Curtis Stranathan, CACTI member, protests against increased tuition, as university administrators Eldon Nonnamaker and Leslie Scott sit amid the storm of protest during Friday's board of trustees meeting.

Protest forces adjournment

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer
Shouts and chants by members of a student activist group opposed to tuition increases forced the MSU Board of Trustees meeting to adjourn early Friday morning and reconvene immediately in a closed executive session.

The board voted 7-1 to give blanket approval to all the items up for consideration on the agenda, with the exception of approval of an affirmative action program for handicapped students, as close to 200 spectators looked on in amazement.

Three prominent groups—including the anti-CIA group that staged protests on campus and in the Placement Services office last week, handicapped students and their supporters and the Coalition Against Cutbacks and Tuition Increases (CACTI)—packed into the board room on the fourth floor to gain recognition from the trustees for their causes.

Only the affirmative action program for the handicapped was on the agenda. After the meeting ended, tempers flared and a heated argument ensued between members of CACTI and supporters of Project Access, who had come to the board meeting to speak on behalf of the affirmative action program. At this time several persons joined in, while CACTI and Jack Breslin turns in amusement to watch as students chant "No sellout, we fight to win," but Trustees John Bruff and Don Stevens seem oblivious to the commotion. Left, after the meeting, a member of the handicapped students criticizes Stranathan for disrupting the meeting for everyone.

MSU officials denounce protesters on trustee meeting demonstration

By SUE WILLOUGHBY
State News Staff Writer
From the reactions of administrators and trustees, the protesters at Friday's board of trustees meeting probably did more harm than good by disrupting the meeting.

After repeated disruptions from the Coalition Against Cutbacks and Tuition Increases (CACTI) that included shouting and chants, President Wharton recommended the board automatically pass all items on the agenda and move to an executive session, which is closed to the public.

"We passed a blanket motion simply because we had to," Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said. "The President did warn them (the protesters) this action would have to be taken if they continued, but they didn't pay any attention."

Trustee Don Stevens, D-Bloomfield Hills, called the disruption "crude and outrageous," because it prevented a group of handicapped students from making a presentation on a proposed affirmative action program. "These people were brushed aside by people with no concern with anything except with their right to shout," Stevens said. "They didn't even represent a majority of the people at the meeting."

"They did more to hurt the cause of getting more appropriations for MSU than anything done in the last five years. Anyone looking for an excuse not to give us more money has got one now," he said. Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president for student affairs and services, was an MSU administrator during the student unrest of the 1960s, and has seen many protests here at MSU.

"Each one has its own kind of character to it," he said. "This one has been building up all week through publicity." Nonnamaker said the omnibus motion passing all actions on the agenda is not unprecedented, but is unusual. "Students coming in and yelling down the board has happened before, but usually when the President threatened to stop the meeting they stopped shouting," he said. "This time they didn't stop."

"The thing that troubles me most is that this kind of behavior at a board meeting is simply self-destructive," Nonnamaker said. "We are having enough trouble now budget-wise and getting appropriations through. This seemed like a few students (continued on page 12)

CIRCUS-LIKE ATMOSPHERE PREVAILS

WJIM-TV hearing has unique style

By FRED NEWTON
State News Staff Writer
It is certainly not like Perry Mason, said frequent spectator of the WJIM-TV hearing that ended last Thursday after a three month recess.

The hearing is the first of a series being held by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) concerned with clearing up allegations of alleged abuse of broadcast station owner Harold F. Gross.

Despite the seriousness of the allegations which include news blackouts of political area politicians — there was a side to the hearing itself. Essence, the hearings were tedious, unexciting and hardly followed the type of official proceeding.

There are also three sets of lawyers, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) which are attempting to get Gross' name cleared. Gross' lawyer, using such things as memoranda that Gross wrote and testimonies from WJIM-TV employees.

Asked about what they thought they had accomplished in this hearing, the lawyers from both sides seemed to think that though it was too early to tell, their cases would eventually win.

Federal Communications Commission (FCC) lawyer Joseph Chackin said that while he wished the hearings were a little farther ahead, there were "some revelations" (continued on page 14)

Second session set for Feb. 17

Though the first WJIM-TV relicensing hearing ended this past Thursday, when the second hearing begins on Feb. 17 it will get more into the meat of the alleged broadcast violations by Harold Gross.

This session has been dominated mostly by questions from American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) lawyer Harvey Schulman concerning alleged news blackouts by Gross. After he finishes his questioning next session it is up to Gross' lawyers to present witnesses in his defense.

SALT refuses to support state income tax increase

By CASSANDRA SPRATLING
State News Staff Writer
The Students Associated for Lower Tuition (SALT) decided Sunday not to support an income tax increase to help overcome the state's financial deficit.

SALT representatives drew up a document in which they said they could not support the tax increase because of the added financial burden it would place on the state citizenry and because "proven state budget priorities" do not insure that additional funding would go to higher education.

The document stated that current proposals would raise the percentage of tax from its present level of 3.9 per cent to 5.4 per cent. However, it stated, a tax increase would only contribute to a "vicious recessionary cycle by overtaxing an ever diminishing employed segment of the populace."

U.S. aid to Israel knocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has helped Israel gain an unprecedented military advantage over the Arabs in the Middle East, according to King Hussein of Jordan.

Hussein said in an interview in U.S. News & World Report that U.S. military aid to Israel "causes us all to feel that if a military balance existed in the past between Arab states and Israel, it has been tipped in the favor of Israel in an unprecedented manner."

The interview was conducted in Aman, Jordan, and published in this week's editions of the magazine.

The magazine said that the King listed three reasons why he is opposed to the latest cease-fire between Egypt and Israel. In addition to the increasing arms aid to Israel, Hussein listed uncertainty over the possibility of an over-all settlement in the area and the fact the agreement renounces use of force even though every nation should have a right to "exercise all options."

Nuclear tests put debris in air

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two of Russia's recent big underground nuclear tests apparently have spewed some radioactive debris into the atmosphere, U.S. intelligence sources report.

Radioactive gaseous debris was collected outside Russia's territory following a 3.8-megaton test on Oct. 18 and a two-megaton blast on Oct. 21, sources said. A megaton is the equivalent of one million tons of TNT.

The tests were conducted on the Soviet island of Novaya Zemlya in the Arctic.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union are pushing underground testing of larger nuclear weapons so they can complete development programs before next April when a new treaty goes into effect.

Meeting on MIAs postponed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Paris meeting between Vietnamese officials and members of a House subcommittee seeking to learn the fate of hundreds of Americans still missing in Southeast Asia has been postponed until December, it was announced Saturday.

The meeting had been scheduled for today with officials of North and South Vietnam but the delay was requested by the Vietnamese, according to Rep. G. V. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss.

The chairman of the House Select Committee on Missing Persons said the North Vietnamese requested the delay until later so that their ambassador to France, Vo Van Sung, could meet with the American lawmakers.

Though a definite new date was not set in the cable delay request, one committee source said the attendance of Vo could "upgrade" the efforts to learn the fate of hundreds of American servicemen still unaccounted.

Nation watches Franco's burial

MADRID (AP) — Gen. Francisco Franco, Spanish strongman for 36 years, was buried Sunday afternoon in a vast underground basilica honoring Spain's civil war dead. Shouts of "Long Live Franco!" accompanied him to his grave.

The nation's new leader, King Juan Carlos I, and members of the Franco family stood on either side of the coffin as it was lowered to a deep grave behind the main altar of the basilica in the bleak Valley of the Fallen, 35 miles from Madrid.

The burial ceremony, following an open-air funeral mass at Madrid's National Palace, began as eight pall-bearers carried Franco's coffin into the basilica, cut into the side of a granite mountain.

Hundreds of rightists and civil war veterans in front of the basilica gave the Fascist salute and sang the Falange anthem "Face to the Sun" as the coffin passed between them.

Francisco died Thursday at the age of 82.

Vietnam's speedy merger urged

BANGKOK (AP) — North and South Vietnam have agreed on a speedy merger of the two governments as the key to "national reunification in all aspects," Saigon radio announced Saturday.

A broadcast monitored in Bangkok said a political consultative conference attended by delegations from both North and South Vietnam concluded that an election to bring about a new single government "based on independence and socialism" would be held soon. No date was mentioned in the broadcast.

The broadcast, also carried by Radio Hanoi, quoted Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of South Vietnam. It said agreement between the Northern and Southern groups was unanimous.

Reunification of North Vietnam and South Vietnam began unofficially April 30, when victorious North Vietnamese armor and infantry rolled into Saigon, crushing the South's anti-Communist regime.

Peron stands up waiting youths

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — More than 5,000 impatient Peronists shouted "We want Isabel!" when President Isabel Peron failed to show up for a promised appearance at her suburban home Saturday.

Peron, 44, had invited members of the Peronist youth movement to her residence in Olivos to hear her speech on Sovereignty Day. It would have been her first public appearance since Oct. 17 when she addressed a crowd at the government house after returning from a month's vacation. She was in a hospital for nearly two weeks this month for treatment of a gall bladder condition.

"Why don't you come out, Isabel," some of the Peronists shouted, raising clenched fists as Peron's recorded speech was played over a loudspeaker.

Navy ships collide, 4 killed

GAETA, Italy (AP) — A nighttime collision between the U.S. aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy and the missile cruiser Belknap in the windswept Mediterranean east of Sicily killed at least four crewmen and injured 16, the U.S. Navy said Sunday.

About 55 men from the Belknap were swept overboard but rescued from the rough, oil-blackened waters. Four others were reported missing in the Saturday night mishap.

