Don't let his age fool you; Woody can still be mean

By EDWARD L. RONDERS State News Staff Writer Copyright, 1976

It's not really something to brag about, when you think of it. Running from a 62-year-old football coach isn't exactly the bravest thing in the world.

But I did it, and for good reason. To get a complete and accurate picture, let's start at the beginning.

The Big Ten football kickoff luncheon held last Thursday and Friday in Chicago was to generate enthusiasm for the upcoming season and give the media an opportunity to nterview players and coaches alike.

Everything went swell until the luncheon Friday afternoon.

I happened to be seated at a table with one of OSU's biggest fans. What a drag. The gentleman continually tried to impress me with his financial status, "I was so mad after last year's Rose Bowl that I went right to Hawaii to forget it."

Meanwhile, various Big Ten coaches were doing their collective best to guarantee those present that their squads would catch up with OSU and U - M.

present that their squads would catch up with USU and U - M.

Then Woody Hayes took the lectern and gave a homily expounding the merits of Pete Johnson and Tom Skladany on the gridiron. Even that was somewhat palatable.

But, then the dean of Big Ten coaches began referring to integrity in sports. I could see it coming. And when Woody admitted he had indeed turned in MSU, I personally wanted to crawl under the table. But, instead I made up my mind to forsake any continuing investigation and go ahead and publish what I had on the Buckeyes.

Following the lumbean I found a phone booth and contacted a key source and asked if he

Lenz ASMSU president; invalidations overturned

By MICKI MAYNARD State News Staff Writer

After four months of appeals and hearings, the way has been cleared for Michael Lenz to assume the presidency of ASMSU.

In a decision released Friday, the Student-Faculty Judiciary overturned Lenz' invalidation by the All-University Elections Commission (AUEC).

The judiciary also cleared the invalidations of Timothy Hagle, winner of the College of Communication Arts and Sciences representative seat; Mary Cloud, winner in Education, and Neil Ruggles in the College of Natural Science.

Lenz, who ran on the Counterforce slate was elected ASMSU President by the student body during spring term registra tion elections. Lenz was invalidated by the AUEC in early May.

He appealed the ruling to the All University Student Judiciary, who passed the case back to the AUEC. Lenz was again invalidated on May 17 and he subsequently appealed to the Student Faculty Judiciary.

In the decision handed down Friday, the judiciary said the AUEC does not have the power to invalidate a candidate for violations other than exceeding campaign expen-

The AUEC had invalidated the Counterforce slate for a violation of MSU ordinance 31.00, which prohibits the posting of signs on University property other than campus

In its decision, the judiciary also ruled that Paul Davidson, chairperson of the AUEC, was not duly elected in accordance with the ASMSU Elections Code.

The code requires that candidates for the elections commission petition the student board for seats on the commission. When petitioning for the AUEC concluded during winter term, only one commissioner, Mike Tiscornia, had petitioned and was accepted Former ASMSU President Brian Ray-

Mars life may mimic biology

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — If there is biological activity on Mars "it is stronger than anything we have obtained from terrestrial soil," the head of Viking 1's biology team says in a report on the possibility of life on the Red Planet.

Confirmation of early experiments by Viking 1 on Mars' surface "would mean that biology on Mars is highly developed, more intense, than life on earth." Dr. Harold P. Klein said Saturday. But he cautioned the findings could merely indicate processes which "may mimic biological reactions.

Klein said a gas exchange experiment registered an oxygen content almost 20 times as great as scientists had expected. He said another experiment, which used radioactive tracers, detected the presence of carbon dioxide and other gases on the planet.

We believe there is something in the surface of Mars — some chemical or physical entity, which is affording the surface material great activity and may mimic — let me emphasize that, may mimic, biological activity."

15 questioned in policeman's shooting

DETROIT (UPI) - Reputed Mafia leaders plotted as long ago as 1966 to abduct former Teamsters President James R. Hoffa, the Detroit News reported in a copyrighted story Sunday.

The newspaper said the scheme was revealed in a secret transcript of an FBI "bug" of reputed Mafia boss Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone.

Giacalone was a prime suspect in connection with Hoffa's abduction one year ago last Friday, and his presumed murder. Hoffa's family told federal investigators the former union leader said he was going to attend a meeting with Giacalone and another man at a suburban Detroit restaurant the day he vanished.

The News said, however, the transcript revealed that the plan to "grab that Jimmy Hoffa" — allegedly proposed by Detroit Mafia czar Anthony "Tony Z" Zerilla — was dropped after Giacalone defended Hoffa as "our connection" with the multi-million dollar Teamsters' pension fund.

