WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court on Monday let stand two federal court rulings designed to desegregate schools, but agreed to review an order aimed at segregation in housing.

In brief orders without explanation, the court declined to hear appeals from lower court decisions that school authorities in Boston and Kalamazoo, Mich., had purposely segregated their schools.

But the justices said they will hear arguments next fall on a federal appeals court decision requiring a "comprehensive metropolitan area plan" for public housing in Chicago and its suburbs.

The court's action in the Boston school case came just two days after another order by U.S. District Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr., which has stirred anew the city's long simmering controversy over school busing.

In the decision which the court had been asked to review, the U.S. Circuit Court in Boston upheld a ruling last June 21 by Garrity, setting in motion the steps which led to busing. Garrity followed up that ruling by approving a temporary desegregation plan which took effect last September, requiring the busing of 17,000 of the city's 85,000 public school students. This plan, which centered mainly on the upper grades, stirred sporadic acts of Tensions at South Boston High School and Hyde Park High School have been building for several days and were heightened by the release of Garrity's new school integration plan on Saturday.

The new plan calls for busing 21,000 children next year, 12,000 of them in the first five grades.

In the other school case, the U.S. Circuit Court in Cincinnati ordered the Kalamazoo Board of Education to take steps to overcome "a purposeful pattern of segregation." The board replied that such a pattern "will exist wherever a neighborhood school concept is followed in a system having residential areas which differ or change in Chicago case whether unwilling suburbs must accept federal public housing, because past high-rise projects have concentrated blacks and the poor in downtown ghettos.

The appeal was brought by the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development.

HUD claimed the courts cannot force the government to build housing in the Chicago suburbs despite evidence that the federal government and the city acted together since at least 1954 in using public funds to create virtual high-rise ghettos on the south and west sides of the city where blacks already lived.

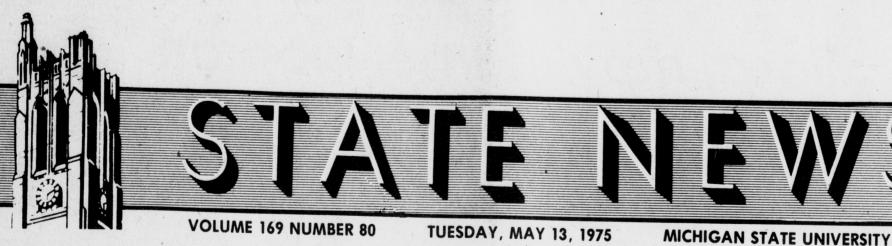

The court also decided four cases on which it had heard arguments.

In these cases, the justices: Struck down by a 5 to 3 vote a Texas law requiring the approval of a majority of property owners in order for bond issues to be passed in an election.

The spokesman said the Mayaguez carried "only general cargo." The names of the captain and crew members were not immediately available, he said.

"We are taking immediate steps to obtain the prompt release of the ship," State Dept. spokesman Robert Funseth said shortly after the White House announced the seizure.

Funseth said the steps being taken involved diplomatic, not military, initiatives

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., urged patience, though he said Ford was right in calling the seizure an act of piracy.

He said the new Cambodian regime, "in the first flush of victory, may not realize what is involved."

Javits, an architect of the 1973 War Powers Act, said he believes Ford would have the right to use military force to retrieve the ship. The law gives the President the right to introduce military forces into hostilities for up to 60 days to protect Americans.

Mayaguez was "fired upon and boarded by Cambodian armed forces from a Cambodian naval vessel." Mayaguez was then forced into the port of Kompong Som, Cambodia, Nessen said.

He said the incident occurred early Monday morning, Washington time.

The Mayaguez was the first U.S. ship seized by a foreign navy since the U.S. spy ship Pueblo was captured by North Korea on Jan. 23, 1968.

The Pueblo's crew of 83 was held captive for 11 months before being freed.

Former Navy Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, who was captain of the Pueblo when it was seized, said in Poway, Calif., that the United States had an obligation to retrieve the Mayaguez.

"Since it's an American flag vessel, the messages from the ship, Nessen said the government is required to go in and get the men and the ship back," he said.

Administration sources said no U.S. warships were anywhere close to the scene of the Mayaguez' seizue when it was captured. They said that the warships ordered to move toward the Gulf of Thailand were told not to take other action without further specific directives.

understand why anything held sacred," said the longalmost-grubby Dartmouth graduwas munching a hamburger in Lansing Holiday Inn, and he answered questions in a loud uninhibited and articulate manner. Especially uninhibited.

"I don't think wars, religion, tits, cocks or anything should be held sacred. It's simply reality. We all have cocks or tits, and we all have had contact with religion,"

Solitary and somber businessmen sat at their individual tables behind him, sipping before-dinner drinks and staring vacantly somewhere above Miller's head, as though keeping an eye on an imaginary Dow-Jones average.

Miller's unabashed conversation reflects the Lampoon's product. Sometimes it appears to its readers that it will go to any length to outdo its previous work, but that philosophy has gotten its corporate beast caught in the wringer several times. For example, a mock ad it ran last fall showed a floating Volkswagen. The caption stated that if Teddy Kennedy had been driving one during the tragic Chappaquiddick incident, he might be president today. In his talk in the Union, Miller said that prank came closest to destroying the Lampoon when Volkswagen of America threatened a massive lawsuit because people thought it was a real ad designed by VW.

