police arrested a black man they wentified as Marcus Wayne Chenault, 21, of Dayton, Ohio. He was charged with two counts of murder, one of assault and one of carrying a concealed wearpon. A friend of the King family said the gunman was quoted as saying he killed

Ms. King "because she was a Christian and all Christians are my enemies." The gunman opened fire as the choir intoned the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. King, 69, was shot as she played the organ in the church where her son, the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., preached the philosophy of nonviolence.

Asst. Police Chief J.L. Mullins said "Chenault told police he received orders from his god to kill The Rev. Martin Luther King Sr." King, 74, is pastor of the church, but was not preaching this Sunday. He entered the church just as the shooting started.

"Chenault told investigators the reason he shot Mrs. King was because she was nearest to him," Mullins added. Members of the congregation said she was about three feet from the gunman.

Mullins quoted Chenault as saying he shot the other two victims "because they were worshipping a false idol." He said the man told police there were no other persons involved, but added that investigators believed he may have had a car that "was taken in Dayton." Mullins declined to elaborate.

He said Chenault told police "he checked into a motel near the church yesterday, and made plans for today...he told police he attended Sunday school services at the church and then attended the regular worship services."

A spokesman at Ohio State University said Chenault was a first - year graduate student in education at the school. Chenault's father, Marcus H. Chenault, is a factory worker for Monsanto Industries in

after the shooting which occurred shortly before 11 a.m. (EDT). A spokesman, announcing her death, said she had been shot in the area of the mouth.

Mrs. King's husband was given sedation at the hospital and released.

Coretta King, widow of the civil rights leader, was out of town when the shooting occurred, but returned home immediately.

Derek King, one of the dead woman's grandsons, said he helped subdue the gunman as he tried to reload his pistol.

"He was delirious," Derek said. "He appeared to be in a fever. He said over and over, 'The war did this to me. It's the war.'" Derek is the son of the late A.D. King, who was found drowned in his swimming pool five years ago.

Martha Williams, a member of the church, identified the other shooting victims as Edward Boykin, 69, an Ebenezer deacon, who was killed, and Mrs. Jimmy Mitchell, 65.

Mrs. Mitchell, who was wounded in the chest, was in satisfactory condition at Grady, a hospital spokesman said.

Another spokesman said a fourth person, identified as Charles Coleman, 76, was treated for shock and released. He said a bullet went through Coleman's coat.

Nixon-Brezhnev summit stalemated on arms limits

YALTA, U.S.S.R. (AP) - President Nixon held what he called "very intensive and extensive" talks Sunday with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev on limiting missiles with multiple warheads, but the White House indicated negotiations on the subject remained stalemated.

Ronald L. Ziegler, the presidential press secretary, told a news briefing that nothing has happened at the Nixon -Brezhnev summit to cause him to alter previous assessments by a "senior official" that a permanent agreement would be impossible on curbing the production of MIRVs - Multiple Independently Targeted Re - entry Vehicles. Ziegler unmistakably referred to earlier statements by Secretary of State Henry A.

Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamyatin was asked if he agreed with Ziegler. He said he for his own "senior official" and had nothing of substance to say on the topic.

The dim prospect for a new accord on limiting offensive weapons was underscored by Ziegler, who repeated, after Zamyatin spoke, that he had no cause to change Kissinger's assessment. Nixon and Brezhnev conferred for more than four hours Sunday, then cruised on the Black Sea for nearly three hours, eating a late lunch aboard a Soviet vacht.

Ziegler said Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko would fly to Moscow with Brezhnev on Monday to continue their conversations while the President and Mrs. Nixon make a ceremonial visit to Minsk, in Byelorussia southwest of Moscow.

The American spokesman said the President and Brezhnev "reviewed and discussed in detail" the positions of their two countries on new arms curbs. Kissinger already has described the Soviet position as unacceptable to the United

Ziegler confirmed at the briefing that the two leaders have completed talks on steps to curb antiballistic missiles systems, He said an agreement, which presumably would freeze present ABM systems at one for each country, would be announced

The press secretary said Nixon will appear on Soviet television on Tuesday night, then make a personal televised report to the American people the next night on results of the summit conference. Ziegler said Nixon will speak during a refueling stop at Loring Air Force Base in Caribou, Maine.

