Mayday protestors may collect damages due to court ruling

By GREG KRAFT
State News Staff Writer

Three Lansing area men could each be $10,000 richer for their participation in the Vietnam War Mayday protest as a result of a court ruling two weeks ago.

James Heyser, now an Ingham County commissioner and East Lansing resident; Chuck Will, unsuccessful city council candidate in 1971, and Kevin Gallagher, a country-western musician, were all arrested in the May 1971 demonstration on the steps of the Capitol.

A U.S. District Court in Washington awarded up to $10,000 in damages to each of 1,200 persons arrested in a suit filed on behalf of the demonstrators by the American Civil Liberties Union.

But what this all means is not clear to Heyser, Will and Gallagher.

Will realizes he may not receive any money because of a technicality, while Heyser qualifies but isn't sure how much he'll get. Finally, Gallagher thinks he qualifies, but isn't sure since he can't remember the day of his arrest.

The ACLU must now begin locating those who qualify for awards and determining how much each is to receive. If a person qualifies by having been arrested in Washington for protesting between May 2 and May 6 inclusive, the amount he or she receives depends upon the constitutional rights violated at the time of arrest.

On Tuesday, May 4, Heyser participated in a march to the Justice Dept. He was arrested on that day and was placed in an ice arena in Washington, where the other protestors who were arrested were being held. A day later he was released on $100 bond. Photographs and fingerprints were taken.

"The court decision may make local governments think twice next time," Heyser said. He also sees the court decision as a moral victory for those who participated in the protest.

He said he is not really sure yet just how much money he will receive.

"Whatever money I do get, I'll probably use it for causes I support," he said.

Chuck Will, one of the founders of the defunct "Joint Issue" and 1971 candidate for city council on the Coalition for Human Survival state, was also there. He was crossing a street in Washington when he was busted, put on a bus and shipped off to Kennedy Stadium. A medic, trained that day to take care of injured demonstrators and internees, he left after being detained in the stadium for a good part of the day by simply walking out with one of the doctors tending the prisoners. He was still wearing his medic's uniform.

He was not photographed and no fingerprints were taken. As a result, Will has no arrest record in Washington. The ACLU has specified that in order for persons to claim their settlements, they must have an arrest record in Washington between May 2 and May 6.

"And I thought I was doing the right thing by escaping," Will said as an afterthought.

Will said he will send a story he wrote about the protest in the "Joint Issue" to Washington in an attempt to prove that he was one of the people detained during the

Milliken suggests budget cut for MSU

By PETE DALY
State News Staff Writer

Milliken proposed Thursday a budget for MSU totaling $96,000,000, a dollar increase of $8 million over last year but an actual decrease of 4 per cent when inflation factors expected by the governor are figured in.

The governor recommended a general appropriation of $91,723,000, rather than the $107,356,900 asked for by the MSU trustees last fall.

Milliken's budget proposals represent an across-the-board decrease of 4 per cent in real value — a loss felt by all state colleges except Lake Superior and Saginaw Valley. Those were exempted because they are new schools, still in the expansion stage, the governor said.

In the $91 million figure proposed for MSU's general fund, Milliken recommended $364,000 for the establishment of a law school at MSU. In addition, $7,125,000 is recommended for the MSU-run Agricultural Experimental Station, and $6,847,000 for the Co-operative Extension Service.

MSU administrators are not happy with the total recommendations reflecting the 4 per cent across-the-board-cut. President Wharton returned from a vacation Thursday night, and is expected to issue a statement today. His assistant, Elliott Ballard, limited himself to a few critical remarks.

"Given the overall fiscal uncertainties we are facing, the recommendations are 'iffie,' at best," Ballard said.

Ballard fears a financial deficit at MSU if the rate of inflation continues, and if the costs of fuel increase beyond the governor's estimations. These considerations motivated the $107 million request for the general fund.

The governor's 4 per cent across the board decrease came as no surprise to state university and college administrators. Milliken had asked all state-funded agencies in December to submit 1975-76 budget requests set at 96 per cent of their previous year's allocation.

MSU administrators did not re-adjust their original request for $107 million made early last fall, because, they said, the governor did not specify whether that figure took into account economic factors expected for 1975-76.

Fred Whims, education section chief in the Michigan Bureau of the Budget, said Milliken's proposal is indeed 96 per cent of the $99 million originally allocated for MSU for 1974-75.

He verified that when all the inflation factors, plus cost of projected increased enrollment, are figured in, the governor's proposal is actually a 4 per cent decrease compared to last year's original allocation.

But Whims pointed out that the December MSU budget cut of $1.5 million is 1.5 per cent of the 4 per cent across-the-board decrease.

Economic factors used by Whims' office include, in addition to projected rate of inflation, a 5.6 per cent salary increase for MSU, and the rising cost of fuel.

"When considering the factors, we gave special consideration to utilities, which are going out of sight," Whims said.

"People are going to have to realize this year that this is a damn tight budget," one of Milliken's budget advisers said.

Milliken's recommendations also favor improving public health facilities, his advisers said.

TUITION INCREASE MAY PAY COST health unit considers new center

By PAUL PARKER
State News Staff Writer

With the options of remodeling the University Health Center (Olin) or building a new facility, the Health Care Authority will recommend that a new health center be constructed adjacent to the clinical sciences building, funded by an increase in tuition.

The Health Care Authority will receive $26 million from the state this year, but has been looking into the possibility of raising tuition to fund a new health center at that site.

Members of the authority favor building a new health center at that site. The Health Care Authority is composed of MSU medical administrators and other members of the administration.

The Health Care Authority will discuss the possibility of constructing a new health center in a public meeting Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 in 443 Administration Bldg.

Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance says that a new health center would probably be funded by taking out a 25 year loan that would be paid back through an increase in student fees lasting 25 years. The increase in tuition rates as a result of the increase in student fees would be under 50 cents per credit hour.

A student carrying 45 hours each year spends $26 of his tuition money for student fees assessed for repayment of loans taken out to enlarge the present health center, and build the Student Services Building and the Intramural Building.

Wilkinson said other alternatives to pay off a loan would be charging a student health fee or using the operational revenue of the health center to repay its debt.

Violations of the state fire code, poor patient flow, overloaded plumbing and electrical hardware and inadequate parking facilities are the problems plaguing the present health center. The proposed new health center would be part of the University's medical center that is being developed on the far southeast part of campus near Baker Woodlot.

The present health center was constructed primarily as an in-patient facility for a college of 4,000 students in 1939. No provisions were made for expansion. Two expansions later, the health center handles 152,000 out-patients a year.

Current overcrowding of facilities at the health center due to a respiratory ailment siege has made it necessary for patients to wait in the corridors for appointments in violation of the state fire code. Other permanent violations are the use of a corridor as an air supply passageway and the failure to install a smoke detection system throughout or revamp the ventilation system.

"We've already spent over $50,000 just to stay open," said Joseph Patterson, Chief Executive Director of MSU's Health Care Authority. "We estimate that it would take from $500,000 to $1 million to bring Olin up to code. And still you will have an old building with a limited function. Even if that money was spent, it would still not meet the needs of student health care."

The cost of a new student health center would be roughly $7 to $8 million dollars for only out-patient facilities. Actual cost could vary since plans are not finalized. The proposed facility will most likely share laboratories and expensive equipment with the clinical sciences building.

At least $2 million would be added to the Governor proposes record high budget

By JIM KEEGSTRA
State News Staff Writer

Increased personal income taxes and a complete overhaul of business levies are the two major thrusts of Gov. Milliken's $3.04 billion general fund budget.

The recommendations for a 6.8 per cent increase to a record level of state spending were released to state legislators Thursday.

Republican leaders said Milliken made a good faith effort to cut the fat from the fiscal year 1975-76 budget, but there are still spending areas which could be reduced.

They promised to make an independent examination of the governor's package before consenting to a tax boost.

Democratic legislative leaders reacted with skepticism, with most finding belt tightening in government more attractive than raising taxes.

"I'm not for raising it at all," said Sen. John T. Bowman, D-Roseville, whose Senate Taxation Committee will get first crack at the proposals.

Bowman said he would be more willing to enact a sales tax on services such as dry cleaning and auto repairs before considering an income tax hike.

Milliken said the individual income tax rate must be raised from 3.9 to 4.6 per cent by May 1 to offset the $220 million annual loss of food sales taxes. He urged the legislature to enact the increase by April 1, which would leave little time for debate.

If the May 1 date is met, the effective tax rate for 1975 would actually be 4.336 per cent since the increase will only be felt for two-thirds of the calendar year. On next year's tax forms, however, the odd figure probably would be rounded to 4.3 or 4.4 per cent.

For Michigan's business community, Milliken asked repeal of some seven existing taxes generating $800 million of revenue for the state. The money would be replaced at the same level by a single "business income tax" taking effect Jan. 1, 1976.

Milliken cited benefits of the change as increased stability in state tax structure, improved fiscal planning and simpler, more equitable taxation.

Business expansion resulting in more jobs will be encouraged by a special provision allowing a 100 per cent deduction for capital improvements in the first year, Milliken said.

State budget director Gerald Miller admitted the new tax, applied equally to all businesses, would mean professionals such as lawyers, doctors or psychologists will pay up to 5 per cent more than now. However, the new method will particularly aid utility companies, Miller said.

If the system is adopted along with $800 million in bonding proposed by Milliken, Miller predicted some 30,000 to 40,000 new jobs would be created.

Though this is the first budget over $3 billion, it is the largest in Michigan history.

Two killed after card game dispute

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

Two men were killed and two other critically wounded following a card game argument in the basement of an East Lansing home early Thursday morning. Two Lansing men have been arrested for the slaying, charged with murder, assault and armed robbery.

It was the first multiple murder in East Lansing in at least 28 years, according to police.

Dead are John Eric Fowler, 31, 1023 W. Grand River Ave., and Lawrence Chappel, 39, 3238 Birch Row Drive, Charles Bovinette, 46, 4919 Kessler, is hospitalized at Sparrow Hospital in critical condition following an operation to remove a bullet from his head. N. A. Galden, 54, 3131 S. Washington Ave., Lansing, is in serious condition at Sparrow, suffering from a bullet wound in the chest.

George Norris Hall, 39, 2302 Risdale Ave. and Leo McGill, 37, of 129 Astor Ave., both of Lansing, were arraigned Thursday afternoon and remanded in the Ingham County Jail. Both face charges on two counts of pre-meditated murder, two counts of assault with intent to kill, and three counts of attempted robbery.

East Lansing police said that the murder, which took place at Fowler's house, followed

Slash federal spending, cut taxes, Burns urges

Food stamp policy defended

The Agriculture Dept. Thursday defended its planned March 1 hike in the price of food stamps as an unpopular but necessary part of President Ford's program to stem the growth of the federal budget.

The new regulations specify that all stamp recipients must pay 30 per cent of their net income for the stamps. But department projections show that the higher price will actually equal only 16 per cent of the household's gross income, including other welfare aid.

Meanwhile, a New York Times story Thursday said Dept. of Agriculture figures will soon show that 17 million people, about eight per cent of the U.S. population, are purchasing their groceries with food stamps. This is an increase in participation of 22 per cent.

Pentagon searches for bombs

Security men using dogs searched the Pentagon Thursday for explosives in what officials called a precautionary measure following the blast Wednesday at the State Dept.

There was no word of any bomb threat at the huge office building, which often has been the target for anti-war demonstrations.

Meanwhile, Arthur F. Sampson, head of the General Services Administration, ordered security tightened in all federal buildings across the nation.

Sampson said entry to federal buildings will be restricted to entrances manned by guards and that all packages will be searched.

Vets get dividends sooner

President Ford has acted to step up delivery of life insurance dividends of $335.6 million to pump needed cash into the hands of consumers.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen announced Thursday that some 2.5 million veterans will receive their dividends within 45 days, spreading the distribution throughout the year on the dates of the policy anniversary.

Nessen gave no explanation of the economic effect of holding down spending on the one hand and speeding up the flow of dollars into the recession-plagued economy on the other.

Policies under three programs are involved: World War II National Service Life Insurance, World War I U.S. Government Life Insurance and Korean War Veterans Special Life Insurance.

Stock market average down

The stock market gave up some of its gains of the past week Thursday in very active trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 4.30 to 701.66 at 1 p.m. after opening higher.

Brokers said the decline came as investors sold off some of their holdings to take the profits of six days of upward trading.

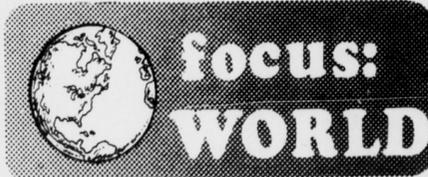

The early advances Thursday and the heavy trading following the announcement by Chase Manhattan Bank, the third largest commercial bank, that it was cutting its prime interest rate from 9.5 per cent to 9 per cent, the new industry low.

Ford greets Wilson, talks begin

President Ford welcomed British Prime Minister Harold Wilson Thursday for two days of talks in which he said they would be tackling the global problems of inflation, food and energy.

Ford said this period could be "one of the great creative moments in our history" if the industrialized democracies work with other nations of the world to cope with the new economic problems that "defy solution by national means alone."

At the South Lawn arrival ceremonies, the two leaders said they looked forward to wide-ranging and deep discussions about the problems they face as long-time friends, partners and allies.

Vatican said to lose $56 million

The Vatican lost about $56 million in the Sindona banking scandal last year — about a tenth of its liquid assets, a financial adviser to the Vatican said Thursday.