Diplomats leave Peking; new earthquake feared

TOKYO (AP) - The foreign community began a mass ex-odus from Peking on Sunday after Chinese seismologists, worried by such signs as the nervous behavior of zoo animals, warned again that a major new earthquake was imminent.

The casualty toll from Wednesday's earthquakes remained unknown to the outside world. Speculation based on sketchy reports put the number of dead and injured at anything from tens of thousands to one Japan's Kyodo news agency reported from the Chinese capital that Sunday's warning was the first suggestion that long-term foreign residents, such as diplomats and news reporters, leave the capital. It was the third warning since Friday of another quake.

David Dean, deputy chief of the U.S. mission in Peking, said plans were being made to have 18 wives and eight children of mission staff members flown out of the city Monday. There were no immediate plans to evacuate the 31 staff members, said Dean, reached by telephone from Hong Kong. It was reported in London that the British embassy in Peking flew out 50 dependents Sunday. Other embassies were doing the same.

Kyodo said Chinese seismologists were summoned to the Peking Zoo over the weekend when some animals began making loud noises and became violent. The Chinese, proficient at predicting earthquakes, are believed to depend on such signs as odd animal behavior and changes in the levels of well

Millions of Peking residents remained camped outdoors, away from the potential dange of falling buildings. Kyodo said foreigners who were remaining in Peking were moving into tents in embassy courtyards.

Dean said hotels and restaurants in the city were closed and that the mission was encountering problems in obtaining food

Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, has not issued any official report of casualties beyond saying that Tangshan, a city of one million people near the epicenter of the quakes 100 miles southeast of Peking, had suffered "serious" damage and loss of life. Foreigners in Tangshan when the tremors struck said it was totally devastated.

Peking and Tientsin, a city of four million, also suffered damage and casualties.

The worst recorded natural disaster in history was an earthquake in China in 1556 in which an estimated 830,000 persons died.

Hsinhua's report on relief efforts indicated that the Chinese leadership may fear internal political repercussions from the earthquake disaster.

Hsinhua quoted the theoretical journal Red Flag as declar-"We are fully confident that under the correct leadership of Chairman Mao and the party central committee and by closely relying on the masses, we can be completely successful in the relief struggle.

Officials arrested by Ugandan head

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan president Idi Amin has placed several top army commanders under arrest to head off a possible bid to topple him from power, Nairobi's Sun-day Nation newspaper said.

The claim of arrests follows a report that 30 senior army officers Thursday told Amin to resign because of the critical state of the nation's economy. Last weekend, according to thousands of leaflets calling on Amin to resign were distributed in Kampala, Entebbe, Jinja, and other towns Friday. Relations between Amin and the Kenyans have been strained for several months because of a claim by the Ugandan leader to Kenyan territory. The strain was worsened early this month when Amin accused the Kenyans of complicity in the Israeli raid July 4 that rescued 102 hijacked airline passengers and crew members from Uganda's Entebbe Airport. There was talk of a Ugandan invasion of Kenya, and refugees reported Amin's army was murdering Kenyans living in Uganda and seizing their property.

Also following the Israeli raid, Ugandan relations with Britain deteriorated when one of the hostages, Dora Bloch, a 75-year-old woman with dual British and Israeli nationality disappeared and was alleged by numerous persons to have been killed by Ugandan authorities. Last Wednesday Britain severed relations with the Amin regime.

Independent confirmation of the growing opposition to Amin's rule is not available, but there is widespread agreement among observers here that Amin is currently facing the

Among those reported under arrest were Defense Minister and Army Chief of Staff Major General Mustafa Adrisi and Col. Ali Toweli, director of public safety. Paul Gentilozzi, the property manager for Walter Neller Co. owners of the complex, said the issue has been blown way out of proportion.

The problems began with Goodrich's complaint about the Gentilozzi was invited to last

Administration policy on budget formulation must undergo change

MSU trustee Jack Stack, R-Al- the state derives a benefit from MSU community affected so deepma, was the sole board member to show the sort of courage that MSU will collectively need to eventually snare the beast of inadequate state higher education appropriations.

Stack, the lone dissenter on the board's budget vote Friday, said that the only way to solve MSU's budget cramp is to force the state to a realization that students and their families can't take on the rising payload of education.

