

MINORITY ENROLLMENT DOWN AT MSU Colleges' commitment to blacks over

By New York Times and State News

CHICAGO — A major commitment to the presence of blacks on the nation's college campuses, made during the civil rights era of the 1960s, appears to have faded. The commitment is gone, it's not there anymore, it's all over, remarked Lawrence Barclay, minority affairs officer for the College Entrance Examination Board in New York. Blacks are not the thing any more, so we're witnessing a return to the pre-1960s when only those blacks who could afford it or those with the best grades went to college, a return to elitism. Black enrollment has been going down for the past two years as efforts to recruit more blacks, and programs to help them once they are enrolled, are being cut back or scuttled at many colleges and universities. At MSU, 2,567 black students registered for fall term of 1974, down from 2,573 in 1973. Blacks make up about 5 per cent of the student population at MSU. Ira Polley, assistant provost for admissions and records, said the drop could probably be attributed to three things: •MSU is faced with increased competition from other schools for minority students. •Minority students are opting to join the labor force, rather than tackle costs of higher education. •Realization by minority citizens that higher education does not guarantee better

"Blacks are not the thing any more, so we're witnessing a return to pre-1960's days when only those blacks who could afford it or those with the best grades went to college, a return to elitism." — Lawrence Barclay jobs. Polley said, however, that he doesn't think the decrease in black enrollment is an indication of a future downward trend. Nationally, however, the downward trend has alarmed black educators and students, who charge that the reversal was caused by a reneging on the commitment by college officials and change of policies by the federal government.

Blacks fear that action by colleges and sources of financial aid such as the federal government, along with a general negative attitude throughout the country about the plight of blacks, is combining to make access to higher education more difficult, especially poor blacks. With aggressive recruiting by white colleges, black enrollment began to rise dramatically in the 1960s, according to Alexander W. Astin, professor of higher education at U.C.L.A. Blacks made up 5.7 per cent of total enrollment in 1968. The figure rose to 6.3 per cent in 1971, and peaked the following year at 8.7 per cent.

There is some controversy over whether the decline has been reversed. A survey last October by the bureau of the census said black enrollment rose from 684,000 in 1973-74 to 784,000 at the beginning of this school year. But the report was discounted by some blacks who regard census figures as inflated.

Barclay said, "The census is not known for its accuracy." He and others said if there had been such an increase it was probably due to more blacks going to academically inferior community colleges, as well as being admitted to predominantly white Southern schools that have admitted blacks only during the last decade. Schools in the south have so far maintained a consistent increase in black enrollment the past few years.

Ten years ago, Vassar College had "not more than a handful" of black students. This year, there are 145, down 15 from last year. Black enrollment at UCLA was 7.2 per cent of the total in 1971. This year it is down to 6.1 per cent.

Some schools are trying to counter this trend, but black educators anticipate an even more drastic decline next year as a result of the recession and a change of emphasis away from recruiting poor blacks to more middle-class students.

Conferees unite on compromise for tax-cut bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate conferees agreed Wednesday on a compromise $24.8 billion tax-cut bill, despite a White House declaration that President Ford was "very concerned" about many provisions in the measure.

The legislation is designed to stimulate the economy and put extra money into the pockets of most Americans within weeks. The House and Senate hoped to complete action later in the day.

A major provision of the bill calls for tax rebates of 1974 income averaging 10 per cent of taxes paid, up to a maximum rebate of $200. The bill also calls for a $30 tax credit on 1975 income for every taxpayer and for each member of his family.

There are apparently no provisions, which specifically exclude students from receiving rebates of any federal taxes they paid in 1974.

These reductions would mean a reduction of at least $220 in 1974 and 1975 taxes for every family of four in the United States.

Ford met with Republican congressional leaders about an hour after conferees finished work on the compromise bill to discuss his reservations about the measure.

Major provisions include:

•Repeal of the oil depletion allowance for major oil companies. The allowance would be retained under certain conditions for the 10,000 independent producers who drill 80 per cent of the nation's oil and gas wells.

•A $30 tax credit on 1975 income for every taxpayer and for each member of his family.

•A $50 across-the-board bonus to every Social Security recipient.

•A reduction of up to $2,000 in the tax bills of persons who buy a new home by Dec. 31. The credit applies only to new homes under construction by March 25.

•An increase in the investment tax credit to 10 per cent for 1975 and 1976, compared with the current 4 per cent for utilities and 7 per cent for other businesses.

•A reduction in the corporate tax rate at a cost of $1.4 billion.

•Increased child care deductions for parents who must work.

A spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service said the tax agency is set up to begin sending out rebate checks within 45 days after the bill is signed by President Ford and expects to have paid all the rebates within six weeks after that.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., and Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., who led the tax-cut conference, predicted Ford will sign the bill despite his reservations.

"I don't think he's foolish enough to veto it," Long said shortly before Ford met with the Republican leaders. "The Administration has played that veto game so often that I can't regard it as serious any more."

The $24.8 billion measure approved by the conferees compares with Ford's request for a $16.2 billion in tax cuts.

In other economic developments, Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve board is said to be "worried about the country's future" because of what he feels are mistaken actions on the economy by both Congress and the Ford Administration.

Burns is known to be hopeful that Congress may have "second thoughts" about its actions and be willing to enact massive spending reductions later in the year to keep the nation's economic recovery from falling flat.

He favors a temporary tax cut of as high as $25 billion to stimulate the economy now, but is opposed to permanent tax reductions and will fight them with all the power at his command.

The 70-year-old chairman of the independent Federal Reserve Board does not give on-the-record interviews to newsmen, but his views were made known in a background interview by a high official of the board.

Burns is said to agree with a recent report of the Office of Management and Budget that the 1976 budget deficit could easily reach $100 billion, if not higher, because of actions now being taken by Congress and the administration.

Thieu: 'fight to the death' for Da Nang

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu vowed on Wednesday to "fight to the death if necessary" for Da Nang and appealed to the United States for help.

Boats and chartered American planes made a massive evacuation of an estimated 10,000 refugees at Da Nang fleeing the communist advances. The Viet Cong announced its forces had hoisted the Viet Cong flag over the ancient citadel of Hue, 50 miles to the north.

With half his country lost to the three North Vietnamese drive, Thieu declared two nationwide radio broadcasts he would cede no more territory to the communists and his army would fight to Da Nang, the country's second largest and onetime American air base.

He appealed to the United States to take "immediate and strong reaction and rapidly provide sufficient support for our troops to fight."

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said in Washington that failure to provide more military aid would "destroy an ally and bring a massive shift in the policies of other countries and an ultimate threat to U.S. national security." He said it is "an elementary question of what kind of people we are."

In other major Indochina developments:

•Three hundred Cambodian soldiers walked away from a defensive position east of Phnom Penh, some swimming across the Mekong River to reach the capital, field reports said. By nightfall the Svay Chhrum position was totally abandoned. The Communist-led Khmer Rouge insurgents blasted the capital and its airport with 64 rockets, killing eight persons and wounding 20. The U.S. airlift of rice, fuel and ammunition continued without interruption.

•President Ford dispatched Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick C. Weyand, the last American commander in Vietnam, to Saigon to assess the military situation. The President also met with a delegation of South Vietnamese leaders, and Saigon's Ambassador Tran Kim Phung said Ford "promised to do everything possible to give us the additional equipment that we need."

•Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., introduced legislation to ban any further military aid to South Vietnam during the remaining fiscal year ending June 30. He said time has come "to derail the money in to Vietnam," but his bill would not prohibit humanitarian aid.

•Former Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky emerged from political retirement to lead a meeting of some 30 officers and politicians opposed to Thieu. Sources said the group discussed a plan to have Thieu cede power to a National Salvation Front of moderate and radical opposition groups. Ky, who was also once air force commander and vice president, went into retirement in late 1971 after an ill-fated run at the presidency. He has long been at odds with Thieu but remained in the background until recent weeks.

•Pope Paul VI, his voice anguished, called for an end to the war and suffering in Vietnam. The pontiff said it was a "sad and dangerous hour for mankind" and appealed to all men to give attention to the "indescribable agony of tears and blood" in Vietnam.

•Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., said military and diplomatic briefers gave Congress an "extremely pessimistic" appraisal Tuesday of South Vietnam's ability to hold its remaining northern coastal strip.

Thieu's radio broadcasts, one to the military and the other to the civilian population, appeared designed to defuse the fear that the army might crumble and to stop a sense of panic that swept the country as 11 of South Vietnam's 44 provinces tumbled under the Communist offensive.

He vowed he would remain in office "until our complete victory." "I have instructed the servicemen that this battle is now a decisive one and the servicemen are to fight a decisive battle of our history," Thieu said.

U.S. officials said a World Airways Boeing 727 launched the evacuation of Da Nang with two flights to Saigon, 380 miles to the southwest. The initial evacuees included some of the 300 Americans in the besieged city. The airlift began soon after Viet Cong gunners blasted the area around the Da Nang air base with more than a dozen rockets, killing six civilians and wounding 38.

Student's appointment to Tech post delayed

By STEVE ORR

State News Staff Writer

The nomination of a Michigan Tech student to the governing board of his school—the first such gubernatorial appointment of a student to be attempted under a law that went into effect last year—has been delayed by a complaint from the Michigan Senate.

Gov. Milliken selected Thomas Korpi, 23, to serve on the Board of Control of the Michigan State University. But Sen. Joe Mack, D-Ironwood, has demanded that Korpi be examined in a hearing by the State Business Committee, the legislative body that makes recommendations to the governor on appointments. The Senate must affirm or reject all gubernatorial appointments.

According to a legislative official, most gubernatorial appointments are stamped by the business committee and then the Senate.

Mack, however, wants the business committee to take a good look at Korpi.

"We just want to know who he is, and we will decide on his qualifications," Mack said.

Mack added that he had no personal objections as yet to Korpi, whose school falls in Mack's district.

"Look, it's normal for appointees to come before the committee, right?" Mack said.

Sen. William Fitzgerald, D-Detroit and chairman of the business committee, agreed with Mack that he was not aware of any intent by any senator to block Korpi's appointment.

Fitzgerald said that the committee has been busy lately with major appointments and that Korpi's proposed appointment had escaped the notice of the committee.

Fitzgerald said the granting of the hearing was a courtesy to Mack and to Korpi.

"It might be interesting and fun for him (Korpi) to appear before us," the senator said.

Milliken said he will continue to support Korpi, who could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Milliken is attempting to appoint Korpi under a bill signed into law by the governor Dec. 15, 1974, which allows students to serve on the governing boards of their universities. At Michigan Tech, as at other smaller state universities, the governor appoints all members of the governing boards.

Senate approves farm aid

The Senate approved an emergency farm aid bill Wednesday, voting to raise the level of government support for the dairy industry despite the threat of a presidential veto.

It also decided to ban the import of foreign-bred beef temporarily in an attempt to improve prices in the domestic livestock market and to raise support levels for the tobacco industry.

The measure, as passed by the House last week, also raises the levels of support for wheat, cotton, corn and other feed grains producers.