In an interview published by the weekly magazine Espresso, Massimo Spada, 70, gave his assessment of Vatican losses in the collapse of Italian financier Michele Sindona's banking empire. The empire collapsed following huge losses in foreign exchange operations.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board urged Congress on Thursday to cut federal spending below what President Ford has recommended, and said the defense budget shouldn't be spared.

"I do hope Congress will look at the defense budget just as searchingly as it will look at the President's recommendations on Social Security and other items," Burns told the House Ways and Means Committee.

"When it comes to cutting expenditures, there are opporunities everywhere, in every agency, including the Defense Dept.," Burns added.

Burns said the Federal Reserve Board will permit a moderate increase in money and credit to help finance heavy government deficit spending this year and next, but would not fuel inflation with unlimited amounts of new money.

Burns indicated disagreement with several features of the President's economic program, but he urged speedy action on a temporary tax cut to stimulate the economy.

In other economic developments Thursday:

• Treasury Secretary William E. Simon told a senate finance subcommittee that the nearly $70 billion the federal government expects to borrow this year will represent more money than has ever been lent in any year to government and private borrowers combined.

• The Ford Administration will propose legislation to pare down the amount of money funneling into the highway trust fund and to extend the life of the fund indefinitely, informed sources said.

The legislation already has been drafted and will be sent to Congress within two weeks. The sources said President Ford will announce some details of the program in his budget message Monday.

• President Ford's economic proposals and big business were targets of criticism Thursday as delegates to the annual conference of the Consumer Federation of America tried to figure out what to do about high prices for food and energy.

Speaker after speaker urged farmers, workers and consumers to get together to break up monopolies or near-monopolies in the food industry. The delegates blamed what they called "vertically integrated agribusiness companies" for rising prices and lower quality.

• Adnan Khashoggi, one of the Arab world's leading private businessmen, has abandoned his $14 million attempt to buy one-third of a San Jose, Calif., bank in the face of community opposition. It was the second setback in a week for Arab businessmen trying to buy into American banking.

Khashoggi, a Saudi Arabian millionaire who heads Triad, the Arab world's first international conglomerate, withdrew his bid Thursday.

Milliken asks increase in state welfare funds

By WILLIAM J. HOLSTEIN
United Press International

Gov. Milliken Thursday recommended a whopping $110 million increase in state welfare spending to provide needed assistance for jobless workers and counter inflation.

The recommendation was based on an anticipated 8,000 case increase in the state's welfare rolls — only a fraction of what state welfare officials have predicted. But aides said the caseload increase would level off in 1976.

It was the biggest single increase for any state department in Milliken's total budget recommendation of $3.04 billion, boosting welfare spending to $936 million in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Welfare crackdown
Milliken ordered a crackdown on welfare cheats and frauds to save the state $52 million a year and his aides acknowledge that the budget projection assumes the savings will be realized.

In addition, his budget message proposed major changes in the administration of welfare payments providing for the state takeover of $30 million of annual general assistance payments from counties over a three-year period.

Department overwhelmed
Welfare officials have reported that the Dept. of Social Services may be "overwhelmed" by as many as 400,000 jobless workers this summer seeking welfare when their unemployment benefits run out. There already are about 190,000 Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) cases.

Milliken said $59.6 million of the budget increase for the department would go for caseload increases "resulting largely from exhaustion of other benefits and from secondary unemployment."

Inflationary pressure
Another $48.6 million would compensate for inflationary pressure on medical care and other services.

The budget recommendations would result in a 7 per cent increase in grants to families with dependent children and to the aged blind and disabled receiving social security income (SSI) grants.

Aides said ADC payments for a family of four living in Detroit would increase from $375 to $408 a month.

Milliken's recommendations if implemented by the legislature mean that 31 cents of every tax dollar would go for welfare compared with 44 cents for education.

Frauds expensive
But Milliken said that welfare errors and frauds were costing the state $76 million annually.

"I am recommending that the state immediately accelerate all feasible means of eliminating errors in eligibility determinations and payment computations and establish new cost and utilization limits to control the cost and excessive use of medical services," he said.

He also urged that the state "assume full administrative and policy responsibility for the general assistance programs now operated jointly with the counties and that the state assume full financial responsibility for these programs over a period of three years."

Limited improvements
Though "limited improvements in the welfare system can be made, Milliken said he would still push for consolidation of the departments of Social Services, Mental Health and Public Health in an attempt to streamline the delivery of human services.

"Only the reorganization of these programs into a single state agency can ultimately provide the necessary concentration of responsibility, talent and accountability required to produce effective planning and efficient delivery of the social health and economic assistance required," he said.

Milliken's plan to consolidate the three departments into a single department of human services has been blocked by the legislature last year.

Nuclear plants face shutdowns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As a result of small cracks found in the pipes of a nuclear power reactor in Illinois, the government has ordered 23 such plants across the country to close down within 20 days so checks can be made on the safety of their operations.

A spokesman said Wednesday the Nuclear Regulatory Commission ordered the shutdown of the reactors which are used to run electrical power generators after Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago reported it had found five small cracks in the pipes of one of its reactors.

Z-z-z reign over drain brains

Those who work for Ingham County Drain Commissioner Richard Sode find it easy to ease off a lingering hangover. Since Jan. 6, Sode has designated the first hour of work his office — from 8 to 9 a.m. — as a "quiet hour." Employees are to avoid nonessential conversations, delay returning phone calls and keep inter-departmental contact to a minimum. Sode says this will promote good working habits and allow his employes to spend at least one hour of an uninterrupted.

Praise the pizza, Lord...

Tim Fitzgerald and Ken Vella will never again question the power of the Lord.

The Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity brothers, while strolling to church one Sunday morning last November, stumbled upon nearly $650 in loose change scattered along Albion Avenue. They turned the money in to police, who returned it to the owner. For their honesty, or perhaps fear of the Lord, the two received a $50 reward, and their fraternity brothers were all treated to free pizzas Wednesday night.

The money, it seems, somehow fell out of the pocket of Chris Bell, owner of Bell's Pizza, 255 M.A.C. Ave., after he left his parlor.

...and pass the ammunition

It did not take the U.S. Army long to discover where the friends aren't. As a new member of the House Armed Services Committee, rookie Congressman Bob Carr awarded a genuine U.S. Army honorary plaque, complete with a plastic. Carr looked into the plaque-presenting party discovered over $100,000 worth were handed out last year and now promises to raise the issue at an upcoming meeting of the Armed Services Committee. It is Carr's first encounter with the Pentagon after pledging during his campaign to fight defense spending.

INFLUENCE OF PARIS ACCORDS DEBATED

Vietnam war tempo accelerating

By DAVID K. SHIPLER
New York Times

SAIGON — The Paris agreements appear to be exerting less influence on events in Vietnam than at any time since they were signed two years ago.

They led to the release of 100,000 prisoners and the withdrawal of 100,000 troops, the war they sought to end being fought at a tempo comparable to the early years of American involvement: more South Vietnamese died in 1974 than in 1965, 1966 or 1967.

The agreements call for democratic elections and open, peaceful political negotiations between the two sides, but the government has continued to exclude Communists from any legal role in political life even though such a role is mandated. The Communists, in a recent hardening of their position, have announced their refusal to negotiate with President Nguyen Van Thieu, calling instead for his overthrow, as they have in the past.

Far from tempering this propaganda war, the agreements become increasingly an instrument of denunciation by both sides rather than a vehicle for compromise.

Some foreign diplomats and Vietnamese officials are convinced that the agreements still impose a measure of military inhibition on the combatants, preventing the Communists, for example, from attacking Saigon. But others see the restraint eroding badly, and some diplomats have even begun speaking of the Paris settlement as merely a historical fact, comparing it to the abortive Indochina accords reached in Geneva in 1954.

"When I first got here I was reading the Paris agreement like my Bible every night," said one of the four members on the paralyzed International Commission of Control and Supervision. "But now I don't need it any more. Nobody is looking at it any more. It's like a dictionary for a language that nobody speaks."

As usual, Saigon is full of speculation that the next months will bring the grinding conflict to some fresh turning point, that from the Communists' current accelerating military campaign will come new negotiations.

Diplomats theorize that President Thieu may offer to carry out parts of the agreements that Hanoi and the Vietcong have considered favorable to their side: the formation of a tripartite National Council of National Reconciliation and Concord, for example, consisting of government, Vietcong and neutralist representatives to oversee national elections in which the Vietcong would participate.

There is no hard evidence that Thieu is about to do this, so the speculation remains only a tentative counterpoint to the dominant theme — continued warfare.

The conflict is still governed, as it has been for 20 years, by a central political fact: the unswerving devotion of the North Vietnamese and their Vietcong allies to reunification of the country.

That is why the Communists hailed the Paris agreements as a victory — not merely because they expelled the American troops, but also because they prescribed political evolution that explicitly envisioned reunification, albeit in a peaceful form, as the end product.

"Reunification?" scoffed a cabinet minister in Saigon. "Perhaps after the two Germans and the two Koreans are reunified we can begin talking about Vietnam."

Every eight minutes a South Vietnamese soldier is killed or wounded. Every two minutes a civilian is made homeless. With every passing day, the outlook for South Vietnam's economy grows grimmer.

All this two years after the cease-fire that was supposed to bring peace and prosperity to Vietnam.

Western diplomats say morale in South Vietnam is at its lowest point in nearly three decades of war because the January, 1973 Paris agreement had raised hope that the war would stop.

The only significant element of that agreement which still applies is the one that provided the motivation for the whole elaborate and unworkable arrangement: the withdrawal of U.S. troops and recovery from North Vietnam of American prisoners.

On this page, the State News has combined up-to-date news coverage of Vietnam-related events from Associated Press and New York Times wire services with locally gathered news stories about antiwar activities.

David Shipler of the New York Times analyzes the role played by the Paris agreement in Vietnam today. A combined wire-services story relates the latest Indochina developments. AP reports that Ford will extend his leniency program for Vietnam draft evaders and deserters. An anti-war protester returns to East Lansing from Saigon and local peace activists describe a feeling of deja vu.

Thieu says S. Viets need U.S. support

By WIRE SERVICES

SAIGON, South Vietnam — President Nguyen Van Thieu said Thursday that South Vietnam will face a crisis by the end of the year unless President Ford gets the $300 million in extra Vietnam aid he has requested from Congress.

Military experts in Cambodia said the Phnom Penh government also will face a crisis before the end of 1975, running out of rice and ammunition, unless Ford gets the $222 million in supplemental aid for Cambodia he has asked for.

In Washington, Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott joined Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller in declaring that Congress would be responsible if a reduction of U.S. aid brought Communist success in Indochina.

But Robert C. Byrd, asst. Democratic leader, disagreed, declaring that if the South Vietnamese and Cambodians want more military equipment, "let them buy it." Despite stiff opposition from Congress, Ford says he will fight for the additional $522 million in military aid for South Vietnam and Cambodia.

On the Indochina battle fronts, Communist-led forces launched a half dozen attacks around Saigon and Da Nang, South Vietnam's two largest cities, killing at least 15 civilians and cutting traffic, the Saigon command reported.

In Cambodia, insurgent forces rocketed the Phnom Penh airport, damaging a fighter-bomber, and the Cambodian navy sent tugboats to tow two crippled freighters from the besieged naval base at Neak Luong, 32 miles southeast of the capital. The freighters were cut off from a six-vessel convoy that made it to Phnom Penh early Thursday.

Thieu told a group of newsmen in Saigon that cuts in U.S. military aid have reduced the combat efficiency of the South Vietnamese armed forces by 60 per cent. He said $300 million in supplemental military aid requested from Congress by Ford is the absolute minimum needed to sustain South Vietnam's armed forces during intensified fighting.

Thieu also said that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told him two years ago that the Soviet Union and China would reduce their supply of war material to North Vietnam and encourage Hanoi to abide by the cease-fire agreement and reach a political settlement. Asked whether the Soviets and Chinese were doing what Kissinger said they would, Thieu said the newsmen could see for themselves whether the understanding was being observed.

In another area, Thieu said that the United States has no plans to reopen secret negotiations with the Vietnamese Communists to bring them back to the conference table.

Thieu was asked if it would be "helpful" if Kissinger approached Hanoi, directly or through Moscow or Peking, to resume stalled political discussions.

"I understand that Dr. Kissinger has no intention to do that," Thieu responded. "And after the Paris agreement it is much better to let the Vietnamese parties talk to themselves and solve their problems."

The apparent intention of his renewed accessibility to newsmen is to improve the chances for the Ford Administration's $300-million supplemental military appropriation request for Thieu's government.

In another Indochina development, the South Vietnamese government ordered the Hoa Hao Buddhist sect to disband its private army and to turn in by Feb. 15 deserters and draft dodgers the government claims the Hoa Hao are harboring. The government gave no estimate of how many of the sect are shouldering arms.

Viet police arrest former MSU professor

By MELISSA PAYTON
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing anti-war activist and MSU faculty member can now claim a unique to few others: he has been arrested by South Vietnamese police internationally publicized six and a half years ago.

David Hurwitz, a faculty member with the Michigan Urban Affairs (now the College of Urban Development) in 1969 and 1970, was one of nine Americans arrested last Friday by Saigon police and deported to Thailand.

Why did the California-based Indochina Peace Campaign, the sponsors of the embassy protest, pick Hurwitz to go?

