The National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) has used ally taped telephone conversations, threats and inducements collecting evidence regarding rules violations by universities ughout the country.

Some of those practices occurred during the recent MSU

David Berst, an investigator for the NCAA, verified the secret ping of phone conversations when contacted Wednesday in hawnee Mission, Kan. Schrader then informed Warren Brown, NCAA executive director, of the tapes, and Brown had no comment.

Ironically, Schrader faced Brown at a meeting of the Infractions Committee in Seattle, Wash. on Sept. 1, 1973. Present at that meeting to consider the tapes and other evidence against Long Beach State was Charles Alan Wright. Wright, at that time, was the chief counsel for former President Richard M. Nixon in his fight to retain the infamous Watergate tapes.

Another questionable practice used by the collegiate governing body is the threatening of players in order to produce evidence against a coach.

MSU player Joe Hunt was threatened by investigator Berst. When the State News sought head coach Denny Stolz' permission to question him, Stolz refused because of possible future penalties against him. "There's a procedure within the NCAA rules for a player to follow if he has a gripe against the NCAA. I feel it best if you don't talk to him," he said.

Nola Hunt, mother of the Spartan defensive back, commented "Berst came to see Joe several times. Berst told Joe, 'Why don't you quit acting like a kid and give up the Goddamned goods?"

Mrs. Hunt continued, "Berst told him another time that if Joe didn't help him get Coach Weyers, 'You'll never again play football, anywhere in the United States.'

Joe testified to this effect to the NCAA but they just disregarded it." she added.

NEW CARS EN ROUTE TO TRUSTEES

Auto purchases questioned

By CAROLYN FESSLER State News Staff Writer

The controversial issue of MSU trustees' use of University vehicles has been sparked to life with the "reluctant" announcement of the purchase of three new automobiles for the trustees.

Trustees Don Stevens, D-Bloomfield Hills and Patricia Carrigan, D-Farmington Hills, have recently received 1976 Oldsmobiles — Carrigan's Cutlass Supreme was shipped to her at the beginning of February and Stevens' Cutlass arrived last Friday.

The third new vehicle, a blue and white Oldsmobile, was reported by an anonymous source to have $1,598 worth of accessories. The source said the car, which would carry a retail price tag of over $5,000 was being prepared for Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R.E. Lansing. Carrigan also said Wednesday that "Radcliffe is getting or has gotten" a new MSU vehicle.

Radcliffe denied this on Wednesday, saying it was the first he had heard of getting a car to replace his two-year-old University-owned Oldsmobile Delta 88.

Under the trustee's expenditure policy the eight members of the board are provided with a University car upon request, according to Elliot Ballard, board of trustees secretary. The cars are to be used for University business only, Ballard said. Trustees are legally bound to accept no compensation for their duties.

Radcliffe's car was observed by a State News staff member Wednesday parked at Walter French Jr. High School in Lansing, where he is a full-time counselor, and at his East Lansing home.

Only four of the eight trustees have exclusive possession of University-owned autos since last year, when the two newest members, Democrats Raymond Krolikowski of Birmingham and John Bruff of Fraser, declined use of the vehicles.

Following that, Chairman of the Board Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing, and Jack Stack, R-Alma, turned in their 1974 Oldsmobiles rather than try to justify the expense of their cars to a House Appropriations Subcommittee on Higher Education, which threatened to demand justification.

State Representative Gary Owen, D Ypsilanti, chairman of the subcommit said that even though the trustees have constitutional autonomy giving them the privilege to operate the cars, he still feels it is "bad public policy."

"I'm sure they (the board members) feel what they are doing is right but the members of the subcommittee and myself just happen to disagree," he said Wednesday. "There's a lack of accountability with Carrigan, who drives from her home for every board meeting, defends the use of the cars on the basis that it would cost the University more money to reimburse the mileage from out of town than it does to buy cars for the trustees.

"I seriously considered last year getting a car of my own and charging mileage, but at 15 cents a mile, 160 miles a trip and at least five trips a month, it's going to cost the University a lot of money," she said.

Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said that he is probably not going to request a new car after the two-year limit on his present one runs out, but said also that the use of the cars should be given to trustees living some

Kellogg funds grad nurses

MSU has gotten the go-ahead to set up a graduate program in nursing after receiving a grant of $428,700 from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek to start the project.

We are tremendously pleased to receive the Kellogg grant for this important nurse clinician program and its accompanying program for faculty development," said Dr Isabelle Payne, director of MSU's School of Nursing.

The School of Nursing is hoping the program, financed by the large grant from the famous cereal combine, will have its first students in the fall.

Patient and family education are vital parts of the nurse clinician's role. The curriculum will include several phases of family practice and family medicine training for medical students in the College of Human Medicine and College of Osteopathic Medicine.

Clinical experience will be available in the Clinical Sciences Building when it is completed and in family practice settings associated with MSU medical schools in Lansing, Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Flint and other Michigan cities.

raging over ticketing policy Battle

By BRAD MARTISIUS State News Staff Writer

Zolton Ferency won a minor skirmish, lost a battle and started a war in East Lansing District Court Wednesday.