"When that appeared, the shit storm came down on our heads," Miller said. "A German VW executive called us and said we were really in trouble. 'Ve hafvays. . ." Miller's grade-B German accent got some laughs. "Our publisher is Jewish, so he told us, 'go along with them,

The Lampoon has also been sued by the Walt Disney empire for a cartoon of Minnie Mouse with breasts, by the owners of the Archie comic book series for an irreverent parody and by Charles Schulz for a gruesome parody of the Peanuts characters. According to Miller, the latter three were talked out of pressing their lawsuits, but Volkswagen forced the magazine to have the offensive ad razored out of issues still on newstands, an unprecedented move in American journalism. "We were on a hook we couldn't get off," Miller said. "If you have a copy with that ad still in it, hang on to it; its a collectors item."

Last December Lampoon spoofed the Christian religion. That issue raised a tremendous outcry from Roman Catholics, including one noted Catholic who said the magazine had even outdone the Nazi propoganda minister Geobbels in his ridicule of the faith.

Miller had several favorite letters sent to the Lampoon by readers who were outraged by that issue. One cartoon strip featured had a six-inch figure of the crucified Christ acting out the role of a host on a Johnny Carson-like TV talk show. A fat monsignor was portrayed in the Ed McMahon slot. A devout Catholic woman wrote the Lampoon, telling it that "Jesus doesn't need you," and that it had better repent, "otherwise your soul will be damned, and you won't think there is anything funny about that."

A ridiculous Lampoon cartoon with Eisenhower saying "I'm not really dead," prompted the commander of a battle ship to write a formal military letter to the "treasonous magazine."

"I bet you cheered when J. Edgar Hoover died, too, you scurillous pawns of Moscow," Miller read from the letter.

A letter from four GIs in Vietnam was also read to the Union audience, in regard to a Lampoon page picturing dead Asians with a label asking for donations to "Lt. Calley's Kill the Children Foundation."

"You better hope we (the four soldiers) never meet (the Lampoon staff), 'cause your shit will be oh-so-flaky." Then the foursome wrote of the torture they had in mind, and finished with "we think you are sick in the head."

Miller said he was only attacked once by a college audience, among the sixty he has addressed. That was earlier this week at Antioch College, in Ohio. Twothirds of the people were there to be entertained, but the other one-third were after him, he said.

"I caught it from the feminists, the Marxists and the Maoists," he said. "I got the impression they were all rather rich and spoiled, and too intelligent for their own good. The feminists were upset over our making fun of big tits, but I tried to tell them we did that to take some of the pressure off those kind of situations. One feminist who cornered me did have big tits, and I know she had probably caught a lot of shit from truckdrivers and people like that. I sympathize with her problems. I understand. But why can't we laugh at these tensions to show how ridiculous their causes are?"

The Lampoon may not hold anything sacred, but they do have ideas of what is tasteful, according to Miller. One woman cartoonist finally had to leave because her cartoons of people chopping each other up "had absolutely no redeeming value at all. There was no humor involved. Just this horrible violence without any point to it."

Miller, 33, started working for the Lampoon in 1971, one year after it was started. He earned a bachelors degree in English from Dartmouth and then earned a masters degree in business administrabusinessman," he said. He then worked for an advertising agency in New York City, where he created advertisements for the back of cereal boxes. He was the originator of the cuckoo for Coco Puffs' slogan that sold a lot of breakfast food.

What are the goals of the Lampoon? "A couple of people there want to change the world through social satire, but not me. I write solely to entertain. I have no desire to change the world, because I don't think that is possible," Miller said.

Council to propose idea on water rate

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO State News Staff Writer

In the face of a 25 per cent water - rate increase proposed for the 1975 - 76 East Lansing budget, the city council will recommend a way to levy the hike to favor those who are concerned with conserving

The recommendation will come tonight at a meeting to consider the proposed $10,116,390 budget as submitted by East Lansing City Manager Jack Patriarche. The budget, which covers expenditures from July 1, 1975 to June 30, 1976, calls for major increases in sewage and water treatment, up $435,943 to $981,296, and the water fund, up $95,000 to $818,700. Patriarche said that the hikes were necessitated by increases in energy and labor.

Council members decided at a work session Wednesday to suggest that the hike for water usage be assessed by charging every city taxpayer a flat $2 rate for every three months, with an additional charge of 85 cents per thousand gallons used. This recommendation differs from that of Patriarche, who wanted to charge $3.45 per thousand gallons for the first 3,000 used, and 65 cents per thousand for anything

"We believe that water should be conserved," councilwoman Mary Sharp said. She said that if such a recommendation is accepted, conservation of money and water would again be put in the hands of the people.

Sharp said that she sees a possibility of pressure from large water users such as people who own apartment complexes, but that this did not deter the council from favoring the small user. She said that such an adjustment may mean a possible $6 increase for large water users per month. Sharp also commented on another concern of the budget, the funding of social service programs such as the Drug Education Center (DEC) and the Listening Ear. "I think that we should reassess the services over the next year," she said. Councilman John Polomsky criticized the "I think it's a run - down, crummy joint," Polomsky said. He said that though he feels this way about the current operation at the DEC, he does not want the $46,106 allotted for the program to be cut. Polomsky said that he would like to see the DEC operation moved to another city - owned house behind City Hall on Grove Street. Polomsky also said that he may recommend that the office of city park manager be abolished because the city landscape architect serves the same function. He said such a move could save $16,000 for the budget, but Councilman George Griffiths said a park manager is needed.