"They wanted people from all walks of life, not just full-time activists," Hurwitz said. Hurwitz works for the Office of Equal Educational Opportunity with the Michigan

Dept. of State, and has been active against the war and is a self-described "anti-racist organizer" at MSU.

Armed with a large banner, placards and leaflets emblazoned with anti-war slogans in Vietnamese and English, the nine demonstrators, including well-known draft resister David Harris, stationed themselves in front of the embassy at 11:30 a.m.

Planning only to demonstrate for a short time, they were so encouraged by the support of the Vietnamese passerby, Hurwitz said, that it was decided to return the next day.

But when they went back to their hotels that evening, the demonstrators were greeted by about 50 Saigon police troops and armed off to Tan Son Nhut airport under armed guard to be deported to Bangkok.

The overwhelming accomplishment of the protest, he said, was a "feeling of solidarity with the Vietnamese people." At one point during the vigil, a busload of Vietnamese gave the hungry demonstrators bags of fruit and anti-war leaflets to replenish their used-up supply.

The demonstrators also wanted to show the South Vietnamese that the American people oppose the continuing U.S. involvement in the war and to alert Americans themselves of escalating military aid, he said.

President Ford has recently asked Congress to approve a $300 million emergency appropriation for Vietnam in addition to the $700 million already voted for this year.

"Saigon is an ugly repressive place," Hurwitz said.

He described a downtown scene he said particularly stuck in his mind:

"I saw a little girl who was obviously the calling card of some American GI, with features plainly half-American and half Vietnamese.

"Even Middle America buys it now," Brown said, referring sentiment against aid to South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Ford's plan of clemency lengthened

By JERRY T. BAULCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford extended his clemency program for one month, until March 1, because of heightened interest, the White House announced Thursday.

The program, in the absence of any presidential action, would have died tonight at midnight.

At the same time, three national groups repeated their call for universal and unconditional amnesty instead of Ford's conditional clemency which involves up to 24 months of alternative service in low-pay jobs.

The National Council of Churches in Special Ministries-Vietnam Generation, the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors and the American Civil Liberties Union said the program failed to achieve Ford's goal of binding the wounds of war. They predicted it would not succeed in the future.

The White House noted that only about 7,400 of an estimated 137,000 eligible men so far have decided to participate in the program announced last September.

Charles E. Goodell, chairman of the President's Clemency Board, had asked for a six month extension until July 1.

The board has jurisdiction over 8,700 convicted draft violators and about 111,000 former servicemen who were court-martialed or given punitive or undesirable discharges for going AWOL or deserting.

The Justice Dept. has control over 4,400 unconvicted draft evaders. The Defense Dept. is in charge of 12,500 unconvicted deserters.

All three programs are extended by Ford's order.

"OUR LONG NATIONAL NIGHTMARE IS OVER..."

Anti-war sentiments surface at conference

The 60s... the days of activism, and protest... newspaper, TV and radio... about rebellious, demonstrating students... names like Harris, Baez, and Fonda on every tongue... entry Joe and the Fish cheer... every over American involvement is back in the news again. The activists of the 70s, many of them of the mid '60s protests and no college students, say that good ole feeling has returned as well.

Washington, D. C. last week on Brown said:

"I find myself getting really angry about all these same feelings of the same anger, the same feeling and to deal with this problem."

and four other local peace activists in Washington for the "Assembly for Peace Agreement," a conference of 1,500 delegates nationwide and by Tom Hayden and Jane Indochina Peace Campaign.

The five, affiliated with the United Ministries in Higher Education Peace Center, paid their own expenses for a chance to rub shoulders with fellow peace freaks on the second anniversary of the signing of the Paris peace accords.

Lee Miller said the anger and the frustration she encountered were reminiscent of the old days.

"Not only that, but by the end of the conference there was hope that we haven't seen for years that we can stop the flow of additional funds to South Vietnam."

The atmosphere has changed somewhat, reflecting the growth that has taken place within the peace movement, Miller said.

"We're coming out of a lot of naivete," she said.

A common theme of the rejuvenated peace movement is that, though the activists are the more vocal, most Americans agree with their opposition to the war.

Humphrey's help unheeded

The Democratic party has made a poor showing at the beginning of the 94th Congress. It knows what it is against — President Ford's energy program — and it knows what it wants — to replace him in the White House in 1976 — but it has no party policy on energy to substitute for the policy it opposes.

The question after the last election in November was what the Democrats would do with their victory and their large majorities in the House and Senate. The answer so far is: not much.

Last Dec. 10, Hubert Humphrey wrote a private letter to his colleague, Speaker Carl Albert in the House of Representatives. It defines the problem of the Democratic party.

"You will recall the luncheon with the governors in Kansas City," he said to Albert. "At that time, I urged that you take the lead here in Congress to pull together the House and Senate leadership for the purpose of designing an over-all economic program."

"As it is now, we have a half dozen or more voices in the Congress announcing their own program. Our mutual friend, Mike Mansfield, has stated his economic program. You have stated yours. I have stated mine, and others have announced their plans. But there is no one Congressional Democratic leadership economic program to which the public can point or on which we can place our emphasis.

"As I see it, between now (mid-December) and the middle of January, you, as the speaker, should hammer out a policy and then present it to the respective caucuses of the House and Senate."

"Once the Democrats have agreed on what they want to do and where they want to go, then we should sit down with the President and his Administration and see if we can't come to some understanding. This should be followed by prompt action in the Congress. If there are disagreements between ourselves and the President — and I'm sure there may be — we must then proceed with our program. The people expect action.

"We simply must have someone who can call the shots (for the Democratic party) and give us a sense of direction," Humphrey wrote Albert — but nothing happened. There was no serious effort to get the Democrats together, or to define a Democratic answer to the economic and energy crisis.

This is one of the enduring mysteries of Washington these days — why plain and sensible suggestions like Humphrey's are rejected — and the Democrats have no monopoly on stupidity. Even President Ford, who has spent a quarter of a century on Capitol Hill, refused, like Albert, to try to work out in advance a compromise or accommodation between the Administration and the Congress on economic and energy policy.

The President challenged the Democrats, and took his argument and program to the country, and the response of the Democrats has been very weak. Divided among themselves, sure that they can win the presidency in 1976, but lacking either a party leader or program, they have resorted to Ford and the Republican party.

Maybe this Democratic strategy of opposition will work, and Ford is blamed, like Herbert Hoover, for economic distress, but old Humphrey probably had a good idea together, he said to Albert, get the people a feeling that the Democrats mean something and get going — they haven't done it.

Hawks eye chickens

Chickens would not be very comfortable if they heard of hawks banding together for the ostensible purpose of protecting both the hawks' interests and the chickens' interests.

By the same token, East Lansing tenants should be extremely wary of the union formed by landlords which holds its next closed door meeting on Feb. 6.

Landlords say they want to change their image as bad guys in the eyes of city residents, and work for ordinances that will help both tenants and landlords.

One would think that if landlords wanted to make peace with tenants, a tenant-landlord union could have been formed to work toward mutual interests and settle differences.

But instead, a landlord-only unit was formed.

This resounds with paternalism.

One of the goals of the landlord union is to formulate a code of ethics in dealing with tenants. While this may be a sincere action, it could also be nothing more than a screen for landlords to hand tenants the shaft with a smile.

If these landlords are honest in their quest for improving tenant-landlord relations, they should open up the meetings and let tenants see for themselves what sort of action landlords are planning.

The landlord union has a spark of potential hope for bettering the East Lansing rental situation. Tenants will want to watch the group closely for signs that it is indeed serious about its talk of improving conditions and relations.

At the same time, renters should bear the past history of East Lansing renting in mind and, in the event of failure by landlords to do what they say, perhaps consider forming a group of their own.

Let Robben go

Dear President Wharton, Once again your name has popped up on a list.

As one of the six finalists for the top spot at the University of California, you join an elite group that includes the likes of University of Michigan President Robben Fleming.

Please let Fleming have the job. Then he won't be able to address another batch of MSU grads and, if Van Cliburn gets locked up in his keyboard, maybe the University will finally get someone of Al Kaline's stature to speak at commencement.

Landlords

While I was interested to read that landlords seek a new image in East Lansing, several thoughts came to mind. First, while rent costs and the housing code both present problems, how many landlords would live next to property with cars parked on the front lawn? Second, the city — not just the landlords — must take some responsibility for the huge neighborhoods developing with no residential families. Third, does anyone, either landlord or city, have long-range goals for the type of city they would like East Lansing to be?

When all is said and done, I am sure landlords want to make money, and the more dollar's the better, even if this means a city with asphalted lawns, unsightly yards, unshoed walks, barbecues in living rooms, etc.

Who is landlord organizer Steve Blethen kidding? What a beautiful position. He's a member of the East Lansing Housing Commission and a power-to-be among the landlords (conflict of interest?). The entire situation is a big mess. And of course the University sits and watches. The entire city will suffer in the long run.

Isn't the real world pretty? Why not rent part of it?

Keep Wharton

Never before, in my many years in academic life, have I been so concerned and upset as I was when I read in the Jan. 28 State News that our prexy may be going west.

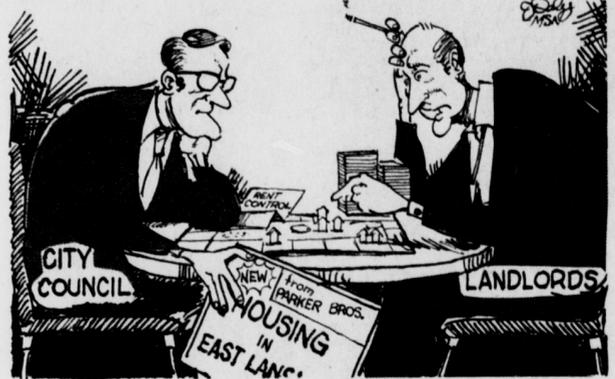

I refer to the report that Dr. Wharton is one of the six men being considered for president of the University of California.

It was especially disturbing to me to read the criteria the Cal regents have developed for the man they are seeking, for they give the inescapable impression the regents have already decided upon Dr. Wharton and have written the criteria around him.

"The regents are looking," the report said, "for someone very aggressive, firm and strong. Candidates will be judged on their scholarly background, proven administrative ability and familiarity in dealing with government agencies."

Having observed our dynamic president in action since 1970, I couldn't have described his qualities better.

Ever since the story broke, my answering service has been overloaded with calls from faculty and students asking what they can do to keep our prexy here on campus.

I haven't been able to get through to Barbados to clear my plan with Dr. Wharton, but I'm starting a petition drive to persuade him that we need him here at MSU.

The State News story indicates that Cal is trying to entice our prexy away with more money, balmy weather and a more far-flung academic empire. In the hope that the 'U' will match the Cal job offer when it comes, we're sending the petitions to the MSU Trustees.

Missing organ

One major difference between Demonstration Hall and Munn Ice Arena that I have noticed is the crowd "noise." A good friend who is around the team has relayed those same feelings from some of the players. The lack of the organ and its ability to charge up crowds with hockey's "traditional" chords is one reason for the much quieter crowd. The band does pretty well, though, as far as hockey bands go.

The Spartans are on top, but have lost Steve Colp and then a crucial game Saturday night. They can't afford to get down and we have to help them. Michigan Tech is the hottest team in the nation, and it will take a thunderous roaring crowd to defeat them this weekend.

One last thought: Joe Falls devoted his whole Sunday column to the Spartan hockey program and told us what we already know — Amo is the greatest. Falls also mentioned the medieval thinking that still prevails around here in reference to the size of the new arena. To have more sellouts at only 6,000 seats, rather than making more money is ridiculous — who says they won't sell out 8,000? If that kind of thinking is right, then let's lower Spartan Stadium down to 50,000 so we can have more football sellouts.

History lesson

Regarding Monday's State News editorial, "Court rules for kids," it should be pointed out that whoever wrote this opinion regarding the Supreme Court's 5-4 decision to acknowledge that public school students have procedural rights hasn't got his or her precedents straight.

Setting the admirableness of the decision aside, this editorialist has incorrectly implied that the U. S. Constitution is 199 years old. The first exception he or she takes with the Supreme Court decision is that it was "about 199 years too late," and that a student, as a citizen of the United States, should always have had "the right to defend himself or herself in the face of accusation according to the Bill of Rights." It should be pointed out that our Constitution was drafted in 1787, not 1776. The Amendment referred to, the Fifth, like the rest of the Bill of Rights, did not take effect until Dec. 15, 1791. So actually, if this decision is late at all, it was 184 years late, not 199 years.

Perhaps this editorialist can excuse the justices who dissented in the civil rights decision, Burger, Blackmun, Rehnquist, and Powell, if he or she realizes that Supreme Court justices, like newspaper writers, sometimes neglect their history.

Tim Yost
135 Burcham Drive

Editor's Note: In writing that the Supreme Court's decision was "about 199 years too late," the editorial writer was alluding to the Declaration of Independence, which many people think of as the runway of American democracy.

Stop the train

Recent years have witnessed many forms of the degradation of nature, but none is more dramatic or more tragic than the effect strip mining has on the land. (See letter by Barbara Hillman Jan. 25.) Not only are important environmental issues raised, but there is also the eyesore created by tornup countryside.

Anyone who has driven through once-beautiful Appalachia will know what I mean. Rounding a curve, the blue-green haze of mountains is gashed with a long black scar. Soon, greenery completely disappears, replaced with barren wasteland.

It must be decided in what direction we will go. Will we continue to abuse our natural surroundings to satisfy our cravings for luxury, or can we preserve nature for future generations?

