

Tuition hike: Pay now -- and later

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer

Thousands of students registering for Winter Term courses were somewhat mystified when the much-anticipated $1-per-credit-hour tuition increase was not assessed during registration.

The University, however, has not decided against levying the increment. Students will be billed sometime during Winter Term, according to a statement issued by President Wharton early last month.

In that statement, Wharton said the increase was necessitated by reduced state appropriations to MSU as part of general cutbacks to meet the statewide budget deficit.

An executive order from Gov. Milliken to trim close to $124 million from the state's $3 billion budget meant that $1.2 million in state appropriations to MSU would have to be cut.

Because of the lateness of the order — coming at the end of fall term — students were assessed last term's tuition rates during Winter Term registration.

Students were notified late in Fall Term that the $1-per-hour increase, approved last September as a contingency measure by the board of trustees, would be assessed winter and spring terms.

The increase means that undergraduates paying in-state fees will pay $19.50 per credit, and out-state students will pay $40.50 per credit.

In-state graduate students will be charged $23 per credit while non-Michigan graduate students will shell out $44 per credit.

Billing and payment of the increase will follow the same procedure as when students add credit hours after their fees are paid. Failure to make payments will mean a hold card at spring term registration, unless payment is on a deferred-payment basis.

Officials in the University budget office estimate that the increase — averaging $13 per student — will bring about $900,000 to the general operating fund. But this still leaves the University short some $300,000.

That $300,000 will have to be made up through further retrenchment in academic and nonacademic areas, said Robert Perrin, vice president for University and Federal Relations.

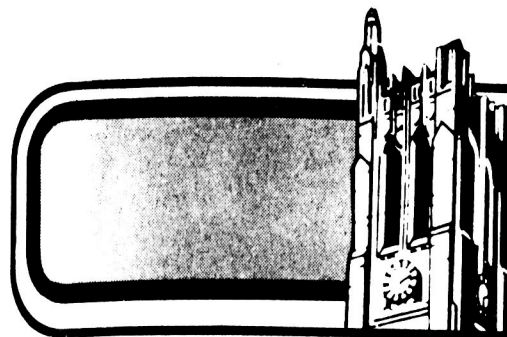

"It's going to have to come out of our operating budgets," Perrin said Tuesday afternoon. "The exact procedure for meeting that deficit has not been put into effect yet."

Perrin called the possibility of the state returning any of the reduced funds to the University "wishful thinking" but conceivable.

"Theoretically, the (state) deficit is not as big as anticipated and theoretically some of the money could be returned to the institution," Perrin said.

Perrin said that action, and subsequent refunds to students, do not seem likely, however.

S. Africa set back in Angola

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa announced Tuesday that a brigadier and five other military men had been killed in the fighting area along the Angolan border — four in a plane crash and two from wounds suffered in "action."

Defense headquarters in Pretoria did not say whether the light plane crash was an accident or the result of military action.

The Soviet news agency Tass reported Tuesday that South African forces had suffered "heavy losses" near several Angolan towns and that a large contingent of "regular shock troops" had been sent in to reinforce them.

In the South African military, a brigadier is a senior officer of rank falling roughly between full colonel and brigadier general in the U.S. Army. Others reported dead in the crash were two captains and a sergeant.

It was the largest toll announced at once since South African troops began supporting National Union UNITA forces fighting the Soviet-backed Popular Movement MPLA faction in the Angolan civil war. The total South African death toll since November is now put at 24, plus three listed as missing.

South Africa never says specifically whether the casualties result from fighting in Angola or from action against black nationalist guerrillas in South-West Africa, the territory under South African control bordering Angola.

French opposition was reported Tuesday to be preventing a combined campaign by the nine-nation European Common Market for the end of foreign military intervention in the former Portuguese colony. Word of the split came from West German officials as the Bonn government announced it had appealed to a dozen African nations to argue for the end of foreign intervention and establishment of a coalition government when the Organization of African Unity meets Thursday.

The West German appeal parallels similar but separate appeals for peace in Angola from Washington and London and was received positively by African governments, the Bonn sources said.

Though the West German government would not reveal the differences between France and her Common Market partners, other sources in Bonn said one problem was France's refusal to heed West German and British requests to halt weapons exports to the embattled country on the southwest coast of Africa.

The French government neither admits nor denies sending arms to Angola. The Foreign Ministry in Paris argues that it would be dangerous for European nations, most of whom were once colonial powers, to seem to be giving advice to Africans jealous of their independence.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim also announced Tuesday that "any foreign intervention in Angola should be stopped." A spokesman said that meant everything — troops, mercenaries, arms and money.

The West German sources said Bonn's appeal had gone to the governments of Liberia, Ghana, Zambia, Malawi, Uganda, Tanzania, Nigeria, Kenya, Zaire, Egypt, Tunisia and Morocco.

Though South Africa says officially only that it has men in Angola to protect a hydro-electric project it is financing just inside the Angolan border, there are reported to be several thousand men helping UNITA.

Several thousand Cuban troops are reported to be assisting the Soviet-backed MPLA, and a third group, the National

'Overawards' on grants discovered in state audit

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

An official state audit has revealed discrepancies in the state Board of Education's operations that have resulted in "overawards" of scholarships and grants to college students, inaccurate bookkeeping between the federal and state governments and slow efforts to collect defaulted student loans.

The audit, which studied the board's operations from February 1973 through March 1975, listed internal negligence in bookkeeping and various situations which could result in the mismanagement of funds, according to the State Office of the Auditor General.

Franklin Pinkelman, Deputy Auditor General, said that the discrepancies that were found in the Board of Education's operation do not appear to presently cut down on the board's effectiveness in dealing with appropriations to students.

"It's difficult to say that items, individually or collectively, have a significant impact on the program," Pinkelman said. "We didn't find any hanky-panky. People think all we do is run out and look to see if people are copying cash."

Pinkelman said that the state Board of Education has faithfully corrected problems in the past, but the current discrepancies are in violation of the board's own rules, and not any rules established by the auditing office.

"They are required by their own rules to do something are they're not doing it," Pinkelman said.

Ronald Jursa, director of student financial aids for the state board, said that he concurs with most of the auditor's findings.

"I think it's no question that it (the auditor's recommendations) is ideal office practice," Jursa said. He added that the lack of staff is the reason for most of the internal discrepancies, such as not keeping adequate records, not checking with the state's Office of Management and Budget, and not promptly setting records straight between the federal and state governments over defaulted student loans.

Jursa did "raise some objection" to the section in the audit which said that there were "many errors resulting in overawards which should have been detected in the review process." He said that the lack of personnel caused the department to ask panels of college financial aid counselors to review student aid requests on a part-time basis and that such panels may overaward. But Jursa said that such an occurrence is infrequent.

The auditor's office would not say how often or how much the overawards were.

The audit also revealed that during "20 of the 25 months" covered by the audit, the state was found negligent in its duties in transferring funds to the federal government after collecting defaulted student loans. The state assumes responsibility for a default on a student loan when it pays the educational institution for the loan and tries to collect. The federal government, in turn, pays the state 80 per cent of the loan while the state is trying to collect. When the state finally collects on the defaulted loan, it

SPARTAN HEARING SET FOR JAN. 18

NCAA to hear MSU appeal

By EDWARD L. RONDERS
State News Sports Writer

The final chapter in the nearly year-long saga of MSU football and the NCAA is about to be written.

President Wharton has announced that the University was notified Tuesday that MSU's appeal to the NCAA Council of "certain findings and proposed penalties for alleged football recruiting violations," has been scheduled for Jan. 19 in St. Louis.

Prior to Tuesday, University officials claimed they had no knowledge of the specific hearing date, stating only that it would be held sometime during the Council's next meeting Jan. 11-13. However, one source told the State News that he was informed of the hearing date "as long as two or three weeks ago."

According to an NCAA spokesman, the University will make its appeal to the 13-member NCAA tribunal and " . . . there won't be any final decisions coming from St. Louis . . ." on Jan. 19 regarding the disposition of the case.

John Fuzak, director of the School of Advanced Studies at MSU and president of the NCAA, said Tuesday that "normally these appeals are disposed of in a few days. But, each appeal is unique and there's really no set time limit. It may take a week or possibly just a day or two to reach a final decision."

Fuzak is also chairman of the Council, but according to NCAA bylaws he will step aside for the MSU appeal.

Wharton said Tuesday that his own four-man committee, appointed last year to study the NCAA charges against MSU, would represent the University in St. Louis.

The committee members include John Bruff, D. Fraser, a member of the MSU Board of Trustees; Jacob A. Hofer, professor of animal husbandry; Charles S.

ASMSU, PIRGIM issues form registration ballots

By CAROLE LEIGH HUTTON
State News Staff Writer

Entering a year that holds many interesting and important elections in store, MSU students got some practice at the polls during registration for this term.

Undergraduates registering for classes for Winter term had the option of voting on a fifty cent tax increase up to $1 for ASMSU. Graduate students were asked to vote on the PIRGIM referendum requesting that graduate students have the option of contributing $1 to PIRGIM at registration as undergraduates presently do.

The Union Activities Board (UAB) had petitioned to be on the ballot to request a fifty cent tax on students, but failed to receive the necessary number of signatures.

Though the voting was interrupted by winter vacation, all the ballots will be tallied together. They will be counted by computer and PIRGIM expects its results by Thursday or Friday, while ASMSU results will be available early next week.

Campaigning by both groups was at a minimum. ASMSU President Brian Raymond said that there was very little done by ASMSU in the way of vote-getting.

"It was really a low-keyed type thing," Raymond said. "We didn't do any real campaigning that I can think of — just a letter to the editor Fall term."

PIRGIM volunteers were passing out leaflets at registration in front of the Men's Intramural Building, which is something the group does every term. This term they distributed a guide to selling used text books.

Bernie Schaefer, co-chairperson of PIRGIM, was at the building to oversee the volunteer workers manning the ballot tables. "Most students seem to be voting," he said, "or at least most were putting

MSU student raped in hall

A resident of East McDonell Hall was raped in a stairwell there shortly after 11 p.m. Sunday.

She had been playing piano in the basement when a black man in his mid-20s entered the room and forced her to go to the stairwell where he raped her.

He reportedly wore a short beard and an afro hairstyle. He also wore two army fatigue shirts and a cloth band around his head.

The woman screamed but the man put his hand over her mouth and threatened to shoot her if she fought back or made any noise. However, police say that the man never showed a weapon of any kind. The man is still being sought.

