Tim Beard, a member of the budget committee, said the budget increases are a result of the board's extra revenue.

"Last year, we had so little money to work with, there wasn't nearly enough money to go around," Beard said.

The majority of the board's money goes for board expenses, cabinets and minority councils. Relatively small percentages go to student board services (ASMSU attorney), ASMSU judiciaries, registered student organizations and a category labeled "projects," (not the same as Special

Hundreds submerged in train

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Hundreds of persons were feared drowned early Monday when the Mombasa-Nairobi passenger train ran off a bridge and into a flooded river in southeast Kenya, the government radio station reported.

Five third-class coaches, a first-class car and the locomotive were completely submerged, a spokesperson for the

A local stationmaster said rescue operations had not started several hours afterward.

The railway spokesperson said up to 400 persons were believed to have been in the submerged cars, but he said he had no information on casualties or survivors.

GRAND RAPIDS (UPI) — A federal judge has upheld a Michigan law requiring grocery stores and restaurants to post signs alerting customers when selling meat containing snouts, udders, stomachs and other animal parts that do not meet state standards.

Retail sale of such meats is allowed under federal meat laws.

U.S. District Judge Noel P. Fox, acting on a suit filed by the meat packing industry, ruled Monday that the notices they are numerous. The idea of the referendum was spawned by last year's ASMSU president, who believed students should not be taxed without having a vote on the tax. Though these intentions were not followed through, the referendum on the dollar fee, dormant for several months, was revived by student leaders this year after the failure of repeated attempts to reform the State News corporate structure by the MSU trustees, student government, the MSU Administration, the State News editorial department and other interested individuals.

The complaint is that the State News, a private, nonprofit corporation, is run by a board of directors which has no direct links and no responsibility to the MSU community and MSU students. The original board was appointed by the trustees when the State News was incorporated in 1971. Since then, all vacancies have been filled by remaining directors.

The result, it is argued, is an enterprise which is not properly a student enterprise — a newspaper serving students which is not genuinely a student newspaper. The Editorial staff has argued this in the past, and has further argued that the situation serves to hamNOTE: Only students carrying 10 credits or more are eligible to vote in this referendum, current president of ASMSU, Michael Lenz, believes that the only way to correct the situation is through economic pressure against the corporation by removing the dollar fee paid by students.

STATE NEWS REFERENDUM

But if you think that by voting against the dollar you will be getting the same State News free, you are wrong. Student fees account for a healthy 12 per cent of the State News' annual budget of around $900,000. Though plans have not yet been finalized, if the referendum fails chances are quite good that you will be paying for the paper in other ways — coin boxes, newsstand sales, direct subscriptions and the like.

The current price has been in effect since 1961, and the fact is that it is a good deal cheaper than most other university dailies nationwide. The State News would indeed be hurt should the referendum lose, and the result could well be a paper which is smaller, has more ads and carries less local tion;

Many students are willing to take this risk, banking on a change in the composition of the directors and a subsequent improvement in the quality of the paper. Others consider the risk foolish.

But if you think you will be saving an easy buck, or if you think you are being given the opportunity to reduce the amount of money vou fork over to the University, you are off the track. If you want to read a daily newspaper, voting 'no" will not save you a single

If you want a State News board of directors which better reflects the MSU community, voting "no" probably has the better chance of accomplishing it, though it will not be foolproof. Passage of the referendum, however, is essentially an endorsement of the status

James Madison

I read with absolute incredulity and anger the letter written by Guy Foulkes against James Madison College. It was filled with falsehoods.

First, the statement that James Madison College has never had a black or woman on its faculty is false. The faculty has included black, Chicano and female members and presently includes female members. This is a simple matter of record and can be established by the briefest inquiry. Further, as a member of the Faculty Affairs Committee and a participant in faculty searches, I can testify to the fact that James Madison College has done its very best under the affirmative action policies of MSU to search out and find qualified minority faculty, and that it continues to do

Second, the statement that the James Madison College faculty is a homogeneous one politically is also false. True, the faculty is uniformly young but it is diverse politically. There are conservatives, including Straussians; there are centrist liberals; there are left liberals; and there are radicals, including Marxists. How Foulkes can presume to know the political views of the faculty from his vantage point in the freshman class is beyond me. His letter smacks of arrogance and presump-

Finally, Foulkes' expressed notion that the faculty should be representative of society in its political views is astounding. Such a notion would make for a hell of a foundation principle for a place of higher learning.

