Truck strike brings guard out in 2 states

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The independent truckers' shutdown in 20 states brought new reports of violence Sunday and warnings of possible food shortages by today.

The strike, concentrated in the Midwest, has caused the governors of Ohio and Pennsylvania to call up National Guard units to patrol roads and protect working truckers.

Michigan has been very quiet, a spokesman for the Michigan State Police said. The National Guard has not been put on alert in Michigan.

Meanwhile, government and truckers' officials met in Washington Sunday to resolve the truckers' dispute over fuel and freight rates.

W.J. Usery Jr., President Nixon's chief labor trouble shooter, said the administration would consider asking Congress to enact emergency legislation for ending the dispute if it continued any significant length of time. But he said it was too premature to talk about any move in that direction.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp of Pennsylvania said he was cautiously optimistic about settling the strike following the meeting.

Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said Sunday that the governors should "use every resource at their command to see that we do not descend into anarchy . . .

This handful of truckers is not going to bring this country to its knees."

Saxbe, who said he once drove a truck himself, made the comment during a visit to his hometown of Mechanicsburg, Ohio.

Leonard Fleet, an attorney for the Council of Independent Truckers, which represents about 20,000 drivers in the Midwest, said he did not think the independents would call off their protest.

He said the driver - owners want assurances of reasonable prices for diesel fuel and permission to pass on to shipping companies, on a dollar - for - dollar basis, any fuel price increases.

Federal energy chief William Simon and four Cabinet officials met Saturday night and appealed to the nation's governors to help restore peace to the nation's highways. At the same time, the officials said they were taking steps to ease the truckers' problems.

Shapp, the chairman of the Mid - Atlantic Governors Conference, said, "A return to work now can prevent a national economic calamity that would, by its impact, adversely affect every truck driver as well as every other working man and woman."

Sen. Henry Jackson, D - Wash., chairman of the Senate Interior Committee, also warned of severe economic problems unless the shutdown is "nipped in the bud early."

Industries unable to get raw materials or ship finished products have curtailed production and further layoffs were announced Sunday.

Shootings were reported late Saturday night or early Sunday morning in South Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Ohio. A rock - throwing incident was reported in Illinois and there were three arrests in Indiana.

In another related development, the Saudi Arabian foreign minister was quoted Sunday in Beirut as saying Arabs will lift their oil embargo "when the United States proves it takes no pro - Israeli stands."

Omar Sakkaf's statement in an interview with the pro - Egyptian Beirut newspaper Al Anwar coincided with a report in the independent Lebanese daily An Nahar. The latter quoted informed Arab sources in Washington as saying the embargo will be lifted March 1.

President Nixon said in his State of the Union address Wednesday that Arab leaders plan an urgent meeting soon that may result in lifting the embargo, declared along with a general production cutback to pressure friends of Israel.

Mass transportation plans stalled by complicated GM bus production

By STEVE REPKO
State News Staff Writer

With the energy crisis making mass transportation a major concern of the nation's cities, the demand for new buses is growing, yet General Motors has not increased bus production.

The major delay in establishing the new East Lansing bus service was a lack of equipment. Not only was half of the Lansing area bus fleet inoperable, but backlogs in production of new buses among the nation's bus manufacturers delayed delivery of vehicles anywhere from nine to 12 months.

Edward R. Stokel, director of public transportation for General Motors Truck and Coach Division in Pontiac, said that GM has not made any increases in bus production because the process is not as simple as increasing production of other goods.

"We are exploring a number of possible ways to increase production," Stokel said, "but you have to realize that no two buses are ever built alike."

Stokel said that bus production is a custom industry requiring many specifications before a product can be manufactured.

"When we think of increasing production we have to think about exactly what it is we are going to build," Stokel said.

Stokel said that required specifications, a high number of options available in the making of a single bus, and the regulation of state utility commissions usually means that one bus order must be finished before another can begin.

Stokel said that there are 4,300 different options available in the production of a single bus with 40,000 different parts available.

Stokel also cited regulations and restrictions of state utility commissions as another problem in bus production, though Michigan is not as strict as some states.

"New Jersey requires a bus to have a crowd gate that swings open and shut when the front door is opened," Stokel said. "New York says that a partition shielding the driver from passenger interference must be added."

Stokel said that backlogs in orders have been a problem, but that the difficulties have been reduced in recent months. He also said that GM is working on a new coach design that would be ready for the market by mid - 1976.

"The design will have new safety and passenger features, better emission controls and lower noise levels," he said. "It will be a better and quieter bus."

Train-loving student started area rail plan

By SUSAN BURZYNSKI
$40,000 Staff Writer

He has logged 40,000 miles on the national railroads and even plans to begin his upcoming honeymoon on a train. He thinks trains, talks trains and plans to make the Iron Horse the object of his career.

Though many rail fans have been similarly captured by the railway mystique, this particular buff, a 21 - year - old student at MSU, has put his train mania to work.

Mark Hinsdale, Utica, senior, is the man primarily responsible for developing and pushing through plans to run an 18 - month demonstration Amtrak passenger train through the Lansing area from Port Huron, bound for Chicago.

The chain of events that eventually led to the Amtrak demonstration project got started when Hinsdale began working independently on a plan for upgrading rail passenger service between Detroit and Ann Arbor.

While taking a class for his transportation major in winter 1973, Hinsdale showed the project to Frank Mossman, professor of marketing and transportation, who was impressed with the plans and felt they should be submitted to the State Highway Dept.

The highway department was equally convinced that the innovative, energetic student had a better idea and it hired him in April 1973 to pursue the project further.

During his employment with the Urban Bureau of Transportation, Hinsdale was asked to formulate a list of Michigan routes that he believed could best support inter - city passenger service.

Hinsdale's recommendation of the Port Huron - Chicago line caught hold in the department, allowing the ambitious student to begin working at the hard - core details involved in setting up a new passenger service.

After the initial groundwork for the project had been built, the transportation bureau hired other rail experts which allowed Hinsdale to devote more time to study toward his June 1974 graduation but stay on as a consultant for all rail projects.

"I've always thought that there was too much emphasis on modes of transportation other than the railroad,"

Positions open on Capitol Area Rail Council, see page 11.

Hinsdale said, "Failing to consider the advantages and capabilities of the railroad had proved to be a mistake."

That particular philosophy led Hinsdale, who plans to follow a career in the railroad, to pursue his early rail projects even though he was not sure he was actually on the right track.

"The whole key to getting the demonstration service rolling was getting the communities involved interested in making a commitment," Hinsdale said. "When discussing funding alternatives, we decided that the cities should be responsible for maintaining their own depots."

Hinsdale said the recent local controversy between the Trowbridge Road and South Washington Avenue depot sites represented a "classic battle of regionalism versus the city."

"Operationally and with regard to the whole Metro Capitol City area, the Trowbridge site was more convenient for more people," Hinsdale said. "We don't plan to make money on this project, but we have to have passenger support to bring back the era of profitable rail service."

The Capitol Area Council of Governments recommended Jan. 18 that local governments support the construction of a depot site at Trowbridge Road.

A 14 - member Capitol Area Rail Council, which has not yet been appointed must make an official locality decision before the Amtrak implementation scheduled for April.

Hinsdale, who speaks with firm determination when the subject is trains, said he believes that this new Amtrak line could be the first step toward a re - emphasis on state rail passenger train service.

"Michigan is too auto - oriented. Change is going to come slow and hard but it's going to have to come," he said.

Among the advantages Hinsdale feels that rail service has are its environmental safety, energy efficiency, use of minimal land space, high passenger capacity and fractional polluting emissions.

Hinsdale has been fascinated by trains since his childhood when he spent summers with his grandparents near Detroit and had to become accustomed to the shaking of windows and the rattle of dishes every time a local train passed within a few feet of their home.

"When you live that close to a railroad, you either learn to hate it and ignore it or you are fascinated by it," Hinsdale said.

He remembers making friends with engineers and talking his way into rides with the various men who commanded the trains running past his home.

Hinsdale's self - confidence and knowledge of train operation led him to summer railroad jobs that involved spending hours in operating towers in Detroit - guiding the switching and movement of trains.

In addition, he spent hours of free time working in the Trowbridge Tower in East Lansing before it was demolished in 1971 and at the old passenger depot on Farm Lane.

During his freshman year, 1970, Hinsdale advertised his phone number in the State News as an "East Campus Rail Information Service." He says he received 25 to 30 calls per week from students asking for schedule information.

