yousing policy logic reates controversy

By MARY FLOOD State News Staff Writer

Now that it appears the sophomore on campus living requirement will be abolished, the reasons why the policy was ever initiated are being questioned.

Though the stock reason for the policy is its educational value, privately, University officials admit that the policy has been used to insure that the loans on the residence halls can be paid off.

"The logic behind the housing policy is that there is an educational advantage and experience to be gained through living in the dorms," Vice President for Student Affairs Eldon Nonnamaker said. "Like University College requirements, supervised housing is felt to be a part of the student's education."

In 1971 the on campus housing requirement was dropped for juniors.

Nonnamaker explained that when the educational value of on campus living was weighed against the negative factors of overcrowded rooms, the administration decided it would be best to temporarily waive the requirement for sophomores. But several administrators, including one high ranking university official, have said that the real reason for the requirement is to insure that the university can pay off the loans taken to build the residence halls." The administrators who felt this way did not want their names used because MSU could easily be sued if it appears that the University is maintaining residency requirements for purely financial reasons.

Other universitities have been to court over the same question. No definite precedent has been set due to different individual circumstances in the cases.

In the last 30 years the University has borrowed an estimated $150 million to build the MSU residence halls and married housing. The University still owed over $56 million as of June 1973.

These trust loans are secured through the Ann Arbor Trust Co., an investment banking house which serves as the middleman between the University and pledged toward paying off the principal and interest on the loan. Every residence hall's income and much of married housing's income is currently pledged.

Most of these loans are established with a provision that a certain sum will be due each year. Then in a given fiscal year (for example, 10 years from the first payment), a larger amount - called a balloon payment - is due.

In order to pay these balloon payments the University takes out another loan, thus refinancing loans and repledging residence hall profits until some unknown date when the debt has dwindled to nothing. Until then MSU residence hall profits will continue being fed into the maze of loan contracts. Other factors, such as the type of investors the Ann Arbor Company has located for the loans, the interest rates at the time of contracting a loan, and differing vacancy levels in residence halls, influence the complicated management of Mrs. Ford was informed about the logy report by Navy Capt. William fouty, the hospital's chief of surgery, who ormed the operation.

Fouty said Saturday that the operation "removed all growth tumor." Saturday he said that there was no evidence of any remaining tumor." But when he was asked whether that meant there was no further malignancy, the doctor said, "I don't think one can make the statement that she has been relieved of all malignancy."

He was then asked if it would be an ominous sign if the pathological tests show that there has been some malignancy in the lymphatic tissue. Fouty replied: "This would not be particularly an ominous sign. It would not be particularly a bad sign. People do respond to further therapy." But he added, "There would be no more surgical procedures done because all of this tissue would be removed." The pathology examination involved tissues from the entire breast and lymph gland tissues from under the armpit that were removed in the surgery. The daily hospital bulletin, issued at 11 a.m. Monday, reported Mrs. Ford's condition as good. It said that she had a much more restful night Sunday, awakening only once for medication. She took fluids Monday morning for the first time since the operation, and doctors said she had been sitting in a chair and walking for short periods.

They reported "some mild temperature elevation" but said it was typical of a postoperative course, which for Mrs. Ford, they said, "has been normal and uneventful thus far.

If the financial aid officials are right, their dollars will be spread even more lightly this year over an increased number of out - reaching hands.

Though a decision last week will qualify many more students for aid, officials agree the decision will rob Peter to pay Paul. In effect, the amount of aid available from the government is expected to remain stable in the face of growing student need.

The College Scholarship Service, the agency that analyzes a student's need for financial aid, announced last week that it had sharply reduced its estimates of the amount parents should contribute to their children's college educations in 1975 - 76. The action, which knocked from $570 to $1,360 off the amount parents were expected to pay, was prompted by fears of soaring inflation, spokesman for service said. As a result, thousands of Michigan receive aid will probably be eligible for increased funds.

Financially independent students will not be affected.

"There wouldn't be any problem if the funds for aid were proportionately increased," said Henry Dykema, MSU's director of financial aid. "But I'm not sure there is going to be an increase in funds. In fact, I'm pretty sure there won't be, especially in federal programs." At MSU, over 7,000 students have some kind of financial help.

Federal financial aid programs supply an estimated 50 per cent of all aid given to college students in the state.

Colleges and universities use the analysis of parental contribution to determine how much aid in the form of loans, grants or workstudy jobs a student requires. Most universities in Michigan use the service's analysis except for the University of Michigan which uses the American Coilege Testing Service.

The ACT is expected to make similar

Even without the rising number of students eligible for aid, federal programs are already strained, Dykema said.

For example, at MSU for the second time in two years, almost all federal funds have already been committed for the year, he said. All of the Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant's $1.3 million has been committed and almost all of the $3.1 million available under the National Direct Student Loan program has been promised to students.

Students applying for aid winter and spring terms will be unable to receive help from those programs, Dykema said. Meanwhile, state officials have asked for a $2.5 million increase in funding for their programs. The increase if approved, would only take care of the increased need of students who already receive aid.

Farm products drop in price

Prices of raw farm products dropped 2 per cent from Aug. 15 to Sept. 15, the first decline since last spring, the Agriculture Dept. said Monday.

The Crop Reporting Board said lower prices for cattle, hogs, calves, potatoes, dry beans, lambs, soybeans and corn were mostly responsible.

However, officials said prices rose during the month for eggs, milk, broiler chickens and wheat.

The decline ended a midyear gain in the farm price index which began with a 6 per cent boost from June 15 to July 15. The index rose 3 per cent in the month that ended Aug. 15.

Army appeals Calley release

The Army asked Monday that William L. Calley Jr. be kept locked up while they appeal an order overturning his My Lai murder conviction.

A 15 - page brief filed for the Army in the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday asked that U.S. District Court Judge J. Robert Elliott's order to free Calley be changed to give the Army the option of giving Calley another trial, rather than releasing him.

In addition, the Army asked that Elliott's order be suspended pending appeal.

Calley, 31, has less than two months to serve before he is eligible for parole review.

