Veyers hits nvestigation f recruiting By EDWARD L. RONDERS

State News Sports Writer
The shock has begun to sink in for assistant football coach Howard Weyers.

Weyers has been told he cannot recruit for three years for his part in MSU's recruiting violations. He can't comprehend the way the NCAA conducted its investigation. Nor can he clearly predict what the future holds for MSU football and one Howard Weyers.

The 1956 graduate of Thiel College in Pennsylvania explained his side of the NCAA investigation Tuesday.

"In my mind, the NCAA has not proven beyond a shadow of a doubt that we're guilty, or that we deserve such a severe punishment," he stated tersely.

Although Weyers admitted to eight rule violations, he questions the process of the investigation itself and the evidence on which the NCAA based its ruling.

"Take the matter of the credit card, for example," Weyers began. "We presented proof to the NCAA that two players had stolen the card and had used it. The Infractions Committee accepted that explanation but when we presented our appeal to the council, one council member said, 'That's a convenience story.'

"How can that be a story of convenience when two kids admitted to an act that could have resulted in criminal charges?" Weyers asked rhetorically.

"The mother of one of the players involved in that incident called me after the ruling and she was furious. She had originally come to campus to straighten out her son when she learned of his taking the card. The player then admitted it and dissolved the problem. And then the NCAA says that was for convenience."

Another area of contention in Weyer's mind is the testimony given by three Ohio State players charging the MSU assistant with various violations.

"The Infractions Committee dropped the complete testimony of one of the three," he said. "All three had made very similar allegations. They dropped the one player's story entirely, and rejected about 60 per cent of the other two player's statements.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that if they all had similar stories, it's strange they would drop one kid's charges and believe the others when essentially they were all

Weyers also questioned the council's decision not to ask why the Infractions Committee had dropped the player's alle-

But perhaps the element most frustrating to Weyers was the way the NCAA investigated the entire matter.

"I've received letters from parents who have sons I've recruited for MSU. These parents have told me that they were visited by an NCAA investigator. The person told these parents, "You know that Howard won't be there when we get done."

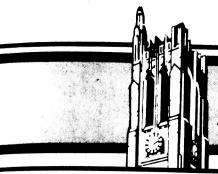

"Also, I have friends in the coaching business who have told me much the same thing," he continued.

"One such coach was told by an investigator that I would be gone. My friend replied that he worked alongside me in recruiting and that these charges were wrong. He then told the man that he was a personal friend of mine. The gentleman from the NCAA just shut his briefcase and walked out of the office without saying a Weyers also noted, "Parents of players here at MSU have become upset at the investigative tactics of the NCAA also. The investigators would come in, without the knowledge of President Wharton, Coach Stolz or anyone connected with the University, and tell these players they wanted to talk to them. The parents were upset because in some states where they live the age of consent is 21 and here their kids are being quizzed without benefit of counsel or even the knowledge of the University."

QUARANTINED

While the "Yellow Flu" epidemic that struck Detroit's elementary school students began ceding Tuesday, some parents still kept their children under "quarantine." Detroit officials said attendance in the entire school system was only about four percent ower than on an average day. Monday, when only elementary grades were in school, attendance was about 20 percent lower than normal.

Yellow Flu" is a boycott inspired by the 203 yellow buses the Detroit Public Scho system is using to transport 21.853 students to new classrooms under a desegregation plan that began Monday. Another 30,000 students walk to their new schools.

Authorities have reported only one incident so far - a man tried to block a bus with his car. Police removed the car and the bus continued its run. There also was a bomb scare at a chool, but no evidence was discovered to link it to the desegregation program.

Background

The ruling by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) authorizing the Student Workers Union (SWU) to hold an election to unionize comes after years of controversy involving the University, its students, ASMSU and SWU. The following is a chronology of events that have brought SWU to its present position:

Mid - April 1973 — Tim Cain organizes Kellogg Cafeteria workers to form a bargaining unit for off - campus student workers.

March 7, 1974 — MERC rules that the bargaining unit is too small and refuses to Sept. 1974 — ASMSU allocates $710 for development of a student labor organization. Oct. 2 — Almost 100 people attend the first meeting of SWU, organized by Cain, then president of ASMSU. Oct. 24 - Cain announces that ASMSU has voted to support the organizing efforts of

Jan. 9, 1975 — SWU files unfair labor practice charges against MSU with MERC. claiming that the University used intimidation tactics to prevent unionization. Feb. 11, 12 — Hearings are held by MERC on the unfair labor practice charges.

April 15 - MERC Administrative Judge Joseph Bixler rules that SWU's charges of unfair labor practices by MSU are unfounded. SWU files petition for certification as the exclusive bargaining representative for MSU student employes.

May 1 — Brian Raymond replaces Tim Cain as ASMSU president. May 5 — A bill is introduced to ASMSU advocating that the Labor Relations Cabinet take a neutral position toward SWU. No action is taken because the meeting is disrupted by SWU members when Raymond appoints a non - SWU member as interim director of the

Council ruling raises GPA standards

By FRANCES BROWN

State News Staff Writer

In what may have been the quickest Academic Council decision in recent history the new standards for graduation with honor and high honor passed Tuesday with only a handful opposed. The new requirement for graduation with honor will be a 3.4

grade point average (GPA) and students graduating with high nonors will have to boast a 3.7 GPA. The new honors standards are being instituted to compensate for a recent GPA inflation which resulted in 52 per cent of the graduates in 1974 being honored. The standards for honor and high

The only ambiguity is just when the new GPA requirements will take effect. The council discussed a phasing in plan which would delay until 1980 complete implementation of the new GPA floors for honors at graduation.. But the final decision for phasing in will be left to the provost's office.

Chitra Smith, chairperson of the old Educational Policies Committee, who presented the new GPA requirements, said the phasing in process is designed to maintain fairness to students who are now approaching graduation and are expressing some concern about having the GPA requirements switched on them halfway through school

The committee's plan for phasing in the new standards is for three successive annual steps beginning in the fall of 1978.

Acting Provost Lawrence Boger said his office would examine the committee's phasing-in plan for its practicality, but also that he would hold to the University's grandfather clause"which insures fairness to students already enrolled at MSU.

"This means that it would not be fully implemented for what seems like an awfully long time," Smith said, "But on the other hand it gets us off the cobweb of both legality and equity. Michele Matel, student representative from the College of Business, questioned whether GPA requirements are adequate measures of students' academic accomplishments in the first place. "I'm wondering if (the proposal) is going far enough as far as

Security tight at Hearst trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst went on trial Tuesday for bank robbery.

The proceedings opened under tight security in a courtroom of 150 prospective panelists.

The jury will decide whether Hearst was a pawn or a willing participant in the April 15, 1974 holdup of a San Francisco bank. If convicted of the federal armed bank robbery and weapons charges, she faces a maximum of 35 years in iail.

Meanwhile, Manson cultist Sandra Good and Susan Murphy, a former roommate of Lynnette Fromme, pleaded innocent to charges of conspiring to mail letters threatening harm to business and government leaders. Trial date is set for March 1.

