U.S. cost of living rises 12.2% in 1974

WASHINGTON (AP) - Inflation clipped 12 cents off the dollars purchased in 1974 as the cost of living rose 12.2 percent - highest since World War II - controls were lifted.

The bad news was offset somewhat by the Labor Dept.'s report Tuesday that the Consumer Price Index jumped seven-tenths of a per cent in December, it was the slowest rate since a 1.1 percent increase last July.

The department said, the purchasing power of the average workers paycheck increased in December after five months of declines.

Real spendable earnings - weekly pay adjusted for taxes and inflation - for the average married worker with three dependents rose four-tenths of a per cent last month, but were still 5.4 per cent below a year ago as wages failed to keep pace with inflation.

Wholesale and retail price increases have eased in recent months, evidence that the worst inflation may be over. However, the administration has estimated that its proposed energy taxes to curb fuel consumption would add about two percentage points to its previous forecast of between 6 and 7 per cent.

The 12.2 per cent jump in consumer prices last year was the sharpest rise since World War II price controls ended in 1946 and the worst in any period unrelated to war.

War-time controls were lifted in July 1946 and prices soared 18.2 per cent that year. The Bureau of Labor Statistics began measuring consumer prices in 1913 and until last year the largest increase ever recorded in peacetime was 11.6 per cent in 1916.

Consumer prices rose 8.8 per cent in 1973 following increases of 3.4 per cent in both 1972 and 1971.

Director Albert Rees of the Council of Wage and Price Stability announced that his panel would urge business and labor to hold down prices and wage settlements in the coming months.

Rees said the current rise in prices is no longer due to the shortages and strong demand which pushed prices up through most of 1974.

"The leading elements in the process are now the rising price of energy and rising unit labor costs," he said in a speech to economists.

Higher prices for sugar and most other foods, housekeeping supplies, gas and electricity and public transportation were responsible for much of the December increase, the government said. But those increases were partially offset by price declines for beef, fresh fruits and vegetables, clothing and used cars.

In other economic developments:

• David I. Verway of the MSU Bureau of Business and Economic Research said Monday that unemployment in the state will probably be at 10.7 per cent without the tax cuts. On the national level, Verway expects 6 per cent unemployment by the end of the year, with the tax measures and 8.1 per cent without them.

He expects unemployment in Michigan to peak at 13.6 per cent next month, compared with a 9.7 per cent unemployment rate during February 1974.

• In a further move to increase the nation's money supply, the Federal Reserve Board announced Monday it is cutting the amount of money banks must keep on hand to back up deposits.

The board said the effect of the action would be to release about $6.1 billion in money previously held in reserve.

The move was the latest in a series of steps by the nation's central bank to make the flow of money easier within the recession-troubled economy.

• American Motors Corp., following in step with the nation's Big Three auto makers, Tuesday announced it will offer cash rebates of up to $600 to buyers of certain of its small cars.

American Motors said its rebates will range from $200 to buyers of all 1975 Gremlin and Hornet models to $400 for Hornet models with special equipment and on to $600 on certain Matador models.

The AMC rebate plan started Tuesday and is scheduled to end Feb. 28.

Martial arts studies: 'chattering' success

quiet, meditative religious devotees practiced the arts thousands of years ago in the Far East would never believe that the arts - kung fu, judo and karate - have become the province of Madison Avenue and the cult of millions.

"Kung Fu," starring David Carradine, consistently among the top 25 TV shows, catches the attention of millions of viewers every week. "Kung Fu" by Carl Douglas, a soulful tribute to martial arts, was the top-selling record in the country in December. Dozens of martial arts books are appearing on newsstands, and Bruce Lee movies still draw large audiences world wide as they split-second karate chops and rapid kicks and throws.

People take an interest in the martial arts and movie versions of martial arts and decide that maybe they too can become experts in this ancient art. But once they see how the sport is conducted in reality, many experience a mild surprise. Experts agree that what one watches on television is not an accurate picture of martial arts techniques.

"The television shows and Bruce Lee movies are glorified and misleading," said J. Kim, specialist in karate and judo in the MSU Health and Physical Education Dept.

Film reels are sometimes speeded up to heighten the effect of mass karate chops and flips in the air, said an employee at a local karate and judo school.

"We have lost sales because people come in thinking that the school will teach them how to jump 10 feet in the air and accomplish the feats shown on television," said the employee, who declined to be named.

Martial arts serve a deeper purpose than simply showing people how to fight 20 enemies at a time. Karate, judo and other forms started out as noncontact sports and have ties to Buddhism and other Far Eastern religions.

MSU may increase tuition rates

By PETE DALY
State News Staff Writer

the current economic woes in the state disappear overnight, a higher rate for 1975 - 76 at MSU appears

MSU administrators refuse to state in detail on that possibility, they questioned it as one result of a 1975 - 76 request that may not be met by the legislature.

All the MSU trustees approved a request to the legislature of $6,900 for 1975 - 76, or $21,691,000 was granted for the current year. The total proposed budget is $24,900, with tuition fees amounting to $1,000 of that amount - at the current rate of $14 per credit hour. After state funds are allocated, the remainder of the proposed budget would be made up of federal grants, investments, health center fees and the state economy hit by the auto industry layoffs and the state treasury weakened by repeal of the future looks grim for the MSU. When he asked universities to target budgets for 1975 - 76, he said that 96 per cent of 1974 - 75

University administrators are following guidelines from the governor's budget for factors such as inflation, fuel costs and salary recommendations working on the 96 per cent figure. Another bad omen of the future budget allowance was the cutback in December of $1.5 million in funds already allocated for the current fiscal year.

In an article in the MSU News - Bulletin of Jan. 9, 1975, President Wharton outlined the dilemma facing MSU and options available. He mentioned a reduction of nonrenew stream faculty members, decreased maintenance projects on campus streets and buildings and a student tuition increase.

Analysis

"Nevertheless, tuition remains the primary option for additional funds to make up for trimmed - down state appropriations," Wharton said.

According to Steve Terry, asst. vice president of finance, MSU tuition has never been increased in the middle of an academic year. He said it could happen, but is unlikely because students receiving financial aid would have to have it readjusted to meet the increase.

"Most financial aid agencies make their commitments long before the beginning of each school year," Terry said. "One of those is the Michigan Higher Education Assistance Authority, and we have three or four thousand kids here with that package alone."

Wharton refused on Monday to speculate further on the relative odds of a tuition increase, but he did point out that there was no increase last year of in-state tuition at MSU.

Wharton said the tuition at MSU was relatively low when compared to other state universities.

"The 1973 - 74 tuition at the University of Michigan went up a whopping amount," he said.

However, tuition at MSU has steadily increased a total of 12 per cent for in-state students since 1970. From $14 per credit hour in the fall of 1970, tuition increased $1 in 1972 and 1973 to the current rate of $16 per credit. Tuition for nonresident students here has risen 14 per cent in the same period, from $34 per credit to $37.

The ultimate decision on a tuition increase is, of course, up to the MSU Board of Trustees.

Trustee Warren Huff, D - Plymouth, said he is concerned with economic problems facing many students today.

"As far as I am concerned, I wouldn't raise student fees at all. If you raise student fees, you have to raise loans, scholarships and graduate assistantships," he said.

Another trustee, Republican Jack Stack of Alma, would also prefer to study all other possibilities of raising funds before hiking student fees.

One source of funds has just been increased, but it is only a drop in the bucket towards easing financial pressure on MSU. Entrance application fees were raised by the trustees at their meeting last Friday. That added income from an expected 30,000 applicants amounts to only $150,000 a year.

The surprising enrollment increase at MSU reported Friday also means more cash in the coffers, as long as MSU can fit the new students in without expanding class

Haig to pay for dog's journey

STUTTGART, Germany (AP) - Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. has decided to reimburse the government for what it cost to transport his dog Duncan, from Frankfurt to Stuttgart last October, a spokesman for the U. S. European Command said Tuesday.

The former White House chief of staff heard about the matter for the first time and decided to pay the $46.92 cost of the 280-mile round trip by two enlisted men to pick up the dog, the spokesman said.

Use of a staff car to transport Duncan was disclosed in Washington by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., who said this was illegal and demanded that the Army collect the costs from Haig.

The soldier who drove to Frankfurt airport to pick up Duncan and bring him back to Stuttgart said Tuesday he did it

"under protest."

"I figured with the gas shortage and our regulations, a special run for a dog was totally unauthorized," said Pfc. Marty Lopez, 19, of San Jose, Calif.

The incident occurred when Haig came from Washington to Germany to become supreme commander of allied forces in Europe and chief of the U. S. European Command in Stuttgart.