We applaud Stack's protest vote, and would like to add a few observations of our own:

MSU general education needs

By ERIC HELLMAN

A recent State News editorial pointed out a major paradox which confronts the state of higher education in America and at MSU in particular. Namely, that the training of career-oriented and marketable individuals, has become inimical to the education of critical, reflective persons. The ability to get a job has become inversely proportionate to one's ability to evaluate a problem in terms of historical, ethical and social dimensions.

The editorial identified the demise of liberal education as the central contributor to this polarity. And here, I agree wholeheartedly. But at MSU I would argue that general education has declined not in concept, but only in practice

I believe that the following steps, nearly all of them ultimately tied to money, would greatly help to bridge the gap between theory and actuality

•Hire all University College faculty under dual appointment with both their respective department and another department of the University. This would allow professors to teach both general education classes for the nonspecialist within their department and to teach occasional upper-division courses in each faculty member's area of specialization. Result: eliminate the boredom and stagnation of professors who have been teaching the same course or courses, year after year.
•Reduce class loads from three classes per term to two per term per University College faculty member. This would bring the University College faculty into line with the teaching load of most other departments.

•Reduce class size of the departments of Natural Science, Social Science and Humanities to 30 persons at a maximum. This, coupled with a reduced teaching load for faculty, would for greater student-teacher contact and in turn, greater educational success

 Survey the specific disciplines of the natural sciences, humanities and social sciences in general education classes. Currently, the Natural Science and Social Science departments, in particular, offer courses with topical, i.e. "relevent," themes; a thematic approach often bscures any clear-cut examination of the actual areas of interest within a given academic ·Acknowledge that the Dept. of American Thought and Language should primarily teach English composition, not American history or literature. Readings should be the basis of response in composition classes, not, as they often are, the main focus,

•Reduce all ATL classes to 15 to 20 students. As a former tutor for the department, I do not believe that composition can successfully be taught in classes any larger than 20

The current status of general education as embodied in the University College reflects over-worked faculty, often dulled by the repetitiveness of their teaching assignments; overloaded classrooms which prevent pedagogical success; and frequently, an unclear focus on material from the specific disciplines of the University.

The suggestions I have made would, I believe, revitalize general education at MSU. As the State News has noted: "... the state of liberal education — as reflected in the general education requirement — is one of neglect and purposelessness." Purpose, I would argue, is not lacking; rather, general education at MSU is a v' tim of financial neglect,

Is SEC doing the job it was intended to?

WASHINGTON (KFS) - Neither the Great Peanut nor Ronald Peanut Butto nor Jerry Pea Soup is going to enjoy much success with regulatory reform unless they get help from us, and that means we're going to have to start thinking unthinkable thoughts. We're going to have to look at every regulatory structure and ask our-selves whether it does what we want of it and, even if it does, is the cost too high.

In a vague way, because the SEC was one of the first and most dramatic of the Rooseveltian reforms, we feel it is the public body which is going to prevent 1929 from happening again. Well, 1929 or some contemporary version of happened in 1974 when stocks lost something like 40 per cent of their values, and the SEC couldn't do a damn thing about it.

Nor should it have. The SEC wasn't but from foul play on the market. It was aren't playing against a rigged game.

IMAGINARY PROTECTION

The major tool the SEC uses to keep the play honest is disclosure. Companies selling tock to the public must tell what's going on in the backroom, but considering some of the multi-billion dollar swindles of the last few years, like Equity Funding, it may be that the protection the SEC affords is mostly imaginary. " . .a straightforward criminal enforcement program against fraud may have been more appropriate and less costly than has been the so-called disclosure approach," writes Professor Henry Manne, Director of the Center for Studies in Law and Economics at the University of Miami Law School (in "Wall Street in Transition," The Charles C. Moskowitz Lectures, New York University Press, 1974).

Professor Manne is usually ranked as a hopeless free-market conservative, but if we're serious about regulatory reform we're going to have to listen to men like him when they ask what proof do you have that your regulations accomplish more than expensive mischief. He suggests the SEC is really a stock brokers' protective act, which, while doing nothing particularly useful for the customer, discourages competition and new entrants into the securities industry. Manne tells us that the leading Wall Street brokerage houses tried to set up "canons of ethics" to privately the SEC would later impose by law. It goes without saying that these ethics, like all professional ethics everywhere, favor the big brokerage houses.

Besides promoting monopoly, Manne argues that, "The disclosure requirements themselves are often apt to prove more onerous for new, small companies (seeking to sell stock to raise money), than for large, established ones. Special disclosures for high-risk ventures, unavailability of earlier. audited financials; and illegality of earnings projections for companies without track records all illustrate this perverse discrimination... these laws have made it all but impossible for the small promoter to have access to public capital markets. . . .