In his first public statement on the evacuation since he was flown out of Saigon shortly before the Communist takeover, Martin strongly defended his attitudes and actions as ambassador against what he called "gross distortions."

Martin had come under sharp criticism over his handling of the evacuation, with some U.S. officials charging that he had unnecessarily aggravated the situation by not ordering all Americans out of Saigon sooner.

Ford reaffirms Israeli support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford welcomed Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin Tuesday with a reaffirmation of American support for Israel's security and a call for increased efforts for Mideast peace.

Ford indicated he hoped Rabin would show a greater effort to reach a Mideast settlement.

The effort to put together a common strategy to reach such a settlement is one of the over - all aims of Rabin's state visit. During his 12 - day visit, Rabin will concentrate on holding on to American diplomatic support and restoring threatened multimillion - dollar U.S. aid cuts.

Papers protest 'gag order'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is weighing a Nebraska "geg order" which lawyers for several news organizations, are saying could be "the fatal first step in . . destruction of a free press.

The gag was imposed against reporters covering a mass murder trial.

The arguments were contained in a brief filed by the Nebraska Press Assn. and a number of news outlets in Nebraska opposing restrictions on coverage of the murder trial. Separate briefs against the "gag order" were filed by the American Newspaper Publishers Assn., The Washington Post and 23 others.

NEW YORK (AP) — Marion Javits, wife of U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits, said Tuesday she has decided to resign from her controversial position as a public relations consultant to Iran's national airlines.

"My primary concern is the unjustifiable, painful criticism that has been leveled at my husband because of the appearance of possible conflict," she said in a statement. Mrs. Javits' $67,500 - a - year position as a consultant had

Sanford declines election funds

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, who withdrew from the presidential race Friday, will remain on the Florida primary ballot so he can continue to get federal election funds, Secretary of State Bruce Smathers said Monday

Sanford, however, said he did not plan to accept any more federal election funds.

A Federal Elections Commission spokesman said there is no provision covering a candidate who drops out before the convention. As long as Sanford has met the eligibility requirements, he can continue to collect federal matching funds until the convention. The federal funds would be stopped only if he wrote to the commission informing it he was no longer seeking the nomination.

"We're not sure of the exact figure yet but that's ($1 million) the figure we're kicking around," said Lt. Richard The securities, which can be cashed by anyone, were taken from the Munici Corp. of California by the three who then fled in an old model compact car, authorities said.

Pooler said the securities were taken from employes in the firm but he was not immediately certain if weapons were used

Court prevents FDA dye ban

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal judge Tuesday temporarily blocked the Food and Drug Administration from banning Red No. 2, one of the nation's most widely used dyes in foods, drugs and cosmetics.

The FDA has said there is a possibility the dye may be a weak cancer - causing agent.

U.S. District Court Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. issued a temporary restraining order until a Feb. 6 hearing on an industry request for a permanent injunction.

The dye is used in hundreds of items, including pill coatings, liquid cough medicines and cosmetics.

House overrides funding bill." He told reporter

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House voted 310 to 113 Tuesday to override President Ford's veto of a $45 billion bill to fund labor, health, welfare and related programs, giving Democrats an early victory in their election-year drive against Ford's economy proposals

The override issue now shifts to the Senate, which tentatively plans to vote Wednesday. Democrats in that chamber were optimistic.

Ford vetoed the bill Dec. 19 because it was nearly $1 billion above his budget recommendations. He called it "a classic example of . . .unchecked spending."

The vote came only six days after the President submitted his budget for the next fiscal year, urging Congress to hold to a tight $394.2 billion spending

Republicans pleaded for the veto to be sustained as an indication of Congress' intention to show restraint on the new budget proposals and aim for balance within three years. "This is the first money bill of the session," Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., said. "We are setting the spending tone for Michel, the GOP whip, said a vote to override would be a signal to special interests that they could get what they want from Congress.

Democratic leaders only hours before the vote were telling reporters they had only a fighting chance to override. But when the showdown came 49 Republicans joined 261 Democrats to provide a margin of 28 above the two-thirds needed to override. Voting to sustain the veto were 92 Republicans and

Both sides agreed that this veto would be one of the most difficult for Republicans to sustain. The bill funds a variety of politically appealing programs, including maternal and child health care, research on several major diseases, nutrition programs for the aged, vocational rehabilitation and the community services undertakings that are the remnants of Pres-

Republican and conservative Democratic votes, Michel offer ed a compromise that would have set the funding at a level $424 million below that specified in the measure but still $491 million above Ford's budget recommendation.

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) - Algerian and Moroccan troops clashed Tuesday in the Spanish Sahara and Moroccan officials said "apparently there are many dead."

It was the first reported battle between army units of the two North African countries in their dispute over the Sahara, being relinquished by Algeria charged that Moroccan soldiers attacked Algerian troops taking medical supplies to refugees in the Sahara.

In Rabat, the Moroccan government issued a statement saying its troops undertook a "normal police and security operation to dislodge armed bands" and captured 12 armed men in Algerian army uniforms. It denied a convoy of food and medical supplies as involved and made no mention of Moroccan losses.

The communique said the fight occurred inside the Sahara 125 miles west of the border with Algeria and near the town of Amghala.

WASHINGTON, (AP) -President Ford's choice of former GOP chairman George Bush to succeed William E. Colby as director of the Central Intelligence Agency was confirmed Tuesday by the Senate.

The vote was 64 to 27, with one senator, Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., voting present. Weicker said he could not vote for Bush because of his past political activities but that he could not oppose him otherwise.

Senate approval of Bush came nearly three months after he was nominated. Several Democratic senators had said that Bush's political past should disqualify him from holding the highly sensitive post.

In an effort to quiet concerns that Bush's political ambitions would further injure public confidence in the CIA, President Ford has ruled Bush out as possible vice presidential

The eight-page report was formulated by the Ad Hoc Committee on Employment of the Handicapped and is intended to serve as the University's policy guaranteeing equal employment opportunities for handicapped persons.

Robert Perrin, vice president for University and federal rela tions, who appointed the eightmember committee, said the plan was drawn up in response to federal requirements as described in Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Section 503 forbids discrimination against handicapped individuals seeking employment and requires affirmative action in the hiring and advancement

The section also requires that the employer make "reasonable accommodation" to the physical and mental limitations of handicapped employes for job applicants unless the employer can prove that such accommodations would impose "undue hardship" on the business. basically follows those requirements set down in Section 503. On Nov. 15, 1974, MSU adopted an affirmative action policy stating the University's intent to "take affirmative action to employ, advance in employ ment and otherwise treat qualified handicapped individuals without discrimination." The plan to be presented Friday is an addendum to that policy. According to Joseph McMillan, director of the Dept. of Human Relations and chairman of the ad hoc committee, the plan is a bare bones narrative" of how the policy will be implemented. The Office of the Provost and the Office of Personnel and Employe Relations will be responsible for coordinating and implementing the policy with respect to employment. The Dept. of Human Relations is designated to monitor the implementation of the policy, as it does all other University affirmative action plans.

The plan calls for active recruiting of qualified handicapped persons by maintaining relationships with federal and state rehabilitation agencies.