"The parks are very heavily used in this community," Griffiths said. With increased usage, he feels the abolition of the office would unduly burden the architect.

Griffiths said that he will recommend to the city that the Peace Education Center be granted $2,000 to keep its operation going. The center, which deals in conflict resolution and education, has a very uncertain future because of lack of funds. In the past, when center representatives have approached the council, their requests for additional funds have been denied.

"I believe they are making a contribution to the city," Griffiths said. Because of negative feedback at the work meeting, he said that he expects such a proposal to be

FBI to assist commission

The FBI has sent a photo analyst to Dallas, Tex., as part of the Rockefeller Commission's investigation of charges that the CIA was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy, sources say.

The sources said the commission requested the help of the FBI to check out a claim by activist Dick Gregory that a newspaper photo is proof that convicted Watergate burglars E. Howard Hunt and Frank Sturgis were on the scene of the 1963 assassination.

The picture shows three shabbily dressed men who were arrested for vagrancy within hours of the assassination. Gregory and his associate say two of the men strongly resemble Hunt and Sturgis, both former CIA agents.

Watergate prosecutors said each of the five counts carries a maximum $1,000 fine and one year in prison.

Teamsters threaten to strike

Teamsters leaders said Monday there will be an industrywide agricultural strike in four states July 15, if Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s secret ballot farm labor bill is enacted.

The strike will affect Teamsters contracts in California, Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado, said Ralph Cotner, chief of the agricultural division of the Western Conference of Teamsters.

Cotner condemned the secret ballot farm labor bill. Brown hammered it out last week in talks with growers and Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers, who are the Teamsters chief rivals in California farm labor.

Meany hits economic policies

The Ford Administration and Congress are engaging in foolish and dangerous policies when they show more concern for the federal deficit than for growing unemployment, AFL-CIO President George Meany said Monday.

"If the leadership of this country had considered only the budget deficit in the early 1940s, Hitler would have won the war," Meany subcommittee

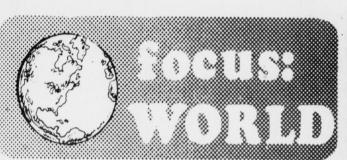

Meany said that "since America's economic house is on fire," the government should do what a good fireman would do: "put out the flames and then mop up any excess water. Firefighters don't do what the Administration preaches ration the water, put out only a bit of the fire, because otherwise we might be using too much water.'

Tunnel explosion kills one

An explosion killed one worker and trapped three others Monday in a sewer tunnel 100 feet below a river in Green Bay, Wis. Officials held out little hope of reaching them alive because the danger of a second gas explosion was holding up the rescue effort.

Rescuers were able to pull the body of the unidentified workman from the tunnel, but weren't able to reach the three men who remained 1,500 feet from the mouth of the Metropolitan Sewage Commission tunnel.

Officials were trying to ventilate the tunnel to bring down the gas level. Mechanical monitors in the tunnel, which is six feet in diameter, showed the gas buildup still at the danger level even after the blast, authorities said.

Kissinger, Gromyko to meet

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko will meet May 19-20 in Vienna, the State Dept. announced Monday.

Though the announcement said only that they would exchange views "on questions of mutual interest," Kissinger and Gromyko are expected to discuss strategic arms limitation, the Middle East and the European Conference on Security and Cooperation.

It was understood Kissinger would go from the Austrian capital to Bonn and Berlin, where he is scheduled to deliver a speech. It also was understood he would wind up his visit to Europe in Ankara on May 22.

Soviet warships visit U.S.

Two Soviet destroyers, first warships of their nation to visit a U.S. port since World War II, docked Monday under the welcomes of a harbor fireboat's spray, a 21-gun National Guard artillery salute and a party of U.S. Navy officers carrying swords in full formal dress.

Meanwhile, in Leningrad hundreds of curious Russians lined the docks and bands played vigorously as two U.S. warships entered that city's port for the first visit of American Navy vessels to the Soviet Union since World War

The five-day exchange visit of the warships was arranged in honor of the 30th anniversary of the Allied Victory over Nazi Germany.

Mansfield hits aid red

WASHINGTON (AP) - Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D -Mont., said Monday the Ford Administration's reaction to Senate passage of a stop - gap refugee aid bill is "a hell of a way to run a railroad.'

The measure, passed by voice vote last Thursday, authorized President Ford to divert previously appropriated military aid funds for South Vietnam to assist refugees from Indochina.

Mansfield told newsmen he had noticed over the weekend that an unidentified member of the Administration's task force handling the refugee program had referred to the bill as "a nice gesture.'

He quoted the task force member as saying it would take the Pentagon from 30 to 60 days to determine how much in military aid funds could be made available.

"That's a hell of a way to run a railroad," Mansfield said. "It . shouldn't take 30 to 60 days to cut through the red tape."

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R - Ore., chief sponsor of the senate - passed bill, said it would make from $117 million to $147 million in funds immediately available while Congress debated Ford's request for more than $500 million in refugee aid.

The House has not yet acted on the bill.

Meanwhile, a cutback in the number of U.S. troops stationed Griffin has suggested former Rep. Martha Griffiths, D-Mich., and federal judge Cornelia Kennedy of Detroit as Supreme Court material.

