Baptism highlights Easter celebration

Though snow fell intermittently, smiles pierced the chilling 20-degree weather and joy warmed hearts inside cold bodies, including that of one man whose baptism early Sunday morning was a dunking in the icy Red Cedar River.

The baptism came at the end of a snowy Beal Gardens Easter Sun-Rise Service attended by over 100 people who prayed, sang and shared communion (bread and Welch's grape drink) on blankets and sleeping bags that did little to protect them from the cold.

Before the service, nearly 50 people took turns dragging a huge, stark, 175-pound cross from His House near Akers Hall to the river bank of the Beal Gardens.

Most of the frost-bitten spectators seemed filled with more joy than sympathy for Lansing Community College student Todd Hendrick who, along with baptiser Kevin Schneider, stripped to the waist and walked into the river in an amazing display of faith.

"Sure it was cold, but nothing mattered. The Lord was with me," Hendricks said.

It was somewhat reminiscent of a scene from one of Flannery O'Connor's biting short stories about Southern rivers and Southern Christians, except that every smile seemed genuine as they shone in the sun that peeked over the Library.

The cross, laid on a slope behind the gathering area served as a glaring reminder of the resurrection of the man the Christians present have placed their faith in and attribute their smiles to.

N. Viet thrust crushes Da Nang

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Da Nang, South Vietnam's second largest city, and other northern coastal strongholds tumbled Sunday before a powerful North Vietnamese offensive that rolled southward toward Qui Nhon, leaving in its wake destruction, panic and an estimated two million refugees.

The Viet Cong threatened to block the U.S.-led seafloor of refugees from Da Nang, and there were new calls for the resignation of President Nguyen Van Thieu, with some opposition politicians predicting Saigon itself will fall if he stays in power.

Demoralized government forces offered little resistance as the North Vietnamese plunged 175 miles from Da Nang to Qui Nhon, where fighting was reported. U.S. officials said all Americans had been evacuated from Qui Nhon, a port city that is South Vietnam's third largest with more than 200,000 people. Like Da Nang, it was once a major U.S. base.

Despite flat reports by Saigon military officials that Da Nang had fallen, Defense Dept. officials in Washington said they still had no confirmation the city was lost, and their latest information was that fighting was still going on there. The United States no longer has any official representatives or observers in Da Nang.

Hanoi radio said many South Vietnamese troops in Da Nang mutinied and the people poured into the streets to welcome the Viet Cong. However, at least two American cargo ships made their way into the harbor to continue the evacuation of refugees.

Associated Press correspondent Peter O'Loughlin reported from the S.S. Pioneer

Contender that 10,000 soldiers, women and children were storming the gangways of the Contender and the Pioneer Commander.

O'Loughlin said they had spent four days on ammunition barges without food and water. He reported the birth of one baby in the panic, the death of another, with still more likely to die.

He said there were sunken patrol boats in the harbor and that the ships had been warned of a possible underwater sapper attack.

President Ford has ordered four U.S. Navy ships into Vietnam coastal waters to assist the evacuation, and Britain, Australia and several other U.S. allies have promised vessels. But U.S. sources said only an accommodation with the Communist conquerors still trying to escape Da Nang.

The Viet Cong denounced the seafloor Sunday as a "deceptive trick" and threatened "to punish all acts of encroachment."

In neighboring Cambodia, President Lon Nol made plans to leave on Tuesday in a bid to get peace talks going with the Khmer Rouge insurgents. The half-crippled, 61-year-old chief of state will seek medical aid in Hawaii after a short visit to Indonesia, the head of his political party said, adding that Lon Nol would retain his title of president and his absence would be considered "temporary."

Cambodian rebels overran a government position only six miles from Phnom Penh and intensified their drive against the capital's northern defense line field reports said. Insurgent gunners shelled the airport and nearby market, wounding eight persons, but the U.S. airlift of food, fuel and ammunition continued.

Axing of phys.-ed sex guidelines bothers students

By CASSANDRA SPRATLING
State News Staff Writer

When Maryann Stirling, a psychology senior, enrolled in the developmental activities class last term, she had no idea what the class was about. All she knew was that she wanted a physical education class and it was the only one open.

She still does not know exactly what it is. When she learned that the class was designed for men she never even bothered to go.

Joseph McCormick, a social science major, had a similar ordeal. He signed up for a posture and conditioning class unaware that he would be one of three males enrolled in a class with 33 females.

Neither Stirling nor McCormick had any way of knowing.

As a result of Title IX, a 1972 amendment to the U.S. education law, it can no longer be specified in the schedule of courses that a class is for women or for men, according to Herbert Olson, assistant to the chairman of the Health and Physical Recreation (HPR) Dept.

The proposed guidelines to Title IX regulating athletics states that "no person shall on the basis of sex be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, be treated differently from another person or otherwise discriminated against in any physical education program or athletic program operated by a recipient, and no recipient shall provide any physical education program separately on such basis, provided however that a recipient may operate or sponsor separate teams for members of each sex where selection for such teams is based upon competitive skill."

Though Title IX has been law since June 1972, only since this past fall has it had any noticeable effect at MSU.

Prior to fall term 1974 there was a "W" or an "M" in the section column of the schedule books, indicating which sex a class was for. McCormick did not drop the posture and conditioning class because he took it for physical self-improvement, which he felt he could still get despite the 3 to 33 male/female enrollment ratio.

Stirling, however, is not pleased with the ruling. She thinks a sex distinction should be made for some classes.

"If I had known, I never would have signed up for the class," she said.

Now, according to Olson, the only possible way to distinguish between those classes geared to men and those to women is to include in the course description booklet reference to class use of equipment designed for a particular sex. Even then, the opposite sex still may enroll in the class.

Anne Fuller and Becky Boros have thus far proven to be the only women with enough of whatever it takes to stay and participate in a previously all-male developmental activities class.

Fuller and Boros are physical education majors who took the class last term as part of training for two judo competitions in March and April.

The course teaches weight training techniques, and most of the students enrolled were football players.

According to both women, the men in the class seemed to have the most difficulty getting used to the idea.

Fuller said that at first they got the feeling that the guys thought of them as intruders.

"A couple of them asked us why we were in the class," she said. "Other than that, they really didn't say much else to us."

Neither posture and conditioning nor the developmental activities class is being offered this term. According to Olson, the department offers more outdoor activities during spring term because that is what most students are interested in.

Olson said the department will offer the posture and conditioning class again fall term, but not the developmental activities class.