Ecevit's coalition attempt fails

Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit abandoned his attempts Monday to form a new coalition government, and President Fahri Koruturk asked Ecevit's chief rival, former Premier Suleyman Demirel, to try.

Ecevit cited differences among coalition parties over the Cyprus issue and cultural, educational and economic matters as causing his withdrawal from leadership.

Meanwhile, Turkish Cypriot leaders agreed Monday to allow freed Greek - Cypriot prisoners of war to return to their homes in Turkish - controlled areas.

The agreement, announced by a U.N. spokesman, will allow resumption of the exchange of POWs interrupted last Thursday.

Auto settlement prevents layoff

A tentative agreement was reached early Monday between the Delco - Remy division of General Motors and 14,000 striking United Auto Workers whose work stoppage threatened to idle more than 100,000 other workers nationwide.

The agreement between Delco and officials of UAW Local 662 was announced shortly before 5 a.m., ending a 43 - hour bargaining session that began Saturday. The workers struck Wednesday after going months without a local contract.

A General Motors spokesman said over the weekend that a prolonged strike could cause the company to idle more than 100,000 employees nationwide.

Union officials said they expected the contract to be put to a membership vote today for ratification.

Hearings begin on dogfight ban

Law enforcement officers joined humane groups Monday in urging that dogfighting, for sport or exhibition be made a federal crime.

They testified as a House subcommittee opened hearings on a bill that would make it a federal crime to ship dogs across state lines for the purpose of fighting.

Duncan Wright, president of the American Dog Owners Assn., a humane group, said federal law is needed "to stop the incredible cruelty associated with dogfighting."

"One has only to see a dog tear another's eye out or to see a dog attempting to fulfill his master's wish by standing to fight on the stump of a broken and torn leg, to realize the terrible cruelty," he said.

3 Nixon aides begin trial

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica will begin the Watergate coverup trial today with five defendants

With 24 hours to go before the start of jury selection, Sirica granted Monday a request from Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski that former White House aide Gordon Strachan be given a

The renewed request from Strachan's lawyers that the conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury charges against him be dismissed was turned down by Sirica. Among the five remaining defendants are three of former President Richard Nixon's closest advisers, H.R. Haldeman, John D. Erhlichman and former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell. Meanwhile, Sirica tried in a closed hearing Monday to clear up remaining legal issues.

Among those apparently called to testify at the closed hearing was former White House chief of staff Haldeman, whose lawyers are questioning the accuracy of transcripts of White House tapes prepared by the special prosecutor's office.

Another issue is whether the 33 presidential tapes the prosecutors want used as evidence can be authenticated without an appearance in the courtroom by Nixon.

While the transcripts question is likely to be cleared up before Sirica begins questioning a pool of 1,000 prospective jurors, the authentication issue is likely to be held off for a week or 10 days. Strachan's separate trial is unlikely to begin before the end of the main Watergate trial, expected to take a minimum of three months. In his order, Sirica said the legal issues Strachan raised merit a separate pre - trial hearing, for which there was no time before the main trial begins.

At issue in Strachan's case is testimony he gave to a Watergate grand jury in exchange for what he believes to be the promise that he would not be prosecuted.

The former personal aide to Haldeman claims that when the immunity deal fell through, the special prosecutor's office improperly used the grand jury testimony as part of the evidence

In a related development, action by Congress to overturn former President Richard Nixon's agreement for destruction of his White House tapes by 1984 was urged Monday at a House

Now a group of California con men are exploiting them. Ingham County Prosecuting Attorney Raymond L. Scodeller said a number of people in the Lansing area have received letters from a California firm, telling them they might be unlocated heirs.

The letters come from a place calling itself the California Probate Document Service. They identify the deceased person, give the date of death, value of the estate and indicate that the recipient may or may not be an heir to the estate.

The company says it will provide copies of certain documents filed in the estate for a charge of $9.98.

Alex Schwartzkopf, investigator for the prosecuters office, said that the documents do not actually indicate if the person is a legal heir and the company requests that the person send more money for additional documents.

Schwartzkopf said the prosecutor's office has received complaints from four or five people, all named Smith. There are approximately 850 Smiths in the Lansing telephone directory.

Morley Smith, 549 Vanderveen,

Mason, received one of the letters and, thinking that it was a little suspicious, took it to the prosecutor's office.

"I wasn't going to send them any money," Smith said. "I figured they were just trying to make money by taking advantage of a common name."

Smith said the letter stated that the estate was worth $62,000 but he doubted that the person named in the letter was related to him.

Smith, who works at Motor Wheel in Lansing, said a Smith who works on the other end of the assembly line told him that two of his brothers received the same letter.

Schwartzkopf said his office contacted the Probate Court in Los Angles and found that there is a legitimate Smith estate.

But people who receive the letter and think they might be an heir could contact the court themselves instead of sending for the documents, Schwartzkopf said.

He said the company is being investigated by U.S. postal inspectors and the California Attorney General.

Schwartzkopf explained that the company's actions might be legal since its letter states only that the person may or may not be a legal heir.

Auto repair bill may complicate servicing woes

By JOHN TINGWALL State News Staff Writer

If you drive around campus in your parents' old, rusted out '64 Mercury, and if you have experienced problems in getting it repaired, you can probably count on having the same problems next year if an auto repair bill, geared to assist the consumer, becomes law.

If, on the other hand, you are driving around in your 1975 Mustang graduation gift, and meet all the warranty requirements at the dealership, you could receive better service in the coming year, thanks to the same bill.

The auto repair bill, which was passed by the state Senate Friday and now awaits the governor's approval, will require all auto repair facilities that do major repair work to register with the secretary of

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, would also require that a certified mechanic be present in each area of service the facility performs.

The bill would establish a mechanism for the investigation of complaints by customers and allow the secretary of state to suspend or revoke registration of a facility or a mechanic's license for fraud or incompetency.

In addition, some 81 amendments were tacked onto the bill by a myriad of interest groups, including Common Cause, service station dealers, automobile manufacturers, oil companies, the governor and the secretary of state.

Nelson believes the amendments have substantially weakened the bill, but Sen. Philip O. Pittenger, R-Lansing, whose State Affairs Committee sent the revised bill up for approval, called it a more practical and enforceable bill.