State's no-fault insurance confuses many

By SUSAN BURZYNSKI
State News Staff Writer

"Confusion" could easily replace the words "no - fault" in Michigan history books, as consumers, insurance agents and law enforcers try to decipher the complicated new auto insurance laws which went into effect on Oct. 1.

Or, if a lawsuit by the Michigan Trial Lawyers Assn., which claims the new law is unconstitutional, is successful, perhaps no - fault will only be remembered as a costly mistake.

The association charges the no - fault laws are in violation of a citizen's equal protection and due process under the law.

The trial is in its third week in the Wayne County Circuit Court of Judge Horace W. Gilmore.

No - fault has been pictured as the answer to long trials involving auto claims, high rates and uninsured motorists, though the system requires every driver to be insured.

Rate decreases for student drivers were foreseen because of the new no - fault laws, but William Macgee, a spokesman for the Michigan Insurance Bureau, said rates have remained about the same.

Most companies have lowered rates for single males on required coverages, he said, because often there is not an income or work loss, but, he added, collision rates have increased for the same student. Thus the cost is relatively the same if he buys the optional collision coverage.

George Harris, a spokesman for the Automobile Assn. of America (AAA) in Lansing, said if a student has only the required coverages (personal injury, property and liability protection) his rates may be substantially decreased, but if he has the optional collision protection, his rates remain the same.

No - fault has been criticized for placing a bigger burden on the poor driver who cannot afford collision protection. Even if a careful driver is hit by a drunk driver and he has no collision insurance he cannot get the drunk driver's company to pay for his auto damage.

Macgee said that unless the driver has an old car and is not worried about the value of it, he should buy at least limited collision coverage. It is usually one - fourth the cost of regular collision which varies with the age, location and marital status of the driver, he said.

Robert Grosvesnor, director of the Michigan Trial Lawyers Assn., said one of the problems caused by the no - fault law is that the poor person who cannot afford collision insurance is stuck if he is hit by another driver.

Under the old laws, the person at fault in the accident was required to pay for the damages of the other driver.

An estimate of the number of auto claim cases handled by the association prior to the no - fault laws is not available. Grosvesnor said, but he added, trial lawyers handle numerous other kinds of injury cases. Under no - fault, they thus stand to lose large amounts of money.

East Lansing Police Chief Stephen Naert said he has seen no change whatsoever in accident rates since no - fault started on Oct. 1. There were 335 auto accidents reported to the police in East Lansing from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31.

There may be three or four cases where people did not bother to report the accident at all because of the confusion surrounding the no - fault laws, Naert said.

He said if someone is stopped who does not have proof of insurance, he is ticketed in the same way he would have been prior to Oct. 1.

Prior to Oct. 1, about 25,000 people paid $45 into the now obsolete uninsured motorist fund and another 250,000 somehow evaded the insurance laws, Macgee said. "A lot of these people converted their insurance policies, but we do not have accurate figures yet," he added.

He said the bureau is expecting a rash of insurance buyers in March, because a driver will have to show proof of insurance by April 1 to get his license plates.

A person convicted of violation of the no - fault laws may have his license and registration revoked and may be fined between $100 and $500 or imprisoned for not more than one year.

However, Rep. Matthew McNeely, D - Detroit, introduced a bill in the state House last fall, which would refund half of the $45 paid by an uninsured motorist this year.

McNeely said the uninsured motorist paid $45 for the use of driving for a 12 - month period. He said after six months they were forced to buy no - fault insurance to continue driving.

"I am not opposed to no - fault, but if a driver only used the state services six months he should get $22.50 back," McNeely said.

The bill was passed by the House on Dec. 5 and has been in the Senate Committee on Commerce since Dec. 10.

Under no - fault, required coverages mean that anyone who is hurt in an accident has his medical bills and work loss paid by his own insurance company, but the required coverages do not pay for repairs to your car or any other car damaged in an accident unless it was parked at the time.

All physical damage coverages which pay you for loss or damage to your own car are now optional under the law. Whether you want to pay for collision damage and how much protection you want should depend on the age and value of your car, insurance agents say.

Three options available are limited, regular and broadened collision. Limited, which is relatively inexpensive, pays for the damage to your car but only if the accident is someone else's fault.

Regular collision pays for the damage to your car regardless of who is at fault. However, it is usually sold with a "deductible" clause. Broadened collision is the same as regular collision except the deductible - or the amount the insured pays - does not apply if the damage to his car is someone else's fault.

Macgee said broadened collision generally costs about $14 more per $100 deductible than regular collision.

No - fault insurance, instituted Oct. 1 to eliminate long trials on auto accident claims, is on trial in Wayne County. The Michigan Trial Lawyers Assn. claims the measure is unconstitutional.

Nixon pledges aid to Cambodia

President Nixon, in a personal letter to Cambodian President Lon Nol, has pledged that the United States will aid the Cambodian government in thwarting rebel efforts to capture Phnom Penh. Nixon said that Cambodia's only choice is to continue strengthening its defenses.

Government soldiers with grenades and rifles failed to break through rebel lines Sunday eight miles north of Phnom Penh where they have been penned in by rebel troops for two days.

An escape is possible across the river into government-controlled territory on the west bank.

In South Vietnam, North and South Vietnamese troops clashed again in the contested Central Highlands region near the Cambodian border.

Three members of the American Friends Service Committee were released Sunday after being held for nearly two weeks by the Vietcong.

Israelis dispute Syrian claims

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv Sunday disputed Syrian claims that heavy Israeli artillery fire pounded Syrian military positions and five Arab villages along the Golan Heights cease-fire line.

There was no Israeli comment on Syrian claims that it had destroyed an Israeli missile base, three tanks and six mortar batteries in response to the fire.

Meanwhile, Syrian President Hafez Assad was in Saudi Arabia, asking King Faisal to continue the oil embargo against the United States. Arab newspapers speculated that the Golan Heights attacks were being used by Assad to strengthen his stand on continuing the embargo.

Terrorists free two in Karachi

Three armed terrorists freed two hostages they had held for more than 30 hours aboard a Greek freighter in the Karachi, Pakistan, harbor late Sunday.

The gunmen, proclaimed to be members of the Muslim International Guerrillas, were flown out of the country after being assured that the Greek government would lift the death sentences of two Arab terrorists held in Athens.

The condemned Arabs, members of the Black September group, killed five persons and wounded 45 others in an attack at the Athens airport last August.

Gromyko to meet with Kissinger

An increased Russian role in achieving a Middle East peace settlement is expected to be the major topic when Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko meets with President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in Washington today.

Gromyko arrived Sunday in Washington.

The U.S. has carried the major Mideast diplomatic burden so far, particularly in achieving a military settlement between Israel and Egypt. With a military disengagement between Israel and Syria scheduled next, Kissinger is said to feel the Syrian government would react more readily to Soviet influence.

Gromyko's agreement to consult with Kissinger and Nixon is taken as a good sign in this regard, U.S. officials said.

While the Middle East will dominate the talks, Gromyko and Kissinger are expected to work out a date for the resumption of the SALT talks, troop reductions in Europe and the possibility of another Nixon trip to the Soviet Union later this year.

Study says tax breaks inefficient

A study released Sunday by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., indicates that tax breaks granted the oil industry are inefficient in stimulating new oil supplies.

The study indicates that tax breaks such as the oil depletion allowance actually discourage exploration of new sources and "encourage producers to rely on overdrilling in existing fields" instead.

"The incredible tax benefits that the oil companies have enjoyed for years have produced billions of dollars of profit for the industry without inducing any additional production of domestic oil," Jackson said in an accompanying statement.

182 known dead in Brazil fire

The Sao Paulo, Brazil, morgue said Sunday that 182 persons died in the Crefisul Bank fire, but other sources said 200 or more perished.

Many of the dead jumped from the 25-story building to escape the flames. The building had no fire escapes.

No cause for the blaze has been established, but some officials speculated that it was started by a short circuit in a 12th-floor air conditioning unit.

A Sao Paulo newspaper reported that Fire Commander Col. Jonas Flores Ribeiro Jr. was under threat of dismissal following the fire, for complaining about a need for more fire stations.

Subpena power for unit urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Sunday the House Judiciary Committee should be granted the power to subpoena President Nixon in its impeachment probe but he isn't sure the authority is enough to bring the President before the committee.

The vice president also suggested that if subpoenaed, the President might answer the committee's questions but not appear in person. And Ford said, there is no legal support "for an unlimited fishing expedition in the office of the President."