Physical examinations and qualifications must be geared specifically to the requirements of the job. In the past, handicapped persons have charged that the physical exam requirejobs for which they were qual-

Judy Taylor, director of the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students and a committee member, said she felt the affirmative action plan had evolved out of her own experience with the University.

Taylor applied for a job with MSU in July of 1972 and was told she could not be employed because she uses a wheelchair. She then contacted organizations for the handicapped, lawyers and board members. According to Taylor, the Univer sity made a compromise, offer ing her employment without fringe benefits. She refused the offer and demanded to see the policy that allowed MSU to discriminate against handicapped persons.

They didn't have any policy on employing handicappers so the committee was established and from that the affirmative action plan evolved," she said. Perrin agreed that Taylor's experience had had an impact on the University's realization of the need for a policy. Committee members de not foresee any objection to the plan and expect approval by the board of trustees.

"I don't foresee any opposition to a plan that is meritive even forward thinking," McMil lan said. "Most universities haven't even gotten to the policy stage."

Message falls short

You have to give President Ford some credit for his State of the Union message and suggested budget. It wasn't, after all, as bad as it might have been.

Nevertheless, as Sen. Edmund Muskie responded for the Democrats, it falls far short of the policy necessary to revive the economy. Moreover, it fails completely to break new ground in confronting other national problems which deserve attention.

Among the areas Muskie mentioned were CIA/FBI abuses, control of illegal corporate activity and the environment. Also deserving attention are the problematic nature of Kissingerian detente machinations, the fiscal crisis in education and substantive welfare reform.

The accent, however, was necessarily on the economy.

Some of the President's proposals are welcome, including the $10 billion tax cut and the broadened stock ownership plan.

Some of the President's ideas are movements in the proper direction, though still inadequate. His proposal for stepped - up antitrust action (also endorsed by Muskie) must fall into this cate-reform is also a welcome step though Congress must be careful to eliminate wasteful and unproductive regulation damaging necessary consumer protection.

Several of the President's proposals need to be viewed, if not harshly, at least skeptically. Especially outrageous is the proposed increase in defense expenditures at a time of budget curtailment.

Reform in food stamps, while absolutely crucial, must nevertheless be accomplished without damage to the genuinely needy.

The overall thrust of the President's message - to decrease governmental authority and activity - may help to check an admittedly overblown federal Big Brother. But the philosophy of less government must not be allowed to inhibit economic recovery, decrease the economic security of Americans or undo the progress toward an equitable society for all.

Tax now, pay later

Possibly the most perplexing revenues carries the second disadaspect of the President's recent message and budget is his proposal for an increase in Social Security

It was not an easy proposal to make: a .6 per cent increase in rates, in an election year.

The proposal might be viewed as necessary belt - tightening, if it weren't so ludicrously stop - gap. As the Wall Street Journal points out, the increase will cut the actuarial deficit in the program (that is, the amount of money needed on hand now to make up the tax shortfalls for the next 75 years) from a staggering $2.1 trillion to a still - staggering $1.95

Such a deficit makes New York City look almost responsible.

Clearly, however, the Ford suggestion will come nowhere near solving the problem. It will, though, increase the most regressive tax in the federal arsenal so as nearly to wipe out proposed tax cuts for many low - wage Ameri-

Admittedly, there is no simple solution to the Social Security problem. The much - touted scheme of increasing the ceiling on covered wages has the double disadvantage of increasing future benefits and ending the insurance concept of Social Security.

The idea of dipping into general vantage, plus the necessity for increasing income taxes to make up the difference. Under the present program, college age persons will pay, during the course of their lives, far more than they could ever receive - and then the program may go bankrupt when they retire.

Something must be done something more than Mr. Ford is willing to do.

THOMAS PAINE HAD ANY GOOD ADVICE FOR LIVING ON A FIXED INCOME.

Mary McGrory

Tom Paine misplaced in Ford speech

Experience has taught all but a few in Gerald Ford's audience that a State of the Union Message is like the month of January. It is long, and it always seems longer than it is.

But this year a small quiver of anticipa-tion accompanied him into the chamber. Word had gone out that Gerald Ford had discovered Tom Paine and was about to make a Republican out of him.

Tom Paine was manifestly not Gerald Ford's kind of man. He was a hard-rock revolutionary, a turbulent, cantankerous, free thinking unemployable — certainly not a team player, and considered radical by

But it quickly developed that Gerald Ford had picked up the firebrand as a Bicentennial gesture. He quickly put it down. About all he got from Tom Paine was the title of his most famous pamphlet, "Common Sense," a tract so searing that George Washington ordered it to be distributed to the troops at Valley Forge.

When you say, as Gerald Ford did, that "Common sense tells me to stick to that steady course," you realize that if the President had led Tom Paine onto the floor, he didn't really ask him to dance.

Tom Paine could hardly be at home in a speech where the chief executive is promising the construction of four new federal prisons. Paine went to jail on several occasions himself. The charge was drunken-

Tom Paine was for relief of the poor, pensions for aged people and public works for the unemployed, all to be finanaced by the levying of a progressive income tax. "Common sense," Gerald Ford said, tells us to look for more jobs in the private sector. He wants tax incentives for business.

Tom Paine won't be asked to have a hand in the writing of the Republican platform if Gerald Ford is the candidate.

Since the false dawn of revolutionary rhetoric was soon dashed, the audience could settle into the traditional tedium of these occasions. For the people of the President's party, it is relieved by the need to clap whenever he pauses. The opposition reverts to its usual occupations: inspection of its fingernails, the brushing of imaginary lint off its coat sleeves, surreptitious study of its already prepared "reaction" to the

The diplomatic corps, which is required to applaud only at the entrance and exit, stared straight ahead. Some of the newer, smaller nations frankly dozed. The foreign policy passage had nothing to awaken them. No Tom Paine there. It was pure Henry Kissinger. National "self-flagellation" is to stop. Congress is to cease its meddling and to reconsider its "hasty action" on Angola.

The whole audience was thus free to peculate on the question that comes most skards into facus when a president facing resection B diagnosing and prescribing. Will Gerald Ford be giving the State of the Union Message this time next year?

His prospects have brightened. Ronald Reagan with his $90 billion federal budget cut — with state option to take over the slashed programs — has fleetingly conferred the mantle of liberalism on the Gerald Ford trotted out "compassion and a sense of community," two phrases that have not crossed his lips since Reagan began to rise in the polls.

"Complex welfare programs cannot be reformed overnight," he said boldly. "Sure-ly we cannot simply dump welfare into the laps of the 50 states...and just walk away

Reagan's "clarifications" have only served to illuminate the shallowness and heartlessness of his proposal. The last thing he said was that people could "vote with their feet" — by which he meant that citizens deprived by state decision of certain benefits could decamp to another state which might confer them. And if all the states closed don mercies, would the roads of the conclogged with refugees? The phrae with their feet" comes from the la war — one million North Viet traveled south to avoid the Com government. Even Gerald Ford Americans do not like reminders of

This is in response to Mr. William Warner's letter to the editor (Jan. 20) uplifting the banner of capitalism.