His victory came as he got a client off the hook for a parking violation. But he lost the major battle because East Lansing's city attorney would not guarantee that the department would stop writing tickets for cars parked on private property. And the war was declared when Ferency said after the court test that he will try to get the ordinance in question out of East insing's legal books. The legal fireworks began when two officers ticketed a car they belived was parked illegally in an apartment parking lot at 235 Delta St. last Dec. 12. However, the owner of the car, Cecilia Hiller, was upset because she had been given permission to park in the lot by a tenant she was visiting. She decided to fight her $10 ticket in court. The plot thickened when Ferency. her attorney, discovered that the officers who wrote the ticket. Peter Sherman and Thomas Tucker, were the managers of the apartment building.

Ferency had originally planned to move to quash the charges against Hiller on the grounds that East Lansing had no power to enforce a parking ordinance on private property, that the ordinance is unconstitunal and that the defendant was not properly charged with a crime.

After he learned the officers wrote the tickets while off duty, he also claimed they were not following proper procedure when writing the tickets. To legally write tickets on private property, the police department st receive a complaint. Technically, one off-duty officer complained to another off-duty officer, and the second officer wrote the ticket. "The whole idea of that was just to help out on-duty officers by having those two write the tickets," Deputy Police Chief Robert Foster said.

But city attorney Dennis McGinty admitted the procedure was improper. He moved that the charges be dropped on those grounds. From now on, the two officers will have to sign complaints as private citizens at the East Lansing Police Dept. On duty officers will then write the tickets.

However, Ferency was dissatisfied. After Judge Daniel Tschirhart ruled to dismiss the case on the ground that the officers did not follow procedure, Ferency said the early dismissal would not give him a chance to address the real issues.

In the hallway outside 54B District Court, Ferency said the case was not dead.

"We're fearful the police department will continue to enforce this parking ordinance," he said. "So I will either ask the city council to rewrite the ordinance or I will bring this up again in a civil suit. McGinty, when asking for the dismissal of the case, would not agree to Ferency's contention that East Lansing's parking ordinance is illegal.

"The ordinance was passed by the city council because they felt that ticketing illegally parked cars is better than towing them," McGinty said. "Towing is something we are trying to avoid.'

However, Ferency said that justice has not yet been done. "The city can continue giving tickets on private property," he said. "And people will continue paying them unless this ordinance is changed.

Ford orders limits on spying

WASHINGTON (AP) President Ford on Wednesday ordered strict limits to spying on American citizens but at the same time proposed new pow ers for a centralized intelligence community, including court ordered mail opening and secrecy law.

Except for a ban on political assassinations, Ford placed no limits on covert operations abroad. "There are no restraints on the conduct of covert operations . . . other than congressional oversight," White House aide John O. Marsh told reporters.

Ford proposed secrecy legislation that would make it a crime to reveal intelligence sources and methods and ordered government employes and contractors with access to intelligence secrets to sign an agreement not to disclose those secrets. The attorney general could bring a civil suit against any person breaking the agreement, while anyone violating the proposed law would be liable a maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine and five years in jail.

Owen's arguments and the endorsements of the housing and planning commissions carried the day in the end, as Mayor George Griffiths and Councilman John Czarnecki voted with Owen to carry the resolution.

However, the council did not act on the other resolution in Owen's package, which would have created an advisory committee housing composed of experts from the East Lansing area. Owen agreed to table the motion because the meeting had already lasted about four hours and the council members were tired.

In other city council action, members were advised by the planning department that Grand River Avenue anxiously awaits its upcoming improvement and beautification. The planning commission advised that the city council take the action necessary to improve the street, starting with planting

However, City Manager John Patriarche then warned the council that beautification hould only be done if the council is willing to fix the curb between Abbott Road and Bogue Street and then install new street

"If we're going to tear up the street to do one of those things, we should get them all done." Patriarche said.

However, he warned that the large investment involved would commit the council to keep Grand River Avenue at its present dimensions.

"If we spend the money to improve the curb, it won't make sense to tear it all up again a few years from now to widen the street," he said.

The council also voted to send a letter to state legislators complaining about the fact that municipal governments are being forced to pay for the state's primary

The council also voted to establish a prevailing wage policy for construction contracts over $20,000. The policy would require all contractors doing business with the city to meet the area's standard wage for construction workers.

House requires further clarification for marijuana decriminalization bill

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO

State News Staff Writer A bill that would decriminalize marijuana was referred Thursday to a committee other than the one it originated from after House members complained that amendments added on the floor were ecoming confusing. By a 56 to 46 vote, state House members ted to send much-amended House Bill 5627 to the House Judiciary Committee for further study and clarification. HB 5627 was sponsored by Rep. William Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, and came out of the House committee on Civil Rights last

Rep. Paul Rosenbaum, D-Battle Creek and Judiciary committee chairman, said that he had some "philosophical" problems with the bill because it lacked a distinction between juvenile and adult involvement.