The spokesman said Haig had the dog flown from the United States in a commercial plane at his own expense and arrived himself a few hours later without knowing the dog had gone on ahead to Stuttgart.

Instead, the statement said, an officer handling Haig's arrival arrangements ordered the staff car on his own initiative when he received a telephone call from Frankfurt that the dog had arrived.

Students given greater voice in policy decisions

By BRUCE RAY WALKER
State News Staff Writer

By-laws increasing the ratio of students to faculty in the Academic Council and giving students a greater voice in policy decisions within colleges were approved Tuesday by the Academic Council.

The proposed revisions of the By-Laws for Academic Governance, which come after more than a year of debate, must be approved by the all-faculty Academic Senate and the board of trustees.

The new by-laws reduce the number of faculty on the council slightly and change the number of standing committees from 12 to eight. Student council seats increased proportionally as the number of faculty seats declined. The number of members on the standing committees has also been reduced.

"From the student viewpoint they have gained a greater proportional voice," Martin Fox, professor of statistics, said.

Fox said he felt the new document was a "mixed bag" with some good things and some bad.

Les Manderscheid, chairman of the ad hoc committee to review academic governance, agreed with Fox that the student gain was in the proportionally larger voice in the council.

"We lost four members-at-large in the streamlining process but we gained more representation in the colleges," said Gene Buckner, student member-at-large.

Buckner said that the switch to more college representatives is a good one in his opinion because a member-at-large has little accountability to any constituency.

President Wharton also said that the student had gained a greater voice at the unit academic level, this is because the new by-laws indicate that the individual college by-laws must conform with the ones just passed. The colleges and departments must provide adequate student input into the individual systems and allow student participation in policy decisions.

Wharton said the main objective when the by-law revision began over a year ago was to reduce the size of academic governance, and he felt this had been achieved.

Buckner said he felt that the by-laws would pass the Senate, but Manderscheid, Wharton and Fox were more guarded in their predictions.

Wharton and Manderscheid both indicated they hope the by-laws pass the Senate, but said they could only wait and see.

Fox said the Senate could possibly turn down the by-laws and in that case they would be returned to the council for further deliberation. Fox said if that happened he would consider trying to amend the old by-laws rather than work more on the ones just passed.

Erwin Bettinghaus, chairman of the steering committee, said he was going to attempt to set up a special meeting of the Senate for the middle of February.

"I'm very pleased that after all the work the council has put in on these by-laws they've finally passed," Wharton said after the meeting.

Grads OK publications tax proposal

Graduate students have voted to tax themselves 50 cents to support alternative student publications to the State News.

The tax, approved by the graduate students at winter term registration, will go to the Student Media Appropriations Board (SMAB), which has been collecting 50 cents from undergraduates since fall term 1974.

To date, SMAB has collected a total $34,000, but appropriated only $6,982, to Good Times magazine, a publication of Project Grapevine.

Council of Graduate Students (COGS) President George Seperich announced at a Monday night meeting that the tax proposal passed by a vote of 715 to 497. Of the 715 affirmative votes, 454 were for a 50-cent tax and 253 for a $1 tax.

About 8,700 graduate students enrolled at MSU will be taxed the 50 cents at registration from now on.

Acting SMAB chairman Dan Dever said the board now has about $27,000 left to allocate, and must decide among some 30 requests for aid.

Seperich said that COGS will announce some proposed changes in SMAB operations on Wednesday. Beginning next term COGS will have two representatives on the board.

Court rules on jury duty

Overturning one of its own previous decisions, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that states cannot automatically exclude women from jury duty or require that they volunteer in order to serve.

By an 8 to 1 vote, the court ruled that a Louisiana law which required women to go to the courthouse and volunteer in writing before they can be considered for jury duty was unconstitutional.

Five states — Missouri, New York, Alabama, Rhode Island and Tennessee — automatically excuse women from jury duty according to arguments presented to the Supreme Court. Nine other states and two-thirds of the federal judicial districts exclude women who have children in their care.

SST effects found harmless

A three-year study dispels fear that the present fleet of supersonic transports will damage the earth's protective blanket of ozone, the Dept. of Transportation said Tuesday.

The ozone blanket protects the earth from radiation that could cause skin cancer and from excessively high temperatures from the sun.

The study noted, however, the manmade changes in radiation or temperature control "will lead to serious consequences, if either supersonic or subsonic fleets are expanded to large numbers without imposing a strict limitation on engine emissions."

Ford edges Muskie in poll

President Ford holds a 46-45 edge over Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, among voters asked to choose between the two for presidency in 1976, the Harris survey said Monday.

Muskie's showing, his best since Ford entered the White House, was based on a Harris poll of 2,164 likely voters. Nine per cent listed themselves as undecided between the two as candidates.

Ford was favored over Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., 47-42 per cent, with 11 per cent unsure.

Dollar value drops sharply

The U.S. dollar fell sharply in European exchanges Tuesday under the influence of declining interest rates in the United States.

Interest rates in the United States have been declining steadily recently, making it more profitable for European investors to sell their dollars for European currencies which could then be lent out at higher rates.

Two missing in tanker fire

Two crewmen were missing and feared dead after the Cypriot tanker Lucky Era exploded and caught fire Tuesday in the lower Bahama Islands, the Coast Guard said.

Two critically injured crewmen were airlifted to Miami aboard a Coast Guard plane, said spokesman Jim Gilman. Thirty-two other crewmen, including one slightly injured, were evacuated to a Russian ship that had been diverted to the area, he said.

The explosion and fire erupted at 4:50 a.m. off the eastern reef of Mayagüez, an island in the southern portion of the Bahama chain about 450 miles southeast of Miami, officials said. The Lucky Era was en route from Puerto Rico to Nassau, Bahamas.

Cambodians take heavy losses

Cambodian government troops sent to guard narrow sections of the Mekong River suffered heavy losses Tuesday, shipping sources said, and an ammunition convoy scheduled to try to run to Phnom Penh was still in South Vietnamese waters.

Diplomatic sources also reported the convoy of tug boats pulling seven ammunition barges did not attempt to run through the 45-mile gantlet of Cambodian Communist fire to the capital.

Soviets lead steel production

The Soviet Union has regained leadership in world steel production over the United States, according to figures published Tuesday by the International Iron and Steel Institute.

In addition to the United States, Britain and Japan also showed drops in production in 1974.

Jacques Ferry, French chairman of the institute, told a news conference that steel activity is likely to remain weak in the non-Communist world during the first months of 1975, following an unprecedented drop of 40 per cent in orders during the last quarter of 1974. But he saw an upturn in the latter part of 1975.

13 killed in nightclub fire

Ten men and three women were found dead in a cramped beer storage closet after a fire early Tuesday in a Montreal night club described by police as an underworld hangout.

One of the men was shot in the back and the others apparently died of smoke asphyxiation, police said.

Their bodies were found in the padlocked closet piled atop one another among cases of beer. A juke box had been pushed against the door.

Police said they believed the fire was deliberately set with the victims locked in the closet in a gangland "settling of accounts."

Police identified the victim who had been shot in the back as Rejean Fortin, 44, manager of the Gargantua Club. One of the women victims was identified as his wife Claire. Another of the women was described as a topless dancer at the club.

Ford vows veto if Congress votes to ration gasoline

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford vowed Tuesday to veto any mandatory gasoline rationing plan voted by Congress and rejected Democratic demands that he delay imposing tariffs on imported oil.

"I will not sit by and watch the nation continue to talk about an energy crisis and do nothing about it," Ford declared in a nationally broadcast news conference, his first in six weeks.

He urged prompt congressional action on the package of economic and energy proposals he outlined last week. "By the late summer we ought to see a turnaround both as to economic activity and I hope in the unemployment figure," Ford said.

During the midafternoon question and answer session in an Executive Office auditorium, the President also:

- Disclosed he would ask Congress for another $300 million in military aid for South Vietnam, but twice sidestepped questions on whether bombing raids would be resumed against Communist insurgents. "I don't think it's appropriate for me to speculate on a matter of that kind," he said.

- Reiterated that the danger of war in the Middle East "is very serious" and that is why he administration is maximizing its diplomatic efforts with Israel and some of the Arab states.

- Voiced disappointment with Soviet rejection of the 1972 trade agreement with the United States but said détente will be "continued, broadened and expanded" because it is in the best interest of both countries.

- Said he will seek referral of action on national health insurance proposals because projected budget deficits of $30 billion this year and $45 billion next year should prohibit any new spending programs.