Newsmen who flew over both warships said the Belknap's superstructure was "a twisted mass of steel and all charred" and that the carrier was caught in a rainstorm that hampered search and rescue operations.

One of the injured, David Vollmer of Waupaca, Wis., who was airlifted to the U.S. Navy air facility in Sigonella, Sicily, told a newsman: "We were trapped below decks, but fought our way to the deck. Ammunition exploded. There were terrible fires."

The U.S. Navy 6th fleet headquarters in Gaeta said three of the dead were from the Belknap and one was from the Kennedy. Five of the 16 injured were reported in serious condition. The five first were airlifted to Sigonella and later flown to a Navy hospital near Naples.

Adm. David Bagley, commander in chief of U.S. naval forces in Europe, called the collision and the blaze a "tragedy" and praised his sailors for their "tenacity" in battling it.

The Navy said "flashback fires occurred in the Belknap and were quickly put out," referring to blazes that were first put out only to erupt again.

Identities of the dead and missing were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The Navy said it took only 10 minutes to douse the flames on the Kennedy's massive flight deck, but the fire raged for 2 1/2 hours on the Belknap before being brought under control. The cruiser suffered heavy damage. It was taken under tow by the destroyer Bordeon, bound for Augusta Bay, Sicily. The Navy said the Kennedy would remain in the area for further search efforts, then return to normal operations.

The announcement of the casualties came after U.S. Navy ships and aircraft mounted a search of the oil-blackened collision area.

The Navy gave no explanation for the crash but Adm. David H. Bagley, commander in chief of U.S. Naval forces stationed in London, ordered an investigation. Citing Defense Dept. policy, the Navy also refused to confirm or deny whether either ship was carrying nuclear weapons.

The collision occurred during night flight operations Saturday in what the Navy described as "reduced visibility," indicating at least a partial blackout during maneuvers by the seven-vessel task force.

The Kennedy has a crew of 4,500 and a flight deck the size of four football fields. The Belknap, half the carrier's size, has a crew of 350.

A Soviet destroyer was in the area at the time of the collision, a customary practice in the Mediterranean where units of the Soviet and U.S. fleets observe each other's movements — what the U.S. Navy calls "tattle tail."

Schlesinger speaks out on arms treaty chances

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chances of a new strategic arms treaty are diminishing as attitudes harden in the Soviet Union, possibly because of an impending change in government there, former Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger said Sunday.

Schlesinger said Soviet attitudes are changing and there is "perhaps the beginning of the start of a succession crisis in the Soviet Union."

The former defense secretary, fired three weeks ago by President Ford, appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press." It was only the second time he has spoken out since leaving office, having given an earlier interview to The Associated Press.

Schlesinger indicated in the AP interview that his objections to preparing a defense budget which he considered inadequate for 1977 had led to his dismissal.

In firing Schlesinger, President Ford said he was seeking to have his own team in cabinet posts, but later acknowledged that disagreements within the administration played a part in his decision.

On television, Schlesinger stressed a strong national defense, saying the Soviet Union appears to have the initiative in world affairs.

Schlesinger did not elaborate on his comment about a possible succession struggle in the Soviet Union.

There is a Communist Party congress scheduled for February and in the past there have been indications that Brezhnev would not remain in office past that time because of uncertain health.

Schlesinger said that he feels chances of reaching a new strategic arms treaty next year are now less than 50-50.

Asked how American and Soviet military forces compare, Schlesinger said the United States still has a diminishing edge in nuclear weapons, has a qualitative advantage in tactical air power and is equivalent in naval forces. But a major problem, he said, is the powerful and growing ground forces of the Soviet Union.

He said that he feels the United States needs a program budget next year of $114 billion to $115 billion for adequate defense.

Schlesinger had indicated that the dispute with President Ford that led to his dismissal was over a budget proposal which, Schlesinger indicated, could require a defense manpower reduction of 200,000.

He said the Soviet Union is producing ever more submarines and aircraft while the United States is "indulging in an ostrich syndrome."

"The military establishment cannot live on rhetoric and sentiment," Schlesinger said in the AP interview.

"And the real question that we will face is not whether we will have tributes to the concept of America's strength but whether we are going to avoid cutting military strength and defense purchasing power further by additional budget cuts," he said.

He denied reports that he had reached the point of resigning, but added "there was a question in my mind whether I would be prepared to carry defense budget to the House (Congress) which I regarded as inadequate."

In both interviews the former defense secretary declined to discuss reports of differences with other government officials, including Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. In the AP interview, however, he had acknowledged major differences between Kissinger and himself on negotiating strategy in dealing with the Soviet Union.

In both interviews also Schlesinger indicated some unhappiness with Soviet cooperation under current arms limitation treaties, although he stopped short of accusing the Russians of cheating.

Lebanon's truce ends in turmoil and fighting

BEIRUT (AP) — Lebanon's infant cease-fire collapsed in bloodshed Sunday, leaving at least 29 persons dead and 85 wounded in Beirut alone.

Fighting also was reported in the northern city of Tripoli and the Bekaa Valley town of Baalbek but there was no immediate word on casualties.

A police radio call from Baalbek, 40 miles northeast of Beirut, said 500 Moslem militiamen were attacking the town hall.

Premier Rashid Karami announced the truce Saturday night — the 13th in eight months of civil war. But one discouraged policeman said: "The cease-fire never even got off the ground, not for a minute. Each armed group is acting on its own and security forces are unable to exercise any control anywhere."

Christian and Moslem neighborhoods traded fire with mortars, rockets and heavy machine guns, sometimes intensifying their barrages to cover raiding parties sent to kidnap hostages. Fires started by rocket-propelled grenades burned out of control in the central business district and the eastern and northern suburbs.

Only one seaside residential area and the fashionable Hamra shopping district remained untouched by the conflict and even there most residents were too scared to venture outdoors.

Only 20 persons showed up for Sunday worship in an Armenian church near the downtown hotel district. The priest never made it because of sniper fire and a layman conducted the service.

Lebanon's outnumbered and outgunned security forces have given up all pretense of trying to intervene between the warring street gangs.

Tanks and armored personnel carriers confined their presence to Beirut's shrinking safe zone, pulling back whenever gunfire sounded too close.

The 18,000-man army has not been committed since the civil war began last April, because Karami and the nation's Christian president, Suleiman Franjeh, both fear that it, too, might split into Christian and Moslem factions.

The spreading street war, underlined the hopelessness of a French mediating mission by former Premier Maurice Couve de Murville. Lebanese politicians had to travel by armored car to confer with him at the French Embassy, near one sniper zone in the center of Beirut.

A rocket-propelled grenade slammed into the garden of the French ambassador's residence and wounded one of the security men guarding De Murville, police said. Another shell hit a hospital in the same suburb, wounding four other persons.

The turmoil stems from bitter religious and political differences. Moslems aided by Palestinian guerrillas are demanding reform of the political system that concentrates power in the hands of the 40 per cent Christian minority. Christians insist reforms can only come when state authority is imposed over the Palestinian refugee camps.

'U' needs new way to register

Three times a year, the nightmare recurs. Exasperated and frazzled, we all eventually snap out of the mental stupor of registration. But the trying process generally leaves the student disgruntled and wondering exactly what circle of hell Dante would have made the class card arena.

From the damnable lunch time close-up to the endless string of table stops, every part of the registration process is in need of overhaul. But commendably, the University seems to be reacting to the problem and appears genuinely interested in remodeling their machine. A Student Advisory Council to the Registrar and a group of University delegates are forming a committee to study alternatives to our present registration set-up.

To serve the students best, this committee should be concerned with short range improvements as well as long term proposals. They must take steps to clean up the present mess and use whatever crystal balls they have, coupled with good sense, to set up a new and better registration system.

Two problems worthy of immediate action are the inconvenient lunch break and the handling of section changes, cancellation and closings in the class card arena. A staggered lunch hour, at little cost and inconvenience, could stop the aggravating break. A more accurate, current and visible listing of closed and cancelled sections in the class card arena could also be a big improvement.

As long range, more effective changes, the committee should work toward a total revamp of a system that cannot accommodate 44,000 students. Somehow, a method that can eliminate or facilitate the processing of the students with complete course schedules must be developed.

Computerized drops and adds, a method now being used at many larger universities, might accomplish this. Registration by mail, in a manner similar to that used in summer terms passed, is another option to be considered.

Whatever the consensus, the students, as the consumers of the University's product, deserve immediate improvements and eventual overhaul of this school's most deplorable service.

The answer, undoubtedly, calls for some brainstorming. But when 44,000 students try to cram through a system built for a student body half that size, both the University's and the students' style are cramped so seriously, only an entirely new process will do.

'Twas no way to act

The disruption of Friday's Board of Trustees meeting by members of the Coalition Against Cutbacks and Tuition Increases (CACTI) could only have been an empty shouting exercise, devoid of any positive direction and bankrupt from the start.

Not only was the rationale for the theatrics misconceived and ill-planned, but the results they forced on other groups were disastrous and without question counterproductive.

While President Wharton tried to start the trustees meeting, CACTI member Curtis Stranathan stood up and shouted him down. The trustees repeatedly tried to get underway over the yells and chants of the Progressive Labor Party-influenced group, but to no avail.

What CACTI hoped to accomplish through actions which not only the trustees, but also other student groups at the meeting found repugnant, is certainly unclear, especially since the one dollar tuition surcharge—the main target of the coalition—was fortunately not activated by the trustees.

But even if members of CACTI wanted to emphasize their other five demands, the manner in which they did so invites the outrage and condemnation of the students they purported to represent.

There is little question that large numbers of orderly, nonviolent people can aid in affecting policies or legislation favorable to their goals.

However, such action is also strategized with the idea that those it is directed toward will recognize the humanity inherent within it.