The Senate vote was 57 to 25. The bill now must go to a conference committee to work out the differences between the two houses. The committee is not expected to meet until after an Easter recess.

Clinics find cancer early

A national network of breast cancer detection clinics has uncovered two-and-a-half times the expected number of malignancies in women screened during the clinics' early months.

The unusual number of cases is believed due largely to the fact that they were discovered early, according to Dr. Benjamin F. Byrd, president-elect of the American Cancer Society and professor of surgery at Vanderbilt Medical School.

Byrd said women with only localized disease have between an 85 and 99 per cent chance of staying alive and well five years after surgery, compared to a 45 per cent five-year survival rate for women whose tumors had already spread to surrounding nodes.

Mrs. Eisenhower in hospital

Mamie Eisenhower, 79, suffered a recurrence of internal bleeding Wednesday and her condition was listed as only fair at an Army hospital in Atlanta, Ga.

She previously had been described as in good condition. Maj. George Foster, a spokesman for the U.S. Army Medical Center at nearby Ft. Gordon, said doctors earlier had believed they had stopped the intestinal bleeding which caused the former first lady to be hospitalized Tuesday, but she had a mild recurrence of intestinal bleeding Wednesday.

"But her vital signs remain stable. At the present time, she is resting and her general condition is fair," Foster said.

Butterfield leaves FAA

After much ado, Alexander Butterfield has resigned as administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Butterfield is best remembered for his disclosure before the Senate Watergate Committee in 1973 of the intricate taping system, which former President Richard M. Nixon had installed at the White House. From 1969 through 1972, Butterfield was in charge of the system.

After he left the White House, Butterfield headed the FAA. His tenure there was somewhat controversial. For one thing, there was considerable criticism about the agency's efforts to insure air safety and avoid airplane crashes.

Official says saccharin OK

The chairman of a National Academy of Sciences study on whether saccharin causes cancer said Wednesday he personally believes it is safe under present restrictions.

The study issued last year on saccharin, an artificial sweetener, was unable to determine whether it does or does not cause cancer.

Dr. Julius M. Coon of Thomas Jefferson University Medical College in Philadelphia said as chairman of the study committee, his official scientific position must remain that there is not sufficient evidence to prove or disprove the possibility that saccharin causes cancer in laboratory test animals.

Settlement satisfies student

A blind college student expressed no regret Wednesday over her decision to accept a $165,000 malpractice settlement to compensate for her loss of sight while a jury was deciding to award her $900,000.

"I think I made a wise decision," she said. "Everybody said, 'You've got it won.' But I wasn't sure. They said they definitely would have appealed and there's a chance I would have lost it all."

London paper shuts down

Britain's biggest-selling newspaper, the Daily Mirror, did not appear in London Wednesday as its publishers adopted a tough line in a manning dispute.

About 1,750 men were dismissed Tuesday after they had refused to abandon slowdown tactics including the calling of trade union meetings at peak work periods. The men involved are mailers, who belong to the Society of Graphical and Allied Trades.

Economists claim depression

By LEONARD SILK
New York Times Service

Claremont, Calif. — Will there be a world depression? The distinguished economists from several countries who met here this past weekend at the Fifth Biannual Claremont International Monetary Conference, answered the question forthrightly: the world is already in a depression.

Robert Solomon, adviser to the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System offered as evidence the steepness and breadth of the slide: industrial production has fallen in the United States, Japan, West Germany, France and the other industrial countries of Western Europe at an annual rate of 20 per cent during the last three months. And the downturn, Solomon said, "will continue for some time."

Yet economic policy to fight depression is hobbled in every industrial country by worries about reviving inflation. Henry C. Wallich, a governor of the Federal Reserve, stressed his own conviction that it would be a tragic mistake for the Fed to lose the crucial battle against inflation now by swinging into an excessive stimulative monetary policy.

Within two years, Wallich held, a burst of monetary growth would drive prices up at rates even above the 12 per cent inflation reached last year.

The Federal Reserve Governor, a former professor of economics at Yale, contended that rates of inflation have spiraled upward in the United States from business cycle to business cycle during postwar period.

The Capitalist system, Wallich maintained, is being undermined by inflationary measures taken to cure recessions. Inflation, whether in the United States, Great Britain or other countries, causes profit margins to shrink and private enterprise to founder. "The end," he said, "is illiquidity and insolvency, as have already seen in our country in the case of utilities and estate investment trusts."

Inflation forced governments to become dependent on government help for survival; this, said Wallich, was a predicted pattern. He said that the economic system of the United States like that of Britain, would be transformed into what he called "state capitalism."

Lord Robbins, chancellor of Stirling University and a governor of the London School of Economics, joined in grieving for Britain. "once so stable now dominated by ideas that have gone so soft and silly," he said.

While Lord Robbins agreed that the world economy was in depression, which he expected to end in 1975, he said that deeper concerns were over the world political crisis. One aspect of it is the shift of wealth and power to the Middle East.

Another, he fears, is the growing strength of the Communist nations. The Soviet Union, in his view, is playing on the anti-Israeli animosities in order to keep the Middle Eastern boiling. The Russians' aim, he said is to strengthen their own position in the Middle East. He maintained that the Israelis have received a worse press than they deserve.

The real political situation is being further strained by combination of depression and inflation. However, the view many here was that the inflation is fading now, giving way to serious worries about the depression.

How is the world monetary system, with floating exchange rates, weathering the storm? The general view here was remarkably well.

Prof. Emeritus Gottfried Haberler of Harvard stated floating "is here to stay for the indefinite future." But he did think this implied that all the currencies of the 126 members of International Monetary Fund "will or should fluctuate against each other."

Israel tightens border security as Saudi Arabia buries Faisal

By The Associated Press

Saudi Arabia buried King Faisal in a display of national anguish on Wednesday as Israel mounted tight border security and extra guards in East Jerusalem, the Holy City where the murdered king had dreamed of saying his prayers.

Arabs in Riyadh, the capital of Saudi Arabia, cried and shrieked as Moslem priests and holy men conducted simple funeral rites for Faisal according to the strictures of the conservative Wahabi sect of Islam. His body was bathed in soap and water, wrapped in a white sheet, placed in a wooden coffin and buried in an unmarked grave.

"Where goes our knight? Where goes our protection against confusion and poverty?" the crowds cried outside the palace and mosque.

But Saudi Arabia's princes and commoners pledged allegiance to the new king, Faisal's 62-year-old brother Khaled. With 16 Arab leaders watching and Crown Prince Fahd, 53, at his side, King Khaled broke into tears over his brother's body.

Faisal, whose age was given as 69 or 70, was fatally shot Tuesday as he celebrated the birthday of the prophet Mohammed. The official Saudi radio identified the assassin as Prince Faisal Ibn Musaed, a 27-year-old nephew of the king. The state radio said the young Prince was mentally deranged. Special prayers were scheduled for Faisal after sundown in the Moslem mosques of East Jerusalem, which Israel captured from Jordan in the June 1967 war. Faisal bankrolled much of the Arab war effort against Israel in hopes of recovering the city, whose treasured mosques make it the third holiest shrine of Islam.

Israeli security mounted extra guards in case the services by Arabs in the city boiled into anti-Israeli demonstrations. The city was also crowded with Christians and Jews for Easter and Passover. Holiday traffic was heavy despite the precautions.

Meanwhile, oil experts said they expect no immediate shift in Saudi Arabia's oil policy as a result of Faisal's death. That was the conclusion of observers in Vienna where the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) has its headquarters and of experts headed in the Mideast by Arab World, a Beirut-based digest.

Committee seeks funds for Malcolm X marker

Lansing will be the site of a historical marker honoring black leader Malcolm X if the $500 needed for construction can be raised.

The Michigan History Division of the Dept. of State is researching the writing of the text for the marker now, but the state does not pay for historical markers. The money must come from public donations.

The Committee for Malcolm X Historical Marker has raised about $200 and hopes to raise the rest by May 19, the 50th anniversary of Malcolm X's birth.

"A lot of our sponsors have pledged money, though, and that is just about as good as having it, so it is difficult to say exactly how much we have," said Bonnie Bronder, of the committee.

Malcolm X, who was slain in New York City on Feb. 21, 1965, advocated black self-determination, acceptance of the African origin of American blacks, re-establishment of the dignity of black manhood and racial cooperation.

The marker will be constructed at 4705 S. Logan St., where the black leader's father built a home. The property was owned by the family for 25 years and is now the site of an apartment complex.

"The marker is a good idea because it is contemporary," said Carolyn Torma, who is in charge of the historical markers in Michigan.

She said the marker is unusual because the state usually constructs markers honoring people who lived more than 50 years ago.

Contributions for the marker may be sent to the Malcolm X Historical Marker Fund care of the treasurers, Donna M. Durbin and Frank P. Molloy, 1608 Comfort St., Lansing, 48915.

City housing study debated by agencies

By FRED NEWTON
State News Staff Writer

The City of East Lansing has over $3,000 set aside for a Tenants Resource Center (TRC) housing study that may never take place. The city council appropriated $3,500 for this study last year for a housing study to be completed by the end of the fiscal year on March 31. The funds for the study were to be used by the city pending a joint decision by the city and the Housing Commission. The Planning Commission, however, has decided it does not want the study, while the Housing Commission does. Thus the fate of the study, which would evaluate the East Lansing housing market, is in question.

The East Lansing Housing Design Commission, created by the TRC, it would survey the housing market and find out who is renting in East Lansing, what rents are in the area, what services renters are receiving, and certain housing information that is not available to the public. The study would deal with the effectiveness of the East Lansing housing code.

What the study will do is compare the conditions in the rental housing market with those conditions found in a 1972 rental housing study," said Charles Ipcar of the city Planning Dept., said that while the study was a good thing for the city, it was limited to give any valuable information to the Planning Commission and Planning Dept.

housing market and commission members feel that the study is a good start for future studies.

"We have to start somewhere and this study is a good beginning to look at the entire housing market," said Mary Luttrell, member of the housing commission.

The Housing Commission has sent a letter to the city council requesting that they release the study funds soon, despite the Planning Commission's rejection of the proposed study.

If the funds for the study are not released soon so that the study can take place before the end of the fiscal year, there is a possibility that the study will never take place and the money will not be re-appropriated in next year's fiscal budget for a similar study.

The Housing Commission at their meeting Tuesday night, also requested that city attorney Dennis McGinty be present at their next meeting to explain his role in enforcing housing code violations.

The commission more specifically wants to know how Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Ray Hotchkiss, who is a local landlord, escaped criminal threats from the city attorney's office recently, when he failed to comply with the housing code.

Stanley winds down ASMSU role

By MARY ANN CHICK
State News Staff Writer

As Paul Stanley, ASMSU's Pop Entertainment director for the past two years, winds down his activities in the ASMSU cabinet, he is speeding up his private business full force.

Stanley will continue as Pop Entertainment director until the newly-elected ASMSU president appoints new cabinet directors. ASMSU presidents appoint cabinet directors at the beginning of their term.

In the past month, Stanley has expanded his management and promotional activities by either signing a contract or reaching gentlemen's agreements with businessmen in four Michigan cities, three colleges and four bands.