Rita Hauser, a New York lawyer who was on the U.S. delegation to the United Nations and has been active in Republican politics, is another possibility.

Some leading lawyers are troubled by the rising demand to select a women. "The President should look for quality, not gender," said Philip B. Kurland, University of Chicago law professor and editor of the Supreme Court Review.

Former President Richard Nixon, urged on by his wife, included two women among a list of six possible candidates for the high bench in 1971.

The women-Los Angeles Dorothy Lilley and Sylvia Bacon of the superior court here-were dropped when the entire list came under heavy criticism for its low quality.

Among the men, Atty. Gen. Edward Levi is rated as a top contender by lawyers familiar with the high court.

Levi, who will be 64 in June, has told associates that he would refuse nomination because he does not want to contribute to the rapid turnover at the top in the Justice Dept. Levi also believes he is too old to start an arduous Supreme Court career.

Levi's experience in the Justice Dept. during World War II and as a law professor and dean at the University of Chicago provide him with good credentials for the Supreme Court.

Jacobs was speechless but a big grin quickly spread across his face. The teaching assistants finished the first song and then accompanied the class of 500 in a chorus of "Happy Birthday."

Jacobs was presented with a bottle of Chivas Regal whisky, his favorite brand, and a green and white Spartan beanie, since he is an avid sports fan.

After he had thanked everyone concerned for remembering his birthday, Jacobs returned to his lecture. The entire affair lasted less than 15 minutes.

Jacobs' wife, who was on hand for the surprise, reported that her husband is now 33 years old. Mrs. Jacobs was one of 27 people who knew about the plan before it was carried out.

"Jacobs shows how a subject should be taught," said Thomas Morgan, another teaching assistant. "He makes anatomy seem relevant by relating it to things that happen every day to people." For example, Jacobs' Monfor skiers because they are a group especially prone to spleen injuries.

Jacobs describes himself as "the other Big Al," a reference to former MSU superstar, Al Mandelstamm. About the only thing that Jacobs and Mandelstamm have in common concerning teaching methods is that students appreciate them. Jacobs is not a flashy dresser and relies on wry humor to

Most of the testimony before the House Public Health

Committee in opposition to the bill centered around the idea that ozone destruction should be more carefully studied before Freon is banned, and that there is little a mere state can do to cure an entire planet's

Professor Douglas Davis of the University of Maryland, speaking for the Chemical Manufacturers Assn., said new scientific information has shown that ozone destruction from Freon is considerably lower than originally believed, and that a few more years of research could yield the information necessary to making a final decision on a Freon ban.

"If Freon use is stopped today, there will be a 1 per cent loss of ozone. If it is stopped in three years, the loss will be only seven-tenths of a per cent more," Davis said. "In two or three years research could resolve many of the uncertainties that remain

Supporters of the bill contended that the potentially disastrous effects of ozone depletion necessitated immediate action, and that Freon products can be easily replaced with substitutes.

"Given the current uncertainty, which side should we go on?" asked state Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, the sponsor of the bill. "Should we continue using frivolous spray cans or should we be protecting people's lives? If we can't get legislation at the world level, we'll have to settle for it at any level we can get it."

Jonathon Dean, chairman of the Michigan Student Environmental Confederation, said the advantages of aerosol products "cannot in any way be compared to the potential risks involved."

Rep. David Hollister. D-Lansing, vice-chairman of the public health committee, said the opposition's testimony amounted to "delaying tactics." Hollister said it would be tough to get the bill out of committee and that the bill will face a close fight if it gets to the House floor.

Hollister said if the bill fails. he will work for a national boycott of Freon products.

Tonight the East Lansing City Council will pass final judgment on the 1975-76 city budget, which will total $10,116,390.

More care in the preparation of the budget seems to have been taken this year, particularly in controversies over the water rate structure and the Drug Education Center.

Water rate increases are never welcome, but in this case the increases were unavoidable. It is important, however, that the council enact a proposed ordinance which would distribute the burden of the increase more equitably than the present structure.

VIEWPOINT: VIETNAM

Tunnel-vision morality blasted

By JIM TAMIALIS

Wesley Fishel surfaces again as the intellectual, humanitarian champion of the people of South Vietnam, finding fault. passing judgment and placing blame on different officials and agencies regarding the evacuation procedures which have taken place over the last few weeks.

In a State News article, which appeared several weeks ago, and again in a May 1 article, Fishel expressed concern about the evacuation and relocation of those Vietnamese who might face extreme reprisals and even assassination by the Communist Provisional Revolutionary Government.

I am in no position to question Fishel's reputation as a Southeast Asia expert. Rather, I call into serious question his tunnel - vision morality shown in the past regarding humanitarian concerns, when weighed against the anti - Communist imperialist fervor which dragged our country into such a costly conflict in the first place.

I have been pondering lately what Fishel's concerns were when he was supporting and even lauding Ngo Dinh Diem's premiership as "Vietnam's democratic one - man rule." This and more while Diem had shown in his first months in power that he would tolerate no organized groups in South Vietnam which were not firmly under his control, ruthlessly opposing any forces that stood in the countryside. It soon became apparent that the major interest of this "democratic" ruler was the security of his own power. Diem feared that the elections scheduled for July 1956 would mean an end in power and victory for Ho Chi Minh. And so, rejecting the elections called for in the Geneva accords, the Diem regime faced the task of defending itself against mounting opposi-

I wonder, too, what victims Fishel was showing concern for when he and MSU were running a training school for Diem's police force under a $1 million a year contract. These were the police which Diem then used to enforce his presidential Ordinance No. 6 providing that "all persons considered dangerous to national defense or collective security . . . may be sent to concentration camps by decision of the president of the Republic."

