO" after the number is called that completes the game. If you wait until two or three more numbers are called, you have blown it.

Chris Hurth, a Lansing school teacher, recently did just that. She lost the $500 jackpot because she was so busy talking she failed to cover a number early in the game that had been called. "When I realized I had missed that number I almost threw up," she said.

So, if you are going to play, pay attention and always remember one thing:

Old-style fun attracts many

By LIZ DRISCOLL State News Staff Writer

Let's talk about good old - fashioned fun. Sitting around talking with friends, munching on pretzels and sipping soda, laughing about fantastic chances to gain some extra cash and, of course, spending the evening anywhere but in front of the television.

The crowds come early, prepared to sit for as long as four hours. Some bring cushions to sit on, their own mugs of coffee, cards for a few hands of poker before game time - all for the price of $1 admission.

This is Bingo at its best!

"Bingo is an addiction," said one gray haired lady who follows the Bingo games around Lansing. "Once you start its hard to stop."

Bingo has not only become a fad since it was legalized last June, but it has also restored part of an age gone by. "Back in the '40s beer Bingos were great fun," laughed one hearty man who was busy one night recently keeping track of 10 Bingo cards, "remember when Monsignor Gabriels would come and . . .

Charles Dean, deputy commissioner of Bingo for the Michigan State Lottery Commission, estimates more than 140,000 persons play Bingo weekly in Mich

Though Bingo was outlawed in 1953, enthusiasts were still playing Bingo when it was relegalized last June.

"Hey, there were lots of Bingo games in different areas," Dean said. "A number of Bingos were condoned by local governments. In some cases the law would just look the other way.'

Since June, the lottery commission has issued 1,473 regular licenses which allow weekly games or games on 12 separate days during the year, and 522 licenses allowing either one Bingo per year or Bingo on seven consecutive days once in a

These licenses range from a $5 special license to a $100 regular license. They are issued only to nonprofit organizations.

Dean, one of 150 persons employed by the lottery commission, noted that Bingo is not a money - making project for the

"It was made legal for the benefit of

"We operate on a budget of about. $140,000," Dean said. He added this figure is a rough estimate since his office has been in operation less than one year.

Among those holding Bingo games in Michigan, churches hold the most followed by fraternal, veterans and service organizations. This seems a bit ironic since Bingo has long been thought of as

However Patrick Ryan, head of the Resurrection Catholic Church Bingo doesn't feel that way.

"Anything in life is a gamble," said Ryan. "You're only gambling when you can't afford it. Bingo is entertainment."

There are several political figures volunteering at Bingos in the Lansing area. Alfreda Schmidt, chairman for the Ingham County Republican party; Pat Pittenger, wife of state Sen. Philip O. Pittenger, and Frank Sudac, an Ingham County commissioner, are volunteering their time to various organizations.

Dean, who admits Bingo isn't his game, noted that the average person spends $5.50 per night playing Bingo.

"Bingo is a very inexpensive way of having fun," he added.

And that's if you only play. If you win,

Education board permits teaching minor in religion

By LINNEA BOESE State News Staff Writer

The study of religion in the public schools was given a boost by the State Board of Education last week when it authorized MSU and Western Michigan University to grant teaching minors in

The acceptability of religion as an academic study has constantly been under debate and only four years ago the board approved it as a certifiable minor in Michigan, after Calvin College in Grand Rapids made the first application for certification.

Soon after Calvin was authorized to award the minor, MSU, WMU, the University of Detroit and Hope College applied.

Both WMU and MSU said in their applications that they believed it was in accord with the U.S. Supreme Court's recent decisions for high school students to be given the chance to study religions and that teachers must have the training to teach the

The Supreme Court in the early 1960s barred prayer in public schools but sanctioned studies about religion.

"It is almost an invitation to put religious studies in the public school," Robert T. Anderson, chairman of MSU's Dept. of Religious Studies, said.

"Religion as an academic study is not trying to indoctrinate the student any more or less than other subjects," Anderson explained. "It is descriptive as to what are or have been the religious activities in cultures - it is a key to understanding

Courses in religion are already being taught in many high schools and many disciplines such as history and literature have religious content, Anderson said.

Few teachers, however, have any background in the academic study of religion because it had not been certifiable as either a major or minor until 1970.

Since the state's decision to certify religion as a teaching minor the board has moved cautiously. Restrictions and stipulations have been placed on religious studies programs which are not put on other departments, Anderson said.

These stipulations have mainly served the purpose of insuring that Eastern and Western religions are taught in balance in a

The MSU Dept. of Religious Studies also had to set up a "teacher certification program administrator" to serve as a direct link with the College of Education, a procedure no other school has to provide for its education minors, Anderson said.