(Pop Entertainment) and working harder for myself," Stanley said. But I've booked four or five concerts on campus this term and I'm not going to walk out on them."

Stanley said he would be working behind the scenes with the new Pop Entertainment director.

Stanley has just signed a four year contract with John Chamberlain, president-manager of Metro Ice Arena, to bring hard rock and roll concerts to the Lansing area.

Stanley said the ice arena is a concert wonderland and will provide an alternative to concerts on campus.

The first show, Aerosmith and Rush, scheduled for March 31, was sold out two days after the tickets were available.

"I don't conflict with the University because we are running different shows," Stanley said.

Stanley plans to book about two shows a month at the ice arena.

Many of the people who are now a part of the Pop Entertainment cabinet will also work for Stanley at the ice arena.

Those working for Pop Entertainment concerts are not paid. They will be paid when working for Stanley.

Stanley has also agreed to book concerts in Saginaw, Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids. He has made arrangements to do concerts or help with concerts at three schools in the state and contacted at least six other colleges about the possibility of arranging concerts.

Stanley has also made plans to expand his own management company, Paul Stanley Talents. He had been managing one band for some time and has recently added four more bands to his workload.

Stanley was the target of an investigation last term by ASMSU President Tim Cain for a possible conflict of interest.

Cain said last term that his investigation failed to prove that Stanley was compromising the position of Pop Entertainment director by doing outside promotions.

It was found that he had used University phones for private business, a practice Stanley had never denied. Stanley was asked to stop using the University facilities for private business.

At that time, Stanley offered to pay for the phone calls and will pay as soon as the total costs are known.

Lobby to fight income tax hike

The Michigan Citizens Lobby says it will fight for a rollback of the income tax increase passed by the state Senate Tuesday. The tax was added to replace revenues lost when the food and drug sales tax was repealed in November. The lobby was one of the driving forces behind the repeal of the tax.

"We said that if the tax was repealed there would be no increase in taxes and we are going to see it through," said Barb Grossman, chairperson of the lobby.

Grossman said that the lobby would reveal a plan to roll back the income tax increase in about two weeks. She said the plan could, but would not necessarily, include a petition drive.

"We have to look at how the income tax was proposed before we make a final decision on a plan. Right now we are considering several plans to get through a tax rollback," Grossman said.

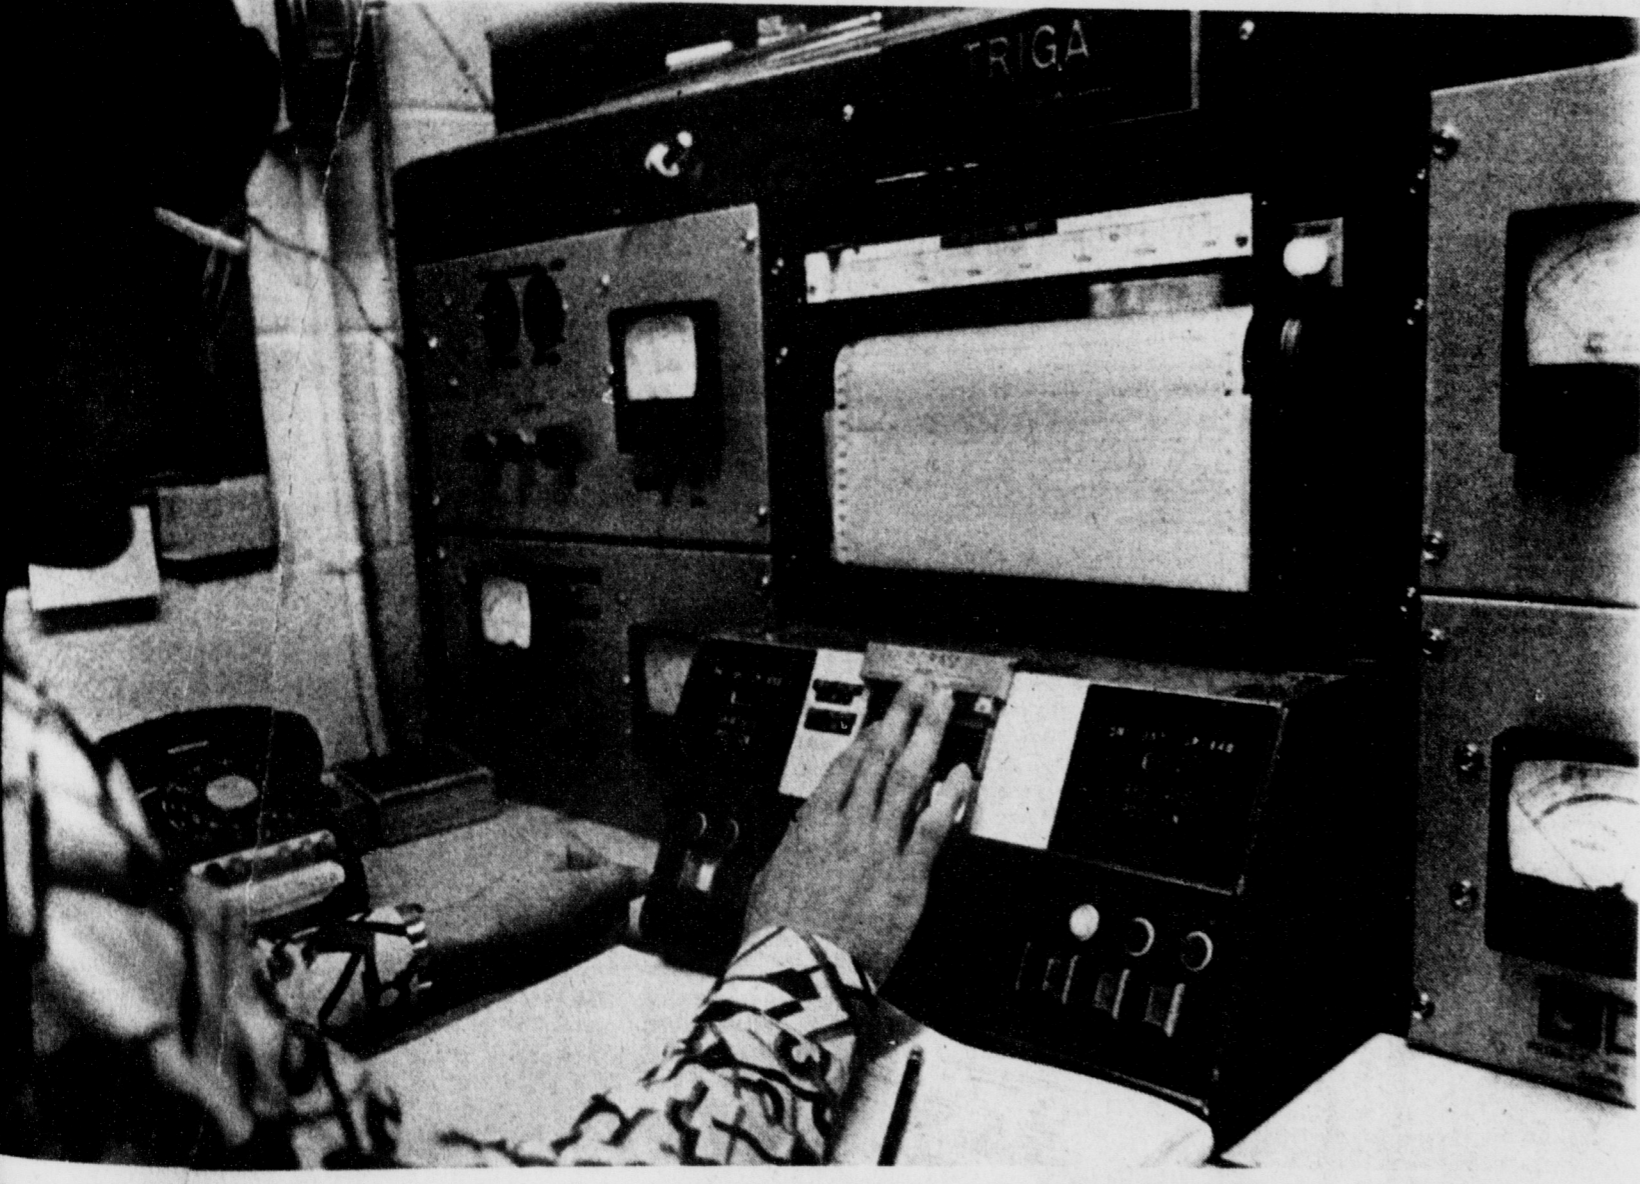

Last Thursday the lobby made alternative proposals on how the $220 million worth of food and drug tax revenues could be replaced.

These proposals fit into three categories:

- To close tax loopholes for the wealthy in the state. This would include such things as increasing the tax on capital gains — profit made from private sales of things like stocks and bonds — from 50 to 100 per cent.

- To propose taxes which would increase private business' tax burden in Michigan. These could include a tax on services which businesses purchase from other businesses.

- To increase nuisance and luxury taxes, like the taxes on liquor and cigarettes.

Reactor employees not afraid

MSU's nuclear reactor is the University to have said that an expert is a danger, but the people who are most closely associated with the possibility, the employees who work with the reactor, are not too scared.

"Some people worry that it might explode," said Ewald, who is licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission. "But reactors don't explode—if something goes seriously wrong, one could melt."

The reactor, located in the southeast corner of the Engineering Building, is inconspicuously hidden beneath metal grating in the floor of a small laboratory. A few dials, gauges and meters are used to keep track of the reactor's condition, but the room is otherwise surprisingly modest looking.

No humming sounds or eerie glows set the room apart from any other room in the Engineering Building. However, the 25-foot pool of coolant water for the reactor, visible beneath the grating, gleams with a green light. The reactor, about five feet wide, rests at the bottom of the pool.

"Radiation isn't a worry, either," Ewald said. "A person is exposed to five or 10 times more radiation every time he is X-rayed than we get in a year's work with this reactor."

The pulse-type reactor, a gift from the University of Illinois, is not used to generate electrical power. Instead it is used mostly to irradiate materials needed for research and for class materials.

One of Ewald's biggest complaints is that people do not take advantage of the reactor, mainly because they are not aware that it exists. As a result, it only operates for about four hours a week.

"If radioactive materials are needed at MSU, they are usually ordered from outside suppliers," he said. "But we can provide safer materials for less money."

The core: the business end of the reactor.

War erases excuses

As Cambodia and South Vietnam are steadily slipping from the grasp of their respective military regimes, it becomes pathetic to listen to American statesmen spew forth the same obsolete excuses that started and continued the obscenity wreaked on the people of Indochina.

With each day, more and more territories on the Southeast Asian map are blackened in by news reports indicating control by insurgents.

The fall of cities such as Hue, Pleiku, Quang Tri — areas that thousands of Americans died defending years ago — underscore with a vengeance the futility of continued involvement there.

Worse, it asserts the horror that we as a people have been taken; that the atrocity of U.S. involvement in Vietnam has achieved nothing except the deaths of 55,000 Americans and countless hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese as well as the total annihilation of any semblance of normal life for the Vietnamese people.