Rosenbaum promised to get to HB 5627 on March 16 Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, said that sending the HB 5627 back to Rosen-baum's committee may be the kiss of death for any marijuana decriminalization.

"Why do you think it was not sent there in the first place?" Vaughn said. He said that he is the vice-chairman of the committee and, taking into account its

The current law has punishment for possession and distribution at a possible year in jail and $1,000 fine. Use carries a maximum 90-day sentence and $100 fine.

Bryant said that he intended to streamline the varying penalties used in marijuana offenses because many offenders have been forced to work with the police in order to "cop" a lower sentence.

House amendments on HB 5627 since December lowered the 100 gram amount to 30 and finally 18. Another change would permit police to either arrest or cite the ance. Debate on whether a first offense should be made exempt from a sentence was raging when the bill was sent to the Judiciary Committee.

"Unless you're an attorney, you can't understand the bill," said Rep. Raymond Hood, D-Detroit. Hood proposed that the bill be sent to the Judiciary Committee.

Debate on the bill often centered around the effects of the substance on the users. Tuesday, Rep. Thaddeus Stopczynski, D-Detroit, said that if only probation was imposed on first offenders, the legislature would encourage them to keep using the weed, "rob, rape and even murder,"

Earlier this month, Rep. Rosetta Ferguson, D-Detroit, argued that the 100 gram ceiling on the original Bryant bill should be lowered, along with a more severe penalty because she knew of a case where a man sold his refrigerator, stove and even his wife's new coat to buy marijuana. She also said that she had seen someone threaten their grandmother with a butcher's knife because they were under the influence of

On the other hand, Rep. James Smith, R-Grand Blanc, said Tuesday that he did not think that marijuana use can be attributed to violent crimes.

"The only ones I ever saw smoking marijuana couldn't fight their way out of a wet paper bag," Smith said.

Senators deny accusations

State News Staff Writer Common Cause of Michigan accused three state senators Wednesday of engaging in "backroom club" practices in order to ruin an open meetings bill now before the Senate for final approval.

The group said that Sens. Daniel Cooper, D.Oak Park, Charles Zollar, R.Benton Harbor, and John Bowman, D.Roseville, have "riddled the definition of 'public meetings' with loopholes" by amending good idea and MSU will consider it.

All three senators denied any conspiratorial designs between themselves and said they do not oppose an open meetings bill in general but had qualms with specifics of SB

The bill, sponsored by Sen. David Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, would mandate open meetings by governmental policy-making boards except in the instances of student or employe reprimands, collective bargaining strategy sessions and real estate purchase discussions. Such a law would cover local and state government and universities such as MSU The amendments that the 9,400 member

Zollar, Cooper and Bowman denied the Common Cause allegations that they have been working together to kill the bill. "It's an insult," Cooper said about reference to a "backroom club." He added that such a statement by Common Cause was "hardly constructive" and that he was willing to change his amendment if it possessed a potential loophole.

Zollar said that he had "no such desire to keep the public in the dark" and that the Common Cause "charges are entirely without foundation." He also said that he thought SB 920 was "impractical" and "unworkable." Zollar added that it does not allow for chance meetings of governmental officials and casual discussion of a policy

Bowman said he supports the open meeting bill but would like to protect employe relations with a board on a "very personal" problem. He proposed the amend ment would give a citizen the right to request a closed meeting when something about it is being discussed

"I happen to be the senator, and I'll vote what I want," Bowman said.

Black said Common Cause will promote delegations of citizens to visit their senators for the next four to six weeks. He said that amount of time is a "crucial" period for SB

The Common Cause director also said in regard to the five open meetings bills currently in the Michigan legislature, the organization will work the hardest for SB 920 because it is the furthest along in the

The channel was eliminated Friday because the company claimed there was a lack of advertiser interest in airing public functions - like city council meetings and other general interest programming.

During the past year the National Cable Co. said that the station had operating expenses of about $100,000 for the station - but received only $5,000 in revenues.

According to Section 13 of the franchise contract the city has with the National Cable Co., the company provides for a public access station (Channel 11) and a complete and professional local origination station (Channel 14). So technically any break in the agree ment would be considered illegal - and possibly subject to legal action by the city. But the National Cable Co. says that a Federal Communications (FCC) Commission ruling last July voided many parts of the franchise - including Section 13 - and that it acted legally in taking the station off the air. Now many East Lansing officials are questioning whether it is indeed legal for the FCC to rule parts of their franchise agreement void - but nobody knows for

As one of the largest and most peculiarly modern universities in the nation, Michigan State epitomizes to a greater or lesser extent the problems of every other institution of higher learning in the country.

The trends visible here are certain to ripple through other institutions, and the problems which face us will also be mirrored elsewhere. That is why a critical examination of the state of this university is so important, for if higher education is in danger here, then its future elsewhere is also in Any critical treatment of MSU must begin with an examination of the purposes and goals which move the university. On the surface, the size and variety of this place seems to reveal only chaos. However, thought about land grant philosophy shows that MSU - and modern universities in general — are moved primarily by the desire to provide their students with saleable skills, and the society at large with the material fruits and services which result from the research and technical skill cultivated here.