"The men interested in developmental activities can attend the posture and conditioning class," he said.

Mikki Baile, physical education instructor, found the situation no problem in the posture and conditioning class she taught last term because the program is individualized for each student. She said the real challenge came in her (individual) basketball classes.

Ford signs tax-cut bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's conclusion that the need for a tax cut outweighed the defects of the tax bill he signed Saturday was "the right thing," according to top congressional Democrats.

Ford signed the $24.8 billion tax cut measure into law during a nationally broadcast address Saturday night, but said he will try to clamp a lid on government spending to hold down the deficit.

The bill provides a variety of tax changes and reductions with the most immediate effect a rebate of $100 to $200 on 1974 taxes for most Americans. The first checks are expected to go out early in May.

Ford was critical of several provisions of the measure but said he was signing it because of "the urgent necessity of an anti-recession tax cut right now."

In January he had asked for a smaller cut aimed more at middle income taxpayers, and he noted Saturday that this law "fails to give adequate relief to the millions of middle-income taxpayers who already contribute the biggest share of federal taxes."

The measure is aimed to give the largest refunds to lower and middle income persons, with incomes up to $20,000.

Ford's action drew praise from both Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Some Republicans and other Democrats, however, indicated they wished the President had vetoed the measure.

Major provisions include:
• A 10 per cent refund of 1974 taxes up to a maximum of $200 and with a minimum of $100 except for persons who paid less than $100, who would get back all the taxes they paid.

• An increase in the standard deduction for 1975 for persons who do not itemize on their tax returns.

• A $30 tax credit on 1975 taxes for every taxpayer and each additional personal exemption claimed.

• A 1975 earned income tax credit to help the working poor through special payments to help compensate them for the Social Security taxes they pay.

• A tax credit of 10 per cent of earned income up to $400 for working families with

Saigon could not resist assault by Communists, sources claim

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — The military slippage by the South Vietnamese government has been so unexpectedly widespread in recent weeks that informed Western and Vietnamese sources believe a major Communist assault against the capital of Saigon could not be adequately resisted.

These sources, who see the push against Saigon as inevitable, believe that President Nguyen Van Thieu's power base among senior military officers is rapidly being undermined, and that political changes could swiftly follow more Communist successes.

Thieu might be seriously challenged, these sources believe, either by generals who believe they can better rally the will of the military forces to resist the Communists, or by other senior officers who see reopened negotiations with the Communist side as the only way to avoid complete disaster for South Vietnam.

Analysis

But whatever the future political course for Saigon, the Communist offensive rolls on in the North, and it has already reversed the territorial picture in South Vietnam.

Before the month-long offensive began the Communists controlled about one-third of Vietnam's 66,000 square miles, including just one whole province.

Now they control the bulk of the country, including 13 of the 44 provinces, and 74 district towns.

There were four million South Vietnamese citizens living in the fallen provinces. Another six million live in provinces now seriously contested by the Communist side.

That means more than half of Vietnam's 20-million people have either been captured, are on the run as refugees or will have to decide pretty soon on one course or the other.

Major cities have become easy prey for the Communist side. On Sunday the second biggest city in the country, Da Nang, fell. Others along the coast are also crumbling.

Kissinger to talk at U-M

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has tentatively agreed to speak at University of Michigan commencement exercises May 3, according to school officials.

A university spokesman said Saturday the secretary of state had "agreed in principle" to appear on the Ann Arbor campus to address graduates.

Although Kissinger could not be reached for comment, his personal secretary confirmed that the university had extended an invitation to Kissinger and that he had tentatively accepted it.

Dems pick Wallace in poll

More Democrats and independents pick Alabama Gov. George Wallace as their top choice for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, the latest Gallup Poll shows.

Wallace is the choice of 22 per cent of the Democrats and 28 per cent of the independents surveyed.

Trailing Wallace in the poll of Democrats were Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., 16 per cent; Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., 13 per cent; Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., 10 per cent, and Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, 9 per cent.

Clemency deadline nears

The clemency program for Vietnam wartime deserters and draft evaders is nearing an end with less than one-fifth of those eligible signed up.

As of this weekend, 22,566 had signed up for the program, which ends at midnight Monday, out of an estimated 117,000 eligible.

Telephone lines were available at the clemency board over the weekend, recording the names of callers.

The program went into effect last Sept. 12 and has been extended twice by President Ford. Chairman Charles E. Goodell says he feels Congress should extend the board. Bills have been introduced to do so, but there was no indication of how much support they would receive.

Second show reveals more

The second of CBS' two-part filmed interview with H. R. Haldeman, broadcast Sunday, proved an absorbing show filled with considerably more hard news than the first Haldeman program last week.

Unlike last week's show, which largely dwelt on the Watergate tapes, this edition covered a far wider range, with Haldeman saying:

•Nixon discussed the possibility of appointing John B. Connally as vice president long before scandal touched Spiro T. Agnew because Agnew was frustrated and thinking of resigning during his first term.

•Secretary of State Henry Kissinger threatened to quit "quite a few" times, "some major times and some minor times," while he was Nixon's chief national security adviser.

Sniper kills 2 in Louisiana

A sniper opened fire from the second story of an apartment building here Sunday morning, killing two persons and wounding a third before killing himself, police said.

Charles Dortch, asst. police chief in this north-central Louisiana city, tentatively identified the sniper as Bob A. Howard, 30. Officers said they were unable to immediately determine a motive for the killings.

Coroner Herbert Van Buren said the dead men were Darly Evers, 18, of Jackson, Miss., and Ronald G. Mitchell, whose age and hometown were not immediately known.

Holy Land honors Easter

Bells pealed out the joyous message of the risen Christ on Easter Sunday as brilliant sunshine bathed the holy city of Jerusalem and as Pope Paul at the Vatican urged that the disappointments of earthly life be viewed in the light and promise of Jesus' resurrection.

A high mass was held in Jerusalem in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, traditional burial place of Jesus, and was attended by thousands of holy land Christians and pilgrims from the United States, Europe and the Far East.

But for all the joy and peace of the celebrations there were constant reminders that the war is not over in the Middle East.

Faisal's killer declared sane

Prince Faisal Ibn Musaed was officially declared as "sane and in complete control of his faculties when he assassinated King Faisal" of Saudi Arabia Riyadh Radio said in Beirut Sunday.

The broadcast said the 27-year-old prince will be referred to a religious court for trial and indicated he will be beheaded in public in accordance with Islamic law.