It is a fact, not a contention, that much of the geography of Vietnam has been so altered by our involvement that it is barely recognizable. The destruction of forests, rice fields and rubber plantations, through napalm and defoliation, will leave scars on the land that will be apparent for many generations to come.

This is what those excuses given to coax Americans into the war and keep them there have accomplished. Now our leaders are using those very same excuses to try and pour in more millions and continue the killing.

It seems that President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger have not yet noticed that the sympathy for their war and for the corrupt puppet dictatorships of Thieu and Lon Nol vanished long ago.

They can't see that what is needed is peace for the Indochinese people, terrorized for centuries by colonialism and wars and faceless combat soldiers of both sides. Instead of thinking in terms of abstract ideological considerations, the American statesmen should be thinking of allowing the Indochinese people to at long last construct their lives with security and certainty, and of letting them try, late though the hour is, make something of their war-ravaged countries.

Forget it, Mr. Ford. Your excuses no longer hold weight. And if you persist in them, your influence and credibility as chief of state will weaken as well.

Write to your reps

Between the lines of every public affairs story run by the State News is the silent hope that the story will interest, anger or elate you enough so you'll do something.

Even if it's not an issue you can picket or boycott over, letters and phone calls to elected officials do have an impact. Even though yours may be only an individual voice, your opinion will be added to similar statements voiced by others. The cumulative impact can, and often has, changed a public official's mind or buttressed his faltering stand against something you disagree with.

To encourage such communication, the State News will run the number of every bill and resolution introduced in either the Michigan House or Senate in every story we run. The legislation will be designated in full on first reference (as House Joint Resolution A, an amendment to the state constitution) and abbreviated on future references (HJR-A).

When writing or phoning, use these numbers. They'll help the legislator understand more easily what issue you're talking about, and how you feel he/she should vote on the bill or resolution.

We at MSU, encouraged to question, comment and ultimately understand, have the power to influence, through the representatives, the community and the nation. Rest assured that if you do not exercise this option, others will gladly seize the chance to air their views unopposed and get things done their way.

U.S. represses depression

I have good news to report today. The recession is not going to last as long as everyone, including the President of the United States, predicts.

My source for this information is Professor Heinrich Applebaum of the Flatbush School of Economics.

Prof. Applebaum told me the reason he believes the economic downturn wouldn't last is that "Americans just don't have the stamina to go through a long recession."

"They did during the '30s," I reminded him.

"Ah yes, but we're dealing with a different breed of American cat now. He's much softer; he's had it too good. No one wants to stand in soup lines anymore or sell apples on the street as we did when I was a boy. It takes tough moral fiber to have a long recession. We don't have the determination we used to have. Sure you hear a lot of talk about recessions, but how many people you know are willing to fight for one?"

"Not many," I admitted.

"Since television, the attention span in this country on anything has been exactly 20 minutes. Right now we're in a recession because everyone says we're in it. People whisper to each other, 'Don't buy anything because things are bad.' They go to parties and tell everyone how lousy business is. Americans are not in a spending mood. But give it a few months and suddenly they'll get tired of the recession just like they got tired of Watergate."

"Then they'll be whistling a different tune. They'll say to the media, 'We don't want to hear no more about a recession. Give us something else to talk about. If you don't stop talking about the bad economy, we'll turn off your news programs and stop buying your newspapers.'"

"Will the media bosses listen?"

"Of course they will. They don't want to antagonize their viewers or their readers. The editors will say, 'Take all recession stories off the front page and put them back in the financial sections where they belong.' The broadcasters will stop sending out camera crews to depressed areas. Pretty soon everyone will say, 'Hey, the recession is over! It's okay to go out and spend money again.'"

"This will mean that orders to the factories will start coming in; people will have to be hired; unemployment will go down; sales will go up, and the Avon lady will once again be ringing your doorbell."

"It sounds too good to be true," I said.

"It's going to happen," Applebaum assured me. "The best thing about it is that Congress and the Administration have been so slow in doing anything about the recession that it will be over before they get any bills passed. Once the American people get the message that Washington can't help them, they'll figure a recession isn't worth all the bother."

Applebaum continued: "This generation just doesn't have the 'Spirit of '32.' I asked my class the other day how many of them would be willing to go out and panhandle for a couple of years, and not one student raised his hand."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

McGovernment runs country

Many of the people in the retirement capital of St. Petersburg, Fla., believe that the policies and the candidates so overwhelmingly rejected by the American electorate in 1972 have now taken control in Washington. "McGovernment" is upon us.

The President is under the control of Congress; the Congress is under the control of the Democratic majority; the Democratic majority is under the control of "King Caucus," and the caucus is under the control of the liberal freshmen congressmen and the few pros who exploit them.

Thus, the country is being run by a Watergate backlash faction against the majority opinion as expressed in the most recent presidential election. Such a separation between governing and governed is not acknowledged in Washington, where polls are produced to show widespread backing for drop-the-burden and share-the-wealth.

But in this un-Southern state of Florida, more than a little resentment runs against the consequences of withdrawal and weakness in Southeast Asia.

More directly, the people who voted against the redistribution of income promised by McGovernment are now angry at seeing it come to pass. Instead of a one-shot tax-cut stimulus to the economy, there is justified suspicion that we are warring on poverty again by introducing poverty to the lower middle class.

Such resentment always presents a political opportunity, which is what is causing the thunder on the political right.

Conventional wisdom has been saying that the right wing is upset with President Ford's attempt to compromise and therefore is thinking of bolting into a third party or rising up to unseat him at the next convention of the Republican party. That misreads the fundamental conflict.

The argument is not whether the Republican party should be centrist, with the widest "me-too" appeal, versus rightist, "standing up for principle." That is what some conservative ideologues say, and liberal commentators give them serious coverage, hoping the Viking's funeral of 1964 will happen again.

The real difference of opinion on the political right is not whether or not to be a purist minority, but how best to construct or reconstruct a new majority.

One body of conservative opinion — best reflected by Ford and the men around him — takes the middle-of-the-road approach to gaining a majority, which worked for President Eisenhower. For republicans this requires a popular hero, which Ford is not.

The other conservative opinion — led by, or using as its leader, Reagan — takes the bloc-busting approach: building a majority, which worked for President Nixon.

In public speeches, Gov. Reagan took out the red meat of principle, denouncing "blurred images," which turns on audience and guarantees attention from national press who want to see him with Ford. But in all those speeches, especially in private conversation, argues that "the mandate of 1972 stands."

"Yes, we must broaden our base, Reagan says, always adding, 'as we broadened 1972.' He never fails to remind audiences that he was once a Democrat himself, that dissatisfaction with government" caused him to switch, and red-ink budgets caused the hated inflation. His message is not a purist "come over the conservative," rather it is "I'm the talking your language."

Too many kooks could spoil Reagan's broth, just as the lingering undercurrent of racism spoils Wallace's mom-and-pop. But the old left-right political split with most of the people "just a little left center," in the South and elsewhere, lost its meaning; personal, economic social issues could upset traditional political alignments.

Enter the useful villain of McGovernment. If Ford's conciliatory efforts to centrist support avail him naught, he look for a natural point of entry to signal all-out attack on isolationism and inflationary spending. That might be at the Republican National Convention, where could well let the delegates choose their own "new majority" candidate for president.

Final week's fury

Ladies and gentlemen of the student council:

We are gathered to discuss the announcement by Jerry Ford that the world will end at 1 a.m. Several of you have said that we should make some kind of statement, or draft a petition, or picket—or something. Let's have some discussion on the matter.

"I think the whole thing is a devilish rumour spread by the board of trustees to thwart our bargaining power over wage contracts. I suggest we file a grievance against the board. I know they're hoping the end of the world will come soon. It's probably their fault."

"Do you realize what will happen to unemployment figures, production figures, Wall Street and our ecology when the end of the world comes?"

"Should we draw up a petition demanding that the end of the world come after finals week? Just think of all the work I've put into these twinkle courses."

"I'm glad I defaulted on tuition payments and never bothered to buy the textbooks. Think of the waste of money if I had paid."

"Are you kidding? I'm going to picket the Administration Building to demand that the end of the world come before finals. I've been picketing Gallo wine all term and haven't had time to study."

"I can picture the archeologists in the year 3000 excavating my file and finding 16 hours of deferred grades for the term. I don't want deferred grades after all the work I've done for nine weeks. I move we demand a postponement of the end of the world until after March 13 at 3:00 p.m."

"The whole thing is unfair! I should have graduated in the spring. Just think of the job market by then."

"How will this affect my paper on curriculum innovations? Maybe I could hurry and write a surprise ending."

Thus, as the last fragments of the ozone layer sprinkle to the earth, as Kissinger gains new hopes for an Arab-Israeli agreement, as the last oil well dries up, as the dollar collapses, as well-dressed men carrying briefcases go to dirty movies, students continue to picket, to cram for exams and to fill up three by five cards.

The student council is making up bumper stickers.

I'd like to help in some way, but the bumper stickers are too big for my bicycle. Besides, "As The World Turns" begins in just 14 minutes.

Loneliness

I am 33-years-old and I am presently incarcerated here at the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility.

I am writing this letter as an appeal for correspondence and friendship. Loneliness in a place like this is almost unbearable. My interests are many, my pleasures few and my hopes are that someone will respond to my request for moral, spiritual and intellectual communication.

I wish to thank you in advance.

Can Mr. Nice Guy

We'd like to address a few comments to MSU athletics, particularly football, hockey and basketball, simply because these sports are where our main interest lies. Though we've supported MSU, win or lose, we'd like to see a little more winning and a little less losing. Sure the teams win some — even some big ones — but they can never seem to win THE big one. Why? We have a theory. They lack one thing — a winning team attitude. Corny? Maybe, but that doesn't make it any less applicable. We've got the talent. That's been proven by the excellent performances demonstrated by quite a few individuals on these teams. These particular individuals may have this winning attitude but if you don't have it as a team you can't win. One person doesn't win a game unless you're playing darts. If the attitude isn't there, it's the coach's job to put it there. His team has got to know they're good and let everyone else know it.

We don't mean to single out anyone in particular because we feel this is a general problem, but Gus Ganakas made a statement which appeared in the March 5 State News which struck us as typical MSU thinking. Regarding a tournament berth for the basketball team, he said they had a lot to offer the NIT in the ethnic diversity of the team. We realize he was joking (at least we hope so), but why doesn't he say they've got a good basketball team to offer? The closest Ganakas comes is to say the team showed a lot of character. We could be wrong but we think it wouldn't have been too presumptuous for him to be a bit more forceful.

Sometimes MSU carries the "nice image" a bit too far. Guys like Woody Hayes are arrogant and obnoxious. But Woody Hayes wins football games. We're advocating his style. Spartan teams their coaches have a lot of class and like it to stay that way, but there difference between that and being just wishy-washy.

Our intention is not to criticize coaches. We're concerned. Our teams good but they have to know they're good a team, and not only when they win but when they lose.

Either way, State, we're behind you.