Judge fines literary appraiser

CHICAGO (AP) — Literary appraiser Ralph G. Newman was fined $10,000 by a federal judge Tuesday for involvement in backdating Richard M. Nixon's personal papers, a move that gave the former president an illegal $450,000 income tax deduction.

Judge Frank J. McGarr of U.S. District Court said neither a prison term nor probation was appropriate for Newman, 64, who was convicted Nov. 12 on charges that he lied to federal agents and falsified documents.

Newman could have been sentenced to a total of eight years in prison and fined $15,000.

National starts flying again

(UPI) — National Airlines, grounded for 127 days by a flight attendants' strike, resumed air service Tuesday on a "bare bones" basis. The airline expects to have half of its normal schedule in operation by Thursday.

The flight attendants' strike, which began Sept. 2, was the longest in National's history and the third longest ever against a U.S. airline.

Fire guts Pentagon cafeteria

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fire which gutted a cafeteria in the Pentagon caused about $400,000 damage, officials said Tuesday.

The preliminary estimate was made as government investigators attempted to learn the cause of the blaze, which burned for an hour Monday only 50 feet away from the building's military nerve center.

Turkey negotiations resumed

ANKARA (AP) — Turkey and the United States have resumed negotiations toward the establishment of a revised bilateral defense pact after several weeks of Christmas recess, officials said Tuesday.

They said the talks, at the level of technical experts, began Monday and that the two sides would now meet regularly.

Turkey is seeking guarantees for America's contribution to its defense needs in the wake of the arms embargo imposed by the U.S. Congress last February because of Turkey's invasion of Cyprus in the summer of 1974. The embargo has since been partially lifted.

The United States hopes to reactivate its two dozen military installations here, shut down last July in reprisal for the embargo.

Beirut battles break out again

BEIRUT (AP) — Fierce battles broke out Tuesday between Palestinian guerrillas and Christian militiamen who have blocked a food convoy from reaching Palestinian refugee camps on Beirut's outskirts.

The rocket, mortar and machine-gun fighting quickly spread to six suburbs. Officials expressed fear it would lead to a new round in Lebanon's nine-month-old civil war, with increased Palestinian participation on the side of leftist Moslem militias.

Food prices strike ends

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Thai government and the Federation of Labor Unions of Thailand reached a compromise on food prices Tuesday, ending a five-day-old strike.

The end of the strike was announced after Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj and Federation President Phaisarn Thawachainand signed a six-point agreement on the future control of rice and sugar prices. Some 24 state and 50 private enterprises in Bangkok and neighboring provinces were affected by the strike.

British soldiers sent to Ireland

LONDON (AP) — British leaders ordered 600 more soldiers to Northern Ireland on Tuesday but rejected Protestant calls to "declare outright war" against the underground Irish Republican Army, a mainly Roman Catholic movement.

An infantry battalion normally kept on standby in England for use in emergencies was dispatched to South Armagh where five Roman Catholics and 10 Protestants have been slain in two days by sectarian gunmen. The move doubles the number of troops in the South Armagh area.

Announcement of the troop movement came from No. 10 Downing Street after Prime Minister Harold Wilson summoned key advisers for talks on the worsening security situation in the province.

Police baffled by slaying

ATHENS (AP) — Police said Tuesday they still had no clues that might lead them to the three masked assailants who shot and killed Richard S. Welch, the Central Intelligence Agency's station chief here, two weeks ago.

Welch, who was assassinated on Dec. 23, was buried Tuesday in a military ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery outside Washington. President Ford, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and CIA Director William Colby attended a 20-minute nondenominational service for Welch at the Memorial Chapel of Ft. Myer, adjacent to the cemetery.

Illegal strike closes subway

MADRID (UPI) — An illegal strike for higher pay by 3,800 mass transit workers shut down the city's metropolitan and suburban subway system Tuesday in the first big test of the post-Franco government.

An emergency meeting of the full cabinet was called to deal with the situation, sources close to the government said.

The new monarchist government of King Juan Carlos has warned that it will hold the line against wage increases in an effort to solve Spain's serious economic problems and fight a 15 per cent annual inflation rate.

Watergate appeals underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer for Watergate cover-up defendant John D. Ehrlichman argued Tuesday that Ehrlichman was denied a fair trial because the jury did not hear testimony from former President Richard M. Nixon.

"He was producer, the director and the main actor in what this trial was all about," said Atty. William C. Frates as four men convicted in the Watergate cover-up took their case to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Arguing for the special Watergate prosecutor's office, Peter M. Kreindler said it was determined that Nixon was not healthy enough to appear at the trial.

Besides, Kreindler said, "There is no basis in this trial record that the result would have been any different if Mr. Nixon had testified."

Six of the nine members of the appeals court heard oral arguments slightly over a year after four of the five cover-up defendants were convicted of seeking to block the investigation into the original Watergate break-in.

Besides Ehrlichman, a former White House assistant, they are former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, former White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman and former Nixon re-election committee official Robert C. Mardian. Only Mardian appeared in the courtroom, where jury selection in their trial began Oct. 1, 1974 and a verdict was returned the next New Year's Day.

Possible jet ban raises ultimatum

TOULOUSE, France (AP) — The Communist-led union at the plant where the supersonic Concorde jetliner is made said Tuesday it would urge French airport workers not to service U.S. planes if America refuses to grant the Concorde landing rights.

Leaders of the General Confederation of Labor (CGT) at the National Aerospace Industries plant here said they would boycott U.S. products if the Concorde was banned from landing in America and would ask the government to take similar action.

Hearings were held Monday in Washington on an application by British and French airlines to use the plane, developed jointly by those two nations, on trans-Atlantic runs.

A ruling has been promised within 30 days. The plane is opposed by American conservationists and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

In a statement read at a news conference, CGT leaders said, "The persistence of an American blocking action against an advanced Franco-British product would only confirm the will of American officials to oppose at all costs the future of an aircraft opening the way to supersonic transport."

The British and French governments said Monday that the environmental dangers posed by the Concorde supersonic passenger jet were grossly exaggerated.

EPA assistant administrator Roger Strelow said Monday the introduction of Concorde service "runs directly counter to the noise abatement and other environmental policies and programs of the United States."

He said the plane would increase noise along airport flight paths where the Concorde is used, increase air pollution around, waste fuel and possibly increase skin cancer by depleting the earth's ozone layer, thus increasing ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

Strelow acknowledged that EPA's position was based not just on the limited number of Concorde flights now being proposed but also on the possibility of expanded SST service in the future. He said it was not unreasonable to assume that future applications for Concorde service would occur if the first limited flights were allowed.

Once lawyers for three of the four defendants had finished, prosecutor Kreindler said, "None of the defendants has challenged the evidence...they were convicted on evidence that left no doubt whatsoever about their guilt."

Lawyers for Haldeman and Mitchell argued that intense pretrial publicity prevented selection of an impartial jury.

Haldeman lawyer John Wilson said, "The American people were whipped up into a white heat by the publicity in this case."

Opinions of guilt were planted in the minds of possible jurors because of reports in The Washington Post and other publications, hearings by the Senate Watergate Committee and the House Judiciary Committee, plus court fights over possession of the White House tapes, Wilson said.

Mitchell lawyer William G. Hundley said trial Judge John J.

Sirica failed to find out if prospective jurors had firmly implanted opinions that the defendants were guilty.

Hundley said Sirica's handling of jury selection was "totally inadequate," because the judge did not ask potential jury members what they knew about Watergate.

The defendants face jail terms of 2 1/2 to eight years. Estimates vary, but the appeals court might wait six months before ruling, and Supreme Court appeals are certain if the defendants should lose.

Meanwhile, they remain free, and Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Mitchell are writing books.

Because one of the six appeals judges once worked as a law partner to Mardian's lawyer, his case is considered separately.

Heated campaigns begin

Heated charges over energy policy and Angola dominated the political scene in chilly New England on Tuesday as Sen. Henry M. Jackson launched his Democratic presidential campaign in Massachusetts and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan pressed on with his bid for the Republican nomination.

Reagan, campaigning in New Hampshire's White Mountains, criticized Congress for its opposition to military aid to Angola and said such help should continue.

"The Congress is being most irresponsible in its involvement in foreign affairs and it's time for us to make an evaluation of the whole international situation," he said.

President Ford, meanwhile, conferred with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on the civil war in Angola and a presidential spokesman indicated there was no progress in talks Monday between Kissinger and the Soviet ambassador regarding the conflict.

In Boston, Jackson kicked off his Massachusetts campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, saying the "real issue in this campaign is competence to govern."

Jackson told a crowd of about 100 supporters, "President Ford is a nice guy, but we need something more than a nice guy to be president of the United States. He simply is not effective."

Jackson's speech was the start of a two-day tour of key early primary states to include New York and Florida. The Massachusetts primary is the second in the nation, March 2. New Hampshire's primary is Feb. 24.

Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford was also in New Hampshire Tuesday, promising "bold approaches to straightening out the government."

Sanford, 56, on leave as Duke University president, said at a State House news conference he anticipated a hard campaign because of his late start and the number of candidates in the Feb. 24 Democratic contest.

Jackson, during a news conference, defended his position on forced busing, saying, "It's not a phony thing, it's a real thing." He explained his position would require courts to exhaust all other means of desegregating public schools before forced busing could be used "as a last resort."

At several stops Reagan touched on the Angolan situation, always taking a hard line and characterizing it as a violation of "the spirit of detente" by the Soviet Union.

"I think the Soviet Union is using detente to follow their aims for world conquest," Reagan said at the stop in Gorham.

Reagan was in the second day of his three-day tour of the state. He spent most of the day campaigning outdoors at ski resorts and shopping centers where temperatures remained below zero.

Reagan was questioned again about his proposal to shift a variety of federal social programs to the states. Ford backers have characterized the plan as possibly leading to increased state taxes.

New Hampshire is the only state with neither a general sales nor a personal income tax.

Sanford said he considers himself a "non-politician," and that his campaign staff in the state is "inadequate."

But he said he wants to bring "fresh and innovative and bold approaches to straightening out the government," although "it may be impossible for a non-politician to cope with the system" of running for president.

He said that "talk of cutting the budget by $90 million as proposed by Reagan, that's nonsense. We should be talking about improving government, not cutting budgets... We need government picking up its effectiveness..."

Czarnecki sets times for public

In most places, those people who spend your tax dollars are harder to get to than an itch in the middle of the back.

Not so anyone in East Lansing.

John Czarnecki, East Lansing city councilman, is now holding regular office hours, where disgruntled residents can undigress themselves to their heart's content.

