INGTON - The Supreme Court held Monday that the nistration violated federal law in a host of wiretaps rcotics and organized crime suspects.

In other action, the high court refused to hear appeals by International Business Machines (IBM) challenging an order forcing the computer giant to turn over documents to the government that it claims are lawfully confidential. The government has launched an antitrust case against IBM.

Following the court action, the corporation said it was turning over some 700 documents to the Justice Department trust busters. The alternative was a $150,000 - a - day fine.

In still another case, the justices overturned a federal appeals court decision on trade secrets that the legal and business communities claimed would lead to chaos and have a multibillion - dollar impact on American industrial research.

The wiretap decision stemmed from practices at the Justice Department when it was run by former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell. The taps in question were authorized in each instance by a federal judge.

The question in the case was whether the Justice Dept. had complied with provisions of the 1968 Omnibus Crime Control Act in applying for the taps in the first three years following the act's adoption.

The court found that the practice of allowing Mitchell's executive assistant to approve applications was contrary to the law's demand that the requests be approved by the attorney general himself or a specially designated assistant attorney

The court was unanimous in condemning the practice. Justice Byron R. White delivered the court's opinion.

It is apparent, said White, "that Congress desired to centralize and limit this authority where it was feasible to do so ... To us, it appears wholly at odds with the scheme and history of the act to construe its provisions to permit the attorney general to delegate his authority . . . "

In a second wiretap case the court did preserve some challenged taps. The applications bore the name of an assistant attorney general but were actually approved by Mitchell himself. The court found this no barrier to use of evidence gathered by the

The trade secrets decision found that federal law on patents does not pre - empt state trade secret laws. The justices reversed a ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court in Cincinnati, which has applied the federal law.

"Congress, by its silence over these many years, has seen wisdom of allowing the states to enforce trade secret protection," wrote Chief Justice Warren E. Burger for the 5 - 2 majority.

Justices William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan Jr. dissented. Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. took no part in the case.

In other action Monday the court ruled 5 to 4 that the public Chicago Transit Authority can refuse to accept ads calling for President Nixon's impeachment, even though it accepts paid political advertisements for such causes as election campaigns and antiwar positions.

A 1969 graduate of U - M's law school, Gaulden rents houses in both Lansing and East Lansing.

The ASMSU Board approved Sunday the formation of a committee to study the possibility of developing a plan similar to the one used in Ann Arbor.

These fair lease requirements include, among other clauses, an agreement by both parties concerned that they will submit any disputes, tenant - landlord or tenant - tenant, to the University Mediation Service if any party requests mediation, Peter Schoch, director of U -M's Off - Campus Housing Office, said Monday.

MSU's own Off - Campus Housing Office currently supplies students with a model lease with which they can compare the lease they get from a prospective Schoch said other parts of the fair lease in Ann Arbor include full disclosure of the price and of the length of contract, wording simple enough for anyone to understand, the provision of checklists and the absence of Red Flag clauses.

A Red Flag clause states that if you miss a rent payment all your rent is due immediately, Schoch said. Only a few landlords include this clause in their leases, he said.

Landlords wishing to be registered with the housing office can either draw their lease to duplicate the housing office's model or can design a lease of their own that meets the requirements, Schoch said. And there is an economic incentive for Ann Arbor landlords to comply with the fair lease program. "We advertise and recommend the facilities of those landlords who use fair leases to the 8,000 to 9,000 students who pass through our offices," Schoch said. "If you're a major landlord who has to do volume business, you'll need to be Landlords not providing fair leases can still use the Michigan Daily for advertisments. However, the classified ads section of the paper averages only about 30 rental ads an issue. Business Manager Mark Sancraint said Monday that anyone could advertise in the paper as long as the material was not offensive, and that the paper had no way of knowing who complied with the fair lease program and Mark Spitzer, College of Natural Science representative and the chairman of the new ASMSU committee, said Monday the MSU student body was too apathetic to give the housing plan a good chance to succeed.

"The main idea of this program would be that a landlord not using a fair lease would not get much student business." Spitzer. "But the student apathy around here is so great that I don't think it would work. Half the people here don't even know when they're being ripped off."

Dem leaders want to stop calls for Nixon to resign

FROM WIRE SERVICES

WASHINGTON - The top Democratic leaders of Congress pleaded Monday for an end to calls for President Nixon's resignation, saying they are fanning a flash fire of public opinion that could forever char the Republic.

"Resignation is not the answer," said Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D - Mont. 'This is a time to keep cool - the expression, I believe, is 'cool it.'"

The President himself, meanwhile, was quoted by a cabinet member as reaffirming Monday that "there isn't any whatever," of his stepping down voluntarily.

Senate Democratic Whip Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia declared that if Nixon were "drummed out of office" by public opinion, "this would change our system from one of fixed tenure to one in which a President would remain in office only by popular approval."

Meanwhile, U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica announced that the report on a partially erased Watergate tape will be made public in about two weeks.

Sirica also told reporters that once the official report on the famed 18 1/2 - minute gap is filed, the White House will be free to make public the findings of a consultant it hired to evaluate the report of the official panel of experts.

Byrd and Mansfield were joined by House Speaker Carl Albert, D - Okla., and a number of others at the Capitol in asking Americans to let the case against the President lay exclusively in the hands of the courts and the impeachment process.

Byrd said if Nixon resigned, his guilt or innocence might never be resolved. "Nothing is more important to the nation than the exercise of sober judgment," he

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Caspar Weinberger said he brought up the subject of "the steadily increasing drumbeat of resignation talk" at a meeting with Nixon in the Oval office. "He said 'Don't worry. There isn't any chance of that whatever," Weinberger reported.