My heart was warmed as I read Bill's letter advocating ye olde "every man for himself" attitude. He showed me how this policy breeds the fierce, cutthroat competition that exists today in the oil and food businesses.

I now realize the virtues in "trading my effort (production) for the effort of others, i.e. slush funds, payoffs, hush money, etc. Now I don't have to listen when someone tells me that power (read money) corrupts.

No more charities for me, no sir! And no more charities for the mentally inferior and cerebral palsy victims. I've been a soft-hearted fool for too long. From now on, I only give up my property "in exchange for something which I value more; or at the point of a gun." If they can't help themselves, it's not my responsibility. C'est la vie. Let 'em starve.

Down with state supported institutions!

No need to educate the poor (starting with 5 year olds and up). We could even charge 25 cents to check out books at the library with two dollars per hour for study space (plus cover charge). If you can't afford an education, you were probably not meant for it anyway. And if you can't pay your debts, slavery is an excellent cure for such social responsibility.

Milk the public for all you can get! If I

And when I get exclusive rights to the air we breathe, the world will address me as Generalissimo (Motors)

As soon as I finish this letter, I will rush home, tear up my 81-year-old grandfather's social security check, tell him to get his lazy rear end out of bed and get a job (I'll even offer him a couple of bucks to shovel my

When a chemist prepares to conduct an experiment, he knows it is of the utmost importance that the ingredients be carefully weighed, in proper proportion to each her and exceedingly pure for the results of the experiment to have any validity. However, MSU Professor of Chemistry M. Ashraf El - Bayoumi seems to have ignored these fundamental principles in attempting to present a "sober and objective" examination of the question "Is Zionism a Racist Doctrine?" in the Viewpoint of Jan. 15. Apparently, Prof. El · Bayoumi thought that merely placing anti - Zionist opinions in quotations would give them authority. Yet one can't ignore the fact that the quotes used were from such "objective" sources as "Jewish Critics of Zionism," "Israelis A-gainst Israel" and The New Left Review. I are say such publications are not noted for their objectivity. Indeed, I don't believe it would be difficult to locate truthful statements from Arabs now living in Israel who are very pleased with the vast improvement in their standard of living and voice in Israeli government as compared with what it was previously under Arab governments.

I refer readers to the Viewpoint of Jan. 23 by Danield Barth for a factual account of the conditions of Arabs now living in Israel and of Jews living in Arab countries.

Scab Larrowe

Word has reached me here in Rimini, Tuscany, that Professor Charles P. Larrowe has "scabbed" in the Actors Equity, by taking a part in an opera for no pay, while hundreds of professionals go unemployed. It is a pity that vanity has so overcome colleague Larrowe, that he would turn against trade union instincts, for the few seconds of reflected glory in finally being in the "center of the stage."

VIEWPOINT: CHOU

The century's greatest killer

By KENT BARRY

It is at once shocking and contemptible to ee a professor emeritus of political science at Michigan State University engaged in the hero - worship of one of humanity's most accomplished butchers. Indeed, it is surprising that an outcry has not been sounded from his colleagues, being the supposed defenders of intellectual freedom in this world. Chou En - lai would certainly have appreciated the laudation of Dr. Bruce nnes Smith; but had that opinion been the slightest bit negative, Dr. Smith would be a whole lot healthier in the world outside China. Intellectual dissent is simply not existent in mainland China.

The statement of Dr. Smith, that Chou was "the greatest statesman of recent centuries," deserves not even the courtesy of an answer. But owing to the general flow of inaccurate statements on the part of Dr. Smith, I feel moved to offer some rejoinder to the whole article. Chou may be regarded as a great statesman only if the list is comprised of notables such as Hitler, Stalin. Castro and Molotov.

Ironically, and no doubt to Dr. Smith's dismay, the viewpoint had been printed directly below the article by Mr. Buckley. Mr. Buckley spoiled all the fun by citing the murder figure of 30 - 60 million people, which made Chou China's "indispensable man." Even the humble Josef Stalin would have been jealous of that accomplishment.

That Dr. Smith bases his "greatest statesman" status upon the "elegant mandarin" because he is somehow better than Nehru, Jefferson and Roosevelt, is absurd. To be more realistic than Nehru is no singular feat; though I must concede that Chou was very realistic about the need to murder or imprison all political dissenters.

As to the claim that he was a more skilled administrator than Tom Jefferson, there comes to mind the fact that Jefferson was not a member of an elite dictatorship, but the co - author of a document which embodied the most comprehensive set of explicit freedoms yet given to a society in this world. And as to the statement that he was more intellectual than the late President Franklin Roosevelt, it seems unfair almost to point out to Dr. Smith that most presidents have been intellectually superior to the late New Dealer.

Dr. Smith gives lip service to the prevailing myth which portrays Mao Tse - tung as the benevolent grandfather of the Chinese people by describing him as "that near perfect embodiment of the honest, obdurate, intelligent Chinese peasant." almost want to break into song, "For he's a jolly good fellow," until I remember that it is Mao, more than any other person, who is responsible for the murder and oppression of so many millions and millions.

Can it possibly be that Dr. Smith is not aware that forced labor is a fact of life in the mmunist mainland? Can it be that Dr. Smith is not aware that travel is strictly forbidden for peasants, after they have been assigned to a particular village or collective? Can it be that a professor emeritus of political science is unaware of these things? I think not. It leads me to conclude that Dr. Smith is quite willing to sacrifice individual freedom for some dictatorial social planning. Yes, Dr. Smith, Hitler brought Germany out of the depression and Mussolini got the trains to run on

Even on his death - bed, Dr. Smith tells us, "he (Chou) seems to have spent his last few years of life in efforts to promote humane ends through a reorganization of the top levels of the Chinese party government." What a wonderful describing the ever continuing protein the annual purge. Stalin was gifted in Mao and Chou are in a class themselves. And yet, this is what earn them the respect and quiet admirati Dr. Smith. Murder is apparently not serving if it is done with flair proponents are effective in its imple

No, Dr. Smith, Chou En - lai was umane man. He was a human butche that remains a fact however handsom witty he may have been while to Nixon in the Great Hall of the People Winston Churchill, who would vote hands down as the greatest state of the century said, "there are some who derive as stern an exhaltation from proximity of disaster and ruin as from success." Such, from the evidence Dr. Bruce Lannes Smith.

As for history's record of the life of believe it will be a fair one. For, Churchill, "I am sure there are ! many millions in the world who will new object in life in making sure that we come to the final reckoning, this mpostor shall be abandoned to justice and universal scorn.

Dr. Smith would probably be happier living in China than the U nappier living in China than the States, unless the urge came upon praise the accomplishments of the merican way of life: life, liberty upursuit of happiness. If that urge him to speak out on it, we was speaking of the late Dr. Bruce Smith. Smith.

Jorge Luis Borges lives a kind of poetry -ducking in and out of fantasy, yet always as basic as the words that make up a verse.

The famed Argentine writer and MSU artist-in-residence is at once a sure-minded 76-year-old and a child who admires Huckleberry Finn. The formality of his South American manners and blue pinstripe suits, and the frailty caused by his blindness, belie his allegiance to fancy, to his imagination and to literature.

