Udall, who received enormous support omen delegates when he visited MSU during the Michigan primary, said that his decision would pay tribute to his campaign and keep faith with his delegates but it would not jeopardize the Democratic party's unity.

According to the Associated Press, Udall has 310 delegates committed to him, including 58 from Michigan.

Michigan Rep. John Conyers, D Detroit, caucus chairperson from Michigan's Udall delegation, said Monday he will urge the delegates pledged to Udall to stay with him at least on the first ballot.

Udall said Archibald Cox, special Watergate prosecutor, will make a nominating speech tonight on his behalf at the convention. Udall will make a speech after his nomination to "Say something about our campaign and that it meant something.

Conyers, who actively supported Udall during his campaign, said that he "was trying to make Carter as progressive as possible," by holding out for Udall. Conyers also said he intends to nominate liberal U.S. Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif. for vice presi dent to "Reform the party."

An aide explained that Dellums is not seeking the vice presidency but the nomination will be made to enable Conyers to "Address some issues he feels are being neglected," such as excessive military spending, to the thousands of Democrats at

But Udall advocated party unity, saying before hundreds of reporters and newspeople at a mid-afternoon press conference that he will work as hard as he can to ensure a presidential victory for Carter. Udall lifted any legal obligations of the allowing them to vote for Carter.

"I'm not going to prejudge Carter," Udall said. "Let's support him and hold his feet to the fire and maybe we will be pleasantly surprised.

Responding to a question about how real the Democratic Party unity is, Udall said with his usual dry wit: "When you get Frank Church and Frank Rizzo and George McGovern and George Wallace all in the same hall with harmony dripping from the rafters, you're going to have unity, but you're not going to have the enthusiasm.

We've always had trouble shooting at each other - someone said when Democrats have a shooting squad we all gather in

The lanky congressman asked his supporters to look ahead with him to a re-election in Arizona.

INDIAN CITIZEN ASKS REASON

Man's passport revoked

By BOB OURLIAN State News Staff Writer

A citizen of India who has resided in East Lansing since 1959, Monday became the first Indian living abroad whose passport has been invalidated by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government.

Shrikumae Poddar, 36, was notified at noon on Monday by the Indian Embassy in Washington D.C. that the government has cided to impound his passport. No reason was given for the action.

Poddar was in Washington D.C. Tuesday in a continuing effort to have Sen. Eugene McCarthy placed on the ballot in November's presidential election. He has been an active supporter of McCarthy in Michigan and has been outspoken against a state law barring candidates with no party affiliation.

Poddar has been active in opposition to Gandhi's policies in India, said a statement released from his Lansing office Tuesday He was a founding member of Indians for Democracy, an organization of Indian citizens living in the United States opposed to restrictive actions of the Indian govern

A publisher, Poddar is the owner of Educational Subscription Services in Lansing. Washington Watch, a weekly newsletter on Indian developments, is also published by Poddar.

"As citizens in the world's democ racy, we have practically ignored the destruction of democracy in India," Poddar said recently in an article in the newsletter.

In his statement Tuesday, Poddar said "In practical terms, the immediate result of this decision is that I cannot go to India to visit my family."

The East Lansing businessman sent a cable Monday to Gandhi saying, "Your my constitutional rights. Wire explanation. He had not received a reply by Tuesday

MSU to check osteopath for guideline violations

By CAROLE LEIGH HUTTON State News Staff Writer

The acting chairperson of MSU's Dept. of Osteopathic Medicine may be in violation of faculty Outside Work For Pay Guidelines because of a position she holds with the State Board of Osteopathic Registration and Examination

Dorothy E. Carnegie, also a full-time professor of osteopathic medicine at MSU, is executive secretary to the state board responsible for the licensing, registration and certification of Michigan osteopathic

Faculty guidelines stipulate that "Outside work for pay shall be reported for full-time, board-appointed employes of the

The guidelines also state that total time spent on outside activities for pay by faculty members "should not exceed 16 hours in any month.

For her position as executive secretary, Carnegie is paid for approximately 80 hours work per month, an apparent contrast to the faculty guidelines.

Faculty members are required to fill out and submit outside work authorization forms for the approval of their department or college. The College of Osteopathic Medicine approved Carnegie's application for authorization, Carnegie said.

Myron Magen, dean of the College of Osteopathic Medicine, could not be reached for comment.

"I don't know why there is any problem," Carnegie said. "The University knows about it, I had their approval. The Dept. of Licensing and Registration knew about it

Carnegie acknowledged that she does spend more than 16 hours per month for her board duties, but said that the University was aware of that and no question was ever raised about it

Clarence Winder, associate provost, said that the college asked his office to "review problems with regards to University

Winder said that while the immediate consideration would be for the Outside Work Guidelines, the whole issue would be reviewed.

FULLERTON, Calif. (UPI) - Six per sons were slain and four others were wounded Monday morning by a berserk rifleman who ran through the California State University campus firing his weapon at random

Police said the suspect fled in his own car to a nearby hotel and called police in neighboring Anaheim to identify himself as "the man who did the shooting at Cal State" and asking officers to "come and get me."