In other words, Manne is maintaining that the SEC has so many rules about selling stock to the public that new companies frequently can't do it. They have to sell their stock privately, which usually means that the entrepreneurial businessman with the new ideas has to surrender control of his company even before it is

DATA DOUBTS

Is the financial and business data the SEC demands that companies publish good for anything? It may be of use to the publishing company's competitors or to people like stock analysts, but why should the power of government be used to help them? That makes as much sense as saying we must have complex and incomprehensible sets of security laws and regulations because their very murkiness drums up business for a segment of the legal profession.

A strong case could be made to show that the information the SEC causes companies to make public is worthless from the investor's standpoint. It's too old, too irrelevant or too meaningless to help the

In the 40 odd years since the SEC h been around many reasons have be advanced on its behalf. It was supposed give the public confidence in the market that people would invest in the Americ industry, but Manne points out a small percentage of the population buy stock no than they did in the days before the SI Most people won't buy stocks because the think it's too risky. It probably is for the so they're right to stay away from it, a the rest of us are misguided to play with t idea that a government agency should to it upon itself to legislate low-risk inve

Before we do that, we'd best try socials and put a padlock on Wall Street, but un then we're going to have to learn what should and shouldn't regulate in a mixe semi-planned society. We don't know ho to regulate everything, and, even if Man is wrong and the SEC is effective, it still, its very nature, is a consumer protect agency for millionaires. Perhaps we sho let them fend for themselves while we less to use the power to regulate such things the quality of the food and the air.

Can we, for example, force ourselves take up an institution like the Securitie and Exchange Commission and inquire, whether it's doing its job well, but does have any socially useful job to do at all? For businessmen the SEC is a vexatious costly intrusion on their attempts to # stocks and raise money for their compan For the rest of us, the SEC is t pre-eminent cop who holds the greed Wall Street in some kind of check.

Good movie

There are so few movies that I can walk out of and honestly say, "Hey, I really enjoyed that!," but "Against the Crooked (now at both the Gladmer in Lansing and the Sun in Grand Ledge) proved beyond my highest expectations, to be exactly one of these. Though the G-rating stands for "general audiences," it could just as easily be a substitute for "great entertainment," for this film is definitely of a high enough caliber and quality to have attained such an assessment

The story is set back in pioneer days where lone families settling small plots of farmland, various hunters and trappers and numerous tribes of Indians were common abducted by three braves early in the movie and the remainder of the tale revolves around her adolescent brother's search for her after everyone else has given up.

An initial reaction to an incredibly abbreviated description such as this would probably be one of, "Good grief, rny!," but "Against the Crooked Sky isn't like that at all! It was so refreshing to watch a film in its entirety without becoming either drowsy or offended for a change or even coming close to it! So many really important values, morals and ideals were exemplified in the two short hours that we watched. Things like loving other people as much as yourself so you would be willing to give up your life so theirs could be spared, open and caring family relationships that actually work and having the courage to stand up for what elieve in were all being portrayed by the relatively small, but excellent, cast of characters.

To say the very least, both my boyfriend and I were impressed. For once the things that God would like us to be were emphasized instead of reams of violence being tossed out and glamorized to an unsuspecting and totally unprepared audience. By all means, take the time to take in this flick! Words could never describe how glad I think you'll be if you do.

Bad column

Ellen Sponseller's critique of East Lansing's outdoor sculpture exhibit (SN, July 23) was childish and narrow-minded to say the least. Her cliched ("junk or art?") commentary was an unjustified attack on a worthwhile and imaginative project. While some of the pieces are distinctly better than others, their overall quality is excellent and the cost exceedingly low.

Public agency concern for the visual environment is usually lacking, so it was heartening to see the city cooperate with the artists in this venture. The participants and Robert Weil deserve commendation for their efforts. It should be noted, however, that the city's fine arts subcommittee could have done a better job of publicizing t reasons for the project and the artis reaction to it and their own works.

the truth

Scene: nestled comfortably on the standard East Lansing apartment couch, legs sprawled on the standard East Lansing apartment coffee table with chrome legs. The tube is winking at me, saying "They can put a man on the moon, a quasi-android or Mars, but they can't give you a decent picture via satellite."

It is, afterall, via satellite that the Olympics come into my apartment.