James Madison College's record in attracting a diverse and qualified faculty has been a good one. James Madison College's record as an undergraduate social science college committed to encouraging excellence in its students, including a concern for rigorous and fair-minded investigation and accuracy, has also been a good one. That a James Madison College student should write a letter without the slightest concern for fair-minded prior investigation, fact, or accuracy, however, suggests that we are not always completely successful and that we have a long way to go with Foulkes.

Handicapper

When MSU handicappers banded together to oppose the oppression of our people on campus (formation of STIGMA, February 1976), we were particularly concerned that certain elements and factions on campus refused to recognize that this oppression existed. Specifically, some administrators were about the business of actively interfering with handicapper programs, personally attacking handicapper supporters and philosophically discrediting our rights to equality as a legitimate minority, legitimate people. We were personally relieved when at least some of this element was removed from the

Now, however, amidst renewed personal attacks in the media by relatives and friends, ironically claiming discrimination and oppression, some of this element has been reinstated in the administration. Does this mean that once again the administration is condoning supporters of handicapper oppression? We are hopeful that this recent reinstatement has been made on the condition that the party involved cease and desist overt and covert attacks on handicappers and handicapper programs designed to insure the equitable treatment of our people. If not, the STIGMA membership will have to join in the controversy and the suppressed side of the controversy might prove extremely embarrassing for those claiming "mistreatment." For the sake of the University, let us hope this does not have to happen, and that those few administrators who have supported equality for handicappers will be commended,

PIRGIM REPORTS

How much for Nuclear Waste?

Would you be upset if a utility company transported dangerous nuclear waste past your home, buried it nearby and increased your electric bill to pay for the operation?

Part of this nightmare is already reality and the final point will become fact if Detroit Edison gets permission for a new rate increase from the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC)

PIRGIM, the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan, is actively opposing this rate hike in public hearings and is arguing for stricter regulation of nuclear plants in the Michigan

PIRGIM Energy Policy Projects Director Richard Conlin, told the MPSC that Detroit Edison should stop wasting the rate payer's money on financially disastrous nuclear plants instead of asking for more rate increases.

"Their nuclear construction program is expensive, dangerous and unneeded," Conlin said.

Detroit Edison plans to spend nearly $1.4 billion in the next five years building nuclear power plants. This equals almost $1,000 for every household in the Detroit Edison service area. This investment would be used to construct two nuclear power plants that would produce electricity at a cost of about 5 cents per kilowatt hour. The current cost is about 2 cents per kilowatt

The function of nuclear plants is to heat water into steam which is used to turn giant turbines that generate electricity. Radioactive waste that remains deadly for thousands of years is a byproduct of this process.

Nuclear waste products must travel from the reactor site to a disposal site by way of the nation's highways and railways. The radioactive material is placed in huge metal casks, which might rupture in a high-speed crash, and shipped by ordinary tr without any special safety precautions, as pointed of "Fallout On The Freeway," a 1974 PIRGIM report. PIRGIM strongly endorses House Bill 6610, spons

State Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, which addre problem of nuclear waste disposal. Provisions of the bill we

Mice for sale: $138 apiece

WASHINGTON - An ad will shortly appear in the Wall Street Journal and Barrons with a headline reading: "For Sale One thousand mice with malignant cancer - $138 each." The text of the ad, paid for by a benefactor of the Linus Pauling Institute of Science and Medicine will say: "Our research shows that the incidence and severity of cancer depends upon diet. We urgently want to refine that research so that it may help to decrease suffering from human cancer. The U.S. government has absolutely and continually refused to support Dr. Pauling and his colleagues in this work during the past four years...." Hence the sale of the laboratory mice and the end of the research unless you want to send a contribution. (The institute's address is 2700 Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, Calif. 94025. It is tax deductible.)