"I think you have to differentiate between the office of the President, where there is no legal precedent for a fishing expedition, and the rights of any individual among our 211 million people," he said. "It is the office of the presidency on the one hand that I think has to have some reasonable protection."

Ford appeared on the CBS television and radio program "Face the Nation."

The House is scheduled to consider on Wednesday granting the committee unlimited subpoena authority.

Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski said Sunday that if the material he has gathered in his Watergate investigation is subpoenaed by the House committee he would refuse to turn it over. "I have only one course I can follow: to hold the evidence secret," he said on the ABC program "Issues and Answers."

He said he saw no way at this time to give the material to the committee and if subpoenaed, "I'd meet the gentlemen at the courthouse."

Because the Watergate-related materials are being presented to a grand jury, "I have no right to release them," he said.

Jaworski stuck to his earlier timetable, repeating that some indictments could be expected later this month, and took issue with a statement made by Ford on the CBS program that the prosecutor had been given more tapes than he requested from the White House. "I have some requests outstanding for tapes," he said. "Any idea this material has been spoon fed me is in error. I've had to go after it."

Ford said Nixon's statement during his State of the Union address Wednesday night that one year of Watergate was enough should be taken figuratively and not literally because court cases and the House impeachment inquiry are pending.

"He recognized certain things still have to be wrapped up in the House committee on the judiciary," Ford said.

Jaworski disputed the statement that one year was sufficient.

"We've worked long hours," he said. "We've moved ahead as fast as anybody can move, consistent with fairness," but more time is needed.

Ford said the White House should release the material that prompted Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania to say that he was convinced the President was innocent.

One year after reaching an all time high, Nixon's popularity has reached a new low of 26 per cent, according to the latest Gallup Poll.

In the poll conducted Jan. 18 through 21, the President continued to receive his highest rating in the South. Among the Southerners surveyed, 34 per cent approved of Nixon's performance, compared with 22 per cent in the East, 27 per cent in the Midwest and 21 per cent in the Far West.

This was one point below the 27 per cent approval rating of early January.

MSU tries to save drivers energy as car pool program starts rolling MSU's computerized car pool, nicknamed CESAR for Conserve Energy — Share a Ride, will begin Wednesday.

Robert Perrin, vice president for University relations, said that questionnaires would be distributed through the campus mails to more than 8,000 faculty and staff employed on the East Lansing campus.

When returned the information will be fed into the computer.

The result, said Perrin, will be a printed sheet individualized for each potential participant containing a list of other persons with home addresses in the same area and with similar working hours. Only those who fill out the questionnaire will receive a printout.

"At that point," Perrin said, "it will be up to the individuals to make contact with others on the list and make arrangements for car pooling."

"Completing the questionnaire is not a commitment to join a car pool. Rather, it is an expression of interest. However, we hope that when faculty and staff discover how many others there are in their neighborhoods who work at MSU and have similar hours, they will realize how wasteful it is to drive onto campus alone every day."

Potential participants will find their home locations on grid maps accompanying the questionnaire and enter the appropriate coordinates where indicated. Their printouts normally will include others living in the same grid, though in some cases one or more adjacent grids will be included.

Those who travel to the campus from other communities not contained on the grid maps (such as Ann Arbor, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Flint, etc.) may enter special coordinates and will be given names of others commuting from the same area.

Perrin said the initial distribution of questionnaires would go to faculty and staff. However, he said, the same material will be adaptable to students who commute to the campus.

"The best time to reach such students would be at registration when their class schedules for spring term are set," he said. "It would not make much sense to try to match up car pools this late in the winter term. Therefore, our current thinking is to make the questionnaires available to students at spring term registration in March."

In addition to the questionnaire and maps, the distributed material will include a list of department code numbers which should be entered on the form. This identification will assist in the efficient distribution of the printouts. When completed, the questionnaires should be folded and deposited in campus mail for delivery to the Computer Center by Feb. 15.

In addition to seeking information necessary for identifying potential car pool mates, the questionnaire contains two questions requested by the TriCounty Regional Planning Commission. These relate to potential interest in subscription or express bus service to the campus.

Those who do not receive a questionnaire or who have questions regarding the program should contact Perrin's office (5-6572).

James Irwin, Apollo 15 astronaut, recounted religious experiences at Sexton High School Saturday. He described his fight to recover from injuries incurred when he was a test pilot.

FORMER ASTRONAUT SPEAKS HERE

Bible an important rock to Irwin

By CHRIS DANIELSON
State News Staff Writer

"I've always loved the high places because I've felt closer to God," former astronaut James Irwin told an audience of 700 who had each paid $2 to see and hear him in the Lansing Sexton High School auditorium Saturday night.

The lunar explorer, who spent three days on the moon in August 1971, during the Apollo 15 mission, spoke about his career as an Air Force test pilot, his uphill battle to become an astronaut after a crippling plane crash and his religious experience in space.

In addition to Lansing Mayor Gerald Graves — who had presented the key to the city to the 43-year-old religious speaker when he arrived at Capitol City Airport Saturday afternoon — the combined choirs of Lansing area Methodist churches shared the stage with Irwin.

Following the opening hymns — including "The Heavens are Telling the Glory of God" — Irwin related how his promising career as a pilot was almost shattered by a plane crash.

"As a young fighter pilot I had always wanted to fly all the planes the Air Force had, so I went to test pilot school," he said.

He passed with flying colors and eventually was assigned to be the first pilot of the world's fastest and highest flying plane.

But shortly after, a light plane in which he was flying with a student pilot was caught in a cross wind and crashed, leaving Irwin with two broken legs, a broken jaw and a concussion.

Recalling his depression during a four-month convalescence, Irwin said he wondered why God had allowed the accident to happen.

Speaking in tones that brought Jonathan Livingston Seagull to mind, he described the subsequent frustration of wanting to fly but not being allowed to during the year following the crash.

However, Irwin regained his wings and was named an astronaut in 1966 following two earlier rejections that had left him at the upper age limit for new astronauts, 35.

"At the end of five years of preparation, the day finally came when (senior astronaut) Deke Slayton woke us up one morning by saying 'Okay guys, are you ready to go to the moon today?'" Irwin said.

Irwin's first view from space of Earth — which looked like "the most beautiful and fragile Christmas tree ornament imaginable" — was one of the highlights of the trip, he said.

Landing on the moon, he "felt the personal presence of God directing our every path. God answered our prayers — even on the moon — without any delay."

Concluding his 30-minute talk, Irwin showed a Panamanian (worry) rock ("the rock of superstition"), a simulated moon rock ("representing materialism") and a Bible to the audience, asking them "which rock is No. 1 in your life?"

Most of the many children who heard Irwin seemed impressed with the former astronaut.

"I'm usually bored at speeches, but I wasn't at this one," Mike Brokaw, 11, said. "It would be fun to be an astronaut but I'd probably be afraid."

Rebecca Kalla, 14, said Irwin was handsome.

Consumer protection bill diverted from friendly committee by Senate

By MAUREEN McDONALD
State News Staff Writer

Consumer groups have resolved to let a major consumer protection bill die rather than accept a version weakened in committee.

In a rare move Thursday, Senate majority leader Milton Zaagman, R-Grand Rapids, successfully sought a Senate vote and referred the consumer bill to the Judiciary Committee rather than the more sympathetic Agriculture and Consumer Affairs Committee, where it would normally have gone.

The bill, sponsored by House majority leader Bobby Crim, D-Davison, was approved by the House Wednesday and sent to the Senate. A similar House bill died in the Senate Judiciary Committee two years ago.

Sen. William Ballenger, R-Lansing, who wanted the bill to go to the consumer committee which he heads, charged that the switch in assignment was a "wired deal" with Jack Rose, the Michigan Chain Stores Council lobbyist and Chrysler lobbyist Hy Todd as the chief "electricians."

Ballenger added that the majority of senators may have feared that his committee was too liberal and would align itself with consumer interests.

Conversely, Sen. Daniel Cooper, D-Oak Park, and Sen. Donald Bishop, R-Rochester, the two members of the judiciary subcommittee which will now review the bill, vowed to their colleagues that they would represent business interests.

"There comes a point where you have to put an end to this harassment of business," Bishop said.

Cooper feels that the "unconscionable" business practices defined in the House bill are subject to any interpretation and said he will work to clearly define unfair trade practices. He denied any intervention from business constituents.