Reading an opening statement, Ford said he would sign a presidential proclamation this week to impose the tariffs on crude oil imports — starting at $1 on Feb. 1, going to $2 a barrel March 1 and at $3 per barrel April 1.

"It is the first step toward regaining our energy freedom," Ford said of the proclamation.

With the disclosure of his planned action, Ford rejected Democratic demands that he delay the tariff plan until Congress can act.

Chairman Al Ullman of the House Ways and Means Committee joined Democratic Sens. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Henry Jackson of Washington state in pressing for the delay.

Ford announced the tariff plan last week, and said it would be rescinded if Congress follows his proposal that a permanent $2 per barrel levy be placed on both domestic and foreign crude oil. These fees, combined with other energy proposals, would increase retail gasoline prices by about 10 cents per gallon.

Ullman said Ford has agreed to a congressional plan for splitting the permanent levy and a quick anti-recession tax cut into two separate legislative packages.

In defending his energy proposals against Democratic criticism, Ford said the revenues raised by the levies on fuel will be channeled back into the economy.

He declared this approach is far preferable to gasoline rationing, which he denounced as inequitable, unfair and a superficial answer to the energy crunch.

With rationing, the President said, "there would be simply not enough gasoline to go around... a gas rationing system would limit each driver to less than nine gallons a week."

In addition, he said, rationing would do nothing to encourage development of alternative supplies of fuel.

Jackson, a leading critic of Ford's energy program, said that "no one up here that I know is advocating mandatory gas rationing."

"It's a straw man," he told a reporter, saying the President was trying to contend that rationing was the only alternative to his program.

FBI admits possession of files on congressmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI chief Clarence M. Kelley acknowledged Tuesday that his agency maintains files on members of Congress that include unsubstantiated allegations volunteered by the public. But Kelley denied that such information is misused.

Chairman Don Edwards of the House Civil Rights subcommittee said Kelley had denied the existence of such files at hearings last year.

Edwards, D-Calif., made the assertion in announcing he has invited both Kelley and Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe to testify at hearings starting later this month on the files.

"This issue was raised by my subcommittee with the director of the FBI, Mr. Kelley, last year in hearings held on Feb. 28, 1974," Edwards said in a statement.

"At that time the director and his aides were closely questioned about the entire subject and the existence of personal or political files on members of Congress was completely denied," he said.

Edwards said Saxbe and Kelley will be asked "to lay out the full and complete story of these activities."

"The subject is much more than the FBI's maintenance on members of Congress," Edwards said. "No personal or political files of a government agency."

Charges that the FBI improperly solicited information about members of Congress or misusing information files concerning the "erroneous and without basis in fact," Kelley said. "Congressmen are substantially the same other citizen concerning the FBI may receive information," Kelley said.

"The policy of the FBI information concerning members of Congress is when members are the victims of an investigation, a specific background requested concerning suitability for nomination position in the executive judicial branches," the FBI said in a 550-word statement issued early Tuesday.

Terrorists surrender in Iraq

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iraq announced Tuesday the arrest of three Arab terrorists who wounded 21 persons and seized 10 hostages at a Paris airport and vowed it would never again allow planes carrying "armed persons involved in such operations to land in Baghdad."

The three gunmen surrendered to Iraqi authorities after landing at Baghdad airport aboard an Air France Boeing 707, Baghdad radio reported. The plane, manned by a three-man volunteer crew, later returned to Paris, the radio added.

The radio quoted the Iraqi news agency as saying the plane was permitted to land in Baghdad for "humanitarian reasons" after four other Arab countries — Kuwait, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Lebanon — refused to allow it to land.

"The (Iraqi) authorities realized that the plane would explode in the air and its occupants were to die unless it was permitted to land," the radio said.

A statement issued by the Iraqi Embassy in Paris said the French jetliner had been allowed to land only because it was low on fuel and the crew was exhausted by more than 17 hours of flying.

The Iraqi statement said: "We are convinced that these individuals do not in any way serve the Palestinian cause and are nothing other than troublemakers or misguided elements, because such acts can only harm the interests of the Arabs and the French people and could not be perpetrated by an Arab conscious of the cause of his people."

In Cairo, the three Egyptian government-run dailies — Al-Ahram, Al-Akhbar and Al-Gomhuriya — denounced the bloody siege and called for unified Arab action to prevent such incidents from recurring.

The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) has also condemned the action.

That same day, Swiss authorities disclosed that the PLO has notified the Swiss government it is according to the Geneva conventions on warfare.

The Geneva conventions cover a wide code of humanitarian law ranging from the treatment of wounded and sick soldiers and prisoners to the protection of civilians in armed conflicts.

A spokesman for the Swiss Foreign Office said a "letter concerning accession" from the PLO received in December was under study. He did not elaborate on the contents of the letter.

Low profits cause four stores to close

A browser checks some of the shirts in the going out of business sale at the Canterbury Shop, 100 E. The recession has not skipped by East Lansing.

Four businesses along East Grand River Avenue have found it too difficult to make a profit and have closed up shop.

Owners of the operations, including the Book Addie, Levi's Deli, Midwest Trouser Exchange and the Canterbury Shop, insisted that the closings were not caused by economic pressure. However, three owners said they closed their stores because they were not making enough money, and the owner of the fourth enterprise, Levi's Deli, had to file bankruptcy.

"It (the Canterbury Shop) didn't make enough money to justify all the work. We've had the shop for a long time. It was just too small," said Wayne Holden, owner of the shop.

Holden is one of the owners of the Holden-Reid clothing chain and said he was trying to close all stores which were not under the Holden-Reid name.

Charles Poquette, owner of the Book Addie, bemoaned the demise of his store.

"I always thought that East Lansing could support an old and rare bookstore, but it can't. The man who ran it for three years, Mike Hildebrand, decided to go to Ann Arbor to open a store. He gave me a price on the store so I sold it to him," Poquette said.

Midwest Trouser Exchange is pulling out of East Lansing, but the move had been planned for over a year.

"We're closing the store for lack of trade -- but this was slated to happen. We weren't getting our return on it," said Chris Chrona, asst. buyer for Midwest Trouser Exchange in Detroit.

Chrona said Midwest has been receiving many calls about renting the space, and it will definitely be rented to a retail establishment -- perhaps sporting goods.

East Lansing will not be blighted with boarded store fronts for long.

Joe Arbaugh, owner of the Sportsmeister Shop on East Grand River Avenue, is going to put a new store in the shell of the Canterbury Shop. And the Book Addie will be turned into offices.

Probably the most drastic casualty of all the closings was George W. Bryant's. He had to file bankruptcy on his business, Levi's Deli.

"We couldn't do the business, so we had to file bankruptcy," he said. "It was a bad experience and I just want to forget about it."

FUNDED BY COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT ACT

New community center studied

By DAVE GUZNICZAK
State News Staff Writer

Married students could have a new community center expanded health and day services through federal Community Development Act.

Guthrie, president of the Married Students Union, proposed the center, said the study is expected to take six months to a year to complete.

Total funds requested from the federal Housing and Community Development Act program for East Lansing for a three-year period amount to roughly $1.2 million. Money for the center would be appropriated next year.

detailed study of the day care situation in the area.

Scott Randway, associate planner for the Planning Dept., said the community center project could not be approved until the detailed study had been completed. Randway, who will handle community development requests for East Lansing, said the study is expected to take six months to a year to complete.

Total funds requested from the federal Housing and Community Development Act program for East Lansing for a three-year period amount to roughly $1.2 million. Money for the center would be appropriated next year.

Guthrie said the center would replace the Married Students Activities Unit, which is presently operating at full capacity with many student families on a waiting list for day care services.

Guthrie said the present unit is primarily a day care center with in-service training available for student teachers. She said the original concept of the unit was to cater to all the needs of married students. The new center is expected to fulfill these needs.

Also being considered is location. Guthrie said the site presently proposed by the union would be an area of vacant land on the south end of Spartan Village adjacent to the Forest Akers Golf Course. It would be near the present Married Students Activities Unit.

Roger E. Wilkinson, vice-president of business and finance, said the project had been presented to his attention and that the matter will be discussed among university administrators once a more detailed study of the project becomes available.

Another project for utilizing Community Development Act funds was submitted in a proposal by students at Lansing Community College. The proposal would appropriate $48,000 in grants to married students unable to afford day care payments.

Robert Rice, chairman of the Student Government Committee for Day Care, said the proposal has been submitted to the Urban Redevelopment Technical Planning Committee for Lansing. He said he expected word on whether the proposal will be accepted before Jan. 28th.