Sirica's announcement came after a two - hour meeting Monday morning with representatives of the White House, the Watergate special prosecutor's office, presidential secretary Rose Mary Woods, former presidential assistant H. R. Haldeman, the official panel and the White House consultant, Michael Hecker

The report will be the second by the six man official panel. The first, which was a summary, came on Jan. 15 and concluded that the June 20, 1972, conversation between Nixon and Haldeman had been

Dem candidate says transcripts show Nixon guilt

By JOE KIRBY State News Staff Writer

In a statement calling for the impeachment of President Nixon, Democratic candidate M. Robert Carr Monday set the stage for the other U.S. 6th Congressional District candidates to air their views.

The State News interviewed the other candidates after Carr said that a review of the transcripts caused him to conclude that the President was guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors and had used the presidency for personal ends.

"Merely calling for Mr. Nixon's resignation is insufficient; it is nothing more than an 'artful dodge.' The clear road to the restoration of public confidence in both the Congress and the presidency is the constitutional impeachment and removal process," Carr

Republican candidate, Clifford Taylor, said the transcripts were not very encouraging but that Nixon was entitled to a fair trial

"I would not call for impeachment at this time," Taylor said.

State Sen. William Ballenger, R -Williamston, said he was disappointed and shocked by the transcripts and wished that the entire tapes rather than edited transcripts had been handed over. Ballenger said he felt it would be irresponsible to prejudge the President and that he would wait until the U.S. House Judiciary Committee reaches a decision.

"I wish the committee would hurry up and get the measure before the full House, though," Ballenger added.

The other Republican candidate, Michael Conlin, said the transcripts were "one of the most tragic things I've ever

Conlin felt it would be premature to call for impeachment until the Judiciary Committee handed down a decision. Charles P. Larrowe, Democratic candidate and MSU economics professor, said the transcripts confirmed every suspicion he had about Nixon but that there were grounds for impeachment following the bombing of Cambodia. 'We don't need the transcripts to indict him" Larrowe said.

Human Rights party candidate, Howard Jones, said he called for the impeachment six months before the release of the transcripts.

Jones said the transcripts showed "a bunch of small minded individuals who are more concerned with their own political aspirations than with the people of this

3 Cambodian capitals threatened

Three Cambodian provincial capitals, including the vital seaport of Kompong Som, 147 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, are being seriously threatened by new insurgent drives, according to field reports.

The Cambodian command said that Khmer Rouge forces have attacked various government outposts near Kompong Som, Kompong Thom and Prey Veng.

The attacks on Kompong Som, Kompong Thom and Prey Veng are apparently part of the Khmer Rouge strategy to concentrate military attacks on isolated provincial towns and outposts in Cambodia.

Italians rejecting divorce repeal

A referendum to repeal Italy's controversial three year - old divorce law appeared headed for defeat Monday by a margin of almost 3 to 2.

About 83 per cent of the returns from the two-day vote showed 15,522,834 people for retaining divorce with 10,760,959 against.

The Vatican issued no immediate comment on the vote. Catholic traditionalists had forced the referendum when they gathered more than one million signatures on petitions demanding repeal of the 1970 law legalizing divorce after a five - year separation.

GM workers strike in Detroit

More than 5,300 workers at General Motors (GM) plants in Detroit and Hudson, Ohio, walked off their jobs Monday in disputes over local issues not included in the national contract.

Workers at the Fleetwood Fisher Body plant in Detroit struck because they felt GM planned to step up production of Cadillacs and Oldsmobile Toronados without recalling enough workers laid off due to lagging sales.

Meanwhile, negotiations between the Dow Chemical Co. and striking steelworkers resumed Monday in an effort to end a 57 - day strike over economic issues.

Spordaic violence has followed the strike, but a company spokesman said the situation was quiet Monday.

U.S. revenue from oil leases up

Federal receipts from off - shore oil leases are $2.1 billion higher than anticipated in this year's budget. Roy L. Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said Monday.

Ash, in testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee, said higher bids from oil companies seeking new sources caused the increased receipts.

Ash and Undersecretary of the Treasury Paul Volcker told the committee that the budget deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30 is now estimated at $3.5 billion, down from a February projection of $4.7 billion.

They said the deficit for fiscal 1975 is now estimated to be $11.4 billion, up from an earlier projection of $9.4 billion.

Kissinger booed by Israelis

Israeli demonstrators booed Secretary of State Henry Kissinger as he returned to Jerusalem Monday for the 16th day of talks in his latest Middle East peace mission. Israeli sources said the government would not surrender any more captured lands in the Golan Heights despite urgings from Kissinger. About 100 protesters shouted "boo to Kissinger" as the secretary arrived for morning talks with Israeli Premier Golda Meir.

Nude policemen prompt ruckus

*About 24 Boston policemen ran naked through the Portsmouth, R.I., Ramada Inn nightclub Friday night and took part in a disturbance that caused about $1,000 damage, the motel's owner said.

Owner Peter Stilphen said 100 Boston policemen came to Portsmouth to participate in a police parade Saturday.

Jean Lawler, motel manager, said at least six policement stripped at the side of the motel pool within sight of the nightclub audience while others ran through the club and jumped on tables.

Pictures and other properties were tossed out a second story window while firecrackers went off in the hall, Stilphen said.

A spokesman for the Boston Police Dept. said Monday that the department is investigating the incident.

French candidate regains lead

A public opinion poll published Monday by the French newpaper Figaro shows that Finance Minister Valery Gisard d'Estaing has regained his 3 per cent lead over his Socialist party rival, Francois Mitterrand, in the French presidential race.

The poll predicted that 51.5 per cent of the Sunday vote would go to d'Estaing and 48.5 per cent for Mitterand.

Both candidates will tour the French provinces and will appear on television daily.

African rebels propose talks

FROM WIRE SERVICES

Rebel leaders from Portuguese Guinea became on Monday the first of Portugal's three troubled African territories to propose negotiations to end more than a decade of guerrilla warfare.

A statement issued in Algiers by the diplomatic mission of the republic of Guinea - Bissau, the name insurgents have given to the two - thirds of Portuguese Guinea which they control, said the negotiations with Portugal's new regime could begin "with or without a cease - fire.'