Czarnecki says he will be someplace in City Hall, 410 Abbott Road (call to find out what room) on the first and third Mondays of each month, from 8 to 10 p.m.

The only councilmember to hold designated office hours, Czarnecki first proposed the idea during the recent election campaign.

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer
Aligned with the Michigan Attorney General's office, the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM) helped influence the Public Service Commission (PSC) in its decision to deny Michigan Bell Telephone the right to charge 20 cents for local information calls.

Roderick Coy, Asst. Attorney General, said that PIRGIM was "very beneficial" in the fight against the increase.

"In this battle it was fair to say that PIRGIM played a very significant part," Coy said.

The PSC, in a 3-0 decision Monday, rejected Bell Telephone's request to charge callers 20 cents for every information call over 3 a month. Both the Attorney General's office and PIRGIM said that the PSC used their arguments to defeat the Bell request.

The two groups argued against the increase during the summer as "co-interveners" before an administrative judge. The judge ruled against the groups and in favor of Bell Telephone, recommending that the PSC grant the company's request.

"We spent a lot of time in that case," said PIRGIM Legal Director Edward Petrini. He said that the transcript ran over 1,000 pages in length.

Petrini added that the PSC staff was originally against the groups in the trial's proceedings this summer.

Petrini said that the basic thrust of the arguments against the increase were that it was inequitable and that Bell Telephone did not carefully weigh other alternatives in asking for the increase.

"We thought the charge would be unfair to people who were looking for numbers that are not listed in the directory, especially students or groups who move around a lot," Petrini said. He said that some of the reasons people would seek informational assistance would be to find new numbers, discover if someone had disconnected their numbers or had moved out of town.

"The customer would also have been charged for calls that are outside of the area of their phone book but within the same area code," Petrini added. He said that would be true for someone in Lansing who wanted to find a number in Alpena because both cities have a 517 area code.

Petrini also said that Bell did not adequately study alternatives to the 20 cent charge.

"In our view and the commission's view, the studies were either slipshod or non-existent," Petrini said. He also added that PIRGIM did extensive research into the Telephone Company's arguments.

Coy said that this was the first time PIRGIM and the Michigan Attorney General's office ever put together a concerted effort in the area of public utilities.

Bell Telephone has not given up in its battle to get the charge instated by the PSC. However, Donald Lambe, assistant vice president of the company, said that it will file for the 20 cent charge again "in at least a year." He said that such a charge would create a savings of $10 million a year. Currently, it costs the company $25 million a year to provide directory assistance.

Closed-circuit TV courses expand to public channels

By ELLEN SPONSELLER
State News Staff Writer

Twelve MSU courses normally aired only on campus closed-circuit television will be broadcast over cable television in East Lansing beginning today, allowing students to view the courses for credit and other city residents to view the courses for fun.

The MSU Instructional Television Service (ITS) has selected twelve courses which should have the most potential value to off-campus students. Starting today, channels 19 and 20 of the National Cable system will carry the courses while the same courses are being aired over the 181 ITV stations on campus.

It will be the largest use of cable television ever by any institution of higher education in the United States. MSU will be the first school to use two channels full time, from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. on a cable television system, according to a survey made in the fall by Erling Jorgensen, director of ITS services.

"We are trying to offer the same service to students off campus as students on campus have," Jorgensen said. "But it doesn't mean that Ma and Pa who live in East Lansing can sit down side by side and take Accounting 201 for credit. They have to go through the MSU continuing education center," he said.

MSU courses which will be aired on the cable channels include Accounting 201 and 202, Shortland 201, Typewriting 234, Computer Science 110 and 120, Biology 211 and 212, Geography 204, First Aid 331 and Wilderness Survival 301 (see chart).

If a student wishes to view the course at home or on one of the residence hall ITV stations, he or she should inform the course instructor of such plans. Most of the courses require some class attendance; all require that exams must be taken in class.

Students can obtain a copy of the winter ITV/Cable program schedule by going to the ITS scheduling office, 230 Erickson Hall, or by calling 353-8800.

Since the spring of 1974, some cable classes have been experimentally available to students in Married Housing. Currently, 30 students from Married Housing are engaged in another experiment. They have been enrolled in Education 410, Learning and Liking It, a course which combines cable television, computer management, and computer testing in teaching the course. Students will view ten lessons on channel 20 and will take tests on channel 21 via touchtone telephones connected to an MSU talking computer. If successful, that mode of teaching may be applied to other courses.

Waitresses and other employees who report tips to their employers also gained one victory but lost another. As of Jan. 1 tipped employees must receive a wage of $1.65 per hour or more. But employers may now take 25 per cent of the employee's tips instead of the previous 15 per cent.

However, Keith Molin, director of the Michigan Dept. of Labor, emphasized that employers utilizing the full 25 per cent tip credit cannot take any further deductions for food or lodging.

Michigan workers get 20 cent raise

Michigan employees will start the new year with a guaranteed minimum wage of $2.20 per hour, a 20-cent increase for workers covered by the state's Minimum Wage Law.

The workers eligible for the 20-cent increase are individuals between ages 18 and 65 working for employers who employ four or more employees. Minors who are 16-years-old or older and work in establishments which sell, distribute or serve alcohol will also receive the $2.20 minimum wage, effective Jan. 1.

Waitresses and other employees who report tips to their employers also gained one victory but lost another. As of Jan. 1 tipped employees must receive a wage of $1.65 per hour or more. But employers may now take 25 per cent of the employee's tips instead of the previous 15 per cent.

However, Keith Molin, director of the Michigan Dept. of Labor, emphasized that employers utilizing the full 25 per cent tip credit cannot take any further deductions for food or lodging.

Trustee Bruff to manage O'Hara Senate campaign

Bruff

MSU Trustee John Bruff, D-Mount Clemens, will be spending his Bicentennial year heading up the campaign of Rep. James G. O'Hara, D-Mich, for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Philip A. Hart.

O'Hara announced Tuesday that Bruff, who was elected to the board of trustees in 1974, will be his campaign director. Bruff has managed all nine of O'Hara's election campaigns for Congress.

Bruff, a prominent Mount Clemens attorney, was an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor in 1966 before winning election as an MSU trustee.

O'Hara is one of three announced Democratic candidates for Hart's seat. The others are U.S. Rep. Donald Riegle of Flint and State Sen. John Otterbacher of Grand Rapids.

When asked if he thought his campaign responsibilities would interfere with his duties as a trustee, Bruff laughed and said, "My duties will interfere with my practicing law and earning a living and probably with my work as a trustee, but I'm accustomed to doing many things at one time."

Tuition hike: crisis or business-as-usual?

The gears have been set in motion, with little chance now of being stopped, for students to be soaked for another dollar per credit.

We have all known for some time — specifically since tuition was hiked $2.50 in September — that the potential for requiring additional money existed.

And while a tuition hike as a last resort is not in itself necessarily evil, the events which have led to this particular one raise questions that the University must no longer neglect.

The State News has said before that after all plausible alternatives had been exhaustively probed and squeezed dry, then a tuition hike may be necessary to preserve some semblance of quality education.

However, we doubt that this has taken place.

Administrators — President Wharton prominent among them — have been seen to laugh out loud at the notion that money can be saved by trimming the fat out from the inside before asking the outside for more money. But we have also witnessed the board of trustees casually approve numerous expenditures amounting to hundreds of thousands which have no place in times such as these. In short, there has been a critical divergence between the pronouncements of administrators justifying the tuition hike in terms of crisis, and their actions, which reflect little more than business as usual.

It seems that the administration is in fact not utilizing the impending tuition hike as a method of last resort, but is rather exploiting it to preserve the comfortable day-to-day operation of the University as it has been.

To restore faith — or to find a better way — the administration should allocate funds to allow an independent audit of the University's books by a group of students, faculty and perhaps a public representative, guided by an independent auditor. Such a project, carried out without interference by the University, but with the compliance and cooperation of administrators, could settle the question of the need to place heavier and heavier burdens upon the students of MSU.

Such a group would have the advantage of greater credibility than the administration because of its independent status, and also more responsibility and sophistication than groups such as CACTI.

We challenge the administration to prove to the University community that it is not afraid to be investigated, or to prove conclusively that it has honestly attempted to solve the fiscal crisis in a less damaging way.

Bienvenido, Borges, to MSU community

Nothing could brighten the MSU cultural scene like the presence of great writers. There is something about great books and their creators which belongs in the university.

That is why the appearance of Jorge Luis Borges as artist in residence this winter is an event of unprecedented significance to the cultural life of this campus.

Borges has been a leading candidate for the Nobel Prize in Literature for many years. His poems, short stories and essays have won him critical acclaim throughout the world.

There are many who consider Borges not only the greatest Latin American writer, but also one of the top figures in contemporary literature. Borges will deliver a series of public lectures on alternate Mondays beginning Jan. 12. He also plans to conduct a graduate seminar.

The presence of the great writer will make for a memorable winter term at MSU, and hopefully will be the initial step toward a revitalization of the cultural life here.

Nothing can further that task better than the presence of great minds, creative thinkers and those who take the arts as seriously as they were meant to be taken. Jorge Luis Borges is just such a person, and those of us here at MSU who will benefit from his gifts take pleasure in welcoming him to campus.

Get organ donor card

Earlier this year a letter in the State News related the difficulties a couple encountered in their attempt to find an organization that would accept the entire body for purposes of organ donation.

Dr. John E. Wilson of the Biochemistry Dept. recently brought it to my attention that the Kidney Foundation of Michigan provides such a service. A donor card serves as a "pocket will" which may be destroyed if the donor has a change of heart. The card provides three alternatives: donation of any specified organs, donation of all needed organs, an pledging of the body to a medical center for anatomical study. The Foundation may be contacted at 3378 Washtenaw Ave., Ann Arbor 48104. Donor cards are provided free of charge.

Against Community Aides

I wish to express my concern over the Community Aides plan currently being foisted upon the married housing community by the Married Housing Office. This plan involves hiring Community Aides to live in married housing to organize and help, in some as yet undefined manner, the community.

Aside from the fact that a representative from married housing admits that no one has asked for such a program, and leaving aside unanswered questions of who will pay for it, or who needs it, there occur to me several compelling reasons for not implementing such a plan at this time.

First of all, the Community Aides Program would effectively subvert the elected representative body for married students, the Married Students Union. A competing line of communication between the residents of married housing and university officials would be established enabling the Married Housing Office to bypass the Married Students Union, leaving it to "rot on the vine." Community Aides would accomplish nothing that Married Students Union could not accomplish equally well and the two organizations will be forced into a senseless competition.