Good laugh proves fatal

Alexander Mitchell of King's Lynn, England, found the antics of his favorite television program so hilarious that he laughed nonstop for 25 minutes. Then he collapsed and died.

His wife Nessie said Friday she would send her thanks to the creators of the comedy program.

"I'm writing to thank them for making Alex's last minutes so happy," she said.

Mitchell, a 50-year-old bricklayer, ate a heavy dinner before watching the program. Doctors said the strain of the laughter as he was digesting his food killed him.

Sadat message upsets Rabin

Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin said Sunday that Israel would take as a "negative indication" Egypt's announced refusal to extend the mandate of United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Sinai Desert for more than three months.

Rabin was displeased at Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's announcement in Cairo on Saturday that he will renew the UN peace force's mandate for only three months, rather than the six-month periods the peacemakers have been given by the UN Security Council until now.

Oil inquiry causes dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government investigators of alleged oil company profiteering at the height of the Arab oil embargo are fighting among themselves over whether to seek criminal indictments, according to sources close to the case.

The U.S. Customs Service wants the cases criminally prosecuted, the sources said, but the Federal Energy Administration is arguing that the matter should be pursued through administrative channels. The Justice Dept. reportedly is caught in the middle, but so far has sided with customs.

Federal Energy Administration (FEA) lawyers say published reports that oil companies may have overcharged U.S. consumers by billions of dollars are gross exaggerations without evidence to support them.

According to tabulations Saturday, the FEA has forced the oil industry to give back some $612 million through refunds, price rollbacks or cancellation of claims on future price hikes.

Investigators say the industry may have cheated the public out of $861 million or more since the Arab oil embargo.

The probe is going on in several cities, but only one case so far has reached the stage of being presented to a grand jury. It is in Jacksonville, Fla. Oil company executives who are subjects of that investigation say the whole matter is the result of "a terrible misunderstanding."

The Customs Service says the joint Customs-FEA investigation began last August and was focused on residual fuel oil imported chiefly through East Coast ports. A major portion of the residual fuel oil brought into this country is used by public utilities.

A status report on the 6-month-old probe said that though oil was a duty-free product during the 1973-74 embargo period, "false and fraudulent custom documents may have been submitted by importers as part of a scheme to reap huge profits by attaching fictitious overcharges to the price of oil. These charges are eventually passed on to consumers."

During the embargo that began in late 1973, some countries outside the Arab bloc continued to sell oil at pre-embargo prices while others boosted their charge nearly 500 per cent.

The theory of the case is that some oil companies with contracts to deliver fuel to utilities and other large consumers obtained their foreign oil from countries with relatively low prices but falsified the required Customs documents to make it appear that the oil came from countries where the price had skyrocketed. The extraordinary increases were then passed on to the consumers with the oil companies pocketing the difference.

That is the theory. Whether sufficient evidence exists to support it, whether it was a criminal offense and whether it was limited to a few small companies or a common industry practice are the issues at the core of the dispute between Customs and FEA.

Douglas Robinson, deputy general counsel of the government energy office, said in a recent interview, "I'm frankly surprised at the way in which things like this can get blown out of proportion."

On the basis of evidence gathered so far, he said, no one knows how extensive the practice was or what laws were broken.

"As far as FEA is concerned, it's really a question of whether it is worth going through all of this grand jury thing to bring a criminal case in which the maximum penalty is only a $5,000 fine for each violation — no jail sentence or anything like that — or whether it is more appropriate to proceed administratively, which we can do much more quickly, the result of proof is not nearly so great and the result would be effectuate rollbacks in cases," Robinson said.

Customs spokesmen refused to comment. But other government attorneys hope to seek indictments under three criminal statutes make it a felony to make statements to the government bring goods into the country means of false statements or smuggle goods into the U.S.

Those laws carry maximum penalties of from two to 10 years in prison and $50,000 to $100,000 fines.

Financial aid applicants near deadline for filing

By BRAD MARTISIUS
State News Staff Writer

Students who need financial aid for summer or fall term are urged to submit applications by Tuesday, and the deadline for fall term is May 1. Henry C. Dykema, director of special aids at MSU, said anyone who applies after the deadline will not be considered until after all other applications are processed, "and then only if money is still available," he said.

Health tests set for area adults

Health screening tests to help identify cancer and other serious diseases in adults 18 and over will be offered every Saturday, May 5 through May 3, at four different locations in Ingham County. The tests are open to students. Tests offered for the early detection of medical problems include: a Pap test for cervical cancer; a multiphasic blood test which could detect heart problems, diabetes and hepatitis, and a blood count that could pinpoint anemia. Any one or all of the tests can be taken at the cost of $4 for the Pap test, $5 for the multiphasic blood test and $2 for the partial blood count. Before being administered the multiphasic blood test, a six-hour fast is required during which only black coffee, tea or water may be consumed. No special preparation is required for the others. In addition to this year's program is instruction in the proper method of breast self-examination. The tests are sponsored by the Ingham County Health Dept., Cooperative Extension Service, Tri-County Heart Assn., County Diabetes Assn. and the American Cancer Society-Ingham County Unit. They are designed to reach those people who find it difficult to provide for their medical needs. Times and locations for the testing are: April 5 and 12, Masonically Practice Center, East Columbia Road, Mason, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.; April 19, Medical Center West, corner of Logan and Shaw Streets, Lansing, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.; April 26, Faith United Methodist Church, South Waverly Road between Jolly Road and Mes Street, Lansing, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. (Pap tests will not be available at this location); and May 3, Ingham County Health Center, 401 Greenlawn Ave., Lansing, 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

"We anticipate more people than usual will make applications for financial aid this year," Dykema said.

"If a student applies late and certain funds, such as the National Defense Student Loans, are exhausted, we'll be forced to recommend the student for a less favorable loan with a higher interest rate," he said.

Dykema also reminds freshmen and sophomores to apply for basic grants, which are handled directly by the federal government.

"Many students could be losing aid just because they are not aware they are eligible for some forms of assistance," he said. Dykema said that Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG) are available, but the forms, available in 264 Student Services Bldg., must be sent directly to Washington, where they are processed and sent back to MSU to be credited to the student. The average BEOG award is about $220.

However, most other types of federal aid are handled through the University. Dykema said that the financial aid office tries to make things as simple as possible for the student by using one basic form. The student is automatically considered for various types of aid (except basic grants) by filling out one application.

MSU figures that the basic budget for a student who is a Michigan resident and a dependent is $2800. The budget for an independent student is about $3100.