From there, Ziegler said, the President will go to his home at Key Biscayne, Fla., for a long Independence Day weekend.

however, with the qualification that much remained to be done, an observation echoed by Pravda, the organ of Brezhnev's Communist party.

Brezhnev, who carried the conversation as he and Nixon posed for pictures at the start of the day's session, declared with a smile: "We've agreed on everything. Now we can take a rest."

American officials gave few details of Sunday's discussions, but Ziegler said they dealt with arms control and "European marathon summit on the Black Sea coast matters" that he did not specify. It was Sunday, after which the President assumed the two men discussed proposals remarked: "We've made a lot of progress." for force reductions in Europe, which has Ziegler followed up Nixon's remark, stalemated East and West for years.

MSU woman raped; man arrested by city police

An MSU student was raped in her East Lansing apartment early Saturday morning. East Lansing police arrested a suspect at the scene. The victim was taken to Sparrow Hospital in Lansing where she was treated and released.

Police said they received a call at 4:45 a.m. reporting that someone was, attempting to break into an apartment. While investigating this report they discovered that the suspect had apparently entered the victim's apartment.

Police arrested Carl Jay Burman. 18, of 334 Center St., Ionia, in the apartment bedroom.

Burman was arraigned before Judge Robert Bell, 55th District Court, and charged with breaking and entering, rape and assault with gross indecency.

Burman demanded an examination and a cash bond of $10,000 was set. The bond was not posted.

Study finds meat prices down

A campaign to narrow the meat price gap between the farm and the supermarket apparently has paid off for consumers. An Associated Press marketbasket survey showed the family grocery bill declined during June, mainly because of sales on beef.

Prices were checked on 15 food and nonfood items in 13 cities on March 1, 1973, rechecked at the beginning of each succeeding month. The latest survey showed the overall bill declined in nine cities during June, down an average 2.2 per cent. The bill was up in four cities, increasing an average 4 per cent. During May, the survey showed the marketbasket increased in eight cities and declined in five.

The biggest savings for consumers came from sales on beef items. Chopped chuck declined in 10 cities during June and all - beef frankfurters went down in price in nine cities.

The average price of a pound of chopped chuck at the end of June was $1.12 - down about 13 per cent from the $1.29 level at the end of May. The average price was the same as it was last March, just before consumers started organizing a week - long meat boycott to protest high prices.

Murder trial to begin in Houston

Elmer Wayne Henley, 18, goes on trial Monday in the Houston mass murders case despite efforts by defense to delay or move the trial out of this city.

Henley is charged with the deaths of six teen - aged males, all of them either neighbors, friends or acquaintances of the youth.

The six were among 27 youths found buried in three locations in and around the Houston area last August.

Another barrage of motions is expected to be filed by Henley's attorney, Will Gray of Houston, who has already been turned down by the Texas Supreme Court in one effort.

54-missile launch called success

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration launch of 54 research missiles in a 24 - hour period off Wallops Island, Va., was a success, spokesmen said Sunday.

There were some setbacks, however, including the fiery disintegration of one rocket.

The last of the 54 rockets was fired Sunday only 20 minutes behind schedule. Technicians said 41 of the 54 shots were listed as successes, eight as partial successes, and five were failures.

More than 100 scientists from the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Germany, were on hand to view the rockets flash into the skies from six launch

The missiles carried payloads of chemicals or sensitive electronic gear designed to probe the earth's atmospheric border with space.

Red tape said used to cut spending

The Office of Management and Budget deliberately is snarling public works projects in red tape so it won't have to spend appropriated funds, says Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., the chairman of a House investigations subcommittee.

The OMB is the budget arm of the executive branch of government.

Wright's Public Works subcommittee on investigations held hearings three years ago in an effort to cut through the red tape choking public works programs.

Since then the average processing time for public works grants in an emergency economic program grew from 79 days to 348 days.

Soviet physicist fasts in protest

Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov said Sunday he hopes his two - day - old hunger strike would draw the attention of President Nixon and Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev to alleged human rights violations in the Soviet Union.

Once the Soviet Union's top nuclear physicist and the scientist considered responsible for developing the Kremlin's hydrogen bomb, Sakharov, 53, began his fast at midnight Friday in support of an open letter to Brezhnev and Nixon urging them to discuss human rights during their summit meeting.