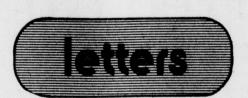

Diem declared war not only on the the way of extending his rule throughout Communists, but also on any group whose personal loyalty was not insured. By 1958, about 40,000 Vietnamese were in concentration camps.

It was around this time that U.S. intelligence reported Ho Chi Minh was initiating acts of terrorism in the South to put pressure on Diem to keep his agreements. Many of the early terrorist attacks were clearly aimed at men thought to be Diem police agents American helpers.

Richard J. Barnet, codirector Institute for Policy Studies, has n it was "not entirely coincid terrorist campaign was law after it became clear that the ele Chi Minh had expected to win 1956, would not be held."

This is by no means a co account of the history of the conflict. But recently, we have accounts of the Viet Cong's at reprisals taken against the support friends of the parade of corru who have been held in power by interest. These accounts are comprehensive than the brief de I have attempted here. Yet, the to be the incidents on which Fe his most recent humanitarian

At the risk of seeming maudlin, I would like to express my appreciation for the invitation from the MSU students, which gave me the opportunity to return to East Lansing on April 28. I would also like to thank the hundreds of students who came to see me that day.

Student art

Pat Clyde seems to possess a negative attitude towards the University's art potential, even though the 1975 undergraduate exhibition was typical of, or perhaps superior to most undergraduate exhibitions throughout the country. Her statement concerning the "Best of Show" drawing and its author is both outrageous and inexcusa-

Obviously, the drawing was far too sophisticated for her to comprehend, as the artists' intent was, in fact, to project a rather impersonal attitude at close observation. Why else would the piece be near photo - real?

If your reviewer would have followed the basic procedure for consuming a piece of the size and scale, she would have backed up about 20 feet and discovered a loss of realistic identity, but instead the more wholesome, darker side of the form creating a warm, plastic flow of graphite over the cooler, white working surface.

Then, as the viewer approaches the work for a closer look, the abstraction would magically transcend into stark reality. teality and technical sophistication are obviously of secondary importance, and exists only to enhance by adding dimension to the drawing.

This piece, however, does seem to lack one small provision. It should have been drawn in Braille so that your sightless staff could enjoy its full potential.

Parking abuse

Considering the zeal with which MSU protects its handicapped parking places, it is surprising to note a blue and white Cadillac, license MFD 475, parked in the handicapped area outside of the Administration Building daily.

The car, with staff permit 00076, does have a State of Michigan disabled permit, number D6738, but the driver of the car walks to the Administration Building each morning with no apparent problem. He also leaves and returns each noon.

It is also interesting to note that there is a reserved parking place (probably paid for by some administration department) for this staff permit in the parking ramp near the Administration Building. Thus, it is easy to jump to the conclusion that some administration bureaucrat is using the handicapped area as his own personal reserved parking area.

Lots of dirt

Frank Fox is certainly correct in stating that the staffers of the State News bear little resemblance to the characters in "The Front Page," but I must take exception to his claim that the State News offices lack dirt on the floor, desks and typewriters. They also do not lack cigaret butts and slime.

As a student who works as a part - time janitor in the Student Services Building and also having seen "The Front Page," I feel qualified to challenge Fox's assertion. I suggest not only that the State News is dirtier than the Chicago Examiner as portrayed in 'The Front Page,' but that it is landmark - the stockyards.

Waste Control

I would personally like to thank the administration of MSU for allowing the operations of the recycling program to stay open. I would also like to thank the State News for the recent coverage it has given the recycling program. I would also like to point out the fact that four out of five night shifts have now been canceled in an effort to cut costs. In this attempt to save money at least six employes have had all their hours cut.

The administration is giving the image that they support the recycling program. Why then did they make it clear that the petitions and State News articles were to stop? Both efforts were aimed at making the public aware of the plight of the recycling program and its need of public support and papers.

According to the Waste Control Authority handbook the over - all goals of the recycling program is to "Provide additional jobs for MSU students" and material which can be recycled at greater than the revenue general the sale of that material." It may the recycling program is now on about $100 a week, but doesn't it d purpose when no one is working?

LAW AND THE STUDENT

Ticketing exploits MSU students

By DAVE ALTENBERN

Recently a topic of much complaint and debate, the traffic ticket procedure here at MSU entails many subtle injustices. Simply, where MSU should be benefiting from student traffic fines, the City of East Lansing does so instead. The following facts clearly illustrate the exploitation that takes place here on campus.

Director of the Dept. of Public Safety (DPS), Richard Bernitt, informed the Legal Aid Associate, Gary Neal, that campus ticket issuances always result from a violation of a Student Motor Vehicle Regulation. Likewise, violations that fall under a city ordinance will result in an East Lansing ticket. Theoretically, violations falling under the jurisdiction of both will result in a campus ticket. That the above policy given at the administrative level is actually practiced by DPS patrolmen seems questionable.