In regards to this goal, given the poor state of the economy, MSU has not done too badly. MSU students are finding jobs, and the President Clifton Wharton will deliver his State of the University address tonight at 7:30 in 109 Anthony Hall. While recognizing the difficulty of evaluating such an institution as MSU, the State News presents our view of the state of the University in the hope that debate will be stimulated about the future course of higher education.

fields of agriculture, natural sciences and marketing - to mention a few - are enriched by the fruits of MSU research.

In other areas, however, the picture is not as bright. MSU is in financial trouble. Budget trimmings and tuition hikes are evidence of the widespread financial drought which has fallen upon the country's universities.

Although an obsession with this crisis would distract us from the primary concerns of a university, a situation of tight money does force us to rethink our priorities.

The usual argument of the University in support of its function has to do with its success in providing what society wants.

Such answers reflect the flimsy ground for the University's defense, and the shallowness of its goals. The production of technicaltrained personnel does not require the trappings of a school of higher learning.

Although these practical services are essential to any modern university, the real justification for MSU's continued existence should be based upon what is uniquely its possession: the ability to produce well informed, critical people who are able to evaluate problems from the standard of what is highest and best in our heritage.

From this perspective, the university is in the midst of a crisis more fundamental than finances: academic confusion. The disciplines are radically specialized, cut off from one another. There is no chance for the student to receive the unified education he or she should be getting. MSU is truly a "multiversity." It offers only a small piece of the necessary pie to those seeking an understanding of life or society as a whole.

Academic governance itself ostensibly the guardian of education — is in a state which prevents the real job from being recognized. much less done. Power has been diffused to students, faculty and administrative groups, and many different constituencies are able to offer their opinions. However democratic the intent, the effect of this has not been to initiate real debate and input, but to trivialize the discussions to such an extent that they became bogged down on minor issues, while the major concerns go undiscussed.

The major task thrust upon MSU for the seventies is to restore to its proper place the cultivation and encouragement of excellence which transcends the individual academic departments. The university should restore a concern for liberal education which would give the student an understanding the complexity of modern life.

Perhaps this criticism will cause the various departments to rise to a defense of the parts, in the hope that such a defense will vindicate the whole.

But these endless parts of a modern university are responsible for obscuring the purpose behind them until, for the most part, no purpose can be found. The MSU graduates of today may be technically proficient, but they are unprepared to act outside the narrow limits of the discipline they were trained in.

That is because the state of liberal education — as reflected in the general education requirements — is one of neglect and purposelessness. It fails to acquaint the student with an understanding of our history and culture. It fails to teach the profound implications of modern science. It fails to teach the are going, and what we will fin English language.

Perhaps even in the face financial crisis and the heads rush for jobs, contracts practical skills, the issue of restoration of a truly li education will animate a teachers and students who do when we get there.

Ford machine outdone by Reagan effort

Concord, N.H. - "The Ford campaign," said Hugh Gregg, Ronald Reagan's campaign manager, "is a Xerox machine."

Few inside the Ford campaign would contest him. Bales of paper were churned out to deride and dismember Reagan's $90 billion budget cut scheme. It was only after a forest of pine trees had been used for releases that somebody noticed that the blunder was not the hoped-for Ford breakthrough.

The Reagan campaign is run the way Reagan promises to run the government: no bureaucratic superstructure, heavy local control. The Reagan organizers, John Sears and Jim Lake, lined up chairmen in every Granite State community, 236 of them, who can talk to Gregg any time they want. Two retired military officers preside over the lean, seven person Concord headquarters. They greet the press with a cordiality that surpasses understanding in a conservative

Gregg is an interesting story in himself. grey-haired, eager-eyed ex-governor, who calls himself a "political has-been," he is the base for the Reagan claim that he is a mainstream Republican

The Reagan camp numbers scores of loyalists who would have worked for Ford if they had been asked. Apparently, the theory was that incumbents don't need local Indians. Gregg was asked, by Gerald Ford himself, but the White House balked at his demands. While negotiations only slightly less protracted than those which led to the Paris accords were in progress, Sears and Lake were courting Gregg with flattering

Ronald Reagan has stumped New Hampshire for five weeks. His reported laziness proved to be a myth. He made nine stops a day. At the end, he looked a bit wizened, but his patter 'flowed?' He has become a serious candidate without becoming a serious man.

When asked, for instance, about his foreign policy credentials, he cited the fact while Henry Kissinger had been in Peking making preparations for Nixon's first trip, Reagan had been visiting Chiang Kai-shek in Taiwan. The Reagan strategy is simplicity itself:

Ford has memorized the federal budget. Reagan seems never to have cracked it. And Reagan can be rash. Just last week he began fiddling with Social Security, a sacred subject here. He suggested investing its actuarial funds in the stock market or lending them to private corporations.

Ford's elegant advocate, Commerce Sec retary Elliot Richardson, passed through last week and called the suggestion "palpably shallow."