"Most of the amendments were added on to insure passage of the bill," Pittenger said. The governor will probably approve it, and we can find through experience where the bill is too tough and where it is too weak." Nelson, though, claims the bill is less than he had originally hoped for and not what the consumer deserves. He supported the changes only because of the possibility of having no legislation at all.

effects the new legislation will have on student automobile service.

"We have trained mechanics and we save bad parts removed from the car to show the owner," one area station manager said. "If we're going to exceed the estimate on repair work, we call the owners and tell them."

The station manager said he doubted licensing would cure many problems, since auto-owners will either have difficulty proving negligence or will not follow through on court action.

Unlocked doors key to dorm thefts

By STEVE ORR State News Staff Writer

An MSU scenario: The unsuspecting freshman (or maybe the forgetful upperclassman) leaves his residence hall room, stamming the door behind him as he races toward the cafeteria and another residence hall meal. Without thinking, he fails to lock his door. Enter the evil criminal. With an unhealthy glint in his eye, he heads straight for the poor student's $500 stereo system. Before the student has managed to consume even one forkful of his Johnny Marzetti in the cafeteria, the thief is walking out the back door with the stereo in his arms.

A rash of larcenies such as this one last week in Wilson Hall has focused attention on an early - semester rise in dorm room

The chief factor in the thefts, according to Gary North, residence halls coordinator, has been unlocked doors.

"We try to stress to students that by not locking their rooms when they leave, they are not only risking their own possessions but those of their roommates and suitemates," North said.

So far this term North and the residence halls people have not been completely successful in getting students to lock their

Major Adam Zutaut, captain of campus police, said that the number of larcenies reported has been "exceptionally Zutaut said most of the thefts have taken place in the early evening hours while the residence halls are still open to the general public. Mostly wallets, watches and jewelry have been reported stolen.

One night early last week West Wilson Hall was hit with two thefts of purses from rooms. The following night, East Wilson Hall was hit seven times, with students on the upper three floors suffering losses of watches and wallets. In each case, the rooms were left unlocked.

Every residence hall conducts a campaign early in fall term to emphasize to students the importance of locking their doors. However, as one head residence hall advisor put it, meetings to discuss security and other hall business are usually "poorly attended." As a result, many freshmen never learn the dangers of an unlocked, empty room - and many upperclassmen never remember -- until it is too late.

Bell stomps stampless

It looks as if Ma Bell has just lost her maternal instinct. She is also eating her words. In 1972 John deButts, chairman of the board of American Telephone and Telegraph (ATT) said, "Our business exists for no other reason than for the service it provides the public." Now that line is being exposed as the PR propaganda it is.

Two ATT telephone divisions on the East and West costs have already started refusing bills that arrive with postage due. So when a typically inflated phone bill is paid, but the stamp is missing, Ma Bell refuses to accept it. The bill is sent to rot in the dead letter file, service gets cut and the charge for reinstating service is over five bucks. So it is a good racket for ATT all the way around.

The two telephone divisions said they are losing money. But the figures cited so far are less than .1 per cent of ATT's annual $2.5 billion profit. And the amount of letters received postage due are less than two per cent of the two divisions' annual volume. It is a pointed reminder of the intolerance and plain greed of a multi-billion dollar corporation when it begins quibbling over 10-cent stamps.

If ATT must alleviate this "very serious situation," as they term it, why not prosecute instead of persecute? The law allows them that option. Or better yet, they could follow the Brooklyn Union Gas Co.'s example. It simply pays the postage on the return envelopes it includes with the bills and adds 10 cents to the tab.

Meanwhile, Ma Bell on the two coasts is discovering that her new intolerance does not solve her problem since postage due letters keep coming. Hopefully Michigan Bell will examine some other options before she stumbles on the same wayward path as her sisters.

Environmental 'trade-off' too costly

IT BECAME NECESSARY TO DESTROY THE BIMRONMENT TO SAVE IT.

The language we use is a clue to our seriousness. Consider the word "tradeoff." Ever since anxieties about the physical environment broke into the consciousness of the public about five years ago, leaders in government, industry and labor have routinely asserted their own dedication to protecting our air, water and soil.

But then they speak of the need to make the right tradeoff between the fight against pollution and the fight against inflation and recession and the energy shortage. At recent meetings in Pittsburgh and Detroit preceding President Ford's economic Summit Conference, businessmen actually deplored restraints on pollution because such regulations require investment of corporate funds in equipment that does not contribute to the production of goods.

"While the objectives of such (pollution control) programs are indisputably desirable, they should be balanced against the burdens they place on the economy to determine where the true public interest lies," Donald Gaudion, chairman of the National Assn. of Manufacturers, said.

In reality, the drag on profitability from pollution controls, though real, is relatively small. Even if the drag were greater, such controls would be essential. But they are only a small beginning. To talk about cost - benefit analysis and environment vs. economy tradeoffs is to show a fundamental misunderstanding of what is involved. The environment is not yesterday's "crisis" already superseded by new, more fashionable crises. Neither is it just one more factor to be considered along with dozens of others in making social and economic decisions.

The environment is not a crisis or a problem at all. Rather, it is the context in which all crises and problems have to be analyzed and judged. The fundamental truth is that the industrial civilization that has developed in the last 250 years is steadily poisoning the biosphere - the precious envelope of air and water in which human life exists. Unless our industrial civilization is fundamentally altered and its prophecies of change subjected to moral and scientific control, human life will cease to exist, perhaps in the lifetimes of our children.

Doomsday is a profoundly repugnant concept, as each of us finds it impossible to grasp emotionally the inevitability of death. The death of all mankind is inherently difficult to imagine. Yet in the midst of busy, happy lives, most of us buy life insurance, and some even buy cemetary plots. If we individually can take account of the certainty of death, we can do so as a society once we become convinced that the possibility of collective death is real.

Scientists in every discipline are bringing forth evidence of industrialism's silent, insidious threat to extinguish human life. As with the relationship between smoking cigarets and fatal diseases, the early denials are loud, but the unanswerable evidence steadily mounts.