The first task of the office is to determine how much of that figure the student and parents can provide without assistance. They then check to see how much money, if any, the student is getting from outside sources such as scholarships, GI bill or state programs. The next step is to determine how much unmet need remains, and how much assistance the student qualifies for under federal regulations.

Dykema said dependent students usually get more aid than those independent of their parents.

"The independent student is expected to have some income," he said. "That student cannot expect to transfer dependence from the family to the University."

Israel must not hoard land

The sudden, destabilizing events in the Middle East come at a poignant time for Jews: Passover, the holiday that for so many centuries symbolized the hope of return to the land of Israel. The embodiment of that dream, present-day Israel, seems more than ever at risk in a hostile world.

In Israel itself, the breakdown of Secretary Kissinger's peace efforts has predictably intensified the embattled atmosphere. There is resentment of what is seen as American pressure to give up vital territory in the Sinai in return for something less than an Egyptian declaration of non-belligerency.

It is always risky for outsiders to tell the Israelis what they ought to do. They bear the reality of danger, and they live with the fear that the Arabs talk of settlement but really want to destroy them. But respect for Israel's fears cannot be allowed to suspend reasoned discussion.

Israel's premise, in so tenaciously resisting return of the territories taken in the 1967 war, must be that she is being asked to give up a position of strength. The territories provide security, that is. But that premise is faulty in a number of ways.

First, the land occupied in 1967 is less and less significant in terms of physical security. New weapons will cover the distance involved and more. The next war will be more destructive than the others, whatever the particular boundaries. And militarily, time is running against Israel. The economic power of the Arabs is beginning to tell, and they are narrowing the gap with Israel in the mastery of military technology.

Second, retention of the occupied territories is sapping the already-diminished reservoir of good will toward Israel in the world. Prof. Stanley Hoffmann of Harvard, one of the wisest foreign-affairs specialists in this country, has written of the danger of Israel's "isolation, physical and mental, from its neighbors and indeed from much of the outside world. The United States is almost the only pipeline to the world."

Third, it is a delusion to think that Israel can ever get true nonbelligerency from her neighbors unless and until she returns the occupied territories. No Arab leader could last on such a basis. Hoffmann, after a visit to Israel, said people there long for and talk of "real peace" — meaning trade with the Arabs, and tourists, and so on. But those can come only at the end of a process.

Prof. Hoffmann's views are given in a remarkable article in the April issue of Foreign Affairs. It is a piece of large scope, rich in detail and striking in analysis. Its central argument is for a "sweeping Israeli initiative aimed at a peace settlement."

Israel is going to have to return the occupied territories eventually. Hoffmann argues, instead of putting that truth out of mind and worrying about interim details, she should now face the issue, decide and disclose what she is ultimately willing to do in return for true peace — and then concentrate on ways to assure the stability of final borders through a political structure. In short, Israel would recognize Arab rights and talk about security, instead of resisting those rights and talking as if security lay in Israeli possession.

Nobody can deny that there is risk in the political course — but standing pat carries worse risk in the long run. For a small country such as Israel, safety lies in a position where the largest number of outside persons and powers feels a responsibility toward her. That means drawing the Soviet Union into the picture and hopefully — difficult as it would be — making Soviet agreement with the U.S. on Israel's security a base price of detente.

Secretary Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy was probably a mistake in one respect: it encouraged the Israelis to put off the larger questions of peace and focus on yards of desert and verbal formulas in a secret setting that nurtured suspicions among Israeli factions and their American supporters.

But the Kissinger method had a crucial accomplishment: it got President Sadat talking realistically about Israel as a permanent fact. It had him acting in the living with Israel, and going on to the of bettering life for Egyptians.

All that was much more important any form of words, and it has been a long way. Whether Israel or Egypt the most to "blame" does not matter; the most to lose by failure. Now the of unreason are stronger in the Arab and Israel faces Geneva negotiations happy circumstances.

The Passover service included promise: "this year we are slaves, next we shall be free." Freedom from state of siege can come, as has always clear, only when she achieves a vivendi with her neighbors. Their sign is a historic fact, but that justify refusal to understand that the grievances, too — or justify reliance delusory security of acreage.

Economy gets help

It is very easy to poke fun at President Ford's speechmaking. His overly careful, snail's-pace diction and high school theatrical blocking provide many a laugh to critics and friends alike.

But when the President addressed the nation Saturday evening to announce a sooner-than-expected signing of the tax-cut bill, even his well-rehearsed, mechanical walk and his comical, literal "drawing the line on inflation" did not seem to matter quite so much. President Ford had finally done good.

For too long, America has had only confused, reluctant economic leadership.

While national unemployment has risen above 8 per cent and the building of new homes — an important economic indicator — has hit an all-time low, a stall on this tax bill by either Congress or the President would have been disastrous, both in terms of the economy and the spirit of the country.

But Congress rushed the bill through in the relatively short time of 10 weeks, and Ford signed it within three days, at a time when most White House experts were still discussing the possibility of a veto.

Instead of a veto, the American public will get what it needed most: money to pump back into the stagnant economy.

On May 12, the Internal Revenue Service will begin a six-week project of mailing out checks for rebates of 10 per cent of income tax paid in 1974. For many MSU students with low incomes, this may not have much effect.

But nationwide, this provision, along with many others in the bill, will hopefully increase spending and open up jobs for America's unemployed legions. Tax credits and rebates for 1975 and home-building incentives written into the bill are well-designed to carry increased spending into next year.

Despite the bill's problems — that Congress may not have done a thorough enough researching of its economic options and that the bill will add $24 billion to the national deficit and open the possibility for fresh inflation — President Ford, in affixing his signature to it, restored a measure of public confidence in the federal government and, with luck, prodded America back toward economic health.

Ethics code needed

The tainted public service record of Michigan's second-highest elected official, Lt. Gov. James Damman, magnifies the urgent need for a comprehensive and definitive political ethics code for the state.

Thanks to Michigan Common Cause, such a code is ready and waiting to be made law.

The hitch, though, is getting a band of catch-me-if-you-can lawmakers to clean their own house. Recent history shows this won't be easy.

Since legislators tried last year to palm off a weak-kneed version of campaign reform as sufficient housecleaning, they will undoubtedly squirm and scheme this year before enacting the proposed Common Cause ethics code, if they tackle it at all.