Anaheim police called Fullerton officers who took the man, identified as Ed Charles Allaway, 37, into custody without resistance. The proposed donation stands along with many other sculptures that were constructed as part of a Bicentennial sculpture project partially funded by the city and chosen by the Fine Arts and Cultural Heritage Committee. This particular sculp ture is not one of the fifteeen chosen by the committee because it was not entered in the initial selection process.

Thus, Hamilton decided to purchase the ce and donate it to the city. But council had problems at Tuesday's meeting trying to decide if the piece was worthy of permanent display. They referred the decision to the Fine Arts and Cultural Heritage Committee.

In his July 1 letter to council, Hamilton states that he contacted Alan Swartz, the creator of the sculpture, and made an agreement to purchase the piece.

Small bombs hit N.Y.C. stores

NEW YORK (UPI) — With a seemingly impenetrable security net ringing Madison Square Garden, bombers instead chose nearby department stores Monday to plant 10 small incendiary devices in a protest apparently aimed at the Democratic National Convention.

The Puerto Rican nationalist group FAIN — the Spanish acronym for Armed Forces for the Liberation of Puerto Rico – claimed responsibility for the explosions in Macy's Ohrbach's, Lord and Taylor's, Korvettes and Altman's.

Police said two devices planted in Gimbel's did not go off. A police spokesperson said there was "very small" damage and no injuries, though the Herald Square area stores were crowded with lunch-hour shoppers.

The first explosion went off on Macy's seventh floor in a fabrics department. Lt. Henry Torres of the police bomb and arson squad said a carpet was scorched and material damaged. Macy's was not evacuated.

A communique with the FAIN letterhead was found in a telephone booth after an anonymous call to the New York Post directed reporters there

Jordan prime minister resigns

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Jordan's Prime Minister Zaid Rifai resigned Tuesday and King Hussein asked Madar Badran, chief of the royal cabinet, to form a new cabinet. Rifai had been premier since 1973. He formed his second 20-man cabinet last Feb. 6. No reason was given for his resignation.

Badran, 40, a former intelligence chief and education minister, began consultations to form a new government, a statement from the royal palace said.

Both Rifai and Badran are Hussein's boyhood friends and later became his political advisers. They accompanied him last week on his visit to Syria, where he held talks for the unification of Jordan and Syria and discussed the situation in Lebanon with President Hafez Assad.

Jordanian newspapers said Monday the royal cabinet and the prime minister Rifai had discussed "political activities concerning the future status of Jordan.

Israel's heroic rescue defended by Scranton history, a combination of guts

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - The United States defended Israel's rescue of hijacked hostages from Uganda and called on the Security council Monday night to rally the members of the United Nations against hijacking and international terrorism.

Ambassador William W Scranton reminded the 15nation council that the Israeli raid on Uganda's Entebbe airport on July 4 never would have taken place if Palestinian and West German terrorists had not hijacked an Air France jetliner and taken it there with some 250 hostages.

In Brussels, Belgium, the heads of nine West European governments promised Tuesday to prosecute or to extradite who takes hostages. They called for a worldwide agreement to do the same.

Accusing Uganda of co-operating with the sky pirates in violation of its own treaty obligations, Scranton said Israel "invoked one of the most remarkable rescue missions in

The American representative said there was "substantial evidence that the government of Uganda cooperated with and aided the hijackers" in violation of the 1970 Hague Convention against air piracy, which Uganda has accepted. He said Israel acted to save

Alpena, Presque Isle and Montmorency counties are not considered to be primary locations for the construction of a nuclear waste disposal site, said a spokesperson for the Energy Resource and Development Administration (ERDA), who "categorically" denied that the agency had decided to construct the site in Michigan. We are only attempting to find out the nature of geological information in the area," Jim Griffin, an ERDA public relations of-ficer, said Monday. "This is only one of the sites throughout the nation where studies are being conducted." The ERDA statement is a complete reversal of the previous position of the agency, Jim Storey, press assistant for Congressman Philip Ruppe, R-Alpena, said.

Ruppe and Congressman Bob Carr, D - East Lansing, recently held an open hearing in Alpena, where, according to Storey, the ERDA refused to deny a statement by a Union Carbide contractor that Alpena was considered "the prime location" for a proposed nuclear waste disposal site. "If Alpena is not the prime candidate why did they plan to begin drilling at the end of June? That is on the record," Storey said. 'The evidence seems to indicate that the ERDA has picked a site and that site is 3

Elsman recently threatened to sue Austin unless the Secretary of State ended the controversial fee branch system. Fee branch managers, appointed by Austin, allegedly were required to contribute to Austin's Senate campaign.

Austin recently agreed to end the system immediately, though it was to have been phased out within two years.

While it is apparently a perfectly legal tradition for Austin to put his name on building signs as Secretary of State, another use of the office was recently discontinued by state television stations.

Austin had been appearing in a series of public service spots advocating safe driving and prompt license plate renewals. However, television stations stopped running the free commercials the day Austin announced his Senate candidacy.

Though he did not foresee a continued involvement in elective politics, Grossfeld said he would keep on working for HRP candidates. He added that he felt HRP candidates had a chance to win one or possibly two Ingham County commission seats this fall.

The establishment of a research and training institute for rehabilitation and special education of handicappers on the MSU campus will be a big step away from our old, mistaken impressions and toward real and valuable answers.

Such an orientation should help to bridge the gulf between the world's 225 million handicappers who need assistance but do not receive it and the 75 million of them who receive some sort of training and aid.