Scientists and scientific writers try to tell parts of the story while there is still time. Rachel Carson in "Silent Spring" warns against pesticides; Barry Commoner in "The Closing Circle" tells of an American way of life based on chemicals and synthetics that is overloading nature, and Neil Hostert in "Supertanker" depicte the menace of oil spills to the world'

Those who heed science's warning even score a few small victories. By strenuous effort Congress was disuaded from authorizing a supersonic transport plane to rival the Anglo - French Concorde. From its exhaust, an SST spews oxides of nitrogen that inhibit the formation of ozone. It is the layer o ozone 10 to 30 miles above the Earth that provides a shield against excessive ultraviolet radiation from the sun and thereby makes human life on this planet possible.

Walter Sullivan, science editor of the New York Times, reported Thursday that scientists calculate that gases used in aerosol cans and in refrigeration systems are far more ruthless than nitrogen oxides in depleting the earth's life - sustaining ozone. How long will it take to persuade industry to phase out the use of these

Remembering the SST controversy, one cannot be optimistic. It was hard to counteract business and labor lobbyists and still make clear that something even more important than the jobs of workers or the profits of the Boeing Company were at stake. Even today, the Concorde makes occasional flights, and the American military SST make many. Western peoples who have been brought up for generations to believe in the promises of technology still find it hard to recognize these planes for what they are poisonous toys and harbingers of man's

The biosphere has inviolable limits. Technology can disrupt nature but not transcend it. The need everywhere is for products that are biodegradable and for prophecies that respect nature's intricate balances. In Detroit, in Pittsburgh, in manufacturing centers around the world. be they communist or capitalist, men have to reorder their economic affairs according to one principle - learn to live within nature's constraints or die. Nature knows nothing of tradeoffs.

Will U.S. buy rich VP?

Can a man who has personal and family interests in the biggest and most powerful businesses in the world make it as vice president after Watergate?

Nelson A. Rockefeller, Gerald Ford's vice president designate, has been criticized within the House Rules Committee hearings on his nomination for everything from his stand on abortion to his responsibility for the Attica prison massacre.

Yet, though mistakes and differences of opinion can be regarded by Congressional veterans as mere specks on a 40 - year record of public service, the rules committee must give serious consideration to the question of whether Rockefeller's financial holdings constitute a significant conflict of interest.

Richard Nixon's presidency was riddled with gutter corruption. Politicians and policies were bought and sold almost at random. But does Rockefeller's wealth place him immediately in the ranks of saints rather than sinners?

For instance, Rockefeller has inherited and expanded a legacy in oil wealth including interests in Standard Oil Co. and Exxon Corp., the largest oil company in the world. It also is connected with the Arabian American Oil Co., a conglomerate of four American companies and the government of Saudi Arabia. Aramco was involved in the implementation of last winter's oil embargo.

With credentials like that it is not clear where Rockefeller's loyalties will lie, when decisions about energy supplies and how the U.S. should obtain them are made Rockefeller should rid himself of some of his oil trappings to avoid charges of conflict of interest if he becomes vice president.

Privacy is a Rockefeller tradition, and so well guarded is the extent of the Rockefeller wealth that nobody, not even a congressional committee will be able to track down every Rockefeller dollar. Nelson Rockefeller is only a cog in a family machine whose assets are stashed away in a half dozen foundations and 100 or more

Though he has the blotch of the Attica Prison riot on his record, Rockefeller is not primarily a "rich man's" politician. He has supported organized labor and has been an advocate of liberal causes such as civil rights and abortion reform.

If he lives up to his "liberal" Republican reputation he may become an adequate compliment to Jerry Ford's traditional conservatism. Yet Rockefeller's financial clout could allow him to increase his wealth and the power of big business during a term as vice president. Therefore, if he is confirmed, Rockefeller's financial dealings should be monitored as closely as possible.

VIEWPOINT: STUDENT UNION

Democratic participation called for

The following viewpoint is taken from the preamble of the proposed constitution for the MSU Student Workers' Union and expresses the philosophy of the organizing

A mass organizational meeting of the Student Workers' Union will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in 105 S. Kedzie Hall, further information, contact the Interim Organizing Committee, c/o Tim Cain, ASMSU president, Student Services

Workers organize in labor unions to struggle for more control over their lives and for meaningful participation in the decisions which affect their lives. True democracy is not limited to the formal electoral process, but rather, must be extended to the workplace as well. Labor unions are one form of workers' efforts to achieve these goals.

We recognize that we have come to MSU primarily as students. But, as parttime employes of the University and as future fulltime members of the labor force, we see ourselves as workers and identify our interests with those of other workers. There is no conflict of interest between our efforts, through unionization, to gain better terms and conditions of employment and the welfare of other segments of the labor force.

Universities, in addition to their educational and cultural functions, play many other roles in our society: they are among the largest holders of stocks and bonds in U.S. corporations; they are major purchasers of goods and services; they are crucial in training and socializing the labor force of future generations: their research and development is heavily relied upon by government and private industry; they are intimately involved in the formulation and implementation of government policy, foreign and domestic, and they are themselves major employers of both student and nonstudent labor. In these many capacities, universities are similar to other major public and private institutions in American society, and workers' organization in unions to protect and promote their interests is as necessary in universities as in private industry and in

Collective bargaining is one of the expressions of the workers' right to promote their interests. These interests are promoted in two ways: by improving the terms and conditions of employment and by striving to develop the full creative, human potential of every member of the society. In addition to working for the interests of their own membership, unions can also be a progressive political force for social change in the nation. Unions have an important role to play in working for the guarantee of decent health care, child care, education, housing and nutrition for all in a society whose priorities presently give precedence to the maximization of profits and the production of superfluous consumer luxuries and gadgets. These values of our society must be drastically reordered to give the highest priority to eliminating the alienation and dehumanization of our lives. Unions can work for the replacement of bureaucracy and hierarchy by democratic participation. In addition to achieving and maintaining a high degree of democratic participation and selfgovernance, unions strive to achieve harmony and unity among all workers. This includes not only those workers within their own particular ranks, but also involves acting in cooperation with those on other labor organizations, and those workers not formally organized, both in this country and the rest of the world. We are especially aware of the need to overcome the discriminatory and unequal treatment of women, blacks, native Americans, Spanish - speaking and other minorities in American society. Antagonisms among workers along sexual and racial lines harm the interests of all workers. Therefore we are dedicated to working against all such divisions and for the unity of all workers.