But, it warned, the rebels were aiming for "the total liberation of our people.'

In Lisbon, Portugal's ruling military junta withheld comment on the reports from Algeria.

The announcement came a day after a heavily armed guerrilla force, presumably belonging to liberation forces of Guinea and Cape Verde, killed two soldiers and three workers and wounded 30 persons in an attack Sunday on a work crew building a major highway between Bissau, the capital, and the eastern part of the

So heavy was the guerrilla fire, according to accounts reaching Lisbon, that the wounded had to be evacuated by air.

The rebels belong to the African Party for the Independence of Guinea - Bissau and the Cape Verde Islands, known as PAIGC, and issued the statement after an "extraordinary meeting."

Independence movements in Angola and Mozambique, Portugal's two other African colonies, which are both larger than Portuguese Guinea, have rejected talks with the Portuguese junta of Gen. Antonio de Spinola.

Spinola's regime, which came into power April 25 after saying a military solution to Portugal's African problem was impossible, had offered negotiations and proposed that the rebel movements submit the conflict to a vote among the native populations.

Western diplomats are convinced that Gromyko, while dwarfed by Kissinger up to now, will come into his own again, when the Geneva Conference reconvenes and takes up the fundamental political issues, including the Palestinian Arabs' security in the area and final boundaries.

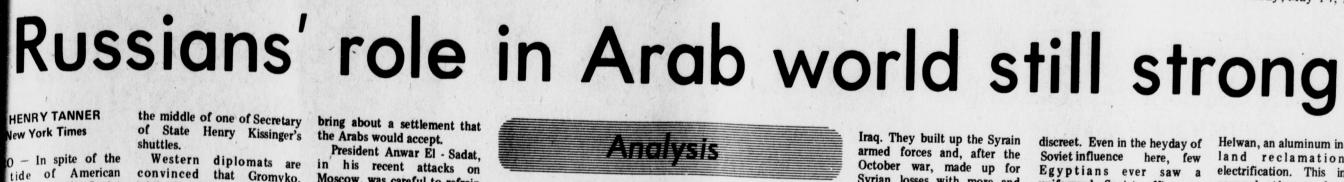

The Russians have endorsed the Arabs position on all those issues. The United States, by contrast, may once more find it difficult to exert the kind of pressure on Israel needed to bring about a settlement that the Arabs would accept.

President Anwar El - Sadat, in his recent attacks on Moscow, was careful to refrain from any hint at renunciation of the Soviet - Egyptian friendship treaty of 1971.

The crux of that treaty, an Egyptian diplomat recently said, is mutual consideration. He added that it was about two years since Sadat had met Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet leader, and that if there was to be a meeting it was the Russian's turn to make the journey.

The Russians are still helping Egypt in such major projects as the iron and steel plant in land reclamation and electrification. This involved several thousand civilian experts, according to foreign diplomats.

The fact that some of the most important industries in Egypt, Syria and Iraq use Soviet machinery and depend on Soviet spare parts is one of the stong lasting links between this area and the Soviet Union.

Industrial diversification may prove as difficult and slow as the military diversification that Sadat announced when he said that Egypt would turn to the West for additional arms.

Egypt's debt to the Soviet Union is estimated at $15 billion to $16 billion for both military supplies and economic assistance.

Syria is believed to have run up a comparable debt for military equipment and technical assistance that includes a big dam at Tabka on the Euphrates.

Resident assistants (RAs) serving on a judiciary do not represent a conflict of interest, the ASMSU Board decided Sunday night, as it appointed one RA and two RA candidates to student

The ASMSU Board had postponed the judicial appointments Thursday, past the time set in the ASMSU constitution for forming the judiciaries for 1974 - 75. The postponement was due to several board members' concern that an RA sitting on a judiciary presented an inherent conflict of interest. That concern was expressed again Sunday night. The board approved the appointment of David Johnson, Snyder Hall RA, and

The AUSJ usually handles complaints of violations of student regulations, such as a violation of the residence halls' "Roommate's Bill of Rights." The Student - Faculty

Judiciary usually handles disputes concerning academic areas, such as a complaint of academic dishonesty against a student. ASMSU President Tim Cain said Sunday that he believed students were nearly paranoid about their RAs having to enforce the current drug policy and therefore might not be pleased with appointments.

"Let's say I'm an RA sitting on the Student Faculty Judiciary and a case comes up that's a challenge to a policy of the residence halls," Cain said. "I would probably worry about my job before I would vote against that policy."

But Charles Massoglia, Off -Campus Council representative, said Sunday he did not think the calibre of people chosen to serve on the judiciaries would bend to such pressure if such pressure even existed.

James Bossert, chief justice of the AUSJ, said Sunday that if an RA referred a student he would disqualify himself from judgment if that student's case

Group to vote on birth control

Birth control services now offered locally could be drastically changed by the Ingham County Board of Commissioners at its 7:30 meeting tonight in the Mason courthouse.

An end to contraceptive distribution to minors is being proposed by the Republican - dominated Grants Committee within a resolution to continue the Family Planning Services operated by the county health department. The restrictive clause would require those under 18 to first obtain consent from parents or the Probate Court. However, a second resolution providing for the same continuation of family planning is being offered by the Human Services Committee with no age restrictions. The choice will be clear tonight for the board of ommissioners, composed of 11 Democrats and 10 Republicans. Other items on the regular monthly meeting agenda include:

A personal resolution from Richard Conlin proclaiming May 23 as African Famine Relief Day and asking county residents to fast that day and contribute to the relief fund.

A proposal to create an appointed advisory board for the county Animal Shelter to handle public relations problems.

EDITORIALS Budget places beauty over human concerns

East Lansing, according to its proposed 1974 - 75 budget. considers a modern, showy exterior more important that the welfare of the people who live in the city.

Within the 1974 - 75 city budget, which goes before the city council for final approval tonight, City Manager John Patriarche included funding for these projects: $30,000 for "the reconstruction of an alley" behind Grand River Ave., $13,855 to provide planter boxes, street trees and shrubs along and in the median sections of Grand River Ave. and $2,500 to fund East Lansing's official American Bicentennial Committee.