Many handicappers in the past have sought a place in society, but because of the lack of facilities and training, have been forced into special homes, a life of neglect and purposelessness. These centers

Much needs to be done in this regard: facilities must be built which take account of those who cannot walk or see; educational materials for the deaf and the blind must be made available in greater quantities: research into methods of training must be done; but, most importantly a change must be made in the attitude of those still walking, still hearing, still seeing.

It is a different kind of blindness which often afflicts society at large: not of a physical nature. This blindness often leads us to neglect and forget handicappers and their needs.

It is hoped that this new center will make great strides in research, and will give more and more handicappers the chance to live within and not outside, society; but it should also serve as a reminder to those not directly affected by its services that we stand committed to remembering all of our citizens when it comes to distributing the joys of life.

Goldwater's letter: full of giant holes delegates to the Republican Convention requires analysis. It is set out with a kind of explicitness not routinely invoked by Senator Gold water, as coming from the senior conservative elected official in the country. And it urges the Convention to name Gerald Ford as its nominee.

Well, if he has to put it that way. I have been fighting the ideological wars as long as Senator Goldwater, in the same army, though in a differen service (G 2) and I believe with all due respect for him that Senator Goldwater is dead wrong. This conclusion is shared by many of my friends and colleagues.

1. Senator Goldwater says that President Ford is "turning this coun try back in the right direction. And should be encouraged to continue to do so. The implicit premise of the statement is that Mr. Ford will be elected if nominated, and that Reagan would not; moreover, that Ford would succeed, if elected, where Reagan would fail.

Much too much is taken for granted here. In the first place, the polls show that both Ford and Reagan would lose. Perhaps the polls are as wrong as they were when they said that Truman would lose. But perfectly cool heads, analyzing the ideological dem ographics of the country, come to the conclusion that Reagan would do better against Carter than Ford; and than Ford is in those states in which Carter has so heavy an edge as to make Ford's advantage over Reagan meaningless.

Moreover, Schator Goldwater says that Mr. Ford's experience in Wash ington equipped him to deal with "a Democratic Congress which has done more damage to the American con cept of government and free enterprise than any other in my memory

There is a contradiction here. If it is the worst Congress in the memory of Senator Goldwater, then he must face the coincidence that the worst Congress in history carried on under the Presidency of Gerald Ford. Gerald Ford has done a lot of vetoing, and some of his vetoes have stuck, others have not. What reason is there to think that his vetoes would be more effective than Reagan's? And what reason is there to think that Reagan might not bring in a better Congress than Ford, if Reagan were elected, which is at least as probable as that Gerald Ford would be?

2. The foreign policy of the Nixon-Ford Administration has not succeed ed in its stated aims. When Senator Goldwater declares that Ford and Reagan are both conservatives he is correct. He is not correct in suggesting that therefore there would be insignificant differences in foreign policy if Reagan were elected.

Mr. Reagan's concern for the physical security of this country is more pronounced than Mr. Ford's. His penetration of the failure of detente sharply contrasts with Mr. Ford's lingering attachment to it. In the past, no one has expressed greater concern than Senator Goldwater over our deteriorating military situation. President Reagan would do what he could to reverse the trend.

3 The Republican Party is in pretty awful shape — a handful of Governors, a third of Congress, 20 per cent of the registered voters. If ever a Party needed rebirth, it is this Party, and this isn't going to happen under Gerald Ford. If it were, there'd be signs of it after two years of his Presidency. Where are those signs?

Perhaps it would not happen under Reagan. But Reagan has the capacity to stir. His absence from Washington over the years gives him the radical perspective needed to look at the monster we have created with a freshness that does not come so easily to someone who has spent all his life in government. Perhaps this is the year of Carter; but it is almost certainly not the year of Ford. And if idealism is not dead, at Kansas City they will go for Reagan.

RALPH NADER:

Inconsistencies must be major if reported

WASHINGTON (KFS) - After reading the new book about Ralph Nader, conservatives may decide that the liberal journalism of investigations has turned to eating the flesh of its own species. ("Me & Ralph: Is Nader Unsafe for America?" by David Sanford, The New Republic Book Co., Washington, D.C., $7.95.) David Sanford, its author, is the managing editor of The New

"Some inconsistencies on the part of public figures, be they in language or act, are important. It takes thought and judgment to distinguish them from the inconsequential."

Republic and as such he is as much a certificated liberal as a Walter Mondale or a Jake Javits, although there are those who say the magazine Walter Lippman found has drifted far rightward.

Nevertheless, some of us who're ordinarily accused of leftward tilt might ask ourselves if we've been doing the same kind of job on those we disagree with that Sanford does on Nader. If we have, you can begin to understand why the bowels fly loose at the country club at the suggestion there's a journalist skulking around the gates, noting who is going home with the or husband

THE END AND THE MEANS Sanford makes it clear from the onset he will do Nader in, if he can, but ought he use such means to discredit our only major public figure who doesn't have to pray on V to prove he's honest? Let's quote

"Lately other associates of Nader have maintained to reporters that Ralph is dating. They do not say whom. After her husband was killed Ethel Kennedy occa-sionally had Ralph in for dinner. Morrison McCormick, a resident of Georgetown, says that Ralph sometimes works late in what neighbors on Thirty-fourth Street, NW. refer to as 'the mystery house' — a dwelling occupied by a young woman who keeps her blinds drawn, has nothing to do with neighbors and who (McCormick assumed) is in Nader's hire. Some mornings she and Ralph can be seen quietly leaving the house the back way and getting into a car — a car she, not Ralph, always drives — parked on Volta Place.