This letter is in reply to Ms. Ann Dunn's criticisms regarding the MSU Karate Club. First of all, Ms. Dunn's complaints of unwarranted aggression and sexism in the club should have been presented to the instructors before resorting to a public

The instructors make it a point to encourage students to present any constructive criticisms, complaints or particular problems that they may have

The rules governing club sparring are designed to prevent excessive contact and injury. The purpose of free sparring is to display good karate technique and control and not to cause bodily injury. Occasionally accidents do occur, but this is the exception rather than the rule.

Generally speaking the main concern a man has when sparring with a woman is a fear of injuring her, which is quite contrary to the isolated situation mentioned in the letter. This is not to say that we don't feel a warning point should have been given in Ms. Dunn's case, but it must be a majority decision by the judges overseeing the match and judges ARE fallible.

Remedialism

I would like to comment on the contro versy about students receiving credit toward graduation from remedial courses. On completion of Spring Term 1975, I had earned 26 credits of so-called high school courses. These courses improved my compe tence in many areas and I feel that I was able venture into regular course sequences, which I did quite successfully.

I can understand why people who had done good work in high school would be mad when they see people receiving credit for this work in college.

And for this reason I would like to suggest the following which may be one alternative as a solution to this problem. People who

We who are teaching N.S. 131, 132 and 133 have the evidence to disprove both assumptions. We usually poll our students at the end of the term, asking them to evaluate the course in general, plus all lab exercises and readings. We have used this information to

When asked to rate our accomplishment in imparting some appreciation of these social relations, the per cent of students rating us "above average" has increased for each course.

Clearly the facts show that a change has occurred, and we assume other "tracks" in Natural Science have made similar improvement. This is not written to oppose opening other options to students for fulfilling science requirements. We are not afraid of any fair competition. There is some danger of a competition to make such courses easier and easier in all departments (including our own), in order to get more students. In this event,

VIEWPOINT: KARATE

Club is not sexist

By DAVID BUTLER In response to a letter by Ann Dunn:

Un to now we have taken our groin kicks and kept out mouths shut, but after your exaggerated, but well-aimed hits striking carelessly below the belt, we feel it is about time that someone crys foul! Ann, we are writing in regard to your public resignation from the MSU Karate Club. Before we can state out points, a brief history of Karate is Karate is a martial art. The origin of the martial arts leads back to that period in man's early history when he first began to use logic in taking action. Throughout time many theories on styles of martial arts evolved. In its present status, the broad term Karate covers many styles, comprised of different block and counter techniques.

In theory, many believe the best way to practice Karate is through its actual application in a combat situation. Unfortunately, when this method of training is applied, people tend to get hurt. The degree of agression in any program varies directly to the practitioner's personal training taste.

The degree of contact used and instructed by the MSU club is: no contact to the head, light contact to the body (including the chest area), and contrary to your statement, a male's genitals are a legal target.

In fighting, a practitioner should be warnedof risks and chances of injury. That person should reduce these factors by using pads, chest protectors, mouthguards and protective cups. Obviously, you were ignorant of these protective measures and the amount of contact and aggressiveness associated with Karate.

A few facts should be emphasized and kept in mind in the discussion of sexism in Karate. We would like to bring your attention to the fact that women have only recently played an important role in the history of Karate. Originally women were not allowed to practice and learn the martial arts.

We would now like to amplify on discovered to exist in Karate. When and women interact with each other society, some amounts of sexism socializing will occur, whether it is a ka

Criticism is no easy job

By Gustavo Amaya

They say the pen is mightier than the sword. In other words, written words can have a more devastating effect upon someone or something because a greater amount of people can see it printed and read it. The journalist, though he uses a typewriter, falls into this category.

Journalists have the freedom to express their views without fear of oppression because the First Amendment to the Constitution guarantees it. However, no matter how much a journalist writes or what he writes on, he is responsible not only to himself and his editor, but - more importantly — to his reading public. The public is the journalist's feedback on his writing. Just like the saying that the press is the watchdog of government, the public is the watchdog of the press. The public informs the press, primarily in the form of letters, whether it liked a certain piece of writing or not.

Not all journalists receive the same amount of mail from their reading public. It all depends on a variety of reasons.

decadent capitalist Spartan Stores vs. one of Grandfather Meijer's havens of distribu-tion with prices for the "peoples good."

The status of the journalist is a requirement that the public looks for before indulging itself by writing a letter. The controversial, highly paid journalist is more apt to receive a bigger volume of mail than the obscure journalist who writes for a small town newspaper.

The journalist's subject matter is also an important factor in stimulating the public into writing. If the journalist is a city hall reporter, his feedback may be small, while a critic writing on the arts might receive the biggest batches of feedback with lots of words of approval — and generally — lots and lots of disapproval words. I know. I'm a critic.

