Wharton orders cut in University budget

By CAROLYN FESSLER

State News Staff Writer
An all-University budget cut of up to 2 per cent was ordered Wednesday by President Wharton, cinching the budget belt another notch tighter for students, faculty and service workers.

Colleges and other academic units have been told to find areas in their budgets that could be cut by 1.8 per cent while non academic units were given a 2 per cent reduction target to help the University meet a projected June 30 deficit of $1.8

President Wharton said the action was necessary because of legislative call-backs of part of the University's 1975-76 state appropriation and also because of inflationary erosion.

The state has withdrawn $1,230,000 from MSU to help meet the statewide deficit," he said.

Elliott Ballard, assistant to the president, explained that the state constitution prohibits a planned deficit and when the state appropriates more funds than it has, the money must be withdrawn. All statesupported groups and institutions are affected by Gov. Milliken's order.

The $1-per-credit-hour tuition surcharge levied on students for winter and spring terms will raise an estimated $900,000 Wharton said, but under-funded utility costs and other unmet expenses in University programs make up the large deficit. Since the University does not want to place a further financial burden on currently enrolled students, the only means of balancing the budget is to tighten the internal economy of the University, Whar-

Neither Ballard nor Roger Wilkinson, vice-president for business and finance, could predict what programs would be hit hardest by the budget cuts until the deans and department heads submit proposals for decreased spending in their own programs.

important legislative compromise was led late Monday when Gov. Milliken arious legislative leaders agreed to and control the moving of state from Lansing to a complex for dary state offices in Dimondale.

The compromise was stated Tuesday in letters from Milliken to Senate Majority Leader William Fitzgerald, D-Detroit, and House Speaker Bobby Crim, D-Davison.

Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, worked on the agreement. Nelson, who has been opposed to the move of state departments to the secondary complex, expressed hope that the final answer to whether state offices should be located in or out of the city of Lansing is in sight.

Nelson and other Lansing legislators have long opposed the move on state constitutional grounds, saying that the Constitution stipulates that "principle departments... shall keep their offices at the seat of government except as otherwise provided by law." The area legislators also predicted a move to the secondary complex would isolate governmental services from Lansing's population, decentralize and slow-up an already slothful state bureau-

Nelson said that the governor's agreement promised no attempts to change the state law and included withdrawal of the governor's support of seven bills tabled in senate which would amend the law to allow the state offices to move.

Another facet of the compromise creates commission to define "primary" and "secondary" offices of state government and to promote a bonding project to build more state office buildings in Lansing. Nelson said that he anticipates being on the Molin said that he was happy that the ompromise was struck but feels "exiled" because he cannot be with his department.

Labor Chief Deputy Director Alvin Pickett, who will move to the secondary complex and assume immediate responsibility for the office's daily operations, said that the move should not cut down on the services rendered.

"We've never had that much walk-in traffic," Pickett said about people coming to the department for service. He said that the effect of separating the department is unknown, adding that if the department's move cuts the availability of services and if more state offices are built in Lansing, the Labor Dept. Boston integration plan upheld BOSTON (AP) — The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld on Wednesday this year's court-ordered integration program for Boston schools and accused the elected administrators of "resistance, defiance and delay.

In a unanimous 51-page decision, the three-judge panel upheld every aspect of the controversial busing program ordered last May by U.S. District Court Judge W. Arthur

"The overriding fact of the matter is that the district court in this case had to deal with an intransigent and obstructionist school committee majority," the appeals court said. "These elected officials engaged in a pattern of resistance, defiance and delay."

The integration program, which required the busing of 21,000 of about 80,000 students in the school system, has resulted in a boycott and occasional disruptions in some schools, mostly in white neighborhoods. It began in September 1974 and was expanded for 1975.

The FTC forbade implying that Geritol or Femiron would ease tiredness, weakness, run-down feelings, nervousness or irritability, unless the ads pointed out that most such symptoms do not result from iron deficiency or anemia and that most people would not benefit from the preparations.

Great Issues programs agued by lack of input

By CAROL LEIGH HUTTON State News Staff Writer

Lack of student input, absence of adequate facilities and the schedules of important persons are a few of the many problems plaguing ASMSU's Great Is

The student organization whose pur pose is to bring interesting programs to MSU faces a series of disappointments and cancellations each term.

Jeff Montgomery, coordinator of Great Issues, said that most students fail to understand what is involved in the organization of these programs.

We don't know what the students want and don't want to see and hear," Montgomery said. "A small committee just can't decide for the whole student body We're dying to find out As soon as something comes out that no one wants to see, boy do we find out then"

Besides decisions by the staff of nine students, Great Issues is sometimes contacted by agencies wishing to sell a speaker or program.

Student suggestions are the most sought after, though often they are not feasible. Last term a student suggested contacting economist Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago. When Great Issues looked into it they found his fee to be more than they could afford.

Lack of available space in which to hold programs is another major problem the organization faces. Great Issues competes with Pop Entertainment and Lecture Concert Series for the same facilities.

Often the problem of space limitations is coupled with that of cancellation when a scheduled speaker wishes to re-schedule his appearance.

During Fall term Attorney F. Lee Bailey was forced to cancel an engagement to speak on campus and Great Issues is still working to re-schedule him this term. The same problem has recently arisen with Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who was to speak at MSU on Feb. 2.

"Cancellations fall within the nature of the thing," Montgomery said, "but they're still a disappointment even when they have the best reason in the world."

Great Issues now has two firm programs set up for this term as well as some tentative ones that have yet to be

City council considers paramedic program

By BRAD MARTISIUS

East Lansing residents may be the beneficiaries of a new paramedic program starting late this year — if the city council decides to invest the $20,000 the planning commission has ded for it for the first year.