Unions are under a solemn obligation to represent members forcefully and effectively in negotiations with management and to conduct internal union affairs according to high democratic

Rocky's stuff makes dreams

Once in a while I have a fantasy that is so great I want to share it with everybody. This is my latest pipe dream:

A man comes into my office with a large suitcase. "Hi," he says. "My name's Nelson Rockefeller, but my friends call me "I'm sorry," I say. "I'm not interested in buying anything."

'No, you don't understnad. I'm going to be Vice President of the United States and, in order to prove there is no conflict of interest, I've decided to give up all my worldly goods."

"That's very nice, but why come to

"Well," Rockefeller replies, "I just don't want to give my worldly goods to anyboay. I want to give my fortune to a person who has a responsibility toward the public and will not abuse the power that money brings - someone who won't just throw it away on wine, women and song."

"I can see that," I say.

"Happy and I were talking the other night with some friends and your name came up. They said you would be the only person who would know what to do with great sums of wealth."

I blush. "That's very nice, Rocky, but I just couldn't accept your money. After all, I hardly know you."

"Look," Rocky says, opening up the suitcase, "I've talked it over with my brothers and they are in complete agreement. They want to make you an honorary member of the family. They can't think of anybody they'drather share their empire with."

I hold up my hand. "I'm sorry, but taking another man's fortune is out of the question. Just for curiosity's sake, though, what are we talking about?"

"Roughly $182 million, including trusts for all the children."

I whistle. "It's very tempting, Rocky, but if this ever got out my colleagues in the press corps would think you were trying to buy me."

"No one will ever know," he replies as he takes a large stack of securities out of his suitcase and throws them on my desk. "What are those?" I ask.

"Three hundred and eight thousand shares of Exxon. And here are 206,000 shares of Standard Oil of California, and here is a stack of taxfree municipal bonds worth $10 million."

"Please," I tell him, "you're getting my desk all messed up."

Rocky keeps going back into the suitcase. "You want IBM stock, I have IBM stock; you want Caterpillar Tractor, I've got Caterpillar Tractor. Here, take my 17,000 shares of Dow Chemical."

"Look," I tell him, "I'm awfully busy. I have an appointment with my barber in 15 minutes. Perhaps you could come back

"Don't send me away," Rocky begs. "You're the only one who knows what to do with inherited wealth. How can I go back to Happy and my brothers and tell them you turned me down?"

"This means a lot to you, doesn't it, Rocky?"

He's practically in tears. "I've wanted to be Vice President of the United States all my life. The only thing that has stopped me has been my personal fortune. Give mea break."

"Well," I say as I start stacking the stocks and bonds neatly on my desk, "I'll take the money this one time. But don't let it happen again." "Happy and I will be eternally grateful," he says. I'm embarrassed. "Please get off your knees, Rocky. I would have done it for anybody. Maybe you can do a favor for me sometime."

Is the State News peddling racism and ignorance? This is the question that came to my mind as I read the Welcome Week Edition of the State News. In section D, page 5, you carried an article by Judy Rypma on "Foreign Languages Have Many Advantages," from which I quote: "Have you ever thought about owning a business in Hong Kong? Or how about trekking through the jungles of Africa and chatting casually with the natives? Or does the idea of cruising around the world interest

The attitude portrayed in that quote is no longer acceptable as an innocuous honest tongue - in - cheek mistake in a university such as this. It is a blatantly racist, patently ignorant, and potentially dangerous attitude which constitutes a serious indictment and an abuse of the educational opportunities which we offer

I find it extremely distressing to note that in 1974, 14 years after the establishment of a major program in African Studies here at MSU our campus newspaper can still insult us by peddling this kind of nonsense.

It is a canon of good judgment and good taste that those who seek to educate and inform others must first seek to educate and inform themselves. We require this perspective from our professors; we should require no less from our student leaders and our campus media.

There are well over 70 courses with information about Africa offered at both graduate and undergraduate levels during the school year at MSU in fields ranging from agricultural economics to zoology. In the context of such abundance, to plead ignorance is irresponsible.

I invite the State News to redeem itself from this embarrassing episode by requiring its staff to liberate themselves from the shackles of intellectual and cultural parochialism and to recognize the exciting opportunities which exist for dialog with the world outside. That is what a university education should be all about!

Hurricane Fifi worries student from Honduras

By MIKE ARNETT State News Staff Writer

Edgardo Alegria spent the weekend wondering whether his family was alive. Most MSU students enjoyed a few carefree days with little homework and the threat midterm still far away. But Alegria, junior, 483 E. McDonel Hall, could only hope his family was not among the 7,000 killed 12 days ago when Hurricane Fifi devastated his

He wanted to check just to be sure. But communication with his family was mpered because the storm had severely damaged the country's telephone system.

Help came from a foreign student adviser, August Benson. Benson told Alegria about Bruce Tanner, a social worker at St. Lawrence Hospital in Lansing, who had offered the use of his ham radio to contact friends or relatives in Honduras.

Alegria sought Tanner's help Thursday. Tanner, through a radio operator in Honduras, was able to reach a man who knew Alegria's father's secretary. It would take couple days for him to check on Alegria's family, the man said. Tanner also discovered that Choluteca had, in fact, been damaged. This made

Megia's wait for information even more difficult. "I hope that it was a mistake," Alegria said Friday. "The city of Choloma was almost ompletely destroyed. Perhaps they are confusing it with Choluteca." And so Alegria spent the long weekend, trying to be optimistic, but worried

Sunday Alegria contacted Tanner. The news was good - his parents and two

LISBON, Portugal (AP) - Young leftist military leaders forced Gen. Antonio de Spinola to quit as Portugal's president Monday and a left - leaning, three - man committee began running the country.