At a party a couple of months ago I met a strikingly beautiful young woman who took an interest in me when I let her know through our conversation that I was a journalism major. Immediately she asked me what I wrote on. Without hesitating for a moment I told her I wrote on the arts. I told her I criticized dance and music among other topics for my college newspaper. I'm a critic,

No sooner had I uttered the word critic. than she frowned, stopped smiling and asked me if I was a dancer. I said I wasn't. A strong debate on what a critic is and isn't ensued, with she vehemently opposed to my not being a dancer and vet criticizing dance

What, then, is a critic? Is he simply an individual who must dance or play a musical instrument or act on the stage and be able to write, so when he is not immersed in his particular art he can comment on it? That's what I think the young woman was saying to me. But she was wrong.

A critic doesn't necessarily have to be a dancer or play a musical instrument or be an actor in order to criticize. A critic of the arts is an individual who not only appreciates the arts, but must be more aware than the average individual on what's going on. He has to be well read and informed, as well as have an objective outlook toward the particular piece of art he is criticizing.

The critic must also give his reasons for why a performance did not reach levels of brilliance as well as give hints and suggestions to improve the weak spots. And a performance is brilliant, the critic shouldn't just say it. He must say why it is tions, it is justifiable to establish a "Blackcentennial" to enlighten the entire The draping of adjectives of superlative color to a critique without justification is biased. It makes the reader wonder if the critic was paid under the table by people connected with the performers.

Criticism is a dangerous field of journal It is a pitiful situation when some Black ism to get involved in Enemies tend to abide more frequently than friends. A critic must learn to live with this dilemma. People as a rule will never be satisfied with a critic's opinion. Whether the critic praises, pans or kills an individual piece of art, the public will never be pleased. A critic must learn to cope with the everyday problems of irate letters he receives from his reading public. If a reader writes the critic with suggestions to improve the critic's perception of his criticism, the rather than smoke it up in dope or "party" it We must be a corporate body, together, if critic should objectively decide for himself if indeed he has erred. On the other hand, if the reader writes nothing but hogwash to the critic, the critic should simply discard it The critic has more important things to do He has to criticize the next piece of art coming to town.

Energy waste

regard to the recent talk of a 15 per nt tuition hike, it is interesting to note the valence of waste of energy and therefore nev. Our money is also interesting to note that although iniversity has put a bunch of 'conserve gy signs next to light switches and has ed every other light off in the hallways buildings, that when the buildings are aned at night all the lights in many of the buildings are on. Strange.

The dorms on this campus are "heated" by steam heat. Now there is no way for the occupants of the dorm rooms to regulate heat in the room. Sure there are little metal flaps that can close off the heat flow theoretically, but they don't work very well

Most of the rooms that I have seen are always too hot and the only way to regulate this has been for the occupants to open their windows. Now with an energy shortage, the high costs of heating and lighting and a oposed 15 per cent increase in tuition, this seems just a bit absurd!

I hate to think of how many dollars are literally going out the windows each day. In an institution of higher learning it shouldn't be too hard to see this and put the assets available to work on the problem.

Thermostats might be a good start. If not for the individual rooms, then perhaps the floor of each dorm. Something, almost anything, would be better than blatant waste.

Two PIRGIMS?

Thank heaven for PIRGIM. What a blessing it is to have a group that can present facts of a touchy problem in an unbiased fashion and draw a fair and logical set of solutions.

Evidently, the piece appearing in the Feb. 17 issue of the State News entitled "Ford's $100 Billion Boondoggle," was from another organization with the same initials.

How could a report containing slighted references to private companies ("strug-gling companies such as Standard Oil," "the company can just apologize and ask for another loan") tainted with semantic emotion ("some uncharitable soul") come from our clear thinking and above personal bias PIRGIM?

This other group with the same initials must be run by refugee holdovers from the "campus unrest" era when students thought they could change things by calling other people names.

They could be presently working on a

The implications of word selection is fairly clear. I hope "our" PIRGIM will continue the good work it's done in the past, giving us fairly presented solutions, drawn from impartial study of the facts of complex issues of our time

John Titterton 1199 Arbor Dr. Apt. 2

Light tradition

Granting that Brian Thompson's intention in purchasing the famed "Red Light of Hubbard Hall" was to "preserve the tradition of my dorm," why is it in his room on the tenth floor?

It appears to this student that both Townsend and Thompson are guilty of "pettiness." If Thompson wished to maintain "the spirit of tradition" why didn't he resell the light, at cost, to Townsend? This would avoid the costs to both individuals of maintaining the two lights and would maintain the twelfth floor location, where it has 'traditionally' been for the past seven

A tenth floor light is hardly traditional!

Long's audience discovers Kreskin deserves to be known as 'Amazing'

State News Staff Writer People love to be fooled.

They come in droves to freak shows featuring three-headed men, they buy patent hairgrowing and health-restoring potions by the gallons, they hunt relentlessly for the Loch Ness and Big Foot.

And they crowd theaters like they did at Long's Banquet Center Tuesday night to see the Amazing Kreskin, the world's foremost mentalist and ESP Superstar.

But if people love to be fooled as witnessed by the ever-increasing popularity of magicians and mentalists, they like to be fooled by a person they trust, like and admire.