The $20,000 would come from federal Community Development funds for the fiscal year starting in July. That money would buy for East Lansing a monitor defibrillator (used to stimulate stopped hearts), a biomedical telemetry radio (to send electrocardiograms to the hospital) and other equipment to be installed in ambulances.

It would also provide paramedical training for five firemen and pay for temporary replacements as the paramedics work to complete the 14-week course at Lansing

The idea is to enable the ambulance attendants to provide more complete first aid in the critical first minutes following an emergency call.

Unfortunately, there's a hitch. Fire Chief Arthur Patriarche said in a letter to the planning commission that not enough room exists in the present fire station to house the new and bigger ambulance he believes is necessary.

Consequently, he recommended to the city commission that the paramedic program is impractical until the city gets a new fire station. Patriarche also said that East Lansing's firemen have had sufficient medical training. Seven have Emergency Medical Technician training from the Red Cross.

However, Mike Amble, the executive secretary of the Tri-County Emergency Medical Services Council, said that many firemen were interested in taking the course in their spare time, meaning that replacements would not have to be hired. "We've talked to the East Lansing firemen," he said. "Most have said they would be willing to attend the paramedic classes in their spare time.'

He also said the Chevrolet van presently being used by the rescue squad could accommodate the extra equipment the paramedics would be using. "In any case, I think most of the firemen really want the extra capability to handle emergencies better," Amble said. "Firemen get frustrated when they are helpless to aid omebody who needs quick medical at answer calls in East Lansing, only one, Lansing Mercy, has trained paramedics. However, Amble said that Lansing Mercy's paramedics probably would not be used too often by Lansing residents because the fire department's rescue service is free while Lansing Merey has a minimum charge of Delta Tau Delta's goal is to raise $20,000 this year — about $2,000 more than last year. The marathon will consist of 50 hours of dancing with scheduled breaks where bands and performers will be on hand to entertain the crowd.

In addition, Detroit Lions stars Lem Barney. Joe Reed and Greg Landry will be there to encourage the dancers. As in last vear's event, a costume contest will be held among the dancers with additional prizes going to the best-costumed couple. An ed feature this year will be a fraternit member's attempt to break the world's basketball-dribbling record.
One of last year's winners, Rick Young, plans to compete again this year. He has taken first place for the past two years and also won the national competition two years ago. Of the 43 dancers who took part in last year's competition, 28 remained till the last day of the event.

All sturdy and hardy dancers are asked to register as soon as possible at the Delta Tau Delta House at 330 N. Harrison Road in East Lansing. A registration booth will also be set up at the Union the week before the marathon is scheduled to take place.

There is a $25 registration fee involved which is refundable at the end of the marathon. Many area businesses will spon sor a couple and pay the fee if the couple wears a shirt or some other item identifying

Couples are urged to sign up early so that they can begin to collect donations and sponsors to beat last year's record.

Cold turkey way to stop

HARPER WOODS (UPI) - It was the kind of emotion that preachers create in tent revivals or gung ho Marine sergeants inspire on the drill field.

Arthur W. Weaver, a department chief at the Veterans Administration hospital in Allen Park is the dedicated . his subjects are men and women who want to kick the habit

Program welcomes community newcomers

By ED LION

State News Staff Writer No one knows better than Suzanne Liddle about the harrowing trials and tribulations one encounters when attempting to establish a community agency.

As the newly-appointed coordinator of the year-old Buddy Family Program, Liddle must contend with problems that only a hardened administrator would be accustomed to. The fledgling agency which she inherited last week serves as a type of welcome program to families just moving into East Lansing.

Immediately upon assuming her position, Liddle was deluged by a host of administra-

"There's so much to do." she said. "I really don't know where to begin.' Among her upcoming tasks, Liddle must organize her new office at City Hall and velop efficient methods to contact newlyarrived families. Initiated last May by a recommendation from the Human Relations Committee, the Buddy Family Program was first conducted from the home of its original coordinator,

"In July Mrs. Behling moved to Florida and with her went all the files and information about the agency which she had compiled," explained Liddle

Now with the program's resurrection, Liddle must start from scratch.

"First on my mind is to let people know about our services," she said. "Our basic function is to help new families in East Lansing ease the usually uncomfortable rigors of moving. We find them through the school board or water department and then officially send them letters of welco offer them any information about their new community and in some cases match them with a host family to help them meet new friends."

Thus far the agency has contacted one new family, the Cussicks, formerly from Champaign-Urbana, Illinois.

"I think the program is very nice. My little boy threatened to stay in Illinois if we moved, but with this hospitality who can go wrong?" said Mrs. Cussick.

According to City Manager John Patriarche, the program was a "moderate success" last year.

"At its high point we had twelve participating families: six newcomers and six hosts," explained Patriarche.

He further expressed confidence in the future of the program.

Anyone interested in participating in the Buddy Family Program can contact Liddle at East Lansing City Hall.

Pause now for state atomic energy study

One of the most critical choices America has had to face in years is upon us now. It has to do with our very way of life. The issue:

It is clear that we can no longer permit ourselves to writhe at the mercy of potentially hostile nations which increasingly control a resource with a highly questionable future.

If present trends and technologies continue, this nation will slide into an era of nuclear energy - an era which it simply does not understand. Conflicting information, special interests and outright propaganda function to mask the truth.

Despite enormous volumes of study and analysis of the subject, vital questions, problems and unsettled procedures remain unanswered, unsolved and yet to be properly addressed.

A moratorium on construction of atomic plants, such as that proposed by State Rep. Lynn Jondahl, (D-East Lansing), is clearly needed to aid the public in this choice.