Another objection to the plan comes from the manner in which it and the decision to implement it have come about. The plan and decision to implement it were apparently made in secrecy with no opportunity for community input. At discussion groups organized by Married Students Union and held on Nov. 24 and 25, the first open discussions on this plan, the married housing representative made it clear that the decision had already been made to proceed with the plan.

I do not think that the imposition of Community Aides upon the married housing community is a decision that should be made unilaterally by the Married Housing Office. The RA program in residence halls has drawn sufficient criticism to indicate that a similar program should be initiated for married housing only if extensive open discussion indicates a positive community desire for such a program. This is not at present the case.

Towel charge

I must say that I am appalled that the Women's IM charges MSU faculty and staff members forty cents for the use of a towel. It is even more absurd that MSU students get charged at all. It seems inconsistent that I can borrow equipment such as paddle ball paddles for free from the Men's IM but have to be exorbitantly ripped off for a towel. I thought the purpose of the intramural facilities was to serve members of the MSU community, not to exploit them.

Letter policy

The Opinion Page welcomes all letters. Readers should follow a few rules to insure that as many letters as possible appear in print.

All letters should be typed on 65-space lines and triple-spaced. Letters must be signed, and include local address, student, faculty or staff standing — if any — and phone number.

Letters should be 25 lines or less and may be edited for conciseness to fit more letters on the page.

No unsigned letters will be accepted. Names are withheld from publication only for good cause.

Nixon loyalists urge on Kennedy smear

The holiday mail bristles with jeers from the Nixon loyalists. They ask: "What do you think of Kennedy now?" and "Why don't you write about Kennedy's girl friends?"

Writing about "Kennedy's girl friends" is easier said than done. There is a dearth of facts. What is on the record is a claim by a woman named Judith Campbell (Exner) who was also a Mafia moll that she had a "warm relationship" with the late president — one that she intends to write about.

It is possible, of course, to revive and review the rumors that were current when John Kennedy was alive and the most dashing first citizen in history. One reputable periodical, Time magazine, has chosen to do that. Usually, it is left to the National Enquirer.

What the Nixonites see in this scandalous fallout from the Church Committee inquiry is an opportunity to rehabilitate their discredited favorite. It is not clear how allegations of John Kennedy's peccadilloes vindicate Richard Nixon's constitutional offenses.

But to them it is more proof that Richard Nixon was no greater a sinner than any other power-holder in the White House and that his only real crime was to get caught.

They have another grievance. They accuse Frank Church not only of covering up Kennedy's amours, but also of glossing over his involvement in assassination plots — while fingering Eisenhower and Nixon.

"Is murder okay because it's Camelot?" asks one writer, a woman who says she is more convinced than ever that "Richard Nixon was hounded out of office."

Church is in Idaho, but his office is receiving a steady stream of calls and letters from people who berate him for failing to investigate President Kennedy's sex life, and for "indecent partisanship." The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, to a man, decided to leave Kennedy and Ms. Campbell to heaven on the grounds that whatever their relationship, it had no bearing on the lawlessness of the FBI, which was the subject of their inquiry.

Church said when he took the chairmanship of the investigation that it was a "minefield." The Kennedy explosion confirms his foreboding. These has been another explosion.

It was the tragic death of a CIA agent, Richard Welch, who was murdered in Athens. This, too, is being exploited by those who see in investigators of agency wrongdoing disturbers of the peace.

It could be that at any other time President Ford would have made an exception and allowed the burial of a CIA agent in the military cemetery at Arlington. And it could be that an assassinated agent would be the subject of a special memorial service at CIA headquarters. But the suspicion remains that the murder is being used as a rod to smite the questioners.

The President's press secretary, Ron Nessen, in Vail, Colo., pointed a muddy finger at the congressional probers while denying he was doing so. He "did not mean for a minute to imply congressional responsibility in the death," but went on to say inaccurately that there had been "various negotiations and discussions with committees on the Hill, which wanted to reveal names."

Church immediately retorted that as a matter of policy the committee had never even asked for the identification of current agents, much less published them. A magazine called Counter Spy, which is determined to demolish the agency, printed Welch's name.

Church is making his final assessment of his presidential chances amid all these charges. Due to his labors, he has no "name recognition" problem such as still afflict other Democratic candidates, but it is a dubious blessing to be known as the teller of terrible secrets.

He had hoped by his inquiry to tell us through our intelligence activities, what kind of a country we had become. But the question is now bogged down in reminiscences about a dead president and a discredited president.

Church has inadvertently added to the general feeling that all you can say about America now is "more to come." It is something less than the ideal atmosphere in which to launch an enterprise that is supposed to promise hope and new beginnings.

Dr. King's reputation was not so clean

William F. Buckley

The whole Hoover business is getting out of hand. One of the reasons for it is the partisanship of the headlining Congressional investigating committees, which make one think back wistfully on the rough justice of those Nixonites engaged in maximizing the incumbency. Now hear this: Carl Rowan, the prominent black journalist and former director of the United States Information Agency, has actually suggested that the evidence mounts that the Federal Bureau of Investigation, under Hoover's leadership, connived in the assassination of Martin Luther King.

I don't think Joe McCarthy ever made an allegation quite so breathtaking. They ran McCarthy out of town with wet towels. All that has happened to Carl Rowan, so far as I can see, is that he has received a quiet letter from Ladislav Farrago, the writer, biographer of General Patton, who has been spending the last several years preparing an authoritative biography of J. Edgar Hoover. Rowan would probably prefer the towels.

Farrago wrote to Rowan to say, in effect: Look, I in 1967 there was a genuine national concern over the company (I do not mean sexual) Dr. King was keeping.

2) During that period there were periodic threats against the life of Dr. King. These came in part from white fanatics, against whom the FBI was generally able to contend — by bugging certain telephones, keeping some people under surveillance, penetrating their organizations and providing King with special protections. But it became more and more difficult to protect him against the black extremists — such as, for instance, had assassinated Malcolm X — because the hostility to the FBI engendered by King and a few black extremists had made the work of the FBI extremely difficult in tight black circles.

3) Moreover, Rowan, back in 1967, was one of the black leaders who knew these facts. His idolatry of Dr. King is strictly a posthumous affair. Mr. Farrago reminded

Mr. Rowan of an article published in September 1967, in the Reader's Digest. Martin Luther King is saying "utterly irresponsible things," Rowan wrote then.

Rowan has actually suggested that the evidence mounts that the FBI, under Hoover's leadership, connived in the assassination of Martin Luther King... I don't think Joe McCarthy ever made an allegation quite as breathtaking.

After the speech in which King compared Americans in Vietnam to the concentration camp masters of Nazi Germany, Rowan said, "Reaction across the nation and around the world was immediate and explosive. Radios Moscow and Peking picked up King's words and fed them to distant capitals. In the White House, a Presidential aide shouted, 'My God, King has given a speech on Vietnam that goes right down the Communist line!'"

Rowan then gave a list of liberal leaders who had chided King on his excesses — Bunche, Brooke, Freedom House, The Washington Post.

Rowan went further. "King," he analyzed, "seemed to develop an exaggerated appraisal of how much he and his crisis techniques were responsible for the race relations progress that had been made." And he warned:

"Negroes had, in fact, begun to grow uneasy about King. He no longer seemed to be the selfless leader of the 1950's." He visits to the "jail looked like publicity stunts."

Why did King move the civil rights issue into foreign policy? "Why did King," he asked, "adopt the Communist line, 'reject the advice of his old civil rights colleagues?'" Some say it was a matter of ego... Other revived a more sinister speculation that he had been whispered around Capitol Hill and the nation's newsrooms for more than two years — talk of Communists influencing the actions and words of the young minister. This talk disturbed other civil rights leaders more than anything else.

And — may we not assume? — disturbed the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation? Carl Rowan would perhaps have an easier time understanding the whole mess if he went back to read what he himself was writing about it at the time of Hoover's maximum concern.

VIEWPOINT: BICENTENNIAL

History repeats itself
at commission office

By MICHAEL SLAUGHTER

Our country's two hundredth anniversary, like any family affair, has had its share of dissidents not unlike those who stand muttering around the coffee urn while praise is heaped upon whichever couple in the clan has lurch through life together for another year contrary to all natural law. In particular, because many of us have married (rather than been born) into the national family through the years, accompanied by the usual objections to where we come from, what we think or how we look, planning a party for the whole lot of us was bound to stir up trouble. To get a personal angle on this story, I recently decided to drop in at the downtown offices of our very own independence-year planners in Lansing.

The scene around official headquarters was hardly surprising. Stationed just outside the entrance was a knot of scruffy young men and women, salted with a few tweedy professor types, passing out handbills and waving placards. One sign irreverently challenged: "Do We Really Want a BUYCENTENNIAL SEELabration?"

When I reached the demonstrators, one stern-faced youth shoved a smudged flyer in my face. Emblazoned at the top in big block letter was the legend, "It Took 200 Years. But the Tories Are Back in Control." Seeking to get both sides of the controversy, I thanked the young woman for her information sheet, and worked my way past the headquarters' door toward what appeared to be an elevator starter.

"Pass please," demanded the burly crew-cut man in a red, white and blue uniform whose service origin was unfamiliar to me.

"I'm afraid I don't have a pass..." — his epaulets were bare, and I didn't know how to address somebody with three American flags running along his arm — "uh, sir."

"Alright, down the hall to the first door on the right," he curtly replied. I threw out my arms, palms up, to search him for additional explanation, and noticed that his two helpers were on their way to lend a hand. Then it dawned on me that the first door to the right was where you get passes. "OK. Right. Back in a jiffy," said quickly, and skipped down the hall. Three-Flag waved his hand at the balance of the lobby corps and they peeled off to their original haunt.

Apparently concluding that my beard was nevertheless well-trimmed and that the suit I had on was my own, the pass-lady issued me a name-card stamped promi-nently with the Bicentennial emblem. Upon presenting my pass to Three-Flag, he graciously stepped into the elevator with me and asked, "What floor?"

"Office of the Executive Director," I resonated as best I could, hoping to goodness that the state commission hadn't decided to call their main operative a general manager, special coordinator or chief administrator. Happily, with that, Three-Flag punched the button marked "3" and stumped back out to his post.

After what seemed like an inordinately long time, I heard a dull clunk and the car quivered. Must not want to give the impression that they move too hastily on Bicentennial decisions, I joked to myself. As the doors rumbled to one side, I noticed that what's-his-name had one of those suites that open directly from the elevator. Real high class.