Unfortunately, some programs, apparently less important in the eyes of Patriarche, have been slated for budget cuttacks. Among them are: the Drug Education Center (DEC), which faces a 13 per cent reduction in the funds it receives from the city, and which had its request for $9,000 to finance a coping program for parents of delinquent children rejected; Listening Ear, a counseling center, which asked for $6,880, but was told by Patriarche in the budget that it was allocated only $6,000 "because of lack of funds," and the Women's Center, which lost every penny of the $1,500 it had been receiving from the city.

The drop in funding of the Women's Center is the worst slight of social services in the budget. The rationale behind the move is that the services provided by the Women's Center are duplicated by other groups in the area - DEC, Listening Ear and United Ministries Everywomen's Center. (Strangely enough, funding for these programs has been cut, too.) Representatives of the Women's Center argue, and rightly so, that their organization provides unique and intensive women's counselling on problems like rape that cannot be obtained elsewhere.

There is no excuse for the cutbacks in funds for these programs. They provide specific, invaluable services to the community, services any city is obligated to support.

MSU has lost its soccer and lacrosse coaches. Athletic Director Burt Smith fired the pair, citing the current athletic money pinch as the reason. Payton Fuller has led his soccer teams to a 20 - 8 - 9 record over his four years as soccer coach, and Fred Hartman, in his first year as head of lacrosse, directed the team to its best record ever.

Both coaches have been mistreated by the athletic department. The move can only hurt the department and has even been interpreted by some as the first phase in a massacre of minor sports at MSU.

Smith must publicly define the future of the minor sports - as he sees it - as soon as possible, rather than allow the present ominous warning signals to foster an aura of fear in his department.

The recent firings resulted from a shortsighted commitment made by the athletic department to Denny Stolz, MSU football coach, when Stolz was hired two years ago. Stolz was promised that he could select and hire an assistant coaching staff of nine. Stolz recently added the ninth coach, and the remaining football coach not hired by Stolz, Ed Rutherford, was bumped out of a position on the coaching staff.

The athletic department wanted to retain Rutherford, who has other duties in the department and considerable seniority besides, and the tight athletic budget supposedly wouldn't allow the salary of the new coach without a corresponding cut somewhere. Fuller and Hartman were judged the most expendable.

Fuller will be replaced by Rutherford, whose experience in the sport is limited to teaching an HPR team game class, which includes soccer as one of the games. Smith says the new lacrosse coach will be determined by "who we get in the physical education department next year, and if there is anyone with lacrosse experience."

It is obvious that the coaches themselves did not get a fair deal. Not only did they lose their jobs to less experienced people, but when the State News uncovered the firings three days before Smith had planned to announce them, Hartman didn't even know anything about it yet.

Though football is the cornerstone of the MSU intercollegiate sports program, football concerns must not be allowed to run roughshod over a common sense of fair play for other sports, coaches and athletes.

Greeks retain 'snob' tag

To the Editor: This is written with regards to Charles Massoglia's comments about Greek sorority life at MSU.

Being an activist in the field of equal rights for women, I commend Massoglia for breaking through one of the few remaining barriers of oppression to men and participating in a sorority rush.

There is no doubt about the large number of service projects that are participated in by the local chapters. Many benefits are received as a result of the avid participation by the fraternities as well as soforities at MSU. I even agree with Massoglia that sorority members in general are real human beings just like you and I. with the same feelings and needs that everyone has.

My complaint centers around the fact that a few arrogant sorority snobs ruin the barrel for the whole bunch. From personal experiences I base the following, that if sorority girls do not have time to speak congenially to me, then I do not have any

The designation of "sorority" is really incidental at this point. I have been passed by, snubbed and ignored by many people professors as well as students, who just did not think it was worthwhile to say hello. What I am suggesting is that a more human attitude toward your fellow man be adopted by women, men and all people in general. This business of ignoring known acquaintances, snubbing and passing by without a simple hello is for the birds.

As for the sororities at MSU, I think this suggestion should be sifted out and closely examined by all comrades. The only way for them to change their sorority snob image is to have everyone change their behavior. It must include all members of the human race in the process of human communication and not just the ones with "Greek" stamped on their

'Liberal arts core' sour

To the Editor:

There has been on this page a protracted debate concerning the University College and the need for a liberal arts core education at this University. Both sides - on the one, isually student columnists on the other University College professors - have valid

The college is supposed to give a liberal education, but without a lot of luck the student will wind up with participation in considerably less that that. This is not to say that education consists of teacher activity and student passivity. The student needs to think and act, too. But is this what is desired in many classes?

I have passed natural science lectures where, explaining genetic theories, the professor was more interested in using the correct color of chalk than in presenting an intelligible statement.

Every year many, but not all, ATL courses kill the Puritans and then first term freshmen, but do many professors try to present a picture of the lively intellectual life of early New England?

Some social science professors can't spell. I have heard a humanities professor give the Romulus and Remus legend of the founding of Rome as historical fact. "This is what Voltaire for Newton, Emerson or Jung) really meant," the student should be advised that this is not what the victim (scientist, writer, etc.) really meant.