The letter also called for the two to work for the release of 80 Soviet political prisoners.

Union, grower locked in legal fight

The United Farm Workers of America (AFL-CIO) and Hollis B. Roberts, one of the nation's leading growers of wine grapes, tree fruits and nuts, are locked in a legal battle over the union's attempt to dissolve a picketing injunction.

For over a year, the injunction has restricted the number of individuals the Farm Workers union have stationed near Robert's field in Bakersfield, Calif.

In the current dispute, Barbara Rhine, farm workers lawyer, contends that Roberts may no longer be entitled to the picketing injunctions because he may not be the true owner of all the lands on which there are injunctions.

The recommendations state that administrative staff should be provided by the city manager along with cooperation and coordination for the commission's activities.

Also significant is the suggestion that members from the commission should serve as East Lansing's representatives on regional transit groups such as the Capital Area Rail Council and the Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA) which runs Lansing's bus system.

Since this is presently not the case and city council recently reappointed the same representatives to the rail council and CATA, the transportation committee those representatives should work closely with the proposed commission.

The committee's suggestions come in response to a city council - ordered organization study of East Lansing's approximately 20 commissions, committees and boards.

The mass transportation group and the commissions are also worried that the vagueness of the council order - not detailing any methods or conclusions - could allow Patriarche to influence the study's final recommendations.

Fiscal year begins; budget delayed

By JOANNA FIRESTONE United Press International

LANSING - Today is the first day of the new fiscal year, but Michigan does not have a state budget and probably won't have one for another two weeks.

Technically, the state had no operating funds today because the Senate adjourned last week before it had a chance to give final approval to an interim budget continuing spending until the new budget is enacted.

As originally passed by the Sensie, the continuation budget had no expiration date. The House, however, amended and passed the stop - gap measure Friday with a July 15 deadline.

The Senate must agree to the deadline and Gov. Milliken must sign it into law before funding is renewed.

State employes would face payless paydays if the continuation budget is not enacted this week. There also may be a delay in monthly payments to Michigan's 15,000 welfare recipients.

The House passed four of its eight budget bills Friday, including funding for natural resources, agriculture, state police and military affairs and general government.

Easing fears that the election year budget would outstrip available revenues, the House passed budget bills totaled $8 million less than Milliken's recommendations.

The total Milliken budget is pegged at $2.8 million. Majority Floor Leader

Bobby D. Crim, D - Davison, said the House would take up the controversial welfare budget today and complete work on the education, highways, retirement and grants and transfers bills before Republicans and Democrats were expected to caucus today and discuss their strategy.

If the Senate opts to ignore budget action for another week, it could consider a $1 billion mass transit bonding proposal which whisked through the House last week.

EDITORIALS Congress must slow defense spending flow

There has long been reason to decry this nation's enormous defense budget, but with the release this month of two studies showing the different detrimental effects of military spending on the economy, particularly the Michigan economy, there is new reason for outrage.

American citizens have long been told that Pentagon spending is a booster for the economy. They have been warned repeatedly that cuts in such spending would sacrifice jobs and ruin local economies.

But the new evidence shows that defense spending itself is sacrificing jobs ("The Empty Pork Barrel," a PIRGIM report) and draining money out of many local economies (a study by James Anderson for Rep. Les Aspin, D -

It is now a documented fact that defense spending is near the bottom of job - producing government expenditures and that government spending on almost any other area housing, teaching or conservation, for instance - will yield more jobs in the economy as a whole.

The evidence shows some areas of the country, particularly the more than their share of the collapse.

Pentagon budget and are getting little in return.

Congress must consequently reassess the value of defense spending on its own merits, keeping in mind that it restrains rather than buoys the economy.

Americans must recognize that conversion legislation is an idea whose time has come. George McGovern, D - S.D., has sponsored various forms of such legislation for 10 years with little support or success. Without a legislative vehicle for the shift to civilian spending, the dire economic repercussions forecasters say would follow a defense spending cut could materialize. With such a vehicle, the transition to greater civilian spending would be painless.

The representatives and senators from Michigan, one of the hardest hit victims of the Pentagon's voracious appetite, should be among the first to speak out for defense budget cuts and conversion legislation.