This small shameful moment in journa lism is prefaced by the remark that: "One of the least defensible intrusions upon Nader's privacy has been the interest that writers... have taken in his sex life..." First you deplore it and then you do it.

What can one say except, "Shades Lizzie Ray!" Boudoir journalism is the Washington fashion even under the colophon of The New Republic, a publication that may not have always been right, but Imagine attacking Nadar by writing: ". he rode in Kopkind's convertible and didn't even buckle his seat belt." Sanford isn't the only eastern lib journalist who lives to catch people in inconsistencies. The penchant is as nearly universal as it is imbecilic. At this very moment you can wager that an unknown but large number of salivating newsies are examining every recorded word of Jimmy Peanut to catch him in inconsistent statements. They'll succeed because the consistency contemporary news carnivores seek is to be found only in the madhouse. So he didn't buckle his seat belt, eh? There are private detectives working for large news-gathering organizations in Washington who've caught dentists drinking Coca-Cola and nutritionists eating

GROSS LITTLE HINT

Some inconsistencies on the part of public figures, be they in language or act, are important. It takes thought and judgment to distinguish them from the inconsequent tial. To explain the important inconsistencies and contradictions demands expository writing, and that's a higher order of skill than marking down when people may have violated their Boy Scout oath.

Nader is open to attack on ma substantive issues, but you can't do that you don't understand the issues and unable to write about them with clar Nader, for example, did not ender no-fault auto insurance. Never mind the lot of us who did now wish we hadni Sanford thought Nader was wrong should have addressed himself to the me of the case. He didn't. Instead, naturally first says Nader wouldn't ever be enced by a gift of money, and then leaved with the gross little hint that maybe Ma was swayed by a donation from the I Lawyers Association.

Amin's "great victory" wins another medal

WASHINGTON-While the Western press has been giving the Israeli army credit for pulling off one of the great military operations of modern times, no one has taken note of the fantastic success of Field Marshal Idi Amin Dada in driving out the invaders from his country in less than

According to a military spokesman in Entebbe, the Ugandan army repulsed the invasion of Entebbe and drove off the hostile troops, forcing them to flee Uganda by plane. As of this writing, the Entebbe Airport is still in Ugandan hands and Israel suffered a terrible defeat when their soldiers had to return home in disgrace.

An admirer of Field Marshal Amin told me, "Everyone keeps talking about the Israeli success, but no one gives credit to the field marshal for rallying his troops and preventing Israel from taking over the country.'

"I never thought of it that way, but it's true. If Amin still holds the Entebbe Airport, that means the Ugandans won." I

"Exactly. The field marshal has given Israel a thrashing they'll never forget. They'll think twice before they send ommandos into his country again."

'Was the field marshal expecting them?" "Of course, he was. Field Marshal Amin has one of the greatest military minds of the 20th century. He was aware that the Israelis would try something, and he had all his troops alerted."

"But why did he leave to attend a meeting of the Organization of African states if he knew the Israelis were going to invade his country?"

"To catch them off guard. That was part of the plan. The Israelis were lulled into a false sense of security when they saw Amin boarding a plane for the OAS conference.

'Big Daddy' knew that as soon as he left the Israelis would put their disastrous plan into

"And he was right. The ruse worked." "It certainly did. The Israelis flew their commandos 2,600 miles to the Entebbe Airport and found themselves surrounded by crack Ugandan troops. They had no choice but to pick up the hostages and high-tail it out of there, or they would have been annihilated."

"Where was Big Daddy while all this was going on?'

"The Israelis thought he was at the OAS conference, but he was at his command post in his bunker, directing the defense of the airport."

That was another ruse the field marshal pulled off. He knew the Israelis wanted him to send up his fighter planes so they could shoot them down. So he kept his fighters on the ground and gave his pilots the night off. This threw the Israeli strategy completely off, and they were forced to blow up the field marshal's planes on the ground. The Israelis were so busy blowing up Big Daddy's planes they never had time to capture the airport."

"I never thought of it that way, but when you look back on it, it was a military str of genius," I said in admiration.

New trends in church music explored at annual workshop

By Greta Bolger

New trends in church music and worship ervices are being explored in the 22nd nual Church Music Workshop, at the Kellogg Center for Continuing Education, Monday through Thursday.

Choir directors, organists and other orch representatives of all denominations from Michigan and neighboring states have me to attend the classes and recitals onsored by the Michigan Council of hurches, the MSU Dept. of Music and the niversity Committee on Church Related Enrichment and improvement of the nusical programs in churches is sought in any ways — two of the more novel ones re the use of handbells and the use of hniques based on a method of music ucation for children, formulated by Carl of Germany.

Sister Marcia Lunz demonstrates how he Orff methods can be used to actively olve young people in worship.

Beginning with the most elemental ects of music and dance, traditional mns incorporate movements which corre nd to the meaning of the words in the mn, she said.