CACTI, however, tried nothing of the sort. The group's notion was that somehow by crass yelling and wholesale disruption on the part of a paltry few, they could force the trustees to listen.

And at that, much of what they did was most likely a childish reaction to the humiliating defeat they suffered at the hands of evidence and reason at the previous night's briefing session.

In carrying on its pointlessness, other groups at the meeting—handicapped students and CIA protestors—were angered and justifiably alienated.

By forcing the trustees to move into executive session, CACTI obviated any chance that either they or the other students would be allowed to speak after the trustees had finished the agenda.

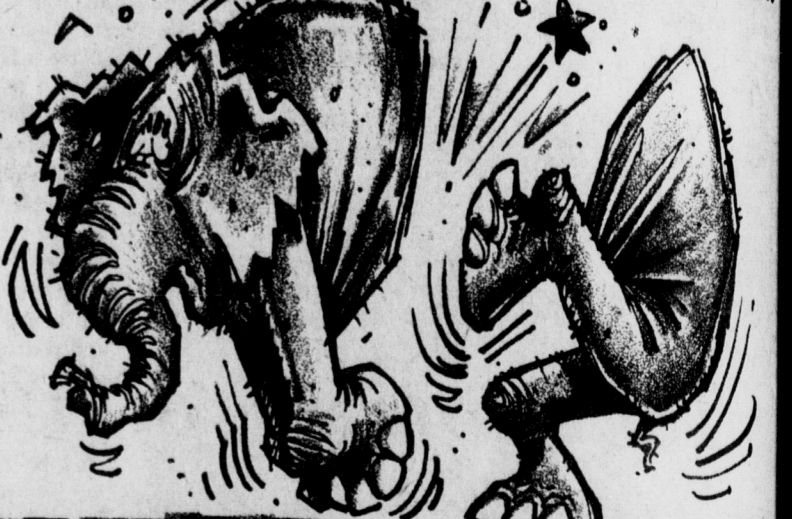

This really was unfortunate, because the handicapped students had a grievance the board may have been able to act on had the disruption not happened.

This newspaper has consistently opposed the trustees' practice of privately carrying business which properly belongs in the public view. But there is no question that the antics of CACTI provided a perfect excuse for the trustees to seize upon and move public proceedings into secrecy.

Predictably, CACTI accomplished nothing. We suggest that the coalition reform itself before being laughed off campus by students and administration alike. Because with marauding student crusaders like them, who needs a tyrannical administration?

A new study of amnesty needed

What is needed, according to Father Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, is a new study of amnesty.

Father Hesburgh has urged the Ford Foundation to finance such a study, which would be undertaken at Notre Dame's Civil Rights Center under the direction of Lawrence Baskir, general counsel of President Ford's controversial Clemency Board.

Advocates of unconditional amnesty for Vietnam-era draft evaders, resisters and deserters are indignant at the prospect.

They think that Father Hesburgh, who himself favors amnesty, should make a speech to Congress, not a study that would take another year.

They also see it as an outrageous attempt to justify the President's clemency program which closed down after a year of operation, having attracted only 18 per cent of its potential clientele.

A Ford Foundation spokesman said that the grant has not yet been finally approved and that the project would be much broader than a review of the Clemency Board. They look upon it as an update of an internal study made a year ago on the problems of resisters, evaders, deserters and veterans of the Vietnam War. They decided on the basis of the study to take no further action.

Henry Schwarzschild, chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union and a fierce critic of the President's clemency efforts, is outraged.

"They did a study and decided to do nothing when it would have helped," he said. "I am distressed that an organization so influential and powerful would continue to study problems instead of helping solve them. And it strikes me as a bad idea to go to the people responsible for a review of a government agency's work. It isn't even peer-evaluation, it's self-evaluation, and I don't see what good it would do."

But Father Hesburgh thinks that an uninformed public and a president, either re-elected or newly elected, would benefit from a history of past amnesties and the

Mary McGroarty

"wealth of information" yet to be mined in the Clemency Board's files.

Despite his convictions on unconditional amnesty, he took the job on the Clemency Board because he thought it was better than nothing. His service, which was regarded by his colleagues as enlightened and compassionate, brought him the most virulent mail of his career. President Ford, who took heart from right and left himself from the inception of his effort to "heal the wounds of war," showed his appreciation by visiting the Notre Dame campus last spring.

"Despite his (Father Hesburgh) convictions on unconditional amnesty, he took the job on the Clemency Board because he thought it was better than nothing. His service, which was regarded by his colleagues as enlightened and compassionate, brought him the most virulent mail of his career."

Father Hesburgh sees "little prospect of favorable congressional action on amnesty." The House Judiciary Committee will vote on an amnesty bill presented by Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wisc., after the Thanksgiving recess. A subcommittee rejected an extension of the Clemency Board, which expired amid no lamentations on September 15.

"I think the President's clemency program took the steam out of the amnesty question," says Father Hesburgh. "We will have a report that will be constructive, really positive, and will teach us some new things."

The Rev. Barry Lynn of the United Church of Christ Social Action Center, who has counseled thousands of objectors and deserters during the Vietnam years, disagrees: "To reward with a sizeable grant those programs in the Clemency Board who have so gravely complicated and abused the lives of these resisters is both morally repugnant and academically disgraceful."

Lawrence Baskir, who with two other ex-Clemency Board staff members would write the study—he is currently engaged in preparing the board's 400-page final report—insists that he is "not about to say what a great job the Clemency Board did."

He prefers not to discuss the project at all, while approval is pending in the Ford Foundation, but he did say that he thought that somebody totally objective "would have to start from a substantial base of ignorance."

"You have to have someone who has been involved. I think I could be completely objective and professional about it."

Father Hesburgh is aware that the promise of a Ford Foundation study would give congressmen who are feeling from the amnesty question another election-year-long excuse to evade it.

"If they can get an amnesty bill through," he said, "I say go ahead and God bless you, but I still think we should have this study. For a very little money you could get a lot of information, and it would help if we ever have another problem in the future."

The Ford Foundation refuses to discuss the amount of the requested grant. The Washington Star

Letter writers, be patient

I must get more mail than anyone else in town. Whenever anyone has any complaint about anything, I receive a letter.

But I'm not complaining. That's what letters-to-the-editor are for.

I am, however, asking for patience. I receive such a large volume of letters that I cannot guarantee anyone quick printing. In fact, I cannot even guarantee that a particular letter will be printed.

I would love to have every letter or viewpoint put in the paper immediately. Space, the ghoul which forever haunts journalists, will not permit.

There are some things that writers could do to make my job easier—and their letters more likely to be used.

First, it is important that pieces be typed on a 65-space line. This means to set your margins at 10 and 75. Second, it is vital that you double, or preferably triple-space your page. I (as well as the Philistines on the copy desk), need room to correct spelling and mark type changes.

Third, please reread your letter carefully, correcting as many spelling and grammatical errors as possible.

Finally, please do not bug me. I appreciate your concern about your letter or point of view. I am trying to print it. Taking my time by hassling me about when it will be printed only makes things worse. On the other hand, be sure to point out to me if a letter is about an event which will occur soon. I will try to print it by that time.

In conclusion, it would seem that Ali Bugaighis is the one who lacks the education and knowledge to make a correct assessment of the recent UN actions.

To our brothers

This letter is addressed to our "brothers" on our south side, Lambda Chi Alpha. When I signed the lease on my house, I expected the location, being so close to campus, to be ideal. I did not suspect that every time I walked past your fraternity house I would be followed by lewd or snide remarks from the males on the premises of your property. But I can live with that. After all, children will play. . . .

I began to get angry when footballs

Other than those things, there is nothing that you or I can do. The backlog of letters and viewpoints is huge. Just be patient. You can predict the success of your letter by these criteria for printing:

1. Shorter pieces are easier to fit in.
2. Timely pieces are printed first.

3. Pieces that repeat earlier letters are given low priority.

4. Pieces of a great general student interest are printed first.

5. Chance is the greatest determinant of all. If your piece is the right size for a spot on the page, it will be selected over a better piece which does not fit.

Finally, I would like to clear up State

News policy about signed letters and viewpoints. We will not print any without an individual's name unless we are convinced that publication of the name endangers the writer. This goes for groups as well as individuals.

So, if you are a member of the Birdwatchers Society, and write a viewpoint expressing the group's official position about robins, please sign it with your name. At the end of the piece, we will print "Robin T. Birdlover represents the MSU Birdwatchers Society."

Thanks again for the mail. If you have any questions, feel free to ask. I am doing my best to print as many letters as possible.

tricks. Perhaps, neighbors, it's time to up. Junior high days are over.

What's he to do?

"OK McGuire, we need a story that make the foreign students at MSU hate us. We want the American kids to be relating to them as people. Do it."

So what's he do?
"Excuse me Yoko-san, but how do you say 'shit' in Japanese?"

I'm happy to see that the State News is doing its best to promote international understanding.

Letters to the Editor

Zionism

In regards to the article printed on November 14 concerning the UN resolution labeling Zionism as racism, I would like to comment on the remarks made by the MSU Arab student, Ali Bugaighis.

Bugaighis states that the resolution is appropriate and any person who has knowledge of the situation would agree. I cannot think of too many people who are more aware of the situation than the two professors who were quoted in the article. Ralph Smuckler, Dean of International Studies at MSU, and John Aldrich, Asst. Professor in Political Science at MSU, both agree that the resolution is, "false, a poor decision and an inaccurate characterization."

Bugaighis also states that Israel is a class system with Jews as the number one class and the Arabs as the second class. I will not call this statement incorrect nor will I call it right, but it is a far better solution in a troubled area than the proposed total destruction of Israel and the Israeli people as laid down by the Palestinians and the P.L.O.