Ford stamps out poor

The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture (USDA) has given final approval to the Ford Administration's plan to cut the federal budget at the expense of millions of needy families receiving food stamps.

The action, which would require most recipients to pay a flat 30 per cent of their net income for food stamps, makes no sense at a time when unemployment is rampant and food prices are rising. To cut back on food relief for the poor just when they need it most would be a detestably callous act, indicative of a sadly deranged set of priorities. Congress should take immediate action to block its implementation.

By raising the price of the food coupons, the USDA may be pricing them out of reach of the very people they are meant to assist. These people, the chronically unemployed, who represent the poorest class of Americans, are already surviving on barely adequate diets. Many experts warn that this money - saving move by the Ford Administration will place these people in serious danger of acute malnutrition.

The hypocrisy of President Ford's recent loud noises about aiding the unemployed is appalling. While paying lip service to the poor, his Administration is cruelly twisting the knife of poverty which is draining the life from millions of Americans.

Ironically, the food stamp cut-back comes at a time when Ford is pushing for an increase in aid to South Vietnam, already at $700 million.

It is obvious that the priorities of the Ford Administration are grossly distorted. Congress should take swift action to forcibly rearrange those priorities.

Drop food freeloaders

The food stamp program has received much criticism lately for an allegedly large number of abuses by recipients. Students have been singled out as the most flagrant offenders.

There is little evidence that students misuse the food stamp program any more than anyone else, but there is evidence that student abuse is widespread. Students who are claimed as dependents by their middle and upper-income families have no business taking advantage of a program designed for those who cannot afford nutritionally adequate diets. Legislative action should be taken to exclude such students from the program.

Experts estimate that $110 million can be saved in the remainder of this fiscal year by excluding these non-needy students. This money should be funneled back into the program to ease the serious shortage of case workers at food stamp distribution centers. The shortage is so acute that applicants for food stamps must stand in line for hours (beginning at around 5 a.m.) in order to be among the 30 or so applicants processed daily.

Congress can and should solve two problems at once by tightening eligibility restrictions to exclude non-needy persons, and by allocating the funds saved back to the administrative departments to help alleviate the serious understaffing problems.

Drug ads not wrong

A conflict over the interpretation of Michigan's new generic drug bill has inspired the wrath and confusion of the Michigan Board of Pharmacy, the attorney general's office and state consumer groups who each have interpreted in their own way what the bill means.

The pharmacy board is trying to thwart and lessen the impact of the bill by attempting to force Meijer Inc. and Muir's Pharmacies to discontinue their recent practice of advertising prescription drugs. It is absolutely inexcusable that in the face of the attorney general's opinion that control of advertising does not fall under the jurisdiction of the pharmacy board, the board continues to insist that it have the right to interfere with commercial endeavors by pharmacies.

The new generic drug law requires that every pharmacy post a price list of the 100 most prescribed drugs. The pharmacy board has argued that taking selected drugs from the list and advertising them is an illegal promotion of the drugs. The board says there will be higher drug abuse if drugs are allowed to be advertised and wide knowledge of generic drugs becomes known. But the lack of price competition would be far worse for the consumer than such outlandish fears.

Meijer and Muir's have been the scapegoats for the pharmacy board's little legal games and they should be supported. The pharmacy board should stop hiding behind its ruse of "concern" for the consumer and allow the generic drug bill to do its job.

President's game WINS for SAPs

I went to the White House for a game of "Economics" with President Ford. "You're going to love this game," he said. "It's more fun than anything since the Hi-Li."

He shuffled a stack of thousand-dollar bills, asked me to cut the stack, then dealt me one. I held it close to my chest and studied it. It was the real thing.

"What happens now, Mr. President?" He grinned. "Now, it's up to you to guess what you're holding in your hand."

I paused a long while. Finally: "Could it be —?"

"Yes, yes, you're warm. Go on."

"Could it be a thousand-dollar bill?"

The President leaped up with a delighted smile. "Exactly!" he cried. "It is one of your very own thousand-dollar bills picked at random from the many you have sent to Washington. It is all yours."

I was delirious with joy. A thousand-dollar bill, and my very own. So Gen. Thieu hadn't gotten all of them, after all.

Clutching it, I rose to go. "Just a minute," said the President. "We haven't finished the game yet," and he produced a board and dice.

"Now I roll the dice," he explained, throwing a four and advancing a replica of Air Force One four spaces on the board. "Take an Economist card," the space said.

He turned over a printed card. "Oil crisis," it said. "Impose an oil tax to cut dependence on Middle East oil."

"This is the fun part," said the President, picking up the telephone and imposing an oil tax.

"Can I take my thousand-dollar bill and go, now that the fun part is over?" I asked, knowing what the answer would be.

The President poked me lightly in the ribs, smiled. "Always the wit," he said. "I like a fellow with a sense of humor."

"Do I get to throw the dice now?"

"No," said the President. "You get to take a Consequences card. Go ahead."

He picked up a pile of cards, examined them all and gave me one. "This will break you up," he grinned.

"Due to the recently imposed oil tax," it said, "the cost of warming your house has been increased by 50 per cent. Pay $250 to your fuel company to offset its tax increase."

I said I had better go pay the fuel company right away, but the President stopped me. "Since they will have to pay it back to the government anyhow," he said, "you can just give it to me."

He changed the thousand-dollar bill, gave me $750, and said, "Now you get an INEVITABLE NEWS card," and handed me one.

"Congratulations on knowing it all along," said the card. "The government has authorized your electric company to charge you its share of the new oil tax. Pay your favorite utility $200."

The President said he might as well take the $200 to save the power company the bookkeeping nuisance.

"Now I bet I get to take a Believer in the American Dream Hah-Hah card," I said.

"You know something?" the President said. "You have a natural feel for this game."

Following card instructions I paid $300 to cover the increase in gasoline prices.

"Some game, isn't it?" the President laughed.

"It sure is, but how do you get my last $250?" I asked.

"Take one of those Another Round of Inflation cards and see," he grinned.

The card said, "Due to the rising cost of transportation caused by the higher price of oil, the price of everything is increased. Surrender all money left in your bankroll."

I told the President I didn't think much of the game. "It's too obvious," I said. "No real surprises."

"That's what you think," he chuckled. "You get the surprise when you go outside and find all those higher prices you've just paid won't go down again."

"What's the surprise there?" I asked.

"They never have gone down and I don't expect they ever will."

"Yes," laughed the President, "but what you don't realize is — next year I'm not going to give you an extra thousand dollars to pay them."

It was a scream, but to cheer me further the President pinned a button in my lapel. "Does it say WIN?" I asked.

"No," he chuckled. "It says SAP."

Aid system hit

I must respond to the recent State News editorial headlined "Aid must go to poorest." I feel that the concept of only the poorest students receiving financial aid is wrong. The United States must maximize the value of its human resources. To me this includes providing education to those best able to learn.

The middle-class student presently must prolong his education by working at menial, low-paying jobs to make up the difference between the cost of his education and the amount which his parents can afford to contribute. The needy student, on the other hand, in effect is subsidized by the excessive tuition and board rates charged to those students not receiving aid.

Financial aid should be provided where it would produce the greatest benefit to society.

Vasectomy info

On Jan. 10, a male student wrote of the runaround he experienced when he asked about getting a vasectomy at the University Health Center. I am responding because of overpopulation and the very real threat of mass famine in the world.

I have helped in a Margaret Sanger-type clinic for five years while in India. There were many men who were very happy they had vasectomies.

We are fortunate here in Ingham County to have a Family Planning Center at 701 N. Logan St., near St. Lawrence Hospital in Lansing. Under this program, funded by HEW, a male over 21 years can, with his spouse, give informed written consent to have a vasectomy operation.

At this time these are the federal guidelines:

- There is no charge for the simple operation if the couple cannot afford a private physician.

- Should a single male wish to have one, he can be referred to private physicians in the community who do vasectomies for between $100 and $150.

- In any case, the service before the operation is without charge to anyone asking for it, and consists of a group education session and a personal interview with the clinic's social worker.

Wonder why this information isn't available at the University Health Center?

The Doctor's Bag

BY ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

Copyright 1975

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at the University Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

I'm a very squeamish person. I've always wanted to work in a hospital, but for the last several years my phobia is getting worse. I couldn't even watch my baby being born. I'm afraid if anyone had to depend on me in an accident, I'd faint or have a cardiac arrest. Is there any hope of overcoming this squeamishness? The suggestion has been made to me that I start taking Red Cross courses and get used to the idea of helping bleeding and helpless persons.