A rigid amount of time, such as the five years proposed by Jondahl's HB 5807, is probably unwise. But a flexible moratorium, which would permit a serious, unhampered study program, is

One test underway would determine an upper-bound threshold on the potential of reactor explosions so that protective coverings can be designed accordingly. While the prospect of such an explosion is slim — though not so minute as traditionally thought there is no firm idea what destructive potential a reactor holds. This study will not be completed until late in 1977.

Also being studied by the ERDA are the Emergency Core Cooling Systems (ECCS). The ECCS have come under fire because laboratory simulations have demonstratto theory.

Critically in need of study is the matter concerning human dosage and tolerance of radiation levels. The International Commission on Radiological Protection prescribed levels in 1966 which scientists now say should be reduced. Genetic damage from this magnitude of exposure may not manifest itself for generations.

Perhaps most critical of the ed that practice does not conform what to do with nuclear waste. No safe method of storing lethal radioactive materials for 250,000 years has yet been devised.

These questions cannot be put off. And others exist — the availability of uranium, for one. To find adequate answers, nuclear fission plant construction should be halted, the studies conducted and alternate forms of energy explored.

What lies at stake is nothing less issues confronting the public is than the certainty of our future.

It has recently been disclosed - much to the delight of the student community - that the cost of beer is increasing at a slower rate than the cost of other beverages such as milk and soda pop. Anti-drinking organizations have forsaken their sarsaparilla to worry aloud that people will drink more beer if it is less expensive.

If beer does eventually have an economic edge over milk, for instance, school systems with tight budgets might decide to offer beer and graham crackers for their standard kindergarten

A Stroh's beer advertising campaign aimed at cost-conscious parents could use as its slogan, "From one beer lover to each mother. . .

Deep in the bowels of the Internal Revenue Service building is a large steel door with a sign outside of it which says "Restricted Area - Authorized Personnel

Only."
Two armed guards are stationed in front of it and everyone who goes in and out is checked twice. This special bureau called FITF is in charge of devising Federal Income Tax Forms that no one can understand. A staff of cryptographers and code experts work day and night to devise new methods of foxing the taxpayer so he will be unable to fill out his 1040 Form.

Last May an IRS agent in the Minneapolis office started to go over the 1974 return of a soybean farmer in Duluth when he sat up with a start. The form had been filled out by the farmer himself and there were no

He immediately picked up his phone and called the director of FITF.

"Sir," the agent said, "I think someone has broken our 1040 code. I have a soybean farmer in Duluth who filled out his tax return without the aid of an accountant or a tax lawyer.'

'GOLLY GEE, JULIE — I KNEW WE WERE BORING, BUT NOT THAT BORING!

'Are you sure it just wasn't an accident?" the director said.
"Certain, sir. He was even able to fill out

Part III 16 B which refers to Section D Lines 12 (a) and 14 (c) by combining the amounts shown on line 5 and 13." "Oh my God," the director said. "Did he get Part V Question 40 by reducing his gain on line 18 to the extent of the loss, if any, on line 39, as referred to in Instruction K?" "Perfectly, sir. It's as if he had our code book in front of him while he was filling out the form."

"I'll notify the commissioner and secretary of the treasury at once." The director hung up and picked up his red hot - line

An hour later a group of grim - faced people were sitting in the office of the secretary of the treasury who was pacing up and down.
"How did it happen?" he shouted at the commissioner of internal revenue. "You promised me that no one would be able to make head or tail of the 1974 return.

The commissioner looked angrily at the director of FITF. "What happened, Mulligan?"

"I don't know," said Mulligan. "Maybe the soybean farmer is some kind of mathema-tical nut. We tried the 1974 form out on 10,000 people, including 1,000 IRS agents, and not one of them understood it. It seemed foolproof." The secretary of the treasury walked over to his window. "Do you know what this means? If a soybean farmer in Duluth has the key to our 1040 returns that means other people will soon have it. We'll have millions of people filling out their own income tax forms. It could destroy every country."

The commissioner said, "It looks like we have no choice. We're going to have to change the 1040 Form and make it so complicated that even H & R Block won't understand it. Can you do it, Mulligan?" "Yes sir," Mulligan replied. "But I'll need

"Take anyone you want," the secretary of the treasury said. "This has highest priority. The very fabric of the American tax system is at stake. I want daily reports on your progress. I want that form to look the greatest bunch of gobbledygook anyone has ever read."

The commissioner said, "We'll do it, sir. By the time the new returns are sent out there won't be five people in the country who will know how to fill it out." "Not five people!" the secretary including myself."

Mulligan replied, "Don't wan, Secretary. When my people get is with it the American taxpayer wal be able to find the right line for is and address."

The rest is history. As every received his 1040 Tax Form for 1971 FITF came up with a return that imagination. The secretary was so, he presented Mulligan with the "Ul of Bureaucratic Balderdash with a Leaf Cluster," the highest award agency can bestow on an IRS employee.

CENTUERS To the Editor

Foaming at mouth

The following is an open letter to Curtis Stranathan, co-author of the Viewpoint "Capitalism" appearing in the Dear Curtis:

Unfortunately, you are foaming at the mouth again. I see that the adverse publicity to your circus performance at the last board of trustees meeting did not phase you in the least. But I suppose Benedict Arnold had a masochistic streak also. Why is it that you insist on calling my school and country by such a nasty six letter word like "racist." Have you no tact or compassion at all? After all it is our 200th birthday, or would you rather have us celebrate our funeral?