"Kin I hel-pyoo, plee-az," offered a grinning middle-aged woman to my right, adorned in red lipstick, blue eyeshadow and a white knit dress.

"The Executive Director," I said tentatively, and extended my pass.

"Oh yes. Jus-tamunt," she replied, turning my little visa over to search the back of it. Then she rose and headed for a walnut door about twenty feet directly in front of the elevator. With a preface knock, she admitted herself. An enormous desk, completely clear except for a gold-colored pen and pencil set, appeared briefly as the door swung inward and back shut again.

My directorial intermediary emerged and pronounced her boss fit to do business. "Things have been so busy today, but he says he's always glad to meet with the press," the receptionist explained, returning my card.

Following a minute or two of chatter outside with the secretary, the Director — Morris Fluke, according to his pen-holder plate — came out to greet me heartily and invite me into his well-appointed office. Now every inch of the superdesk was littered with papers, as well as little stacks of books whose numbers seemed to correspond more or less to the number of gaps on the credenza shelves behind him.

"As you see, the Bicentennial business is booming," Fluke asserted while sweeping one arm around the room, "but that's a story we don't mind telling."

It was difficult to restrain the rise in my eyebrows at this bit of understatement. "Yes," I began, "that's a fact you can't ignore these days. What are you working on now?"

"Well," Fluke responded, shuffling some of the papers before him, "the Commission just approved a special Bicentennial hotdog — has two hundred different kinds of meat by-products in it to illustrate how efficient our packing industry has become since 1776. Great idea," he added with gusto.

"Very interesting," I observed in return. "Quite a lot of deliberation must go into decisions like that."

Fluke beamed. "Yes, indeed. The Commission simply will not tolerate any nonsense — undignified stuff, flimflam."

I grunted further noncommittal acknowledgment. He showed me a thick sheaf of regulations for determining whether something-or-other could officially be qualified as Bicentennial, and continued to discuss recent projects until I inquired about the security people I'd met downstairs.

"Sure, they're part of the Bicentennial Service Division," answered the Director, "specially recruited from Army outfits all over the country." His eyes narrowed a bit. "Been having problems with fringe groups, well, for almost six months now."

"Oh really?" "Yeah, they can't seem to be satisfied with the way things have been — want to throw it all out and start something new," he said, shaking his head. "The big commission in Washington put one of their best staffers on it. He organized the BSD and sent men out to the hardest-hit cities: Boston, Philadelphia, New York."

My eyebrows refused to come down, "His name wouldn't by any chance be North, would it?"

"No, why? Guy by the name of Gel-bringer, I think." I was delighted to find the growing pattern of historical parallels disrupted. However, it turned out to be only a momentary respite. "Anyway, we got our group after some young hoodlums, dressed up like Indians, rushed into our MSU campus office one night, grabbed all the literature lying around and dumped it in the Red Cedar. None of our volunteers there got a good look at any of them, though."

"Too bad," I sighed, almost afraid to ask anything more.

"Trouble's bound to be over soon, I guarantee that," Fluke assured me. "Yer few radical ringleaders will be found out and that'll be the end of it. The rest of the country won't stand for any outlandish talk."

"Well, thanks very much for your time," I said, rising and heading toward the door. The Director smiled and nodded his head, then bid me farewell. A little dazed, I made my way back to the elevator and missed the down button twice before finally hitting my target. Three-Flag eyed me suspiciously as I strode out of the elevator and hurried through the lobby in order to have a longer talk with the folks outside. Fortunately, none of them was named Adams; otherwise you wouldn't believe my story.

New spirit rising for Bicentennial

The party hats for America's birthday already seem worn, somehow, though the year of the Bicentennial has only just rolled in. Like cheap party favors whose tawdriness seems equally evident to both donor and recipient, the Bicentennial seems to be discarded by many Americans before it has begun.

Bicentennial? What Bicentennial? It seems that we are faced with only unsavory attempts to employ American history to private advantage, whether it is roadside tourist stop souvenirs of the Founding politicians' empty speechmaking, or the sorry spectacle of a so-called "People's Bicentennial Commission" that seems intent on distorting history for the purpose of destroying the present system.

It is no wonder that the 200th anniversary of the founding of this country is tainted, considering the present state of the commonwealth; but it is nevertheless sad.

The present state needs precisely what the Bicentennial could offer: a dose of regenerative juice.

The sobering truth is that America has seen better days, and appears unlikely to resume her former status. In a variety of ways, people have come to realize that they have done injury — perhaps irreparable injury — to the creation of 1776.

People perceive a distant and unresponsive government gaining control over more and more of their lives, through intrusive programs, invasions of privacy, high taxes, and the seeming breakdown in constitutional checks and balances.

People realize that the United States, once the lion in world politics, now lies tainted and wounded. The smell of decline is in the air — and the stench seems to be rising from Washington.

Our lives are increasingly characterized by anomie and frustration, caused partially by the failure of traditional institutions — family, church, nation — to stand up to the tides of change, both because of their own internal weaknesses and because of external assault.

People have decided that the faces that have ruled the country in the recent past are incapable of leading the country forthrightly into the future.

But there are two sides — dark and bright — to the Bicentennial, and I prefer the latter. Proponents of this view are not overly perturbed at the manifestations of decline. Instead, they see them as growing pains.

In this view, the United States is seen as a good and decent nation, founded on noble principles, blessed with abundant resources and creative people. The current feeling of disillusionment can thus be seen as a healthy reaction to the realization that the United States is not perfect, not all-powerful, not all-providing.

Perhaps, then, America is not on the decline, but only maturing. After the initial shock of not being what no country can be, perhaps we will return to doing our best to show what a country can be.

In foreign affairs, that means forthrightly to defend freedom even in the face of increasing tyrannization — and to defend our own interests when necessary, unshaken by the self-serving denunciations of puppets and their puppeteers.

But it means also to recognize that we cannot singlehandedly defend every spot of ground in the world, where we may not be wanted or where the people may not have the will to resist.

In domestic matters, we should also learn to lower our expectations, to realize that no policy in Washington can bring happiness and prosperity to everyone. Indeed, instead of pursuing the impossible goal of universal bliss, we should concentrate on guaranteeing everyone the security and stability to pursue their own ends.

In this way, we return to the founders' belief in the right to the pursuit of happiness, a pursuit that can only be impeded by a government which tries to do more.

Thus, it seems fitting that in the heartland of America, a new Jeffersonianism, a return to the principles of the founding, seems to be arising. Out of the spirit of self-reliance, a faith in the goodness of nature and fellow man, and the knowledge that politicians and government are not reliable means for improving our lots, the cry against government seems to be rising: "Leave us alone. Get out of our lives, out of our pockets, and off of our backs."

That was the spirit that did in King George. Perhaps it can contribute to a cure of our present ills.

SCORING RECORD FOR FURLOW

MSU cagers beat Iowa, 105-88

By EDWARD L. RONDERS
State News Sports Writer

Gus Ganakas, Terry Furlow and the remainder of the MSU basketball staff can be excused if they're found sporting smiles.

The entire Spartan basketball squad had a glow about them Tuesday following Monday night's record-shattering performance by Terry Furlow as MSU thrashed 20th ranked Iowa 105-88.

Though Ganakas cautioned about gloating over Monday's win, the Spartans first in Big Ten action this season, he did allow time to declare his feelings.

"One thing about the Big Ten," the Spartan coach said, "is that you don't have time to dwell on the past. Thursday it's back on the road for a game at Northwestern."

Furlow's 50 points against Iowa (which broke the single game scoring record at MSU held by Julius McCoy against Notre Dame in 1955), brought praise from Ganakas. The Flint senior also shattered the Jenison Fieldhouse single game scoring mark of 48 points held jointly by Gary Bradds and Jerry Lucas, both formerly of Ohio State.

"It was a team victory. I just can't emphasize that enough. Guys like Kelser, Chapman and White were passing up perimeter shots and looking for the open man. Many times that open man was Terry."

The statistics affirmed Ganakas' claim, displaying a 61 per cent shooting accuracy.

"That's important because we came off a poor shooting game at Wisconsin Saturday. And, Iowa is a fine team. They came in here 10-1 and they're no slouch," Ganakas continued.

"That also makes Terry's record more meaningful. Many teams set records against weak opposition, but Furlow's accomplishment came against class competition."

In his clutch performance, the 6-foot-5 senior connected on 10 of 19 first half shots and eight of 10 attempts in the final 20 minutes.

Ironically, Furlow's record setting points came as a result of his trying to pass to a teammate under the basket. The Spartan captain was fouled on the play and cashed in both ends of a one and one situation which sent him over the top.

Furlow, the defending Big Ten scoring champion, declared after the game, "It's a team game. I thank God for my teammates, the coaches and the fans at Michigan State. It wasn't just me out there tonight."

While Furlow garnered headlines across the Midwest for his feat, Ganakas praised a much-maligned aspect of MSU basketball. "Our overall team defense was good. Especially on (Scott) Thompson. He did get 30 points but many of them were after the game was decided," Ganakas added happily. "Plus, Cedric Milton held Iowa's center (Bruce King) to 14 points. Cedric's total effort was outstanding. So you see, even though Terry got 50 points, and he deserves credit for that feat, the other team members did a very creditable job."

As Ganakas cautioned, however, the glory of Monday's win will be short lived as the Spartans tangle with Northwestern Thursday night at Evanston, Ill.

The Spartans take a 1-1 league mark and an overall 5-6 slate against the Wildcats who are 0-2 in Big Ten competition and 5-6 for the year. During Christmas break, MSU posted a 2-5 record. The victories came over Northern Michigan, 81-85 at Jenison and 89-77 over Southern Mississippi in the Virginia Commonwealth Tourney.

Western Michigan inflicted a 78-68 setback to the Spartans, while North Carolina State prevailed 95-75 and Detroit bopped MSU 85-82. Virginia Commonwealth captured its own holiday tournament defeating MSU 80-75 and Wisconsin nipped the Spartans 70-63 in the big Ten opener for both schools.

Banner Day slated for basketball game

Acting MSU Athletic Director Jack Shingleton announced that Saturday has been proclaimed "Banner Day" for the MSU - Ohio State basketball game at Jenison Fieldhouse.

"This is just part of a series of events we're planning at Michigan State to polish our athletic image. We can't deny that many negative things have been said and written about Michigan State in the recent past," he said.