He is living poetry, as honest and musical as a line from Robert Frost, and at the same time just as intense and dramatic.

He is, simply, Borges.
"When you are 76, then you know more or less who you are, or at least you know that there are certain things you may attempt with a reasonable hope for success and others that may not be attempted because they are beyond your talents, your

"I know that I can't attempt a novel because I won't be able to do it, because I'm not interested in it. But I know that if I attempt a short poem I may get away with it. If I attempt a short story, I may do it with a certain amount of impunity.

"You know there are things that you can't do, you know there are things forbidden you, because you are mortal. But it takes some time to find out."

During the time Borges has been finding out about himself, his name has come to mean stories embellished with labyrinths and mirrors, twisting in and out of different planes of time. He has written short stories which suspend the instant of death for a year, tell the trials of a man who cannot forget, of a fictional world which takes over the real world, of history repeating itself infinitely, of a dreamed man stepping into reality and dreaming yet another man and of libraries which contain the universe.

This unassuming, courtly "old South American," as he calls himself, has plucked from his mind more ways to view the world, and beyond, than a crystal has edges — only to tuck it all away, shove it in some blurred and distant cubicle of the memory.

"I try to forget what I write because vays looking forward to my next book. I never reread my books. If you were to come to my house in Buenos Aires you would find out that I have quite a large library — but not a single book of mine to be found.

This and his other distinctive views on writing and reading — he has often said he is more of a reader than a writer — have been formulated from his enormous literary past, from the days in Buenos Aires when Borges had free run of his father's library to his present scholarly "hobby" of pouring over the poems of old England.

His mind is a curious anthology of the teachings of the world's great scholars and thinkers, the Bible, classic, Argentine, American, English and continental literature, the experience of 20 years of blindness, of story-gathering in the slums of Buenos Aires and the undeniable influence of his parents.

"My father knew that I was to become a man of letters. My father's eyesight was defective. In fact, he went blind earlier than I did. And so he thought that the literary career that was denied him might be fulfilled by me.

"My father told me to read as much as I could and to write as much as I could, and to tear up most of what I had written. And above all, he told me don't rush into print.

"So I published my first book when I was 24, in Buenos Aires. There were only 300 copies. I never thought of sending them to the book sellers, or to the papers. I never thought of that. I gave them all to my

"Then I found that I needed a copy afterwards, because someone suggested I republish the book, and I said 'yes, but I haven't got a copy. Then I found out that my father had shortly before his death tucked away a copy, and that copy was full of remarks.

"He had never said a word to me of what I wrote. He had changed many things and when the book was reprinted I used that copy that my father had gone over.
"I used to think that maybe he thought story-called 'The Intruder,' perhaps my finest story—would never have been finished. And though she didn't like the story, and she was ninety at the time, she had found her way inside the story."

Springing from this influence - and the influence of great literature - Borges has developed his own ideas about writing, and the imagination, and how a writer must remain true to his imagination.

In his last book, "Doctor Brodie's Report," Borges writes in the preface that "writing is nothing more than a guided dream." And though he claims—with a quick, toothy grin-that he is not sure what "interesting theory" of writing he mentioned in that preface, Borges firmly acknowledges his belief in the "guided dream" idea.

"I think that if writing isn't a kind of directed dream then it is a game played with words. In that case it would be utterly valueless.

Poetry, he says, is, of course, a game played with words on one level — but is more important is the emotion behind the

"I try to forget what I write because I'm always looking forward to my next book. I never reread my books. If you were to come to my house in Buenos Aires you would find out that I have quite a large library - but not a single book of mine to be found.'

that the whole book was rubbish, but it seems he hadn't because there were some pages that were more or less respectable.'

To his mother Borges gives credit for a more direct influence on his writing. "I remember I was dictating a story to her, a story about hoodlums, and she greatly disliked the subject. She said 'really you shouldn't write of all that rubbish. I'm sick and tired of that.'

"We came to a moment of the story when one of the characters had to tell his brother that he had killed a woman whom they both loved, and who was torn between

"Well, I came to the moment that the younger brother had to tell the older brother that he had killed her. I didn't know how to set about it. And my mother said you know I dislike your story, but I'll see what I can do.' She went into some kind of trance and then she said in a quite different voice 'I KNOW what he said,' as if it actually happened. 'I KNOW what he said.' not 'I think he should say this.'

"Then she wrote it down and I said 'what did he say.' Of course she said those words, and they were the right words, and she had found them for me.

They skirted a growth of tall reeds; Cristian threw down the cigar he had just lit, and said evenly, "Let's get busy, brother. In a while the afternoon I killed her. Let her stay here with all her trinkets, she won't cause them any

"Had she not found those words, that

As for his own stories, Borges says, they are very obviously guided dreams.

"When I write a story, if you're interested in that kind of thing, I may be, say, walking down a street of Buenos Aires or having my morning tub, and then suddenly I begin to see something, or to glimpse something.

"For example - if a metaphor is allowed — I see a longish island, and then I see both ends of it, and — to drop the metaphor then I can more or less glimpse from afar a story. But I only see the beginning and the end. And then I have no setting for it...and then I say I wonder if this will fit, let us say, the outlying slums of Buenos Aires, which I knew very well, or it may fit into the past, it may need a historical setting.
"But that comes afterwards. Then I begin to think out a story, and then, let us say, I take a wrong turn and I have to go back. What I mean to say is that I always know the end and the beginning but I've got to find out for myself what happens in

'Now. (Edgar Allen) Poe said that you should start with the last sentence, and work up to it. But that, I think, makes for trick writing, and I don't think that trick writing is the best kind of writing.

"It makes the story some kind of gadget and then the reader feels that things are deficient. If you are reading a story, and are sympathetic with the characters, then I on't suppose you want a trick ending." Currently, Borges is writing what he calls "straightforward" stories, modeled upon one of the first books of tales published by Rudyard Kipling-"Plain Tales from the

"In there are very fine, quite unforgettable stores told inside a few pages. I thought that what a young man of genius could do, an old man of letters may attempt to do when he is over seventy, since I know the tricks of the trade

"(I thought that) having some literary skill, at least in Spanish, I'll try my hand at writing straightforward stories. And so I wrote that story that I dictated to my mother, about the two brothers who of course were rivals. Those are very straightforward stories and are told in a very simple way. And I think of Kipling all the

"When I began writing, I went in as all young men do for very fine writing-I attempted purple passages. I think that that is very difficult, and that it shouldn't be attempted in a short story unless you are very confident in yourself.