Those are pretty cliche words and phrases you and Paul put together. "Crisis of overproduction," I like that one, "Boss controlled media" is really catchy. But the real recruiter is that "we have nothing to lose but our chains and a world to win.' Now who in the hell do you think you're conning, Curtis?

I an a member of your working class who strives very hard to earn money to pay for one of the finest eductions available in this country. I even pay out of state fees and I am not advocating revolution to bring down the cost of an already overburdened educational system. Our country has survived a revolution, two world wars, a severe depression and an infamous Watergate. Yet, look at Italy, Russia, China and Portugal, who have al crumbled at one time or are presently crumbling. They lack the true endurance, strength, optimism, leadership and dedication that typifies real Americans. Our nation is malleable and your so called "built in defects" can be corrected without rising up and tearing down 200 years of develop

Bad journalism

Because I "useta-be-a-newspaperpersonmyself' I was relieved to note, at the end of Michael Slaughters "Viewpoint: Bicentennial" (State News, Jan. 7) that his major is zoology. Then I realized that the State News editor(s) who decided to use it are probably J majors, Good Griefl

If the piece represents Slaughter's actual experience it should have included real names and places, and its failure to do so constitutes sloppy journalism. If — as some aspects suggest — the piece constitutes a flight of creative fancy, primarily reflecting staughter's assumptions and prejudices, then its fictional character should have been Slaughter's assumptions and made clear, and failure to do so constitutes sloppy journalism.

For that matter, if it was essentially a 'creative writing" exercise, its claim to newspaper space is questionable; it might better have been left to some "creative writing" publication.

In defense

The State New's recent attack on University College (an "unsatisfactory . . structure") is disturbing but hardly unexpected: similar diatribes against the college have long been a standard SN feature. although the tone of these attacks has become slightly more ferocious since the current editor-in-chief took command.

UC is charged with failing to "fulfill (its) purpose of increasing students' compe-tency" in all areas within its academic jurisdiction. With barely concealed glee, the editorial looks forward to the day (regrettably "far off in the future") when the college's mission will be discharged by more conventional, and presumably more capable, units.

Aside from his own impressionistic evaluation, our editorialist offers no sub-stantiation for his indictment. Indeed, no such evidence exists. By commonly accepted and measurable criteria of excel-lence — e.g., credentials, publications, awards for teaching and scholarship — UC ers do not significantly differ from their colleagues in other University units. Moreover, having chosen to teach in UC, they have demonstrated a degree of commitment to general education which is not necessarily apparent in the regular disciplinary departments.

I would suggest that student re such as it is, is focused not on UC but rather (as the regular departments will soon discover) on general education itself, which many construe as an irrelevant impediment to vocational specialization. This is the real issue, and it invites serious and extended deration from all those who conside MSU something more than a trade school.

Wolf danger

Dear Ms. Sirk:

Thank you so much for your letter last term warning of the dangers of wolves and supporting the planned aerial hunting of wolves in Alaska. Since your letter I have been terrorized with the thought of wolves leaving the tundra and descending on the nts of Alaska! Only recently have I regained my wits enough to write this

Again, thank you for your letter as it destroyed some misconceptions I had about wolves. I had always thought wolves were shy of humans and avoided civilization. Earlier, I believed if wolves decimated their food supply the wolves would be reduced in number by lack of food and then the food supply would increase

I had also been duped by propaganda saying that unfit members of the big game populations were most likely the first to be dators (including resulting in a better animal population. Now, of course, I firmly believe that wolves will eat humans after they have devoured all the moose. Indeed, I also believe the wolves will strike in the heart of our great cities.

However, there is one thing that I do not understand, Ms. Sirk: There are wolves and noose on Isle Royale National Park here in Michigan. This island is out in Lake Superior and under normal circumstances no animals can reach the park from the mainland. In addition, no hunting is Yet, the wolves have not eradicated the moose and beaver they feed upon. The wolves have not attacked the backpackers in the summer or the Purdue and MTU researchers who visit Isle Royale in the winter. How come the wolves of Michigan act differently than the wolves in Alaska?

Ms. Sirk, we cannot rest. There is another animal threat to humans we cannot ignore. Bald eagles and golden eagles (and there are so many of these ugly birds) carry human babies off to their nests to feed their young. Spread the word!

The campus police chief, Joe Scarpia (S), has his cops pick up C for harboring a fugitive. Already smitten by Ms. T, S hopes to bargain for her favors by using C as a pawn. However, confronting him in his own police station, Ms. T asks him in tones loaded with significance if C has been given his Miranda warnings. Thus foiled, S releases C, but in his corrupt dealings with the mafia underworld he prevails on the mafiosi to pick up C and "work him over." This they proceed to do, singing happily as they work.

Ms. T uses her local political connections to get an appointment with the local mafia chieftain, or don as he is known affectionately to his colleagues. Don Corleone, although a man of violence, is not without some redeeming virtues. For one thing, his Italian sounds right. He is also a man of great personal honor and strict morality in matters concerning sex. On more than one occasion he has disciplined his lieutenants and his own sons for their extramarital

When he is introduced to Ms. T he too succumbs to her charms. It's love at first sight. He issues orders to have C released but insists on a face-saving ploy: his henchmen must think they have shot C, but actually he will be spared as a result of the guns being loaded with blanks. By now the singing is coming at us hot and heavy from all directions.

Playing cleverly on the don's superheated emotions, Ms. T inveigles him into what novelists and scriptwriters used to summarize discreetly as a compromising situa-tion. But this scene will be played very explicitly in the film and is expected to give it a hefty box office quotient.

Afterward Don Corleone is aghast at the transgression of his own code and at Ms. T's implicit threat to go to the wife whom he still loves and tell all. There is obviously only one thing he can do: he announces his intention to file suit for divorce and ask Ms.