Why is there an assumption that people who are specialists in a given field cannot teach the basics of that field to nonmajors? Possession of a doctorate need not insure narrow interests. Under the present scheme of University College, professors frequently end up teaching in an area of their express incompetence. When profs are allowed to teach what they do know, as in the revised University College program, the college will be much Peter G. Ferriby

Pot quote 'exaggeration

To the Editor:

In regards to an article that appeared on the front page of the State News on Wednesday May 8, 1974, I charge the staff of that paper of being accomplices to overexaggeration. The State News has once again neglected its responsibility to report facts by quoting Larry Bartem, a chairman on a student affairs committee, as stating "Probably 80 per cent of the students on campus smoke marijuana on any given night." The article stated that Bartem was asked to reinstate a subcommittee to study the hall drug policy because an earlier attempt this year failed due to lack of time. If no reports or statistics of any kind were completed in the study of this policy, then what right does a committee chairman have to make unproven generalizations that result in being printed on the front page of the paper? It is only a personal estimation which does not have the sufficient documentation to warrant its inclusion in any reputable newspaper. Clearly the negligence of the writers and editors of the State News, in this matter, signals a decline in the paper's overall quality and deviation from basic principles of journalism - which include the reporting of facts. Opinionated information should be reserved for the editorial section and not flaunted on the front page of any newspaper printed in a free society. Unless that statement was backed by fact, which was not mentioned in the article, it should have never left the writer's recorded interview. Images such as these - the impression that 80 per cent of the students on campus smoke dope on any given night - tend to give MSU a questionable reputation due to our University's poorly written and edited

COMMENTARY Leaders' falls linked with war

By. C. L. SULZBERGER New York Times

It has been years since there has been so much political effervescence and uncertainty in the West. At the start of 1973 the North Atlantic world seemed to be progressing under firm and sensible leadership. Now this illusion has been swept away.

Sixteen months ago Western democracy appeared to be built upon four solid rocks: Richard Nixon in the United States, Georges Pompidou in France, Edward Heath in Britain and Willy Brandt in the German Federal Republic.

Today Pompidou is dead, Heath and Brandt have been overwhelmed and Nixon, the only remaining symbol, has already been dreadfully tarnished, whether or not he is tossed on the discard heap.

Remote historians, generations hence, may see a connection between unpaid bills for recent wars and subsequent political disasters that convulsed the survivors of those wars. Certainly France's looming defeat in Algeria produced a coup that projected De Gaulle to power and created the fifth republic, a system now nearing perhaps intensive modification.

Likewise, the failure of the United States to win its Vietnam conflict destroyed Lyndon Johnson and thereby opened the presidential path to Nixon. Who can conjecture whether, in a less psychologically disturbed atmosphere than that prevailing in America during recent years, the President would have been tempted into such shoddy administrative aberrations.

Whatever implacable history decides, it is clear that in France and the United States, after traumatic and unsuccessful military experiences that emotionally distressed their populations, normal progression of the customary governance was interrupted.

A similar political cycle is far more clearly traceable in Portugal. The power seizure by the military there stemmed directly from the cost of a grinding colonial war which the majority of Portuguese disliked and which the country couldn't afford to sustain.

But there are other upsets and uncertainties in the West today, and their links to past conflicts are not so easily discernible. Take the cases of Italy, Britain

In this respect, Italy would appear to be the exception. Losing wars is not necessarily a searing experience for the unrecoverable casualty. His name is wise, cynical talians who, as they did in one on a growing roster.

World War II, often manage to manage accommodations to save themselves in total disaster.

However, since Italy destroyed its on maturing parliamentary governmenting 1920s and substituted fascism, it has no wholly succeeded in recreating governing habit. For two decades its me contribution to the art of politics has be an example of how to govern without government.

This worked in a fascinating way long as the industry and intelligence of Italians was able to maintain a grow economy with substantially h employment. But, as everywhere Europe, the zoom in energy pro following the October Middle East in tore the fabric; and a political crisis soon follow the economic strain between Rome and the European community, Heath suffered also from the imme rise in oil costs. His attempt to unyielding in order to avoid a case bends in the British economy didn't won But that economy had never to recovered from the heroic victory World War II which saw Britain gain go but soon lost the empire on which curiously intricate manufacturing, train and financial systems had been based.

The final case is that of Bran Germany was - with justice - by far greatest loser of the 1939 - 1945 confir It not only suffered disastrous losses but ended cut in two like an apple, suffering schizophrenia because of this.

Brandt was the first chancellor to be and heal this illness by a gradual or rather than by a tough, gambling policy winner - take - all such as form Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and friend John Foster Dulles had favored ! approach was that of a surgeon attemption a slow, piecemeal graft on an unuttent smashed bone.

The mere initial step of recognizing to Germany's political existence touched a furor among Brandt's opponents on a right; and the East's failure to meet socialist chancellor's initiatives et halfway did not help his position. No suddenly as if by a bomb, his position been explored through discovery of East German spy high among his person entourage

Though the brilliant Helmut Schmit who succeeeds him, will undoubt adhere to Brandt's policy, Brandt hims as a politician, is probably

ROSANNE LESS Social interests top school spirit

Pat Nardi's recent column calling for a return to college proms and other trappings of school spirit rubbed me the wrong way.

School spirit is something I put away back at Rosary High School in Detroit some years ago. This is not to say, however, that I do not feel some pride and loyalty for MSU. Why not defend the Green and White and the Spartan name in front of friend and foe alike? I personally would speak favorably of the Spartans when confronted with the maize and blue of the University of Michigan or the scarlet and gray of Ohio State University and Woody Hayes.

The difference, however, is between loyalty and school spirit. There is a difference in fact and if you don't believe that, then consult Webster for an opinion on theory.

Be realistic. With 40,000 plus people running around this place, many of them foreign students, there are just too many factions to be united in any superficial, much less meaningful, way.

What I failed to grasp from Nardi's article was the correlation between school spirit and the return of proms to the college scene.

Proms are purely social affairs. Granted that Yale University did vote a return to this sort of activity, but I interpreted this as just another in the continuing series of Ivy League lampoon traditions, circa the Catcher in the Rye psycho perspective.

If Nardi would look closely I think would observe that the prom spirit yesteryear is very carefully preserved sorority and fraternity term parties. not mean to appear offensive to Great's just that in my sphere of the (limited, naturally) the idea of rein collegiate proms seems to be already to by the jocks and jockettes of community in the guise of term parties

POINT OF VIEW ASMSU shuffle explained

By TIMOTHY F. CAIN

Now that the State News has had an opportunity to go over Larry Bartrem's letter of resignation, I think it appropriate that I comment on this and on the events leading up to it.