Knowing how hard it is to stop a train once it starts rushing downhill, I can only hope it is not too late to stop this one before it picks up speed.

U gets what U pays for Untouched in Thursday's editorial, but apparently of sizeable concern to MSU students and others, is the issue of whether a man who has earned his living by despicable means may be paid to tell his story.

The answer is yes, but only because that is the way things work in our capitalistic society, where every commodity is tagged with a price. If people want to hear someone, they have to pay for it. And the current campus uproar indicates there is no lack of interest in Ron Ziegler.

Daniel Ellsberg, Robert Ardrey, Leonard Nimoy, Arthur C. Clarke, even commencement speakers all cost MSU money. Regardless of how they earn their regular living, they make money off speaking. So too with Ziegler.

The difference is that ASMSU has decided it will not use the fund of its constituents — who each pay 50 cents per term for ASMSU services — to "line the pockets" of a man who, if only indirectly, screwed the American public by lying to the press to camouflage the activities of his boss.

Hardly anyone would contend that Ron Ziegler is a champion of honesty and open doors. But the people have as much right to hear his half of the story as they have to hear Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein's. And the people in our society, have to pay for both sides. For Ziegler's side, it's $2,650 a lecture; for Woodstein's it's $8.95 per hardback copy of "All the President's Men."

ASMSU has decided that each student's 50-cent-per-term fee is ample enough to hear the goodies speak. But to hear the baddies speak (at least those ASMSU, in its moral righteousness, decides are baddies) students will not receive the benefit of this 50-cent fee, but must pay $1 of their own.

In the interests of literally free speech — free to the students who may then decide whether or not to attend — ASMSU must reverse its decision.

PIRGIM REPORTS: ECONOMY

Reduce taxes with defense cut

By MARION ANDERSON
Pirgim Legislative Director

There is no such thing as a free lunch. This is a home truth of economics — that nothing is free, that everything, eventually, is paid for by someone.

The myth is fading that the pump can be primed forever with big government deficits and an ever growing, ever more burdensome public debt. A huge debt financed through taxes is a lien upon the future. It simply means that the billions spent in financing the Vietnam war and other wars will not be available for future expenditure on social needs. The money has been spent, and is paid for year after year by high interest payments going to big banks and other investors.

The myth that payment can be deferred forever, or perhaps never need be made, has become central to the American psyche. It accords well with the concept of the endless frontier, the limitless wealth and resources our ancestors came to enjoy and exploit.

But the world is finite. Its resources are finite. And we must learn to live within their limits. Or the reckoning, when it comes, will be far more painful.

The federal budget being offered by President Ford embodies the economics of fraud.

While weeping over the inflation, he proposes to raise the Pentagon's expenditures $8.3 billion. The Pentagon's expenditures go up while perhaps 1,500,000 people are deprived of food stamps.

The enormous projected deficit of $30 to $40 billion or more means that the federal government will have to borrow this sum to pay its bills. To do so, it will compete in the money market with everyone else, industry and consumers, for the limited loan funds available.

As a result, businesses and home owners will find credit tighter than ever. Interest rates of 13 percent to 15 percent are predicted. This will have a crushing effect on all kinds of new capital investment as well as ordinary consumer purchases. So the downward spiral of recession will be intensified.

We can reverse this unhappy cycle of huge government deficits, high interest rates, declining capital investment, growing unemployment and recession. But reversing it means making choices, serious choices about what the government spends its money on.

Perhaps bureaucratic waste and undesired welfare can be cut, as some politicians keep promising but never achieving. But let's face it: that isn't where the big money is. Many government domestic programs are already cut to the bone.

This means coming into conflict with the most powerful and entrenched interest groups in the society. It means telling the military-industrial complex that they can no longer lay claim to 60 percent of the federal budget. It means a major cutback in the Pentagon's expenditures.

The $16 billion which Ford wants to give to the American people as a tax cut could and should be given back. But Ford's budget should be cut by the same amount.

The Pentagon can easily sustain a $16 billion cut. This would force a long overdue re-examination of our strategic goals.

We can phase out a number of generals and colonels. Waste and over runs would have to cease. Open bidding could become the order of the day in Pentagon procurement. We could even cancel some missile or bomber orders; no additional overkill capacity is needed.

A major cut in Pentagon spending would signal Congress' determination to come to grips with the twin problems of inflation and unemployment.

PIRGIM's study, "The Empty Pork Barrel: Michigan Unemployment and the Pentagon Budget," documents one of the reasons for cutting military spending. High taxes going to the Pentagon deprive people of the money they need to either make needed purchases or to raise local and state taxes. Pentagon spending, PIRGIM's study found, creates far fewer jobs than the same money spent by individuals, business or local government on civilian needs. A Pentagon budget of $80 billion costs Michigan alone 261,000 jobs.

The choice facing Congress is straightforward: more missiles, inflation and unemployment — or a limited military budget, stability, growth and jobs.

(PIRGIM REPORTS is a column provided to campus newspapers by the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan, containing reports for PIRGIM's student constituency on the effects of PIRGIM's work, information from the Capitol acquired by the PIRGIM professional staff, and current issues PIRGIM is researching or working on.)

Back to Disneyland

Think it's wonderful that, with six people unemployed in this country, we can afford to pay Ronald Ziegler to tell us the "truth" about Richard Nixon's medical bills, Pat Buchanan's Florida white house on the auction block. As I eat my macaroni dinner this week I can hold back the tears when I think of poor people surviving on a mere $100 per year pension. Perhaps with the little Ronny earns from his lecture we can help Uncle Dick out and even the government payroll. It certainly is a shame if he had to go back to his single Cruise job at Disneyland when he worked so hard to get where he is.

political scholars, legislators or government officials? There is nothing to be gained from listening to a jobless P. R. technician who wants to cash in on the sensationalist residue of a political scandal.

Again, if Ziegler wants to come to campus please allow him to do so. But save University funds for speakers who will offer something of academic value in return.

Turn Ron off

Tuesday I read with satisfaction the story in the State News about Boston University having the good sense and courage to cancel an appearance by Ron Ziegler. To my dismay, I then learned from Wednesday's State News that what Boston has rejected has been invited and will be paid to come here. If that weren't bad enough, this idiocy has been compounded by the usual senseless rationalizations such as are evoked by: "Freedom of speech," or "interest in what he has to say."

First, to satisfy everyone's possible interest, I should like to inform them that Ziegler will say that black is white, that the moon is in the sky, that the seas are green and that his boss is both a victim and an overly punished surrogate. Need we hear more, after umpteen years of straightfaced lying at the cost of years of wanton murder and death in Vietnam and Cambodia, much less the massive bombing attack on democratic processes at home? Good God, can anyone be stupid enough to want to pay to hear more, and support such a mouthpiece?

Freedom of speech is not a right to be subsidized. Let him come here, stand up on that great rock in the middle of our campus, and I'll be glad to come for free and boo as loud as I can — thus exercising my freedom of response. Freedom of speech, in fact, is only enjoyed in our culture when the viewpoint to be aired can command enough of a backing — financial and political — to breach the limitations imposed by mass communications. A rich radical couldn't buy TV time — anti-war activists, hell even Democratic doves, tried and failed. A poor average American couldn't air his views, unless granted the grace of a free on-the-spot interview. TV time is bought and paid for by Standard of American Acceptable, the company owned by Dow, Rockefeller, the scions of Dupont and maybe, unbeknownst to us all, the Ten Straight Men of the Year. And we have no choice but to hear and to see what they approve of. Freedom of choice? Not unless we turn off the set. Don't turn Ziegler on. It's a small choice, but for once it's our. And if Boston University can turn him off and drop him out, maybe they'll have started something going — if others have enough sense to follow suit.

Free speech

To: Bill Peltes, ASMSU Board
Re: Decision to rescind ASMSU funds in connection with Ron Ziegler visit
Dear Bill:

You can rest easy. MSU is not denying Mr. Ziegler his right of free speech. He can come here and speak any time he wants to — for free.

Marty Kushler

Inoperative contract

It appears that the State News and a number of students at MSU are confused as to the true nature of free speech. No one would object to Mr. Ziegler coming to campus and talking all day on his former associations with King Dick. The question to be dealt with is whether this university should pay a man who so actively and purposefully lied, misdirected and concealed to the American people the true goings on in the White House.

Ronald Ziegler was an essential part of one of the most corrupt political debaucheries in American history. Why let him profit from it?

Surely this man should come to MSU. But aside from paying his travel expenses, no money should enter his pockets. As to the question of breaking contracts such as those signed with Mr. Ziegler, why not just issue a statement to the Ziegler people declaring all previous commitments "inoperative?"

Eric Evanoff

Pass the hat

It is obvious that your Ziegler editorial was written in haste and without much forethought. Your writer made two fatal errors in his argument. One, free speech is not equated with a paid speech. Find it in the Constitution. I dare you. I am sure that I feel the same as most people do on this campus. Let Ziegler come and make his speech, no one should stop him, I won't. However, why should we be a part of paying criminals so future generations of Americans can say, "Look, crime does pay and rather well." If Ziegler wanted to make his speech on the basis of his convictions, he would make it just for the expenses of flying out here from San Clemente.

The second flaw of the editorial is the assumption that students weren't paying him to begin with. ASMSU funds come directly from the students, remember? Why should those of us not wanting to contribute to crime and the destruction of the Constitution have to support it unwillingly? No, let those who want to contribute to the continued delinquency of Richard Nixon and Ron Ziegler fork over their dollar. I won't, because I respect the Constitution and real free speech. I wasn't paid to exercise my right in writing this letter. Maybe I should have asked to have the hat passed around in the State News editorial office.

ASMSU guilty

I would like to remark on ASMSU's decision to drop its support of Ron Ziegler as a speaker.

It is very noble of ASMSU to deny Ron Ziegler of an "unjust" profit, but in so doing it has overstepped its position, and participated in an act deserving of equal condemnation.

The most obvious question is: should ASMSU take the position of benefactor.

that is, should it decide who is to become rich and who poor? Should not its position be to see that the student body is exposed to a controversial speaker?

If ASMSU condemns Ron Ziegler for his corrupt influence, how does it rationalize its present position? ASMSU has broken a verbal contract. True, it is merely a verbal contract which cannot be enforced, but does this not detract from its position or argument against Ziegler in that ASMSU is guilty of a loose honor?

If the members of ASMSU personally find a speaker politically objectionable, let them recall that this is not a criteria for representatives of a student body to use in choosing a candidate for this position.

To conclude, I would suggest that ASMSU return to its initial position, that is to support (monetarily) this speaker. Doing so will both expose the student body to a stimulating experience and restore ASMSU's healthy relationship with their co-sponsor. Finally, let me point out that I object strongly to the similarity of ASMSU's action to censorship.

Pay expenses

It is my opinion that ASMSU does not need to revoke entire financial support of Ron Ziegler's appearance at MSU, as Boston University did. There are some students who would like to hear what he has to say. Some people have not heard enough about Watergate.

An acceptable alternative plan may be to pay his expenses, yet see that he makes little or no profit from representing criminality or "citing the trend among Watergate celebrities to get rich on their criminal lazeurs."

Mr. Ziegler remarked that he did indeed have something to say, so let's not deny him freedom of speech, but pay expenses only, and let him reiterate this mysterious information.

Bedtime, kiddies

Be certainly happy to see the decision ASMSU has come regarding the visit of Ronald Ziegler. After all, MSU students are mature enough to handle differing viewpoints. We wouldn't want to confuse our mentality with anything Ziegler has to say. Besides, no MSU student would see and hear a major character in the blackmark of American political history. Remember, ASMSU is looking out for its interests.

Academic value

When your accusation that opposition to Ziegler's appearance is political, I agree. It is indeed a "Great Issue," but with respect to the higher questions of moral serenity and the legitimacy of using electoral process. Ziegler's role in administration during that affair was to present selected information to the public in a way that would maximize support and minimize political, or other, interests. We want to examine the important aspects of Watergate, why don't we invite Can't You Hear The Whistle Blowin'?

Not only can you hear the whistle blowing, but you can also hear the bells clanging and the lights flashing when the trains clamor by the Depot Restaurant.

Actually, aside from the whistle, the rest is staged, produced, and managed by The Depot's owner, Vince Makangi. The effect, though, is real to life.

Two years ago, Makangi revamped the railroad station that has been standing for over 70 years at 1203 S. Washington, Lansing, turning it into one of Michigan's showcase railroad restaurants.

Patrons receive their first taste of the gay 90's hospitality when they are greeted at the front door with a "Welcome Aboard" sign. From there on in, it's a trip down nostalgic Main Street.

The waitresses are adorned in granny dresses, and old-fashioned music plays in the background. The salad bar in an antique baggage cart and a wig-wag crossing signal standing in the corner also help set the stage.

The most precious of all the antiques in The Depot are three 60 year-old Standard Oil crowns from the tops of gasoline pumps. Boiler gauges from ancient steam engines are hung on the wall above the bar. A warning signal flashes from the back wall to heighten the effect.

Dining at The Depot brings back fond memories of the old neighborhood where the tempo of life was slower and patrons could sit, relax, and exchange the latest pieces of gossip. If those days were before your time, here's a chance to experience the way it was.

With leaded glass windows dating back 100 years bordering the dining area, customers can enjoy a moderately priced dinner in booths constructed from authentic railroad benches.

The Depot's menu, printed on a large facsimile of a Grand Trunk Western railroad baggage check, offers dinners for the entire family.