T to marry him. Up to this point Ms. T has found his lusting after her body quite understandable and not without its appeal. But the thought of submerging her identity in the constraints of matrimony simply appalls her. Infuriated, she does him in forthwith, using what wrestling aficionados will recognize as a full body slam supplemented by a karate chop.

She hastens to the mock execution just in time to rush to C's prostrate form. After the mafiosi depart, C and Ms. T adjourn to a nearby bar. An Epilogue several years later shows them living in happily unwedded bliss on the same campus, but now as junior faculty members — he in the art department, she in the law school, both in the tenure stream. Still singing, of course.

ames Reston, the Big Bertha of the Establishment, was terribly ofthe exchange. There was, to with, the...language. So....coarse. elicacy of language and precision of he sniffed, "this makes Mr. Ford's nts on detente and Angola seem eloquent and statesmanlike for one thing, that happens to be the way Americans talk. It is good, idiomatic, John-hit-the baseball prose. Moreover, there is a skillful blend in it of carrot and stick. There is a highly useful syntactical inflection in the opener, "Hey, fellas." That is the American equivalent of the English, "I say, old chap..." It preserves a conversa-tional relationship. It is to be distinguished from, say, "Listen, buster..." Or even, "Okay, wiseguys."

Then there was the matter of policy. "...When Reagan was asked what he would have the United States do if the Russians didn't blink or withdraw their support in Angola, he refused to answer. Refused, even, to say whether he would break off the strategic arms talk." Such evasiveness Mr. Reston finds terribly offensive. In fact it is extremely statesmanlike.

Once upon a time, not so many years ago, Dwight Eisenhower was President of the United States, and the Red Chinese were bombing Quemoy and Matsu, the off-shore islands governed by Taiwan. The Chinese increased the ferocity of their attacks, aided and encouraged by Khrushchev, and Ike went on the air. He spoke of the dangers of a "western Pacific Munich." Critics of Eisenhower's toughness were wild with fear and trembling. Adlai Stevenson panicked, which is what he was always best at, and spoke of our coming "closer to war." Ike replied that if the Red Chinese "have now decided to risk a war over Quemoy, it can only be because they and their Soviet allies have decided to find out whether threatening war is a policy from which they can make big gains." To surrender to such threats, he said, would "encourage the aggressors," "dismay our friends and allies" and "make it more likely that we would have to fight a major war" in due course.

But pressed to specify what exactly he would do if the Chinese invaded Quemoy, Eisenhower refused to say. Quite right. Why advertise the exact specifications of your displeasure? A few months later, Khrushchev would reiterate his ultimatum on the matter of Berlin. Eisenhower said that we would defend the freedom of Berlin. Well, exactly how? he was asked. Again he declined to say. But he then dropped a single word which, quite simply, guaran-teed the freedom of Berlin. He was asked, Would he rule out the use of atom weapons to defend Berlin? Eisenhower said: "No."

There is one extreme. At the other extreme would be, let us say, a complaint against the Soviet Union addressed to Kurt Waldheim. In between there are a great many potential sanctions. The shipment of wheat is an obvious one. The SALT talks is another. Trade with the Soviet Union of one kind or another.

The fact of the matter is that the Soviet Union is not withdrawing from Angola, and the government of the United States is doing nothing about it. Now either we should do something about it or we Reagan believes we should and so. I warrant, do the people of New Hampshire. Not out of any love for Angola, but out of a simple commitment to preserve a rough equilibrium in this world rather than to let it dribble off piecemeal to the aggressors. We stopped them from taking Quemoy, which is as vulnerable to the Chinese as Staten Island would be to the United States. But we did not specify what we would do: and Reagan is correct in failing to specify, and the pitch of his language is exactly correct.

VIEWPOINT: TOTALITARIANISM

Aid neither Chile nor USSR

By STEPHEN PAZIN

I became most disturbed reading of Mr. Hamilton's recent (and unreasonable) support for U.S. aid to Chile. I did find myself in agreement with him, however, on several points. My intention here is to respond to some of the ignorance and to expand on the subjects involved.

Mr. Hamilton insists that 1970 was the end of Chilean democracy because of the election of a self-styled Stalinist (Allende) who, with the help of his terrorist friends in the MIR, personally brought political and economic ruin to Chile. This is nonsense!!!

Where is the proof of Allende's supposed connections with these terrorists? And how can anyone with sense blame just one man for all of that savagery?? I have to agree that in politics and economics Allende was an imbecile, and he certainly was no martyr; but he was just as surely no savage totalitarian. On this point Mr. Hamilton displays almost total ignorance of Chilean history and of the nature of totalitarianism itself. Where is the proof of your indictments, Mr. Hamilton?

Again, I concede to Mr. Hamilton about the role of the CIA; it was insignificant considering the complex maze of events in Chile since 1970. And it is true that Allende was responsible for some disastrous poli

What is lacking in Mr. Hamilton's analysis however, are the countless instances of sabotage against Allende's policies by the left, the right and the bigwigs of international finance. There were strikes by the middle class (some of whom had formerly supported Allende), sabotage by the MIR, and also violence and sabotage by commercial interests, e.g. the hoarding of foodstuffs. Add to this the lack of mercy (or should I say the frontal assault?) of the kingpins of international finance and the result is chaos, and certainly not development

There are more vital questions, yet to be answered, as to the reasons for such a violent change in regimes. In the first place, why not legally dispose of a stupid president (who happens to be Marxist) if the economy is in shambles? Could it be that the "spectre of Marxism" was more of a threat and a problem than a totally failing economy? Was mass slaughter the only viable tactic to be rid of one man, or was its purpose to be rid of sizable groups of leftist supporters who could not be eradicated by

If democracy was deemed more important than stupid fears of Marxism, why did international financial institutions, e.g. World Bank, etc., not use their influence to affect a change in Mr. Allende's policies? It is well known that these institutions can force governments with stagnating economies to play economies by the rules according to Smith, instead of Marx.