Tuchinsky speculated that the bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee for two possible reasons.

"Either they want to hold the bill hostage to allow passage of the governor's consumer bill (a different measure) or they want to kill the bill," he said.

The death of the present bill would amount to sweet sorrow, according to Tuchinsky. He is optimistic that consumer advocates will be elected to the Senate in November to replace those who favor business interests. He said he would prefer strong post-election consumer legislation with well defined clout to a weakened version approved now, which would not serve the needs of consumers.

He implied that Lorraine Beebe, chairman of the Michigan Consumers Council, engineered the weakened House version of the bill, based on a memo to House leaders. He again called for her resignation and the appointment of a strong consumer advocate to her post.

Consumer groups will work as a coalition to seek passage of strong legislation, Tuchinsky said. They will closely study the progress of the Judiciary Committee, to see if a strong bill can come from that group.

Ballenger is more optimistic. He said if consumer groups, legislators and the governor's office keep a close watch over the Judiciary Committee hearings will be held on the subject, and a strong bill could result.

Cooper said he is confident that a bill will be released this year which will aid both consumers and businesses.

"I think we are the proper committee to study the bill, as we understand the problems of the people who could be hurt by it," Cooper said.

Whartons end Brazil vacation

President Wharton and his wife, Delores, joined winter vacationers last week for 10 days of frolicking in the sun and surf of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

The trip, Wharton's first vacation in four years at MSU, began Jan. 24 and ended Saturday when Wharton went on to Sao Paulo, Brazil, to join a meeting of the Ford Motor Co. board of directors.

FCC orders probe of WJIM-TV owner

The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) ordered a formal, grand jury-style investigation Friday into the activities of Lansing's WJIM-TV.

The FCC granted full subpoena power to an administrative law judge and directed him to investigate whether Harold F. Gross, owner of the station, ordered news blackouts and other techniques to further his personal gain with his publicly-granted broadcast license. No starting date for the investigation was released.

Renewal of WJIM's license was held up last October pending an FCC investigation into charges of news managing by Gross.

Meanwhile, the National Labor Relations Board has issued a formal complaint against WJIM charging unfair labor practices in the dismissal of two of the station's former employees.

News reporter R. J. Grossfeld and cameraman Dennis Hart were fired last November for allegedly falsifying their time cards.

But Grossfeld and Hart contend that Gross fired them because of their efforts in organizing a labor union at the station.

A hearing in the case has been set for March 5. If WJIM is found guilty of unfair labor practices, the station would be forced to reinstate the two former employees with back pay and interest.

Confusion over porno law leaves manager of Crest Drive-in in stew

By ANGELIA CARROLL
State News Staff Writer

With his sandy-colored, shoulder-length hair and mustache, fisherman's sweater and blue jeans, Randall Posorek looks more like a college student than the manager of a controversial adult theater.

Yet Posorek, manager of the Crest Drive-in Theater on West Grand River Avenue in Okemos, was arrested three times last year on charges of showing obscene movies.

The Crest has been the center of controversy in Meridian Township since May, when residents near the outdoor theater complained that obscene movies were being thrust upon them against their wishes.

Posorek sat quietly in his office under the screen at the theater recently and discussed the legal charges against him, which partly stem from a recently approved local antipornography law. The first case is set for trial next month.

"The first raid (May 3) was like gangbusters' night at the circus," Posorek said. "Everybody was in on it — everybody and their friends."

"They came from all sides. They had confiscated the film, shut down the movie and told everybody to leave before I was even given a search warrant up in front here."

"The first raid was like gangbusters' night at the circus. Everybody was in on it..."

— Crest Drive-in manager Randall Posorek

"I stayed in there (jail) almost an hour more than I should have because nobody knew what the charge was. They just took me away."

Posorek, a former MSU television and radio major, called the whole raid ridiculous. He said: "If I hadn't been so taken by surprise, I would have been completely cracking up the whole time. But I was more worried about everybody else than trying to enjoy myself. The second time (May 19) I had a good time.

The third time (Sept. 26) was dull."

Criminal charges in the first case were dropped, but a civil suit brought by Meridian Township to close the theater as a public nuisance resulted in the erection of large lights around the outside of the theater which point away from the screen, blocking out any outside view of the screen.

On June 22, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that local communities could set their own standards for obscenity.

"We panicked," Posorek said. "We could have kept on after the ruling just like all the other places, but you know, if we were hit the way the we were, even before the Supreme Court ruling, we were like sitting ducks."

The Crest, owned by American Amusement, substituted mostly horror movies from the time of the Supreme Court ruling until after Labor Day.

Late in August, Meridian Township passed an ordinance banning the public display of "sexually explicit pictorial materials," including the outdoor showing of such materials.

The constitutionality of the ordinance, the first of only a few such laws to be passed thus far in Michigan, was challenged in a suit filed by Suits News Co., Oct. 4.

"After Suits News started raising a big stink, we figured well, they're testing it, so we decided to go back," Posorek said. "I knew I was going to get arrested a third time."

Posorek said his lawyer and Ted Swift, Meridian Township attorney, made an agreement after his third arrest, which stemmed from the township's smut law, to hold off any further raids until after the trial, originally scheduled for December, if the theater only showed simulated, soft-core movies.

However, Webb Smith, who works with Swift and who will try the Crest case, said he knows of no such agreement. Smith would not comment on whether there will be further raids on the Crest.

In December, the case was put off by a defense motion till February, but Friday it was again delayed till March 26.

After the first delay Posorek and his lawyer decided to go back to showing hard core films. On Christmas Day, the Crest opened with "The Devil in Miss Jones,"

The Crest Drive-in offers X-rated fare.

"Black on White" and "Deep Throat."

"They had to raid us on 'Deep Throat' for going back to hard-core, which wasn't part of the agreement," Posorek said.

"But on the other hand, they couldn't arrest us for fear that they'd pile up another case in an unconstitutional law and it would be thrown out."

"So, what did they do? They did nothing. And they muffed it again. They got themselves right into a bind, and I personally can't see any way they're going to get out of it. Because if Suits News doesn't get them first, we will."

Posorek believes his theater is being used as a target to further the political ambitions of several officials. He said that the state — not local governments — should set standards and guidelines on pornography for the whole state.

'Pittman' depicts spirit of rights struggle

By KATHY ESSELMAN
State News Reviewer

To capture artifacts is nostalgia, to recapture the mood and spirit of a time is art. "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" captured the heart and mind of the Civil Rights Movement of 1962. It is a masterpiece and deserves to stand as memorial to all those who sacrificed or died that others might live free.

Cicely Tyson portrayed Miss Jane, the 110-year-old lady whose lifetime spans the 1860s to the 1960s. A tribute to the strength and dignity of the black woman, she raises a foster son, marries a man and survives the horror and indignities of Reconstruction. Cicely Tyson imbues the character with courage and boundless love.

Tyson received an Academy Award nomination for her role in "Sounder," starred in the television series "East Side, West Side" with George C. Scott and was co-founder of the Dance Theater of Harlem. A distinguished actress, in this work she has a role which demonstrates her ability.

Tracy Keenan Wynn adapted Ernest J. Gaines novel "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" for television. His screenplay concentrated all the hope, optimism, gut courage and childlike faith which permeated the movement, in one remarkable drama. In truth, it was not a biography of a person but of a time.

Facts were selected and events were seen as those who grew up with the spasmodic upheaval which followed the Supreme Court's school desegregation order perceived them. The absolute belief that your actions will change history is given to few generations. Boundless optimism precedes boundless pessimism and as the generation who fought the Civil War to make all men free, those who fought the Civil Rights Movement found themselves repulsed by history.

A willingness to suffer, to die over the right to drink out of a water fountain, to be tortured and killed because they tell people all men have the right to vote—that was at the center of the civil rights movement.

The dedication to nonviolent confrontation underlies this drama. The philosophy is conveyed in an emotional speech by Jane Pittman's foster son Ned, played by Thalmus Rasulala. A moderate, he dies at the hands of the local landowners.

John Korty directed with simplicity and restraint which set off the drama inherent in the material. The excellent photography and unobtrusive score completed this production. A verse from "Turn, Turn, Turn" sums up the impact of this remarkable drama. "A time to be born, a time to die, a time to laugh, a time to weep . . . and a time for every purpose under heaven."

"The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" said all this in drama. When my son grows old enough, I will take him to see this. And I can say in all honesty, this is the way we were and this is the way it was. It may not have been the truth, but it was the truth as we saw it.