Jim McKay faces me. He's ugly. I could never understand how that man can talk when he knows that all of America is saying "Get your sonofabitchin' mug off the screen and give me

But Jim McKay talks on. And on. Howard Cosell goes hourse leeching a career off of boxers, but on and on drones Jim McKay. Howard has a constituency of sorts that thinks he knows something of boxing (but Howard is just a Sonny Elliot who got a break) but America hates Jim McKay's blabbering.

And what does Jim McKay blabber about?

Well, after listening to Jim McKay — if you listen to Jim McKay — several things become apparent. But let's shoot Jim McKay up with some sodium penathol and see what he was really telling us:

"Hi, I'm Jim McKay, and this is ABC at Montreal for the '76 Olympiad. You're watching ABC, recognized the world over for supremacy in sports coverage, worthless drama and useless news. We also have a high degree of expertise in telling you what to think. Some media people think you have the right to look at the Olympics and think what you want. (Points his thumb macho-like to his chest and says with macho pride;) Not us.

"And that's why I'm here. The Olympics are a beautiful happening, aren't they? Yeah, they sure are. All of those athletes, all of that fitness, all of those marvelously built females—oh, and by the way, we're here to make sure that you, the viewer, delegitimize the female competitors and regard the men as the true Olympic champions.

"But, you know, one thing about these Olympics, they're awful goddarn subversive. Yeah, that's right. I'll tell you why. You see all of those graceful athletes from all different countries, all competing and looking great, just great, right Howie?" "Inobfuscatably, there Jimmy."

"And you know what happens? Look. Our bosses — your bosses — aren't dumb. They know that somehow, somewhere, there is a common standard of grace and beauty. They know that if you were left to your own means, you would take an interest in all athletes, not just American ones. They know that Olympic athletics is leagues away from the way we want you to think. They know that, sooner or later, you're going to like a Bulgarian athlete better than a U.S. athlete. Well, folks, we're here to make sure that doesn't happen.

"I know you don't like it when I talk and take up time that you could be watching Olympic action. I know you think that what I say doesn't mean anything. You think what I say is nothing but filler. Well, I'm glad you think that way. And y'know why? Because everything I say counteracts the feelings you would get from simply watching Olympics without my commentary. Y'see, you're a bunch of dumbbells, and by thinking what I'm saying is worthless, you're agreeing with me. And that's exactly what I want to happen.

"And what am I saying? I'm saying things like "America surprised everybody in team handball by almost winning a bronze medal." I'm saying, "America is cleaning up in boxing." I'm saying "America has two seven-foot women basketball players who'll be in the next Olympics.

"And what does this stuff do? If you were watching Olympics without my commentary, you could conceivably become an internationalist. What's an internationalist? Well, even this truth serum ain't gonna make me tell that.

"I'm here to make sure nationalism wins. I'm here to make you think the only reason you should watch Olympics is to see what American athletes do; to cheer when American athletes win and manufacture excuses when they don't and make them look good anyway. I'm here to make sure our microphones pick up all of the American cheers, pump them through 500 watt amplifiers and make you think the crowd's going wild. I'm here to make sure our cameras shoot every American flag, every American poster, every American cheerleader and every American Bicentennial seal. I'm here to keep you sold on America.

"And more than that. You're such a bunch of suckers, I'm more successful than my bosses had hoped. Not only have I kept you sold on America, but I've sold you a little more than you already had owned.

"And this, folks, is what the Olympics is all about. So, keep on cussing at my face when you see it on TV. Keep on leaving when the action stops and I start. Keep letting what I say pass through your mind so you can agree with it. That's my job. And you're powerless to do anything about it.

'And you don't even have to do a thing. You sit back, let us tell you what to watch, and let us tell you what to think. For Howard Cosell and the Great American Athletes who are cleaning up, this is Jim McKay signing off. See you in the winter.

CENTER FOCUSES ON REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH CARE

New programs mark Provincial Hospital

State News Staff Writer is is the first in a three-story series on Provincial Hospital and Surgi-Clinic and its ram in pregnancy termination spital and Surgi-Clinic is the unique proponent in the Lansing area of a new in health care — specialized elective surgery requiring minimal patient his new concept, the surgi-clinic, while not meant to replace standard hospitals Tely, can be widely used by people seeking non-emergency elective surgery and care, John Gildersleeve, Jr., administrator of Provincial Hospital.

ents can reduce their stay in the hospital for surgical procedures such as dectomies, dental extractions, breast biopsies, vasectomies, tubal ligations and abortions by going to an out-patient surgi-clinic such as Provincial Hospital, thereby reducing the cost, he said.