Grand River trip

choked full of fun

How to have fun while driving by yourself from Detroit to East Lansing:

Be adventurous. Take a 1969 Ford Custom that is down a quart of oil and has a right front tire that your sister claims wobbles from side to side. The turn signals are flashed manually due to a malfunction in the electrical system. Other than that the car is fine, and the radio picks up WXYZ at least as far as Brighton.

Choose a beautiful, clear, sunny day. The kind of day that is normal anywhere but in Michigan, where that kind of day is a once-a-month occurrence. To make the drive different, forego the freeway and take the old route, Grand River Avenue, all the way.

The car passes by familiar buildings like the Olympia, Detroit's grand old ice palace and the tower of St. Mary's of Redford Catholic Church. Familiar street names, Greenfield, Six Mile and Evergreen, come and go as quickly as a street light changes from amber to red.

Traffic bogs down for a while. Flirt with the temptation to go down the ditch onto the Southfield Freeway. Redford High School disappears in the rear-view mirror. Goodbye Detroit. Hello Redford Township.

The sign across Eight Mile Road announces that the car is now entering Farmington Hills. The huge Botsford Inn is on the right. It was not so long ago when Eight Mile Road and the Botsford Inn were the end of civilization. Though the area is now Farmington Hills, a mushrooming suburb, it still may be the end of civilization.

Go through Farmington, pass through Novi, drive through all the names that are familiar from green expressway signs. Make them part of your reality. No Kent Lake and Kensington Park.

Minutes from Brighton, the halfway point between Farmington and East Lansing. Take a coffee break in Brighton at the Chef. Two bits and a penny tax for a cup of coffee and a smile from Anne or Deanne. Isn't that as prices go these days. If the price is too high, a smaller cup of coffee at McDonald's next door is only 15 cents.

Traffic picks up for a while as cars with skis leave Mt. Brighton for home. Most of these cars take the freeway. It is necessary to find other amusements on the second half of the trip swinging through the speed-trap towns on old Grand River Avenue.

Look for cars with personalized license plates sporting the initials KKK as they draw nearer. Howell is the home of Ross Shelton, Grand Wizard of the Michigan chapter of the Ku Klux Klan.

Play with the radio. Sing "Anticipation" with Carly Simon or la-la-la with Karpenter all the way through Fowler, Webberville and Williamston.

By the time Karen Carpenter is through the journey is almost done. WXYZ fades away. Gigantic apartment complex let us know that home is not far off.

Meridian Mall appears around the bend and Grand River Avenue widens into eight lanes.

Another trip done. Only a half longer and a lot more fun.

Oil companies, conservationists battle over area

By JEFF MERRELL
State News Staff Writer

Mix together one court case, an environmental impact statement, a meeting, an endangered elk herd and plenty of oil: shake well, and whatever comes out is guaranteed to be somewhat unpopular.

Those ingredients make up the controversy that surrounds the Pigeon River Country State Forest in northeast Michigan, where oil companies with an eye on the reserves are battling conservationists with a fragile hold on a unique elk herd.

The area sits on top of a reef that contains oil and natural gas deposits, but also provides habitat for the only elk herd east of the Mississippi River, in addition to moose and bear.

And some important events are scheduled to unfold in the next couple of weeks that will determine the fate of the elk, the oil and possibly the entire oil development and conservation policy of the Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR).

The most significant event is a decision from Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Thomas Brown, involving the Michigan Oil Co. and the state of Michigan.

Michigan Oil has leased oil rights to a portion of the Pigeon River area, and in 1971 put in a request to the Natural Resources Commission (NRC) for a permit to drill. The request was denied on the grounds that the area in which Michigan Oil wanted to drill was too fragile.

The oil company took the state to court, claiming that lease rights guarantee drilling rights.

If Judge Brown's decision favors the NRC, thus giving them the power to deny drilling permits for environmental reasons, conservationists are expected to go all out to convince the NRC to also exercise that authority outside the Michigan Oil case — which would include not only the entire Pigeon River area but the rest of the state as well.

The decision is expected in the next three weeks.

If, however, Judge Brown decides that Michigan Oil's request must be granted, the orderly development of oil in the Pigeon River area will depend on the passage by the NRC of a DNR-oil company-authored plan of development.

Final decision on the plan is expected to come up at the April 10 and 11 meeting of the NRC.

A major factor in determining the favorability of the plan and the extent of development that should be allowed is an environmental impact statement being drawn up by the DNR on oil drilling in the area, which should be completed by the meeting.

The plan itself was devised to avoid as much wasteful exploration and drilling as possible. Currently, four oil companies own some 90 per cent of the oil rights, but the holdings form a crazy-quilt pattern.

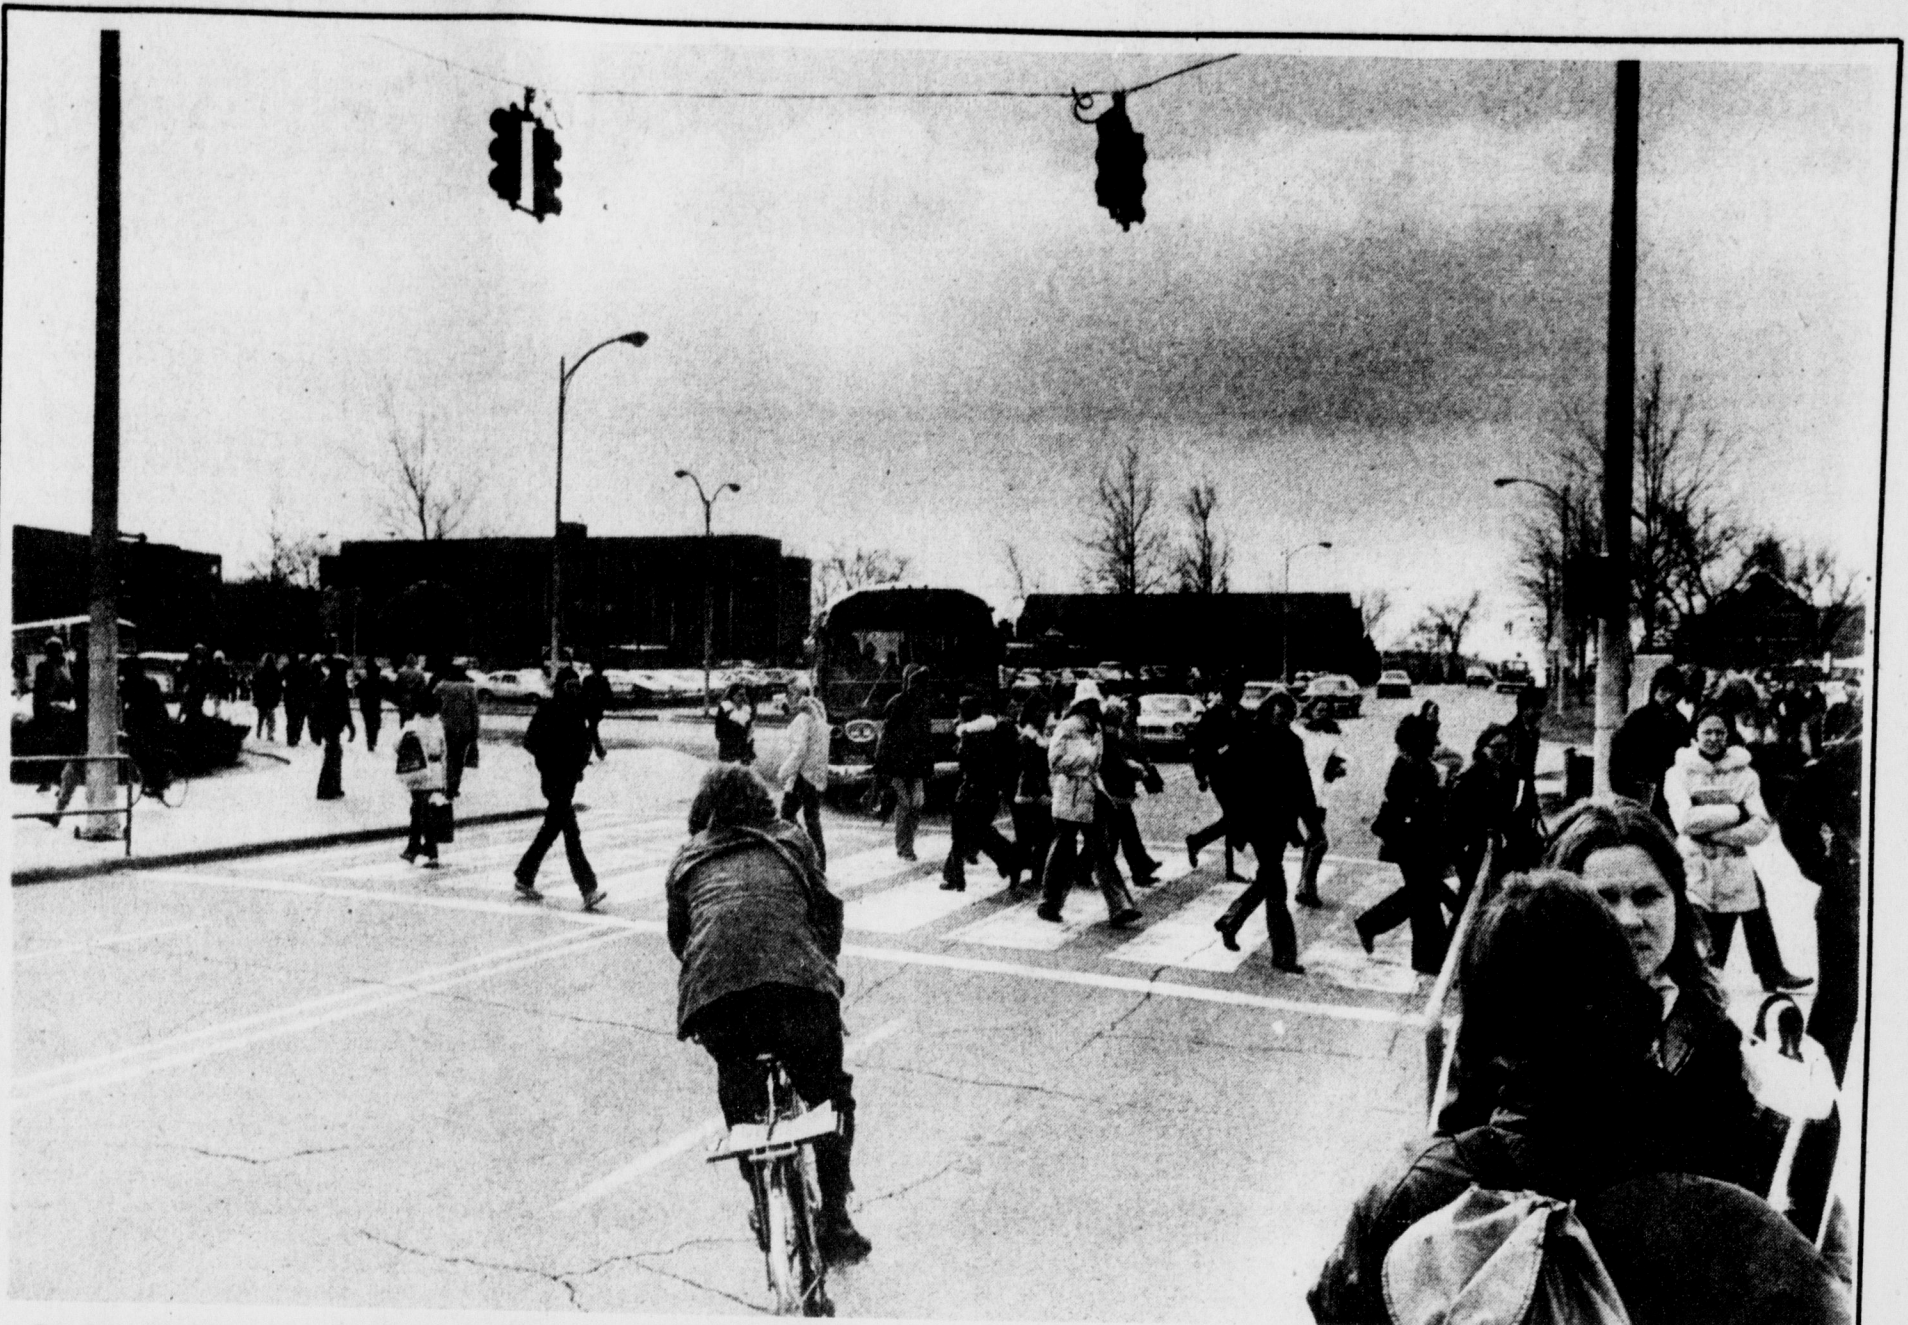

If left alone, the oil companies' explorations would overlap, and there would be several drillings where only one was needed.