We owe Xerox a vote of thanks for fully sponsoring the undertaking.

Sparse audience enjoys folk music by local talent

By DAN CURDY
State News Reviewer

A sparse but enthusiastic crowd heard three good folk acts Friday evening by braving winter madness to attend the first concert sponsored by the East Lansing Musician's Guild and the Union Board.

Because the crowd was so small, the people all gathered around the musicians and actually participated in the show. This brought the people together.

Ed Boucher, a Lansing native, started the show with his Woodstock image approach to some humorous original songs.

He achieved a good rapport with his audience but Boucher appeared to be unsure of himself at times. Folk music's current limited acceptance in East Lansing may have accounted for this.

George and Susan, perhaps the tightest act of the evening, began with an original song called "Going to the Country." Susan played the flute with George on the guitar and they displayed tight harmonies and impressive writing ability. They also did several well known tunes — "Nature's Way" and "Wooden Ships" which were exceptionally well done. "Jazz Thing," by George and Susan, was the best song of the evening with some good flute work and a smooth, mellow sound.

George and Susan have played together for about one year. George formerly played solo folk-blues material once backing up the James Cotton Blues Band at Mariah. He also teaches guitar at the Lansing YMCA.

George said that members of the Musicians Guild are willing to present their music as often as possible, so hopefully there will be more concerts.

Perhaps folk music like that provided by guild members loses its appeal when it is given the limelight and is not secondary to drink and food.

The Carter and Lang band, the final act, was billed as a five-piece band but did not manage to add their fifth man before the concert. So the four members of Carter and Lang proceeded to rock out, much to the dismay of the folk fans.

Though the Carter and Lang band had a good sound and were entertaining at times, the crowd did not respond well. Carter said that the $1 admission charge combined with bad weather may have been a reason for the small turnout.

Carter and Lang and the other members of the group, John Sace, bass guitar player, and Harry Lokey, on the drums, explained that the East Lansing Musicians Guild is comprised of local musicians who work together and with the community to produce quality music.

Anyone who is interested in the guild or who has ideas concerning local musicians can get more information by calling 482-0552. The guild will also sponsor a beginning guitar workshop starting Saturday. The lessons will include basic theory, chords and songs.

Full house—not quite

Very few people showed up for the Union Board — East Lansing Musician's Guild concerts Friday which featured Edward Boucher, George and Susan and the Carter — Lang Band. The three acts played two shows at 8 and 10:30 p.m. The 10:30 show attracted only nine audience members and the performers introduced themselves to each member of the audience, adding a personal touch to the performance.

Despite efforts to make an evening out of it, the performers surely felt disappointed because this was the first concert in a series to be presented by the guild and Union Board. Furthermore, the poor turnout emphasizes a lack of appreciation for local entertainers.

Music of cellist rich, strong, breathtaking

Artist called back for 2 encores

By EDWARD ZDROJEWSKI
State News Reviewer

There are certain musicians of such stature in the musical world that it is superfluous to say that they were good in a particular concert. It is only natural that they are going to be good. Leonard Rose, who performed at Fairchild Theater Friday night, is such an artist. As a cellist and musician, Rose ranks with Mstislav Rostropovich and the late Pablo Casals at the top of his profession. His tone was so rich and powerful that it was hard to believe that one man could produce such a sound with one instrument. His style of playing was breathtaking.

His playing was so strong that it almost drowned out the accompanist, something rarely heard in a cello-piano concert. For some reason, the lid to the piano was almost closed. This was unfortunate because Rose could have easily blended well with a piano at full volume. The oversubbed piano caused something to be lost from much of the music. The concert opened with three "Fantasy Pieces" by Robert Schumann. These are romantic pieces that were beautifully played. However, in this work Schumann's harmonic style was unusually conservative for romantic music and if the music had continued longer than the 10 minutes it took to play the work, it could have become boring.

This was followed by Brahms' "Sonata in F Major for Cello and Piano, Op. 99." This was a much longer and much more varied work. Brahms' music tends to be more melodic than brilliant and Rose fitted in with that style very well. Brahms is at his best at chamber music and the performer brought out every nuance in this work.

Rose opened the second half of the concert with Bach's "Suite in C for Unaccompanied Cello." At one time, Bach's suites for solo stringed instruments were looked down upon as mere exercises. Thanks to the brilliant influence of Casals, that attitude has changed. Rose put as much expressive feeling into this work as he would any piece of romantic music.

This was followed by Debussy's "Sonata in D Minor for Cello and Piano." This is a very subtle work and Rose made an in-depth study of it. At times the playing seemed a bit vague, but this is part of Debussy's impressionistic style.

The work closed with Chopin's spectacular "Introduction and Polonaise Brillante." This was eight minutes of fireworks for cello and piano that brought the concert to a rousing conclusion.

One technique used in most of the pieces played was to play the movements of the pieces together with almost no break between them. This has its advantages and disadvantages. On one hand, it brings out the continuity of the work. On the other hand, it makes the works hard to follow for those in the audience who do not know much about music.

The audience loved every minute of the concert. Rose was called back for two encores and would undoubtedly have been called back for more if he had not announced that he would only play two.

Back stage

Leonard Rose, right, and piano accompanist David Golub, chatted backstage before their performance Friday for the Lecture-Concert Series. Rose, one of the world's finest cellists, displayed his multiple talents to a very responsive audience which called him back for several encores.

Dylan tickets upset fans

ANN ARBOR UPI — A lot of Bob Dylan fans were outraged over the handling of ticket sales for Saturday's sold-out concert by the famed folk singer at the Crysler Arena.

Scores of fans who expected to receive mail-order tickets for the concert this week either received no tickets at all and a refund or tickets of a lesser quality than they paid for.

On the other hand, dozens of the best tickets — which sold for $8.50 — were being hawked by scalpers for up to $80 per pair.

Promoters, ticket officials and student organizers at the University of Michigan are all denying involvement in the scalping.

The controversy actually began several weeks ago when — at the last minute — the procedure was changed from a mail-order operation to a first-come-first-served basis. Thousands of persons stood in line for up to four hours and were promised their orders would be filled by mail.

A spokesman for the Detroit Civic Center Ticket Service said Friday 14,336 tickets were printed for the Dylan concert, and 13,605 tickets were mailed to the general public.

Hot cagers take thriller, Notre Dame here tonight

Spartan sensation Lindsay Hairston goes high for two points in front of Purdue's Tom Scheffler in Saturday's 76-74 victory at Jenison Fieldhouse.

By CHARLES JOHNSON
State News Sports Writer

After Saturday's thriller at Jenison Fieldhouse, which saw the MSU basketball team triumph in the last seconds over league-leading Purdue, 76-74, one has to be convinced that anything can happen.

If the Spartans stick to that way of thinking, then tonight's clash with third-rated Notre Dame should be a real breather.

The Fighting Irish, led by super center John Shumate, will take on MSU at 7:35 p.m. before the Spartans' first expected sellout crowd of the season.

All reserve seat tickets have been sold. The remaining general admission tickets will go on sale at 8:30 a.m. today at the Jenison Fieldhouse box office.

The Spartans will be riding mighty high after pulling out Saturday's squeaker over the Boilermakers, who were previously unbeaten in conference play. The win boosted MSU's Big Ten record to 6-2, while Purdue's dropped to 6-1.

It was a sweet victory for the Spartans, who blew a big lead in the first Purdue encounter earlier in the season in losing a similar last-second contest, 77-75, at Lafayette, Ind. This time, Lady Luck went MSU's way.

Mike Robinson's 120-foot jump shot with three seconds remaining won the game and sent Spartan supporters into pandemonium that threatened to topple Jenison's 37-year old structure.

The scene was wild, as many of the 9,831 fans poured onto the court to embrace their newly claimed heroes. The game was another tight Big Ten battle, and a regional television audience was able to see it all.

"I'd have to say that was the most important shot of my whole career," Robinson said jubilantly after the game. "I didn't feel any pressure because I knew the score was tied and if I missed the shot the game would most likely have gone into overtime. I just released it and it went in."

Though Robinson finished with a hefty 25 points, it was the play of Lindsay Hairston which made the difference in the game.

The Spartans' 6-7 center completely dominated the Boilermakers' John Garrett, who stands 6-11. The game was perhaps Hairston's greatest ever, as he finished with a game high 26 points and 23 rebounds.