"If you attempt fine writing, then the reader is not long to find out that you are doing that to show off, which is a sin really. A sin of vanity. But when you are writing a story in a straightforward way it will give you a lot of trouble because it is not easy to write straightforward, but at the same time you are not asking the reader to admire

When talking of the reader and the writer's commitment to him, Borges leans forward in his chair and allows an urgency to creep behind his words, an excitment that also peeks between the syllables of Borges' thoughts on the imagination, memory and oblivion. Imagination, he says, lies somewhere between memory and oblivion, but memory and oblivion are really not all that different. When you remember, he says, you always forget many details. If we didn't forget the details, the brain would be overburdened. "I wrote a story about that...about a poor man having a perfect memory and dying

Well, I came to the moment that the younger brother had to tell the older brother that he had killed her. I didn't know how to set about it. And my mother said 'you know I dislike your story, but I'll see what I can do.' She went into some kind of trance and then she said in a quite different voice 'I KNOW what he said,' as if it actually hap-pened. 'I KNOW what he said,' not 'I think he should say thus.'"

of it...He cannot think because he cannot generalize. For example, he may not even think of a tree because he has to think of every time he saw a tree. You understand that he must have an enormous load from

He knew by heart the forms of the southern clouds at dawn on the 30th of April, 1882, and could compare them in his memory with the mottled streaks on a book in Spanish binding he had only seen once and with the outline of the foam raised by an oar in the Rio Negro the night before the Quebracho uprising.

"I wrote that story when I was suffering a spell of insomnia. As I remember, of course, I did my best to sleep, but I kept thinking of my body, of the strange shape of my body, of the room, the bookshelves, of the patio, of the garden, of the outside. another room in the house. And then the story came, as the metaphor I spoke of."

But to merely envision the "longish island" of a story is only the most preliminary step in weaving a tale—as fanciful as a man with a perfect memorythat the reader feels comfortable in. To do that, Borges says, a writer must believe.

"I suppose a writer should believe in what he is writing. He should be true to the imagination, to the fancy, the mind. If you are telling a story and you disbelieve it, then I don't think your story would be a very good one.

"I don't think that the reader needs any prediction of the truth of the story. He knows if the story is true."

To write, as Borges says, is but to guide one's dreams, to mold the fancy, to be true to that fancy and to pack it away once it is done and move on to other fancies.

He says the ability to do so is something that is "given."

Not everyone can do it, and some who think they can cannot. Borges tells of one writer he knew who "had done his work like an elephant" by continually rewriting one poem, changing a semicolon or an adjective, and then putting it back again.

Borges says he will continue to write his short poems and his straightforward stories He will also continue to imagine himself, through his mind-library of great literature. as entwined in all the marvelous adventures he has memorized out of sheer admiration. And Borges will also contend with his blindness-as he has for 20 years. "When you are blind, you must spend a large part of your life in lonliness. You can't expect people to be talking to you and taking care of you all the time.

"Then, when you are lonely...you fall into the habit of letting yourself go. I mean, fancies come and go. "And so," he says, " I think of time as running pretty slow.

John Hartford next Mariah

By JEROME McGUIRE

State News Reviewer
"John Hartford — didn't he do something with Glen Camp-

So may run a typical response to the news that John Hartford will be playing at McDonel Hall kiva for Mariah Coffeehouse Thursday and Friday at 7:30 and 10 p.m., and 8 and 10 p.m., respectively.

The answer to the question is yes, Hartford has played with Campbell and wrote the Campbell theme song "Gentle On My

But this is by no means a dead feather in his cap. Glen Campbell is an excellent musician who knows how to pick his compatriots. But Hartford's career has taken a different road from the commercial bent of Campbell. Hartford generally plays the university coffeehouse circuit where he con-tinually amazes the patrons with his virtuosity on the banjo, fiddle and guitar.

Hartford combines an intense musical style with an easy crowd rapport. His style is known, for lack of a better term, as "bluegrass." Hartford claims Earl Scruggs, the light-ning fast banjo picker, as a major influence. Hartford com-bines the expertise of bluegrass style with intelligent and sensitive lyrics, though he also penned the AM radio joke song, "Hey Babe You Wanna Boogie." The last number, combined with his Glen Campbell affiliation of old, may have caused some to scoff at Hartford. However, the reviews of his personal appearances are uni-

It is a Hartford trademark to have the audience stomping and clapping by the middle of #### advance and at the Kentucky. Besides bluegrass, String quartet series off to grand start

By ED ZDROJEWSKI State News Reviewer

By the year 1800 the string quartet, probably the most aristocratic musical genre, had been developed into a traditional form. The combination of two violins, a viola and a cello provided enough similarity of sound (all string instruments) yet enough contrast — high vs. low, light vs. heavy — to make the string quartet the most perfectly balanced of all instrumental ensembles.

Haydn and Mozart had made the quartet a respectable art form — and then Beethoven came along.

The mammoth achievement that Beethoven accomplished with the 16 string quartets he composed was practically the last word in the development of the string quartet. No composer since has matched this achievement.

To perform the complete cycle of Beethoven quartets has been the aspiration of every professional string quartet eve since. The magnificence and challenge of Beethoven's music has always inspired musicians to try to perform the entire cycle, though few can do it justice.

If anyone can, it is the Juilliard String Quartet which is performing the complete cycle in a series of five concerts at Fairchild Theater. The first performance of three quartets last Wednesday night inspired a standing ovation.

It is probably not inaccurate to say that the Juilliard String Quartet is the best in this country, if not in the world. These four inspiring musicians are the quartet-in-residence at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, the nation's most prestigious music school. They are also the quartet in residence at the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C.

The four members of the Juilliard quartet are:

eFirst violinist Robert Mann of Portland, Oregon. He is a composer and soloist as well. He has recorded a number of solo works including Bartok's "Sonata for Unaccompanied Violin."

 Second violinist Earl Carlyss of Chicago. He debuted with the Pasadena Symphony and was concert master with the New York City Ballet Orchestra. •Violist Samuel Rhodes of New York. For nine summers

he has participated with the Marlboro Music Festival in Vermont. He has also toured Europe and the Middle East. Cellist Joel Krosnick from Connecticut. This musician has several world premieres of new compositions to his credit. The Juilliard quartet performs on instruments made by Antonio Stradivari. The handmade instruments of this 18th century Italian craftsman are generally acknowledged to be the finest ever made. # The Harman Kardon $100 Challenge

We've got $100 waiting for you. Bring in any commercially available receiver, regardless of price (except for another Harman Kardon product). If that receiver surpasses the square wave response of the HK 430 or 730 at 20Hz and 20,000Hz, we'll give you the $100.

Why are we making this challenge?

Square wave response is profoundly useful because it is a precise measurement of musical quality. It can be said that an instrument which fails to produce an excellent square wave response is limited in musical authenticity.

So come on in and match your receiver's square wave response against the 430 and 730. If it's better you get $100 — cash. If not, listen to the 430 and 730. You'll find that in all but absolute power levels, they're the sonic equivalents of any individual component system. The implication of a comparison with conventional receivers is obvious.

Shutdown to end 'U' recycling

By JOE SCALES State News Staff Writer

MSU's Waste Control Authority (WCA) will end officially this Friday when Mark Rosenhaft, director and last remaining employe of the WCA, closes the office.

Starr Keesler, MSU assistant to the executive vice president, said that it was decided to close the office because of the financial problems now facing the University.

The WCA was originally created to act as an advisory body to help solve the waste disposal prob-lems of the University.

When an environmental problem arose, the problem would be assigned to a special WCA subcommittee comprised of members of the WCA and experts in the area of the problem.