Instead, they chose to ensure the strangulation of a sick, but (as of then) still democratic, government. Now we have calls for world and U.S. aid to a military regime which has slaughtered countless numbers of humans and displayed a total disregard for true democracy. necessary to get to where Chile is today? Is the road to democratic development through mass slaughter, total destruction of the opposition and then through pity

The story of Chile's past is confusing. I make no claims to full knowledge about it, and I surely can't say why or how it all happened. But why provide yet more aid to yet another militarist government? Why give compensation to those who refuse to play the game of democracy by the rules?

Totalitarian is the label, not for the likes of an Allende, but more so for those who must destroy the opposition before they will play "democratically." Mr. Hamilton, can there ever be democracy without

It is imperative that we prevent aid to Chile for the same reason that we should refuse grain sales to the Soviet Union. We should grant aid to Chile only when it proves itself a democratic and legalistic society - no sooner. Likewise, we should sell grain to the Soviets only when they demonstrate substantive proof that they are following a policy of detente.

Currently, detente in misunderstood by our government, as are foreign aid and developmental policies. We must make major reassessments before continuing with our hit and miss foreign policy. And w must forever continue to stand up to the likes of Mr. Hamilton and all others who display such ignorance about democracy and development, about what these things are and how they come about.

New York opera stars to appear in 'Tosca'

By ED ZDROJEWSKI State News Reviewer

Once again, opera in the grand tradition will grace the stage of the University Auditorium as the Opera Guild of Greater Lansing and the MSU Dept. of Music will present performances of Giacomo Puccini's "Tosca" at 8 p.m. Friday and 7 p.m. Sunday.

in New York. The story of Puccini's opera is set in 1800 in a Rome torn by strife between the Bonapartists (republicans) and the monarchists. The plot centers around the sauve, corrupt Baron Scarpia, one of the most monstrously evil characters in operatic literature, and the love be-tween the countess Tosca and the idealistic painter, Cavara-dossi. The story is filled with passion, intrigue and violence in the tradition of Italian melo-

Although the opera is set in 1800, Puccini was well aware of the atmosphere of political violence. When "Tosca" was written, the Italian government, a constitutional monarchy, was following the reactionary policies of Luigi Pelloux. (Puccini may have had Pelloux in mind in his portraval of Baron Scarpia.) Pelloux met with strong, and often violent, opposition from leftist elements. Their small businesses became big businesses

Why? Because they filled a need. They did the job. People liked the way they did business, and their businesses grew.

Such growth, a logical and even necessary phenomenon in the private-enterprise system, seems sorely misunderstood today. "A growing volume of criticism equates bigness with badness," says Randall Meyer, president of Exxon Co. U.S.A. "Big business" is portrayed as a monster born full-grown, determined to snuff out little competitors and run roughshod over consumers.

Neither the historical record nor the economic and social realities of America today support such a view. Big business has not "cornered" the U.S. marketplace and work force. Bureau of Census statistics show that only 12,169 of more than three million U.S. businesses are "big"that is, employ more than 500 people-while there are 1,722,250 small businesses with one to three employes. The "big" businesses employ 15.6 million workers out of a total work force of 86.6 million.

Nor has big business cornered the nation's wealth. The approximately 5 percent of American wealth (property, plant and equipment, and > basic economic reasons why some businesses grow big and others stay small. Big jobs, like the production of steel, chemicals or great quantities of such complex products as automobiles or television sets, require huge investments of capital, raw materials and managerial and technical skills. Indeed, looking to the world problems of energy, natural resources and the environment, one must conclude, as has noted historian C. Northcote Parkinson, that big business must grow bigger be-cause "the research that underlies the discoveries, whether geophysical in Alaska, or chemical in West Germany, demands a scale of investment that is beyond the reach of the family firm.

But sometimes even relatively simple products, like razor blades or chocolate bars, require "bigness" because of the enormous markets that exist for them. Then, too, we are living in an age when the efficiency of bigness, the "economy of scale" as it is called, is vital if companies are to remain competitive. This is especially true where the competition consists of huge foreign combines backed heavily by their governments' treasuries. General Motors may account for 43 percent of U.S. auto sales, but it has only 22 percent of the world market. U.S. Steel is a domestic giant, but it has a tough time against such inventories) held by U.S. manufac- foreign concerns as Japan's Nippon

It's time for facts rather than illogical fears about "big" business

Steel, the world's largest steelmaker. This same situation is faced by big American companies in other fields as they compete in a global market against giants such as Royal Dutch Shell, in petroleum and chemicals; Unilever, the huge British-Dutch food and detergent firm; Nestlé, the vast Swiss corporation. The enormous research and development required to compete in such markets is simply beyond the means of small companies.

On the other hand, there are innumerable tasks-the sale of consumer goods and services, home and automobile repairs, restaurants, to name a few-that can be handled efficiently by both small and large businesses in a local area.

It is important to realize that businesses big and little carry out their tasks in a vital atmosphere of interdependence. Small businesses for example, would be much less prosperous without the tools, raw materials, finished and semi-finished products they purchase from big firms. As Leo McDonough, executive vice president of the Smaller Manufacturers Council (comprising 575 companies), says, "If there weren't a U.S. Steel or a Jones & Laughlin spitting out fantastic amounts of steel and keeping prices down, our basic-materials costs would be out of reach."