Hairston kept the Spartans in the game, particularly during the waning moments. Here is how it went:

With 2:32 remaining and the score tied at 74-74, Purdue went into a stalled offense with hopes of running the clock down as much as possible while at the same time looking for the percentage shot.

With 1:11 left, the Boilermakers' Frank Kendrick drove to the basket for a layup, but his shot was blocked by Hairston. MSU's Edgar Wilson grabbed the ball and the Spartans called a time-out to set up their strategy.

They successfully stalled until 22 seconds remained before calling another time-out.

MSU continued to stall, working for the last shot. With three seconds remaining, Robinson stepped behind Hairston's screen and pumped home the winning goal.

"Lindsay played just a super game," MSU coach Gus Ganakas said. "His blocked shot on Kendrick and Wilson's coming up with the ball was a very big play for us. I'm glad I coached him (Lindsay) to jump like that," Ganakas laughed.

Terry Furlow was the third Spartan scorer in double figures with 17 points. Garrett led Purdue with 22.

Ganakas was overjoyed with the Spartans' victory and had a hard time finding words after the game.

"I don't really know what to say about this one," Ganakas said. "I just think of all the adversity our team has gone through; the mistakes we made, the two heart-breaking Big Ten losses. You know, they say that luck is the residue of design, and it finally broke for us today."

Lady Luck will be a welcomed addition again tonight against the Irish.

Icers lose two tight ones to tough Tech

By STEVE STEIN
State News Sports Writer

MSU's hockey team twice came very close to picking up some valuable WCHA points at the expense of the nation's No. 1 team, Michigan Tech, over the weekend.

But as it is said, close doesn't count, and the Spartans came back home Saturday after suffering 5-4 and 8-6 losses to the Huskies.

Tech scored an open net goal late in the game Saturday so, for all intents and purposes, MSU lost two one-goal contests.

Thanks to the balance in the league this season, the Spartans are still in the middle of the pack with a 10-11-1 record. But time is running out in the quest for a home playoff berth, as MSU has only six more regular season games.

The ices play at Notre Dame this weekend.

"We gave them a good battle for their money," Spartan Coach

Amo Bessone said. "But Tech's balance was the difference. Our kids really hung in there, though."

Bessone had much praise for Spartan goalie Gary Carr.

"He was sensational," Bessone said. "He made some great saves."

Three of the Huskies' goals Saturday went in off the sticks of Spartan defensemen.

"They had the luck going with them," Bessone sighed. "Those were just accidental deflections."

MSU defenseman Uve Driess banged his knee up Friday and saw little action Saturday. Another defenseman, Paul Pavelich, was tossed out for fighting Saturday and will miss the first Notre Dame game.

Defenseman Chris Murfey appeared mainly on the power play and played well, said Bessone. Murfey is still hampered by a bad knee.

John Sturges returned to the lineup for the first time in three weeks and Bessone said he played fairly well, looking better during the second game. Sturges had a sprained ankle.

"He's coming on," Bessone said. "He should be full tilt again against Notre Dame."

The fast-skating Sturges scored a goal Friday night.

Once again, MSU came up with a good offensive attack.

State fought back from a 5-1 deficit Saturday to make the score 7-6 late in the third period but Sturges was stopped on a breakaway by Tech goalie Jim Warden with under a minute remaining.

Steve Colp continued to pace the Spartan scoring attack as he scored the three-goal hat trick Saturday. Tom Ross added a pair and Murfey got the other one.

On Friday, Brendon Moroney, Ross, Norm Barnes and Sturges tallied.

Grapplers rout Oklahoma

By PAT FARNAN
State News Sports Writer

Highly rated Oklahoma surprised MSU coach Grady Peninger Saturday night.

"I didn't think the score would be that high," said Peninger after witnessing his squad demolish top-ranked Oklahoma 27-10 before a crowd of 3,450 in Jenison Fieldhouse.

The Sooners had to settle for three wins and a draw as the Spartans mopped up everything else in sight with the help of a pair of pins by Jeff Zindel (his second) and Larry Avery (his fourth).

"The score isn't always indicative of the caliber of team," Peninger claimed. "They're a much better team than that. They've got some great individual talent but that's not always reflected in the score."

Oklahoma's best, 118-pound Gary Breece and 158-pound Rod Kilgore, both won, but not without a struggle.

Breece, who finished sixth in the country last year and is one of the favorites to capture the title in that division this year, got everything he wanted from Spartan 118-pounder Randy Miller.

Miller hung with Breece for two periods. Breece then surged to a seven-point lead and Miller's last ditch effort fell short, 16-10.

"Breece is capable of beating anybody," Peninger noted. "But Randy lost six points on one move."

Pat Milkovich swept to another win at 126, whitewashing Norm Hatchett, 12-0.

"I love these MSU crowds," Milkovich gleamed. "I'll wrestle in front of them any day."

At 134, Conrad Calander was cruising along on a two-point lead and nearly blew it. With four seconds left, Calander escaped and put a takedown on Cris Antonetti with four seconds remaining. "I knew I had to get up and take him down," Calander said later. "But when there was only 10 seconds left I was beginning to wonder."

Don Rodgers continued his marked improvement at 142, drawing with Brian Beatson, 6-6. But it was Beatson who had to make the move on the scrappy Rodgers who led most of the match. Beatson was 16-2 going into that skirmish.

Steve Rodriguez got flopped on his back early in his match with the Sooner's Frank Peck but after that everything was downhill. The pair traded points for two periods, then Rodriguez forged ahead to stay, 13-7.

Rick Greene (158) and Jeff Hersha were then defeated by rugged opponents. Greene was matched up with Rod Kilgore (17-2), third in the country last year, and dropped a 9-5 decision. East Lansing's Jeff Callard bounded Jeff Hersha around for a 16-7 triumph.

Then the roof fell in on Abel's Sooner contingent. Zindel, Scott Wickard and Avery all had little trouble as the referee's hand twice thumped the mat for pins in that three match span.

Zindel is now 11-0 and had little trouble with Tim Kerns. Wickard battled with Jimbo Elrod for the full eight minutes, recording a 7-2 decision.

Once again, heavyweight Larry Avery closed out the evening with a sudden pin over highly touted Bill Kalkbrenner.

"No one, no one should make a mistake with me when I'm on my back," Avery said. "I pinned him once and I'll pin him again. Nobody is gonna beat me. He tried to roll me and he shouldn't have done that. If he ever does it again, I'll pin him again."

It was Avery's 10th win in a string as he prepares for Tom Hazell of Oklahoma State in the Coaches East-West All-Star wrestling match Monday night.

Next week it's the University of Michigan, the No. 1 ranked team in the country.

"We'd rather prove our rating than win the ratings," Peninger asserted. "I know that there are probably only two major college wrestling teams in the country that are undefeated. Do I have to name them?"

Indiana captured all 13 events in winning its 95th straight dual meet. 98-25, over MSU's swimming team Saturday at Bloomington, Ind.

John Kinsella in the 200- and 500-yard freestyles and Gary James on both the one and three-meter diving boards were the only double winners of the meet.

Spartans who had their fastest times of the year in the meet were Ken Holmes in the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke, Bruce Wright in the 100-yard freestyle, Paul Feters and Mark Outwater in the 200-yard backstroke and Marc Paglia in the 1000-yard freestyle.

MSU, now 4-4 for the year, hosts Ohio State Saturday at 2 p.m.

The women's basketball team won its third straight game Saturday, beating Central Michigan, 58-36.

Linda Stoick led the winners with 20 points, while Pat Woods added 12 and Beanie Goldschmidt 10.

It was once again a big third quarter that led the Spartans to the win. MSU led just 24-18 at halftime, but outscored Central 22-7 in the third quarter to take a commanding 46-25 edge into the final period.

MSU's fencing team traveled quite a way, not only in terms of distance but also in terms of improvement as it split a double dual meet in Champaign, Ill., Saturday.

The fencers downed the University of Chicago, 20-7, but came up a little short against defending Big Ten champion Illinois, bowing 18-9.

Coach Charlie Schmitter was pleased with the way his epee squad worked Saturday as that squad came out on top against both its opponents.

The women's gymnastics team swept all four first places and took three of the top four all-around honors Saturday as it edged Kent State 99.42-98.84, at Eastern Michigan in a tri-meet. Eastern finished third with 58.40 points.

The gymnasts were led by freshman Ann Weaver, who took first place in vaulting and the uneven bars, along with a second in floor exercises. She also won the all-around award with 33.53 total points followed by Racanne Miller with 32.08.