The final blow to Spinola's hold on the presidency, which he assumed after a coup overthrew Premier Marcello Caetano last April, was the failure by his rightist supporters to carry off a weekend rally to. express their support. Spinola canceled the rally after Communists and other leftists strongly denounced it and threatened open violence to prevent it.

But the end had been coming for some time for the 64 - year - old general, who the leftists felt was proceeding too slowly and with too much caution in instituting reforms, including the final termination of Portugal's control over its African territories.

"In this general climate of anarchy, where everyone dictates his own law, crisis and chaos are inevitable - in flagrant contradiction to the purposes of the movement" that brought him to power, Spinola told the Portugese over national television.

He said the movement had been pledged to bringing concord among all political bellefs, but added: "This harmony will never be possible when on one hand the declared chiefs of some political parties make appeals to good sense, and on the other hand respective active groups choose the path of psychological warfare through the big news media and even through violence in flagrant negation of liberty.'

The Junta of National Salvation, which originally comprised seven generals and admirals, announced that three generals, Jaime Silveiro Marques of the army and Diogo Neto and Carlos Galvao de Melo of the air force, were ousted with Spinola.

The announcement said the military leadership thus was purged of its

Francisco Costa Gomes, who had been considered a top aide to Spinola, was designated president, to rule with two navy captains, Jose Baptista Pinheiro de Azevado and Antonio Alva Rosa Coutinho. The navy men are staunch leftists. The shakeup in Lisbon probably means the Portuguese right, numbering perhaps 20 per cent of the electorate, will be beaten badly in elections scheduled next spring. The voters are to choose a constituent assembly to write a new constitution and eventually elect a president.

One of Spinola's first acts as president was to revoke a long - standing ban on the Communist party, and it has since emerged as the wellorganized leader of the left with a strong hold on labor.

Portugal's slow retreat from Africa was a major sticking point between Spinola

The junta ousted Caetano mainly on the pledge to end a decade of costly warfare against liberation movements in Portuguese Guinea, Mozambique and Angola. Spinola was not an active participant in the coup, but the junta named him president largely because of a book he wrote which said Portugal could not win in Africa.

Political observers in southern Africa said Spinola's resignation could trigger a white revolt in Angola, the last of Lisbon's African territories which has not signed an independence agreement.

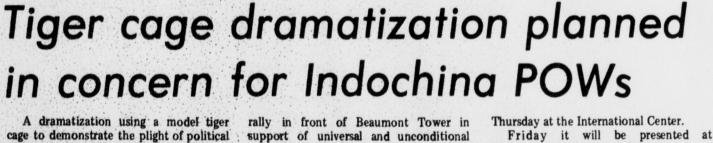

In Luanda, the Angolan capital, the chief of the territory's ruling junta announced an hour after the resignation that he was reimposing press censorship. The city remained calm, however, and business went on as usual.

Adm. Rosa Coutinho said censorship would be "temporary, under the present circumstances.'

After granting Mozambique independence, effective next June, Spinola promised Angolans their future was in his hands and that decolonization would come slowly.

Spinola's resignation brings the possibility that Portugal will abandon that promise and quickly turn over the colony to one or several of the groups in the splintered Angola liberation movement. A white revolt fizzled in Mozambique, but the Portuguese settlers of Angola are more numerous and have more to lose in the mineral - rich territory.

A dramatization using a model tiger cage to demonstrate the plight of political prisoners still held in South Vietnamese jails will be staged at noon today in front of East Lansing City Hall, 410 Abbott Road, as part of the East Lansing Peace Center's Week of Concern.

A tiger cage is a small cell which is usually used to incarcerate political prisoners.

Betsy Roman of the peace center said that the Indochina war will not end "as long as the U.S. government gives one cent to the corrupt and dictatorial regime of President Thieu, as long as political prisoners rot in South Vietnamese jails and as long as President Ford believes he can grant something less than universal and unconditional amnesty to all victims of that war."

Art critics also warned women to limit their work to water colors and drawings. Oil painting, women were informed, was too difficult for them. Yet despite such stilting advice, women have produced significant art for centuries. Their work and names are being rediscovered in a new course this fall called "Women in Art."

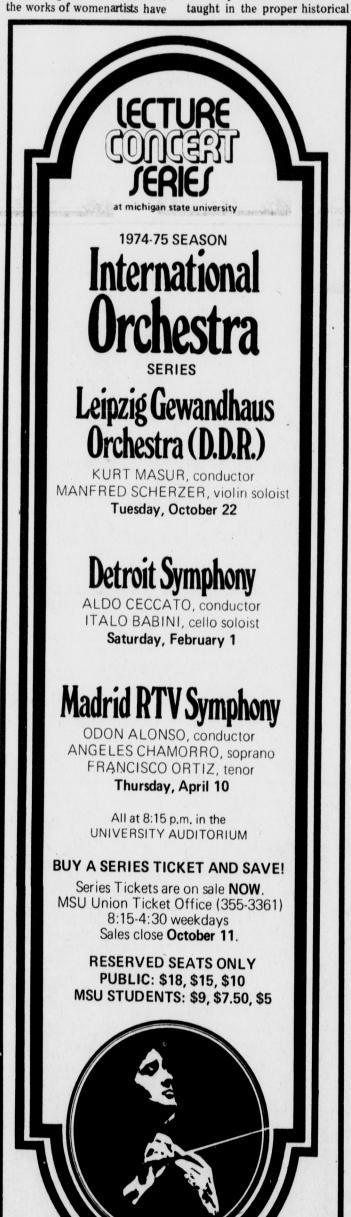

Barbara Braathen, an instructor in art history who is conducting the course, spent much of the summer researching the subject of women artists.

"I began with as much knowledge as anyone would have on this subject," Braathen said. "I had no idea there was this much information

FILM RECALLS BRIGHT MUSICAL ERA

'That's Entertainment' sparkles

By EDD RUDZATS State News Reviewer

Any film that has Fred Astaire dancing on the walls and ceiling of a hotel room, Gene Kelly hoofing it up with an animated mouse, Esther Williams rising out of consecutively more opulent swimming pools, and Joan Crawford trying to tap dance cannot fail to bring a smile. And that is exactly what "That's Entertainment" does -leaves you smiling and snapping your fingers to the jaunty tunes that dance

through your mind.