"We're a family oriented restaurant in a unique building," said Makangi.

The menu has items ranging from onion rings and wine, to crablegs and strip sirloins. Specialties are anything from seafood and steaks to spaghetti and fresh garden greens from the salad bar.

Sunday specials at reduced prices include spaghetti, fried shrimp, or fried chicken with the salad bar accompanying each dinner.

Dancing to a dixie-land band is the feature attraction on weekends beginning at 9:30 p.m. It's an exciting time at a different pace. The capacity of The Depot is 154 people on the weeknights and 128 when dancing prevails.

The Depot is open everyday with a special luncheon menu.

There have been no corners cut, nor a single detail spared to provide "passengers" of The Depot with an authentic atmosphere. The same care has been taken in providing reasonable prices on both menu items and drinks. Making your noon and evening meals a thoroughly enjoyable and memorable experience is what The Depot is all about. All Aboard!

Flo and Eddie mix rock with acid wit

It was stab from the past at The Brewery recently with Flo and Eddie (formerly Mark Volman and Howard Kaylan of the Turtles), whose musical guerrilla theater performance earned them a pair of encores.

The Hulk's boss sets stage for comic book speech here

Stan Lee, commander-in-chief of The Hulk, Spider-Man, Doctor Doom and yes, even Mr. Fantastic himself, will discuss the super-hero business and comic books at MSU and in East Lansing Saturday.

Lee, the publisher of Marvel Comics, will speak at 2:30 p.m. in 108B Wells Hall and at 8:30 p.m. in Erickson kiva. Tickets can be purchased in advance for $2 at the Union ticket office or at the Curious Book Shop, 307 E. Grand River Ave. Tickets will also be on sale for $2.50 at the door.

The topic of Lee's speech is "Comic Books and The World Around Us."

Lee will also hold an autograph session at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Curious Book Shop. "Stan Lee is responsible for the rejuvenation of the superhero with the origins of Spider-Man and The Fantastic Four in the early 1960s," said Ray Walsh, owner of the Curious Book Shop.

Lee is considered responsible for creating the so-called "Marvel Age of Comics," in 1960. Besides creating such popular characters as Spider-Man, The Hulk, Dr. Strange, The Fantastic Four and The Silver Surfer, he breathed new life into the dormant careers of such tried and true characters as Captain Marvel, The Human Torch and Captain America.

In 1939, Lee was hired by Marvel Comics as a copywriter and assistant to the editor. Shortly afterward he was promoted to executive editor, a position which — in addition to being art director and head writer — he held until March, 1972, when he was named publisher of Marvel Comics. Lee has written no less than two complete comic magazines per week for 30 years. He has also written newspaper articles, radio scripts, filmstrips, screenplays and other literary endeavors.

Lee's visit is sponsored by the Union Activities Board.

State News Staff Writer
After 10 years in the rock and roll business, most performers would be either very rich or very crazy.

Flo and Eddie are not very rich.

The "re-united" Turtles' performance at The Brewery Wednesday night was more a showcase for two singing comedians than a simple rock and roll show. Aside from owning two of the best sets of vocal chords in the business, Mark Volman and Howard Kaylan, as Flo and Eddie, also possess two of the sharpest minds ever working the rock and roll circuit.

The poor devils are walking encyclopedias of useless information about stupid television shows and worthless rock and roll bands. Mentioning everything from Tony Orlando and Dawn to rock messiahs Uriah Heep, the pair kept The Brewery audience hysterical between songs.

The songs themselves were classics. The set began with Flo and Eddie emerging onstage wearing glitter masks and capes; singing, "I'm Cheap, We're Cheap, You're Cheap," no doubt written beforehand to acknowledge the rather limited capacities of the concert venues they were playing on the new tour. Between hilarious monologues, Kaylan and Volman managed to squeeze in four Turtles' singles — "It Ain't Me Babe," "Eleanor," "You Showed Me" and "Happy Together" — plus several songs from their two albums as Flo and Eddie.

Certainly regarding their between-set patter as a vital part of the performance, the duo used a few of their usual skits, including the Flying Sanzini Brothers and both "Eddie Are You Kidding?" and "Do you Like My New Car?" from their days as Mothers of Invention.

Intermittently speaking of rock star Dildos and the Lansing mentality in general, Kaylan as Eddie, dominated most of the night's proceeding. In the middle of any song, he was likely to break out into something totally different.

In fact, in the course of the night, fragments of "Kung Fu Fighting," "When the Music's Over," "Bang a Gong," "The End," and "Jumpin' Jack Flash" were all briefly heard.

The group's mix of comedy and musical material works very well. One wonders, however, how their performance might have been affected had they not been in such good spirits. As it was, the audience was receptive enough to call for two encores. Their final number, featuring the memorable lyrics, "You want boogie, you assholes, we'll give you boogie" was one of the night's highlights.

Though billed as Flo and Eddie and the Turtles, Kaylan and Volman were the only original Turtles in the entire band Wednesday night. The pair picked a back-up band to accompany them for their tour, promoting the release of "Happy Together Again" repackaged as "The Greatest Hits," on Records. Though hardly professional as predecessors Aynsley Dunbar, Don Peake or Gary Rowles, the band solid enough to provide an accompaniment for Flo and Eddie's many antics.

Crusaders appear at Stables

The Crusaders, who have blended various styles of music to form their own mellow, memorable sound, will appear in two separate shows at 8 and 11 p.m. Sunday at the Stables.

Advance tickets are available at The Stables and at Discout Records, East Lansing, for $4. Admission will be $5 at the door.

For over 22 years, The Crusaders, formerly known as The Jazz Crusaders, have pushed the limits of music, blending jazz with be-bop and rock with Rachmaninoff to produce a sound that has won them every available award — from gold albums and Playboy Musicians Polls, to accolades from critics both in jazz and rock circles.

The Crusaders are: Wayne Henderson, trombone; Wilton Felder, tenor sax; Joe Sample, keyboards; Stix Hooper, drums, and Larry Carlton, guitar.

"We changed our name, dropping the 'jazz' because it frees our music from reaching one kind of audience, the audience that listens to jazz," explained Stix. "Unfortunately, it's still true that too many people — and radio stations — listen by name and not by music."

"The Crusaders have a very broad approach to music," he added. "In our earlier days we were doing some of the same things with our music, but we just couldn't get the acceptance. So when we dropped the word "jazz," even though we've been playing some of the same kind of music, we have been getting a broader audience."

The Crusaders most recent album on Blue Thumb Records is "Southern Comfort."

The Advent Loudspeaker

Advent's loudspeakers, both the original ADVENT loudspeaker and the smaller ADVENT loudspeaker — shown here are intended to be compared in audible performance, including frequency band width, with the most elaborate and expensive speaker available. That may be difficult to accept; we realize, but it is true and verifiable in listening test.

At HI-FI BUYS know that you can spend 300 dollars more on a speaker than one costing 100 dollars! Generally, the only positive statement that can be made regarding loudspeakers and their relative cost is that the more you spend the bigger the enclosure is and therefore they will probably play louder. In most cases we don't think these are good reasons for you to part with 300 dollars. It may be comforting to know that it's possible for HI-FI BUYS to sell you as good a product for 70 dollars, by golly we will, and that's a promise.

With jazz musician to conduct workshops

Musician Gary Burton brings his jazz quintet to MSU this weekend for a two-night set and a jazz workshop. Burton, whose roots go as far back as Stan Getz, is recognized as a virtuoso by contemporary jazz artists.

Jazz musician Gary Burton will visit MSU today and Saturday for jazz workshops and performances.

Burton and his quintet will perform at 8 and 10:30 p.m. in McDonel kiva tonight and Saturday. Tickets are $3 and are available at the Union ticket office, Sounds and Diversions (Free Spirit) and Discount Records.

Open workshops will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. in 31 Union today, and from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday in McDonel kiva.

Appearing with Burton in his quintet are Steve Swallow, bass; Bob Moses, drums, and Mike Goodrick and Pat Metheny on guitar.

Burton's advanced techniques and co-operative efforts with the most prolific contemporary jazz composers (Chick Corea, Keith Jarrett, Carla Bley and Mike Gibbs) promise to offer truly unique insights into the processes and performance of "new jazz."

Burton first achieved national prominence as a featured soloist with George Shearing (1963) and Stan Getz (1964-1966). The Gary Burton Quartet was formed in 1967 and since then has continually traveled world wide — performing concerts, recording and winning polls and critical acclaim.

Burton's quintet was one of the first jazz groups to combine the newer, more sophisticated forms of rock music with the improvisational qualities of jazz. His own four mallet mastery of the vibraphone has literally set a new standard of performance for that instrument.

Detroit Symphony performs at MSU

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra will present a concert at MSU in the University Auditorium Saturday at 8:15

The orchestra will be under the direction of Aldo Ceccato, music director for the orchestra. They will play Rossini's "Il Viaggio a Reims," Lalo's "Concerto for Orchestra in D major" and the "Scottish Symphony" by Mendelssohn.

kyo quartet

give concert

The Tokyo String Quartet, touring the United States, will give a concert at the Fairchild Theater tonight at 8:15.

The quartet will play music of Bartok and Brahms. Tickets are being sold at the Ticket Office. Price for students is $5 and $2.50 for students.

The Detroit Symphony, founded in 1914, is coming here directly from concerts at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D. C. It is the resident symphony at the Meadowbrook Music Festival and the Worcester Festival in Massachusetts.

Ceccato has been the music director for the Detroit Symphony since last year. He regularly conducts the London Philharmonic, the New Philharmonia and the Covent Garden Opera. This fall he will become general music director for the Hamburg Philharmonic, giving him directorship of two major orchestras.

Soloist in the Lalo work will be Italo Babini, the principal cellist of the Detroit Symphony since 1960.

This concert is part of the MSU Lecture-Concert International Orchestras Series. Tickets are $6.50, $5.50 and $4.00 at the Union Ticket Office. MSU students may purchase tickets at half price.

DRUG CENTER BUDGETED ADDITIONAL MONEY Commission revises allocation of funds

By JOE KIRBY
State News Staff Writer

The East Lansing Planning Commission has completed a revised community development program recommending how the city's $168,000 in first-year federal funds should be spent. The commission was revising a report drawn up by the city planning dept. following a series of meetings with citizens. The big losers in the revised plan are the neighborhood meeting centers program, the Listening Ear, the Tenants Resource Center, a study of day care and the recycling program. The winners were the Drug Education Center, a newly established position of Community Development director, the park land purchasing program and the Valley Court Community Center renovation project.

The program discussed at the Wednesday night meeting covered only the first year money. The city could receive another $1 million in the following two years of the federal program. The biggest change in the program was the cutting of $45,000 which was originally budgeted to renovate four neighborhood centers.

The commission also increased the money allocated to the Drug Education Center from $6,350 to $23,730 so the center can continue and expand its health services. Commission member Elinor Holbrook stressed the fact that the center needed at least $20,000 in Community Development funds because Ingham County had withdrawn its support from the clinic.

But other commission members questioned the fact that the center provided free medical care instead of requiring people to pay. "I feel where an individual can afford to pay for it he should and where he can't the physician should donate his service," said Stephen Rous, commission member.

Rous also questioned the money allocated for Listening Ear and the Tenants Resource Center since both provide free services. The commission voted to delete the $10,000 budgeted to Listening Ear for expansion of its facilities and reduced the amount budgeted to the Tenants Resource Center from $2,880 to $1,000.

The commission added money to some other programs, though. The money allocated to purchase park land was increased from $26,770 to $36,770. A new program to renovate the Valley Court Community Center was established after it was suggested by citizens at last week's public hearing.

Symposium series to focus on ethics, law this weekend

A series of three evening symposiums focusing on ethics and the professions with emphasis on law and medicine, begins this weekend.

The symposiums are sponsored by four campus honor societies.

Kenneth E. Boulding, an economist, author and faculty member at the University of Colorado, will open the series tonight, speaking on "The Profession as a Two-Faced Monster." His speech begins at 8 p.m. in the Veterinary Clinic auditorium.

In a second session planned for Wednesday, Alan F. Heath and Cassius E. Street will discuss legal ethics in the Wilson Hall auditorium at 8 p.m.

Heath is chairman of the Michigan Bar Assn.'s Committee on Professional and Judicial Ethics. Street is a Lansing attorney and former president of the Lansing Trial Lawyers.

Dr. Andrew D. Hunt Jr. and Dr. Myron S. Magen will lead discussions Thursday in the third symposium, "Health and Social Priorities," which looks at medical ethics. The concluding session will be in the Wilson Hall auditorium at 8 p.m.

Hunt is dean of the MSU College of Human Medicine and Magen is dean of the College of Osteopathic Medicine.

Sponsoring the series are Phi Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi and Tau Beta Pi.

The symposiums are open to the public. There is no admission fee.

"To build them first and wait for people to come in is going the wrong way," said Alan Schmid, commission member.

The commission then allocated $20,000 of this money to establish the position of community development director. This position would be for the purpose of monitoring the community development program as it

Clarification

In Monday's State News an article about Free U left the impression that the photography class will meet every Friday at C307 Wells Hall. However, the class is holding its first meeting at 3 p.m. today in C307 Wells Hall. Future time and place of meetings will be determined at the first meeting.

"THE DEVILS"

is one hell of a film!
The State News reviewer agrees:

"The Devils" based upon John Whiting's play and ultimately upon Aldous Huxley's book "The Devils of Loudun" is, for the most part, a true story of events that took place in the second and third decades of the 17th century in France.