The plan, which calls for the oil companies to cooperate in the development, would eliminate duplication of exploration and minimize activity in the forest. No pipeline could be laid or hole drilled without the approval of the state.

The agreement by the four oil companies to abide by this plan, if passed, is an extremely uncommon submission by industry to the interests of the state.

Profiting most from this agreement will be the elk herd, which has been diminishing in number after an increase of human activity in the area when the oil companies first moved in five years ago.

One of the most important requirements for the restoration of the herd is a cutback in activity in the forest region, according to DNR officials.

Students going to class trip the light fantastic for the first time Wednesday. The light, installed last week, must be pedestrian-activated by a push button before the foot sloggers get their 30 seconds of green light. Campus police said pedestrians disregarding the new light are jaywalking, making vehicle drivers not liable in case of an accident.

City names new head to planning unit

Scott Radway has been appointed director of the East Lansing Planning Dept., replacing Michael Conlisk.

Radway, 29, has been an associate planner of the city since May 1973. Conlisk resigned the position of Community Development Director in Kalamazoo.

Since joining the city staff Radway has worked on a comprehensive study of the city's Central neighborhood, has been searching proposed changes in the housing code and also did much of the study in preparing the city's Community Development Program.

Radway holds a degree in Community Planning from the University of Cincinnati. He is currently working toward a degree in Resource Development, with an emphasis in the economics and management of public resources, at MSU.

Kissinger supports Geneva talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Wednesday the Middle East is in "a moment of potentially grave danger" and that a Geneva peace conference is the only apparent alternative to war.

He spoke at a nationally broadcast news conference in somber tones of the failure of his personal Middle East diplomacy, saying the only choice now is to deal with the Arab-Israeli crisis "under more difficult circumstances."

Kissinger has always opposed a Geneva conference on grounds it was too large and cumbersome and likely to break down in bitterness.

But he said, "the United States is committed to continue the search for peace in the Middle East," and therefore now supports a Geneva meeting.

He will be in touch with the Soviet Union "in the near future" about resuming the conference. The Soviet Union and United States cochair the conference, which has been in recess since late 1973 after a brief opening.

But Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin said in an interview with the Israeli newspaper Maariv that he held little hope for success at Geneva. He noted that Israel and Egypt had failed to agree on a Sinai withdrawal plan "before Geneva" and that there was "little chance" at Geneva.

Another Israeli paper, Haaretz, reported that in the final stages of the collapsed negotiations, Kissinger had "lost his temper" with the Israelis for refusing an Egyptian offer. Haaretz said the secretary used "brute threats" and called the Israelis "short-sighted."

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres

told the same newspaper that if Egypt and Syria opened "static trench war" on their fronts with Israel, the Jewish state "does not commit itself to conducting" a similar type warfare.

Kissinger said the situation remains unclear and that requires the reassessment of Middle East policy ordered this week by President Ford.

He said the review will neither examine the question of blame nor will focus on the elimination of aid to Israel.

However, he did not end speculation about a reduction of that assistance, when he said: "There is no level of aid right now that has been set," although Israel has asked for $2.5 billion for the next fiscal year.

What the reassessment is aimed at is establishment of a realistic approach to the new Middle East situation. But however it comes out, Kissinger said, "The United States remains fully committed to the survival of Israel."

Even though supporting a Geneva conference, Kissinger made his doubts clear and he was almost pleading for some other idea, when he said several times, "The United States is prepared to consider any other approach acceptable to the parties."

MSU club plans horse show

If you have had the urge for a long time to see dogs herding ducks, or horsemen chasing and tying up goats, or even a bunch of Greeks trying to wrestle a greased pig to the ground, then this weekend you will have the chance.

These are just a few of the events planned by the MSU Block and Bridle Club for its 27th annual horse show this Friday and Saturday at the Judging Pavilion.

Entries were accepted by the club in February for MSU students wishing to compete in one of the nine areas of horsemanship. 95 students are entered in the contests.

These students will compete in: goat tying — where a rider charges after a goat, dismounts and ties up the goat; costume riding — where the rider dresses himself and his horse up in some costume; stake racing — where two riders race in and out between stakes; bundle racing — where a rider rides to his partner and changes a layer of clothes, and other areas.

The first rounds of competition in these areas will be held Friday night at 7 p.m. with the public admitted for $1.50, $1 for a student with an ID.

Friday night will also see eight teams composed of fraternity and sorority members trying to pin a greased pig to the ground. The team taking the less time to pin the pig will receive a trophy and a ham.

On Saturday there will be two shows in which competition in the nine areas of horsemanship will continue. One show will be held at noon for $1.50 and the final show will be held at 7 p.m. for $2 with the finalists in all areas competing.

Tim Miller, chairman of the show, said that proceeds will go toward financing the club-the rest of the year and sponsoring competitions between livestock raisers on campus.

State News Staff Writer
The sun has come up in the state capital.

In discussion, that is, with no less than four bills devoted to solar energy in various House committees.

Reps. Lucille McCollough, D-Deerborn, and Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, have introduced legislation designed to promote solar energy in Michigan.

McCollough's bill, House Bill 4241, has come out of the House Committee on Public Utilities with a recommendation for passage, and is now being reviewed by the House Appropriations Committee.

McCollough said her bill, which would create a Solar Energy Coordinating Council, was spurred by Michigan's poor energy situation and its strangling effect on business.

"When the energy problem gets down to the businesses, then you get action," she said.

The six-member coordinating council, appointed by the governor, would study the feasibility of statewide solar energy use.

"They could tell us whether statewide use would be good," McCollough said.

"The legislature could pass legislation to require all public buildings to install solar heating and cooling, without knowing whether it would be good, or costly."

The coordinating council, she said, would prevent that.

McCollough also emphasized the importance of an energy source for Michigan that requires no maintenance, is not scarce, and creates no pollution.

"Michigan should take the lead in solar energy legislation because we are a big industrial state and we need an alternative," McCollough said.

Solar energy bills introduced

Bullard introduced three bills, House Bills 4137, 4138 and 4139, designed to create tax incentives for installation of solar energy systems.

HB 4137 exempts property used in the conversion of a residential or commercial building to solar energy from the general sales tax, if that property is sold.

HB 4138 exempts contractors who build solar energy systems from a tax on materials used in construction not sold at retail.

HB 4139 allows the value of property used in conversion solar energy to be excluded from general property assessments.

Unpaid legislative aides sought

A recruitment meeting for students who wish to become unpaid legislative assistants will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in 31 Union.

Fernando Vasquez, asst. director of the MSU volunteers, said the volunteers will not be doing "shit" work.

"They will have the same respect and duties of paid staff," Vasquez said.

The volunteers will be needed six to 20 hours a week from now until June. Some positions will extend until the end of summer.

Job descriptions will vary with each legislator, but will probably include such things as doing research, learning to amend bills and answering letters and phone calls from constituents.

Legislators will make the final decision about who works for them, but volunteers are encouraged to state their preferences of party and special interests.

"We hope to match the students with the legislators," Vasquez said.

He added that the program could be valuable experience for anyone studying prelaw, criminal justice, mental health, psychology, environment or other related fields.

Positions are available for 15 to 30 volunteers. Vasquez said this is a pilot program which he hopes will "work the bugs out."

for a much larger program the fall for about 100 volunteers.

New law can save prescription money

By NANCY CRANE
State News Staff Writer

Students who must buy prescription drugs might get a cheaper alternative starting Monday when the new state generic drug substitution act takes effect.

The law, which was passed last year, allows pharmacists to substitute cheaper, chemically equivalent (generic) drugs for more expensive name-brand drugs.

However, according to an opinion by the attorney general, persons buying the drug must ask the pharmacist to substitute a generic drug. The pharmacist cannot initiate the action. If a doctor writes Dispense as directed (DAR) on a prescription, the pharmacist cannot substitute for drugs named on the prescription.

The Michigan Citizen's Lobby, which organized support behind the original generic drug law, wants to see an amendment to the law which would allow pharmacists to initiate the substitution of cheaper drugs for name-brand drugs.

Two representatives, Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, and Joseph Forbes, D-Oak Park, are working on an amendment to the new law which would allow pharmacists to initiate generic substitution.

"We are very pleased with the bill generally," said Linda Grossman, spokesperson for the lobby. "However, the people of the state must learn to question what is done by the pharmacist. People must be aware that they have rights in this area."

Grossman said that drug companies are trying to sabotage the new law by talking doctors into writing "DAR" on all prescriptions.

Grossman said that this campaign will probably not be successful. She said because doctors are required by law to write DAR on prescriptions themselves, the doctor will have to think about whether the drug they are prescribing could be substituted by a generic drug.

"We feel that the DAR portion of the bill is necessary because there are some cases where a patient might be allergic to an additive in a generic drug which is not present in the name-brand," Grossman said.

Another group, the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan

(PIRGIM), suggested that asterisks be allowed to appear behind generic drugs on a list of the 100 most prescribed drugs which is required by law to be on display in pharmacies.

The attorney general has ruled that asterisks cannot appear next to generic drugs on the list. Other consumer representatives feel that asterisks are not necessary because generic drugs can be spotted on the sign by their low price.

The only other major problem which accompanied the passage of the generic drug act concerned advertisement of prescription drugs.

DONATIONS GO TO BURNS CENTER

Record goal of WMU talkathon

By ANDREA SPRATLING
State News Staff Writer

Can you imagine talking for 724 hours on the telephone? That's the goal of the Western Michigan University (WMU) talkathon.

Only can imagine it, they're trying to do it.