Finally, Bugaighis says the resolution was not dominated by the Arab Nations, because only 18 of the 72 countries to vote in favor were Arab Nations. This is correct but not a true view of the proceedings. Anyone who believes that the Arabs have no influence upon the actions of other countries is a fool. In recent years, the Arab Nations have banded together to put economic pressure upon those countries which do not totally favor their actions in the Middle East situation. It is this threat that dictates the actions of the countries that rely upon Arab support for their economy to survive.

VIEWPOINT: AFRICAN LIBERATION

The CIA should keep hands off Angola

By CAROL THOMPSON

The people of Angola successfully terminated 500 years of Portuguese rule on Nov. 11, but a major war is still waging. The presence of three movements divided on political, geographic and ethnic lines has prevented a simple transition from colony to independence. These divisions, together with Angola's wealth in natural resources, have invited intervention in the decolonization process by external powers. The United States has been prominent among these outside forces.

The CIA has been buying arms for two liberation movements, FNLA and UNITA, in an effort to offset the military and political successes of the third movement, MPLA. The CIA operations have been approved by President Ford and are being carried out with the knowledge of several Congressional committees, including the Senate and House Armed Forces and Appropriations Committees, and the Senate Foreign Relations and House International Relations Committees.

CIA support for FNLA has a long history: in 1962, the agency and President Kennedy "activated" FNLA leader Holden Roberto as the "future leader in Angola," since Portugal could not be expected to retain Angola indefinitely. The CIA interest in UNITA is more recent. Jonas Savimbi, who heads UNITA, is avowedly "anti-communist" and anti-MPLA—two reasons for the CIA's interest in him.

U.S. aid to the two movements is being disbursed largely through President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire. Indeed, it is impossible to discuss U.S. intervention in Angola without examining Zaire's relationship with both Angola and the United States. Zaire shares a long border with Angola; the Bakongo people, who comprise the bulk of FNLA's supporters, straddle this border. Holden Roberto of FNLA is Mobutu's brother-in-law (he has spent only four years of his life in Angola).

During the recent hearings on the CIA alleged assassinations, Senate Intelligence Committee members received pressure from the Ford Administration to stop their investigation of the assassination of Patrice Lumumba. During the Congo (Zaire) crisis of the early 1960's, Lumumba was a popular nationalist leader. Mobutu came to power a few years after Lumumba's assassination and investigations of the past events in the Congo were considered by the Ford Administration to be too sensitive for current events in Angola. The Senate Intelligence Committee report on the CIA and Patrice Lumumba states:

"The chain of events revealed by the documents and testimony is strong enough to permit a reasonable inference that the plot to assassinate Lumumba was authorized by President Eisenhower. Nevertheless, there is enough countervailing testimony by Eisenhower Administration officials and enough ambiguity and lack of clarity in the records of high-level policy meetings to preclude the Committee from making a finding that the President intended an assassination effort against Lumumba."

Since General Mobutu seized power in 1965, maintaining the stability of his staunchly pro-western rule in Zaire has been a cornerstone of U.S. policy in Africa.

"U.S. intervention in Angola may prove as tragic and costly as in Indochina. It will add thousands more to the killed and wounded, and entangle the U.S. in an escalating conflict in southern Africa for years to come."

The CIA has had a principal Africa station in Zaire during his regime.

The rationale for the more recent CIA support of FNLA and UNITA is that MPLA is receiving arms from the Soviet Union. It could be argued that a "Soviet-engineered takeover" of the Angolan government is no more desirable than a similar CIA effort. However, as events in Indochina and Chile revealed, ANY Soviet presence in a particular country is often exaggerated and used as justification for significant American subversion of the internal political process.

Furthermore, warnings of dangerous Soviet intervention from American officials should hardly be taken at face value, when accompanied by pious denials of U.S. interference. In a major Africa policy statement on Sept. 23, Secretary Kissinger stated: "We are most alarmed at the interference of extracountry powers who do not wish Angola well and whose involvement is inconsistent with the promise of true independence."

The evidence that MPLA is completely under the Soviet thumb is unconvincing. Leaders of MPLA deny that they would exchange 500 years of Portuguese rule for Soviet domination. Senator Dick Clark, chairperson of the Africa Subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who visited Angola and met with the presidents of all three movements in August, came away firmly convinced that nothing in the situation justified U.S. intervention.

Yet in recent weeks, a column of CIA-supported FNLA and UNITA forces, led by white South African troops and Portuguese mercenaries, advanced 250 miles north to capture Novo Redondo . . . using American C-130 planes and French armored cars from a South African army-air force base in Grootfontein, Namibia. Strange that on the occasion of a triple-veto in the UN by Britain, France and U.S.A. last June, the three stated that there was "no threat to international peace and security" in the continuing South African occupation of Namibia.

U.S. intervention in Angola may prove as tragic and costly as in Indochina. It will add thousands more to the killed and wounded and entangle the U.S. in an escalating conflict in southern Africa for years to come. By making common cause with South African forces, the U.S. is alienating the developing world and deepening its complicity with South Africa's racists. Any Angolan government which comes to power beholden to South Africa for support will discourage the fight for freedom in Namibia and South Africa.

Further, an amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1974 stipulated that no funds could be spent by or on behalf of the CIA for covert operations "unless and until the President finds that each such operation is important to the national security of the United States."

The Ford Administration is trying to aid FNLA and UNITA further by siphoning a $82 million aid package to Mobutu's Zaire, of which $23 million is for "security supporting assistance" and $19 million in military credit sales (up from $3.5 million last year). The items slated to be sold on credit include 12 armored cars and 400 jeeps and trucks — precisely the kind of "Zairean" army equipment now being used in Angola.

The Administration has conceded that the Angolan strife is among the reasons for the quantum leap in aid to Zaire. Secretary Kissinger said on Nov. 6 that the railways through Angola are important outlets for Zaire and Zambia and, in this situation, "we do believe it is important to make clear to Zaire that we are prepared to be of assistance." He neglected to mention that the railways are heavily used by U.S. corporations extracting Zaire's rich mineral resources.

At least two amendments will be offered to the International Security Assistance bill, presently before Congress, as follows: (1) that no assistance authorized by this act and no covert assistance may be furnished directly or indirectly to any political group in Angola, (2) that no defense material included in the Foreign Military Sales Act shall be sold to Zaire until the President reports that it has halted all military assistance to political groups in Angola and Congress has approved this report by concurrent resolution. Persons supporting African self-determination and those disturbed by recent revelations about the CIA might well express themselves in support of such amendments.

This point of view is submitted by Carol Thompson, political science graduate student teaching African Politics and a member of the Southern Africa Liberation Committee, a task force of the Peace Center.

THAT LOOKS FINE FATHER. NOW, THE NEON SIGN GOES ON THE CROSS OF THE DOME.

The worries of the women of Watergate

Two new books have come out concerning Watergate. One is titled "The Women of Watergate" by Madeleine Edmondson and the other is "Mo" by Lauren Dean with Hays Gorey. The first of both books is that if the wives of the conspirators had only known what their husbands were doing, Watergate may never have gotten out of hand.

Anyone who believes that doesn't know the people who live in Washington. This is what would and probably did happen.

"Hello, dear. Wow, what a day at the White House. I just had to persuade three people to lie to the FBI."

The toilet's broken again. Every time I go to the plumber he doesn't pay any attention to me. If you would call just once we'd get some action around here."

"Listen, I need a drink real bad. I had to go to the President in on some stupid break - at the Watergate and he was steaming mad. He told me to see that no one found out about it even if I had to use every organization in the country including the CIA."

"I'll tell you who else is steaming mad — Mrs. Roebuck. They called up and said we didn't paid their bill for three months. I thought you told me you were going to send them a check."

I was, but it slipped my mind. You see some jerks over at the Committee to Re-Elect the President committed a burglary and seven were arrested. It turns out two of them were members of a secret outfit we have in the White House called 'the plumbers' who were up to their eyeballs in illegal activities. Now the press is on to it and they've called a special grand jury. I'm going to have to perjure myself in front of the grand jury to save the President."

"Well, when will you send the check to Sears Roebuck?"

"Will you stop talking about Sears

Art Buchwald

Roebuck? If this thing gets out in the open it will blow the Administration sky-high. My clothes are filthy from destroying evidence we found in one of the plumbers' safes."

"Isn't that illegal to destroy evidence?"

"Of course it's illegal, but it had to be done. In fact I'm going back tonight to burn some more files."

"Then that means you can't go to the Greens' for dinner?"

"No way. The President doesn't want one piece of paper linked to him."

"This is the third time we've canceled on the Greens. You should be ashamed of yourself."

"I can't help it. After I destroy the evidence I have to meet several members of the Committee to Re-Elect the President. They're getting chicken about the investigation and I'm going to have to lean on them pretty hard. I have to make sure they stick to the phony story we made up even if I have to bribe them."

"And what am I supposed to do while you're having a good time? Watch television?"

"Dearest, don't you understand? If this thing doesn't work out the way we want it to, I could go to jail for years."

"That reminds me. Your mother called and wants to know when your Aunt Katherine and Uncle Phil can visit the White House. You promised they wouldn't have to stand in line with the rest of the tourists."

"I have to tell you this in strictest confidence. The President has tape recordings of every conversation he had in his office. We have to listen to these tapes and erase anything that could incriminate him."

"Did you know that Johnny came in at one o'clock last night? If he had a father who kept decent hours he wouldn't try to get away with things like that."