Kreskin captured the trust and the hearts of most of the 1,000 people in the audience and before the night of autosuggestion, psychokinesis and mind reading was over he had captured the respect of many a skeptic.

Bounding onto the stage at the outset in a red tuxedo, Kreskin immediately set out to nut himself and his audience on the same wavelength. He went into a rapid monologue that Johnny Carson would have been proud of and mixed and talked with the audience like a well-practiced Bob Barker or Art James. His patter was was so swift and smooth that it was obvious the hundreds of shows he gives each year have provided him with an ad lib for every

His feats of telepathy and magic were good-very goodthe's been offered $15,000 for the secret to his linking rings trick), but what made the man truly "Amazing" was that through all the put on exterior of the plastic showman there still shone through a rather remarkable and human person From the beginning he told his audience he possessed no "supernatural powers" and said he could not claim the title of a "psychic." And then he lashed out at those who profess to have powers denied other

"This is a dirty, filthy busi ness," he told the crowd. He said there are many who profess to have certain supernatural theories but that these are eventually exposed.

"Then," he said ruefully, "they become healers. When ever someone claims to be a faith healer, take it with a grain of salt because it probably is not true.

Later, during an experiment with members of the audience auto-suggestion-making them believe they could or could not do certain things-he took time out again from his show to try and bring attention to something he feels is wrong.

"How dare medical people foster this lie of hypnotism?" he asked. "There is a stench of dishonesty about hypnotism. There is nothing in science to prove you can hypnotize a You can distract a person so he will not notice pain or you can make them think they are hypnotized but you cannot hypnotize them.'

He then proceeded to con-vince great numbers of the audience by auto-suggestion that they could not unclasp their hands when he told them not to nor could they close them when they wanted. Amazing.

The biggest crowd pleaser was perhaps the easiest feat for Kreskin to perform. At random he would seem to pick up thoughts from a certain mem ber of the audience and then elaborate on what the subject was thinking about. Sometimes he was uncanny, sometimes he wasn't even close. But more often than not he was amazing.

For instance he would say someone was thinking about Helen, someone would jump up, "Yes, it was me" Kreskin would throw out a few other statements like "Is a Lou also connected with what you are thinking?" By being general enough almost anyone could with Purchase of

remember an incident having to do with a Helen or a Lou and Kreskin could make it sound like he knew all.

Occasionally he would be totally wrong on the thoughts he was professing to receive, as when he could not tell one girl the numbers on her Social Security card, but on others he was amazingly accurate, as when he told one person their exact birth date. The cumulative effect was like the predictions Jeanne Dixon or one of her colleagues in the prophesizing business make. You remember the one or two correct predictions more than the 10

incorrect ones and you end up thinking the whole thing is amazing But Kreskin said from the beginning that what he does is scientific and not supernatural. His ability comes about from finely attuned senses and an excellent understanding of psychology, he said.

Obviously part of that science he has absorbed is how to please and manipulate an audience. They were in the palm of his hand from the outset and he left them all asking "How in the world did he do that?" and loving the fact that they weren't going to find

Gymnasts take pair from Kent

State News Sports Writer Two down, three to go. And the show has just begun.

Tuesday evening belonged to MSC gymnasts as the women finally boosted their point total over 100 and their ason record to 3-0 with a 100.85 to 90.45 victory over Kent State, while the men's gymnastics team trounced Kent. 196.95 to 181.55, picking up its ninth win of the year against three losses.

The dual set of wins over Kent State means more to the Spartan gymnasts than just another notch in the victory olumn, however. With the men facing Big Ten champion U-M at home Friday and both the men and women taking on nationally recognized Southern Illinois Saturday at Jenison, the wins help make the tough weekend ahead a little easier to Kent State and MSU women's gymnastics teams may have been closely matched last year, but Tuesday night the Spartans claimed every first place spot in the four events and all-around. Ann Weaver won the vaulting competition with an 8.75 mark, while captain Kathi Kincer finished second with an 8.55, Maxine Ceccato fourth with an 8.05 and Pat Murphy and Sara Skillman tying for sixth with an 8.0.

Kincer claimed first place on the remaining three events, scoring an 8.55 on the uneven parallel bars, 8.8 on the balance beam and an outstanding 9.1 on floor exercise. She was also the all-around champion with a total of 35 points.

Cagers vs. Calvin

Women's basketball coach Dominic Marino thinks his Spartan cagers should be able to take the Calvin College squad when the two teams jump for the ball tonight at 6:30 p.m. in the Women's IM Bldg. lower gym.

"Calvin only beat us by one point last time," Marino said, "and our girls have improved a great deal since then. At the Big Ten tournament we fin-ished second and I think that at the state tournament we are going to fake out a few teams who will be looking at our

Now 2-11 on the season, the women cagers have had several strong second half games and Marino says they will be tough when they get everything to-

Deadline for entry in the Fraternity Scratch team swimming event is 5 p.m. Friday in 201 Men's IM Bldg.