Specifically, over 75 per cent of the tickets written at MSU during the 1973 -1974 school year were East Lansing tickets. If erroneous issuance of tickets does in fact occur, then all MSU students suffer alike. It is significant to note that while virtually all appealed East Lansing tickets were sustained by City Hall, only 52 per cent of campus tickets appealed to Student Traffic Appeals Court were

The import of such a discrepancy is that significant number of students face a more stringent appeal battle than others. So, the accumulated effect of receiving unwarranted East Lansing tickets is quite extensive and also rather expensive.

For reference, the appeal procedure on MSU is as follows:

The student first fills out an appeal form at DPS, stating why he or she feels the ticket is unjustified. Next, the written appeal is reviewed by the Student Traffic Appeals Court and a decision is made to either sustain or withdraw the fine. If sustained, the student retains the right to further appeal before the appeals court.

A further point of concern involves the recipients of revenue collected from tickets. Money obtained from MSU tickets are put toward scholarships and a student loan fund. In other words, the money indirectly circulates back to the students themselves. That is not the case with East Lansing tickets.

Statistically, 75 per cent of East Lansing's 78,000 processed tickets (July 1, 1973 - 1974) were from the MSU campus. That amounts to a minimum gross sum of $234,000 collected in one year from students. Even though the net amount of revenue is somewhat less, East Lansing has made a noteworthy amount of money from MSU students.

The current problems seem obvious, yet solutions are not so noticeable.

possibility for the amelioration of the situation would be to create a system free from inequities caused by double jurisdiction. Such a solution would most likely require the foundation of a full scale University traffic bureau to handle all areas of the traffic ticket procedure. If such a bureau were to be established, the injustices that prevail today would be mitigated, since only MSU tickets would be issued. However, the legalities and costs involved in setting up such a program might be prohibitive.

Regardless, some changes in the present campus traffic ticket procedure seems to be in order.

Fairchild and the workshops full of half - finished projects are all very real.

The janitor sweeps by, pushing ticket stubs, popcorn, wilted flowers, torn programs and soiled rags in front of him. His steps echo down the hallway like the images that whisper from wall to wall in the glass menagerie of the mirror - lined actor's studio next door.

Actors, musicians, playwrights, dancers, artists and audiences come and go, but the building remains. Costumes sag from hangers, waiting to be given life by an actor. Posters from past productions cover the walls. Old scenery towers over the birth of new stage flats.

The new Performing Arts Center may someday be a boon to the MSU campus - vet one wonders if a broom closet in the modern structure might be set aside for the sentimental Phantom of the Opera and the illusive chorus girl whose spirits reside in the corridors and walkways underneath Fairchild Theater and the University Auditorium.

Women netters, golfers enjoy weekend successes on road

By ANN WILLIAMSON

State News Sports Writer While the varsity women's tennis team was having a fairly easy time of it Saturday afternoon against Kalamazoo College, the junior varsity Spartans found their success a little harder to come by Friday against Eastern Michigan University and Central Michigan University.

The varsity squad licked Kalamazoo with a clean 7-2 score, though the Spartans did play some fairly tough Kalamazoo opponents. Captain Sue Selke, Diane Suterko, Allison

IM NOTES

Entries are now being accepted for an intramural team golf tournament which will be held this Saturday and Sunday. Teams should consist of four people and teams should register in 201 Men's Intramural Bldg. by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Entry fee is $3 per person for students and $3.50 for faculty and staff members. Each team member will play 18 holes on the Forest Akers course.

The opening of the outdoor pool has been delayed until at least May 30 because of structural failure under the diving

THE MARQUIS IS COMING!

Scruggs, Pam Zwer and Becky Dickieson all defeated their opponents in singles competition with the Spartans' only loss coming in the No. 2 position, as Diana D'Angelo bowed to Kalamazoo's Lisa Culp, 7-5,

"Kalamazoo has a pretty good team and the girls did well against them," MSU coach Elaine Hatton said. "Diana (D'Angelo) really shouldn't have lost her match, because she wasn't playing her best, but I know she tried.

With the varsity team lifting their season record to 4-1 with Saturday's victory, the junior varsity squad didn't disappoint coach Hatton either as they defeated both Eastern and Central's varsity teams by scores of 8-1 and 5-4 respectively. The match against Eastern seemed easy enough, but Central posed a much greater problem for the Picking up the five victories in singles competition for the JV Spartans were Marilyn Smendzuik, Meryl Siegal, Caren Goldstone and Sue Brevich, whose successes lifted the JV's spring season record to 3-0.

The women's golf team sent three Spartan representatives to the Penn State Invitational last Friday and Saturday with two MSU women returning to East Lansing with first and second-place finishes.

Freshman Joan Garety took the first-place honors among the 31 contestants in the invitational with an 81 and an 84 for a 165 stroke total.

Junior June Oldman placed second with an 83 and an 86 for a 169 total.

"I haven't met with anyone yet, but I'm planning to meet with Marquette at the end of this term," said Dudley. "Right now I'm concentrating on my academic work."

Dudley refuses to cite specific reasons for his departure other than saying that personal problems led to his decision. Part of his troubles began early last fall, when he was hit with a rash of injuries.

Early in the season he had his nose broken while attempting to gain a starting spot, which required two operations to repair. A severely sprained ankle followed, which kept him out of the line - up during the Indiana game. Ten black members of the team walked out prior to the game, when Tropf was announced as one of

'Shampoo'-the movie to see this year same impact on audiences as did Beatty's "Bonnie and Clyde."