Bartrem was appointed executive assistant by my predecessor, Ed Grafton. He also represented Grafton on the University Student Affairs Committee (USAC). The USAC seat in question here is reserved for the ASMSU president or his designated representative. Bartrem was elected chairman of the committee and, by virtue of that position, holds a seat on the Academic Council.

When I took office, I asked Bartrem to continue in all of these capacities. I had hoped that we could work together to smooth over the transition from the old board to the new, and I did not wish to jeopardize some of the fine work he had done on the Academic Council.

However, in recent weeks, the differences between Bartrem and myself have become more pronounced. In several cases in his USAC capacity, Bartrem has taken positions that I would not have taken were I sitting in the committee myself. On Wednesday I discussed these differences with him.

I did not feel that Bartrem was my best representative, so I decided that I should represent myself on USAC, rather than maintain a proxy. I asked for Bartrem's resignation, which he regretfully submitted the following morning. The resignation as executive assistant was more or less a by - product of these events.

I understand that Bartrem will continue on USAC in another capacity, and I am very happy that this is possible. In many areas, Bartrem has done an excellent job, for which I commend him. My objection is solely to his sitting on USAC as my personal representative.

As to the comments in the resignation letter that my style, approach and personality as per University politics might bear little fruit, I most obviously disagree. I did not run for president solely to retard progress in those areas where the student interest is at stake. I do not characterize administrators as "ogres or monsters," but rather as what they are, employes of a powerful political, economic, social and sometimes educational institution that from time to time has interests that are contrary to the best interests of the students that ASMSU is pledged to Compromise and mutual agreement are basic facts of political life and essential to the operation and effectiveness of ASMSU. The key is knowing how to compromise effectively, so as to bring about a result worth having. And one must also be willing to refuse compromise when the result is not worth having.

The differences between Larry Bartrem and myself are differences of judgment, not of basic purpose. I respect his dedication and his sense of conscience. I hope to be able to work with him in the future and I wish him well.

oaches' firing hurts minor sports athletic programs at MSU, but I do think things should be put back in their proper perspective.

Student athletics exist for student participation. The more sports, the more participation. Big - time college sports such as football and basketball may only be participated in by a select gifted few. Minor sports give the average athlete a chance to compete for a varsity letter.

Football and basketball are exciting and do produce revenue, but so are lacrosse and soccer exciting and capable of producing revenue. A lacrosse game between Johns Hopkins University and the University of Maryland or a soccer match between Hartwick College and St. Louis University would draw thousands willing to pay to watch. These programs at these schools are helped by their respective athletic departments, not undercut in every possible way.

Recent talk about the tremendous success of recruiting for football and basketball exemplifies this. How many students have ever been recruited for lacrosse or soccer? These teams enjoy limited success on the merits of the individuals who daily strive to improve themselves and the university they represent. To fire what may be their one true resource, the coaches, is unpardonable.

POINT OF VIEW

Sports writers' build ups justified

By TOM BONINE

Pam Ward's column of Thursday was a total display of her misguided concept of how sports writers should handle their reporting.

Ward contends that sports writers are "arrogant." They have the gall to predict winners in hockey and basketball play offs. They comment on athletes' abilities, and what they write is held to be fact.

Sure, sports writers predict winners and final standings. That's part of their business. They are professionals whose opinions should be read with some value. But their views are not final opinions. They are simply their own beliefs based on past experience and knowledge of sports as limited or unlimited as that knowledge may be. Sports writers are not always right, but no one expects them to be.

Ward states that, "they can lace baseball stories with 'superstar' phrases and feel confident they know what a superstar is." Open your eyes, Ward.

I doubt if anyone would argue that Johnny Bench or Hank Aaron are not superstars. Mark Spitz, Bobby Orr, Johnny Unitas, Bill Walton and countless others can all be safely described as superstars. Maybe you ought to watch more sports, Ward. You may be able to distinguish the "great" athlete from the "good" athlete.

Ward writes that it is wrong to think of an athlete in terms of monetary value. Take a good look at collegiate and professional sports. Every scholarship MSU or any other school gives to an athlete is an investment in his or her ability to help bring a winner to that school. Like it or not, that's the · time college sports are big business. When you have a school like the University of Alabama or the University of Southern California clearing over $400,000 in profits from football, which pays for the entire athletic program, you're talking big money.

Ward feels that billing a recruit as a the Sugar Bowl because of Heisman the athlete the amount of self - confidence team's season, is wrong. Being from Illinois and having written a sports column in junior college and high school, I know that there was no greater write - up for a high school athlete than for Quinn Buckner of Thornridge High School, who is attending Indiana University. Having watched him play many times, there was no doubt he was one of the best athletes to ever come from Illinois. Over 200 schools were recruiting a player who could carry a whole team.

Tony Adams, 1972 quarterback for Utah State University, one of the top passers in the nation, led his team to a winning season.

OP-ED PAGE

Ward says that if an athlete does not Mike Robinson's performance many live up to expectations, the papers "bombarded him with criticism." This 1966, the University of Florida went to may be true, but papers do not dictate to he should have. He knows his worth. If he has played to the best of his ability, he knows it, and no paper will change that.

As long as there have been sports and sports writers there have been cutting remarks and editorials on various games, teams, coaches and players. The athlete lives with this but does not let it decide for him whether he is good or great.

No matter how a writer treats an athlete, the final judge of an athlete's worth is on the field of competition.

MSU Karate Club, sparring grab honors in 8th annual open tourne

By JO GALLI

A crowd of 1500 spectators gathered in the Men's IM building on Saturday were treated to an exciting display of the techniques of self - defense during the eighth annual MSU Open Karate

Sponsored by the MSU Karate Club, the tournament drew 560 entries by midwestern masters of all ages and of all types of karate. Competition was divided by age groups, ability and sex.