Fraternity Scratch meetings for all managers will be Monday at 6:15 p.m. and preliminaries will start at 7 p.m. Residence Hall Scratch meetings for managers is Monday. March 1, at 6:15 p.m. and the preliminaries will begin at 7 p.m.

The Spartan hockey team's 6.2 loss to the Fighting Sioux of North Dakota last Friday will be broadcast over channel 11 public access television - at 7:30 tonight. The game saw the MSU icers drop their first home game against North Dakota since November 1969.

The MSU Frisbee Club trav els to Kalamazoo College Saturday hot off of a pair of wins against Grand Valley State College, 42-21 and 43-11.

The club practices Monday nights at 10 p.m. in the sports arena of the Men's IM Bidg. All interested persons are invited score, Ceccato took second on the balance beam with 8.15 and Lisa Buttrill and Murphy tied for fourth with 7.75. Weaver finished second on the floor exercise with an 8.65 score and Ceccato, Buttrill and Murphy took third, fourth and fifth with respective marks of 8.55, 8.4

"But the officiating is what really has to improve," Marino said. "Some of the referees who officiate women's basketball don't even know the mechanics of the game. When we played Calvin College in January, Jill Prudden got creamed under the hasket. The guy didn't even call a foul. He just gave it to us out of bounds. That call may have cost us the game."

Marino stressed that he does not know what the solution is but believes that something must be done soon to upgrade

"We knew it was going to be difficult meet," Lisa Hypnar said after competing on the uneven parallel bars. "But we And considering the fact that the men's gymnastics team wasn't using full team strength against Kent State, their 196.95 score is a good indication that they hit their routines as well. In fact, with or without the usual lineup, coach George Szypula said that scoring 190 points or above isn't as difficult for the Spartans now as it was earlier this season.

"We had problems here and there, but we're looking solid,' Szypula said. "David Rosen gren, Steve Murdock and Jeff Rudolph had a great night on the pommel horse and the ring team is becoming super. We're going to be ready for Michigan Friday - we'd like nothing better than to pull off an

On the floor exercise event, MSU's Al Burchi turned in the highest score of the evening with an 8.3 to tie for second place, while Craig MacLean and John Mankovich finished fourth and fifth with 8.25 and 8.15

Murdock and Rosengren shared first place honors on the pommel horse with solid 8.85 performances and Rudolph finished third with an 8.05. Tom Meagher's 8.7 on the still rings was good for first place, with teammates Joe Shepherd and Rudolph rounding out the 1-2-3 finish with 8.55 and 8.5 scores.

Rudolph also tied for first on the vault with a mark of 8.55 while John Short took third Rudolph scored his highest mark of the evening on the parallel bars with an 8.65 for first place. Brian Sturrock landed second and Shepherd third with respective scores of 8.05 and 8.0. Sturrock also finished second on the high bar with an 8.65, with Shepherd and Rudolph tying for third with an 8.55 and MacLean finishing fifth with an 8.3.

Rudolph set a personal high in all-around Tuesday when he won the competition with 50.30

Now that the Spartans have won four straight meets, it doesn't bother them too much that they'll be facing two of the nation's gymnastic powerhouses — U-M and Southern Illinois Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

"We're looking forward to these meets because we've had a lot of tight meets in the past where we've gotten gipped by the judges," Sturrock said. "We're looking forward to meeting some tough competition on our own home ground."

Standal chosen for all-academic squad

Tom Standal has been named as MSU's 22nd Academic All-American in football.

Standal, a senior middle guard-linebacker, was selected on the second unit by the College Sports Information Directors of America. This marks the 22nd time in the award's 24 year history that a Spartan has been so honored.

Also named on the Academic All-Big Ten first team, Standal maintained a better than B average in a science and math

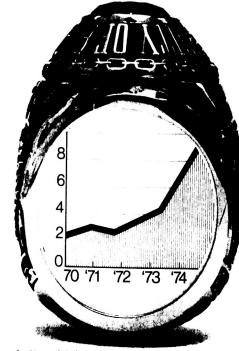

Dan Jilek, standout senior defensive end from Michigan, was named to the first team as he compiled a 3.05 grade-point average with a political science major. Other Big Ten players named to the squud were Brian Baschnagel, Christopher Ward, William Lukens, Pat Curto and Kenneth Kuhn of Ohio State, Bob Elliott of Iowa and Randy Dean of Northwestern.

John Wunderlich, tackle from Central Michigan, was also named to the second unit.

MSU to face Badgers in Jenison track meet

Spartan trackmen will meet the University of Wisconsin Badgers in a dual meet in Jenison Fieldhouse tonight at 7 p.m.

The Badgers, who nipped Illinois 69-62 in an upset win their last meet, bring three powerful performers with them to do battle with the Spartans. Miler Steve Lacy clocked in with a 4:03 effort last weekend. He will set a rapid pace for MSU's Herb Lindsay, winner last week against U-M in the mile.

Also running for Wisconsin is sprinter Tariq Mughal. Mughal finished the 60-yard dash with a time of 6.1 seconds in the Illinois contest. Shot-putter Jeff Braun in also predicted to