Anyone using religion as a minor must register with Mary L. Schneider, asst. professor of religious studies, who will act as this

In order to complete a minor in religion, a student will need 30 credits in the department: nine credits in the three introductory courses on understanding religious man, Western religions, and Eastern religions; 12 credits elected in Western religions, which includes Judaism and Islam, and nine credits in Eastern religions. After a five - year period ending June 30, 1978, the board will review the religious studies programs and consider final approval.

will be a Republican primary for Michigan's 5th Congressional District seat.

Gerald R. Ford's name is not on ballot today to scare away all Ford was named vice president in December after Spiro T. Agnew had resigned. Ford was the first man named to that spot under terms of the 25th Amendment.

The battle among four Republicans who want to succeed Ford is in a district that has not sent a Democrat to Congress since 1916 and never gave Ford less than 60 per cent of its votes.

Kent County, composed of Grand Rapids and its suburbs, has 224,965 registered voters, about 80 per cent of those in the district. Election officials forecast a county turnout of only 17 per cent and there are no predictions for the remaining voters in Forecasts of a small vote were based mostly upon failure of the four GOP candidates to hit upon a controversial issue which could capture public interest.

"This is still Jerry Ford's district to most people; there really seems to be more interest in his visit Thursday than in the election," one party worker said.

Robert VanderLaan, 43, majority leader in the Michigan Sente, is rated the the favorite by most observers over fellow state Sen. Milton Zaagman, 47; Kent County prosecutor James K. Miller, 46, and former Grand Rapids Mayor Robert Boelens, 48.

Tuesday's winner races Democrat Richard VanderVeen, 51, a Grand Rapids lawyer, in a Feb. 18 general election that also features nominees of the SocialistLabor and American Independent

Republican officials are predicting that Ford, who has not endorsed anyone in the primary campaign, will aid the GOP

Both VanderLaan and Zaagman, who is the state Senate's prosecutor for the same length of time.

Boelens, who had no formal party affiliation but registered as a Republican just days before announcing, lost a bid for re election to the mayor's office last November. Instead, the voters chose a black for the first time in the city's history.

Fuel crisis hurting Union Board flights

With prices going up and fuel availability going down, the MSU Union Board charter flights to Europe this summer will be more expensive and less numerous. For the past 18 years, the Union Board has offered charter lights to Europe for MSU students and faculty and their

Snow stacks remain on pathway stretch

slippery path through mounds of ice and snow remained nday as the only route for student pedestrians to use in sing between the Red Barn and Kildea's Sunoco on the south de of Grand River Avenue just east of Bogue Street.

And, four days after the State News first reported the walking sle, there seems little legal way to force the property owners

Though property owners are required to maintain their ewalks snow - free, Gordon Melvin, asst. city engineer, says re is no sidewalk under the snow to be kept walkable.

"When the State Highway Dept. widened Grand River, there as little right - of - way left between the curb and the property " Melvin said Monday. He added that for a sidewalk to be structed there must be a 2 - foot distance from the property e and a recommended width of 5 feet for the sidewalk. 'There may not be enough room for a sidewalk," he said.

As for the property owners, the owner of Kildea's Sunoco says property belongs to Red Barn, while the Red Barn owner s he has no responsibility to keep the walkway cleared. Thus, walkers may have to wait till spring for safe walking immediate families, with over 25 flights scheduled last year. This year only three flights are definite. A fourth flight may be added

At the present time there will be a flight to Paris, leaving from Chicago on Trans International Airlines June 12 and returning Aug. 27 for $299 round trip. The other two flights are both to Frankfort, German, and originate from Detroit. The first of these Lufthansa flights will leave July 30 returning Aug. 27 and the second will leave Aug. 9 and return Sept. 6, each costing $310

Prices on all flights are subject to change due to fuel allocations and airport taxes, Cathy Ferrera, Union Board flight office reservationist, said. These price increases would be from $8 to $15

Ferrera said prices are up substantially this year but would not say how much because the flight office did not want to discourage anyone who might be considering the flights.

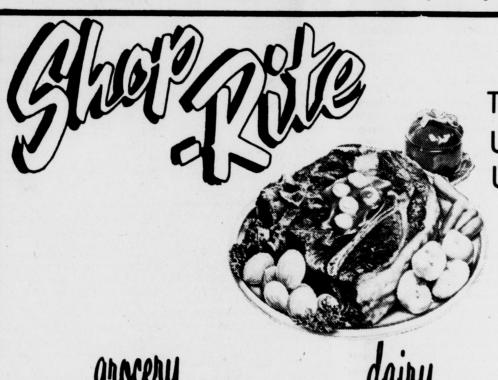

Though the prices are up, Ferrera said the passengers are getting better service this year because they are using commercial air carriers as opposed to supplementary carriers which were used last year. They are also making their own reservations directly through the air carriers instead of through a travel agency as they did in the past.