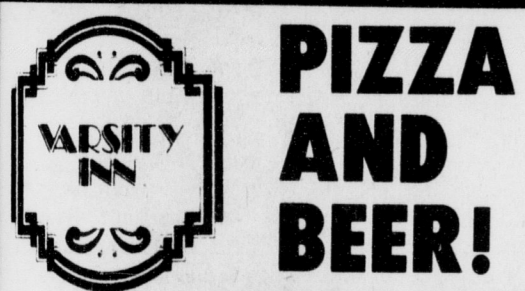

"Will you stop bothering me with all this small talk? There's a smoking pistol out there somewhere and we have to deep-six it."

"Which means you're not going to call the plumber?"

"Let me ask one question. Knowing what you know now about my involvement in this Watergate mess, do you think I've done the right thing?"

"How should I know? I haven't been out of this house in a week."

Country music queen Lynn Anderson gives short but sweet performance

By JEROME MCGUIRE
State News Reviewer

Lynn Anderson moved the audience at Long's Banquet Center Friday night. She moved them with surprisingly powerful opening renditions of "Silver Threads and Golden Needles" and "When Will I Be Loved," two songs that have launched Linda Ronstadt into delayed stardom. And, of course, on into the night she really moved them with "I Never Promised You a Rose Garden" . . . so smile for a while and let's be jolly, love shouldn't be so melancholy.

Lynn Anderson was, to stretch an adjective, jolly Friday, and she moved the audience happily. Smiles shone on most of the faces in the banquet hall, glowing above the leisure suits and long dresses. The crowd was unraucous for the most part, but they loved Lynn Anderson.

"I want to give you something," a young fan bubbled cheerily in the back hall following the performance.

He proceeded to take the shirt off his back for her. She graciously accepted it as she did with the autograph requests.

"Did you see that," she said later. "Someone gave me the shirt off his back and boy does it smell bad," she said with a smile. Doubtless, stranger things have happened to her in her role of the country music queen.

She looked every inch like a country queen on Friday in a white leather pantsuit with buckskin trim. She kept up an easy banter with the fairly sparse audience and called up two shy, but alcohol-braced males from the crowd to help her sing. One of the men grabbed Lynn around the waist in obvious ecstasy and the other couldn't be coaxed to croak a note — but their wives loved it.

The backup band was up to Nashville standards: accomplished and polished musicians, but they were recognized at most, by Anderson, as "the fellas." Their solo number was a rather hackneyed but faultless rendition of "Dueling Banjos," featuring one of the erstwhile guitar players on the banjo.

She had a five piece band: two (Fender, of course) guitars, bass, pedal steel and drums. They did not jump around much but they sure could play in their shiny black suits.

Lynn Anderson drove her musical vehicle like the experienced horsestrainer she is. Her strong, but pretty voice soared above and mixed well with the band. She even made the AM radio stomach turner "I'm Not Lisa" palatable fare for the musical taste buds. The greatest problem with the show was that it ended too soon. She played for only an hour, but that is the professionals' manner: leave 'em hungry for more. It is also the country manner, low key. Maybe that is why country singers stay popular and strong so long. They inspire devotion but do not burn out.

After Long's, Lynn Anderson was scheduled to head for New York and Howard Cosell's "Saturday Night Live" program.

"We're going to get stoned and drive to Detroit tonight," she said backstage.

Well, well, that corny image is not all it's cracked up to be. So don't judge a book by its cover because the proof of the pudding is in the singing. And Lynn Anderson whipped up some tasty country cookin' at Long's on Friday.

Two concerts slated for Sunday

Two concerts, one on campus and one off campus, will be presented Sunday by MSU-affiliated musicians.

Award-winning pianist Edith Kraft, an artist-in-residence at MSU, will appear in recital at 4 p.m. in the Music Building Auditorium.

The MSU Choral will perform a part of Handel's "The Messiah" in the manner the composer intended at 8:15 p.m. at the University Lutheran Church.

Kraft's program will include Scarlatti's "Sonata in E major" and "Sonata in D major;" Schumann's "Davidshundert-tanze, opus 6;" Ravel's "Valse Nobles et Sentimentales," and de Falla's "Fantasia Baetica."

Appointed artist-in-residence at MSU in 1974, the former Juilliard School of Music faculty member won second prize in the Naumberg Competition that year. Having won first Prize in the Atlanta Symphony's Young Artists Piano Competition in April, she will tour with the group in January following a December recital in Washington, D.C.

Under the direction of Robert Harris, the 26-member chorale will sing the first 21 movements of the oratorio, a segment complete in itself that deals with the prophecy and birth of Christ.

"The Messiah" was not written for a large chorus and symphony orchestra but rather for a smaller performing force," said Harris, noting that the piece is seldom performed as Handel conceived it.

Both performances are free.