If Pauling cannot get some tax money out of the National Cancer Institute, the government agency with a monopoly lock on research funds, who can? Two-time Nobel Laureate Pauling (once for chemistry and once for peace) has such an astounding record of successes in chemistry, biology and medicine that there are many sane persons with advanced college degrees in various branches of the physical sciences who consider him a living Golden Oldie, right up there with the biggies like Ike Newton and Al Einstein.

You cannot get better credentials or more prestige, but he cannot get money because his medical ideas are not the prevailing ones. If they had been he would never have been able to solve the riddle of a disease like sickle cell anemia. So the question is the professional competence and judgment of the people who control research. Impressive degrees and prestigious appointments do not guarantee scientific ability or even honesty, as the scandal a few years ago at the Sloan-Kettering Institute attests. Right there it was discovered research data had been faked and a key staff member of our most important cancer research facility was involved in what could have been called quackery had it taken place on the fringes

Nevertheless S-K was commissioned to investigate the efficacy of a substance the American Cancer Society crowd has been calling a fake nostrum of quackery for years...a substance variously known as laetrile, amygdalin or Vitamin B-17. anyone could have said a priori, the S-K findings were highly negative - except it got out that the man who had actually done the experiments, Dr. Kanematsu Sugiura, insisted after all the fuss about the compound had subsided at S-K that, "It is still my belief that amygdalin cures meta-

Dr. Sugiura isn't the only well-credentialed, professionally reputable researcher to conclude this is possibly a very powerful agent in the treatment of cancer. T. Metianu, Director of Research/ Pharmacology-Toxicology at the Pasteur Institute, Paris, concluded laetrile was effective in mice injected with adenocarcinoma. Similar results were obtained by Dr. Paul G. Reitnauer, chief biochemist at Dresden's Institute Manfred von Ardenne. But what do kraut-frog-jap scientists know? An irrelevant question, but laetrile has

John Birch Society have advocated it. It is a conservative therapy, one that has attracted the interest of the likes of commentators on the right, ergo it must be no

The real, middle-of-the-road American doctors have consistently opposed if for 25 years. In 1953, the American Cancer Society created a commission which con demned it without credible research. The commission's secretary was radiologist Dr. Henry Garland, a chain-smoker who as-"cigarettes in moderation are regarded by man as one of the better tranquilizers." He died of lung cancer, and the chairperson of the commission, Dr. Ian MacDonald, a cancer surgeon, used to pose for cigarette ads in magazines. He burned to death of a fire thought to have been started by his own cigarette.

These tidbits and the rest of the story of the American cancer establishment's badwill effort not to investigate this substance have been assembled by David M. Rorvik. Rorvik is a free lance writer who is able to do this valuable work thanks to a lism fellowship from The Alicia Pat Foundation. The foundation is men here because journalism has been as and irrational on this topic as the mavins. script was flimsy; things oc-curred that made little or no sense, characters had no motivation for their actions, humorous situations were left undeveloped and obvious points were belabored. The jokes that worked have been around for years and were passed off as original to the uninitiated, which can only be described as plagiarism of gay culture.

I found the acting to be second rate. It was annoying the way voices were exploited for cheap laughs; they were annoying in and of themselves. I refer to the falsetto on the detective and the overblown accent on the Puerto Rican Miss Gugie. Another big disappointment was the poor job turned in by Richard Lester. The man usually does such good stuff (e.g. "The Three Musand "A Hard Day's Night"). Perhaps he should take the cue from Vincente Minnelli and renounce the outcome of his latest labors. I will concede that the sets were nicely done but that's not much to recommend a movie.

Lest we get too involved in the politics of the issue suffice it to say the movie is a straight's misconception of the baths, complete with stereotypes, misguided value judgments and a slur here and there.