The waste of resources financial, human and material which pour into the defense machine with increasingly little return to the people of this country must be ended now, before the Great Lakes region, are paying far American economy verges on

U.S. can give sunshine to military contractors

One area military contractors should look into as they convert to peace - time production is the solar energy industry.

In contrast with all other current and proposed sources of energy, solar power will not pollute the atmosphere or water, it will not burn up irreplaceable resources, it will not threaten health or lives and it will not provide exorbitant profits to a few conglomerates.

Critics of America's energy policies have estimated that enough solar power could have been available in the United States to offset the Arab oil embargo and possibly make the Alaska pipeline unnecessary.

But Congress has consistently failed to appropriate the needed funds for research and development of this source for economic rather than technical reasons. U.S. leaders have demonstrated confusion and indecision over solar energy. Various bills, opposed by the coal, gas and oil conglomerates, are now stagnating in the House and Senate.

The National Science Foundation and NASA last year issued a joint recommendation for $3.52 billion for solar research and development during the next 15 years. After review, the funds were lowered to $50 million, less than one - tenth the amount given to the Atomic Energy Commission for further development of nuclear

Billions of dollars have been poured into nuclear research over the past 20 years, but it has not been proven that this energy source is either economically feasible or

No proponents of solar energy usage claim that it will replace all other sources, but it is clean, safe and unlimited. If Congress is willing to remove the shackles of the fossil fuel industries' political contributions – perhaps by providing incentives to current military contractors to enter the solar energy industry - sun power will become an invaluable supplemental energy source.

Internal ills jar foreign policy

By C. L. SULZBERGER New York Times

Though Leonid Brezhnev has made it amply clear he is not concerned with American politics, the dismal Watergate scandal or current attempts to cut down Henry Kissinger, there is little doubt that the impact of these affairs is bound to diminish results of the present Moscow summit talks.

Brezhnev let it be known prior to this meeting that he regarded President Nixon as U.S. chief of state with intact powers and that therefore he and his famous diplomatic lieutenant were quite as able to negotiate as in any previous superpower colloquy. But while this may continue to be true in Soviet and other foreign eyes, the debilitating effect of successive crises is producing injurious repercussions abroad.

The United States is a glaring example of a political fact that plagues more than one country today, namely that no society can nourish a crisis in authority for any extended period without paying some price. That price is expressed in limitations on the application of foreign policy.

The consequence is that at this particular Brezhnev - Nixon summit American hopes seem less ambitious than in the past and more intent on "rescuing" fundamental policy goals to be pursued later than in breaking new ground. It is all too evident that the President had lost momentum in his search for superpower detente before leaving for Moscow.

Political weakness at home has so far prevented him from making good on credits and advantageous trade conditions previously promised to Brezhnev. Now the argument over whether Kissinger was too generous in earlier SALT negotiations - a discussion hinting at differences between the secretaries of state and defense further handicaps the U.S. position.

It is impossible to know whether this fact in turn may embarrass Brezhnev. Despite his dominance of the Soviet scene, he has been indirectly criticized by Soviet hawks for placing too much stock in detente. Logically speaking, the obstacles holding up fulfillment of Nixon's pledges could give apparent reason to arguments of Soviet hardliners. Certainly Moscow has recently backed away from concessions at the East - West European security talks in

Two other governments - each in its own way - show signs of internal weakness approximately equivalent to that of the United States and producing foreign policy reflections. These are massive China and tiny Israel, both curiously impinging upon the Soviet - American relationship.

The trend toward developing Sino -American friendship, so carefully worked out by Mao Tse - Tung and Chou En - Lai together with the Nixon - Kissinger team, has slowed down. A gap in authority has caused loss of diplomatic confidence.

While Kissinger seems to have eluded efforts to reduce his role, the same is not true for Chou, whose influence has lessened. Revived factionalism in China has affected that country's present capacity to act much as the Watergate paralysis is hitting the United States.

This must clearly comfort Brezhnev's critics. The greatest conceivable threat in the minds of Soviet strategists is some kind of anti - Russian combination in which America and China are joined.

The role of Israel in U.S. - Soviet relationships is obviously different, but not negligible. The entire pattern of Middle East change worked out by Nixon and Kissinger depends upon Israeli willingness to move toward settlement with its neighbors; yet the political weakness of the Jerusalem government complicates and hinders progress.