Women swimmers whip U-M

By PAM WARD
State News Sports Writer

It wasn't even close.

The women's swimming team swam circles around the University of Michigan Wolverines Saturday, defeating them, 84-47, in its first dual season meet.

The Michigan swimmers, who were fourth in the nationals last year, were left behind fighting the waves made by the Spartans in nearly every event. MSU captured nine first place and nine second place honors.

"I expected it to be a lot closer," Jennifer Parks, coach of the women's swimming team, said. "I thought that we could beat them with our depth and our divers but we were stung in all events."

"The team swam very well," Parks continued. "It was a really nice performance by all the members."

Two Spartans qualified for the nationals with their performance Saturday and one team record was broken.

The 400 freestyle relay team, comprised of freshman Lucy Johnson, sophomores Vicki Riebeling and Dawn Jacobs and junior Cheryl Solomon, broke the 1972 team record with the time 3:51.09. The 1972 record time was 3:52.85.

Freshman Bernadine Kenny qualified for the nationals in the 100 butterfly with the time 1:03.93 and Solomon qualified in the 200 freestyle with a time of 2:06.03.

The Spartans' strongest event was diving, where they took two first places and one second.

Junior Jane Manchester smashed the boards for two firsts. Manchester earned a 251.60 score on the one-meter board and 265.70 on the three-meter. Freshman Barb Harding made an impressive showing on the three-meter board, scoring 265.05 for a close second place. Sophomore diver Marti Perez took two third-place honors.

The Spartans will travel to Clarion next week for their second dual meet.

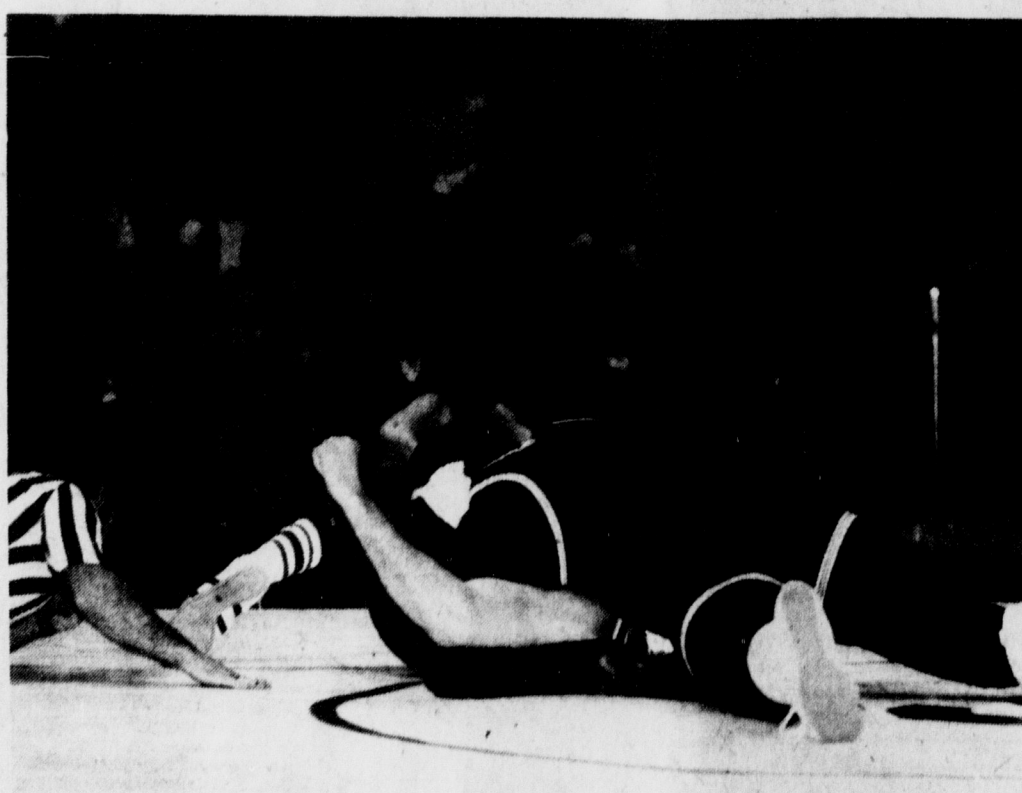

MSU takes three events at WMU's track tourney

MSU's track team copped three first places in the Western Michigan Relays held Saturday at Kalamazoo.

Herb Lindsay captured the 3,000-meter steeplechase with a winning time of 9:05.6.

Two relay teams won for MSU. The sprint medley relay team of Charles Byrd, Brad Rogers, Charles Davis and Dane Fortney won with a time of 3:30.7, while the shuttle hurdle relay quartet of Dave Howard, Todd Murphey, Paul Zolynsky and Howard Meely used a time of 3:30.1 to win.

The mile relay team nearly pulled its event out of the fire, but Charles Davis' time of :48.7 on the last leg wasn't quite good enough as the team lost by less than a second.

MSU heavyweight Larry Avery wrapped up one more pin as he flattened highly touted Bill Kalkbrenner of Oklahoma Saturday to record his fourth pin of the year. Avery will be wrestling tonight in the coaches East-West All-Star Meet in Stillwater, Okla.

ASMSU chiefs disclose strategy

ASMSU officials have disclosed a strategy they feel should be followed during the trip the proposed University Advisory Council takes to the board of trustees.

ASMSU President Ed Grafton and Executive Assistant Larry Bartrem told the ASMSU Board Thursday that three options are available to students depending on which of three possible courses of action are chosen by the Academic Council.

However, no agreement or conclusion has been reached by the coalition of student governments, said Bradley Niles, a member of COGS and the Elected Student Council. The University Advisory Council proposal, which represents the remains of the student liaison proposal, suggests a board of 14 advisers composed of faculty, students and alumni to meet with the trustees once each term.

The original proposal requested that four nonvoting students be seated on the board of trustees. The advisory council proposal will now go to the Academic Council, which bottled up the original proposal during the duration of fall quarter.

If the faculty-dominated Academic Council rejects the advisory council proposal, Grafton said, the vote could indicate absence of interest on the part of faculty to take part in such a council. Students then would simply delete the provision for faculty representatives and ask President Wharton to take the modified proposal to the board of trustees.

If the Academic Council approves the proposal, the students would go along with it, he said.

If the advisory council proposal is amended by the Academic Council, the students could oppose the amended version and boycott its practice, Grafton said.

Niles said he would not comment on the merits of the ASMSU strategy, but emphasized that the three student organizations (Elected Student Council, COGS and ASMSU) had reached no conclusions on the question of strategies.

Also at the meeting, a motion that ASMSU oppose the "repugnant" advisory council proposal was tabled pending consideration of the proposal by the Academic Council.

Charles Massoglia, head of ASMSU Legal Aid, said the motion was one of the best he has heard in ASMSU in four years. Grafton, however, called the motion childish and rhetorical.

Introduced by Intercooperative Council representative Pat Wahl, the motion expressed dismay that the original proposal has, through rewriting and amending, become totally distorted and has lost the intent of the student liaison proposal. In other board business, Grafton recommended that the board close down the Student Electronics workshop permanently.

"We're taking a loss with a crummy service," he said. No formal action was taken by the board on the electronics workshop. The motion was sent for further study to the budget committee.

Death toll down on state's roads

January may not have been a good month for the automakers, but as far as the Michigan State Police are concerned, it could not have been better.

State police traffic records showed that 98 persons were killed on Michigan's highways in January, compared with 182 killed during January 1973.

"I think there are a variety of reasons why the death toll is unusually low," said Sgt. Don Calcaterra of the safety and traffic division.

"Some of these include the energy crunch, people observing the voluntary 55 m.p.h. speed limit, unemployment and also programs taught by our department in an effort to reduce traffic deaths," he said.

Calcaterra pointed out that since the energy crisis became publicized and the voluntary speed limit reductions were widely adopted, there has been a reduction of fatalities on the state highways.

For example, in the month of December, Calcaterra said there were 137 persons killed in traffic accidents. This represents a drop from the five-year average of 174 persons killed in the same month.

Calcaterra said he gives the state police learning programs some credit.

"Even before the energy crisis, the death toll was decreasing slightly annually," he said.

For instance, there were 2,213 persons killed on Michigan highways last year, down from 2,258 in 1972. In 1969, there was a record high of 2,497 killed on state highways, Calcaterra said.