The phobia you described clearly places minimal limitations on a person, unless that person wants to be involved in the type of situations you describe. Squeamishness at the sight of blood or injury is a normal reaction. One is much less apt to faint or feel squeamish if actively involved in events rather than standing by as a passive observer. Those of us who are exposed to relatively gory things by virtue of our professions have the opportunity during our training to gradually become used to situations which would normally offend one's sensibilities. Sometimes we even become insensitive in the process — an undesired side effect.

As long as the phobia is well defined and anxiety is not pervasive, a form of behavior therapy known as desensitization is highly effective in getting rid of the symptom. Basically, the person is confronted with a carefully worked out series of anxiety provoking stimuli which are alternated with pleasurable stimuli. This is usually accomplished by imagining a variety of scenes presented by the treating person who has ascertained the nature of the phobia through a careful and extensive history. Many psychologists and psychiatrists are familiar with the techniques involved in this type of symptom removal.

In case all this fails, treatment of fainting involves lying the person flat on their back and staying calm. Under no circumstances should the person who simply faints be kept in an upright position.

I enjoy performing cunnilingus, but in the process I often consume pubic hair. As I understand it, our systems are not capable of digesting the hair, so my question is what happens to it and should I worry about it? I have seen the hair balls they take from cattle and the thought of one in my stomach does not appeal to me.

Hair is not digested by humans or by animals. When consumed in large amounts it forms a tightly knotted ball which can sometimes lodge in the digestive tract and cause obstruction. The technical name for such a formation is a bezoar. They are more commonly found in ruminant animals, such as cattle, though they are occasionally found in babies and small children and some unfortunates disturbed adults. Your fear sounds more like the fantasy of a thwarted producer of erotic films. Either that, or your technique is terrible.

I want to shave my pubic hair for a change of pace. How do I go about doing it so it doesn't pull? Also, how long would it take to grow back? [This letter was written by a woman.]

A change of pace? No matter how well you shave, you still won't restore yourself to a state of prepuberty innocence.

The way to do it is to trim off all the excess hair with a scissor's first and get the remaining hair good and soapy and wet so that it is soft. Then shave only in the direction in which the hair grows. Now that I've told you all this let me warn you, hair grows back at much less than a millimeter a day and it can be a long itchy business that might make you unhappy if you ever started the project.

City defended

Though I rarely resort to the page to correct an error made in newspaper, it seems appropriate since the error was made in an editorial, "Jobless students lose 'Aid'." In that editorial, the State News stated that East Lansing officials don't care if students who need employment, as they are proposing to misuse funds for Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) by returning them to the federal government.

First, it should be explained that East Lansing officials are desirous of providing full-time jobs for workers who are victims of layoffs. Again, this is a city policy but a national one.

Finally, it has been proposed that ASU funds available to East Lansing be returned to the Tri-County Manpower Consortium so that they may provide for residents of the Greater Lansing area which faces an acute unemployment problem. If these funds were returned to the federal government, as was proposed in the State News, they would most likely be sent to the Lansing area.

I hope that this serves to clarify the purpose of CETA funds and the way behind the way they may be used.

Love & empathy

I am not informed about the frustrations, motivation or dynamics resulted in Jim Renuk's experience. Prof. Appel. This much I do know.

We diminish ourselves when we judge people based on physical characteristics, skin color, motor coordination or physical ability or physical disability. Probably the most realistic aspects of my professional career have come when I have met a person who copes with physical handicap — a person who copes with physical handicap personally have not known, a person who copes with physical handicap personally have not known, a person who copes with physical handicap personally have not known.

I have learned that we grow as when we keep ourselves open to the world based on behavior and attitudes as to physical characteristics. I believe that showing a little empathy helps more than the rest of our gift as always behind the dramatically different than ours, but shattered nervous system, or a maimed body is a person who also needs and cares.

Auto mayhem

My God, he was standing in a legal crosswalk and a car drove right up and hit him. I am referring to an accident that happened not 10 feet from me as three people were trying to cross Shaw Lane toward the power station on Friday morning. This time the pedestrian wasn't killed. But how many people will be hurt before campus police realize that this university should be run for people, not for cars.

There are laws instructing motorists to yield to people on foot. But what can one person do when the police don't bother to enforce pedestrian rights, and indifferent attitudes to this incident seemed to accept yellow student getting hit by a car as just another part of an ordinary day?

Dumb drinking

An open letter to the Hubbard Hall Committee on Intelligent Drinking:

April 1 must be coming early this year, or the height over there is getting to you again. I defy you to give a logical explanation of the relationship between "intelligence" and "drinking." Certainly the explanation requires none of the former, and if the former were a result of the latter, East Lansing would be infested with Rhodes Scholars. So tell us! What exactly is intelligent drinking?

Some of the more gruesome and bloody incidents of nonintelligent drinking: a young man nearly amputating an arm trying to get his way through a window meshed with wire, another young man sending a woman to the hospital after pushing him through a display window and a gentleman rearranging another man's face with a fist. Is this intelligent drinking? If you want to educate the masses in the ways of intelligent drinking, I daresay you've got your work cut out.

Do not get me wrong. I respect and support your position on overcrowding in East Lansing bars, but I also believe that you were half serious about the health and safety of bar patrons, you'd get off your high horses on Friday and Saturday nights, get your steeds, and ride into town.

Literacy pushed

Nancy Johnson, Administrative City of East Lansing, responded to one of many irrelevant questionnaires periodically sent to alumni. I suggested that MSU money, customarily used to subsidizing John Hannah's construction, be used for promoting publishing and distributing quality phonetics books. Complete mastery of phonetics and every student enrolled fresh English.

Further suggested getting the entire student body involved, including the Art Dept., child development students, the English Dept., and ethnic groups.

One small child who knows the phonetic code could conceivably teach another, this didn't seem to me to be an unreasonable suggestion. Certainly anyone having attended college should at least be able to teach another how to read. If the project succeeded, MSU might even become known as the institution which brought American education out of the dark ages and into the 21st century.

I was informed by a dully indifferent letter that the matter was adequately covered in the junior and senior years of those students who were interested in the subject.

Apparently the primary thrust of MSU's educational policy is to provide a large market for remedial reading machines. . . . and not to create a literate citizenry.

Respect human life

After reading David Catlin's letter Jan. 20 defending animals' and plants' right to life at all costs, I am obsessed with wondering about his stand on the abortion issue. I realize it has been two years since the abortion reform and consequently it is now an accepted part of our society. One rarely questions the rightness or wrongness of abortion anymore. However, it seems to me, that the same people who are disturbed by the killing of wild animals should be horrified by the killing of the unborn which is tolerated daily in this country and all over the world.

Dave wished to respect the animals' right to life so much that he existed for three weeks drinking liquids and eating fruit "minus the life-bearing seeds." What about the life-bearing seed which is planted inside a woman's womb, which after four months (the time most abortions are performed) is well on its way becoming a fully developed human life? Can we not show at least the same respect for human life as we show for animal and plant life?

I applaud Catlin's concern and absolute respect for life and I sincerely hope human life fits into the same category. However, if some people do not agree with this parallel, I can fully understand. Many people, myself included, believe that society has brainwashed us into undermining human life and dignity so much that when abortion was legalized by the Supreme Court, it was accepted by most Americans without blinking an eye.

Parasites

May I bring David Catlin's realizations full cycle.

Humans are parasites. In order to survive they must destroy living organisms. Plants and animals are as alive as humans. So, humans must respect the life around them and wisely use only what is necessary.

There is a lot that can be said against those who kill only for sport, and those who park their bikes on shrubs.

VIEWPOINT: BUSING

Bostonians not savages

Opponents of school busing programs for racial balance have several excellent points, despite the often high-handed moralistic condemnation they receive from the press (State News editorial, Jan. 13). In recent months the people of South Boston have been portrayed as anarchistic, genocidal savages pursuing a course of vicious racism abrogating the rights of blacks.

I don't think that's quite the case. They are people, too, and they also have human rights. Among those rights, which have been so often defended by students, are free speech, freedom of choice and the right to pursue individual happiness.

I would support civil rights groups in nonviolent, noncoercive, educative programs to combat racism. But it seems that when hate is fought with hate, and so-called "racist" persons are singled out and vilified, that the "anti-racist" factions are blatantly guilty of the very sin they protest.

I would suggest that activists concerned about this problem lay aside bleeding-heart ideologies and work for practical solutions within the realm of reality. Let's face it, racial prejudice and bigotry (and blacks are as guilty as whites) aren't going away overnight, and human beings in a democratic society have the right to think and hold those attitudes as they wish. It is absolutely folly to exacerbate urban tensions by legislating morals and by artificially creating an explosive situation that nobody really wants.