The hospital, located at 1226 E. Michigan Ave., has programs in general medical care, podiatry, nutritional counseling, acupuncture and drug and alcohol rehabilitation, but specializes in reproductive health care.

Provincial's Access Center Reproductive Health Care Program offers services in abortion, contraception, counseling, education, sterilization and studies and treatment for Provincial Hospital is most widely noted for its pregnancy termination program, which includes both pre- and post-operative counseling and abortions up to 24 weeks from the last menstrual period, Nancy Cleary, Access Center director, said

It is one of the largest providers of abortion services in the Midwest, and one of the few in the country to do abortions up to 24 weeks. Unlike the ramshackle back-alley buildings of illegal abortionists, the hospital is a modern three-story brick building built in 1972, with two surgical suites and 118 beds in semi-private and private rooms, licensed by the Michigan Dept. of Public Health. To handle Provincial's unique clientele, the majority of whom are out-patients seeking abortions, it is important for the nursing staff to provide both physiological and psychological support, David Converse, nursing coordinator, said.

"All our staff members are able to provide psychological support for our patients," he id. "We all have gone through the abortion counseling program so that we can better understand what the patient is going through and can treat her as a whole person.'

The staff at Provincial is experienced by unusually young, Gildersleeve said.
"We have a unique situation here," he said, "and consequently need a young staff attuned to our patients' special needs and social and psychological situation

An integral aspect of the Access Center, developed and begun by Cleary in 1973, is Provincial Hospital has a staff of eight counselors, supervised by Judy Breitmeyer, who engage in private and group counseling in reproductive health care and pregnancy "Counseling is crucial for a woman seeking an answer to her problem pregnancy,' Breitmeyer said.

Many of the women have already decided to have an abortion before coming to Provincial, she said, either on their own or by talking with their parents, their lover, their friends or a crisis center. Even so, they must go through the hospital's counseling program

"We're not pushing abortions," Breitmeyer said, "and explore with the woman other alternatives to her problem pregnancy. We send women home if we don't think they are psychologically prepared for an abortion. "The important thing is that the woman understands it is her choice, her decision. She and only she, has the power and the capability to make that decision That freedom of choice was expanded with the U.S. Supreme Court's June, 1973 decision Cleary, who worked to have the question of legal abortions put before the Michigan Legislature in 1970 and on the 1972 state ballot, said she is not pro-abortion.

"I'm pro-choice," she said. "It's a question of whether women should or shouldn't have the freedom to choose for themselves to have an abortion. "I'm not only interested in life, but in the quality of it

It was through the work of Cleary and Jack Stack M.D., MSU trustee and long-time pro-choice advocate, that Provincial House, Inc. decided to establish the hospital and surgi-clinic. Stack is the corporation's medical director. Family Planning Perspective Magazine reported in a May, 1976 article that 988,000 omen received legal abortions in 1975. This was up from 22,700 in 1969 National statistics show that 85 per cent of all legal abortions performed in 1975 were first tri-mester — up to 12 weeks from the last menstrual period — Cleary said. Because Provincial performs second tri-mester abortions up to 24 weeks, they perform about an equal number of first and second tri-mester abortions, she said.

Women between the ages of 12 and 54 have had abortions performed at Provincial Hospital, with the majority of the women being students between 18 and 24 years old. Cleary said. She said she does not think the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision enabling minors to have abortions performed without their parent's consent will change these "I'd love to see ourselves out of business because there isn't a demand for abortions." she said. "But until the perfect contraceptive is devised, I think women need the back-up for problem pregnancies that abortion provides." The second story of the series will delve into the procedure a woman should go through if she thinks she is pregnant, and will look at what counseing and surgery at Provincial

`1776': A pleasant, patriotic show

By PETER J. VACCARO State News Reviewer

The Lansing Community College (LCC) mounting of "1776," the award-winning musical play about the signing of the Declaration of Independence, provides a rather happy evening of song and drama.

Peter Stone's book for this much-performed musical is strong, exciting; Sherman Edmusic and lyrics comprise one of the richest scores in the past decade of American musical theater.