On one level, "The Devils" deals with horrible persecution, torture and execution of Father Grandier, Oliver Reed, a worldly priest burned at the stake for the demonic possession of a cloistered convent of Ursuline nuns.

On another level, "The Devils" illustrates the religious and political opportunism that brought about Grandier's trial and execution.

Finally, "The Devils" portrays the lust and depravity that are often so large a part of religious hysteria.

Grandier is destroyed because he defended his city's autonomy against the increasing power of the monarchy and Cardinal Richelieu, and also because he unwittingly became the object of the perverse sexual fantasies of the Ursuline's prioress, Vanessa Redgrave.

Sanity is almost totally banished from director Russell's ghastly panorama of pits filled with bloating plague victims, nuns writhing in the heat of sexual sweat and holiness, masked revelers gawking and cackling at the sadomasochistic orgies of the possessed and the indignities and tortures forced upon the nuns and Father Grandier to extort accusations and confessions.

But of course, it is all done for the glory of God.

The performances are excellent. Oliver Reed and Vanessa Redgrave, in particular, handle the complexities of their characters with insightful deftness.

Reed's Grandier is sensual, vain, combative, petty, self-destructive and, in the end, exceedingly noble and brave—an intensely contradictory set of characteristics which he manages to integrate into a most believable whole.

Vanessa Redgrave, as the hideously licentious Sister Jeanne Of The Angels, is terrifyingly powerful in the subtleties of her characterization. Deformed in mind and body, driven by vile, blasphemous passions that are awesome in their intensity, Sister Jeanne is a nightmare creation that leaves audiences stunned and shaken.

Grad students protest taxes on scholarships

MARY ANN CHICK
News Staff Writer

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) knows for sure that graduate assistants pay taxes on the stipend they receive, and they are now asking for a refund.

Five of the seven students have paid the IRS the taxes and are now asking for a refund.

Two students, John Arnold, 8229 Bailey St., and Don Dragt, 210 Northlawn St., received an $800 tax refund. The IRS audited their income tax forms and has asked for the money back.

Student's benefit
"The IRS is saying their cases depend on two things," Brashler said. "Was the experience for the benefit of the student or the University and where did the University get the money for the assistantships?"

In the past, the IRS has said doing research in the benefit of the student and teaching is a service for the University, Brashler said. The IRS taxes the teaching assistant but not the research assistant.

"We feel that doing research or teaching is for the benefit of the student," said George Seperiche, COGS president. "And neither should be taxed."

The source of funding for the assistantships is another critical point in deciding if the money should be taxable.

General fund money
If the money comes from the general fund from the state, the University is compelled by law to withhold taxes from the money. If the assistantship is funded with federal money, no taxes are withheld, Seperiche said.

"Money for teaching assistants usually comes from the general fund from the state while money for the research assistants is from the federal government," Seperiche said.

COGS is hoping to use a tax case of 1971 as a precedent for its tax cases.

In 1971, two Wayne State University graduate students went to tax court over an exemption they had claimed on their 1967 tax form.

Exemption upheld
The married couple had excluded the money they received for teaching as income. The couple claimed that since teaching was required of all graduate students in that particular doctoral program, the money could not be taxed.

The judge upheld the taxpayer's exemption for five reasons. First, a WSU official testified the money was given to graduate students to help them finish their education. Second, financial need was the main consideration in making the awards. Third, graduate students with or without the award had the same duties and responsibilities. Fourth, the actual services were designed to give the student additional training and were not designed for the benefit of the school. Fifth, the students were denied the benefits usually given University employees, including workmen's compensation, retirement coverage and health insurance.

COGS hopes the cases will be settled by the end of this term. No court date has been set yet.

New Nixon evidence may be revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Say- are few "smoking guns lying around our office."

Evidence unconstitutional
Ruth said much of his evidence is one-side and unsubstantiated and predicted its public disclosure would be challenged in court as unconstitutional "within an hour."
"If I'm ordered to do it, I'll do it and throw it into court. That's all I'm saying," Ruth said in testimony before a House criminal justice subcommittee.

Ruth also testified under questioning that he has no intention of prosecuting Nixon to test President Ford's pardon of him.
Possible indictments
The special prosecutor said he may seek further Watergate indictments but refused to indicate whom they might involve.

Former Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski said Congress' ordering full disclosure of the prosecution evidence against Nixon would put him in a dilemma.
Jaworski said Nixon let him listen to some tapes, never revealed, that were "highly embarrassing to people in public office" to convince Jaworski they were not relevant to the Watergate prosecution.

Jaworski said he agreed after listening to the tapes that they were not relevant and so did not subpoena them.
Significant information
"I know some information I would term tremendously juicy," Jaworski told the congressmen. "The information might be termed significant," he added later, "but not as far as our work is concerned, not as far as bringing charges."

"I would be in a dilemma either of not disclosing something that I knew or disclosing something I promised not to divulge," he said.
Ruth and Jaworski testified against legislation proposed after the Nixon pardon to require the special Watergate prosecutor to include full disclosure of evidence against Nixon in the final report it already is required to submit to Congress.

Abuse of power
Ruth said his required report to Congress will include evidence of abuse of office by Nixon against the Internal Revenue Service and other agencies.
He said, "I would hope to have a fairly complete report ready for Congress sometime this year."

Jobs available
In a related development, a Justice Dept. spokesman said that Deputy Atty. Gen. Laurence H. Silberman has promised department jobs for all staff members at the prosecutor's office, if they want them after the Watergate prosecution goes out of business.

5. Graduate students should make an appointment to see their respective academic advisers.

COLLEGE OF OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE

The Student Affairs Office will conduct pre-enrollment for all COM students on the standard curriculum during the week of February 13. COM students on alternate programs may pre-enroll upon presentation of a completed, adviser-approved spring term schedule. Non-COM students must present a signed authorization. All necessary forms may be obtained in the Student Affairs Office (A-339 East Fee Hall).

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Students with majors in the College of Engineering should have received information about advising appointments from their adviser.
Students who have not received notification should contact their advisers immediately.

JUSTIN MORRILL COLLEGE

1. During the period Feb. 7 - 13 students should see their academic assistant or faculty adviser to plan their academic schedule for spring term. SENIORS are reminded that for graduation, your Field of Concentration must have the approval of your JMC faculty adviser.
2. Justin Morrill students will early enroll for all courses in the hall outside 59 Snyder Hall from 8 - 11:30 A.M. according to the alpha schedule and dates published in the Spring 1975 edition of the MSU Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook.
3. Course descriptions of spring term JMC courses will be available in the College Advising Center (11 Snyder) February 7th.
4. NON-JMC STUDENTS: All courses in Justin Morrill College are open to non-JMC students on a space available basis. Enrollment priority will be given to JMC students in most courses. Non-JMC students receive second priority. Non-JMC students should early enroll for all courses. Students enrolling in a JMC Independent Study, Senior Thesis, or Senior Project must submit a proposal form in 59 Snyder Hall at the time of registration.
5. Questions about courses or the college program can be answered in the College Advising Center (11 Snyder) or by calling 3-9599.

COLLEGE OF VETERINARY MEDICINE

Preventive
All students should see their adviser by February 12. Appointment schedules are posted outside the adviser's office.
Veterinary
Early enrollment for all students will be coordinated by the Dean's Office.

MEDICAL TECHNOLOGY STUDENTS

All Seniors must make an appointment and see their advisers during February 3-5.
Freshman, Sophomores, and Juniors who have problems or questions should call for an appointment and see an advisor between February 6-12, 353-7800.

COLLEGE OF HUMAN ECOLOGY

Students should make individual appointments with your advisers during the academic advising period, February 3 - 12. Appointment sheets will be posted outside advisers' offices—advisers will not be available on a "drop in" basis. All seniors should see their academic advisers before the early enrollment period!

COLLEGE OF URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Majors in Urban & Metropolitan Studies and Racial & Ethnic Studies are expected to plan their Spring term schedule with their academic advisers between February 3-12. Appointments should be made with their advisers. Non-Urban Development students should consult with the Director of Student Affairs, Room 114 West Owen Graduate Center, 3-1803, if they wish to receive information about programs and courses.

CHANGE OF MAJOR

FRESHMEN AND SOPHOMORES: University College students with 84 or fewer credits initiate changes of major preference in the appropriate University College Academic Student Affairs Office.
South Campus Residents: S33 Wonders Hall
Brody Residents: 109 Brody Hall
East Campus residents: 229 E. Akers
North Campus and Off - Campus Residents, including Shaw Hall: 170 Bessey Hall

JUNIORS AND SENIORS:

A student wishing to change his major in one degree college to a major in another degree college must initiate the change in the office of the assistant dean of the college in which he is registered. If the change is approved, it becomes effective at the beginning of the next term.
The student must meet the requirements for graduation given in the catalog current at the time the change is effective. Thirty credits must be completed while enrolled in the major in the college in which the degree is to be earned.
Residence college students (James Madison, Justin Morrill, Lyman Briggs) must initiate changes of major in the student affairs or dean's office of their respective college.
COUNSELING: Facilities of the Counseling Center are available to assist students considering a change of major or major preference.

Educationally handicapped run parlor

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

Who would have dreamed that ice cream dribbling off a high school student's chin would be a sign of educational progress?

Seventeen educationally handicapped students at the Eaton Rapids High School would. For them, ice cream in the school means money in the bank and practical experience with business practices. During the noon hours, educationally handicapped students work in the Cold Tongue Ice Cream Parlor, a renovated classroom, as a way to gain valuable on-the-job experiences of working with the public and running a business. In addition to working for experience, the students earn enough money each year to take a one-day field trip.

The students are participating in a program that was set up by Bryce Thomson, vice president and general manager of Miller Dairy Farms, Inc.

"This program is not to create an oversupply of soda jerks," Thomson said. "Ice cream is simply the motivation or the vehicle to learn retailing and merchandising."

"The idea originally was developed to create in the classroom an atmosphere with more relevance and meaning for the student," said Richard Blett, principal of the high school. Blett said the program would allow the educationally handicapped a chance to acquire skills in order to compete with other students after graduation.

The Cold Tongue Parlor was provided with old machinery and demonstrations on how to scoop ice cream by Miller Dairy Farms.

"Already the students have learned to relate to the public, learned to make change, and a lot of them have overcome shyness," Thomson said.

The ice cream parlor, in addition to its educational merits, has been a very profitable venture for the school, providing enough money for a one-day stint for the parlor workers to Chicago in 1973 and a day trip to Cedar Point Amusement Park last year.

Thomson got the idea for the ice cream shop when Blett mentioned to him that new classroom experiences were being sought for the educationally handicapped and Thomson mentioned his idea.

Blett said he turned the idea over in his mind until he called Thomson to his office two weeks later and started to set up the program as it is now.

Blett said that the ice cream parlor is only the first phase of a four-part program at the school to ready the educationally handicapped for the working world. The next phases included working inside and outside the school building until the student qualifies to hold a full-time job in his or her senior year.

"The parents are 100 per cent in favor of it," Blett said. So far, community reaction has been overwhelmingly favorable. Comments from officers of the Eaton Rapids School System administration have been full of praise as well.

"It is a fine, unique program," said J. Dean Winter, president of the Eaton Rapids Board of Education. "It also has a great deal of nutritional value, too."

Finance that new car at your credit union and get a SECOND REBATE!

Rarely has there been a better time to buy a new car than right now! Dealers are dealing and manufacturers are offering substantial rebates.

As if that weren't enough to persuade you to buy now, your MSU Employees Credit Union will refund the first month's interest when you finance your 1975 model car with us between Feb. 3 and April 30, 1975. That's right! The first 30 days interest will be returned to you when you make your first car payment. And remember, the first month's interest is larger than any of the others because when you finance anything at your credit union you pay interest only on the outstanding balance.

In addition, your low-cost credit union loan is covered by credit life insurance at no extra charge. And down payment requirements are modest — usually no down payment is required!

If you have an Instant Cash revolving credit account, just give us a call or tell the dealer you want to use ABC Cash financing from your credit union.

Do yourself — and the economy — a big favor right now! Go get that new car. A buyer's market like this isn't going to last forever!

Chrysler asks tax break to ease unemployment

LANSING (UPI) — Chairman Lynn Townsend of Chrysler Corp. told a state Senate committee today that a temporary removal of the 4 per cent sales tax on new cars could put laid-off auto workers back on the job.

"Not only would such a tax incentive support the action of our cash rebate programs by encouraging sales and employment here in Michigan, it would also put the automotive state of Michigan in a position of leadership," Townsend said.

Townsend appeared with other industry executives at a hearing called by the Senate Taxation Committee considering tax incentives designed to boost car sales. One such proposal is removal of the sales tax which could mean a savings of $200 on a $5,000 car.

Townsend said the State of Michigan, with more auto workers than any other in the nation, "has a special opportunity to contribute to its own revitalization by removing one more hindrance to increased car sales."

The sales tax suspension proposal would be retroactive to January, assuring that anyone who buys a car before the tax is suspended can expect a tax break. Another proposal would allow new car purchasers an income tax credit.

Townsend said he could understand arguments against any tax breaks during a period of recession because the state needs more revenue not less.

Chrysler is the only one of the "Big Four" auto companies giving its wholehearted support to the legislation.

American Motors went on record "in favor of the exemption," but in its testimony mentioned only the detrimental impact it would probably have on the state's fiscal stability.