Written, produced and directed by Jack Haley Jr., "That's Entertainment" is a collection of film clips from the Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer vaults, with each sequence of clips focusing on an aspect of the American movie musical that MGM popularized throughout the '30s, '40s and '50s. The clips are strung together with a running on camera commentary by star performers from the MGM

This narration is delivered by an all - star cast that includes Frank Sinatra, Elizabeth Taylor, Peter Lawford, James Stewart, Mickey Rooney, Gene Kelly, Donald O'Connor, Debbie Reynolds, Fred Astaire, Liza Minnelli and Bing Crosby. Each at one point in the film takes over the chores of relating, in almost overly glowing terms, how MGM made what they describe as the finest musicals that Hollywood ever produced.

This is not to say that MGM was not responsible for some of the best musicals to grace the silver screen, such as the classics "Singin' in the Rain,"

"An American in Paris," "The Band Wagon," "Gigi," "The Wizard of Oz" and "Meet Me in St. Louis." However. superlative phrases fly about almost as quickly as the performers' feet, and after an hour the whole thing seems more like an ad for MGM products than an entertainment package.

Made to celebrate the golden anniversary of MGM studios,

"That's Entertainment" boasts plenty of fancy footwork and simple unpretentious fun. It is a light and breezy film, filled with infectious merriment as it recalls the days when filmmakers set out simply to make people happy. There were no symbolic messages in those days, and the plots were often thin, but there was lots of singing and dancing. "That's

mood of these films.

Yet for all its joy, "That's Entertainment" is touched by a sadness that is inescapable. Part of it is planned, in order to show the studio in a state of decay, but the marked contrast between the present day appearance of some of the narrators and their former selves at times proves more disheartening than heartwarming. Still, the good old days of moviemaking are gone and there is nothing to be done about it.

Since this film puts a smile on your face and a melody in your heart as no other film recently has, "That's Entertainment," currently playing at the Campus Theater, is a must for musical lovers

New dance group gets underway

By JUNE E.K.DELANO State News Staff Writer

Enthusiastic dance fans at MSU can add at least two new concerts to their calendars this year as the newly founded MSU Repertory Dance Company gets under way.

There is not much you can say about UCLA's surprisingly easy 56 - 14 whopping of the Spartans Saturday. Kinda makes you

After all, how could a team manage to squander a game so badly after posting such impressive victories in its first two

The answer is not simple, but, nevertheless, the question still looms in the minds of the Spartans as they prepare to face Notre Dame Saturday at Spartan Stadium.

The game with UCLA was built up to be the true test of whether MSU was actually a good football team, or whether it was still a couple of strides away. The reality of the lop - sided outcome, however, was too much for anyone to digest, including Spartan coach Denny Stolz. He is pointing toward this week's battle with the Irish as an indicator for things to come.

"I don't know what happened with our team against UCLA," Stolz said. "The defense just completely collapsed. We were prepared, we knew what they were going to do and they still did it. I don't have any explanation. The game against Notre Dame will truly let us know what kind of football players we have."

The Spartan players were also in disarray about the loss, and most of them agreed that the team's real potential was not displayed. "We weren't playing football out there," Spartan defensive captain Jim Taubert said. "In order to perform physically, you have to be prepared mentally. After they (UCLA) got out to such a big lead, I think we were flat.'

Hopes for the future

As the 1974 season began, much optimism centered around MSU's hopes for the future. The Spartan staff had completed one of their most lucrative recruiting hauls in many years, luring five high school All - Americans and a dozen other prep greats.

But after the Spartans thoroughly waxed Northwestern 41 - 7 in the season opener and came back the next week with a 19-0 shutout of Syracuse, optimism ran high for a possible profitable season this year.

The Bruins proved themselves to be a much better ball team than either Northwestern or Syracuse and perhaps brought the Spartans chances for success this season back into perspective.

MSU is a young team that is flocked with talent at almost every position. Stolz knows this, and though his team boasts a 1. - 0 record in Big Ten play and still is very much in the picture for a successful loop campaign, he says they still have a way to

"You have to be patient with them," he said. "They're going to play that way sometimes. It takes time. What we're going to have to do is keep on working and improving.

The coming weeks will reveal just what kind of team the Spartans do have. Following the clash with the Irish, MSU will go up against arch - foe Michigan and then yet - unbeaten Illinois.

Notre Dame will be entering Saturday's game with blood in its eyes, following a shocking weekeng loss to Purdue. The Spartans, who have always played well against the Irish, can certainly get things back in gear with an impressive showing. The true test was not the UCLA loss, but instead is how well MSU can bounce back

Spartans will be better

By STEVE STEIN

MSU football coach Denny Stolz ended his weekly press luncheon interview Monday with a firm promise.

"We'll be better Saturday, gentlemen, we'll be better," Stolz

Arch - rival Notre Dame comes to town this weekend for its yearly battle with the Spartans and MSU would like to get back onto the winning track against the Irish. The Spartans were clobbered by UCLA, 56 - 14, last Saturday night to drop their seasonal record to 2 - 1.

The Irish also saw their mark drop to 2 - 1 last weekend when Big Ten opponent Purdue upset them in South Bend, 31 - 20.

"I was hoping they would be undefeated and ranked number one in the country," Stolz said. "If we're gonna play them we might as well have them ranked high."

Stolz said his number one objective Saturday will be a good running game against the Irish.

"We have to move the football," the Spartan coach said. "They have an excellent defensive team. We have to run the ball against MSU's number two objective, Stolz said, will be to throttle the Irish's "best offensive weapon," quarterback Tom Clements. "We have to stop the run and the pass," Stolz said. "This is just a year on our schedule where we face a great quarterback every

Stolz said that Notre Dame will present one of the bigger defensive units the Spartans face this season. "They are huge and very physical," Stolz said: "Purdue did some things to them last week and got away with it.". The Spartan coach said the MSU defensive unit just could not stop the UCLA veer option offense, which was led by Bruin quarterback John Sciarra, an All - American candidate in his senior season. The veer offense has not been fully proven

"The jury is still out on the veer option but the other night they didn't stay out for long," Stolz said. "The most important thing is not the yardage but the fact that he (UCLA coach Dick Vermeil) had the ball 10 times and scored eight times. That's a great compliment to his coaching. "There was a big play in every sequence they had the ba Stolz added. "In between, we played pretty well out there." The Spartans outgained the Bruins on the ground, 338 to vards. MSU was led by fullback Levi Jackson, who gained yards and quarterback Charlie Baggett, who ran for 98 yards.