But big companies need little companies, too. In a typical year, 3M Co. uses products and services from more than 30,000 small businesses - such as Gopher Electronics Co., in Minneapolis, and Calumet Screw Machine Co., in Chicago. Hewlett-Packard Co. deals with 6000 small American companies in its electronics business.

But what about competition? Aren't the big boys stamping it out and virtually dictating prices? No. There are many energetic, clever people making a success in business despite the presence of "big guys' in the same field. Robert Cuff, president of Entron Controls, Inc., in Carol Stream, Ill., proudly points out that his industrial-controls manufacturing firm can and does compete with the giants in certain areas. It has even sold control devices to some of General Electric's own corporate divisions. Says Cuff, "They buy from us-even though GE makes a similar product-because we can build it at a lower price and give faster delivery."

Remarks Irvine Robbins, of giant Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Co.: Sometimes when we get big, we get a little lazy, a little complacent." When his company grew big by concentrating on "walk-in, walk-out" ice-cream stores, Farrell's of Portland, Ore., moved profitably into the same market as BR with sitdown soda-fountain parlors. "They woke us up," says Robbins. "So we started concentrating on the fountain end of our business. The result was that we improved a little, and Farrell's is doing fine, too."

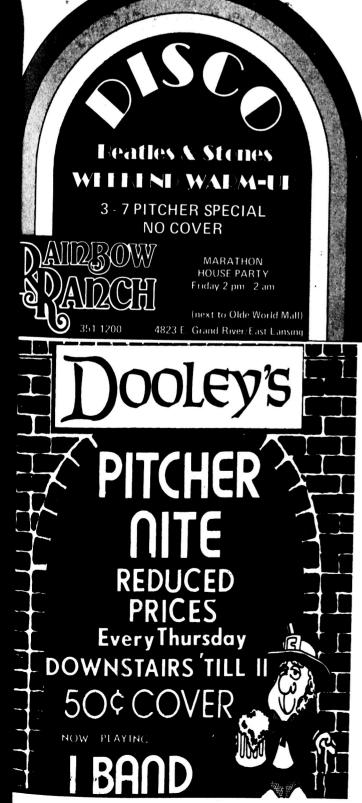

As to the charge that big business artificially keeps prices high, the facts again rip apart the rhetoric. A study economist J. Fred Weston, of the University of California, Los Angeles, reveals that the heavily concentrated industries (big business) have held prices down better than smaller and less concentrated ones. In industries where the top four companies had at least 75 percent of the business, prices rose an average of 47 percent during the inflationary period 1967-1975. But in the leastconcentrated sectors of industry, prices rose 70 percent in the same period. Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers. admits: "The old anti-trust notion -that, if you break things up into small competitive units, you will have lower competitive prices - may be wrong. General Motors, the biggest car producer, is without question the most efficient and most able to hold down the cost of its products."

Whatever their size, in the end, businesses in America must pass the test imposed by the most affluent and sophisticated consumers in the world. Any business must affirmatively answer those old questions: Does it do the job? Does it deliver the goods? Does it satisfy you?

MSU spikers back in action for 9th Waterloo Invitational

By ANN WILLIAMSON State News Staff Writer

It's been a while since the MSU women's volleyball team has seen any action, but they're all set to get back on the courts this weekend at the Ninth Annual Waterloo Invitational at Waterloo, Ontario.

The last time the Spartans competed was Dec. 11 through 13 at the Assn. of Intercol legiate Athletics for Women Nationals at Princeton Univer sity, where MSU finished ninth among the top 24 volleyball teams in the country.

At Waterloo, the Spartans will be up against 12 teams, the majority of them from Canadian universities. When the invitational opens with pool play, the Spartans will face the University Queens University and Laval University in their own pool, along with three teams from a different pool, York University, University of Windsor and the University of Waterloo. The four teams with the most wins after the pool play will then advance to the

Besides extensive competition from the Canadian teams. the Spartans will also need to adjust themselves to a different set of rules than they're used to-international rules.

"Usually in volleyball you're allowed an unlimited number of substitutions," coach Annelies Knoppers said. "International rules allow you only six, and since we usually substitute 12 to 18 times a game, this is going to make a difference for us.

"The international rules are also very loose in what they'll call a foul. You almost have to pick up the ball and throw it before they'll call it.'

But the Spartans have en-countered the international rules before this season, so most of their attention will be on improving last year's fifth place finish at the invitational and bumping the University of Western Ontario from their first place position.

Two of the Spartans' first-string players, Linda Russell and Gloria Graf, will not be with the team this weekend but Knoppers feels there are more than enough good replacements on the bench to fill the void.

But under the bridge are steam pipes that lead to several buildings on campus. If rats were to somehow get into the pipes, it could mean trouble for the buildings linked by the Dudderar pointed to two holes about five inches wide near the pipes where he had found evidence of rats. The holes were not made by rats, he said, but were made when small pipes had been installed under the bridge. Workmen never refilled the holes and it is not apparent where they lead to

Dudderar said another poten tial problem is that rats may scrape off the aluminum insula tion covering the pipes to make nests, thus causing some heat loss. The pest control division of the Dept. of Public Safety has known for some time of the existence of the rat population. Jack Haslam, pest control officer, said the areas where MSU's duck population feeds is the only certain region of rat activity. He said he did not think they nest all along the bank, but primarily feed off food people throw to the ducks. "The problem is not bad enough for rat control," he said. "You'd poison the ducks if you put out the poison.'

Dudderar concurred. "Rats aren't the problemthey're symptoms of a problem.