The result is a sort of choreographed oir, with the worship taking place on both visual and the audio level.

For example, for a hymn sung in rounds, choir moves into four separate circles, ach taking one part of the round. She compared dancing to the traditional stures of worship, such as the folding of ands and the bowing of heads. Sacred dance is just an extension of the ditional worship movements," she said. She explained the reluctance of some rches to become involved in these newer worship methods.

"The resistance comes from bad experiences with jazzy types of dance and music, lacking in reverence," she said.

She works mainly with junior high school students, using the Orff instruments, which include xylophones, drums, wind instru-ments and other instruments which are not difficult to learn to play.

But body percussion — the slapping of knees, the clapping of hands — is used as a starting point.

"The body is what you begin with. It is the God given musical instrument," she Albert G. Bolitho, an associate professor of music at Albion College and the director of the Church Music Workshop, said that this was the largest registration the workshop has ever had and called them "a very enthusiastic crowd." He commented on the direction that church music is taking.

"As the country has been searching for its roots, the church has also been searching for its roots. As we emerge from our pop culture emphasis in the churches, it seems as though we're moving more toward the historical foundations of the church, both musically and liturgically," he said.

A church music workshop, focusing on organ music, choral music, handbells and newer music, instruments and dance which appeal to youth, will culminate tonight in a special service at Lansing's Plymouth Congregational Church, Grand River and Fairview Avenues, at 8:15 p.m.

The more than 100 participants in the workshop will form a choir directed by David Strickler, chairperson of the Albion College Dept. of Music.

They will be accompanied at the organ by Paul Manz, chairperson of the Dept. of Music and Fine Arts, Concordia College, St.

Paul, Minn. Richard Klausli, a professor of music at MSU, will also speak tonight on the aspects of music and liturgy emphasized in the The service is free and open to the public.

Feliciano displays amazing versatility

By ANNE E. STUART State News Reviewer

Gliding smoothly from disco music to a gentle ballad to an imitation of Marlon Brando singing "Bridge over Troubled Water", Jose Feliciano once again displayed his amazing versatility as an entertainer to a delighted near sell-out crowd at Long's Banquet Center Thursday.

The audience of about 700 was as varied as the choice of songs. Long gowns mingled with blue jeans and halter tops in the starkly luxurious banquet room with its square chandeliers and mirrored walls. Dinner patrons, enjoying choice seats in the center of the room, feasted on lobster, Caesar salad, broccoli and cheesecake while general admission spectators sipped cocktails on the crowd's outer fringe.

As the chandelier bulbs dimmed to twinkles, audience murmurs and glassclinking hushed expectantly. A Long's spokesperson introduced the special audi ence guests for the evening, students and faculty of the Michigan School for the Blind with a few words about the inspiration of Feliciano, blind since birth. Fervent fans were to envy the group, who received a private reception with Feliciano after the Rhinestones sparkled on Feliciano's charcoal-gray modified Western jacket as he walked onstage, greeted by the first of his custom-made guitar as he climbed onto a high stool and swung into his first song, "Feel like Makin' Love". Sound problems marred the tune, but they were corrected within a few minutes.

Bits and pieces of the 31-year-old native Puerto Rican's wide repertoire were pre-sented at the Long's performance, including disco music, a flamenco display, and two Barry Manilow hits, "I write the Songs" and "Lay Me Down." Especially well-received were the popular opening song of the television show, "Chico and the Man" and the tender title cut from the just-released

Surprisingly, Feliciano played none of the older Beatle songs which have become part of his trademark and are still frequently requested. Most selections were adaptions of classic or recently popular tunes, with jazz and finger-picking improvisation and characteristic crooning.

Though it is risky to narrow Feliciano's style to any single category, perhaps the heading of "jazz" best fits. Playboy Magazine recently selected Feliciano as the best jazz guitar player of the year and ranked him fourth among pop guitar players in the same contest. No one seems to know exactly how many albums he has, but area record shops and a radio station estimate about 15. He has made many television appearances and recently completed a movie score. He is on the road about nine months of the year.

Showing that his talent as a musician extended to that of a comedian, he clowned with the audience throughout the performance. Between two songs, he startled the elegantly appareled dinner patrons with a quick Donald Duck imitation. As he plunked the strings of his guitar before beginning another song, testing the sound. he quipped that it was an old Chinese song, "Tu-Ning." When nobody laughed, he encouraged, "Tu-Ning. Get it? Tuning!" The embarrassed audience finally joined in as he roared with infectious laughter

As a break to a series of sad love songs he rasped out a Sicilian rendition of "Bridge over Troubled Water", imitating Marlon Brando's voice in "The Godfather": "Like a bridge over Joisey waters, I will lay them

Requesting Feliciano's first hit, a tipsy oman in the audience yelled out, "Light My Fire!" Feliciano grinned and replied,

"Okay, after the show!"

He finished with his most-requested song, the version of the Doors' tune that began his career by bringing him to national attention in the sixties, "Light My Fire". He introduced his band and thanked the audience ("Without you I can't make it") during the final song superbly avoiding the anti-climax of post-performance remarks. He was assisted off the stage after bowing to cheers and a standing ovation.

Feliciano's performance was barely an hour long, but was truly a polished one, with no gaps or major problems once the faulty sound system was repaired.