It was made clear during Nixon's recent Middle East tour that the whole new fabric designed to achieve ultimate settlement will dissolve unless a formula is found to compose Israeli relationships with the Palestinian Arabs. This must be done relatively soon unless the area is to explode again into another phase of violence.

However, Israel's new government has such a tenuous political majority in its Parliament that it must make concessions to minority parties - above all the orthodox religious faction - in order to keep control. The religious faction is ready to do almost anything to block a settlement with the Palestinian Arabs, and this freezes national policy.

Thus, though there has been dramatic movement on significant diplomatic fronts during Nixon's second administration, for a variety of reasons some of the mo important aspects of this movement st remain tentative. Unless key governmen involved - starting with our own improve their internal position enhancing their political authority, muc of the structure of their foreign police may ultimately prove as fragile as a ho

PARIS - The last time I was in Pari six years ago, I wrote a column title "Paris on $500 a Day." Inflation beating British middle class

BY ANTHONY LEWIS New York Times

The British middle class has been fair game for social critics through this century. Shaw mocked its morality; others have pronounced it smug, philistine,

But a good many of the qualities admired in this country are products of middle - class tradition: honesty, fairness, resilience, the nonpolitical dedication of civil servants and teachers and other professions, the habit of courtesy. At its best, the middle class had belonged to E. M. Forster's aristocracy of the considerate and the plucky.

One strong impression in Britain now is of a middle class that feels itself threatened. Generalities are risky, because the term "middle class" is social as well as economic. It takes in people with incomes of $7,500 a year and $75,000. But a great many of them - doctors and businessmen. nurses and architects - plainly believe that their standards of life are at risk.

Inflation is now running at an annual rate approaching 20 per cent in Britain. Tax changes made by the new Labor government bite everyone with an income over about $6,500 a year, and more at higher levels. As a result, people can sense that their real income - their standard of life -- is being cut.

In theory, of course, the middle - class person can increase his money income to keep up with inflation. In fact, it is

Even if you do find ways to earn more, you find yourself in a higher tax bracket. A family making $25,000 a year would have to increase its income nearly twice as fast as the rate of inflation to keep its real buying power steady. The Economist observed recently that if 18 per cent inflation continues, prices will double in four years and a $25,000 - a - year man would need $100,000 "to stand still. He won't get it."

It is harder for the professional person or civil servant to accept what inflation and taxation are doing to him or her because, in their view, the same thing is not happening to the coal miner or the automobile worker. The powerful unions have broken all attempts at wage restraint and are demanding and getting increases higher than the price trends.

That people should feel threatened in such a situation is not surprising. Harold Lever, a member of the Labor cabinet who happens to be well - to - do, comments: "In Britain a higher proportion of the middle class than anywhere else has felt that the workers should get more. It sounds rather a saintly position! But that has meant giving the less privileged the lion's share of new national wealth, of growth, not taking away what the middle class already has. It is a hard thing to ask any group to contemplate an endless process of decline not only in relative status but in the actual standard of life."

Postwar Britain has had remarkable achievements in assuring minimum standards for all its citizens. The welfare system and the National Health Service have greatly reduced the worst cruelties of income inequality, and public spending on transportation, arts and other amenities has improved life for all.

But the process that appears to be under way now is quite different from that improving of minimum standards. It is, rather, a process of leveling. When a country has no economic growth - and so far this year Britain has less than none more for the miners so far this year means less for someone else. Different middle class groups have begun to feel that they will be the unfortunate someone else, indefinitely.

Some Britons would say that the change, if it goes on, will be a good thing. The middle class has had its day, they argue, and has now proved too tired and too stodgy to lead the country out of its endless economic troubles. As it took over from the gentry and the industrial grandees at the end of the last century, it must now hand over effective power to viewpoint. Now I am not so sure.

Those who disagree -- and they are not only on the political right - doubt that society will be better off if its professionals and its managers expect to get poorer every year. It is also dangerous politically to destroy the middle class, they argue; that was done in Weimar Germany. It is especially foolish, they continue, when no one suggests a workable alternative formula for organizing society. The unions seem to offer only a free - for - all, with no restraints on their power.

The issues are not presented so starkly. but they are there. Social malaise is settling in beside the economic troubles. The old institutions are stumbling, and as people lose confidence in them they become even less effective. Socially, economically, politically there are questions for Britain that will not wait.