Billiards champ a cueball wizard

by JEROME MCGUIRE
State News Staff Writer

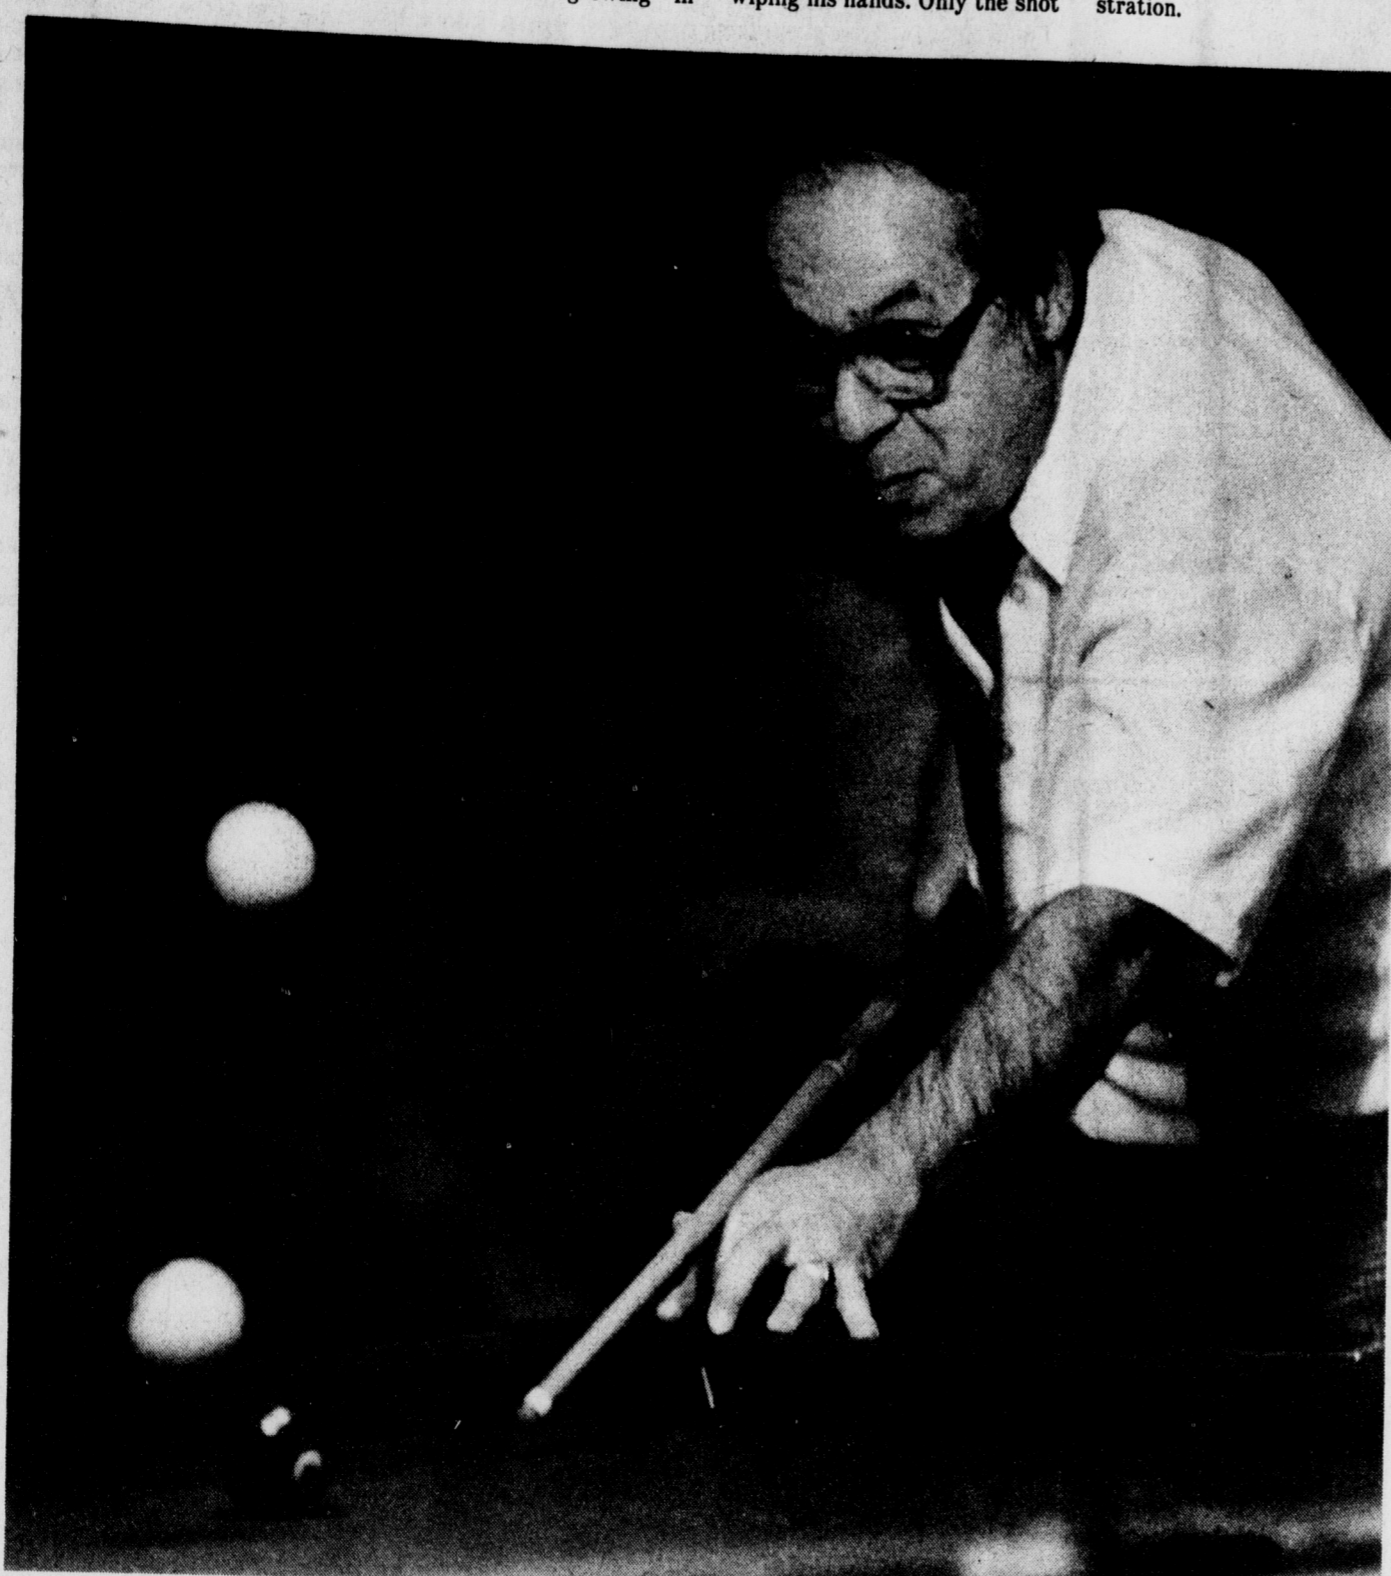

Before 1969 I had never heard of Minnesota Fats, the distinguished dean of the felted (i.e., pocket billiards), my Caras, said in his Thursday demonstration at the...
...he has been playing since 1929. He boasted he could beat anybody. So I hopped a plane to Houston and I played him for straight days and he never lost a game. He had to leave...
...Caras continued. Caras, as one can tell, is quite confident of his pool playing ability. He should be. He has won the World's Pocket Billiards Championship five times. At 17 he was dubbed the wonder of the pocket billiards world.
...Caras looks rather like a man who has been a pool player for a long time. He should be. He has won the World's Pocket Billiards Championship five times. At 17 he was dubbed the wonder of the pocket billiards world.
...Caras talks sport lingo but he handles his cue like a precise instrument. He uses a specific weight, length and construction material in his instrument. He handles it with care also, giving his work in terms of follow-through and emphasizing lightness touch.
...Some people think they can smash the ball," he said with real consternation in his eyes. "Look, if people just learn a few fundamentals they can improve their game."
...He gave a demonstration of proper techniques for pool billiards, taking pains to be everyone saw and heard pointers. He spiced up the demonstration with a few jokes.
...He had dinner with the man who wrote "the Hustler" the other night. He's a college English professor. And I asked him if the characters were fictional or real. He said they're fictional. So...

But if Caras never hustled anybody it's not for lack of ability. He approaches the game like a chess master with a mesmerizing, jerky kind of style of moving and speaking. His manner is slow and easy at first, but then growing in intensity. He knows where the balls are going to go when he hits them, his shots are like classic chess openings. And as he gets going in a match he picks up his pace of walking and wiping his hands. Only the shot remains stable, cool and thorough until he has put away all 150 balls used in a regulation match. Then he wipes his brow, takes a drink and relaxes until the next match or demonstration.

Union speaker talks on Cuban socialism

Doug Stevens describes socialism in Cuba at a meeting sponsored by the Young Workers Liberation League.

Trustee meeting interrupted by protest

until they vote it (the $1 tuition increase) down. We won't take no for an answer," said John Cantwell, CACTI member.

Irate students who had come with Project Access, a group supportive of the handicapped students, called the mayhem "an overt show of ignorance."

"If you'd had some common sense you would have waited (until the end of the meeting)," one girl said.

The morning was marked by conflicts and disorder even before and after the board disturbance. A picket line formed by CACTI sympathizers was disrupted when a scuffle broke out between members of the Young Socialist Alliance (YSA) and the Progressive Labor Party (PLP).

During the altercation several blows were exchanged and a witness said leaflets and signs carried by YSA personnel were destroyed.

The YSA and the PLP have been at odds since the Nov. 17 CACTI coalition meeting in which the PLP—one of the groups of the coalition—voted to exclude the YSA from the coalition. The reasons for this are unclear, but a spokesperson from the coalition said it was because of the YSA's history of disruptive tactics.

Shortly after the board meeting, however, the YSA office in the Union was vandalized. The telephone was ripped out, a mimeograph machine was thrown to the floor, files and posted literature were destroyed and ink and lighter fluid were poured onto papers, a spokesperson from the YSA said.

The Department of Public Safety is investigating the incident.

Stevens then lowered his voice, leaned over the podium and asked, "Would you work here?"

And he answered loudly, "Sure, everyone would take a job, house, good medical care. The facilities are here, but not happening because of socialism won't let it. The corporations wouldn't make money."

"But it can be done. It is the communist party and organized youth movements that is an ally of socialism," said Stevens.

Women, children discussed at Kellogg Center caucus

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer

Two women from different backgrounds addressed participants in a Michigan Women's Commission conference "Women and Children" Saturday at Kellogg Center.

Rev. Allison Cheek, one of the first 11 women in the nation named in the Episcopal church in a controversial move last year, spoke on the role of women in the Church.

In her speech, Cheek outlined problems women have faced in church dealings through history. History is bad, bad news for women, she said. "Many traditional attitudes have been formed by religion."

Cheek, who serves as an assistant at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Annandale, Va., said Ford's place of work, said she has been consistently criticized by the hierarchy of the Episcopal church. She added that this does not surprise her.

There has never been a time when women were regarded as equal men," Cheek told the audience. "We have never been regarded as total equals, especially within the church."

Another participant in the conference, L. Eudora Pettigrew, MSU professor of urban metropolitan studies, spoke of Education as a Socialization process.

Pettigrew said that male and female roles in society have been stereotyped and supported by the schools. She pointed to a lawsuit in Kalamazoo where text books had been found to consistently portray "Mothers often reinforce their own values in their children. A child is usually the product of what he and she sees in the views of others."

Pettigrew said little girls are taught to look for approval and that it is appropriate to give up career plans in order to marry, while no such advice is given to men.

She said young college women view femininity, or marriage and career success as desirable but mutually exclusive ends. She added that though women often equal or excel men in school achievement, "after school days are over, the great majority cease to compete with men in the world of work."

Honor results in huge reward

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — "Reward to finder" usually means a token payment to someone who returns something of value they've found. Three high school girls here did much better.

Barbara Patton and sisters Lucille and Jeanie Minton found — and returned — a money bag containing $2,200 in football game receipts.

That was nearly three weeks ago, and they each received $100.

Now comes an offer of $2,000 scholarships each to Midway, Ky. College for the girls. "They are certainly the type of girls we want to see over here," Assistant President Ed Presler said.

Pettigrew

men in dominant roles and females in submissive ones.

"Our schools adopt values from society," she said. "The opposite is very rarely true."

She blamed schools for perpetuating traditional roles.

"School is a feminine place where conformity is taught by conformist women. This creates problems for both boys and girls."

Pettigrew also said that women as mothers are responsible for the continuation of stereotypes.

be dependent on others while little boys are expected to become self-reliant.

These roles are particularly reinforced when children reach maturity.

"It is not only that our culture values male productivity over female productivity," Pettigrew said, "but women are also taught to measure themselves by male criteria."

Pettigrew, the first black woman to become a full MSU professor, told the audience that women are often counseled

MSU icers split series

By EDWARD L. RONDERS
State News Sports Writer

Two contrasting scenes in the MSU locker room told the story as the Spartans split with WCHA rival Minnesota Friday and Saturday nights.

MSU captured the opening contest 3-1 Friday night while the Gophers forged back Saturday night to garner a 4-2 victory.

Following the Spartan win Friday night players jumped about the MSU dressing room. Kelly Cahill conversed freely with reporters; Daryl Rice explained the victory to interrogators and trainer Gayle Robinson busily worked on abused equipment.

The bruises were left on the ice where the defending WCHA champions Gophers fell victim to their own game.

Herb Brooks' contingent charged the Spartan offensive zone from the opening faceoff Friday night, leaving bodily imprints on the Spartan performers. However, the first place Spartans matched Minnesota crunch for crunch and refused to be intimidated.

There was no scoring in the opening 20 minutes, but both squads scored heavily in the bruise department with Minnesota's Russ Anderson nearly laying claim to a season pass to the penalty box. The 6-foot-2, 210-pound Gopher defenseman gathered six minutes worth of penalties in the opening period.

Spartan goalie Dave Versical was outstanding in the MSU net, blocking 13 Minnesota shots during the first period. However, MSU All-American Tom Ross made the play of the game, if not the season, when Versical had stopped a Gopher shot from point blank range. The freshman netminder was out of position to stop the rebound which had caromed onto Reed Larson's stick. The Gopher defenseman let fly with a quick wrist shot, but Ross swooped in from nowhere and made a sliding save on Larson's dart.