The Common Cause proposal includes stiff regulation of campaign contributions, conflict of interest, and lobbying — all areas currently unenforced and rife with abuse. A political ethics commission — with real teeth — would referee the whole dirty game.

Should the legislature attempt a stall, Common Cause is armed with a plan for a petition drive to put the proposal before the voters on the November 1976 ballot.

But it is generally conceded by both friends and foes of the code that a petition drive would be slower, more costly and probably result in a poorly written bill.

In any case, the legislature should have the conscience to initiate its own ethics code. More than one of the recently elected lawmakers campaigned on platforms highlighting "campaign reform" and "political ethics."

But if state legislators fail to enact this code in a few months, or if they offer another half-baked reform plan, they will find that Michigan voters do have a common cause — to kick the rascals out.

Biggie Munn's lesson lives

Good-by, Biggie.

I was far away when I heard that Biggie Munn had died, but the lesson I learned from Biggie will be with me wherever I go.

I first met Biggie in December 1971. I had just started work as an orderly on Six-Foster, the spinal injury and stroke ward at Sparrow Hospital, where he stayed for several months after his debilitating stroke Oct. 7, 1971.

I and a few others became personally acquainted with Biggie on a day-to-day basis. We at the hospital knew a different Biggie than the one his lifelong friends had known. And conversely, they knew the man like we never could — as a physically capable and powerfully striving man. But gradually, and in a different light, we came to know this man, too.

A severe stroke is an obscene mockery of human physiology. Part of the brain is irrevocably damaged, while other areas remain fully functional. Recovery in any case is never total, and Biggie had suffered a bad one, but he never once gave up trying to make it all the way back.

This struggle of Biggie's showed us what type of man he really was. Many people will simply give up trying to recover, and it must have been especially tragic for Biggie because he had been such an athletically forceful man.

But everyday he made it known to the nurses and orderlies that he wanted — had to — get up from his wheelchair and walk. And with our help, he would.

Biggie never stopped trying to talk, to be understood. I used to wonder if his brain damage was so bad that he really didn't know what he wanted to say, but one day I learned better. He was trying to tell us something, but his words refused to come out coherently. Finally, he sighed and said most clearly and disgustedly, "shit!" Then he began trying again.

Biggie Munn never let the cruel circumstances he was trapped in make him forget other people. Every day he was cheerful. Each morning he had a friendly wave and a smile for each member of the hospital staff who came into his ward. And he was always doing his best to make comradely conversation with the other men who were hospitalized with him.

The last time I saw Biggie was in the spring of 1972. He had come back to our floor for a few days of observation, and as I walked into his ward, I wondered if he would remember an anonymous orderly. He did. Tears came to his eyes as he gripped our hands in greeting, recognizing all of us warmly.

I left the hospital later that summer, but I will never forget Biggie Munn and what he learned from him.

His body may have failed him, but his spirit never did. Not even to the end.

Trustee inaction

After reading the State News Wednesday, I learned of the MSU trustees' decision not to boycott Teamster lettuce. I have gone to MSU one year and feel frustrated as a student to see how little the board has done for the students and the community. The board showed its misunderstanding of human rights by not calling for a boycott.

Trustee Krolakowski states that making a moral judgement and inflicting it on the student body sets a bad precedent. In reality, students elected him as their voice and students (a majority) favor a boycott. One wonders how human suffering can be ignored over board precedent.

Put yourself in the farmworkers' position, trustees, and you too would want your rights. It is obvious you can't do that, though, or you're afraid to.

These democratic trustees claim to be liberals, but in a community of higher education, their inaction is another mark of how well our system works.

MSU no vacuum

On Friday, March 21, the MSU Board of Trustees responded to the overwhelming support shown for the United Farm Workers at the hearing held on Thursday March 20 with a 4-4 tie vote on the lettuce boycott issue. As a result of this vote, MSU will continue to purchase Teamster lettuce; this despite the fact that not a single Teamster representative was present at the hearing.

The continual claim of some board members was that this issue did not concern MSU since it is so far removed from Michigan. The University does not operate in some kind of a vacuum as some board members seem to feel. This University buys more lettuce in one week than a hundred California families buy in a year.

The members of this board were voted in by all the public, not just the elite sector which has power and influence. Whether they like it or not the vote of the board does affect everyone. A nation which systematically denies basic rights to a portion of its population must also face the anger and resentment that such actions invariably

The Chicano students of MSU are concerned for our brothers and sisters in the fields of California. Their hardship is very familiar to all of us as most of us worked or still work in the fields of Michigan. But perhaps our concern is even greater for those four members who feel their actions affect the lives of the farm workers.

Our people are used to setbacks. We come back from this one stronger than before but we see little hope for people who important issues at this crucial time such issues cry for attention. We call any of those board members to go out to the fields of California, or even right to Michigan, and explain their vote to people there.

Explain to them about "moral" and priorities and about setting precedents. Explain these things to a child whose will probably die before the age of child whose future is being sealed each by the actions of this and other state governing boards. Reassure that the actions of the MSU Board of Trustees won't affect his life. Then hand him the hoe and point him the direction of the fields. We challenge the board members to for we will gladly defend our position Teamsters.

Publicity lack

The Symphonic Band would like to see the State News for the total publicity for its winter concert on March 14.

It is unfortunate the campus was informed of the appearance of Col. A. D. Gabriel, conductor of the United States Air Force Band. Rarely is our fortunate enough to have a man of stature on campus. Our band has received national recognition, but certainly recognition from the State News.

Mr. Bloomquist and the Symphonic proved beyond a doubt by their performance that they are far superior to certain band belonging to that other "down the road."

Hughes subplot exposed

Minderman knocked on the door at 11 o'clock at night. "I had to talk to you," he apologized. "Something has been driving me nuts."

"What is it, Minderman?" "It's about the Russian submarine the CIA tried to raise from the Pacific Ocean."

Minderman tends to be slightly paranoid, but since most of his paranoia in the past has turned out to be true I have to take him seriously.

"Well, it turns out that according to all the stories, the CIA was using Howard Hughes as a cover for their operations," he said.

"That's only reasonable," I said. "Howard Hughes is a perfect front for the CIA."

"Okay," said Minderman nervously. "But suppose it's just the opposite. Suppose the CIA is really a cover for Howard Hughes. Suppose Howard Hughes owns the CIA?"

I whistled. "Wow, I never thought of that. That would make a lot more sense than what is going on right now. But why would Howard Hughes want to raise a Russian submarine?"