State News Reviewer Robert Altman, in "Buffalo Bill and the ndians, or Sitting Bull's History Lesson" ttempts to revise our image of the stern and the Western star. It could as rell be titled "We are the Chosen People nd Buffalo Bill is Our Saviour, or "How an We Believe in God, if John Wayne is Altman roots his arguments in the e-revisionist reading of Western history which dominates the modern Western. He nd Alan Rudolph adapted Arthur Kopit's shionable play "Indians," presented on roadway in 1970. Their version wraps vision in razzle-dazzle.

Kopit's concentration on the role of the ndian in American history is scrapped in vor of Altman's concern for Buffalo Bill ody's seminal role in the history of the estern. He concerns himself not with storical process but with the role of the estern and the Western star in the ultural development of the nation.

Altman assumes a degree of familiarity ith Western history, historical figures and eir personae which defy the average viewer and radically alter perception. Altman assumes sympathy for Sitting Bull and foreknowledge of his murder when he returns to the agency. He assumes that viewers understand the complex political climate which engulfed Sitting Bull and his people when he returned to Canada to attempt to effect a political solution between the Sioux and the United States. Altman assumed a set of ideas and attitudes which represent a norm among Western historians, writers, filmmakers and western buffs. Without these attitudes, Altman's retelling of the Western myth is more likely to entertain than inform.

It is treacherous to discuss the style and the film underwent a radical re-editing after the first version, overseen by Altman, was shown to United artists. Dino De Laurentiis and Altman have been skirmishing for months over the question of cutting and this was probably responsible for the film not being shown at the Cannes Film Festival as

De Laurentiis has dismissed Altman as director of his upcoming production "Rag-time," presumably because their conception of the project differs. It seems more likely that the dismissal results from De Laurentiis' unhappiness over the outcome of "Buffalo Bill. The final version of "Buffalo Bill" emerges as a rousing Western with stunning photography, rousing action and the swirl of activity and energetic horsemanship that one associates with old-style Hollywood "shoot em ups". It lacks the inventive flexibility with which Altman extended the possibilities of cinematic expression through editing in "M*A*S*H"

Altman has made his reputation on the basis of off-beat casting and brilliant personal success in bringing out an actor's possibilities as he did with Lily Tomlin and Henry Gibson in their off-beat casting in "Nashville." In limiting himself to a study of images rather than people, Altman has tied hand behind his back. His technical ability is wasted without his cheerful. quirky insight into human nature.

Paul Newman just stands there looking like a tintype. He has never looked lovelier or less real. He adds nothing to his familiar stereotyped performance as a self-conscious culture hero. Joel Grey and Kevin Mc-Carthy also perform predictably as producer and publicist. Only Denver Pyle creates an aura of unrealized menace in his cameo as the skin-clad Indian agent, who looked like he had survived a winter in the Rockies by knawing on his squaw.

The DeLuxe Color print work which Eastwood also used in "The Outlaw Josey Wales." complements the photography by Paul Lohman. This photography and Jack Maxted's art direction make it one of the best-looking Westerns around. The hazy yellow sunrises and endless prairies look like they were lifted intact from a Reming-

Altman may not revise anyone's image of the West, but he has mounted a rousing entertainment which should return viewers to "those rousing days of yesteryear" when Westerns were fun to watch.

When Clemmons reaches the Western outpost where the camels are due to arrive, he finds an eager group of men waiting for the fine "Arabian mounts" they heard they were getting. When a bunch of camels arrive instead of the coveted Arabian stallions they expected, Clemmons finds himself with a mutiny on his hands. The cast and camels then go through endless tired old slapstick routines which the kids at the movie seemed to enjoy but became wearisome after awhile to older watchers.

As the troop finally gains grudging respect for their much-maligned and insulted humpbacked mounts, their group pride (continued on page 10)

Canyon beauty topic of film

The Grand Canyon, American's 2,000square-mile natural wonder that is a favorite subject of hard-core tourists with Kodaks, is the star of Ralph Franklin's aptly titled film "The Canyon."

Franklin utilizes time-lapse and slow motion photography and helicopter flights in and below the rims of the Canyon to portray the grandeur of the landmark in each of the four seasons. A special segment of the film will reveal the thrill and danger of the infamous Canyon rapids, Lava Falls.

"The Canyon" will also feature footage of Franklin's 312-mile expedition down the Colorado River in a rubber raft, exploration of Indian ruins, hiking through side canyons and a visit with Emery Kolb, first man to film the raging river.

"The Canvon" is the third summer presentation of the Lecture-Concert World Travel Series and will be shown at 8 p.m. Thursday in the University Auditorium Tickets are $2 at the door, with one child admitted free with each paid adult admis-

Recycling viewed for fall

By DEBRA MOTIR

ASMSU will decide Thursday whether the "Pick 'Em Up' program being promoted by the Miller Brewing Co. will help keep the campus clean or just be another backache for stu-

The recycling program which is for beer bottles and cans is already at most Big Ten and Michigan universities and is run as a competition among registered campus groups. The groups collect aluminum cans, refillable Miller bottles and Miller keg reclamation stickers and turn them in to the State Beverage Co. in Lansing, the local Miller distributor, for

"I've seen kids early Saturday morning in parking lots picking up cans and bottles,' Frank Spagnuola, sales manager of the State Beverage Co., said. The program makes students more aware of the litter problem. There are a lot of cans and bottles sitting there."