An effort to raise funds for the Kalamazoo Burns Center also to regain WMU's title holding the world's longest telephone conversation, students from two different residence halls have been on the phone talking to each other since midnight, March 12.

Tom Weidman, a freshman from Royal Oak, said the idea got started when he and a few other guys were sitting around in his room looking through the Guinness Book of World Records.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm from both floors and I'm very optimistic about it," Weidman said.

The talkathon is a joint effort between the men on the fourth floor of Bigelow Hall and the women on the fourth floor of their sister hall, Henry Hall. A woman from the floor talks for an hour starting at the half hour, and a man from Bigelow talks for an hour starting at each hour.

"That way you're talking to somebody different each half hour," Weidman said.

Laurie Murphy, a physical education freshman from Ann Arbor, has been on the phone longer than any other woman on her floor (20 hours as of 7 a.m. March 25). She said she is pretty sure the students will make it if they get past Easter weekend.

"It's a little harder getting enough people to stay up here Easter weekend," she said. "But if we can, I know we'll make it."

Weidman says the group plans to get pledges from businesses in the area that are supported by the university's students.

"We're going to ask that one or two different businesses pledge a certain percentage of their daily profits each day we're on the phone after Easter break," Weidman said.

The Kalamazoo Burns Center, to which the funds will go, is a treatment center for burns that serves all of western Michigan. It is located inside of Bronson Methodist Hospital and is currently in need of more doctors and better treatment facilities.

A fraternity and sorority at Morehead State University in Kentucky presently held the world's record for the longest telephone conversation with 724 hours. They took the record from WMU in 1974 and WMU plans to regain it by midnight, April 11.

The students plan to continue even after they break the record until they reach their goal of 1,000 hours at midday, April 23.

Weidman said anyone wishing to make donations can send them to the Bigelow-Henry Talkathon, Box 4-A, Bigelow Hall, Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, Mich. 49001.

Food Science Dept. salt study offers male students free meals

If you are a male interested in free food and some extra money, the Food Science Dept. has the deal for be used for the study because of water and salt retention during menstruation, which makes accurate measurements impossible.

Mickelsen is conducting the study because the large amount of salt consumed by Americans in processed and snack foods leads to a high rate of hypertension. He theorizes that hypertension can be reduced if sodium intake is lessened with the use of light salt. The purpose of the experiment will be to measure the amount of salt excreted by subjects to see if they use more light salt than normal salt.

But the study will not be a simple matter of the volunteers eating the food and collecting their money.

Volunteers will be required to eat three meals a day at the Food Science Building for 36 straight days, starting Friday. All snacks and soft drinks eaten between meals must be reported to ensure an accurate accounting of salt intake.

Urine samples will be collected every day, and stool samples will be required on 16 days of the study. Subjects also must not take part in any physical activity which would cause sweating, because this would not allow the researchers to accurately measure the amount of salt excreted.

Anyone interested in participating in the study should contact D. D. Makdani today, in 229 Food Science Bldg. or Mickelsen by phone at 353-3185.

A DAMIANO DOUBLE FEATURE 2 GREAT HARDCORE FILMS ON ONE ASTOUNDING PROGRAM
No matter what your fantasies might be...

"GERARD DAMIANO the man who made 'Deep Throat' and 'Devil in Miss Jones' has no serious rival on the hard-core scene. Sex is always performed with feeling in his films but Miss Aggie brings out real characterization and story values."
"SOMETHING NEW IN THE ANNALS OF ADULT SEX FILMS! Very much a woman's picture, relating directly to a woman's urgent needs and steeped in every woman's sexual fantasies, Damiano doesn't merely fling sex at his audience. He knows what he is about and explores with DEFT, DARING AND DISTINCTIVE EXPERTISE, Damiano SKILLFULLY and ARTFULLY blends sex and fantasy in a saga of sexual hunger and repression."
"The most Hardened Erotic, Yet Joyously Life-Affirming Film Ever Made. So Superior that Any Major Studio Would Be Proud to be part of such a movie."

Folksinger an East Lansing landmark

By JOE LEWANDOWSKI
"I've been here since God was a freshman," says Jack Hamilton with a crooked grin. He probably hasn't been in East Lansing that long, but as a barroom musician, he sometimes thinks so.

"Are you still in this town?" someone in the bar asked Hamilton one night at Win Schuler's Grate Steak.

"Yeah," said Hamilton with a laugh. "Disgusting, isn't it?" He stood on stage, guitar hanging from his shoulders and a snifter of cognac in his hand, surveying the crowd.

Hamilton never receives newspaper reviews for singing and playing guitar to barroom crowds, but he has become a near legend on East Lansing's music scene as the first folk musician to entertain at the local bars.

"I guess it began on Jan. 28, 1970, when I started playing the Gables," he said. "Played there about a year and then started at Olde World when drinking was made legal in this town."

But Hamilton was here before 1970. Sitting in the empty bar at 2 a.m., Hamilton went over some of those years. He looked into the fireplace and, with his feet on a chair, his eyes brightened as he began telling stories.

"I started school here in '66 and after five years and four majors I never did get a degree," he recalled.

"I started playing the bars at night, and when I finished for the night, I'd have a couple drinks and get back to the dorm about 5 a.m., so I never made many classes."

While a student he tried out for baseball, competing against Steve Garvey (now with the L.A. Dodgers) for third base.

"We were both doing pretty well. I remember one day when we both hit a couple out during practice, but then I went on academic probation," he said with a slight grin.

Hamilton is short and stocky. His red hair and beard, round face and Friar Tuck hair cut make him look like a medieval monk. But as his shadow flickered against the rustic background of the Grate Steak he told stories, unfitting for a monk, about the places his music has taken him.

"I slept in an Oldsmobile in called the Sewer. The stage was set up right in front of the doors to the bathrooms. Sometimes the toilets would overflow.

The best audiences I've had have been at places where I played for free. I guess people some junkyard out in Aspen a couple of nights," he said. "Then I played at the Aspen folk festival with only six strings on my 12-string guitar."

"One of the worst places I played was a bar in Detroit don't try to impress each other at those things — nice quiet crowds."

"I played at the Stables a few weeks ago and the crowd was real quiet, and, hell, they didn't even have to pay a cover charge."

"There's no reason a bar be like that, but a bar's a guess. Hell, I love it. I wouldn't be doing it if I didn't."

Hamilton takes the future it comes along. He said he plays the Coral Gables month and hopes to set up dates in Arizona, Toronto, Mackinac Island for the summer. He also has published with Cherry Music Co. in New York while hopes will help him someday.

As far as performing in future, Hamilton said along might be tough.

"I think I could play in a if I had good, versatile musicians," he said. "But the biggest thing is, they'd have to be able to drink with me."

How much profit does the average U.S. company make on each sales dollar?

(check one) A. ☐ 45¢ B. ☐ 28¢ C. ☐ 12¢ D. ☐ 5¢

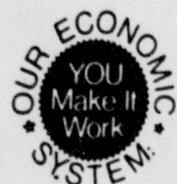

And where do profits go?

If you compare what the majority of Americans think corporate profits are, with the bottom line of the typical corporate financial statement, you will see that the public holds profound misconceptions about this vital subject.

The adjoining message from the April Reader's Digest sums up opinions and the facts about profits. It shows what happens to them. And it shows how the profit potential can give innovators the incentive needed to create or expand business. That leads to more jobs and more earnings all around.

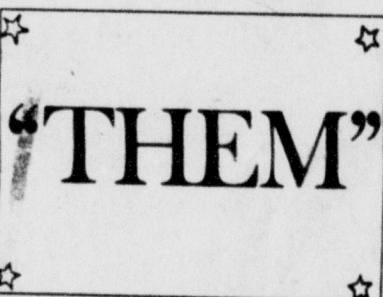

Read on (even if you checked letter D above). It can be well worth the investment of your time.

Reader's Digest

We all should know "them" better, for they play a vital role in everything we do

ADVERTISEMENT

WE've been hearing a lot about "Them" lately. Often bad things. About how big they are. They've been cursed in the streets, reviled in Congress, condemned in the press. They are often overestimated. They are seldom understood.

We all should know them better, for their handiwork is everywhere — though we may not realize it.

— They built a factory in a riot-torn section of Watts, Calif., then helped it along until it was a $10-million-a-year business owned largely by its employees.

— They helped to remodel a home for troubled youngsters in Leavenworth, Kan., and to fix up a recreation center for school dropouts and drug victims in Dallas.

— They created a million new jobs in the United States last year.

— They pour $325 million into education each year and another $144 million yearly into the arts. Their total outlay for charity each year is about $1 billion.

— They put $85 million into a new steel-making process that prevented a steel mill in Pennsylvania from closing down, saving 2000 jobs.

— They give federal, state and local governments more than $41 billion in annual tax revenues.

Who are "they"?

Profits. The money earned over and above the expenses of operating our American business and industry. If industry were not profitable, not only would companies soon go out of business — with dire consequences to employees and stockholders — but a great variety of social and humanitarian activities would simply go by the board. It is a corporation's continued profitability that allows it to regularly put money into, say, public TV or the local symphony, and at the same time create new technology and new jobs.

Profits are not, as some people seem to think, clutched in the hands of a few cigar-smoking tycoons. There are 30 million stockholders in this country who count on them; 33.5 million workers whose retirement funds, invested in stocks and bonds, depend on them; 365 million life insurance policies in force in the United States that depend to a great degree on dividends that profits produce.

Profits are far more, of course. They are one of man's primary incentives. Long after factories have been built and payrolls and fringe benefits paid, profits keep lights burning in offices, in laboratories, in men's minds, spurring the almost indefinable mix of new products and ideas called progress. Paper shufflers and chart dividers in a centralized economic bureaucracy do not invent automatic transmissions, fresh-frozen foods, kidney machines, double-knit fabrics or wonder drugs. Men in the market-place do. Stimulated by the prospect of profit, they find harder steel, brighter color television, sharper razor blades, quieter air conditioners.

When millions wanted electric hair-styler dryers, tremendous amounts of money, planning and machinery had to be channeled to meet that demand by companies seeking a profit. When the dryers started rolling out, who benefited? The companies — sure. But the big beneficiaries were the consumers, first, because their demands were satisfied and, second, business competition quickly drove prices down.

Yet, while profits are so intimately tied to the lives of all of us, the public concept of them is so distorted as to be hardly a concept at all. For example, polls indicate that the majority of Americans believe business clears about 28 cents profit on every dollar it earns.

The fact is, after taxes the average U.S. company now makes a little less than a nickel profit on each sales dollar.

Certainly, in some industries the average is higher, but not very much. Mining companies, office-equipment and computer firms average between nine and ten cents on the dollar. Lumber products make around seven. Oil production and refining produce about eight. But in many industries the profit margin is much lower. Ironically, many of the lowest profit margins are in businesses that many people assume to be making "unconscionable profits" at the consumer's expense. Supermarkets, for instance, clear a little less than a penny on each sales dollar. In the retail-sales industry, the average profit per sales dollar is around two cents.