Premium gasoline will not be available at many area service stations which have been compelled to carry lead - free gas by Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations that go into effect today. Agency orders require that gasoline stations with annual sales of more than 200,000 gallons - about one - third of all the stations in the country - offer the lead - free fuel.

"About a month ago, we eliminated the ethyl and put in the lead - free," said Leon Kussmaul, employe of Michigan Stations Inc. at 5241 N. Grand River Ave. in

"As it is right now, people can't get premium," he said. America's biggest service station must offer lead - free gasoline starting today as part of the government's clean air campaign. An informal survey of East Lansing and area stations Sunday showed that most stations are prepared for the new regulations.

Jim Little, owner of H & H Mobil Service at 1500 Haslett Road, said he had 1,500 gallons of lead - free gasoline on

"But who is going to buy it when the price is practically as high as premium?"

Little, like most in the area, has not had to stop selling premium since his station is equipped with tanks for three grades of

"The costs involved are really steep for some of the independent operators who have to bear the expense of new tanks and pumps themselves," he said.

Little said he is only selling about 20 gallons of the lead - free grade a week.

That problem will be eased in September when 1975 - model cars go on sale. They will be equipped with catalytic converters to arrest emissions, and cannot run on leaded gasoline.

The gasoline pipes on these cars are designed to take only fuel from specially designed nozzles, which are being installed at the 160,000 service stations across the country required to carry the lead - free

Owners of two - pump, high - volume independent stations, mainly in rural areas, say they anticipate problems because of the regulations. The oil companies are paying for the conversions at the franchised stations.

Source accuses CIA of detaining report about Watergate break-in WASHINGTON (AP) - The Central CIA agency E. Howard Hunt Jr. was Intelligence Agency withheld for a time a report on the Watergate break - in received within a month of the incident from an associate of one of the conspirators, an official source says.

The source said that the report on the June 17, 1972, break - in was filed by Robert Bennett on July 10, 1972, but was viewed by CIA officals as adding nothing substantive to information, the agency had already given the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

At the time, Bennett was employed in Washington by Robert R. Mullen & Co., an international public relations firm which then was under contract to provide over for CIA agents abroad. At the same time, Watergate conspirator and former working part - time in Mullen's Washington office while on the White House special investigations unit.

The source said Bennett's memo reached then - CIA director Richard Helms, now ambassador to Iran.

"Bennett did pass to his case officer some information. It was looked at and Helms was one who did look at it," the source said Saturday night. "But it was hearsay and, in the opinion of agency officials who saw it, it added nothing substantive to information that had already been passed on so it was not immediately relayed either to the FBI or to the congressional oversight committees."

Details of the Bennett report could not

Last Monday, however, a private investigator, Richard L. Bast, said he was told by former White House special counsel Charles W. Colson of a CIA memo which mentioned a report from Bennett.

According to Bast, Colson said he had read a 25 - page memo by Eric W. Eisenstadt, chief of the central cover staff of CIA's clandestine directorate, at the home of Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn. Baker, vice chairman of the Senate Watergate committee, is preparing a report on possible CIA involvement in the Watergate affair.

The Eisenstadt memo suggested that Mullen and Bennett be permitted to read FBI and CIA memos on witnesses who should not be interviewed in the Watergate case, Bast said.

The private investigator also said Eisenstadt wrote that Bennett had reported that he could handle the Senate committee if the CIA could handle Hunt. Bennett has denied this.

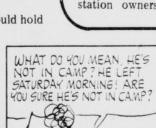

An informed official source said last week that then CIA director James Schlesinger told a representative of the Mullen firm to keep quiet about the firm's relationship with the agency. Schlesinger, now secretary of defense, denied meeting a representative of the firm. Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., said last Monday that his House intelligence subcommittee had examined the Eisenstadt memo months ago and concluded that it described a cover story to prevent investigation of the Mullen The source said the Bennett report was eventually relayed to the FBI and congressional committees like Nedzi's with authority over CIA operations, but it could not be learned when this occurred.

The Bennett report was given also to the Watergate special prosecutor and to the Senate Watergate Committee after they were set up in 1973, the source said.