According to MSU officials, however, cans and bottles don't seem to be much of a litter problem except on weekends.

"The program would be no great contribution, but I suppose it would help cut down on some of our work," John Zink,

MSU grounds supervisor, said. One point is recorded for every pound of Miller bottles, (about two), 30 points for every pound of Miller aluminum cans (about 22) and 50 points for each Miller keg reclamation sticker that students collect when they return the empty

Brand-name, group-oriented prizes are offered for the most points collected. Different divisions are open for dormitories, fraternities, sororities and other interested campus groups. Grand prizes and second and third prizes are offered

"To be effective, a recycling program has got to have some continuity." Starr Keesler. assistant executive vice president, said. "The problem to date is that programs are victims of what the market will give for a recycled product."

Barb Horner, telecommunica tions undergraduate, 323 Village Dr., is campus representative of the "Pick 'Em Up" program. She is one of 150 campus representatives nationwide responsible for seeing that the programs runs smoothly.

Two weeks prior to the planned Oct. 1 starting date, Horner will contact the Interdorm Council at MSU and the presidents of all fraternities and sororities. A kick-off semi-nar for the "Pick 'Em Up" program will be scheduled to allow interested groups to learn the details of entering the

Started at three campuses three years ago, the program now covers 30 states, involves 1.8 million students, and each year recycles 13 million cans.

The improvement of transportation for Michigan's million-plus aged and handicappers is the major aim of a conference at the MSU $\,$ Kellogg Center to be held Thursday and Friday.

Participants in the conference will include about 150 representatives of Michigan state and local government, community planning groups, transportation departments, consultants, manufacturers, vendors and consumers — particularly the aged and handicappers. Leaders from urban and rural communities in both peninsulas as well as officials from states as distant as Florida and California are enrolled in the two-day conference.

The conference will be staffed by mass transportation authorities from the U.S. Dept. of Transportation, Michigan Dept. of State Highways and Transportation, MSU College of Engineering and industry and representatives of consumer groups.

General sessions will concentrate on state and federal regulations, planning and developing programs, marshaling resources and selecting proper equipment. Accessible transportation and Transportation Interface is the subject of a major Friday morning program that will feature displays and exhibits.

This is the third conference of its kind and is sponsored by the Michigan Dept. of State Highways and Transportation, MSU's College of Engineering, the Office of Programs for Handicapped Students and the Continuing Education Service.

Marc VanWormer, conference consultant, said the public is invited to the conference for a registration fee of $17.50.

Registration begins at 10 a.m. Thursday at the conference registration desk. A luncheon at noon will open the conference followed by speakers until dinner and will wind up around 10 a.m. to about 5 b.m. and will be speakers until the form 9 a.m. to about 9 a.m. to abo Friday's program will run from 9 a.m. to about 5 p.m. and will include a luncheon.

ERDA denies nuclear site

(continued from page 3) such as those considered in Alpena, are only one of a number of methods the agency is currently exploring in hopes of finding a safer, more efficient method of disposing of the highly radioactive material.

Other methods include:
•Deep undersea burials.

*Transmutation, a process of changing the composition of the waste, thereby reducing the radioactivity and the amount of time the material must remain buried, which currently can be as long as several thousand years.

•Extraterrestrial (beyond the earth) disposal, which would shoot the substance into the sun. While this method has many advantages, the cost would probably be prohibitive.

"At this point in time, the burial approach is clearly the most feasible," Griffin conceded. "Once people decide that nuclear energy is necessary and desirable, they must take responsibility for the energy that runs their appliances. A lot of educating must be done to explain what dangers and benefits are to be expected."

benefits are to be expected."
Though Griffin would not speculate on when or even if the ERDA would complete an assessment of possible environmental effects that could accompany the proposed site, he did say that the agency would comply with federal law.

Griffin also refused to answer charges made by Ruppe last week that the ERDA was in violation of its own regulation requiring the assessment.

Atty. Gen. Frank Kelly threatened to file suit Monday against federal energy officials if they attempted to construct the site without preparing a full environmental impact statement.

TRC needs volunteers

Security deposits, leasing, evictions and maintenance will be the four major problem areas covered during the Tenants Resource Center volunteer training program from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. Saturday and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday.

The TRC, located upstairs over the Unitarian Universalist Church at 855 Grove St., is a nonprofit organization which offers information on tenant and landlord rights and responsibilities, and handles referrals of special problems.

Volunteers are needed im-

Volunteers are needed immediately because the demand for the TRC services increases in the summer. The TRC is presently understaffed because regular volunteers have graduated or gone home until the fall.

The TRC's expanding coverage is another reason for the need for additional volunteers. Aubrey Marron, TRC training coordinator, estimates that as many as one-third of all calls received come from as far away as Flint and Detroit. The TRC recently added another office and phone to help service the higher number of callers.