Chrysler, the largest employer in the City of Detroit, employed upwards of 90,000 workers in Michigan at the end of 1974.

EPA undecided about gas action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) said today it has decided whether to appeal a decision overturning regulations designed to drastically reduce the amount of lead in gasoline.

But the National Petroleum Refiners Assn. and four major manufacturers of lead additives took the agency to court to block the regulations. A U.S. Court of Appeals panel in December ruled against EPA and earlier this week issued a written decision elaborating on its reasons.

The lead used in gasoline every year was a significant health hazard. EPA contended lead was a proven health problem and that attacking it through gasoline was a way to rid the environment of a significant source.

but have not yet decided whether to appeal it," a spokesman said. The ruling has no impact on other EPA regulations requiring certain gas stations to carry lead free gasoline in order to fill the needs of 1975 model cars which have pollution control devices that can be ruined if leaded gasoline is burned in them.

Spartans out to leash Huskies

By MIKE LITAKER
State News Sports Writer

Trying to keep from being thrown to the dogs will be the main concern of MSU's hockey team this weekend as the icers attempt to fend off the rabid Michigan Tech Huskies.

Tech, which has won five of its last six games, comes to Munn Arena after annihilating Denver last weekend, 11-5 and 7-0, to qualify itself as the hottest thing on ice in the West.

High scoring centers Bob D'Alvise and Mike Zuke lead the Huskie goal producers. The duo are currently running two-three in WCHA scoring.

D'Alvise has notched 20 goals this season and has contributed to Tech's almost seven goals per game scoring pace of late.

Zuke and forwards George Lyle and Bill Steele have racked up 60 goals between the three of them.

"They're big and tough and score heavy," Bessone said. "Zuke hasn't bothered us much in the past but Steele always gave us a lot of trouble even though he's just a little guy."

"I'm just hoping our forechecking game is there. We're expecting a rough weekend," Bessone added.

Michigan Tech coach John MacInnes realizes his Huskies need to win both games from the Spartans this weekend if his team is to stay in contention for first place.

"We are probably facing our most important series in the past three seasons," MacInnes noted. "They won two games from us here at home, both in the third period after we had been ahead. We must redeem ourselves this weekend."

Throwing their weight around at the blue line for the Huskies will be defensemen Bob Lorimer and Bruce Abbey. The pair lead the team in penalties and are the most likely candidates to fulfill Bessone's prophecy on seeing some heavy bodychecking.

MacInnes' choice in goal will be junior goaltender Jim Warden. Warden leads the WCHA netminders with a sparkling 3.14 goals-against average besides having registered two of the three shutouts turned in by league goalies.

Bessone will counter in the nets with Ron Clark, while keeping his lineup intact.

Jack Johnson will continue to see added action at left wing on the Spartans' third line along with some spot duty on defense.

"Jack has been away from defense for nearly a year and a half, so until he gets the feel of the position again, we'll just gradually work him back to playing the point," Bessone said.

Earlier in the year when the two teams met up in Houghton, MSU came out with a 4-2 and 5-4 series sweep over the Huskies. This time around it won't be so easy though, and might prove you can't teach a new dog old tricks.

Both games have been sold out for several weeks. About 1,000 standing room tickets will be going on sale outside the arena ticket offices about a half hour before the opening face-off each night.

Second place Minnesota will be on home ice this week to face Colorado College in their quest to overtake the Spartans.

Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA)

Game time for both tonight and Saturday night is 7:30.

"Tough weekend," Bessone snorted in sizing up the up-depending on how successful it is in these next few games, a post-season tourney bid may still be within reach.

In Illinois MSU will confront a vastly improved team from last season and a potential spoiler.

Under the direction of first-year coach Gene Bartow, Illinois has posted a mediocre 7-9 record this season but has shown flashes of brilliance. Its most recent success was against Ohio State last Saturday in a 66-62 upset victory.

Forward Rick Schmidt, an All-Big Ten second team choice last season, is scoring at a 20 point clip this year for the Illini and is aptly supported by 6-6 guard Otho Tucker's 18 point average.

Spartan center Lindsay Hairston and forward Terry Furlow, despite scoring only seven and eight points respectively Monday night against Northwestern, are still the No. 2 and 3 scorers in the conference. Hairston is gunning 19.9 points per game in Big Ten competition and Furlow has a 19.3 average.

Hairston has also moved into contention for the top conference rebounding spot averaging 10 a game, second to Purdue's John Garrett at 11.9. Hairston led the conference in rebounding last season with better than a 14 caroms per game average.

Spartans battle Illinois in conference TV game

By CHARLES JOHNSON
State News Sports Writer

MSU's basketball team will hit the road starting this weekend for what could be the deciding phase of its season.

The Spartans open a four-game road stint Saturday against Illinois in the regionally televised Big Ten Game of the Week. Tip-off time is 3:05 p.m. and the game will be telecast on WLX-TV, channel 10.

Gus Ganakas' squad takes a 4-4 conference record into the contest against the Illini, who currently stand at 3-5 in the Big Ten. After facing Illinois, the Spartans play Ohio State in Columbus Monday night then journey back out on the road in a nonconference game against Notre Dame Wednesday and a conference clash with arch-rival Michigan next Saturday.

Success has been very minimal for MSU on road courts this season. Three of the Spartans' conference losses have been on foreign grounds and they are yet to register a Big Ten win on the road.

MSU's next home appearance won't be until Feb. 15 and by then, the destiny of the team should be pretty much determined. The cagers 10-5 mark on the year is still respectable and depending on how successful it is in these next few games, a post-season tourney bid may still be within reach.

Matmen battle loaded Cyclones

By PAT FARNAN
State News Sports Writer

The Iowa State Cyclones, who have blown out about everybody they have encountered to date, take a whirl at Grady Peninger's MSU wrestling team at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Jenison Fieldhouse.

For the Spartans, ranked sixth nationally, the match will be their first home encounter since Jan. 13.

Iowa State is rated second behind intrastate rival and 1974 Midlands champion Iowa. Those two squads bumped heads earlier this year and finished in a 19-19 standstill.

The Spartans lost to Iowa 21-9 in East Lansing Jan. 10.

"It's going to be a real dogfight up and down the line," Peninger said. "We know they're favored — on paper, that is."

The Spartans talented trio of Pat Milkovich (126) Scott Wickard (190) and Larry Avery (heavyweight) will undergo its sternest test of the year.

The Cyclones have loads of firepower including three All-Americans, a pair of former Midlands champions and a whole lot more.

At 118, the Cyclones' Mike Land is 26-3-0. He picked up a third place finish in the Midlands along the way.

One of the highlights of the evening should be at 126 where Spartan defending national champion Pat Milkovich squares off with Bob Antonacci. Antonacci is 26-5-2 and finished fifth in the NCAA last year.

An Iowa State weak spot, if the Cyclones have any, is at 134 and 142 where Randy Neilson (17-9-0) and Don Zimmerman (14-6) will take on Dennis Brighton and Don Rodgers of MSU.

Cyclone Pete Geler, 26-2-1, will pose a problem for MSU's 150-pounder Steve Rodriguez, who won a pair last weekend against Illinois and Purdue.

One of ISU's big guns in Bob Holland, a second place finisher at 158 in last year's NCAA tourney. Holland won the Midlands at 150 this year and is undefeated with 23 wins to his credit.

The Cyclones will go with Dan Peterson (19-9) at 167 and Willie Gadsen, two-time national junior college champion, at 177. Gadsen is 21-41-2 this season.

In what could be the night's best encounter, Al Nacin, ISU's three-time All-American, will go against the Spartans Scott Wickard at 190. Nacin won the Midlands in 1973 and placed second last December. Wickard is unbeaten while Nacin has lost twice in 29 matches.

At heavyweight, MSU's Larry Avery, licking his wounds from an upset loss to Kevin Pancratz of Illinois last week, will have a heavy engagement with Rob Whisman. The Cyclone strongman tips the scales at 305 pounds, about 80 more than Avery.

Seton Hall cager, others suspended

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (UPI) — Seton Hall's athletic director, two basketball coaches and 6-foot-8 center Glenn Mosely were suspended by the university Thursday for alleged violations of NCAA recruiting rules.

Msgr. Thomas J. Fahy, college president, immediately appealed to the NCAA to allow Mosely to rejoin the team later this season. He is the nation's leading rebounder and the leading scorer for Seton Hall (9-4) with a 16.2 average.

Fahy suspended athletic director Richie Regan for three weeks and fined him $500. Head basketball coach Billy Rafferty was suspended for one month and fined $600, and asst. coach Hoddy Mahon was suspended for two weeks and fined $100.

Asst. athletic director Melvin Knight took over for Regan and appointed asst. coach Chris Hannum to run the team beginning with Thursday night's game against Fairfield at Madison Square Garden.

Msgr. Fahy, who held three days of hearings on the case, said all three coaches technically violated the regulations but that Mosely was innocent.

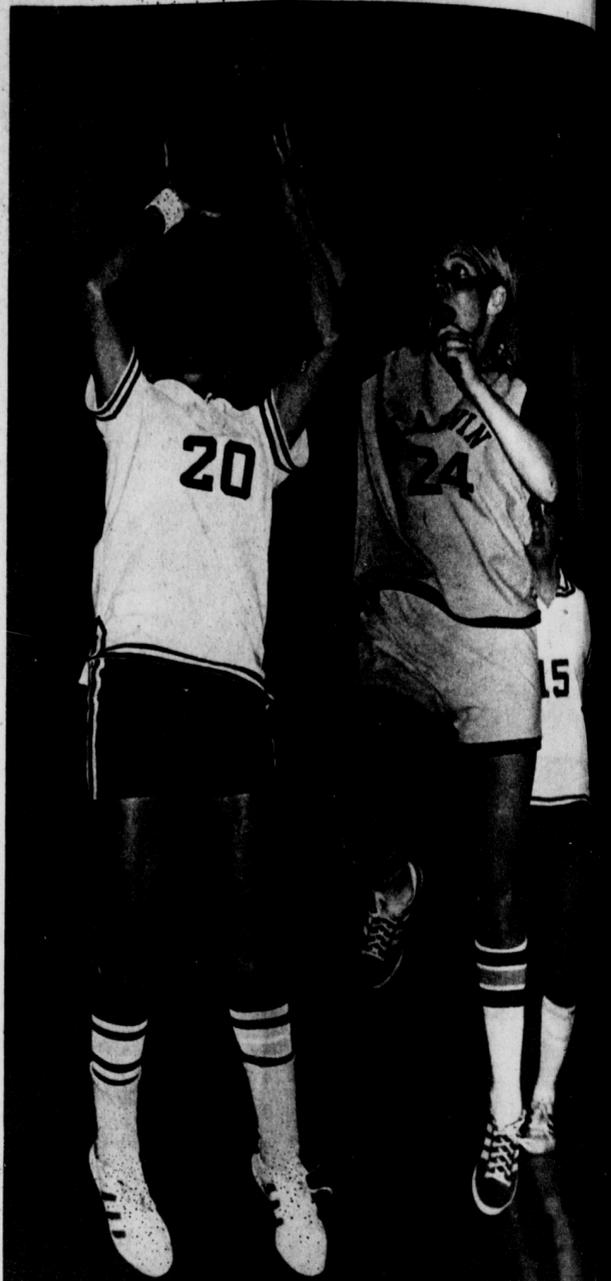

The investigation centered around whether Mosely was recruited for Seton Hall under a minority students program even though he lacked the academic credentials to attain a 2.0 grade point average.

The NCAA rules state that such a student who is recruited must sit out an entire year. Mosely did not play during his first semester but appeared in 21 games last year.

IM NOTES

The Women's Intramural Building locker room will not be available between 9:30 and 11:30 a.m. today because contractors will be touring the area.

Swimming at the Women's IM Saturday will be from 3 to 7:50 p.m., instead of noon to 7:50 p.m., because of the women's swimming meet in the lower pool.

MSU forward Jackie Ferguson attempts a lay-up during Tuesday's game against Calvin College, which the Spartans lost, 57-42. The squad will play Western Illinois Saturday beginning at noon in the lower gym of the Women's Intramural Building.

Three women's teams at home

By ROBIN MCINTOSH
State News Sports Writer

Three of MSU's women's sports teams will be busy Saturday afternoon as all of them will be hosting matches.

The women's basketball squad will return to action after facing Calvin College and Notre Dame earlier this week when it hosts Western Illinois at noon in the lower gym of the Women's Intramural Building. Outstanding players on the squad so far this season include forwards Linda Stoick, who has scored 57 points in three games, and Dianne Phillips, who is another consistently high scorer.

Coach Mikki Baile thinks highly of the Spartans' foe this weekend.

"Western Illinois is nationally ranked, so this game will be a tough one," she said.

The women's swimming team, winner of a double-dual meet last weekend, will host Purdue at 12:15 p.m. in the Women's IM lower pool.

MSU broke three school records enroute to defeating both Michigan and Indiana last Saturday to run its season dual meet record to 4-0. Top Spartan individuals to watch include freshman sprinter Karen Waite and junior Dawn Jacobs in the backstroke and the freestyle.

Coach Jennifer Parks believes Purdue will be a tough team to handle.

"Purdue has a strong team with a lot of depth," she commented. "They beat Indiana earlier this season, so we know it will be a tough meet."

The MSU women's gymnastics team will compete at home for the last time this season when it hosts Central Michigan and Indiana State in a triangular meet which will start at 2 p.m. in Jenison Fieldhouse.

The squad will be putting its 2-0 dual meet record on the line.