"The offense played a good football game again," S commented. "We felt we could run against UCLA, and we did. Stolz had much praise for Sciarra, who threw for 199 va and added 58 yards rushing.

"Sciarra is an excellent passer. He just runs so well peo think he's a running quarterback," MSU's coach said. "He super last year. I liked him best when he was on the sidelines season against us,"

Perhaps the real tipoff as to how the Spartans took the sou thrashing came when Stolz was asked if he planned any ma

Originally, the center was established by a group of Hubbard Hall students in May 1972, as a rumor control organization. At the time of its inception, student protest and activism was popular, and the center attempted to curtail the rumors asking when protests took place.

However, by fall term 1970, the protests began decreasing and the center made a transition from rumor control to general information. They moved from Hubbard Hall to the Library and expanded their services to receive all types of calls.

In fact, questions received by the center are so diverse, Kurt Schindler, information and organization coordinator of the center refers to it as a sort of "action line without a newspaper."

"We can't guarantee an answer to everything but we can certainly find out where an answer can be gotten," he said; Schindler said the center is well stocked with information concerning various organizations and current and past events. He affirmed the credibility of the center as good, saying they have contact with the Associated Press wire service in Lansing, and access to the University trunk lines.

In addition, Schindler said the center is on the mailing list of most of the University departments. They therefore sometimes act as "middleman" for certain groups to inform members of meeting

Students, prepare yourself for the call of winter and the wheezing coughs that send you scurrying to the University Health Center. But make sure you have $5 handy.

Lake Michigan level of pollution studied

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scientists are taking a close look at the bottom of Lake Michigan to help determine whether the lake will end up as polluted as Lake Erie.

A team of scientists from Argonne National Laboratory and the University of Michigan recently spent 10 days on the research ship Laurentian collecting sedimentation samples from the bottom of Lake Michigan.

David Edgington, of Argonne's radiological and environmental research division, said analysis of the samples indicated that the sedimentation rate of heavy metals has increased over the last 35 years because of high lake levels and increased shore erosion.

About 13 million tons of sediment, including heavy metals from radioactive materials, automotive exhausts and industrial wastes, enter Lake Michigan each year, he said. More sediment enters the lake along the eastern shore because of the larger number of rivers emptying into that area.

Most heavy metals settle on the bottom of the lake, but Edgington said certain geochemical processes can stir up the metals, muddying the water. Argonne and University of Michigan scientists hope to determine if those changes are occurring and what effect they will have on the lake. One process that the scientists are studying is eutrophication, one cause of pollution in Lake Erie.

"Much of this is original work," said John Robbins, of U - M's Great Lakes research division.

In a statement, Meis said he was angered and saddened by Ford's clemency program because "the President demands that I, and thousands like me, be punished for refusing to participate in the Vietnam war, even though that war is now universally regarded as our greatest national tragedy."

He contended that the requirement of up to two years of alternative service under the clemency program amounts to "involuntary servitude."

Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, who has authored a bill that would allow college students over the age of 17 to live wherever they want, has said that the legislature would bail MSU out if they could not keep the residence halls full and thus could not meet loan payments.

"Let them go into the red. I guess that's too bad. I don't think housing requirements forced on adult students are justified on the basis of that kind of financial concern," Bullard said.

Dykema said MSU students will probably be saved by the University's direct lending program. In the program, created last fall term, a student can receive a loan directly from MSU even if his loan application has been rejected by two banks.

Dykema said there is no solution to the funding problem except to convince Congress to increase financial

In 1965 he was named general manager of GM's flagship Chevrolet division and he took charge of General Motors' overseas operations, becoming senior vice president in 1972.

Estes says his introduction to GM's overseas operations was the "fastest education in international trade and finance that anybody is ever going to get in about six or seven weeks." He played a key role in setting up joint ventures with foreign manufacturers. Estes' income before stock options last year was reported in the company's proxy statement in May at $703,500 a year compared with Cole's $846,500, the fifth highest executive income in the country, and Gerstenberg's $938,000, the second highest executive income in the United

Murphy, who earned $776,125 last year before stock options, has spent 36 years on GM's financial staff. Appointed assistant treasurer in 1959, Murphy became the corporation's comptroller in 1967 and its treasurer in 1968, when he was appointed vice president in charge of the car and truck group. In 1972, Murphy leap-frogged several other vice presidents into his current position as coroprate director and vice chairman. Cole's presidency at GM was highlighted by his controversial support of the catalytic converter, the air bag safety system, and now defunct Chevrolet Corvair.

Most recently Cole supported the rotary engine, whose frequently postponed debut at GM was delayed again only last week due to what the company said were problems with emission control.

In addition to the decision on the rotary engine, Estes inherits from his predecessor the problems of inflation and sharply curbed consumer demand which has severly affected GM and other automakers this year.

East Lansing plays host to touring campaign train

It was not really a good day for a premiere.

As the clouds and rain rolled in, so did the guest of honor, a multi - ton speed demon known as the LRC, Michigan's star in mass transit and the key to a statewide publicity campaign to gather support for a $1.1 billion transportation bond proposal in November.

Cars jammed into the tiny Trowbridge Road - Harrison Road AMTRAK depot station Monday morning, and as the RC - for Light, Rapid and comfortable - cruised into town shortly before noon, it was as if a Christmas package had just been unwrapped.

Close to 200 people intermingled with Canadian National Railways representatives (the LRC was Capable of speeds up to 120 miles per hour, LRC is a prime candidate to run on Michigan's revised railways if the bond proposal passes. The LRC is lighter (by some 35 per cent), uses less energy, is less noisy and is more comfortable, said a spokesman for Alcan Canada Products, Dominion Foundries and MLW Industries, which developed it.