Role-playing, sample problems and legal questions will be offered to train anyone wishing to volunteer two hours a week to work at the TRC. Training coordinators prefer that prospective volunteers attend both the Friday night and the Saturday sessions, but other arrangements can be made in advance. For more information, the TRC can be reached at 337-9795. In a letter to ERDA official Robert Seamens, Kelly said is would initiate the proceeding and attempt to "restrain the creation of an Atomic dump in Michigan if the ERDA attempt to proceed without an adequate advance study of potential experiences"

As evidenced by the overwhelming applause and standing ovation bestowed upon Congresswoman Jordan when she spoke before the convention Monday, a woman can make it in the Democratic party and win the support of both men and women.

Women and black delegates have expressed the hope for Jordan to be chosen as a running mate for Jimmy Carter or if he is elected president as a member of his cabinet or the Supreme Court. But Jordan adamantly refused Tuesday any movement to make her vice president, saying such a move would serve no purpose. Petitions had been circulated at the convention for her nomination. loses second coach in two years

By EDWARD L. RONDERS

State News Sports Writer For the second time in two years, the MSU women's basketball

The State News learned Tuesday that former varsity and junior varsity cage mentor Dominic Marino was informed in April by Dr. Nell Jackson, asst. director of women's athletics, that he would not he retained next season.

Following the 1974-75 season, former coach Mickey Bailey left the Spartan staff for a lower-paying position with an Eastern Marino, who worked as a graduate assistant for four years with MSU's men's basketball team prior to coaching the women's team, was informed of his dismissal in a letter from Jackson. "I don't remember the exact date, but in early April I received a letter from Dr. Jackson stating that I wasn't being retained as coach,'

He continued, "We had several meetings before about the team but she never had the courtesy to tell me to my face. She stated in the letter that if I had any questions I should call her."

Jackson confirmed Marino's firing, saying, "The normal procedure I use when dismissing someone is to send them a letter. We (Jackson and Marino) had talked about that possibility earlier Jackson added that she made the decision herself and didn't consult anyone in the athletic department. "I informed Dr. Kearney (MSU athletic director) about my decision. I didn't retain Marino because I felt in general that we needed a change in the

Kearney recalled the incident in April, immediately after he assumed his new duties at MSU, but he failed to remember the exact date. "I can remember her telling me about it, but I just can't recall the timing of the move," he said

"It's not clear to me what happened. I'd intend to talk to Dr. Jackson and find out exactly what she did," he added.

Commenting on Jackson's use of a letter to inform the coach of his dismissal, Kearney noted, "Each university has to establish procedure and a process for evaluating personnel and any possible changes. As I said before, I can't clearly recall the exact circumstances, so I can't really comment on what exactly happened. But I intend to look into it."

Marino's exit from the cage program is apparently the culmination of a year-long dispute between him and Jackson.

The women's team had posted a 2-13 win-loss record when Marino promoted several members of the junior varsity to the varsity for the state tournament. Dissension surfaced on the squad when Regina Goldschmidt subsequently quit the team in protest. "I don't feel Dr. Jackson gave me full support on my decision to bring up the players from the JV's" Marino said. "Some girls went and complained to her and she didn't back me up," he added. Jackson said that Marino's roster change was not a factor in the

'U' hires assistant to direct publicity

In keeping with the greater emphasis on women's athletics, MSU has hired an assistant Sports Information Director (SID) to coordinate publicity for women's teams.

Fred Stabley, Sr., announced that Claudia Dinges will assume her post as assistant SID in charge of the women's program at MSU, effective Aug. 1

In addition to preparing re leases and coordinating media coverage of women's sports, Dinges will also work with the men's programs, according to Stabley. Dinges is the first woman to hold such a position at MSU.

Q. I recently received a large foliage plant as a gift. Now all of a sudden it's dropping a lot of its lower leaves. I'm following the care directions that came with it, so what's the problem?

A. Lower leaf drop in foliage plants is often the result of shock due to changes in environment. A plant that goes from a bright, warm, moist greenhouse to a sometimes dimly lit florist shop to your warm, somewhat dry home will often lose leaves as it tries to adapt its growth to changing light, temperature and

Q. How can I start a pineapple plant? A. Cut off the top part with the leaves and remove all the fruit. Pull off the bottom leaves until you have 1 to 11/2 inches of stem exposed. > A. Your bug problem is probably a population of springtails. They are tiny - about 1/32nd inch long and can build up extremely large populations in a very short time. They usually feed on fugni, decayed vegetable matter and algae - though some will feed on living plants. A malathion spray may be used around houseplants except ferns — but it is only a partial, temporary solution. "The memos kept coming from her regarding work that had to be done. I had already received my salary for the year, I was officially fired, yet they kept giving me jobs to do.

Peg Kolka, who helped Marino coach the squad last year, recalled friction between the previous coaching staff and Jackson

"I served as assistant coach under Mickey Bailey in 1974-75, and the situation was very, very tense. It was like trying to pull teeth to get cooperation from Dr. Jackson," she exclaimed.

"We tried to get practice facilities for the team, and failed at every step. Finally, Bonnie Smoak, (asst. volleyball coach) and myself went to see Dr. Jackson and didn't get anywhere. Then we ent to Burt Smith and he said he would see what he could do. When we still didn't have anywhere to practice, we went to see Jack Breslin Kolka commented.

Jackson denied that she ever reprimanded the two coaches Kolka added, "Things got so bad at the end of the season that Mickey Bailey left here for a lower-paying job."

Jackson stated that she has been searching for a new coach and that "we are close to naming one."