Bruce Henderson, one of the instructors of the MSU Karate Club, explained that the competition was judged on the basis of performance of the forms (kadas) and sparring, with demonstrations of self - defense and board breaking ending the

"We had all the divisions performing their forms first, then sparring. The competition was between pee wee division (0 - 12 years old), junior novices and advanced (12 - 16 years), then competition between green, brown, and black belts." Henderson

The divisions competed during the day in forms and spam but the sparring competition between the teams from differ karate schools captured total interest at night.

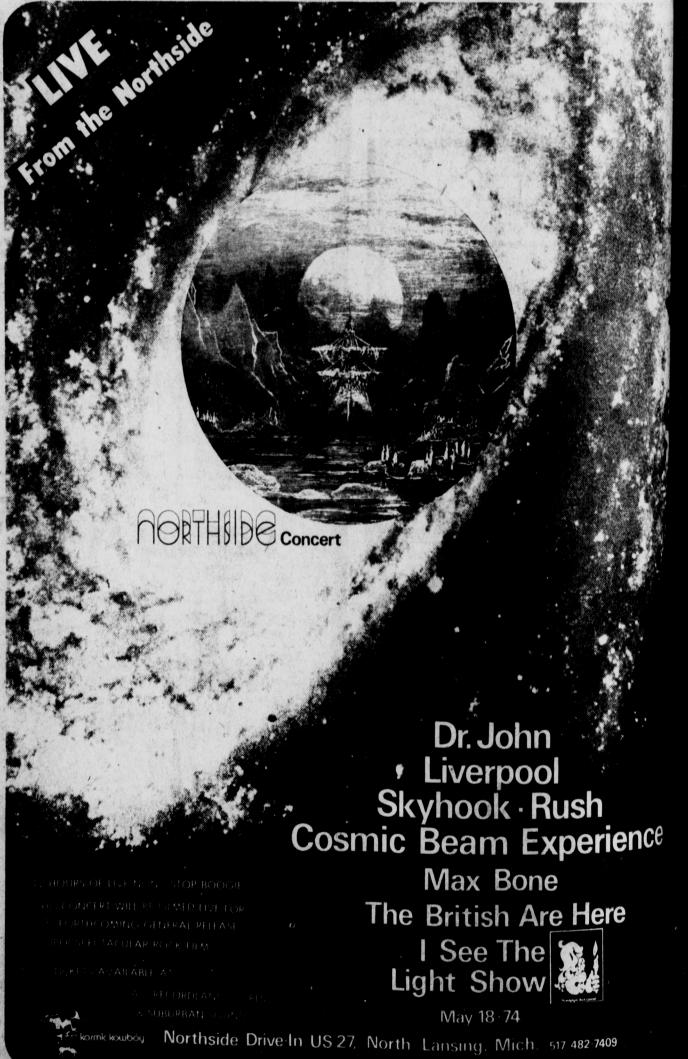

The MSU Karate Club made a clean sweep of honors into heavy weight brown belt sparring competition. Club members Lance Hazzard captured first place followed closely by Dam Kearney and Tom Tripplett to complete the honors.

Joe Newman, an MSU junior, captured the third place are for his fighting in the light weight brown belt competition in Becky Brennenan and Bridget Weaver both won third place in Womens novice and advanced sparring contest.

Highlighting the formal fighting competition was Dwi Wiliamson, a Western Michigan University student, who a honored as black belt grand champion after taking first place the lightweight division.

"As one of the clubs biggest fund raising events, a tournament was a success. It turned out to be the second large tournament in the state," Henderson said.

Campuswide labor union sought

By ED WARNER State News Staff Writer

Representatives of various campus organizations met with ASMSU Labor Relations Committee Director Tom Dye Thursday to establish what they hope will one day become a campuswide labor union representing all students employed by the University.

The organizations represented - Hillel, Office of Black Affairs, Worker's Organizational Committee and the Organization of Jewish Students - were all asked to provide information which Dye said would eventually be used in the formation of the union. While Dye explained that he

As he asked the audience, "What kind of theater.

One of Lorca's most masterful compositions for the stage, "The House of Bernarda Alba" is a unique blend of poetic realism that suggests a universe of repression and fear beyond the walls of Bernarda's house. A play about "women whom love moves to tragedy," "Bernarda Alba" tells of the repression of five daughters by a domineering mother and how their natural spirits circumvent her and bring violence and

The play's dramatic tension is born precisely from this clash of wills - those of the domineering mother, upheld by the forces of tradition, custom and social values and those of the daughters, dragged down by their thirst for living and by their human impulses and instincts to clash with each other in turn.

Three seniors on the MSU baseball team will make their final home appearance today, but they won't be the only ones saying goodbye to John Kobs Field.

Outfielders Bill Simpson and Larry Romaine and pitcher Steve Vander Laan will take the field for the last time in front of a partisan crowd at 1 p.m. today as the Spartans host Eastern Michigan in a doubleheader.

But there are three other seniors who will be in action for the final time today. Julie Klee, Maureen Malone and Ann Lewando, three of MSU's six ballgirls, will make their farewell appearance.

Klee was the originator of the ballgirls and is one of two girls (the other being Lewando) who have been a part of the group all three years of its

Though Oakland was the first major league baseball team to use ballgirls, Klee got her idea from the Baltimore

"When I came to MSU I was a big sports fan," she explained. "I went to football and basketball games and they seemed to get all the publicity. But when it came to baseball there was never any attention paid to it.

"I decided to do something to get attention for the team," she continued. "So I wrote a letter to coach (Danny) Litwhiler which originally asked if I could be a base sweeper like the one that Baltimore had.

"Coach Litwhiler wrote a letter back saying that he had been thinking about getting some batgirls and if I could get some girls, we could have the

"At first I had trouble getting girls because I wanted to get girls who really liked baseball instead of those who just wanted an inside track on a lot and that's how I found most of them."