The LCC production, under the direction of Tom O. Thompson, is more than adequate. Voices are strong, pacing is smooth. The "room" that serves as both auditorium and stage is

That room is the Michigan

House Chamber in the State Capitol As Director Thompson indicates, "This room is not a theater; the sight lines and acoustics aren't perfect. Thompson's caution is well taken. Members of the audience seated in the gallery are forced to view the play through the chamber's protective glass shields, a sensation not unlike viewing through a television screen. In addition, what action is blocked under the balcony is dulled considerably. forward or stand and strain a bit to hear, they didn't seem to mind terribly. The effect of completely and ghosts of the past re-enacting historical moments in historical surroundings is there and is convincing. My major reservation is that "1776." as a musical play about historical situations, necessity distorts and stylizes its action and characters. As a result, some appropriate stylization in atmosphere is preferable to "the real thing.

Because of the apparent musical demands of the score, casting in this production chooses strong voices above acting ability. But if the acting suffers, particularly in the long debates that dominate much of the play's first act, the singing eventually compensates.

Steven Heller, as John Adams, has a good sound voice. I should like to have seen more passion in his performance as the "obnoxious and disliked" representative from Massachusetts, but his songs are fine, particularly the stirring "Is Anybody There?"

Mary Robertson, as Abigail Adams and Emily English, as Martha Jefferson, are both adequate in every respect as the only two women in an otherwise male company.

The large supporting company performs equally well. Particularly memorable are Joe Fetters as the courier to the Congressional Congress, whose ballad "Momma Look Sharp" is a show-stopper and Douglas

"YOU"RE DAMN RIGHT I DID AND I'LL DO IT AGAIN!"

That's what did it, Woody old boy. When you addressed the Big Ten Football kickoff luncheon Friday and admitted that you had indeed turned in the Spartan football program for rules violations, did nothing but embarrass your fellow coaches, the conference, and MSU fans all over the country.

And I'LL do it again, Woody

The stories appearing on Page One of this newspaper today are an offshoot of your statement Friday, Woody. And this column is an explanation as to why I turned you in. Critics will raise their heads and say that I'm starting a shootin war and I have no justification in publishing wrongdoings by OSU.

Something like I'm out to get revenge for MSU's three-year hiatus

But that's not the case. I'm not naive enough to believe that theating doesn't happen in the college ranks. And yes, there was quite a mess here in East Lansing. But slowly the air is becoming If any reporter worth his typewriter ribbon wanted to, he could tig long enough and come up with dirt to place any school on robation. But I'm not trying to start any sensational journalism rip among Big Ten members. No. Woody. Instead, I'm turning you in because you have preached your innocence so damn long that I and probably a few thers, are sick to the gills. Stop by my office sometime, Woody. I have one of your quotes pasted on the wall. "We don't cheat as Ohio State.

Perhaps another coach placed it most succinctly when he said Hey, look, I don't give a damn if Woody, or anybody else for that natter is paying his players $10,000. I'm not gonna knock it. And e shouldn't knock us if we're paying our players."
Well, that's what you did, Woody. Okay, so you turned MSU in othe authorities. Fine. But you get up in front of 1,000 people and lecture on integrity here's your conscience, coach? Or don't you have one? Another thing, Woody. You've had your way for too lamn long. low else can you explain that when former MSU coach Charley utler informed Big Ten Commissioner Wayne (do-nothing) Duke hat he saw you loan your car to a player that the Big Ten did

That can be explained by the fact that nobody has the guts to and up to Woody Hayes. Well, check again, Woody, baby. I'm no nor am I a martyr. But, I'll stand up to you and battle you its just too bad that your contemporaries in the conference lac fortitude to do anything similar.

While my series won't even begin to expose all the irregularities OSU. I just hope and pray that somewhere there sits a fellow unalist who has more resources than I and who will dig and ther all the facts. I believe that the players you've had over the ars may well explain what really went on in Columbus now that meone has opened the door. At least I hope so.

In the meantime, Woody, my parting thought, for now, i

Lansing tops Cleveland in MFL overtime win

By JOHN JOHNSON

CLEVELAND — A 37-yard field goal by Ray Vanover with 2:15 left in the sudden-death period gave the Lansing Capitals their first Midwest Football League win of the season on the field here Saturday night, as the Caps took a 22-19 verdict over the Cleveland Aca-

The Capitals, now 2-2 for the season following two losses and a win by forfeit over Flint, set up the overtime period when former MSU quarterback Steve Moerdyk hit Ted Forrest with a 17-yard touchdown pass on the final play of regulation time. Vanover then booted the point to tie the game at 19-19.

Moerdyk, who only called one play in his four-year career at MSU, going for a TD on the final play of the 1974 season, then went for broke on the first play of the overtime, attempting to hit Forrest with a bomb, but it was intercepted by Cleveland.