In this age of the welfare state, it seems altogether reasonable that each person has the right to a decent education. However, the means of busing is inappropriate to achieve this desired social end. The parents of black children who have been cat-called and beaten in South Boston must share the same opinion of busing as white parents who fear sending their children into Roxbury or Dorchester. Whether we like it or not, black consciousness is different from white, and the social theorists who preach cultural homogenation are out of tune with reality.

ELLEN SPONSELLER

Faded wolf sent packing

Sorry, MSU women, I just blew all the diplomatic, romantic and any other possible relations with U-M men. Yep, just like that -- never again will we spend happy weekends in Ann Arbor, or for that matter, happy weekends here -- not with U-M guys. At least I won't.

Now wait. Before you get mad or anything, let me explain what happened and then I know you will back me up. I think.

It all began at a party (it always does, doesn't it?). And I suppose it was all my fault. I was standing alone with a drink in my hand staring out the apartment window while the party raged behind me. It was a "good" party, measured by the amount of noise and people. Everyone was drunk except me -- I'd come too late for the beer and someone had given me a poisonous mixture of vodka and water which I had been holding in my hand the past hour.

Anyway, I was just standing there when all of a sudden a voice behind me said, "Enjoying the party?"

I turned slowly to face the voice's owner. He had on a blue and red faded flannel shirt, faded unpatched jeans, faded blond hair tied back in a ponytail, a faded moustache, and a smile that faded into his face when he spoke. He looked like something straight out of the '60's -- like a high U-M art major -- and I half expected him to bring out his "Stop the War" picket sign.

"Don't be stupid!" I told myself. "Don't judge things by appearances..." I said hello. Real cool.

He smiled his faded anti-war smile. "I don't really know anyone here. You see, I'm only at MSU for the weekend. I'm really from U-M."

Oh-ho -- so he was from U-M! I was interested. "Well, um, I really can't get into this party at all either," I said. "I guess I'd rather just have fun with one or two other people." (OK, so it was a line. Merely my conditioning.)

"Oh, don't you have parties like this all the time?" he asked. "I thought MSU was a real party school. At U-M people are more, well, studious, and we don't have big parties like you do very often."

Somehow right away I started getting just a little annoyed, but I tried to explain politely about how we did have classes and teachers here just like they do at U-M. But he wasn't listening. "What's your major?" he blurted in.

I explained I was a pre-med-converted-to-journalism-by-the-State-News major, and then asked, "What's yours?"

"Art," he said. "And my name is Peter. And sorry I'm so high tonight. What's yours?"

"What's my what?"

"Your name. What's your name?" He smiled fadedly, engagingly.

"Oh, I'm Ellen."

"Oh." He just stood unsteadily staring at me, and then said, "You want to sit down?" He fell onto the steps.

I sat down next to him, taking a gulp of my poison vodka. He was in a talkative mood, and explained in a 10 minute discourse how U-M was so great and how I should get out of my sorority and come to Ann Arbor for some real learning.

At first I tried to argue with him about the quality of both schools, to tell him I didn't even belong to a sorority, to assure him that people here too had ambitions. But eventually I realized that it was no use to argue. He cut down everything I said, from my preference for Joni Mitchell ("you gotta like Bob Dylan and nobody else") to him telling me that I was Miss Collegiate for going to MSU.

I was getting a little mad by this time, and ready to mingle with the masses. But somehow during the course of the conversation he had cornered me on the steps. And his hand was sliding up my back.

"Excuse me, Peter, but I have to leave now," I said as I tried to squirm out of his grasp.

But he was really strong, and really drunk. "Bet you never were kissed by someone from U-M before, were you?"

I'd like to say that it was terrible because it would fit into the story so well. But it wasn't -- boy, that kiss sure wasn't. In fact, it probably was the most unfaded kiss I ever had. But yuk -- he groped for me in a stupor, mumbling about how they sure knew how to make love at U-M, better than any MSU guy ever...

That was when I pushed him down the stairs.

Then I stood up and left. And I walked home alone at 1:30 in the morning because everyone was too drunk to drive and I sure didn't want to stay.

Now they say experience is the best teacher, and maybe someday I'll meet a kind, wonderful fantastic man from Ann Arbor. But until I do, or until I learn of some happy MSU-U-M pairs, I won't be able to get that faded anti-war person out of my mind.

Meanwhile, back at old U-M, Peter is probably hobbling around telling all his Ann Arbor buddies what bitches MSU girls are. It's all my fault, and I'm sorry, MSU women. But Peter, you know you had it coming.

Campus challenges handicapped

By SUE McMILLIN
State News Staff Writer

The steps to the Union are a frustrating barrier to someone in a wheelchair. Getting into the building means being pulled up the steps by a strong friend who just may drop you halfway up.

Monday night 50 to 60 people watched a slide show and film presented by the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students (OPHS) to sensitize them to the problems like this one confronted daily by handicapped students. The session was sponsored by the Dept. of American Thought and Language (ATL). Most of those present were faculty members.

The meeting followed an incident two weeks ago involving an ATL professor and a student with cerebral palsy. Jim Renuk, freshman, dropped a required ATL class after his professor complained that he could not communicate with the student. John Appel, professor of ATL, said that he did not have the qualifications to teach handicapped students.

The presentation Monday night was an effort to make faculty members aware of the problems that handicapped students face on campus.

The slides pointed out building entrances like the Union's that are difficult to use, telephones that are too high for many handicapped people, inaccessible drinking fountains and rest room facilities plus steep ramps.

Eric Gentile, asst. coordinator of OPHS, said that even if a handicapped student manages to get inside a building with stairs, his problems are not over.

"If you want to get out in a hurry — in case of a fire — you're out of luck," he said.

Among the problems the handicapped face in rest rooms are faucets that have to be held on, poorly placed and poorly made hand bars and sinks that cannot be reached because they have legs and highly placed mirrors.

Gentile also pointed out that most of these facilities have substitutes that are no more expensive or harder to install than the items presently in use.

Another awkward mechanism is the doorknob.

"Americans seem to have an obsession with doorknobs instead of door handles," Gentile said.

Knobs are often a hassle because they must be gripped and turned. Handles require only that the person be able to push upward or downward.

Gentile pointed out that unconscious actions and common phrases put the handicapped person in an inferior position.

He said the "walk in" signs often seen on office doors should be replaced with the more positive "come in."

The film, which was produced by MSU graduate Paul Carlos, centered on attitudes that other people have toward the handicapped.

Gentile stressed that handicapped people were going to have to work on attitude barriers as well as physical barriers.

"There's a lot of laws on the books (concerning accessibility for handicapped), but still they're only as effective as the attitudes," he said. "There are people in this world that we have to convince that we don't bite."

Following the presentation, some of the faculty members present asked what was the best way to handle "problems that handicapped students face in the classroom."

Judy Taylor, coordinator of OPHS, said that the ideal way to solve problems was for the professor or instructor and the student to discuss the problem and reach some kind of solution.

"We're (the office) not there to interfere with the student-teacher relationships," she said.

"Our basic role in the office is to make it possible for handicapped people to function in the University. We're not a paternal office."

Grad studies under scrutiny

By JIM KEEGSTRA
State News Staff Writer

New graduate programs proposed by MSU will get a close look from now on to see if their graduates will be of high quality and be able to find jobs.

The State Board of Education has called for much closer scrutiny of any recommended new graduate school programs combined with cooperation between Michigan colleges and universities to avoid duplication of curricula.

The announcement Tuesday ended an 18-month moratorium on new graduate schools in the state.

The board said it has adopted a position statement written by its Graduate Education Task Force, appointed in the fall of 1972 because of the board's concern that graduate programs were proliferating without attention to quality or job availability.

"In the future, we'll be supporting new programs on the basis of demonstrated statewide or regional need and with a clear indication of potential for high quality only," said John W. Porter, state superintendent of public instruction.

Porter said a permanent advisory body will be appointed by the board to review recommendations for new graduate programs and work with such groups as the Michigan Council of Graduate Deans.

In addition, the board will try to increase cooperation between Michigan colleges and universities so learning resources can be pooled rather than unnecessarily duplicated, Porter said.

Existing graduate programs are to be evaluated and assessed for their "potential for higher quality" by individual schools, the superintendent said.

The board's position statement pointed to past variances in supply and demand for teachers and engineers as "prime examples of a real need for better long range higher education planning."

However, the state board said it opposes any system "designed to match specific numbers of people with specific numbers of jobs" since the purpose of graduate education is to develop the individual.

If the new stricter examination program results in nonsupport by the board, the sponsoring school could still take its case directly to the legislature, as MSU has done with attempts to obtain funding for a law school.