When Helms appeared before the Senate committee on Aug. 2, 1973, he was not asked about the Bennett report nor did he

IRS warns state lotteries to conform to federal law

WASHINGTON (UPI) - State lotteries that are not operating in strict accordance with federal law could find themselves dapped with a 10 per cent excise tax, Internal Revenue Service (IRS) said

A tax agency spokesman said IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander met earlier this week with officials of eight states that currently operate lotteries and three others that are planning to open one

Successful art gallery director retires

By JUNE E. K. DELANO State News Staff Writer

During the 11 years Paul Love directed the Kresge Art Gallery, it developed from a small, haphazard collection to a full - fledged art museum with accreditation from the American Assn. of Museums.

Love, who retired Sunday, was the gallery's first director. Since his appointment to the position in 1963, he has seen many of his dreams for the gallery come true, including important acquisitions and the construction of the north gallery

"I tried to build up a small nucleus of art collections representing different styles and periods and I think I have," he explained. "This is of greatest service to the art history classes and the humanities program."

During Love's directorship, the gallery has acquired over 2,000 art works, all financed by the Alumni Fund and independent

The greatest number of his acquisitions have been prints, because, Love said, that's where you can get the most for the least money

The Kresge Gallery can afford a Cezanne print like the one Love proudly includes among his best acquisitions, but a Cezanne painting costing tens of thousands of dollars is out of reach.

"Prices are skyrocketing too," he complained. "In the last six or seven years, there has been a 100 per cent increase in prices, so that now even prints are difficult to buy."

In addition to supervising acquisitions, Love has had a wide range of jobs, including assessing the value of art works which are found in "Grandma's attic."

"I have been serving as director, curator, money procurer, janitor, chair - setter - upper and editing the Kresge Art Center Bulletin," he bemoaned. "Hopefully, the new director will have a curator to do some of this work and do research on the collection because that's an area I've ignored through lack of time."

Another goal Love sees for the future director is to add

"When the '66 addition was built we finally had the ability to show and we got increasing gifts," he said. "Three - quarters of our collection is in the vault now and it causes a problem.

"You have eager givers who stop giving when their gifts aren't displayed. They don't want these things in a vault - they want them out with their name on them."

Love has made his acquisitions through "shopping trips" to New York, through catalogs from abroad and by "just stumbling across things.

"Sometimes you start getting things in an area you never thought about because someone gives you a piece, like our green Celadon ceramics from 13th century China, and you keep getting more until you have a small collection," he explained.

Now Love hopes to return to his work in watercolors and collage, admitting that it will be hard to let someone else take over what is essentially his creation.

"Even if a super genius became director, I'd worry about it for a while," he concluded, "but I'll never say a word."

Celebrities enliven Dem telethon

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jokes, songs and patriotic sketches were interspersed among pleas for money Sunday as Democrats urged Americans to turn the country around with pledges of support in a national fund - raising telethon.

"You want clean politics?" Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D -Minn., asked the audience at the 21 - hour event. "You know you can clean it up for a dollar.

By noon (EDT) the telethon, originating at CBS studios in Los Angeles, had raised more than $2.5 million, which covered the cost of the telecast. Party leaders hoped to raise at least another $2 million from their third annual telethon.

After receiving news of the slaying of Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. in Atlanta, Humphrey and Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., called for a brief moment of silence. Humphrey and Hatcher, who is black, noted that the killing of the mother of the slain civil rights leader was apparently not racially motivated.

At about the time Mrs. King was shot, Strauss had been making public a pledge of support from her husband,

The report recommended the proposed commission study the extent of discrimination against women, the controversy over the integrated versus the separate but - equal budgetary treatment and the awarding of athletic scholarships.

"The problem with women's athletics is different in that we need to attract more minority women in the program," Jackson stated. "Many do have the skills to make the teams. "Part of the problem is preparation at certain high schools. But I'm sure that in the next few years we'll find many more minority women coming in," Jackson said. Another area the report asks the proposed commission to study is the lack of black coaches and officials.

The report, sponsored by grants from the Ford Foundation and the Carnegie Corp. of New York, recommended that the commission be set up for three years under the sponsorship of the ACE which has as its members more than 1,600 colleges, universities and educational associations. George H. Hanford, executive vice president of the College Entrance Examination

Board, headed the study. The report said: "A comprehensive re-examination of the role, policies and financing of collegiate athletics is needed today more than ever before. A new consensus can only be achieved by a commission which broadly represents the interests of institutions, athletes, legislators and the public."