Both teams continued their sturdy checking in the second period with leftwinger John Sturges putting MSU into a 1-0 lead with his fifth goal of the campaign at the 5:09 mark. Ross drew an assist on the play to stretch his consecutive game scoring streak to 74 games.

In the third period, Spartan senior center, Steve Colp upped the MSU lead to 2-0. He took a pass from behind the Gopher net, faked to his right and quickly moved to his left, 10 feet in front of Minnesota goalie Tom Mohr, where he let fly a quick backhand into the net. Colp's tally came at the 7:23 mark.

Tom Vannelli narrowed the gap to 2-1, scoring a power play goal at 8:30 for Minnesota.

The score remained that way until Brooks pulled his goalie with one minute remaining. After thwarting the Gophers, senior rightwinger Brendon Maroney flipped a shot from the blue line which found its way into the empty Gopher net.

Saturday night started much the same for the two teams with stiff body checking highlighting the action. Tom Ross extended his consecutive game scoring streak to 75 when he drilled home a low shot during a power play at the 3:17 mark.

Reed Larson returned the compliment during a Minnesota man advantage. The 6-foot, 185-pound defenseman found the range from the point to beat Versical at 10:34.

Ross tallied his second goal power play goal, and his 17th of the season at 16:54 with assists going to Colp and Rice.

Both squads then seemed to revert to more of a skating game after Ross' second goal. The Gophers evened matters at 2-2, at 8:19 of the middle period when Bill Baker notched his first score of the season.

Then with defenseman Jeff Barr sitting out two minutes for high sticking, Warren Miller gave Minnesota the lead for good when he took a pass from behind the net and beat Versical.

The score remained that way until Miller scored an empty net goal at 19:54 of the third period.

The Spartan locker room was subdued Saturday night, marked contrast to Friday's victorious gathering.

Kelly Cahill sat dejectedly on our hitting game after we got the first goal," the junior defenseman said. "When we stopped hitting that gave extra time for Minnesota to find the open man."

In categorizing the defending WCHA champions, Cahill continued, "Minnesota is a good skating team, but they're not as good as I thought they would be. If they don't improve, don't think they'll go very far this year."

Meanwhile, Minnesota coach Herb Brooks basked in the light of victory outside the Gopher dressing room. "Our penalty killing effort this weekend was the best we've had this season," he declared.

"I thought we played well Friday night, but Michigan State's top two lines are the very best we've seen. We tried to play it a little tighter on our offensive zone," he said.

"Our kids just worked the behinds off tonight."

Bessone returned the compliments, saying, "Our win wasn't covering their defensive. Consequently Minnesota got an awful lot of three on two breaks."

And, back in the Spartan locker room, the gloom of defeat slowly lifted as the players began to stir. Finally someone yelled out, "We're the road next week. We go win two!"

MSU grazes Iowa, 27-23

By PEGGY GOSSETT
State News Staff Writer

MSU kept up a steady stride over Iowa Saturday which resulted in a slim but sure 27-23 Spartan victory, leaving MSU tied with Purdue for third place in the Big Ten, both with 4-4 league records.

Quarterback Charlie Baggett led MSU's scoring in his last collegiate game with one and 11 yard runs and an 82-yard scoring strike, MSU's longest of the season, to freshman Kirk Gibson. MSU's other score came on a dash by tailback Rich Baes on MSU's first touchdown drive.

Both team stayed neck in neck with points, executing one big play after another and not letting each other out of seven point sight.

"I did not like the way the ball game was going at all, with all big plays," said MSU head coach Denny Stolz.

Though Baggett threw no interceptions for the second game in a row, his power did not always ruffle the Hawkeyes' feathers as he donated to one of their "big plays" when he fumbled in the end zone and Iowa tackle Rick Marsh pounced on the ball for an abrupt Hawkeye touchdown.

The MSU fumble proved to be their only donation to the opponent's side of the scoreboard contrary to previous games where this sometimes seemed ordinary procedure for MSU.

Sixteen of the Hawkeyes' 22 starters were returning seniors, which, coupled with their unique Wing-T offense formation, proved more powerful than the sometimes wavering Spartans expected.

"That's by far the best Iowa team ever," Stolz said. "And that damned Wing-T offense is just plain difficult. We were kind of soft against that."

Not soft enough to allow the Hawkeyes to fly by, however.

The shuffled MSU defense plagued by injuries this season kept Iowa down except for two blatant holes in the line which allowed Iowa's 42 and 55-yard first quarter touchdown runs. After that the MSU defense tightened up, leaving Iowa to five punts on four downs and one unsuccessful 49-yard field goal attempt.

Unexpectedly, MSU co-captain Greg Schaum played nearly the entire game with an ankle injured in practice 10 days ago, described by MSU tackle Jim Thomas to be swollen twice the size of his thigh.

"It was Greg's last game and he had the drive and the guts to get out there and play," Stolz elaborated after the game.

"For all the seniors this was an important game."

Senior Baggett and junior Levi Jackson walked off with the records Saturday. Baggett rushed for 79 yards and passed for 146 for an all-time MSU record of 4,041 total offense in his career. A tremendous 1,399 of those yards were tallied this season, and Baggett is now one of nine players in Big Ten history to break the 4,000 yard mark.

Jackson became the third MSU player ever to hit the 1,000 yards rushing on a third quarter drive, and added another 63 yards during the game to bring his record to a monumental 1,063 total yards. He had 180 yards in 24 rushes alone Saturday.

Eric Allen, MSU All-American four years ago, trails Baggett's record with 2,654 yards.

The teams' first quarter touchdowns — ping-pong style — started with Iowa's fullback Mark Fetter sprinting 42 yards through a gap in MSU's line. MSU retaliated with a piercing 86-yard drive to the three-yard line where walk-on tailback Rich Baes carried over and Hans Nielsen's kick was good for the extra point.

Two minutes and 20 seconds later Iowa halfback Dave Schick sliced the MSU line for a 55-yard touchdown run, putting Iowa ahead once again, 14-7.

Not to be outdone, Baggett and freshman wide receiver Kirk Gibson teamed up for an 82-yard pass-run play to even up the score once again. Baggett threw a smooth 50-yard pass and Gibson outdared the Iowans for the remaining 32. Another Nielsen kick made it 14-14.

MSU's second-quarter drives were unsuccessful and a bleak tied half-time score looked inevitable until MSU's Craig Fedore recovered a Schick fumble on the Iowa 14 yardline with 48 seconds to play.

Baggett then darted around the Iowa right for two yards, then rolled to the left and two-stepped about the stunned Iowa linemen for the touchdown. Nielsen's kick was good again for the point after.

The 21-14 half-time lead proved crucial to MSU.

On the second half kickoff MSU's Tyrone Wilson slipped on the ice-laden turf and Baggett fumbled two plays later in the end zone which allowed the fateful Iowa score. Not until the fourth quarter did Baggett sneak from the one yardline for MSU's final scoring drive, after giving up two drives in the third quarter ending with a John Powers punt and a Baggett incompletion.

Nielsen missed the point after, only the second miss in his career, giving the Spartans a six-point lead.

While the OSU victory over U-M was announced amidst a boisterous crowd of 42,300 at Kinnick Stadium, the Hawkeyes nearly matched MSU's points once again with a 46-yard pass by Butch Caldwell to Bill Schultz. The Spartan defense held, however, and Baggett led the takeover on MSU's 12 yardline.

Baggett suffered a possible concussion on the next play, however, so second string quarterback Marshall Lawson took over with instructions to fall into the end zone for an intentional safety. The two points put Iowa just four points under MSU, but a Caldwell fumble two plays later enabled the Spartans to run the remaining one minute out.

That's because when a team

U-M, Ishpeming and Hudson — high school football playoffs

By MARTY SOMMERNESS
State News Sports Writer

KALAMAZOO — Nov. 22 was football Saturday in Michigan.

It was the day of the much-heralded first Michigan High School Athletic Assn. football finals.

At Western Michigan University's Waldo Stadium, in the city made famous by Glenn Miller's song, the Livonia Franklin Patriots were pitted against the Traverse City Trojans in class A action while the Crystal Falls Forest Park squad was matched with the Flint Holy Rosary team in the class D championship.

The more than 5,000 people from across the state who had journeyed to Kalamazoo were not only interested in what happened at that Western Michigan stadium. They were interested in what happened in Mt. Pleasant at the Central Michigan University stadium where Dearborn Divine Child went against Saginaw Douglas MacArthur for the class B crown and nationally famed Hudson Area High and Ishpeming clashed for the class C crown.

The fans in Kalamazoo were also interested in what would eventually become the 21-14 skinning of the Michigan Wolverines by Woody Hayes' men in Ann Arbor. As for the MSU football squad, well, for all the Kalamazoo fans cared, the Spartans were in another country.

The opening conflict at Waldo stadium was more akin to a wholesale slaughter than a football game as the Upper Peninsula team from Crystal Falls Forest Park slaughtered Flint Holy Rosary 50-0.

The 25,000-seat stadium was only about one-fifth full for the class D championship game. Most of the spectators at the contest were Traverse City fans who had arrived early to participate in the state championship festivities. However, those few fans who traveled more than 500 miles to witness the Crystal Falls victory were ecstatic and fiercely loyal.

"Ya-hoo, that's another U.P. victory," yelled a happy Crystal Falls fan when the 38-22 Ishpeming win over class C powerhouse Hudson was announced.

"Those 'Yoops' sure play football," said an Upper Peninsula supporter when he learned that Hudson's 72-game winning streak was halted.