"He didn't want to raise a Russian submarine. He just had that story leaked to hide the real reason why he built a $350 million boat. What he really wanted the ship for was to search for rare minerals on the ocean floor."

"But that is what they announced when they first launched the ship," I said.

"Aha," said Minderman. "That is how clever Howard Hughes really is. He announced he built the boat to search for high-grade ore. Everyone pooh-poohed it, which is what he was counting on. They all assumed the real reason he invested all that money was to raise an M68 Russian submarine which is what Howard wanted them to think in the first place."

"I believe I'm just about to lose you, Minderman," I said.

"Even the Soviets were taken in by it. They assumed from the start that Howard was after their code machine and atomic missiles. In the meantime, Hughes was raking in all kinds of minerals off the ocean floor."

"But the Soviets aren't stupid. Surely they knew that if we let the story out about raising the sub, they would have to figure something else was going on."

"It was a desperation move on the part of Howard. He probably called up Colby and chewed him out, and told him to go to all the newspaper offices and warn everyone if they printed the sub story, national security would be endangered. Howard was certain Jack Anderson would break it."

"Which he did," I said. "But do you have anything more concrete to support your belief that the CIA is really a front for Howard Hughes?"

"It figures," Minderman said. "The CIA is supposed to be the Secret Service in this country and it is always in the news. No matter where you go in Washington you run into Bill Colby. How many people run into Howard Hughes? Believe me, if the records are ever opened they'll find the CIA is part of the Hughes Holding Co., which owns half of Las Vegas."

"This certainly puts a new light on things."

"I'm only telling you all this," Minderman said, "in case anything happens to me. The CIA is going to be pretty mad when they discover I know they work for Howard Hughes. Look what they did to Clifford Irving."

"Do you think Irving knew Howard owned the CIA?"

"Of course he knew. Why else did they send him to jail?"

Students find bargains at bike auction

By MARK DIXON

Fifteen-year-old clunkers and last year's 10-speeds. Rusty ones, old bikes with flat tires, bikes with no tires. Bikes with broken brakes, foot brakes, no brakes.

The University routinely collects the lost, stolen and abandoned bikes that litter campus and then auctions off the unclaimed ones.

"Pretty rusty?"

"Yeah."

"22's got a busted fender. Forget 22."

The first bike is sold in less than a minute. The sing-song chant of the auctioneer, Fred Kletke, ends the sale seconds after the bike is put on the block. Bikes and their new owners begin rattling up and down the nearby street.

and silver model. She paid $3 and laughed, "It sure beats car insurance."

Perhaps it is the knowledge that new bikes sell for $150 and $200 that instills such glee in the customers. The idea of walking away with a bicycle for four, five or six dollars strikes most as funny and a wave of laughter runs through the crowd each time the auctioneer yells, "Sold!"

"Five dollars!" says one woman. "I can't believe it! I bought a bike for $5!"

LCC student Steve Davidson, 615 Sycamore Lane, paid the comparatively astronomical sum of $41 to equip his wife with a green and white bike. He said he had been waiting to bid on that particular one.

"Look at that thing!" he exclaimed. "Not a bit of rust on it! It's got a light and hand brakes. It's fantastic!"

An envious loser glanced at Davidson's prize and commented, "Yeah, I wanted that one, too."

Now and then, while the crew tries to clear away the sold bikes, the auctioneer will flash handfuls of watches, rings and several pairs of binoculars. Five dollars for three watches. There is a brief battle over the binoculars and then they are gone.

"I wonder if they ever auctioned off that old umbrella I lost?" one student mutters to no one in particular.

Another bike is sold. Two dollars. The new owner smiles sheepishly at the hooting crowd.

"I'm not proud," she says. "I'll ride a wobbly, rusty, old no-speed bike. It beats walking."

Oohs and aahs greet the black and silver Japanese 10-speed Kletke brings up next. He laughs.

"Quit your drooling!"

One entrepreneur with bikes to sell makes the most of the bike-conscious crowd. He parks his station wagon outside the gates, pulls out two serviceable, if less-than-beautiful bikes and hangs a "$5 each" sign.

It doesn't take long.

Steve Welton, 1024 Waters Edge Drive, is elated as he stuffs his purchase into his trunk.

"This is going to be great for going to and from class," he says. "I used to have an old clunker and it just fell apart."

"This is a lot better than most of the bikes they're selling in there. I saw one guy try to ride off on his. The chain broke. He paid $15 for it."

Though it helps pay his salary, auctioning off 1000 lost, abandoned and stolen bikes every year infuriates Kletke.

"Can you imagine? 1000 bikes every year! Just because these kids won't lock them up. It's absolutely uncalled for! I sold one bike off this block five times. It just kept coming back."

"We usually do this four times a year," he says. "We've got nearly 200 bikes this spring so we had to divide the lot in half. About 80 or 90 bikes is about all we can do at once. My voice won't take it."

Kletke's advice aside, most of Thursday's buyers don't plan to lock the bikes. One student commented, "it would cost more to buy a lock than I spent on the bike."

Sold! MSU employee Fred Kletke auctions off abandoned bikes at the MSU salvage yard Thursday. Nearly 100 bikes in various states of disrepair were sold, some for as little as $5. What you see is what you get!

The mind-boggling acrobatics of "The Flying Spumoni Brothers" may grace the evening's festivities tonight when the frenzied Friends Road Show hosts an April Fool's Day Eve bash at Lizard's.

'Friends' set to unleash loony April fools party

By FRANK FOX
State News Reviewer

Why not welcome April Fool's Day with the fools to end all fools — Friends Road Show? Friends, a troupe of musicians and vaudeville loonies, will host an April Fool's Day Eve costume party tonight at Lizard's Bar in East Lansing.

The party, touted as a "unique blowout," will feature surprises, shocks, prizes and general craziness. Among the events which may occur are the World Championship Heavy-weight French Bread Wrestling bout, a special session of "Guess That Noodle," a guest appearance by Weenie, Son of Swandini, the world's only magical duck, and an unprecedented performance by Alfie, the wild banana trainer.

And, oh yes, before we forget — Rock Billy Rock Tommy, the teen idol with his eight-foot guitar, might just light his shoes on fire if he finds the audience deserving of his sacrifice.

All this madness and more will reel through Lizard's tonight. The road show has other plans as well, too dark and sinister to release before they are perpetrated on the unsuspecting public.

Geno, a member of the road show, said audience participation in the evening's foolishness will be encouraged to the utmost. The audience events will include an ash tray feeling contest and, quite possibly, the notorious "underwear olympics."