It went on to say: "In moral terms, the distinction between amateur and professional is disappearing. In socio institutional terms, though sports as entertainment can be expected to play an increasingly important role in our society, big - time intercollegiate athletics can be expected to keep on losing ground despite deceptive appearances to the contrary.'

"And it is a problem that exacerbates the ethical dilemma of intercollegiate sports by creating still more pressure for victory at any moral cost."

MSU Athletic Director Burt Smith says his concern is with exactly what the role of athletics is in the total University concept. "We have always had the policy that we want a well -

NFL players in strike formation

WASHINGTON (UPI) -National Football League veterans and stars swung solidly into formation for the start Monday of the fourth major league sports strike in four years with the battle slogan "no freedom, no football."

The walkout officially was set to begin at midnight Sunday and the first NFL Players Assn. pickets are

Wednesday in San Diego when the Chargers open their preseason camp to rookies.

Only one major player, linebacker Mike Curtis of the Baltimore Colts, openly has vowed to cross the picket lines but player representatives from the 26 teams reported support of the strike action was almost unanimous.

Negotiations with the owners' management council last Wednesday, foundering on a series of so - called "freedom issues" which would permit players to switch teams once their contracts expire and have a veto over possible trades.

The second NFL players' strike since 1970 - baseball also has had two strikes in that time, one by umpires and the other by players - threatened to derail the exhibition schedule starting with the college all - star game against Miami Dolphins in Chicago July 26.

Miami player representative Doug Swift conferred personally with Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' union, earlier in the week and reported the Dolphins veterans would boycott their camp.

He also said a majority of the team has agreed that the traditional college all - star game should not be played if the strike persists, though wide receiver Howard Twilley has advocated playing the game.

Unlike the rest of the exhibition games, the Dolphins receive a regular game salary for the Chicago contest, which would run to about $7,000 for a player in the $100,000 - a outfield but plan no formal request at this time. year bracket. Normal exhibition game pay is only a couple of hundred dollars.

> Preston Pearson, spokesman for the Pittsburgh Steelers veterans, reported: "We have the majority of the players supporting the strike. We're prepared to strike. Every player is well informed on what we have to do to carry on a strike. We've been in touch with rookies by letter and intend to contact them by phone. We don't want rookies to go to camp. We don't want anyone to go to camp. When we say strike, we mean strike." Tom Dempsey of the and added he thought the Philadelphia Eagles said strike would "expedite the Super Bowl champion teammates is "solid, very solid. We won't have any veterans going in."

Brig Owens of the Washington Redskins reported that about 20 veterans who have been working out individually at the team's practice facilities are switching to a college fieldhouse beginning Monday because of the strike.

Steve Tannen, an alternate player rep for the New York Jets, questioned Twilley's advocacy that the Dolphins play the all - star game.

"Maybe some of the Dolphins will have to give up some money," he commented. "But they've been to the Super Bowl three straight years and what more do they want? I think Howard ought to re examine his values.

Dempsey said of the newcomers: "We won't find out until they cross the picket lines. The Eagles aren't going to get involved in any violence. We're just going to talk to them and explain what we're doing - that everything we're striking for will be for them too. We're not going to apply any threats, just try to convince them too.

Pearson expressed hope "there will be a settlement before the exhibition games"

DETROIT (UPI) - Al Kaline of the Detroit superstar won't have to start in the all - star Tigers is about to clinch a starting outfield berth for the all - star game July 23, yet he hasn't played an inning in the field this season. And he doesn't want to make the all - star game his first.

"I could probably play but I'd rather not," said Kaline, who thinks he's getting so many votes because he's getting close to 3,000 career hits. He trails only Reggie Jackson of Oakland in the voting and the top three must start and play three innings.

"I would't mind going as an extra outfielder or as a pinch - hitter but I'd rather not play," the 21 vear veteran said.

It isn't so much that he hasn't played - after all he has done that for 20 years - but Kaline suffered a sprain to his left knee playing basketball last winter and aggravated it in spring training to the point where it will bother him all season. It is taped before each game now.

goes," Kaline said. "But I think the fans should vote for the guys that play. "I feel good that I've received so many votes