"But, we feel this is an opportunity for true Spartan fans to show their support and express their positive feelings about MSU sports and in particular basketball," he added. "You might say the theme of "Banner Day" is "Think Positive." I don't feel there's anything wrong with showing some old fashioned school and community spirit.

The acting athletic director explained that a first place prize of two reserved season tickets to MSU basketball games will be awarded for the winning entry. A panel of judges will review the banners, which may be any size or shape. The contest is open to students, Greek organizations and the general public, Shingleton added.

Saturday is also Dollar Day at Jenison with general admission tickets on sale for one dollar. Game time is 3:05 p.m.

Santa leaves no favors for MSU Ice Machine

By EDWARD L. RONDERS
State News Sports Writer

Leave it to the MSU hockey team to leave their fans hanging in mid-air worrying about the Spartans' chances in the WCHA wars.

With a chance to pull away from the pack prior to the Christmas break, the Spartans stumbled through two splits while their closest pursuers made up valuable ground in the league battle.

charges returned to the ice last weekend they gave the impression they didn't like their number two national ranking, falling victim to an unheralded Harvard squad twice.

To complicate matters, Spartan fans were given the added concern about the possibility of losing the team's number two scorer to ineffectuality.

But, alas, when last seen Bessone and his Spartans were alive and well and still leading the WCHA, thank you.

The entire scenario began innocently when the Spartans pumped four unanswered goals past Michigan's All-American goalie Robbie Moore in the third period to capture a 6-4 win at Ann Arbor, Dec. 5.

The Wolverines returned the favor the following evening at Munn, notching five scores in the final stanza while rocketing to an 8-4 verdict over MSU.

The following weekend Minnesota Duluth fashioned a feat no other team had done in nearly three years. The Bulldogs held Spartan center Tom Ross off the scoring sheet for the first time in 79 games as they pummeled the Spartans 5-2. MSU responded the following night with an 8-5 revenge and Ross had a new scoring streak.

Then came the two week sabbatical and the subsequent dilemmas.

The Crimson of Harvard ventured to Munn last Friday and Saturday after dropping four of their last five contests. The Spartans decided to extend their holiday break through the weekend and gave the Ivy Leaguers a belated Christmas gift of five first period goals.

When Bessone delivered his Christmas homily between the first and second periods it was too late. Using tight checking and crisp passing Harvard went on to notch an 8-6 win.

Saturday proved just as futile for the leaders of the WCHA as a combination of missed shots and Brian Petrov's superb goaltending for Harvard sent the Spartans to a 4-3 defeat.

Bessone laid part of the blame on the Spartans diet, saying, "We're just not hungry around the goal. We had many chances to score tonight, but we lacked that killer instinct."

"But, give Harvard credit," he added, "they forechecked us all over the ice. And their goalie (Petrov) was absolutely superb. He kept them in the game."

Dissecting MSU's problems further, Bessone explained, "We're not skating, we're not checking and we're making elementary mistakes on defense. That's all we're going to work on in practice this week."

And, while the Spartans work on such matters in practice, their number two scorer, Steve Colp, worked on academics the past few days, bringing a sigh of relief to MSU hockey faithful.

The All-American center was believed to be lost to the team for the remainder of the season due to grades. However, Colp completed work on a deferred grade to maintain his eligibility.

Bessone explained that Colp was kept out of the Harvard series because, "Steve had to complete that work and we wanted him to do it before classes started. If he had waited until after classes started he probably would have missed a league series. That's why we chose to keep him out of a non-league series against Harvard and get the needed work done."

Everything considered, MSU still leads the WCHA by two points over Minnesota, Michigan Tech and Colorado College, who are all tied for second.

The Spartans weren't so fortunate in the weekly hockey poll, however. They fell to fifth placed behind Michigan Tech, Boston U., Minnesota and Brown.

Denver visits Munn this weekend for games Friday and Saturday as the Spartans return to WCHA action after their peaceful Christmas break.

Three divers, Tom Benson,

Spartan swimmers post two victories

Three MSU men swimmers set pool records at Eastern Michigan University over the holiday break. The Dec. 5 meet saw Steve Ploussard shatter an old pool mark with a winning time of 15:09.6 in the 200-yard individual medley.

Greg Foreman swam to victory and a new pool record in the 1,000-yard freestyle with a time of 10:00.2 and teammate Ken Holmes turned in a fastest pool time in the 200-yard breast stroke posting a mark of 2:15.5.

Three divers, Tom Benson,

Barry VanAmberg and Mark Stiner contributed to the Spartan effort making qualifying points for the NCAA championships as MSU won the meet 89-24. Shawn Elkins also turned in an excellent showing with a time of 145.8 in the 200-yard freestyle.

Dave Burgering and Tom Benson recorded outstanding diving performances Jan. 3 in a home meet against Oakland University as the Spartan tankers took the meet 81-42. Burgering performed on the one meter board with Benson diving from the three-meter.

MSU Swim Coach Dick Feters singled out efforts by Dave Dale and Greg Foreman. Dale took the 50-yard freestyle in 21.9 and Foreman beat Oakland swimmer Paul Karas by a mere two-tenths of a second in the 500-yard freestyle with a winning time of 4:48.2.

The Spartan tankers travel to Wisconsin for their next scheduled meet Saturday. Coach Feters is anticipating a difficult match as Wisconsin placed second in the Big Ten last year while MSU finished in fourth.

Matmen debut at Munn

By MIKE JENKINS
State News Sports Writer

Spartan matmen will take on formidable Oklahoma State at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Munn Arena. It will be the first time that the arena has been used by the wrestling team.

An insulated floor covering will be placed over the ice and the protective glass around the rink will be taken down for the event.

"This is a brand new thing at Michigan State," Wrestling Coach Grady Peninger said. "We decided to give it a try and see how the fans like it. There's not a bad seat in the house and wrestling fans are in for a real treat."

Peninger, an alumnus of Oklahoma State, pointed out that his alma mater has won more NCAA team titles in wrestling than all other U.S. teams combined.

"But Michigan State has beaten Oklahoma State twice in the past four years and no other Big Ten team has ever bested them," the coach said.

A highlight of the meet should be the matchup between MSU heavyweight Dan Evans and "Giant" Jimmy Jackson of Oklahoma who hails from Grand Rapids. Coach Peninger said it looks as if Jackson has gained 50 pounds over last year's weight.

Admission to the match is free to all MSU students, faculty and staff and $1.50 to the general public.

Oklahoma State Coach Tom Chesbro will be guest speaker at the Take Down Club's luncheon scheduled for noon, Jan. 8, at Alex's Restaurant, 321 E. Michigan Ave. in Lansing. Coach Peninger will present a rundown of recent Spartan action.

In action during the Christmas break, the Spartans placed second to Penn State in that school's invitational tournament Dec. 6 with MSU's Jeff Hersha being named outstanding wrestler. The team took second place by only one-half point over Clarion with Hersha's win against Penn State junior Jerry White deciding the standings. Pat Milkovich and Steve Rodriguez were the other two MSU finalists.

MSU placed 13th at the Midlands Tournament at Evanston, Ill. on Dec. 27-28. Milkovich finished third and Randy Miller was fifth in the tourney.

Meijers prices lowest, survey indicates

By CAROLYN FESSLER
State News Staff Writer

Pushing a well-laden shopping cart through the aisles becomes less of a drudgery with the knowledge that the groceries are cheaper than the ones in the store down the street.

As a service to price-conscious shoppers, the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM) conducted a 47-item marketbasket survey of nine grocery stores in the MSU area and found that Meijer's Thrifty Acres in Okemos was nearly four per cent cheaper than its nearest competitor.

Following Meijer's on the list was Eberhard's on Grand River Avenue; Kroger, in the Frandor Shopping Center; Eberhard's on Michigan Avenue, A & P, in Brookfield Plaza; Schmidt's in Okemos; Wrigley in Frandor; Goodrich Spartan Shop-Rite, and Larry's Shop Rite.

The most expensive store,

Larry's, posted prices that averaged nearly 10 per cent more than the least expensive store.

MSU student members of PIRGIM conducted the survey by checking prices on a list that simulated the average family's weekly shopping patterns, filling their hypothetical market-baskets with such items as five different meats, six dairy products, various frozen and fresh foods and regular grocery items from peanut butter to pork and beans.

"This survey is designed to reveal which stores have the lowest average prices for the whole range of products typically bought by most shoppers," Glenda Bean, PIRGIM survey coordinator said. "You can save most by going to a couple of nearby stores, buying their advertised specials, then doing the bulk of your shopping at the store with the lowest advertised prices. The PIR-GIM marketbasket survey is designed to tell consumers which store's prices average lowest."

The survey will be repeated every two to three weeks this winter, using different lists of products, so that changing price patterns can be charted out for consumers.

This week's survey included only stores within a several-mile radius of the MSU campus, from Frandor to Okemos. Bean said that since all major grocery chain names in the Lansing area were included, the rankings are probably valid for all parts of the city. Most chains try for fairly uniform prices among their stores in the same area, she said.

The survey was designed to compare prices at large supermarkets but several East Lansing convenience stores were included because so many students shop at them, Bean said. "It's not surprising that the convenience stores were higher priced, but we were surprised that some of the larger chains were nearly as high in this survey," she said.

HAVE AN EXCEPTIONAL DAY!

Three MSU professors die during Christmas vacation

Two MSU professors and one former MSU professor died during Christmas break.

Dead are Stanley C. Ratner, professor of psychology; Carol Shaffer, professor of family ecology; and Ralf C. Henriksen, retired professor of art.

Ratner, a nationally-known authority in comparative psychology died unexpectedly Dec. 21. He was 50.

A professor at MSU since 1955, Ratner received the MSU Distinguished Faculty Award in 1972. He was a Danforth Foundation associate and a member of several psychological associations, including the American Psychological Assn. and the Midwestern Psychological Assn.

A memorial scholarship fund has been established by the Psychology Dept. in Ratner's name.

Shaffer, 49, died unexpectedly Dec. 30. She was an authority on consumer education and financial management.

Shaffer joined the MSU faculty in 1953 and taught home management, child development, economics and family ecology during her career.

Henriksen died Dec. 17 in Scottsdale, Ariz., at age 68. He was a member of the MSU art faculty from 1946 until his retirement in 1974. He had been a professor since 1960.

Henriksen received his B.A. from the Chicago Art Institute and earned a master's degree from the Instituto Allende and the University of Guanajuato in Mexico. He was a prize-winning water color artist and a member of the Michigan Academy of Science, Arts and Letters and the Philadelphia Water Color Society.