"We'll have all kinds of weird prizes for lucky members of the audience," Geno said.

Geno added that a special fools' punch will be concocted for guests and will be included with the price of admission. The cover charge will be $2 or $1.50 for anyone who appears in "definitely ridiculous costume." A prize will be awarded for the best costume.

Guests are encouraged to bring balloons, decorations, streamers and other imaginative goodies to add to the party's general elan.

Friends will cook up three sets of about one hour each from 9 p.m. to closing.

"We're going to go all out," Geno explained. "People can bring any tricks they have up their sleeves."

UCLA hopes to win finale for Wooden

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—UCLA's Bruins seek to give John Wooden his 10th NCAA basketball championship in 19 years tonight when they battle the rugged Kentucky Wildcats, who haven't won a national final since Adolph Rupp led them to one in 1958.

The best of the Pacific-8 (27-3) and Southeastern (26-4) conferences collide at 8:10 p.m. East Lansing time before a national television audience at the San Diego Sports Arena. Kentucky and Louisville play a consolation game at 5:35 p.m. In the semifinal games Saturday, UCLA shaded Louisville, 75-74, on the way to a 10-footer with just three seconds left in overtime after the deep and bruising Wildcats from Lexington manhandled Syracuse, 95-79.

After his Bruins' dramatic come-from-behind semifinal win, Wooden, 64, announced his retirement but refused to attach any special significance to tonight's game.

"It's another championship basketball game," the famed "Wizard of Westwood" replied when asked what the Kentucky contest would mean. "We just have to go out and play a good ballgame. I won't be hanging my head if we lose and I won't be walking on air if we win. Naturally, I hope we win. But (Kentucky coach) Joe Hall hopes he wins, too. And only one of us can win."

UCLA and Kentucky rate as two of the tallest collegiate teams in the nation—if not the tallest. The Bruins have more quickness but the Wildcats have the brute strength, bulk and depth.

Hall, who replaced the legendary Rupp three seasons ago, will open with a front line of 6-5 Kevin Grevey, 6-9 Bob Guyette, and 6-10 freshman center Rick Robey. In the backcourt, 6-3 Mike Flynn and 6-4 Jimmy Dan Conner will start.

Against Syracuse, Hall used 14 players and 10 of them scored, with 6-4 freshman Jack Givens coming through with 24 points in a reserve role.

"Kentucky is a fine basketball team," Wooden said. "Physically, it's one of the strongest teams I've ever seen. I think they could move into the NBA and be in pretty good shape."

"We have more quickness but they have more muscle. But I've always preferred quickness over straight strength or power."

Wooden's starting front line will include 6-8 All-America Dave Meyers and 6-6 sophomore Marques Johnson at forwards and the 6-5 Washington, a sophomore, at center. Pete Trgovich, 6-4, and 6-3 Andre McCarter will open at guards.

On the bench, the Bruins have 7-1 Ralph Drollinger. Wooden probably will use him extensively in what figures to be a roughhouse, foul-filled game.

REPEAT LAST YEAR'S PERFORMANCE

G-men take seventh in Big Ten

ANN WILLIAMSON
Michigan State Sports Writer

Michigan State's men's basketball team seemed to go right to work in Ann Arbor on Friday and Saturday at the Big Ten meet in Ann Arbor. The Spartans had to settle for a repeat of last year's seventh-place conference finish. MSU totaled 344.30 points in the meet, finishing above only Ohio State among the eight competing teams. Michigan, which was the big favorite, surprised no one by taking the Big Ten title with 419.80 points.

"There were quite a few disappointments in the meet for MSU," Spartan coach George Szygula remarked. "The guys looked good at certain moments of their routines but would then miss hitting their dismounts."

"We just didn't have the depth a team needs. Our inexperience showed, especially on the rings and parallel bars, but we're a young team yet. We had our problems and minor injuries going into the meet, but then again, so did everyone else."

MSU juniors Glenn Hime on high bar and Steve Murdock on pommel horse were successful enough in the compulsory and optional preliminary competition to enter the individual finals but were frustrated in their attempts to qualify for the NCAA meet, to be held next weekend in Terre Haute, Ind.

Hime took fourth place in the finals, missing third place honors by a mere .125 point, while Murdock finished eighth in the finals competition. Only the top three gymnasts in each event are eligible for the NCAA finals.

"I'm very pleased with Glenn and Steve's performances," Szygula said. "Glenn finished second in compulsories and Steve sixth in preliminaries, so I'm proud of both of them. Besides that, I really can't compliment anyone else's performance from our team."

Michigan gymnasts dominated the action as four of the six first-place event winners, as well as the all-around champion, were Wolverines.

Bob Darden repeated as the Big Ten high-bar champion for Michigan and teammate Pierre LeClerc claimed first place in both the vaulting and parallel bar events.

Stickmen lose, 5-4, take on U-M next own 2-0 at the end of the half, the MSU lacrosse team battled back in the second half but fell short, as it was outplayed by Kenyon, 5-4, in a West Lacrosse Assn. game Friday.

The Spartan stickmen will play their current 3-2 season record against the Michigan Wolverines at 4 p.m. Wednesday in a home contest.

Thursday's game in Gambier, Ohio, saw the Spartans tie the Wolverines twice in the second half, 3-3 and 4-4, after a poor defensive performance put Michigan behind. A goal off a rebound with about five minutes remaining gave Kenyon the margin it needed to pull out the victory.

MSU had plenty of good chances to gain the score-knotting goal, but could not find the net with any shots, as its league record fell to 0-2.

Goalie Andy Obelnicki turned in a strong game in the Spartan nets complemented by an equally strong defensive effort by the MSU squad.

Saigon would fall to Communist assault

The fate of the port city of Qui Nhon is in the balance, and Western military analysts see little choice for Thieu but to write off all the coastal enclaves, including the attractive port city of Nha Trang.

If this happens, Saigon will virtually be the front line.

Of the 52,000 soldiers in the four infantry and marine divisions in the north, the 1st Division with its 13,000 men has disappeared, only 4,000 Second Division troops have been saved and they are on the water heading south in barges.

The 3rd Division defending Da Nang has also disappeared, and only 6,000 men remain of the elite marine division that fielded 13,000 soldiers.

The earlier debacle in the central highlands resulted in only 37 men surviving from the 13,000-man 23rd Infantry Division that was destroyed at Ban Me Thuot, according to reliable Vietnamese sources. Only 35 men survived from a 1,600-man ranger group in the highlands.