The task force which prepared the position statement was composed of eight representatives from state colleges and universities, including Clarence W. Minkel, acting dean of the MSU Graduate School.

'BEAN' SPROUTS COMEDY, CRUELTY

Fun and foul play fail in 'Freebie'

ship with James Alan Arkin in the
ugh and tumble comic at the police, TV's Valerie Harper and efforts by Lazlo
with the cinema-

suffers from the fact that director Richard Rush works well in comedy and also obviously works well in the thriller vein. However, his film fails to come even close to merging the two genres. The mood of comedy switches to cold brutality so quickly and without decent explanation that the audience is jarred. Billed as a comedy, "Freebie and the Bean" is far too violent to allow the beatings to be incorporated into the hilarity.

Excessive Violence

The violence ultimately proves too excessive, and as a result, though this film reaches for thriller status, it just misses because of the inability of director Rush to meld the two forms together. Still, his efforts are more interesting to watch than some of the straight-forward thrillers or farcical comedies that have recently appeared on the scene.

Several current films have displayed this trend toward merging comedy with suspense. "11 Harrowhouse" and "The Taking of Pelham One Two Three" have been two unsuccessful examples of this effort, but "Freebie and the Bean" is the one film that comes closest to the merging. It doesn't succeed in the marriage of the two genres, but it deserves high marks for trying.

Comedy hindered

What happens in "Freebie and the Bean" is that while Alan Arkin and James Caan amiably clown their way through a plot about protecting a gangland numbers man from extinction, violence explodes far too realistically on screen to do anything but hinder the comic portraits the film is painting. Arkin and Caan indulge in lines that have a ring of vaudeville in them, only to turn right around and smash a guy's face in or empty their guns mercilessly into another character.

At times, these two come across as boys playing at being policemen and then do an about-face to become sadistic examples of the inhumanity associated with the profession. The humor drops out and the thriller element takes over as the film moves to a climax of excessive brutality, which Rush tries to tone down by jerking the audience back to the hilarious tone of the earlier portion of the film. This device almost works, but the blood that has been spilled colors the comic effect he has been striving for.

Car chases

"Freebie and the Bean" is a enough about them to pull them off.

An extra bonus is Valerie Harper's performance, which, though slightly reminiscent of her television character, still has enough originality to it to add a few chuckles.

"The mood of comedy switches to cold brutality so quickly, and without decent explanation, that the audience is jarred. Billed as a comedy, 'Freebie and the Bean' is far too violent to allow the beatings to be incorporated into the hilarity."

March of Dimes benefit ers Four Freshmen

Four Freshmen — whose "Graduation Day," "I Tell Her" and "Sold Millions" will appear at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 28 at Lansing's

Sexton High School Auditorium. The Four Freshmen will be presented by The National Foundation of the March of Dimes, Capital Chapter and WFMK Radio. Reserved seats are $5.

The Four Freshmen — who by now should probably bill themselves as The Four Post-Doctoral Students — began as The Four Hoosiers at Butler University in Indianapolis in 1948. The four left school and went on the road for performances. In 1950, band leader Stan Kenton saw them in Dayton, Ohio and was so taken with them that he telephoned Capitol Records and convinced them to sign the group.

An apex of their career came in the early 1950s, when their songs "It's a Blue World," "Graduation Day," "How Can I Tell Her" and many others sold millions of copies.

Tickets are on sale at Paramount News, Marshall Music, Discount Records and the March of Dimes office.

Seats could be added to Munn Arena

By STEVE STEIN
State News Sports Writer

An additional 2,000 or more seats could be added to Munn Ice Arena if MSU Athletic Dept. officials decide to raise the seating capacity of the new facility.

The present seating capacity of the arena is 6,255, though approximately 1,000 more fans can purchase standing room tickets.

MSU set a new season hockey attendance record Saturday when 6,491 fans watched the Spartans dispose of Denver. A total of 74,115 people have come through the turnstiles in 13 home games this season, for an average of 5,701 per game.

Six of the 13 games have been sellouts, including five of the last seven contests. The largest crowd this season so far, 6,562, watched MSU meet Michigan Dec. 13. Three of the last seven regular season games have been sold out.

The hockey team moved into Munn Arena this season after playing for 23 years in Demonstration Hall, which held a maximum of just over 4,000 people.

"When the administration feels a need for it, they will ask for it," said Gene Kenney, assistant to the athletic director in charge of facilities. "We have the ability to expand."

"We'll review the situation at the end of the season," Athletic Director Burt Smith said. "When we talk about our budget, we'll talk financing."

"There is a plan if we ever want to do it," Kenney said.

Kenney explained that the top two rows of the five middle sections of seats could be removed and 18 additional rows could be added. The seats would rise above the concourse area. Additional doors could be built at the four entrances to facilitate the extra number of people.

"If it's proven that the arena is popular enough, we might have a selling point on the number of seats," Smith said. "I guess that if the game continues to be as popular, we will have to make some provision."

Athletic Dept. officials have been quite pleased with the attendance figures at the new arena.

"We thought it would be very good if we would sell out a third to a half of the games," said Bill Beardsley, asst. athletic director in charge of business affairs. "I'm delighted that it's come on so rapidly."

"I'm glad to see it going," Kenney added. "I hope it continues to build."

Spartan hockey coach Amo Bessone, whose team is in first place in the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA) and ranked second in the country, has not been surprised by the crowds.

"We expected we would draw with the arena we have," Bessone said. "The rink itself is a big draw."

The Athletic Dept. has been criticized recently for not having enough seats in the arena to meet the demand. The original plan for the arena called for about 8,500 seats.

"We had to cut back because of the total cost of the arena," Smith explained. "We shrunk it back until we arrived at a figure we could pay for."

Beardsley said the original plan cost about $2 million more than the department could afford.

Total cost of the project was approximately $4.5 million. It was financed by money from the University's Athletic Facilities Fund (derived from student football ticket sales) and borrowed funds.

"We're not squawking," Bessone said. "We got a lot for our money. It's a terrific arena."

The Spartan coach has called Munn Arena "the nicest collegiate hockey arena in the United States."

Beardsley said the ticket office has not turned one student away from getting a ticket at a "reasonable time" before a game.

"We did not turn a student away from getting a season ticket, and we have not had one game, nor do we intend to have a game, where we would have no $2 student tickets to sell," he added.

"To be honest, I was a little disappointed in the size," Smith said. "But I'm just happy to have it built with the number of seats we do have."

Both Beardsley and Kenney like the number of seats in the arena now.

"I personally would rather sellout 50 to 70 per cent of the games with 6,200 seats than 20 per cent of the games with 8,000 to 9,000 seats," Beardsley commented.

"I think the seating right now is very adequate," Kenney said.

Bessone would enjoy seeing more people pack the arena to cheer on his club.

"Every college that has built an arena wishes it had built it bigger," the Spartan coach added.

Crowds like this have been piling into Munn Arena this year to watch the Spartans play hockey.

Women's cage squad opens season at U-M

The MSU women's basketball team opens its season today when it travels to Ann Arbor to face Michigan.

Coach Mikki Baile's squad will be out this season to better its third-place finish in the state last year.

Returning to the squad will be co-captains Diane Phillips and Linda Stoick. Degina Goldschmidt rounds out the forward scoring nucleus.

Returning centers include Sandy Hudson and Shelly Owens. Gail Peacock will be returning at guard.

Baile is looking for a balanced scoring attack and sound defense from this year's contingent.

"I think we can do well but there will be plenty of tough competition this year," she remarked.

"We have a very versatile team," she added. "We will be using varying offensive styles, hoping to capitalize on our opponent's mistakes."

The squad travels to Central Michigan Friday.

"Competition should be hard this week. I expect U-M to give us a good game," Baile said.

"Central Michigan finished fourth in the state last year and will be very strong again this season."

Meanwhile, the MSU women's indoor track team will travel to Eastern Michigan today to compete in a dual meet.

MSU's conference mark dipped to 2-4, which apparently eliminates any hopes the Spartans may have entertained of challenging for the title. MSU is now 8-5 on the season.

Iowa was led by forward Dan Frost's 21 points, followed by Larry Parker's 16. Spartan center Lindsay Hairston led MSU with 25 points and 12 rebounds. Senior guard Bill Glover pumped in a career high 22 points, hitting 10 of 15 from the floor, in the Spartans' losing cause.

"Both games were weird, it seems," Spartan coach Gus Ganakas said. "At Minnesota we wound up losing after they scored the final six points of the game. We had come back in the second half, but we couldn't contain them at the end."