The Model 210 Graphic Equalizer uses IC circuitry for 90 db S/N ratio and distortion of less than 0.1% at any equalization setting. Using "Gyrator Synthesized Inductors" the Model 210 offers the performance of other units costing twice as much. Featuring full tape monitoring and tape and line equalization the Model 210 offers you the ultimate in a Graphic Equalizer at a price you can afford.

P-202 POWER AMPLIFIER

Spectro Acoustics, Inc. offers the most for your money in performance and reliability in the Model P-202 Power Amplifier. Using modular construction for ease of warranty work, the Model P-202 puts out no less than 100 watts, RMS, continuous per channel, both channels driven into 8 ohms at any frequency from 20 Hz to 20,000 Hz with no more than 0.25% total harmonic distortion. Power at clipping is typically 200 watts. Output is monitored by peak level indicators which are far more accurate than conventional meters. Model P-202 is highlighted by automatic limiters and is fully protected for all load conditions. It's the ideal power amplifier to give you the most for your money.

Letter campaign brings parental response

By CAROLE LEIGH HUTTON
State News Staff Writer

The holiday mail was not all that clogged Michigan's postal services this Christmas season, as the students of several large Michigan universities launched an extensive campaign to parents.

Students Associated for Lower Tuition (SALT), a student organization whose objective is to minimize state budget cuts to universities, sent letters to parents urging them to contact their state representatives to protest tuition increases.

The MSU Board of Trustees, citing cuts in the University budget by Gov. Milliken and the legislature, raised tuition $2.50 a credit hour this summer for undergraduates and then added on another $1 increase this term.

ASMSU President Brian Raymond is the director of SALT, and its four coordinators represent Oakland University, Wayne State University and the University of Michigan. Other universities involved include Eastern, Central and Western Michigan universities.

While the SALT factions of some of the schools have sent form letters to be signed and returned by parents, the MSU student government has sent over 30,000 letters asking parents to write their representative directly or in care of ASMSU.

"Most people sent letters directly to their representatives," Raymond said. "But we did receive and forward 500 letters already."

A representative of Gov. Milliken's office said Tuesday that they have been receiving mail ever since the campaign began.

A press official from the governor's office said that they have received more than six thousand responses and complaints, but said that the bulk of these were Oakland University form letters.

According to the press official, the letters will have no effect during the current fiscal year because the budget cut decisions have already been made.

"The governor has attempted to spread the burden of the budget cutbacks as equitably as he can," the official said. "He has left the question of tuition increases up to the universities and the legislature has agreed."

What Raymond termed the first phase of the SALT campaign is now over—all letters have been sent. However, the director and the four coordinators are now planning to meet with state legislators.

"Nothing definite has been set up yet," Raymond said, "and no requirements about who must attend have been established. The director and coordinators will most likely be present, and there may be school representatives present also."

Raymond said that the major goal of the campaign's initial phase was to make people aware of the problem facing universities and to stimulate interest. He feels this has been accomplished.

MSU to give masters in land-use

By CAROLYN FESSLER
State News Staff Writer

In anticipation of skilled jobs created by new state and possibly federal land-use laws, MSU is one of three major universities initiating a master's program in land-use analysis.

Graduates of the program, according to Lawrence Sommers, chairperson of the Dept. of Geography, should find themselves in great demand as the need for land organizers and planners grows.

Land-use laws regulate areas such as zoning, subdivision planning and building height restrictions. Bills enacting such laws are now awaiting approval in both the Michigan Legislature and the U.S. Senate.

With passage of the laws every state would have different regions with a staff to organize land use for each section.

The master's program, funded by a $61,797 grant from the National Science Foundation, will also be developed by Arizona State University and Florida State University.

Sommers said that representatives from the three universities will begin meeting at the end of this month to chart out a curriculum.

"The program will begin fall term 1976 so it's a little early to say just what courses will be included," Sommers said. "A limited number of new courses may be designed and other courses may be altered or refocused. But our major objective is to reorient courses and experiences."

Sommers said that emphasis will be on applying geographic research methods to raw land-use data, data processing, federal and local laws and guidelines and research design.

"Urban planning graduates could probably also find jobs in this field, but land-use analysis is a different approach to planning," Sommers said. "Analysts must take a spatial point of view. It's the geography approach."

Sommers said that the three universities selected to participate will give the program national perspective because of their locations and prominence.

"Each university is located in a distinctly different geographical area with unique land-use problems," he said.

The program will be administered during the academic year by an advisory committee of six faculty developers (two from each institution) and eight land-use professionals.

Reagan outpacing Ford in fund-raising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Helped by a law he opposes, Ronald Reagan is outpacing President Ford in campaign fund-raising.

A spokesman said Reagan's campaign committee raised about $2 million in private donations during 1975 to finance his bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

Ford raised only $1.7 million, according to a spokesman for his campaign.

Reagan took the financial lead after a late start, raising more than $500,000 a month during the last quarter of 1975. A spokesman said the heavy pace was continuing into the first days of 1976.

Ford's pace was $327,000 a month for the period.

Furthermore, three-fourths of Reagan's money qualifies to be matched dollar-for-dollar by additional payments from the federal government, his spokesman said. Less than one-half of Ford's money qualifies, according to his spokesman.

Thus, Reagan is getting a boost from the year-old federal election money law, which he opposes on philosophical grounds.

Whatever Reagan gets, he can't necessarily spend more than Ford because the election law now limits campaign outlays. The spending ceiling is $200,000 per candidate in the New Hampshire primary, for example. No candidate may spend more than $10 million total to campaign for the presidential nomination of any party.

Though incumbent presidents traditionally raise money easily by tapping wealthy donors for big contributions, the new law makes it illegal for anyone to give more than $1,000 for a single federal campaign. This works to the advantage of a challenger, in this case Reagan.

By limiting large donations, and by providing federal matching money for up to $250 of each private gift, the law also places a double emphasis on small donations. This works to Reagan's advantage because his strong political views stir strong emotions among his backers, who had to open their pocketbooks more readily than voters in the political middle.

"It's more difficult for a moderate to raise money," said Ford campaign spokesman Peter Kaye.

Reagan campaign lawyer Loren Smith put it another way. "It—the law—helped us because it put an emphasis on small contributions and volunteers. We're very strong on these two things."

Smith said 50,000 persons have donated money to the Reagan campaign. "It isn't just the money that makes us happy. It shows there's support out there."

As recently as last July 26, the Reagan forces hoped to do without federal subsidies because Reagan, as a conservative, opposed them.

"We'd like to be in the position so that we wouldn't have to go to the government, because philosophically Ron's opposed to it," said campaign strategist Lyn Nofziger.

But on Jan. 2 the Reagan campaign got a government check for $100,000. Reagan is claiming another $500,000 in matching money based on private donations received through last October, and is expected to file claims up to $1 million more based on receipts in November and December.

What brings in the Reagan money is a massive direct mail campaign. Millions of letters seeking donations have gone to past Reagan donors, Republican givers and backers of various conservative causes.

The average Reagan donation is about $20. As much as $100,000 in small gifts has come in during a single day.

Ford's campaign staff, by contrast, focused early appeals on businessmen and others who could afford to give the maximum $1,000. Ford's first fundraiser, David Packard, quit last Oct. 31, however, and a new fund-raising team is laying plans for a broader appeal.

Ford spokesman Kaye said the Reagan money lead may turn out to be temporary, and may not mean much. "I'm sure we'll be able to raise all we need," he said.

Reagan took the financial lead after a late start, raising more than $500,000 a month during the last quarter of 1975. A spokesman said the heavy pace was continuing into the first days of 1976.

Ford's pace was $327,000 a month for the period.

Furthermore, three-fourths of Reagan's money qualifies to be matched dollar-for-dollar by additional payments from the federal government, his spokesman said. Less than one-half of Ford's money qualifies, according to his spokesman.

Thus, Reagan is getting a boost from the year-old federal election money law, which he opposes on philosophical grounds.

14 GUERILLAS REPORTED KILLED

Argentine fighting erupts

Student's body found in ditch

The body of a 19-year-old MSU student was found in a roadside ditch in Allegan County Dec. 23.

Deborah Knapp, of South Haven, disappeared Dec. 22, telling her mother that she was going to the grocery store. Her mother reported her missing the next morning. Her body was found in a ditch later the same morning by a passing motorist.

Nineteen-year-old Roger Sparks of South Haven was arrested that afternoon. He was arraigned Dec. 24 on a charge of murder. However, before any further legal action was taken, Sparks was committed to the Ypsilanti Forensic Center for 60 days to undergo psychiatric tests.

Knapp was an MSU sophomore majoring in advertising. She lived in Campbell Hall.

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Troops and guerrillas clashed in Argentina's northern Tucuman province and at least 14 guerrillas were killed, the news agency Noticias Argentinas said Tuesday.

It said an undetermined number of guerrilla survivors of the clash were surrounded by troops but it was not known if

The army neither confirmed nor denied the agency report.

The reported deaths in the first major clash between the army and guerrillas this year raised to 16 the number of persons killed in political violence so far in 1976. There were a total of 898 such deaths last year.

The agency said the clash occurred in mountains near the village of La Florida southwest of Tucuman City, 800 miles north of Buenos Aires in one of Argentina's poorest provinces.

The guerrillas were believed to be members of the Marxist-oriented People's Revolutionary Army (ERP), one of the two main guerrilla forces in Argentina and one of the most active in Latin America. The other guerrilla group is the left-wing Peronist Montoneros.

The army has been fighting rural ERP guerrillas in Tucuman for 11 months. There are an estimated 3,000 troops in the area while military sources estimated the guerrilla force at around 200.

But the ERP reportedly sends in reinforcements regularly, including guerrillas from neighboring countries such as Chile, Uruguay and Bolivia.

On the economic front, the government said Monday night inflation reached a record 834.8 per cent in 1975 and President Isabel Peron's leading economic critic predicted 500 per cent inflation this year.

At the same time, the government announced it was lifting exchange controls Wednesday for foreign tourists and Argentine travelers in an effort to obtain dollars that have been going mainly into the black market.

The official rate has been 60 pesos to the dollar while the black market level varied from 110 to 140 pesos to the dollar.

Recreational programs offered to adults by city

Everyone needs to get away from the physics, advanced Latin and ATL sometimes, and one of the best ways is to take advantage of the East Lansing school-city activity program.