Like that film, "Shampoo" is bound to divide its audience firmly into two groups, those who strongly admire the movie and those who wonder what all the hubbub is about. Unquestionably, some people will hate "Shampoo" as well, probably more for its language and deeds than for anything it may say to them.

But this sexual comedy, as it has casually been called, is a film to be examined at length. One of the strongest selling points in "Shampoo" is Robert Towne's devastating script, which he coauthored with Beatty. Towne was responsible for the screenplay to Roman Polanski's nostalgic return to the detective thriller, "China-Much in the same way that

"Chinatown" set its audience on its ear with a complicated plot. "Shampoo" also bursts on the screen without being just a simple-minded polemic. It has all the complexity, originality and force found in the best European films. Bergman and other filmmakers like him would be proud to have worked on this tale, for its richness lies in its complexity. "Shampoo" is simply not a romp about a hairdresser who beds the broads for whom he styles hair, but rather an examination of the duplicity and deception, both self and social, that has permeated this country since the late '60s. "Shampoo" takes a personal story and expands it to say a number of sharp, brittle, but wholly accurate things about our nation's consciousness.

Juxtaposing the story of the main character, George, and his overwhelming desire to run his own styling shop with the results of the Nixon-Agnew election on Nov. 4, 1968, Beatty and crew subtly deal with the malaise that has hit this country. What appears to be a laugh-filled farce in the best Feydeau style, is actually a strident social commentary.

It deals with the narcissistic lifestyle of the Beverly Hills rich and the obsessive drive to win both sexually and socially. For, as Nixon so aptly comments in the film, "Winning is everything" - a philosophy which is totally shared by the main characters.

"Shampoo" centers around a day in the life of its protagonist. George, for whom women are an occupational hazard. He cannot keep his hands off them, even when his satyr-like tendencies threaten to destroy the close, intimate relationships

he has developed with his girl. played by Goldie Hawn.

In fact, his compulsive sex drive leads him to bed with one man's wife, mistress and daughter in one afternoon. But through it all, George never stops and looks at his world. until it is too late. Surrounded by music from the late '60s, "Shampoo" engulfs its audience in the implications of the characters' actions. To regard it as a simply film is to do it an injustice. "Shampoo" has all the makings of a European film masquerading as an American one. Perhaps that is the reason so many people cannot deal with it as it should be.

Though the film is funny, raw and energetic, it it also disturbing. It is disturbing because it is not your run of the mill American sex comedy, but an in-depth inquiry.

Within the film's probing structure, credit should also go to director Hal Ashby for his controlled work in "Shampoo." Ashby previously directed the underground sleeper, "Harold and Maude," and the dreary Jack Nicholson navy tale, "The Last Detail." In "Shampoo," Ashby is in perfect form at every moment and thus the film moves along briskly and tightly. It is undoubtedly Ashby's best film to date.

The director gets consider able help from Laslo Kovacs, one of the best cinematographers working in film today. Kovacs, along with Vilmos Zigsmond and Sven Nykvist, are among the finest cinematographers in the field. "Shampoo" gets an enormous boost with Kovacs behind the lens.

Naturally, the biggest boosts that an already fine screenplay could receive would be from the actors adding their talents to the characterizations that have been created for the tale.

Everyone involved "Shampoo" delivers arresting performances. Julie Christie must be one of the most natural actresses around. It is a shame that she has not appeared in more films lately. "Shampoo" gives her the chance to show her best work since her Oscarwinning "Darling."

Hawn turns in a nice job as well, taking her dumb blonde character several steps into intelligence and giving her a grace that makes her particularly appealing. Among the others in the cast,

Lee Grant and Jack Warden prove their range and durability as a typical, rich Beverly Hills couple with a lover and mistress respectively. Grant has always shown her strength and once again she is a knockout in her role. "Shampoo" itself is a knockout. It is the film to see this year. It will have you laughing while it gradually eases its way into your mind with the message it holds for every person.

The message may not be the same for each individual, but the marvel with "Shampoo" is that it is an American film that is truly trying to say something in a unique, bold and brash

Camera aids search for heat

By MICHELE BURGEN State News Staff Writer

Thermography may not be the last word in photographic reproduction, but for detecting heat loss from buildings and potential danger spots in electrical wiring, it is probably one of man's better ideas.

MSU mechanical engineering personnel and students have recently used the technique, which produces thermographs or 'heat" pictures, to scan more than 20 buildings on campus. Their only apparatus is the 24 pound AGA Thermovision, which resembles a home movie camera.

"Thermography makes radiation visible and capable of interpretation," said Jim Sneathen, maintenance engineer at the MSU Physical Plant.

"We can measure temperature by measuring the amount of radiation given off," he said. The camera senses only in-

From mid - December to mid March, a four - man project team, headed by mechanical engineer Tom Sloan, charted building exteriors on campus as well as mechanical rooms and electrical gear.

Though the results of the project have not yet been fully compiled and analyzed, a number of repairs and recommendations for improvements have been made.

The MSU Union, for example, had a number of loose connections in the switch gear which turns electricity on and off, which showed up as extremely hot spots in the thermographs of the wiring. Sneathen said a maintenance crew was able to repair the faulty connections by shutting down the building for only one

"We could have had a localized power failure which might have destroyed the switch gear. The building would have had to be shut down for a number of days," Sneathen

In another instance, water in the roof insulation of Emmons Hall was detected as having caused "failure," or heat loss through the roof. A reroofing project recently completed included installation of one inch of urethan insulation over 13,000

Temperature measurements now indicate a 40 per cent reduction of heat loss. This amounts to a savings in fuel costs of slightly less than 3 cents per foot of roof area per

Cracks in doors and walls, faulty insulation around doors and windows, poor caulking of construction joints and poorly insulated pipes were other areas of detected heat loss. Sneathen said one of the worst areas of escaping heat are overhead doors.