"I went to baseball practice

Klee remembers the initial year as being haphazard, but adds that "it's gotten better each year since. "The first year a couple of the girls didn't know much about baseball," she said. "A couple of the girls would pick up bats even when a foul ball was hit or they would go after balls that went back to the screen on a passed ball. "The biggest problem was were putting up the wrong score on the centerfield scoreboard. "No one took us very seriously that first year. They thought that we would get sick of it and that the whole thing would die off. "I think a lot of people thought that we were just there for opening day. But when we began to show up for the rest of the games, everyone began to take us seriously.'

There are three main functions which the ballgirls serve: retrieving bats after each batter has completed his turn at the plate, chasing foul balls in back of home plate and keeping score on the centerfield scoreboard. One of Klee's jobs is to designate who will do the different jobs at every game. "We rotate who does what job each game," Klee said. "I try to remember who did what at the last game. "The one bad job is doing the scoreboard in centerfield. It's sort of like a prison that we were always afraid we sentence on who will do the scoreboard each game." Klee calls her experience as a ballgirl one of her most favorable

"Today's going to be sad because it's the last one," she said. "It has gotten more fun each year because you get to know more people each year.

"The umpires, coach Tom Smith and broadcasters Jim Adams and Terry Braverman have been especially nice to us.

"Besides that we have the best seats in the house for

The other members of this year's edition of the ballgirls are all juniors. They include Terry Denbrock, who will take Klee's place as the organizer of the group next year, Nancy Nunnemaker and (Cheryl Kompik.

Litwhiler is expected to use sophomore Scott Evans (2 - 1) in the opener of the twin bill and will combine the efforts of freshmen Todd Hubert and Bill St. Clair in the nightcap. Both Hubert and St. Clair were recently brought up from the junior varsity.

Eastern enters the contest with a surprising 27 - 15 - 1 record, while the Spartans have lost six of their last seven to fall to 19 - 16 - 1.

council's decision tonight to continue or discontinue financial assistance to the

"If the city council does not provide funding for the Woman's Center, the decision would be a good indication that the city does not take seriously the unique concerns of women in the community," Leslie Modrack said. Modrack, a member of the coordinating committee of the Woman's Center, said that through combining the energies of Woman's Center with Everywoman's Center, they would be able to respond to the needs of the community

Regardless of city council's decision, the two women's resource centers definitely plan to merge since they have common goals for serving the community, Modrack added.

According to Modrack, the Woman's Center sent a proposal requesting that city council continue to fund the center next year. Approximately two weeks ago, the center was informed that city council did not include the center in its budget proposal for the coming year. Thus, the $125 a month which has been contributed toward the center's rent in the past may be discontinued. Rent costs $225

Modrack said city council thinks the Listening Ear, the Drug Education Center, Everywoman's Center and Woman's Center have been duplicating services. But, Modrack says rape counseling is a service exclusively offered by the Woman's Center.

City council members were not available for comment.

Other crisis intervention centers handle rape cases with a therapeutic approach to treatment, while the Woman's Center offers a feminist approach. The feminist approach, Modrack said, is really accepted by the community. The acceptance is evident in the numerous calls Modrack said she receives from community women.

The Women's Center gives support through providing women counselors to accompany rape victims to the hospital for examinations. Rape counselors also provide support while victims decide whether to report rape incidents to the police. Modrack said it is very important for rape victims to have women counselors to discuss experiences with.

Some of the other services offered by the Woman's Center are divorce, abortion and lesbian counseling.

In addition to counseling services, the center sponsors groups called collectives, which meet within the center. Among these collectives are groups for single mothers, self defense, women against rape, a women's film collective and a self - help group which learns about women's biology and how to give pelvic self - examinations.

A communications workshop and a male - female rap group, two collectives formerly offered by Everywoman's Center, will be incorporated into the Woman's Center's programs immediately after the two centers have merged.

Files referring women to gynecologists, women therapists and job placement are among many other services available to the community.

Morel mushrooms have been popping their little heads through the humus of the MSU woodlots for the last week.

In a typical year the first two weeks of May are the prime time for finding the spongy morels in dense wooded areas. Black morels appear first. They usually pop out after a warm early May rain followed by a sunny day. Then, as the blacks become scarce, a white morel variety emerges.

The mushrooms in the pictures were picked from an MSU woodlot by Dane and Jane Steel of Kalamazoo who were visiting friends at MSU. They found the morels in a south campus woodlot near Jolly Road. The biggest mushroom they found was four inches tall and its body was the size of a silver dollar.

Most morel gourmets prepare the fungi for the table by first splitting them down the middle. then soaking them in salt water. They can then be fried in butter and served alone or with a juicy

New employment policy for campus workers set

By DENISE CRITTENDON State News Staff Writer

Students who dread the hassle of red tape may find their fears eased this summer by new employment procedures at MSU.

Unlike previous years when students working on campus full time were processed through the personnel center for regular staff, students working full time (40 hours a week) this summer must be processed through the Student Employment Office, 110 Student Service Bldg. before they can start work.

The new policy includes time students both part employes, (20 hours or less) and full - time students. Students are not required to be enrolled during the job period but are expected to return as students during fall term. Upon return students must also be employed by the University.

Students who have completed their academic program are eligible to be processed for employment through the regular staff personnel center.

During the academic year, the student employment office processes the part - time student employes on campus while the personnel office handles the regular full - time workers.

According to Jack Shingleton, director of Placement Services, the new procedure was instituted, in part, because rates change during the summer and "students are on the student payroll. We thought it appropriate that they be processed through the student employment office instead of the personnel office."

Though the policy does not Shingleton said the minimum rate for the student's job classification will be paid to full - time student employes. However, he said, pay rates exceeding $3.34 per hour will require special approval through the student employe

"The minimum rate for students working full time this summer will be $2.70 per hour," he said.

"For one thing, all the departments will know students are processed in one office," he said. "Also we can be more consistent, we think, in the handling and processing of students and maintaining proper rates with this arrangement."

recent change is to insure consistency and to eliminate the mixing of students and full - time employes within the came office, Shingleton said.