There is still time to sign up for the educational and recreational programs being offered by the city—programs like assertiveness training, belly dancing, macrame, karate, knitting and crocheting, cross-country skiing, modern dance, typing and swimming. Everyone must pre-register for these and other programs. Questions about these adult programs can be answered by calling the Community Education Office, 332-2636.

DNR aiding warblers' struggle

By CAROLYN FESSLER
State News Staff Writer

While most birds industriously construct nests for their young, the brown-headed cowbirds have a good time making eggs which they deposit and abandon in other birds' nests.

In a case of what a Department of Natural Resources (DNR) official calls "a lot of free love and no responsibilities," the brown-headed cowbird's parasitic reproduction pattern is creating a major problem for wildlife agencies protecting the Kirtland's warbler, an endangered species that nests only in Michigan.

"The cowbird never builds its own nests but simply lays its eggs in nests of birds smaller than itself," John Byelich of the DNR said. "About 60 to 70 per cent of the Kirtland's warbler's nests are parasitized by the cowbird."

"When they use a Kirtland's Warbler's nest, the young cowbirds push the warbler chicks out of the nest after they hatch," he said.

The entire world population of the rare warbler as of June, 1975, is 179 pairs, all of them in northeast lower Michigan. Byelich said that with aggressive parasitic birds like the cowbird inhabiting the same area as a vanishing species, the uphill battle for survival grows even steeper.

"By trapping the cowbirds and destroying them, we are helping the productivity of the warbler species increase," he said.

A member of the U.S. Fisheries and Wildlife rescue team described the methods used to eliminate the cowbird, which is about the size of a robin.

"We place a few decoy birds and some sunflower seeds in a large box," Jim Matson said. "The cowbird, being gregarious creatures, will flock down and are then captured."

The birds are then placed in large plastic bags and suffocated with vehicle exhaust fumes.

"It takes about 10 seconds to kill a whole bagful of birds," Matson said.

The number of cowbirds captured by the rescue team is a drop in the bucket compared to their nationwide population figures, which are in the millions.

"Many of the blackbirds we've heard about on the news that are bothering people in Kentucky and Tennessee are actually brown-headed cowbirds," Byelich said.

Don Beaver, assistant professor of zoology at MSU, said that the cowbirds are the major nest parasite in the United States. Another bird that leaves its eggs in other birds' nests is the cuckoo, but it lives mostly in Europe and Africa, he said.

SN board appoints head, four new members seated

The State News Board of Directors elected a new president at its December 17 meeting and discussed proposed changes of the newspaper's nonprofit incorporation bylaws at its December 17 meeting. The Board postponed action on the bylaws until its January 14 meeting, however.

Student member Michael Orr, 22-year-old business major serving his second term on the board, was elected President, making him the first student to serve as head of the 8-member board.

A board committee headed by Orr has been working on the bylaw revision since May, when the editorial department requested revisions in the bylaws to clarify the role of the general manager and editor.

Orr said the revisions are designed to "merely clarify existing shortcomings, specify various departmental roles and clarify the purpose of the paper" and do not contain any "striking changes."

General manager Gerald Coy, charged by the editorial department last May with overstepping the bounds of his role, said the new bylaw proposal would make the general manager an official adviser to the board of directors and the editor-in-chief answerable to the board.

Orr said the committee which reviewed the bylaws consulted Coy, the State News attorney, the editor-in-chief and the advertising manager.

Four new board members also took their seats at the December meeting, including John O'Donnell, professor of business, who was elected vice-president of the Board.

Other new members include John Molloy, professor of social science, and students Randy Walanis and Sharon Winzler.

Several editorial department representatives have challenged Winzler's appointment, charging that a conflict of interest exists in her appointment.

Winzler works for the Jackson Citizen Patriot and, as a board member, will serve with

Social service

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A private social service agency is embarking on a program to improve family togetherness in low-income households through picture taking.

"Taking family pictures is something most people take for granted," said Roger J. Sullivan of Child and Family Services of Connecticut.

But for those who can not afford it, a camera and the processing costs simply can not be found in the budget.

Under a $60,000 grant from the Hartford Foundation for Public Giving, the social agency will provide free to families in poor neighborhoods film, cameras, photo albums and photo processing worth thousands of dollars.

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) - The U.S. attorney for New Jersey on Tuesday accused the head of the Internal Revenue

Service of jeopardizing investigations of white collar crime and political corruption by withdrawing IRS accountants from probes into wrongdoing. U.S. Atty. Jonathan Goldstein charged that IRS commissioner Donald C. Alexander

"has effectively removed from the war against corruption the most effective weapon that the United States possesses - IRS accounting agents."

Goldstein said Alexander has prompted a fundamental shift in tax enforcement policy.

"The commissioner has attempted to justify his shift in policy on the false premise that crimes such as extortion and bribery do not result in violations of the tax laws," Goldstein said.

"If the last six years have demonstrated nothing else, it is that in every single instance in which the crime of either extortion or bribery is committed, there is as well a federal income tax violation," he said.

Goldstein said payments of cash are deducted illegally in bribery and extortion cases, and the recipients of cash do not report it as income on federal tax returns.

"When an illegal cash payment is made, the crimes of bribery, extortion and tax violations occur simultaneously," Goldstein said.

"Accordingly, there is no justifiable reason for IRS agents to be withdrawn from corruption investigations."

Goldstein addressed a tax conference at Seton Hall University. He said his remarks were personal views and do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the U.S. Justice Dept.

However, the department has been at odds with the IRS over the policy of active participation by IRS agents in white collar investigations. Alexander contends the IRS should be involved only in inquiries involving tax-related matters. Goldstein listed 14 investigations of public corruption in New Jersey that he said could not have been completed successfully without the help of skilled IRS accountants.

He said the IRS also played a major role in the investigation and prosecution of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in the Watergate scandals.

Goldstein asked Alexander not to withdraw "this army of skilled accountants from the battle of corruption." As an alternative, he urged that special IRS agents be transferred to the Justice Dept.

"If this is not possible, they would recommend that the Justice Dept. contract with certified public accounting firms to perform special audits in aid of its investigations," Goldstein said.

Date arranged for MSU appeal to NCAA

Scarborough, associate professor of natural science, and Frederic D. Williams, professor of history and adjunct professor of military science.

Wharton added that both he and Leland Carr, vice president for legal services, would attend the hearing. Wharton also noted that MSU head football coach Denny Stolz would not make the trip to St. Louis. (Stolz is presently in Tampa, Fla., where he will serve as coach of the "North" team in the American Bowl this Saturday.)

Anthony DeCello, attorney for MSU assistant coaches Howard Weyers and Charles Butler, whose names have popped up frequently during the investigation, indicated that he is studying the situation and was uncertain whether he would represent his clients at the conclave.

The appeal is the final step of the investigation initiated last April. MSU supposedly was cited for 70 alleged recruiting violations. An initial hearing was held by the NCAA Infractions Committee in Denver last October. The University was notified of the results of that hearing Dec. 4 and requested the appeal.

The Council, if it upholds the Infractions Committee findings, could levy penalties ranging from a reprimand to probationary status for the football team and dismissal of some or all of the coaching staff.

The Big Ten, of which MSU is a member, is also conducting its own study of the allegations and will make a report later.

Sources have indicated that if any action is taken to reprimand members of the coaching staff for football squad, legal action would be pursued based on the infringement of the defendants' constitutional rights by the NCAA.

S. Africa suffers losses

Front FNLA has received U.S. money and supplies.

Tass, monitored in Moscow, said the "national army of the People's Republic of Angola" had launched an offensive on nearly all fronts. It said South African troops had suffered "heavy losses near the Angolan towns of Kibala and Santa Comba," and that the South African and U.S.-backed factions had abandoned numerous towns.

Both Tass and a South African newspaper, the Rand Daily Mail, reported that the MPLA had captured Carmona, in northern Angola, from the FNLA.

Tass, also said the MPLA had seized the town of Negaje from the FNLA and captured large groups of foreign mercenaries. It did not give their nationalities.

In other Angolan developments:

• The Soviet Union sharply denied the charge of a British political leader that it had paid a $50 million bribe to a West African leader for his support of the Moscow-backed group in Angola. Tass labeled the statement Saturday by Liberal party chief Jeremy Thorpe as "nothing else but an impudent lie." The British government also discredited the Thorpe claim, saying Monday he had not substantiated it.

• Newspapers in Nigeria reported that 5,000 Nigerian youths have volunteered to fight alongside forces of the Soviet-backed faction in Angola. The youths belong to the Patriotic Front for Africa, which was described as a revolutionary organization opposed to all forms of neo-colonialism and imperialism in Africa.

Board of Education audited

is supposed to reimburse the federal government for the 80 per cent payment.

But the auditors found that the state has failed to credit the government with $15,098 over that 25 months, a situation that Jursa says is being cleared up.

Also, instead of sending a notice to a student 30 days after he or she has defaulted on a loan and another notice 30 days after the first one has been unanswered, the board has taken from 5 to 13 months to send the first letter and an additional 3 to 6 months to send the second notice.

The audit also revealed that close to 30 per cent of the Parent's Confidential Statements (PCS) that are submitted to the state, to establish financial need of a student, are inaccurate. The auditors said that the state should require the federal tax returns of the student's parents in addition to the PCS, a suggestion that Jursa said is unrealistic because many income tax forms are not completed by the April 1 financial award announcement deadline.

Jursa said that an audit of 5 or 6 qualified people to the present staff of 12 professionals and 35 staff personnel would clear up all of the problems. He added that the problems are being slowing worked on and that he would find the audit useful as leverage in prodding the legislature for more people.

Student voting

ballots into the boxes."

Joe Brockington, president of the Council of Graduate Students (COGS) said that the council approved a resolution urging all graduate students to vote on the PIRGIM referendum, but remained neutral on the issue itself.

"We supported the referendum," said Brockington, "but we didn't take a stand on the issue. We did not urge students to vote either way."

Elaine McCartney, N. Fairview Road, Lansing, manned one of the ballot tables. "Most are voting," she said, "but many don't know what for." Several students approached the workers asking questions about what the ballots were for. "A lot of them come up to us and ask us," McCartney said, "but we can't say anything. We just tell them they have the option of voting or not voting."

Flags on cops

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - The American flag patches on 600 city police uniforms won't be stripped off this Bicentennial year as ordered earlier. Police Chief Earl Burden said Monday.

Burden said the flag patches, which a five-man uniform committee recommended be removed, will stay.

The committee had said the flag patches, added to uniforms five years ago, "were hard to keep on uniforms and were hard to line up... and detracted from the appearance of the uniform."