The Academes took over with the ball on their own 18. Ten plays later, they were at the Capital eight with a thirdand-one situation. But the Caps held on that play and a fourth down at the eight. Coach Russ Kelly's team was unable to move and Lansing punted, but the Academes fumbled Greg McKay's kick, and Forrest recovered at the Cleveland 38. Seven plays later, Vanover, who played his college ball at Eastern Michigan, hit on his winning kick, his third field goal of the game. Lansing got out to a 6-0 lead in the contest, with Vanover hitting on a 42-yard field goal in the first period and a 27 varder in the third, but the Academes came back, taking advantage of a Capital fumble on the Lansing one and turning that into a TD. The placement failed, though, and the score was tied at 6-6. A three-yard run by Brian Simmons 6:04 into the fourth period put the Caps back on top, but Vanover had his kick blocked.

Cleveland then tied the game again on a busted pass play, but when they missed the PAT, the scrambling, to send the game to game was tied again at 12-12.

The Academes then put to sudden death.

gether a drive late in the fourth, with the go-ahead score coming on a 17-yard run with 1:13 left Ernie Brewer. The PAT was good and the Capitals were down, 19-12.

Larry Rogers ran the ensuing kickoff back to the mid-field stripe and Moerdyk threw nine passes in the final minute, scoring aerial while Moerdyk ended the game hitting on 17 of 38 passes for 165 yards. Forrest, a former Western Michigan receiver, caught 11 of those passes for 120 yards.

American boxing team earns five gold medals

MONTREAL (UPI) — The United States hopes for lastday glory in Olympic track and field were washed away Saturday, but the American boxing team won five gold medals tying their best performance in Olympics history.

The Americans had hoped to capture four of the eight track and field finals, but only the U.S. 400 meter and 1,600 meter relay teams came through in a steady rain that drenched Montreal throughout the afternoon.

The boxing team, led by brothers Leon and Michael Spinks of St. Louis, Mo., won five of six final houts to establish itself, along with the men's swimming team, as the star U.S. performers of the games. It was the first time ever that brothers had ever won boxing golds in the same

Other U.S. winners were Leo Randolph, an 18-year-old fly-weight from Tacoma, Wash.; lightweight Howard Davis, Glen Cove, N.Y., and "Sugar" Ray Leonard, Palmer Park, Md., who blew kisses to the wildly cheering crowd when he was awarded his gold.

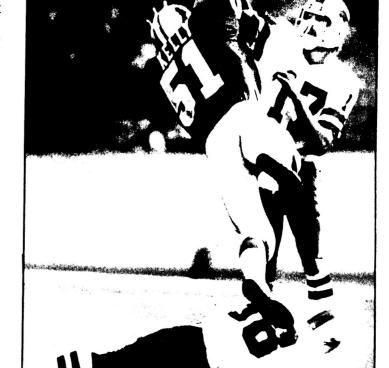

The lone loser was bantam weight Charles Mooney, an Army sergeant from Ft. Bragg,

A previously unknown East German named Waldemar Cierpinski beat Frank Shorter, of Boulder, Colo., in the 26-mile, 385 yard marathon. Shorter was the defending champion. But the biggest disappointment for the United States was world record holder Dwight Stones' bronze medal in the high jump.

Shorter, trying to become only the second man ever to win back-to-back Olympic mar athons, stayed with the East German for about three quar ters of the race. But with a little more than five miles to go Cierpinski began a sprint through the pelting rain and opened a 10-second lead on Shorter.

"I ran the best I could," said Shorter. "He pulled away from me, and there was nothing I could do about it. I didn't know anything about him but I heard he could run good."

Buckeye boosters: are they involved in illegal recruiting practices?

The second source, a former high school football coach in Ohio who also wished to keep his identity secret, said, "The first time it happened was in 1972.

"Each week a group of OSU boosters in Warren got together at an alumni meeting and watched films of the previous week's game. When Ohio State coach Woody Haves was confronted with this information he became enraged and tried to attack this reporter.

Hayes was asked, "Coach, what would you say if I told you that I had information conrecruiting irregularities at Ohio State that involve both alumni and yourself?" Hayes responded, 'Then you better print it mister. I have a very good

This reporter then asked Hayes, "Does the name Arron Brown and the Warren, Ohio police department ring a bell?"

Other reporters were quizzing the Buckeye coach so I waited my turn. Finally, it was agreed between myself and Steve Snapp, assistant OSU Sports Information Director, that Kurtz, Page and myself would have the last interview prior to Woody's leaving to preach to a group of reporters.