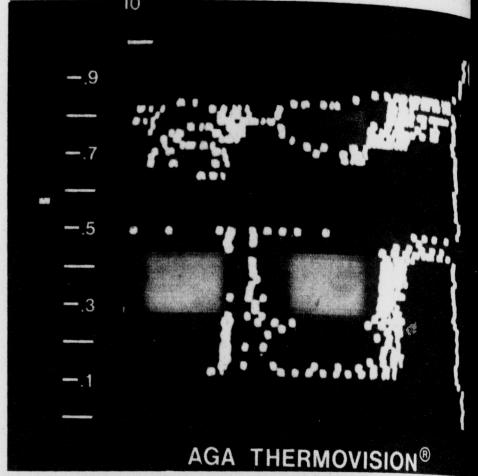

Sneathen said the camera contains a televisionlike screen with a scanner that senses only infrared radiation. A polaroid attachment is used to make a black and white photograph showing a blurry but recognizable image. Areas of heat loss will show up as varying intensities of black or white, depending upon how much heat is escaping. Several bright white dots can be superimposed on the thermograph to indicate an isotherm, an area of constant temperature.

The best time to scan building exteriors is during winter months when heat differentials can best be contrasted with atmospheric temperatures. The project team found that viewing was best on cloudy days when solar heat would not interfere with the data. Building interiors could be viewed, of course, under most any kind of atmospheric conditions.

Thermography is making strides in the medical profession as hospitals are increasingly using the technique to detect a number of ailments. It can warn of a tumor no larger than the head of a pin, for example, by measuring surface heat emission from the skin. It can accurately detect appendifrom plant and antique stores to leather shops and even a muzzle - loading shop owned by a family of Greek ancestry.

Called the Car - Lous Classic Euphorium, the muzzle - loading shop is run by the Millis and Evanoff families from Lansing who came upon the idea of selling muzzle - loading equipment for old firearms from a family member who does it as a hobby.

"It's old stuff for our family." said Yvonne Evanoff, who helps run the shop with her mother and aunt. "But it's becoming a sport and hobby that people are becoming interested in."

A hobby is also the main reason that Edith Gilmore, an Ottawa Indian, decided to open up a store to sell Indian pottery, moccasins and pictures.

"It started years ago when my borther gave me some extra moccasins he had left from his business in Northern Michigan," she said. "I sold them in a couple of days, so I decided to take it up as a hobby."

Gilmore, who works full time for the state, said she has

"It sure beats sitting in the office," she said. "I especially like to meet people.

Area students have also gotten into the business act with their hobbies. Mark Howland, and MSU student, started collecting salt water fish a few years ago and then decided to go into a business, called The Tradewinds, with a friend.

"It's not that hard," he said. "But more and more aquarium owners are becoming interested in it."

Richard Johnson, a student at Lansing Community College majoring in fine and commercial art, felt that a shop at the Mall was his big chance to display his and his friends art, so he opened up a shop called Poor Richard's.

"I've had the idea of opening a gallery for a long time," he said. "Now I've got a lot of talented friends using the gal-

SMAB refuses aid to Star Trek Club

The Student Media Appropriations Board (SMAB) has decided not to give or lend money to the MSU Star Trek Club to help cover the $3,000 debt the group incurred with its "Ourcon," a Star Trek convention held on campus May 2 through 4.

SMAB had already allocated $500 for the convention in the first round of allocations in January. Conference expenses were about $6,000 said Lori Chapek.

president of the club, but the club incurred its $3,000 debt because it counted too heavily on a larger door attendance. Even though the Residence Halls Association held a one - night

Star Trek festival with several guest speakers from the television show the first night of the conference, Chapek said it did not hurt, but helped the "Ourcon."

"The speakers were up here anyways, so it was easier to get them to stay for our convention," Chapek said.

Chapek said she is not sure what the club will do now to pay off the $3,000 debt except to try to sell more of a monthly Star Trek magazine the organization publishes. Chapek will be personally responsible for the debt since she personally signed the contracts. In other action, SMAB allocated $550 to the North American Indian Student Organization to help cover expenses for two

The speakers, Floyd Westerman, a country - western singer, and Dennis Banks, one of the organizers of the American Indian Movement, will be on campus all day May 22, but a definite itinerary has not been set up yet.

for Boston march

The MSU Student Coalition Against Racism Monday announced its plans to send a chartered bus to the May 17 National Freedom March on

Boston. "We believe that the violent. racist anti - busing drive in Boston is a threat to the rights of all black and other oppressed nationality youth to an equal education," Denis Hoppe, coalition member said.

The May 17 march has been endorsed by several groups on campus, including the Women's Center, MSU Gay Liberation and the Wounded Knee Support Committee. East Lansing Mayor Wilber Brookover has also endorsed the march, coalition members said.

The coalition will be selling round - trip tickets for $20 all week in the Union Lobby from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The bus will leave the Union at 5:30 p.m. on Friday and return from Boston after the demonstration at 5:30 p.m. on Saturday.