They depend on humans for food. If you've got rats, you know somebody's been sloppy. Dudderar said the rat activ

Hall rodent war escalates; tails of mice and mortals

State News Staff Writter

If a rat invasion of the campus seems only remote it looks as if the mice scurrying about MSU have more definite plans of conquest.

Since final exam week last term. Emmons residence hall has been struck by a plague of mice. The fourth floor in B wing of the hall appears to have been hardest hit by the blitzkrieg of the two-inch long furry critters.

"In the last three days, we've caught four mice," said Robert Lincoln, floor resident assis-

Rosie is a camel employed by the Israeli tourism office to draw the attention of prospective tourists. Last Tuesday she drew the attention of a bewildered police officer outside a hotel in downtown Los Angeles, where camels have been scarce since the last ice age.

There being no law on the books against double-parking a camel, he cited her for disrupt ing traffic.

Moshe Shoshani, director of the tourism office, knew better than to looks publicity gift horse, ahen camel, in the mouth, and paraded her in protest before city hall.

To counter the invasion of the incinerator room-hiding, garbage-pilfering mice, residents of the floor have adopted many defensive tactics.

At night time, when the mice usually roam the floor under the protective umbrella of darkness, pajama-clad guerillas armed with flashlights have ventured forth on rodent protective reaction strikes, pacification operations and search and destroy missions.

You Just Did!

Oh, every year hath its winter, and every year hath its rain— But a day is always coming When the birds go north again

What birds?, says Arnie over and over. There ain't a bird in sight. Birds or not, gloom of night regardless, Arnie and his truck Bertha press on. For behind the tightly locked doors and dimly lit windows of East Lansing dwell hordes of that creature known as the car driver. Congress.

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Dozens of constitutional amendments have been proposed in Congress in the past year, but most will eventually fade away without so much as a committee hearing.

A mere handful of proposals, mainly involving abortion, busing and District of Columbia voter registration, might still stir enough sentiment to provoke action in the House or Senate.

"We have a lot of resistance to changing the Constitution," said Thomas W. Hutchinson, a House judiciary subcommittee coun sel. "There's a belief that you ought not to amend the Constitution lightly.'

Many proposed amendments evolved from the Watergate scandal. Others are retirement age for U.S. Supreme Court judges, senators and representatives.

Recently, both the busing of school children to acheive desegregation and the issue of abortion have prompted proposals for constitutional amendments. But many lawmakers who are opposed to busing or abortion feel there are better ways to deal with the issues than by trying to amend the

If a proposed amendment did muster the two-thirds approval needed in both the House and the Senate, chances are slim that 38 state legislatures would ratify it in less

The last proposed amendment passed by Congress was the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) in 1972. It would ban discrimination based on sex. Four more states must ratify the ERA by 1979 if it is to be adopted.

Several anti-abortion amendments have been proposed. One of them would circumvent the U.S. Supreme Court's liberalized abortion ruling by giving states the power to make abortions illegal. Others would guarantee the "right to life" from the ent of fertilization" or from the time heartbeat begins.

Although anti-busing sentiment is gaining strength in Congress, a constitutional amendment to end busing is unlikely

Hearings were held last year on busing problems in Boston and Louisville, Ky., but a Senate judiciary counsel said, "Nothing further is scheduled now. We may kick it around a bit more but we're a long way

State set minimum GPA

Both Dean and Henry Kennedy, MSU's director of student teaching, stressed that the 2.0 minimum is set by the state of Michigan rather than MSU. The State of Michigan Certification Code states than no institution may admit a student to student teaching with less than a 2.0 GPA and a 2.0 is required for teacher certification.

I wonder if much thought was given to the 2.0 prerequisite," Politowicz scid. the student teachers are so deficient, how can we send them out to teach. If we're going to have a surplus of teachers we might as well have a surplus of competent

W. Robert Docking, superintendent of East Lansing schools, said most of the student teachers his schools receive from MSU are "great," but added that he only hires teachers who have grade point averages "significantly above" a 2.0.

Docking said he does not favor tightening the requirements for student teaching, because he would like everyone who would like to teach to have the opportunity.

The colleges of education have tightened up their entrance requirements," he said. "Since 1968-69, the 22,000 students were cut to 11,000. I think they ought to be able to become teachers and take their chances

Gulf chairman resigns

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Bob R. Dorsey resigned as chairman and chief executive of Gulf Oil Corp. in the wake of scandals involving a secret political slush fund, Gulf's board of directors announced early Wednes-

The announcement came at the end of an extraordinary 16-hour board meeting. Jerry McAfee, 59, currently president of Gulf Oil Canada, Ltd., was named new chairmand and chief executive officer, succeeding Dorsey, 63.

Dorsey's resignation came as a surprise since he had stated several times that he had nothing to do with the slush fund, which dispensed $12.3 million to politicians in the United States and abroad. He had previously indicated that he intended to stay on as chief executive.

The prime topic of the meeting was the so-called "McCloy Report," a 300-page study of Gulf's legal and illegal political contributions from 1960 to 1973.

It was prepared by a three-man committee headed by New York attorney John J. McCloy and was turned over to Gulf directors and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

It found that Dorsey "perhaps chose to shut his eyes to what was going on" with the political slush fund.

The board accepted the report and said it condemned the illegal and improper practices disclosed" by it.

represent the United States, with an American and south Texas flair "that would please the British people.

She said she may have to bone up on such topics as Common Market affairs and North Sea oil exploration but "I'm smart enough and energetic enough. I can do it."

Armstrong told reporters Wednesday she has only been to Britain once, when she was a 21-year-old student at Vassar. Looking ahead to the social-diplomatic life. she said she'll "probably have to get more elegant things than I'm used to — probably more evening dresses than I ever had in my