When the subcommittee came to a decision it would bring it before the WCA board who would make recommendations to the University based upon the subcommittee's decision

For example, it came to the WCA's attention that environment - damaging chemicals were being poured down the drains of MSU.

The WCA met and decided that the chemicals would have to be stored until a chemical company in Detroit could pick them up and dispose of them properly.

Keesler said that the WCA has not recently been involved in any on going projects in recent because it was known the office would be closing down so soon.

He said that after the office closes the University will just have to try and do the best it can without the WCA.

probably "We will struggle along like we did before it (the WCA) was formed," Keesler said. The WCA was officially formed in January 1972 when Rosenhaft was appointed as director One of the WCA's biggest projects was the han-dling of MSU's paper and glass recycling program. Fred Moore, former manager of the WCA, said that at one time the recycling program employed about 85 people.

But when the recycling program proved unprofitable the project was phased out. Moore said that the WCA let all but about 12 of its employes go at the beginning of the summer of 1975. Moore said that the trucks and equipment used for the program went to the MSU Salvage Yard and to public auction

Last Sept. 15 all but two of the remaining employes were let go. This included Moore, who was moved to the Instructional Media Center. Only Rosenhaft and a secretary were left to carry on the duties of the WCA.

Keesler said he thinks Rosenhaft is currently employing only a part - time secretary.

Rosenhaft, who will be out of a job Friday, refused to comment on the closing of the office, but did say that he was pretty disap-pointed with the situation.

COMPLAINT FILED WITH MERC

Students dispute dismissi

By JIM KLASS Two MSU students, who filed a complaint with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) August 25 following their dismissal from an Okemos swim club last summer, met with MERC officials at a hearing Monday.

Randy Wheaton, senior, 576 S. Wonders Hall, and Patricia Stevenson, freshman, 301 E. Wilson Hall, were lifeguards at the Red Cedar Hills Swim Club when they were fired in early August.

They were dismissed for distributing leaflets to club patrons listing grievances made against the club's directors by the 13 - member lifeguard team. The main grievances against the club centered on salary and the employes.

Kathi Kincer is competing in her last year for the MSU women's gymnastics team, and she's determined to make it count. Kincer is hoping to repeat as an All-American if the Spartans can qualify for the nationals.

Women tracksters capture first place

MSU's women's track team literally ran away with a first place finish in the Michigan State Invitational track meet held last Saturday at Jennison Fieldhouse.

Winning eight of 13 events, the Spartans totaled 190 points in a field of nine teams. Indiana State was the next highest team with 75 team points.

MSU swept the 440 - yard dash, with Sue Latter, Peggy Hoshield and Robin Collins placing one-two-three. Latter's first place time was 57.7 sec-Latter also won the 880 yard run with a time of 2:19.9.

MSU won the long jump, taking first, second and fourth places. Laurel Vietzke won the event with a leap of 18 feet, 93/4 inches. The Spartan relay team of Denise Green, Julie Gibson, Elaine Carr and Vietzke won the 880 - yard relay with a 1:57.7 time. Hoshield, Julie Arney, Collins and Latter ran the mile relay in 4:08.5 to capture another first place. Freshman Anita Lee leaped 5 feet 61/4 inches to capture the high jump for MSU. Barb Grider took a second in the shot put for the Spartans with a put of 35 feet 51/2 inches.

Other first place finishers were Karen McKeachie with a 5:14.1 mile time and Jan Pielometer, who ran the 3 · mile in 20:35.5.

Scott fired by Pistons

DETROIT (UPI) - A breakdown in communications" - not Detroit's 17 - 25 record or a disagreement with Bob Lanier - is the reason the Pistons owners give for sacking the most successful coach they have ever had, Ray Scott.

Scott was fired during a team practice in suburban South-field, Mich., Monday night and the triumvirate of owners Bill Davidson and Herb Tyner plus General Manager Oscar Feldman passed the job of getting the Pistons past the Milwaukee Bucks to assistant coach Herb Brown.

Kathi Kincer: tiny but tough gymnas

By ANN WILLIAMSON State News Sports Writer

Some call her Peanut. Others call her Cricket. And at 4 foot-10, it's not hard to figure out how gymnast Kathi Kincer picked up such nicknames. But Kincer packs more talent into that small frame than one might imagine at first glance.

She started her gymnastic career back in eighth grade when her physical education teacher told her she looked pretty good in tumbling. From then on, it was gymnastics all the way, and by the following year Kincer was working all four events - floor exercise, vaulting, uneven parallel bars and the balance beam.

Things started out well when Kincer entered Indiana State her freshman year, as the Sycamores qualified for the Nationals and Kincer placed sixth in all-around to gain recognition as an

But the Sycamores didn't make it to the Nationals the next year, and Kincer wasn't having any better luck in her relationship with her coach. So, fortunately for MSU, Kincer joined the Spartans in

"I came here because I knew Barb (coach McKenzie) and a lot of the girls on the team after teaching a summer gymnastics clinic here," Kincer said. "I think this team has a really great relationship with Barb. She's not so far above us that we're afraid of her, and we all feel able to talk to her any time."

If Kincer was quick to take to the Spartans, however, the Spartans and McKenzie were just as quick to accept Kincer as a very special member of the team. Kincer said that she "likes to be a leader" and that's exactly what the Spartans made her this year when they voted her captain of the team.

But simply being captain isn't what is really important to the senior all-arounder

"Being captain holds importance to me because I was voted to be the captain from the girls themselves," Kincer said. "I feel very close to the girls on the team and I think they feel close to me. You

MSU coach Amo Bessone will pilot the Spartan Oldtimers and says he will do a stint on the ice against the Wings.

"This game combines some great things," Bessone said. "It gives hockey fans a chance to see some of the great Red Wing players, gets ex-Spartans together for a really interesting game and all of it is for a good

The Spartans lost the first game last year by a close decision but Butch Miller and Mike Jacobson who organized this year's MSU oldtimers say the Spartans are in better shape than last year.

"Most of us have been practicing at Munn, most play in the Lansing Slow Puck League and we are anxious for the game, Jacobson said. "We'll be ready this year."

give you respect in return. Respect for Kincer's ability as a gymnast comes from all directions. Anyone who has watched her perform might wonder how someone so small could accomplish so many difficult and strenuous tricks, especially in all four events.

But Kincer doesn't think that her lack of height is a handicap. In fact, she believes that "short gymnasts have better balance." And while Kincer admits that being an all-around performer requires a lot of hard work, she wouldn't be in gymnastics to do anything less.

"There's no problem being an all arounder for me," Kincer said.
"If I do lousy in one event, I've always got three more that I can try and pick up on. If you're a specialist, though, and you blow your routine, that's it. You've spent all your time on one routine and you don't get a second chance."

And while Kincer doesn't shy away from competing all-around, neither does she suffer from what is generally a fairly common syndrome among gymnasts — pre-routine jitters.

"I usually don't get nervous before a routine — I've been competing so long that I guess I've grown out of it," she said. "Right before my routine, I'll prepare myself mentally by trying to

FROM COURTYARD TO GYMNASIUM Fencing: dueling at dual meet

By GREG SCHREINER State News Sports Writer

"En guarde, Athos, ere I run you through!" Clank-clank-stab-kathud.