Business and industry have tried tirelessly to convey this true profit picture. But somehow we Americans remain peculiarly unconvinced. We buy a house for $28,000, sell it for $40,000, then the next day condemn someone else's "pursuit of profit." We blithely forget the realities of economics and competition.

Let's look at the profit picture on a common product — a woman's dress that sells in department stores for $50. A woman examining it might conclude she could make the same dress for quite a bit less than that amount. Provided she could get the pattern (one of hundreds submitted by the manufacturers' designers), she could indeed save money. But this dress is on the rack because the majority of women have neither the time nor the inclination to make their own.

Why does it cost $50?

The box in the previous column gives a breakdown of costs. And it shows that a $25.75 dress that provided jobs and made a profit for people in the garment industry ends up fulfilling a consumer desire, providing livelihood for a department store's employees, putting tax money in the public treasury and profiting the store's owners. In the process, it becomes a $50 dress. As for that $1.30 retail profit — well, you the consumer are the reason why it is that low. For to raise the profit margin the businessman would have to risk losing your patronage. You in the end make the decision. That's what competition is all about. And profit is the essence of competition.

An MSU police report concerning the fight Monday between MSU basketball players Pete Davis (above) and Terry Furlow is expected to be given to the Ingham County Prosecutor's office today.

MSU signs all-state end

Cleveland Jackson, a 6-4, 220-pound all-state end from Detroit Northwestern High School, has signed a national letter of intent to come to MSU, football coach Denny Stolz announced last week.

The signing of Jackson by asst. coach Sherm Lewis is the 28th by the Spartans this winter.

Police hope fight report ready today

By STEVE STEIN

State News Sports Writer
Campus police are hoping to have a report ready this morning to give to the Ingham County prosecutor's office regarding a fight between MSU basketball players Terry Furlow and Pete Davis during a pickup game Monday.

This is the third time in the last two months that Furlow, a junior from Flint and the Big Ten's leading scorer last season, has been in the news because of a punching incident.

An MSU police spokesman said late Wednesday afternoon that three of the 12 witnesses to the incident had been interviewed. He said that the department will probably not interview all 12 witnesses, but enough to substantiate or negate the charges of both parties.

Jan Benedict, an assistant prosecutor, sent the complaint by Davis that Furlow punched him back to MSU for further investigation.

Davis, a 6-1 senior, has reported the incident to the Dean of Students office but Ruth Renaud, director of judicial programs, said Wednesday that she could not release any information concerning University judicial proceedings.

The controversial 6-5 Furlow, who led the conference in scoring with a 21.4 point per game average, finds himself making headlines again because of the incident.

He hit Illinois' Rick Schmidt on a regionally televised game in early February and was placed on probation by the Big Ten for the rest of the season. Furlow then allegedly hit MSU trainer Don Kaverman late in the season when something was found missing from the MSU locker room.

"The incident occurred between two students and we are waiting for the judgment," said basketball coach Gus Ganakas, who spoke with Furlow Wednesday. "We are concerned about it."

Ganakas said he had no prior indication that Davis and Furlow had any animosity between them.

Athletic Director Burt Smith said he was bothered by the incident.

"I'm concerned about any action by a student which does not reflect the best interest of the University," Smith said. "It is a reflection not only on the basketball program but on the entire athletic department."

Cage bust tickets available

Tickets are on sale at the athletic ticket office in Jenison Fieldhouse for the 1975 MSU basketball bust, which will be held Tuesday at Long's Banquet Center in Lansing.

Tickets are priced at $10 a piece for the bust, which will be held from 6 to 10 p.m.

Awards will be presented for the team's most valuable player, most improved player and sportsmanship.

The door prize this year is two season tickets to next year's games. Also, the Rebounders will raffie off four sets of tickets to next year's big games, four basketballs autographed by players and coaches and one free week instruction at MSU's summer basketball camp.

CLOSE OUT MIAMI TOURNEY

Batsmen win two of last three

By LARRY MORGAN

State News Sports Writer
The MSU baseball team wound up its sun-filled Florida training trip with two wins in its final three games, all against the Army Cadets.

The final win, a 5-2 triumph Wednesday, also closed out the Spartans' schedule in the second Hurricane Twin Tournament at the University of Miami in Coral Gables.

The Spartans were due to return early this morning to begin preparations for the opening game of the regular season, on April 5.

In taking the last two games from the Cadets, MSU brought home an 8-7 overall record and an encouraging 4-2 record in the second tournament.

Rick Moore picked up his second win in three starts by holding Army to only one run on four hits in Wednesday's game. Moore pitched seven complete innings before being relieved by Duane Bickel in the eighth, who preserved the win.

The Spartans got all the runs they needed in the third inning when they scored three runs on four singles. Shortstop Terry Hop drove in two runs and outfielder Al Weston brought in the third run.

A run in the seventh and one in the ninth inning added insurance to the Spartans victory.

Wednesday's match was a pitcher's duel compared to the doubleheader played Tuesday in which Army took the opener, 15-10, and MSU struck back to conquer the Cadets, 13-2, in the nightcap.

Army built up an eight-run lead in the first game before the Spartans were able to muster an attack in the bottom of the third inning, when they pushed across two runs.

The six-run lead was still too much to overcome however, even though MSU closed to within two after a six-run outburst of its own in the fourth and fifth innings.

The Cadets put the lid on the game as they came back with three runs in the seventh and a pair in the eighth.

Weston and Joe Palamara were standouts for the Spartans in the game as Weston drove in two runs with two hits, including a home run, and Palamara collected five RBI's on his three hits.

The second half of the twin bill furnished better results for Spartan rooters. A 12-hit attack scattered throughout the MSU lineup and a big seven-run seventh inning gave the Spartans a split for the two games.

Holding a 6-2 lead after six innings, the Spartans scored seven runs on five hits and four walks in the final stanza.

Jim Knivilla evened his record at 1-1 with six strongly pitched innings in which he fanned five Cadets. He scattered eight hits in the game. Don Ballard came on in the seventh to finish up for MSU.

YOU ALWAYS WANTED TO START AT THE TOP. RIGHT?

Next to being president, the best thing is to sit across the desk from the president on equal terms. And that's what we have in mind for you. A career that will be challenging, because you'll be dealing with top management. A career that will be rewarding, because you'll be helping companies develop programs to benefit their employees by the thousands.

The field we're talking about is sophisticated. It will call on all the expertise you've acquired in college, and a great deal more—which we'll provide. It will demand constant growth and continuous learning from you. It means a salaried career that has high income and management potential.

Still with us? Then you're probably the kind of person we'd like to talk to. Our career representative will be on your campus sometime soon, to discuss several opportunities in our Group Marketing division—the division that develops, sells and services pension and profit sharing plans, group life, health and dental insurance, and other important benefit plans. BRUCE WRIGHT

Tankers sport young look at finals

By DAN SPICKLER
State News Sports Writer
Cleveland, Ohio, is the site of this year's NCAA swimming and diving championships and MSU, a surprising fourth-place finisher at the Big Ten meet, will be represented by a youthful contingent of 12 swimmers and divers.

Only eight of the athletes making the trip to Cleveland

State's pool were sent with the financial backing of the University. Divers Jesse Griffin, Barry Van Amberg, Marc Stiner and Dave Baxter are competing in the meet, which runs today through Saturday, at their own expense.

Van Amberg is the only senior of the 12 Spartans. The four divers going at their own expense all qualified according to NCAA rules, but failed to finish in the top three in the Big Ten, a school rule for qualification.

Exceptions were made to the rule in cases where young swimmers came very close to the top three.

Diver Tom Benson, who finished strong in the latter half of the season, is the only diver sponsored by the University.

Swimmers competing include John Apsley in the 100 and 200-yard butterfly, and in the 500 freestyle. Apsley, only a freshman, was the Big Ten champ in the 100 butterfly.

Glenn Disoway and Bruce Wright, both juniors and top Big Ten sprinters, will compete in the 50 freestyle. Wright is also scheduled to swim in the 100 freestyle.

Ken Holmes, a junior from California, will compete in the 100 and 200 breaststroke. Holmes finished second in the 100 and third in the 200 breaststroke in the Big Ten, and holds the MSU varsity record in the longer event.

Freshman Mike Rado, who even surprised Spartan coach

Dick Fetters at the Big Ten meet, will compete in the 100 and 200 backstroke and in the 200 individual medley.

Rado finished fourth at the Big Ten in the three events he will be competing in. He set a new MSU varsity record in the 200 individual medley.

Shawn Elkins, yet another freshman, will be performing in the 200 butterfly.

Sophomore Mark Outwater will represent MSU in the 100 backstroke.

Outwater will team up with Holmes, Apsley and Wright in the 400 medley relay.

Orientation set for cheerleading

Students interested in becoming a member of the MSU cheerleading team should report to an orientation session at 4 p.m. April 3 in Jenison Fieldhouse.

All squad members must have at least a 2.0 all-University grade point average. They must also have earned at least 24 credits and be presently enrolled as a full-time student (12 or more credits).

Students should take their last semester grades to Clarence Underwood, asst. athletic director in charge of academic affairs, in 220 Jenison Fieldhouse.

Once that is taken care of, students then should obtain a card entitling them to a physical exam at the University Health Center. A card from the health center must be turned in at the orientation session.

The International Cheerleading Foundation has commended the 1974-75 MSU cheerleading squad for being one of the top 20 collegiate groups in the country. The team was ranked 18th.

Sox and Royals hand

gers pair of losses
KELAND, Fla. (UPI) — Nelson Briles scattered three hits in six innings Wednesday as the Kansas City Royals defeated a squad of Detroit Tigers, 5-1.
While, in Winter Haven, Rick Wise showed the Boston Red Sox that he's ready to take a regular spot in their rotation at the beginning of the season.
Veteran right-hander went six innings during a 3-2 Red Sox victory over the Tigers, yielding two hits, two walks and one run. It was his longest outing of the spring, doubling the three he worked in his previous appearance. Wise now has 11 innings with a 2.45 earned run average.

Join the third biggest family in the world.
Imagine an order of 22,000 priests and brothers in 73 countries around the world. (That's a pretty big family.)
But that's what the Salesians of St. John Bosco are all about - a large family of community-minded men dedicated to the service of youth. (And no one gets lost.)
In Italy in the 1800's a chance meeting between a poor priest and a street urchin served to create a movement of success that it is still growing today. Don Bosco became the priest who brought youth back from the streets - and back to God.
He reasoned that a program of play, learn and pray would make useful citizens of the world. He crowded out evil with reason, religion and kindness in a (what was then unheard of) atmosphere of family.
The ideals of St. John Bosco are still with us today. His work goes on in boys clubs, technical and academic schools, guidance centers, summer camps and missions. And his very human approach is very evident in the family spirit of the Salesians. This is the way he wanted it. This is the way it is. The Salesian experience isn't learned - it's lived.

JOIN THE SPRING CELEBRATION!

(in the International Center)

WMSN (640 on your dial) is broadcasting live from the front lobby of MSU Bookstore and giving out prizes galore!

Remember you can find your spring term books easily by using our shelf identification cards. These cards represent a guarantee that the books are required or recommended by your professor and are on the official MSU Book List.