"That Sports Illustrated thing about the Hudson team was the kiss of death," said one sportswriter in the crowded pressbox.

The stadium may not have been packed, but media men who had backed the idea of high school football playoffs and finals were out in force. Personnel from several radio stations had their own broadcasting booths. The wire services had their representatives and numerous newspapers had their own reporters and photographers at the event.

While busloads of Traverse City and Livonia Franklin fans entered the stadium, the newsmen and the Western Michigan sports information personnel shared the male camaraderie of autumn days, the gridiron and chili as they watched the clash of the two Big Ten giants on several portable televisions.

Then, the game began.

Traverse City, the team that had come to Kalamazoo with a 10-0 season record, and had averaged more than 34 points per game, should have, as the saying goes, stayed in bed.

Livonia Franklin, playing the same ball control offense that had been put to good use by Traverse City during the regular season, used a hard-hitting defense to stop the Trojans 21-7.

In all of the commotion of the class A championship, no one seemed to notice that Dearborn Divine Child had trounced Saginaw MacArthur 21-0 in the class B final at Central Michigan.

The power play is not what it appears to be.

To many fans, it's the two-minute interval when their team (which has a man advantage) is supposed to swarm into the opposition's zone, take target practice with unmerciful slap shots from the blueline, and score a goal.

On the other hand, it is also, perhaps, the most difficult of offensive plays in the game. Each pass must be accurate—there is no room for mistakes. Out of eleven players on the ice, 10 are concentrated within the relatively small area inside the blueline, and this cramps any offensive play.

"It's like the final move in a game of chess," said Pat Betterly MSU defenseman and integral part of the Spartan power play. "Sometimes you win, and sometimes it ends in a stalemate. You just hope no one messes up."

The object on the power play, of course, is to score a goal. But from the seats in Munn Arena, or any other hockey arena, this looks infinitely easier than it is.

"All of the pressure is on the offense," Betterly said. "Because the defense just has to get the puck and shoot it down the ice."

That's because when a team is shorthanded, they can shoot the puck the length of the ice without being called for icing and incurring a face off in their zone. It's one consolation for breaking the rules.

Going into their series with Minnesota this weekend, the Spartans had been particularly effective in their power play attempts. They had converted (scored on) 20 of 55 opportunities for a .364 per cent average.

But Friday, for the first time this season, the MSU power play unit was held scoreless for the entire game. And Saturday night, the Spartan team of Tom Ross, Steve Colp, Daryl Rice, John Sturges and Betterly hit on only two of seven chances.

Meanwhile, MSU's defense has held opposing teams to just a .188 per cent conversion average.

Many hockey fans expect a team to score on nearly every man advantage opportunity they have. But those who know (coaches and players) realize it just isn't that easy to come up with many shots, let alone score every time.

"If we can get two or three good shots on a power play, then they (players) are doing their job," Coach Amo Bessone said.

"The fans get upset when one of our players takes the puck behind our net, but that's what we want, we have to set up the play," he said.

Rightwinger Rob Harris said a team can't expect more than a goal a game on the power play. The Spartans started out Saturday night with two power play goals in the first period, and appeared as though they were going to skate away with the game.

"When they got those two quick ones, I thought we were going to be in for a long night," Minnesota Coach Herb Brooks said after Saturday's game.

But from then on, the power play lost its teeth and was without further success. But considering it came up with two goals, all was not lost.

"The power play had its shots, they did their job," Betterly said. "The puck just wasn't bouncing right."

Tom Ross and skating visions

The slow glide, hockey pucks and shining skates... Well folks, you may be interested in knowing that admiration for the MSU hockey players increased by a substantial margin over the weekend. Yes, there's no doubt about it, the guys are pretty talented.

It looks so easy when you are standing on the other side of glass watching those guys skate around. Nothing to it at all. If you didn't know better, you would almost think that they are running around on a cement floor wearing tennis shoes.

I hadn't been ice skating in about 10 or 12 years but Saturday I put on some skates and gave it a try because, after all, those MSU hockey players made it look so easy.

After putting on the skates, I realized that one is supposed to stand up on these two skinny little blades and I thought to myself, "This is ridiculous, if not impossible."

So I took a few hesitant steps and while my ankles wobbled a I managed to avoid crumpling to the floor in a soggy heap.

Next came the hard part, stepping onto the ice. I began thinking, "Hell, that is ice. Ice is slippery. Here I am, standing on these two little blades, getting ready to step on this frozen water where I will probably, after taking maybe

Monster Zronks gobble Glerks till YOU unleash the mad mutant

By JONI CIPRIANO

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to play god? Don Weinshank, associate professor of natural science at MSU, gives his students a little taste of power of that degree through the use of computerized games which teach some of the fundamental ideas of genetics, evolution and natural selection. The game, originally developed at Beloit College in Wisconsin, allows the student to control a population of "Zronks" and "Glerks."

"The strong Zronks prey upon the four-legged Glerks — peace-loving creatures that escape about half of the Zronk attacks," Weinshank explained. "An eight-legged mutant arises among the Glerks, giving them a better chance of survival against the deadly Zronks."

At this point, the student takes over and plays "god."

By typing the appropriate directions into a computer terminal, the student can simulate the real world, controlling the Glerk birth rate and the ability of the eight-legged mutants to survive. The computer calculates what happens in mating and predation and projects the future of the Glerks and the spread or disappearance of the mutant gene.

"This computer game allows students to make informed decisions about questions that are intrinsically mathematical," Weinshank said.

He believes that one of the present problems in teaching science at college levels is the fact that many high school graduates often do not understand basic mathematical principles. This computer game allows the student to appreciate, if not fully understand, the mathematical role in future decision-making.

"What we're trying to do is show people who are not going to be scientists how science works," he said. "If people are to be responsible citizens, they should appreciate the mathematical decisions involved in science."

Second WJIM hearing set

ACLU lawyer Shulman agreed with Chachkin adding that there was a fair amount of testimony about the suppression of news both in the cable TV incidents and unfavorable treatment of non-advertisers by Gross and his station.

"The case against Gross is very strong. It might take a couple of years but the people of Lansing will have a new person running their airway," Shulman said.

Gross' lawyer Leo Farhat said that, while he has not really sponsored any witnesses at this hearing, time will tell, and that Gross will be vindicated.

It is largely agreed that even though there is proof that Gross told his news crews to not cover certain people, he will argue that his intentions were not malicious or even self-serving but made in the context of subjective newsworthiness of stories, which is his right as a broadcaster.

Even with that defense, there are still other alleged violations of a technical nature that Gross will face in the February hearing.

These technical violations include cutting of national network commercials and programming (called clipping) and substituting local commercials while getting paid for both and not showing enough public interest programming as required by the FCC.

Tax increase

(continued from page 1) SALT, said the sad thing about their decision is that they do not have an answer that would serve as an alternative to the tax increase.

"We say we aren't in favor of the tax increase but we don't have an answer to the state fiscal problems that would substitute for the tax increase," he said.

SALT, an organization of student leaders from universities and colleges all over Michigan, was formed in August to see what a collective organization of students could do on a state level to maintain quality education and to insure that no citizen be denied access to that education due to rising tuition.

SALT representatives also discussed the possibility of a mass demonstration at the Capitol sponsored by themselves as well as other interested groups such as the Michigan Higher Education Student Assn. and the Michigan Education Assn.

SALT will meet again in mid-January.

Social activities slated in Village

There is a great deal of isolation in married student housing, one resident of Spartan Village believes, and to combat it she is trying to start a social activity that will open residents' doors to their neighbors.

Beth Tallmadge, a member of the MSU Married Students Union, is organizing a "Cookies and Coffee" hour in each section of village buildings in an attempt to "put a crack in the door before winter isolation sets in."

Tallmadge's plan calls for village residents to rotate entertaining other residents who live in the same number building.

ding they live in. The would meet once a week each apartment would have others about once every months.

Tallmadge said the together could serve as a for residents to talk about problems in the villages and gain information as well place to make new friends.

The "Coffee and Cookies" together are scheduled begin this Wednesday. Information about the first together will be posted Spartan Village laundry and placed in residents' boxes.

Club to sponsor cheese sale

By JANET JEHL

Nearly 9,500 pounds of cheese will go on sale starting Monday in 122 Anthony Hall.

The cheese sale is part of an annual fund-raising drive for the MSU Dairy Club's annual spring trip. Last year the club went south to Kentucky to visit various dairy farms in that area. The money earned from the sale paid for transportation and lodging for each member of the club during the five-day trip. Tim Middleton, vice president, is the chief organizer of the sale.

He said there are 11 kinds of cheese to choose from, including: Chocolate, Cheddar, Edam, Brick, Hickory-smoked, Colby, Caraway, Gouda and three spreads, Brandy, Wine and Bleu cheese.

The packages come in four sizes ranging from a selection of five cheeses to a selection of eleven cheeses. Middleton said the selections are gift-boxed and can be sent all over the country.

"Each package is guaranteed to be fresh and will be replaced if it is damaged in any way," Middleton said.

He said the cheese was made here at MSU but was processed at Herbrucks, a cheese store in St. Johns. This is the first time the club has used cheese from MSU for the sale.

"It was just a coincidence that the cheese was made here," Middleton said. "We got it from Herbrucks because they were the only place in the area who had the quantity we needed at the time."

Middleton said the club is shooting for $5,500 in profits from the $22,000 worth of cheese.

Six committees have been set up to organize the various aspects of the sale.

Middleton said the bean feed committee is responsible for the annual bean feed which brings together club members, dairy majors, professors and science alumni for a free in exchange for their help packaging the cheese to be sold. The sale will be going Monday through Friday, through 5 p.m. until Dec. 1.