This is because there were problems last year when a supplementary airline went bankrupt and alternate flights had to be arranged for passengers who were still in Europe to fly back to the United States.

Hotel or motel reservations and leisure time activities are being left to the passenger. International student ID cards, which give 50 per cent discounts in places such as museums and restaurants in 13 countries, are available. Youth hostel passes are also available which offer lodging in hostels in both Europe and the United States. These are $10 for a senior pass and $12 for a family

Reservations for the flights can be made by calling the Union Board at 353 - 9777. Ferrera said they must have at least 40 people per flight in order to leave, and reservations must be made one to two months prior to departure. She said no shots will be needed for any of the flights.

Party asks creation of elected unit to stop ecological damage to state

By CAROL HARDING

The Michigan Human Rights party blasted government agencies and officials Monday for "caving in to the greedy desires of oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy corporations' on environmental issues.

"To avoid further ecological damage in Michigan we urge immediate creation by our state legislature of an elected environmental protection and planning agency with effective enforcement powers," the party said in a statement issued statewide in the wake of its meeting in East Lansing

High Court agrees to study law ordering free political rebuttals

WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court agreed Monday to review a Florida law that compels newspapers to provide free space for "any reply" by politicians they have criticized.

The justices are expected to act in the case, the latest in a series of disputes between the press and authorities to come before the highest court, by early summer. They reserved the right to dismiss the case without deciding the merits, however, if they decided the court lacks jurisdiction over the matter.

The newspaper case involves a statute enacted by the Florida Legislature in 1913 that was mostly ignored until it was invoked in 1972 by Legislative candidate Pat Tornillo of Miami.

Tormillo, a leader of the Dade County Classroom Teachers Assn., had asked the Miami Herald, which had criticized his candidacy in two editorials, to provide him free space to reply. The newspaper refused, arguing that the statute interfered with freedom of the press, and Tornillo went to court.

Judge Francis Christie, Dade County Circuit Court, ruled that the law was unconstitutional.

"Clearly, if the state may not prohibit what a newspaper may print, it cannot assume the editorial function and direct a newspaper what to print," he said.

But the Florida Supreme Court, in a 6 - 1 decision last July, overruled Christie and upheld the right - to - reply law. It is "designed to add to the flow of information and ideas and does not constitute an incursion upon First Amendment rights or a prior restraint since no specified newspaper content is excluded," the court said.

"There is nothing prohibited but rather it requires, in the interest of full and fair discussion (of political issues), additional information," the court said.

The highest Florida court put forth two justifications for upholding the statute.

"The first, of the public to know all sides of a controversy and from such information to be able to make an enlightened choice, is being jeopardized by the growing concentration of the ownership of the mass media...resulting ultimately in a form of private censorship," the court said.

It also cited a 1969 Supreme Court ruling which upheld the "fairness doctrine" for television and radio stations.

The doctrine requires stations to give "equal time" for responses by persons criticized on their nonnews programs.

Tornillo was defeated in his bid for election to the legislature. He had been criticized in Herald editorials for his role in a 1968 teachers'

Among other court actions

The justices agreed to hear an appeal by four California men convicted under a federal statute that prohibits the mailing of obscene material.

Among other points, the California men said the federal law barring obscene mailings was too vague and broad.

The men were charged with mailing 55,000 brochures book entitled "The Illustrated Presidential Report of the Commission on Obscenity and Pronography.'

They also argued that their sentences of imprisonment for up to four years and fines of up to $43,000 amounted to excessive punishment in violation of the Ninth Amendment.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said in complimented Kissinger for his shuttle Jerusalem that Kissinger's work to "defuse the unfinished war" was essential to prevent new fighting along the canal.

He called Kissinger "a juggler, going from one place to the other trying to achieve the impossible." But in another optimistic note, he added that the American secretary stands a better chance than all previous mediators to reach a Middle East settlement.

Kissinger said he will submit the withdrawal expressed confidence that both sides agreed with plan to the Geneva Middle East peace conference once he nails down final accords from Sadat and Premier Golda Meir's government in Israel.

The drafting teams went to work after Kissinger met for three hours with Sadat, going General Kurt Waldheim with a "positive" report over a map of positions the Egyptian and Israeli forces would take up once they separated. The map was the fruit of his intensive talks Saturday and Sunday in Jerusalem.

The separation agreement would mark a first step on the road to Middle East peace, and, it is hoped, halt the almost daily clashes along the jagged Suez cease - fire lines while negotiators in Geneva work on an over - all peace accord.