"We held Iowa to 29 points in the first half and then gave up 54 points to them in the second half. That's a big difference."

Most of the trouble the Spartans have encountered lately has been on the boards. MSU has one of the smallest front lines in the league.

"Our play on the boards and our defensive effort hasn't been good consistently," Ganakas said. "We had 25 rebounds in the first half and 13 in the second half (against Iowa), which is all right, but we let Iowa's front court get a lot of crucial tip-in shots around the basket and that's not good."

With the No. 1 ranked Indiana Hoosiers roosting on top of the conference standings with a 6-0 mark, Ganakas says the title is just about out of reach but he is hoping the team can bounce back to respectability.

"Indiana won't lose four games in the conference," he said. "We put ourselves in this mess and we have to get out of it. We've got to beat that all conference team and not just the ones we have husky front court players. They play with a lot of

The Spartans will be in action at home Saturday against Wisconsin.

Iowa loss dims MSU title hopes

By CHARLES JOHNSON

MSU's Big Ten basketball season is hardly three weeks old and already the Spartans' chances of making a go at the conference title are next to none.

Gus Ganakas' cagers returned home empty-handed Monday night following an 83-79 loss to Iowa to completely ruin a four-day road trip which previously saw them lose Saturday at Minnesota, 82-71.

Cage coach on the air

MSU basketball coach Gus Ganakas will be the guest tonight on Spartan Sports Scene, an interview show presented by Michigan State Network Radio (WMSN), 640 AM.

The show, which is aired twice a month, will run from 8 to 9 p.m. Listeners can phone in questions.

Olympic Stadium workers advised to find another job

MONTREAL (UPI) — The head of the iron workers' union, upset that his men have not been allowed to begin work at the Olympic Stadium site following settlement of their cost-of-living dispute last week, Tuesday advised union members to work at other construction jobs in the city.

While labor strife continued to set back this city's Olympic schedule, its other major problem — escalating costs — was the subject of a Parliamentary commission as Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau and Olympic Organizing Committee (COJO) representatives were set to testify in Quebec City.

Drapeau and COJO officials were called by the legislature in an inquiry on projected costs for the games that have risen to $653 million from a 1972 estimate of $310 million.

In the latest labor dispute, Michel Galarneau of the union said his men were turned back for the second consecutive day Tuesday when they reported for work at the Stadium site.

A spokesman at City Hall, which is responsible for Olympic construction, said the site was not yet cleared of snow and ready for the men to resume construction. The site would be cleared today.

Work on the complex has been stalled Nov. 27 when the ironworkers walked out in a cost-of-living dispute. They settled the conflict last week in a wage increase ordered by provincial government.

Woman peddled drugs to athletes, report says

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — St. Louis police Tuesday turned to the commissioner's office of the National Football League to report from a 19-year-old woman who said she peddled narcotics to athletes throughout the country.

Police said the woman's story contains accounts of switchings of empty briefcases for identical ones containing narcotics. Investigators said they believe it has some merit because of explicit details and names.

The woman, Roxie Ann Rice, was arrested Jan. 6 after St. Louis motel manager who was the wife of Ken Houston Pro defensive back for the Washington Redskins. The said Miss Rice told him she would recommend the motel players for $600.

The manager learned from football officials that Houston had a different first name and Rice was arrested for defrauding motel operator.

Police said she then gave them a statement in which she traveling to various NFL cities under instructions from her, she named Patricia Cleveland and a man known only as "Pat". She was told to stay at certain motels where football players contact her and pick up packages containing marijuana and police said.

She said the cities included Cleveland, Denver, Los Angeles, San Diego, Houston, Dallas, Washington, Chicago, Miami, City, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

In Dallas, she said, she was given narcotics and told to peddle them. She said one player did come up a package, and gave her $150.

Rice said in each of the cities she would exchange a briefcase for an identical, full one presumably containing narcotics. In Cleveland, she said, she was given a package at which she was told contained smaller packages with narcotics. She said two football players came by her room and took them.

In Kansas City, according to the report, she was told to peddle narcotics to the Chiefs, who gave her a list of the team members wanted and $2,500. She said she delivered the list and money to Miss Cleveland.

Rice said she passed drugs to members of the Spirits of basketball team in New York and was told to scout the team for possible drug sales.

In St. Louis she said she attended a party of Cardinals which several used drugs, although she did not sell them. Officials of the Cardinals and Spirits said they had seen a report but would not comment on it.

Spartan football coach Denny Stolz watches his squad in action against Notre Dame last fall. The board of trustees extended Stolz' contract for two years and the contracts of eight of his nine assistant coaches one year Friday.

GET CONTRACT EXTENSIONS

Stolz, assistants receive boost

By DAN SPICKLER
State News Sports Writer

Spartan head football coach Denny Stolz began this week with more confidence for the future and pride in his team's past achievements after the board of trustees extended his contract Friday for two more years.

Eight of his assistant coaches' contracts were also extended for one year.

"I'm very happy and very pleased," Stolz said. "It makes you feel the work you have put in has been well rewarded."

Stolz was also pleased with the news of his staff's extensions. "I think this just helps to stabilize a great and growing football program here," Stolz said.

"The contract extensions for the other coaches lets them know the University appreciates their work and welcomes them," he added.

Stolz's current salary is listed at $28,300 a year. The two-year contract extension is an open-ended one, leaving the possibility for a raise after the end of this fiscal year in June.

Besides being happy over the extension of his contract to 1978, Stolz was caught off guard by the board's action.

"I heard about it over the radio," he laughed. "The main purpose of an extension of this sort is so the coach can go to this year's high school prospects with almost a guarantee that he will be here throughout their four years at MSU," Athletic Director Burt Smith explained.

Receiving one year contract extensions were assistant coaches Charley Butler, offensive line coach; Bill Davis, assistant to the head coach and tight end coach; Andy MacDonald, offensive coordinator, and Jim Raye, receiver coach.

Also granted extensions were Sherman Lewis, defensive backfield coach; Dan Underwood, linebacker coach; Ed Youngs, defensive coordinator, and Howard Weyers, defensive end coach.

Former tanker coach named to new position

Former MSU men's swimming coach Charles McCaffree, Jr. has been appointed to the new position of executive secretary of MSU's Varsity Alumni Club, an organization of Spartan graduate letterwinners.

His selection was announced by club President James Sack of Lansing.

McCaffree stepped down as MSU's swimming coach in 1969 after 28 years at the helm. Last spring, he retired from the University as head of men's swimming programs.

He will assist the club in organizational activities in a part-time role.

McCaffree has contributed long service to amateur swimming around the world in a career that has spanned some 40 years.

Media boosted martial arts courses make big splash

idea of trying to achieve a state where the mind and body are in perfect harmony.

"Spiritual achievement comes through physical activity," said Kim. "If you're the strongest, you are also the most peaceful."

"The sport pursues the mystique of getting right with nature and yourself," said Mark Pittman, research specialist in the Sociology Dept. and coach of the women's track team.

Many people are interested in the practical aspect of knowing their "inner essence," said Pittman, whose specialty is the sociology of sports.

"Martial arts allow for inner purification," he said. "At the same time you can measure your accomplishments by seeing how well you are doing when participating in the sport."

Transcendental Meditation (TM) will be explained in free introductory lectures presented by the Student's International Meditation Society at 1 and 4 p.m. today in C310 Wells Hall and at 7:30 p.m. in 316 Berkeley Hall and 101 Wonders Hall.

The expansion of class sizes is possible next year as MSU works to stretch its budget. Wharton said Monday this situation is already being seen on campus. He noted much of the increase in class sizes may also be due to students shifting into more job-oriented fields of study, namely agriculture, business, engineering and the physical sciences.

"There has been an enrollment decline in social sciences and arts and letters," he said. "This phenomenon has been going on for two or three years."

Sometime this week — today, perhaps — Gov. Milliken is expected to release his state-wide budget recommendations for fiscal year 1975-76. And no one on the receiving end of state funding expects to sing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

"The situation right now is very serious, it is very severe," Wharton said.

Michigan law must catch up with time lag

LANSING (UPI) — The Michigan Legislature will be playing "Beat the Clock" with Daylight Savings Time when it reconvenes next week.

The lawmakers will have less than a month to make sure Michigan doesn't wind up in a nine-week time lag when the rest of the nation turns clocks an hour ahead Feb. 23 as mandated by Congress.

Under previous action by the legislature, DST won't start in Michigan until April 27.

But a bill to amend that law has been introduced in the Senate and the state Affairs Committee is expected to report the measure out for floor action next Monday evening.