Coach Barbara Peacock believes the upcoming match will be a good one for the Spartan team.

"We like to compete against tough teams like Central and Indiana State," she said. "Hard competition brings out the best from our team."

Peacock says her team has been improving with each meet.

"Our girls get better as the season goes along," she commented. "None of our meets are easy ones this year and they seem to do their best under pressure."

Among the Spartans watch are co-captains Kay Chapela and Ann Weaver. Maxine Ceatotto and Kim Kinser.

High scorers on the team far this season include Kay who has scored 91 on uneven parallel bars and on the balance beam. Chapela who had a 9.25 in floor exercises and Weaver, who scored 9.25 vaulting.

INDIANA'S 'DOC' COUNCILMAN Swimming legend visits MSU

By DAN SPICKLER
State News Sports Writer

Indiana's Jim "Doc" Councilman has become more than just a successful men's swimming coach. He is a legend.

The good doctor is currently in the midst of a 104 dual meet winning streak. Since 1959, his squads have amassed a 166-6 record in dual meet competition.

All kinds of 'big names' in swimming have been coached by the 54-year-old Councilman. Gold medalist Mark Spitz is just one of many. Olympians Gary Hall, John Kinsella, and Mike Stamm are others.

Councilman's swimmers have individually captured 138 Big Ten titles, 63 NCAA crowns, 66 indoor and 60 outdoor NAAU titles, 11 Pan American championships and 23 Olympic gold medals.

At the moment, Indiana swimmers hold or share 12 world records.

Saturday this legend, who will coach the 1976 U.S. Olympic Squad, and his team will face the Spartans at the Men's Intramural Building pool. The meet will begin at 2 p.m.

"It's an honor to swim against a team like this," MSU swimming coach Dick Fetters said. "But it's also a little harder on our guys, knowing that they may get beaten by as much as a half a pool length."

The Hoosiers hold six out of the 11 dual meet swimming event records in the MSU pool.

Kinsella has the IM pool record in the 1,000-yard freestyle and the 500-yard freestyle. Spitz has the pool record in the 50 freestyle. (20.81 seconds) which is also the Big Ten record. The razor salesman also has the pool record in the 200 butterfly.

Hall holds the IM pool record in the 200 individual medley. Stamm has the record in the 200 backstroke.

Spitz, Kinsella, Hall and Stamm are gone, but the doctor promises a good show Saturday.

"We've got a great crop of freshmen this year," Councilman said. "As a rule, they're an under-rated group. We lost a lot of our first choice recruits to the Pacific Eight conference."

Indiana didn't just lose some recruits recently. The Hoosiers also lost the national title last year to Southern California. USC's one-point lead over Indiana in the NCAA finals marked the first time in eight years that the Hoosiers have given up the crown.

"People look at us this season and are hesitant to pick us as the top team, but I'm very optimistic about this year," Doc said.

"We only require 11 practices a week, but these guys have been averaging 13 to 15 a week," Councilman said.

Indiana has no swimmers from its home state, which shows how extensive the Hoosier recruiting program for swimmers is.

"Their program is just so much better than others in the Big Ten that it would be silly to think anyone in the conference could go ahead of them," Fetters said.

While Councilman enjoys the victories, he has expressed discontent with the state of Big Ten athletics.

"It actually hurts us," Councilman said of conference swimming competition. "The Big Ten used to be the best college team division. Now I would rank them second behind the Pacific Eight and the Southeast Conference."

"We go to a swimmer of trying him a great program, but some other leagues' top team will go up to the recruit and tell him how weak Indiana's competition is."

MSU men tracksters on road at Western Michigan Relays

MSU's men's track team is in Kalamazoo today for the Western Michigan Relays in the squad's final tune-up for the prestigious Michigan State Relays next weekend.

The Spartans' shuttle hurdle and sprint medley relay teams won their events at the Michigan Relays in Ann Arbor last week and are looking to repeat the feat at WMU.

A total of 32 members of the squad are making the trek to Kalamazoo.

"I'm looking for improvement in their times and effort," coach Fran-Dittreich said.

The Spartan shuttle hurdle team is expected to consist of Luray Cooper, Howard Neely, Todd Murphy and Paul Zolynsky. It was clocked 29.3 seconds during its debut effort at Michigan.

The probable makeup of the sprint medley team includes Nance, Brad Rogers, Chris Byrd and Dane Forester. Nance doing the 400 yard sprint, Rogers and Byrd 220s and Forester the 880 at Michigan. The team where photographs and fingerprints were taken. Ever since winning their court case on Jan. 16, The ACLU has been trying to locate Mayday demonstrators to inform them of the settlement.

The ACLU office in Washington has received about 600 or 700 letters from protestors. They are now processing the letters, and in a week they will start going through the arrest records to see if people were arrested on the day they mentioned in their letter.

"We actually haven't gotten to the point of proving if they're telling the truth," said Jerry Castle, assistant legal director for the ACLU.

If people fail to contact them, the ACLU has the arrest records and can contact the people themselves.

Pay-off charge now denied by lawyer

WASHINGTON (AP) - An allegation that Sen. James O. Eastland took a $50,000 pay-off was denied on Thursday by a lawyer for the man who is supposed to have made the accusation.

Texas lawyer Scott Odom said in a telephone interview that his client, John W. Curington, did not make a statement attributed to him, and knows nothing of a pay-off.

Another lawyer, Jerry Patchen, had testified that Curington told him wealthy Dallas oilman Nelson Bunker Hunt paid Eastland, D-Miss., $50,000 or $60,000 to ward off a federal indictment on a charge of industrial wiretapping.

Odom denied that Curington made such a charge. "He didn't make any statement that outlandish at all," Odom said. "He didn't have any knowledge of that."

But Patchen stuck by his statements in a telephone interview on Thursday. He said Curington told him several times of a Hunt-Eastland pay-off, but added that Curington did not claim first-hand knowledge of such a deal and didn't offer any evidence to substantiate it.

"I have never suggested that Sen. Eastland received any money. All I said was what John Curington told me," Patchen said. "And now if Curington is changing his tune, well, he may have his own reasons for that."

The pay-off charge was raised publicly on Monday in a column by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten. They printed Patchen's account, along with denials from Hunt and Eastland, but did not quote Curington directly. Told of the new denial, Whitten said "Our column accurately reflected the testimony in the case."

The pay-off allegation surfaced in a tangled case in which Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt, sons of the late oil billionaire H. L. Hunt, are accused in a federal indictment of hiring wiretappers to investigate Curington and others, who are now charged in a separate federal indictment with stealing millions of dollars from H. L. Hunt.

In addition, one of the convicted wiretappers, Jon Joseph Kelly, has accused the Hunt brothers and lawyer Percy Foreman of trying to influence him with threats and money to keep quiet about who hired him to do the wiretapping. A federal grand jury in Texas is investigating charges of obstruction of justice in the case. Patchen had testified in a civil lawsuit that Curington told him Bunker Hunt paid Eastland $50,000 or $60,000 to arrange a meeting between Bunder and then-Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst at Eastland's Mississippi cotton plantation. This is the charge that Curington's lawyer now says he did not make.

An Eastland spokesman said that Bunker Hunt, an old friend of the senator, did get him to inquire of Kleindienst about the wiretapping investigation, and that Eastland passed on to Bunker Hunt that he was going to be indicted.

But the Eastland spokesman said the senator did not try to prevent the indictment, and Kleindienst backed up that story.

Kleindienst also said that Bunker Hunt was not present on the only occasion he had visited the Eastland plantation, during the 1972 presidential campaign. He said he could not recall ever meeting Bunker Hunt.

Only 35 per cent of the beds at Olin are usually in use at one time, but Patterson feels that a new facility that offers more services will have a need for more beds.

"We don't have the support systems, so we have to refer patients to the community hospital," Patterson said.

Some of the new services are being considered but proposed health center orthopedics, gynecology, dermatology.

After the authority goes to the details, the proposal goes to President Whitten, the board of trustees. Whitten will receive input on the proposal from the Health Advisory Board, a committee comprised of students and doctors that reports to him.

University Architect Siefert said that after approval are chosen by the trustees would take 36 to 40 months to construct a building and in.

Ballard is not impressed by that figure, however. He said the 4 per cent across-the-board cut is felt in the medical like every other department and that the $500,000 actually puts it back with this year's allocations.

The governor's recommendation also includes capitol layoffs of $1.9 million in addition to the $5.5 million in the Life Sciences II, now under construction. The final state applications for 1975-76 departmental cuts, on the other hand, are the highest. Milliken's recommendation of the MSU general fund was eventually trimmed to $1 million before approval by the legislature.

Run for your life, doctor recommends

By JAMIE CONROY
State News Staff Writer

Americans don't have to feel dead at the age of 45 if they don't want to. Sixty-year-old men can have the bodies of 25-year-olds — if they work at it.

"We don't have to grow old as rapidly as we do in this country," Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper said during a physical fitness speech.

Proper weight, diet, exercise, avoiding tobacco and proper rest are necessary as preventive medicine which entails keeping people in good physical condition so they are not subject to frequent sickness, Cooper said.

Cooper was the banquet speaker at the 25th Director's Conference of the Michigan Health Officers Assn. Wednesday night at the Olds Plaza Hotel in Lansing.

Aerobics clinic

Cooper founded his own clinic and the Aerobics Activity Center in Dallas. He has written two books, "Aerobics" and "New Aerobics," and co-authored a third "Aerobics for Women," with his wife.

"There are seven women on my block, including my wife, who look better now than they ever did before. They run three miles every morning," Cooper said.

"If people would follow a consistent exercise program after a physical check-up first, fewer 32-year-old men would be having massive coronaries," he said.

"There is a growing international awareness of physical fitness," he said. "At luncheon in Japan, China and Israel, entire office buildings will clear out for an afternoon jog. You can't walk the streets unless you see someone out jogging. Australia is embarking on a national health program," he said.

Preventive medicine

His main emphasis at the clinic has been on activities that increase the intake of air and build up the circulatory system, which are two basics of preventive medicine.

"The field of the future is keeping people healthy," he said. Corporations have been sending their executives to the Dallas clinic because of the increased work efficiency that comes with keeping fit.

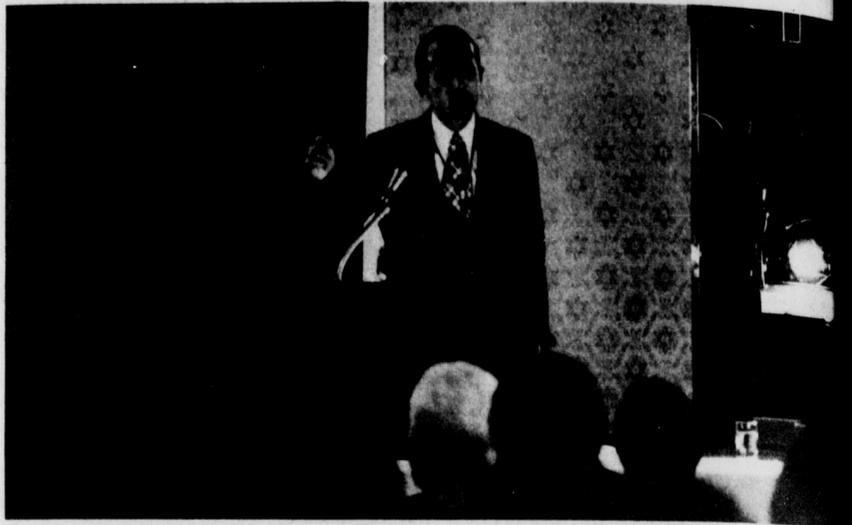

Cooper has worked out a point system as a measure of a patient's intensity and duration progress during their exercise program. Ten minutes of basketball, for example, equals one point. Thirty points a week for men and 24 points a week for women is in the "good" category. Fifty points a week is "excellent." An hour of basketball, squash or handball three times a week equals 30 points. Swimming is the best overall exercise, Cooper said. That will earn one-quarter of a point a minute.

Progress chart

"It's easy for a patient to keep track of his progress using points because he can see at a glance how many points he has for the week, if he remembers to fill in his chart," he said.

After Cooper's speech, questions from the audience were concerned with how to get appointments at the Dallas clinic and which of his books would be most helpful for the beginning exercise fanatic.

As the room cleared out, murmurs of "tomorrow, for sure," could be heard as people crowded the stairs. The elevator stood open waiting — empty.

Committee OKs food aid freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee approved overwhelmingly Thursday a bill that would freeze the price of food stamps at their Jan. 1 level for the rest of this year.

The bill, to be scheduled for House action next week, would kill a Ford Administration plan to hike the price of the stamps to roughly 30 per cent of the net income of each recipient.

That plan is to go into effect March 1, despite widespread congressional and public protests that the health of many elderly and the poor would be undermined because of it.

House approval and Senate action on the bipartisan measure are needed quickly to block the price hike and save states substantial administrative-changeover costs, sponsors said.

The vote was 33-2 on the measure.

The Administration plan to save $648 million announced early last December and finally approved two weeks ago, would raise the prices to the maximum allowed by law.

The Administration decision to raise the price of the stamps was designed to save an estimated $648 million each year. It raises the cost of food stamps to the maximum allowed by law.

Recipients currently spend about 23 per cent of their net income for food stamps.

Edward J. Hekman, administrator of the Food and Nutrition Service, told the committee that the same studies show that 23 per cent of net income represented about 12 per cent of gross income for recipients if other welfare payments are included.