Movies have always depicted colorfully-clad swashbucklers swinging through the air on ropes, dropping to the ground and drawing their swords to fight a hearty duel with the evil baddies before dispatching them to their inevitable fates. Today's swordsman wears a white denim suit and a mask that resembles the bottom of a flour sifter. He stands poised, waiting for his similarly dressed opponent to make a mistake and leave himself open. Then he lunges, hoping to score a hit and light his scoring indicator on the judges' table, to the sound of thundering Coach Charles Schmitter is the mentor to the Spartan fencing team. "It (fencing) is a finely-honed science, originating, of course, in the times of actual dueling and killing," he said. "Take foil, for instance. The object here is to run your opponent through."

The foil is the classic instrument that one thinks of when fencing mentioned. The weapon has a straight handle protected by a round, concave metal plate. The blade is a narrow rectangular shaped length of dull metal with a spring loaded tip.

Each foil fighter wears a thin, metal-plated vest that covers the target area, which is the body, excluding the arms, legs and head. The tip of each foil is wired directly to the judges' table so that when the sword makes contact with the metal a colored light will flash on the table, indicating a hit. If the foil strikes a non-target area, a white light will flash, indicating a miss.

As in physics, for every action there is a reaction in fencing. For every lunge an attacker makes, there is a parry that fends him off. Each parry is numbered to avoid confusion

I.M. Notes

To which you had are you going to do about this (lunge)?" To which you had a second the second 'This (parry)! And what are you going to do about this that This goes on until one of the fencers is 'stuck' for an answe. dueling continued, civilization began to think unb about killing people. Hence, the next event on the fencing or epee, where the object is to severely wound your opponent is the target is the arms, particularly the sword arm. The weapon itself is a triangularly-shaped narrow blade the held by a gripped handle with the same shielding feature of a

The tip is also spring-loaded and wired. "Epee is probably the easiest event in theory," Schmitter "But the margin of error is much smaller. If your first thrust

"Most important of all, you have to know what your opp going to do under pressure and why. You have to know him be than his girlfriend does, only in a different way.

"If you feel his blade tremble against yours, you have to find hether he's tired, nervous or afraid. Once you know which then attack those weaknesses.

The final event on the fencing card is sabres. The sabre reminiscent of the type of sword used in pirate movies; the cult With the same type blade as the foil, the sabre has a handle the connected at the bottom to the hand shield. This complete conceals the hand and makes it easier to attack. In sabre, whole body is vulnerable to attack, including the head. A fe could be stabbed or slashed across the side or be nailed atop head, as in the earlier days of barbarism.

"We think of our fencing as if we were using a sharp swat you knew that your opponent was trying to spill your bodily ha you would know what do to within a fraction of a seco Schmitter said.

"You know the territory and your opponent knows the terri It's just a question of who knows it best.'

The Spartan swordsmen will have their knowledge seem tested tonight as they journey to South Bend, Indiana and M Dame University to do battle with New York University "En guarde!"

The Mechanical Engineering Dept. was cited in the report as having a "well-qualified faculty but lacking adequate coverage of "engineering design" and "economic concerns" needed to round out the program. Also, the report decried the lack of laboratory space and equipment, the little chance for experimentation with "modern, high quality instrumentation' and the lack of challenge in laboratory courses. The departments of civil and electrical engineering were criticized less, though they also were given only the two-year

The civil engineering department was told there is a "serious deficiency in the mount of design work requ and the type of design cour. available in the basic program. It said the program should require more credits of graduates, alter its consulting work policy and increase science requirements.

The Electrical Engineering Dept. also lacks in science, falling five credits short of what the ECPD considers sufficient. In addition the report salled teaching loads teaching loads "somewhat heavy." Streamlining and sintegration of components within the department were also called for. Only the Agricultural:Engin-

Locksmith enjoys hectic trade

By DAVID A. CASTLE State News Staff Writer

Like anyone whose life rearound emergencypacked situations, Mark Blum. a local locksmith, has his favorite trade story.

"I once opened a mausoleum for an undertaker who wanted to prepare it for a body that was being flown in from Philadelphia." Blum said "The undertaker had difficulty getting it opened so I opened it, stepped inside to check the lock out and had him lock me in so I could examine it better.

"As he shut the door it iammed and I couldn't get out. I then lit a match to get a better look at the lock but it went out. I lit several more matches and then realized the mausoleum was air tight. I was really horrified so I took the lock apart from the inside.

"I then screamed to the undertaker to get out of the way because I was going to kick the door open," Blum continued. "One thing which both the undertaker and myself had not noticed was a little old lady praying at a graveside not more than 30 feet away. With my open, the look on her face was golden. She was scared shitless. And from what I understand, nobody has seen her since."

Blum, a former psychology major at MSU, runs a cramped by 11-foot store at the Old World Village Mall in East Lansing entitled Mark's Lock Shop. Through his store he attempts to serve the people of this community by helping them in times of unpredictable emergencies.

Interests in the locksmith trade have been with Blum since age 11. He worked parttime as one of five locksmiths on campus while attending MSU in 1970-71.

"I was probably the guy who unlocked your door if you broke your key after coming home drunk," Blum said. "I was very devoted. I used to trudge through snow, rain and muck just like the mailman."

Blum said he dropped out of school in 1971 but stayed on as a locksmith here because he was spending more time working than studying. From 1972-73 he worked for a large locksmith firm in Detroit and then returned to East Lansing in the fall of 1973 to start his own business and resume his duties at MSII

In 1975 he quit his job at MSU and opened his lock shop. "My private business grew so much that I thought I could serve the community better with my own store," he said, "I reached the top pay scale in a matter of six months at MSII It was great to earn that kind of money but there was no place I could go from there. I had no sight of vertical or horizontal mobility.

A locksmith's day can be awfully hectic and dangerous at times, according to Blum. A nice sleep is rare in his trade because he gets phone calls 24

"I once unlocked a dorm room in the middle of the night for a girl who was locked in for over three hours," Blum said. "When I finally got the door open she almost ran me down trying to get to the bathroom.

"The most horrendous job I ever faced was when I had to secure the 12th floor of a dorm that was on fire (Hubbard Hall, in 1974) in order to protect the occupants' valuables. It was a pretty frightening experience. But primarily the everyday more common but still embarrassing mishaps that one can-life of a locksmith involves the student came in with his bike and a 12 pound chain wrapped around his waist," Blum recal-"He lost the key and couldn't get out of the chain, so

I had to make a key to lock. If that kid would been ticklish, he might walking around with

Report on grain elevator bla to be released by Labor De

ZILWAUKEE (UPI) - The state Labor Dept. will issue a report this week on the grain elevator explosion Thursday which killed five workers and injured 12 others.

The body of the fifth victim, Clifford Schumann, 23, of Linwood, was pulled from the debris from the 225-foot Michigan Elevator Exchange facility Monday by workers after four days of Police said Schumann's body was found near a ground-level truck unloading shed beneath two-to-four-feet of concrete.

He was married and the father of a 14-month-