Third hall blaze in week hits McDonel Hall room

A fire in 524 W. McDonel Hall Saturday afternoon caused $200 damage to books, shelves and a lamp, campus police said. The blaze, the third residence hall fire in a week, is believed to have been caused by a candle. No one was in the room at the time of the fire, and the hall was not evacuated. Rooms in Mason and Case halls were hit by fire last week.

Students reach for higher hall life; lofts give rooms extra floor space

By PAT NARDI
State News Staff Writer

An increasing number of MSU students are finding a new way to come up in the world: residence hall lofts. Constructed of plywood and two-by-fours, these lofts replace space - consuming beds and create room on the floor for other furniture.

"It makes the room seem a lot more comfy and homey, and it doesn't seem so much like a bedroom," Sue Stamps, 685 S. Wonders Hall, sophomore, said.

Stamps and her roommate, sophomore Diane Brovant, paid $85 for the lumber used in their loft and homemade ladder.

"They're fun to sleep in," Stamps said. "I never get scared being so high off the ground because the mattress is much smaller than the bed itself."

Stamps and Brovant have room in the loft for a clock radio, a lamp and occasionally even a television set.

If the telephone rings while the girls are in bed, one must quickly step on a ladder rung and jump down to the couch below.

"We can usually answer it before the second ring," Stamps said proudly.

Brian Beardslee, freshman, and Dan Gunter, sophomore, 575

S. Wonders Hall, use the extra floor space made available by their loft for a water bed.

They bought their loft intact for $30, but had to add blocks of wood around it to make a tight fit in the room.

An added attraction in this loft is a telephone extension. It sits up in the loft next to the beds so they can answer the phone without rising.

Laurie Riendl, 691 S. Wonders Hall freshman, had her loft - a single sleeper - built for $25.

The wood is stained and friends have carved their names on the ladder, which has carpeted rungs.

A unique attraction on Riendl's loft is the metal digits "740" attached to the wood, signifying that Riendl is more celestial than the rest of her sixth floor friends.

If you are planning on building or buying a loft, here are some tips from the present loft owners:

- Fresh wood shrinks; so plan accordingly.
- You can't pound any nails into the walls. You'll have to use blocks of wood to make the framework fit snugly.
- It gets hot up there during fall and spring terms.
- You will probably need additional lighting below.
- Some residence hall managers worry that lofts may constitute a fire hazard.

GROUP WILL SELECT DEPOT SITE

Localities to fill rail panel posts

Lansing, East Lansing and Ingham County governments are considering applications for positions on the Capitol Area Rail Council, which will be responsible for initiating plans and operating and maintaining passenger rail service to the metropolitan area.

The council will select a depot site to serve the Lansing area for an 18 - month demonstration Amtrak passenger service from Port Huron to Chicago scheduled to begin in April.

The decision as to whether the Capitol Area Council of Government's (CAPACOG) recommendation that the depot be constructed at Trowbridge Road should be accepted will be up to the rail council.

East Lansing City Manager John Patriarche said Tuesday that the city council may make appointments to its two seats Tuesday at its regular meeting.

Patriarche, who is chairman of CAPACOG, said he hopes each of the local governments makes appointments by its Feb. 13 meeting so that the rail committee can be approved.

Ingham County Commissioner David Hollister said that the county board is soliciting names for its three representatives to the council. About five names are now being considered, but Hollister would like to increase the total to about 15 before the board makes final appointments, hopefully by Feb. 12.

The Lansing City Council is soliciting possible candidates for appointments, but is holding back its final decision until questions of rail council representation can be cleared up, Lansing Councilman Terry McKane said.

McKane said that questions concerning representation from MSU and Meridian and Delhi townships will have to be considered by the three - member CAPACOG Amtrak committee.

"We'll either have to consider amending the bylaws to increase the size of the council or consider letting the townships and MSU take a few of Lansing's five seats," McKane said.

Several Lansing officials have been interested in reducing the number of representatives from Lansing to prevent the city from paying what they consider to be a disproportionate share of the depot construction costs.

Gunmen rob area store; police begin search for 2

Two men wearing ski masks took approximately $1,000 at gunpoint from Larry's Shoprite, 1109 E. Grand River Ave., late Friday night.

The men, armed with revolvers, entered the back door of the store and ordered everyone in the store to lie down, police said.

They took the money and fled through the back of the store, police said.

Police are looking for two black males in the case. One man is described as being about 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighing between 180 and 190 pounds. He is believed to be about 25 years old. The other is between 5 feet 3 inches and 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs between 135 and 165 pounds, police said.

A MOVE TO return Michigan to standard time is likely to see action this week in the state House following Gov. Milliken's call for the repeal of Daylight Saving Time (DST).

Milliken told President Nixon Friday that unless DST is repealed nationally he may be forced to support the bill in the Michigan Legislature putting the state back on standard time.

"I seriously question whether year - round DST is worth the serious problems it has caused," the governor said Friday.

THE NAACP HAS called the intervention of the U.S. Justice Dept. in the Detroit cross - district busing case a strictly political move.

Gov. Milliken announced Friday that Solicitor General Robert H. Bork has filed a brief with the U.S. Supreme Court on behalf of the state of Michigan contesting the busing order.

LEGISLATION TO CREATE a state mobile home commission was introduced Thursday by state Rep. Bobby Crim, D - Davison.

The commission, named by the governor, would establish a mobile home code. There has been a rash of mobile home fires recently.

Prof joins race for Congress

By R. D. CAMPBELL
State News Staff Writer

C. Patric Larowe wants to teach and preach his economic philosophy to a new group of students—the 434 other members of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Larowe, an MSU economics professor, has decided to enter the Aug. 6 Democratic primary for the Sixth Congressional District, which includes Ingham County.

His decision to run may spark one of the most colorful Democratic primary races in the district's history.

The only other announced Democratic candidate, M. Robert Carr, a young, good-looking East Lansing attorney, was narrowly defeated in 1972 by Republican incumbent Charles Chamberlain, who is retiring this year after 18 years.

Larowe, 57, balding, white-bearded and usually blue-jeaned, began teaching labor economics and labor law at MSU in 1956.

He has been a leading labor organizer in the East Lansing area, especially in efforts to unionize local restaurant workers.

Larowe has also gained campuswide fame as a jokester, paddleball whiz and author. He, at one time, had a regular column in the State News. His book "Harry Bridges," a biography about a 1930s labor leader, earned a rave review in the New York Times.

Larowe said he will focus his campaign on economic issues, and has scheduled a Wednesday afternoon press conference at the Union to formally announce his candidacy. He will also probably spell out his priority concerns.

"I'm amazed at the sameness of these two candidates," Joseph Finkbeiner, Ingham County Democratic chairman, said Sunday.

But Larowe sees a substantial difference between himself and Carr.

"I can't remember a single solitary time he's taken a stand on the issues since he's declared his candidacy," Larowe said Sunday.

Carr declared his candidacy the morning after his loss to Chamberlain, and has since been organizing his campaign and raising funds.

"He may be objecting that I don't send out press releases every time I open my mouth," Carr said in answer to Larowe's charges.

Carr said he has made more than 200 speeches during the past year in which he has clearly defined his stand on major issues.

"I don't think Larowe's entrance into the race is motivated by any issues," Carr said.

He said he is unaware of any philosophical difference between himself and Larowe on the issues.

Larowe said he plans to run "a positive campaign focusing on economic issues." He expects to have widespread support coming from organized labor, students, women and people on fixed incomes.

A top University official, after learning of Larowe's candidacy, said, "Larowe is 57 going on 15."

But Larowe gladly acknowledged that statement as solid evidence that he has bridged the generation gap.

And it could even be that Larowe wants to become the ultimate teacher.

"I'll be the Harry Truman of the '70s."

Panel may abandon parts of local tracks

As plans are being implemented to return passenger rail service to the Lansing area, the U.S. Dept. of Transportation has announced a proposal to abandon four major sections of railroad track in the area.

The plan, announced Friday, would include abandonment of a stretch of track feeding two Lansing automobile plants.

The recommendations call for the abandonment of 25 per cent of the track in the northeast quarter of the nation, including 2,775 miles of rail within Michigan.

Though the proposals would not affect passenger service, if the plan is put into action many communities could be cut off from rail freight trains.

The transportation department's plan is intended to eliminate lines that are uneconomical or that duplicate services.

The department reported that the 37 per cent cut in the state's rail system would eliminate 97 per cent of Michigan's carload traffic.