The South Vietnamese equipment losses so far are staggering.

These figures of the losses from the four infantry and marine divisions were provided by reliable Vietnamese military sources to the Associated Press on Sunday.

A total of 600 trucks, 400 jeeps, 255 armored personnel carriers, 60 M48 tanks, 150 105mm howitzers, and 60 155 mm howitzers.

Most of these were reportedly left behind intact.

The equipment losses were worth tens of millions of dollars, but even the unlikely miracle of their complete replacement would be of little help to the South Vietnamese because of the losses of men. They need to train 50,000 men to make up the losses.

With one-third of the Vietnamese army destroyed and another infantry division, the 22nd at Binh Dinh province on the central coast, in danger of annihilation from advancing Communist forces, Thieu and his military commanders are left with minimum of forces to defend Saigon.

Three infantry divisions — the 5th, 18th and 25th — protect Saigon, along with two brigades of the airborne division. The Communists have arrayed against them in the jungled war zone just north of the city five infantry divisions and a possible sixth, and a formidable array of sapper, armor and antiaircraft units.

The reasoning that led Thieu to abandon first the central highlands and then the north was that his forces were hopelessly outnumbered by Communist side. He is now outnumbered at Saigon.

Freshman rep itches for ring bout

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Freshman State Rep. George Cushingberry Jr., D-Detroit, is looking for a fight.

He just wants to get in the ring with Muhammed Ali, heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

"I'm a lot younger than he is, certainly as big and tough, probably just as quick," 235-pound legislator said.

Student election brings newcomers to council

MSU students will be represented by new blood on the Academic council next year as all 10 of the student members-at-large elected last week are newcomers to the council.

The high vote-getter on section one of the ballot was Ross Holland, a current member of the Educational Policies Committee, with 1,434 votes. The other two winners in section one of the ballot were Sheryl Johnson with 1,227 votes and Carolyn Hawkins with 1,153.

Vote totals of other candidates are: Fred Headen, 1,149; Gail Oubre, 1,066; Maurita Coley, 904; and Arter Jackson, 880.

Two candidates ran for the one position open on section two of the ballot. Sophomore Maria Eneida Gonzales captured the spot with 1,915 votes. Runnerup was Adolfo Mata with 836.

Pamela Jones with 1,110 votes and Maria Graciela Alfaro with 1,006 took the two positions on section three of the ballot.

Other totals were: Toni Moore, 820; Donald Haynie, 714; Justine Austin, 638; Victor Hester, 631, and Michael Engoian, 604.

The four positions on section four of the ballot were filled by Karol Klopp, 1,233; Denise Gordon, 1,026; Michelle Weighart, 1,022, and Merry Rosenberg, 978.

Totals for other candidates were: Mary Cloud, 935; Beth Conover, 925; Jean Lawrence, 816; Carol Gertsch, 790; Tomilea Grafton, 780; Jean Feldkamp, 779; Patricia Mielock, 763; Dawnelle Rouillard, 732; Merrill Farhat, 677; Susan Forseutt, 665; and Jane Meneely, 525.

How to make your last two years of college mean even more.

Take advantage of the Army ROTC Two-Year Program.

If you've just about completed your second year of college, and you're planning on two more, it's not too late to take Army ROTC.

You start the program with six-weeks of Basic Camp (you'll be paid for it) between your sophomore and junior years.

Then it's back to school in the fall. Learning how to become an Army officer while you're working on your college degree. Earning an extra $100 a month, up to ten months a year.

And two years later, you'll graduate with your degree, your commission as an Army officer, and some real experience at leading and managing people.

The last two years of college can mean a lot to you. If you take the Army ROTC Two-Year Program you can make them mean a lot more.

Guidelines removal bothers students

"Though a poorly skilled man and a poorly skilled woman have the same basic problems, men usually have an advantage in strength, speed, height and endurance," she said.

However, Baile said that as long as the men and the women respect each other's game there is no real problem.

Apparently the women students did not mind the men's game as much as they did some other things. Baile said that some of the women asked her to suggest to the guys that they wash their gym clothes.

Nell Jackson, asst. director of women's athletics, said the guidelines regulating Title IX were supposed to come out earlier this year, but because finalization was delayed no one knows for sure how to interpret Title IX.

The guidelines are expected to be finalized by summer. An earlier draft of the guidelines allowed both men and women to participate on the same team for every sport, provided there were not already existing teams for each sex in a sport.

A recent revision to the guidelines, however, allows sex segregation on contact sports teams.

The new draft retains the earlier draft's ban of sex segregated physical education classes but allows within class segregation in contact sports.

Jackson said it is not likely that women would be able to compete with men on any contact sports teams.

"I don't think there are any girls on campus who can jump like Hairston or rebound like Furlow," she said. "Maybe in due time, but not right now."

Baile said that if there was a female basketball player with the speed, endurance, power and strength necessary to make the team she would not have to try out.

"Ganakas would go to her," she said. "Like it or not, a coach wants a winner — male or female."

Ford signs tax-cut measure into law

children whose income is less than $8,000.

*Special tax credits for buyers of new homes of 5 per cent of the purchase price up to $2,000.

*Increases in deductions allowed for child care for working parents.

*Investment tax credits for businesses to help spur investment in new machinery.

*An additional 13 weeks of unemployment benefits for hardcore jobless areas.

*A $50 payment to persons on Social Security, Railroad Retirement and Aid to the Blind, Aged and Disabled.

*Repeal of the oil depletion allowance for major firms.

*Changes in foreign tax credits for businesses.

As he announced the bill signing, Ford added that he will draw the line on the 1976 budget deficit at a record $80 billion — $8 billion more than his January estimate.

However, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon has said he considers an $80 billion deficit likely and the Office of Management and Budget sees $100 billion as possible.

Ford complained that Congress so far has rejected or ignored most of the spending cuts he requested. If reductions are not made and legislation to increase spending is enacted, he said, "this would bring the deficit to the enormous total of $100 billion."

Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, said he agreed "that we've got to hold down federal spending as much as possible to keep the deficit down. But I don't want to see this become an excuse for this Administration to dismantle badly needed domestic programs it doesn't like."

ONE MORE TIME

has returned after the beginning of classes, but before finals, for the 2nd time.

Result:

He's bought more used books than we have ever had.

So What?

We have a special staff marking these books for resale.

You Can

Now buy these used books this late in the term. They are all in the proper course sections.

Stop In