Gregory

In a recent State News article about Dick Gregory he was described as a "human rights activist." This is an obviously erroneous description, regardless of whether it was the author's description or Gregory's own self-description. Gregory refers to "white

When Courtney says IFC would have to "literally thousands" of hazing allegations and Westol claims he has not received a complaint in two years, something is wrong. We humbly suggest they get their act together.

If hazing is leaving campus, as IFC says, charges like this should never have come up. If there is any basis in truth to these allegations, they should be investigated thoroughly by IFC and the offenders dealt

We are members of Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity. Our house has not practiced hazing of any kind, be it mental, physical or whatever, for the last five years, and don't plan on any in the future. I'm sure this is true for most fraternities on campus, since only four fraternities were named for hazing, and by an "anonymous" source, vet.

Taylor

On Nov. 17 a letter appeared from Clifford W. Taylor about the alleged unfairness of the manner in which the local MSU authorities propagate the jux-taposition of articles of visual warning (signs) regulating the parking of motor vehicles in Kellogg Center parking lot, an area allegedly under the aegis of said University authorities. The crux of Taylor's missive lies in its plea for absolution because: 1) It was not Taylor, but rather and instead a friend of his who allegedly illegally parked said alleged motor vehicle and 2) those visual warning devices governing the afore mentioned area were not placed in such a manner as to clarify and unequivocally convey to

is not totally and absolutely acting with some measure of reasonableness: to be sure, careless and wanton allocation of visual warning resources by the University is a serious and disturbing breach of collective (societal) trust. Notwithstanding this consideration, nevertheless, we must consider that Taylor's culpability is in no way mitigated by either his role as an accomplice rather than as a principal instigator of wrong-

But the overriding fact of this case is that Taylor seeks to win our judgment through incredible verbosity. A true barrister in all regards, he attempts to drown out thoughts in a quag-mire of verbiage. Because of his shirking of the previously disclosed obligations, and because of his "insouciant arrogance" in his rebuttal, it is therefore incumbent upon such authorities as may have jurisdiction over this matter to see to it that the violator be sentenced to undergoing an intensive study of ATL under that able guardian of the public

Spirit

About one play in four brings the spirit block to its feet - to watch someone being passed up in section 13. During four or five plays each quarter the members stand en masse to wave at section 14, thus blocking from view the north 80 yards of the field. Is this why they are called the spirit "block"? With pom-poms and cards waving in the air and "blockers" running up and down the aisle to chat with their friends, one seldom experiences an unobstructed view of the field. House undergoes change Lawyer helps Carter

By JANET R. OLSEN State News Staff Writer

The Turner-Dodge house stands starkly on the bank of the Grand River in the north of Lansing. The house, which is called a mansion by some, looks slightly out of place in a neighborhood full of houses not nearly as old as the Turner-

The house, which was built in 1853, was once a very lively social meeting place for many of the prominent people of Lansing's history. In the past few years, the house and the land around it have seen the beginning of change - changes made by local groups to partly renovate it back to its original state.

House reconstructed The original house was built for James Turner, and was very different from the present structure, the result of reconstruction in the early 1900s. It was build in Greek Revival style with two central stories with one-story wings on each side. After Turner died in 1869, his son James M. Turner and his wife, the former Sophie Porter, lived in the house. The young Turner was a member of the Michigan House of Representatives in 1876, and was mayor of Lansing in 1889 and 1895. Consequently, much entertaining went on in the house.

There have been stories that the house was once a stop for the underground railroad, but Geneva Wiskemann, a member of the Greater Lansing Historical Society, said there has been no evidence to support this.

"The Turners were sympathetic to the cause, but there is no evidence," she said. "It is strictly folklore at this point, though this is not to be underrated. There are no hidden rooms or tunnels.

"When the original house was built, it probably had one of the finest homesites in the area." Ted Haskell, director of Lansing Parks and Recreation. said.

Remodeled by architect

Descendents of he Turner family lived in the house until 1958 when the McLean family members were the last inhabi tants. Frank Dodge, whom Wiskemann referred to as a Horatio Alger type, married Abby Turner, sister of James M. Turner, in the late 19th century. Dodge, who served as a state representative in 1882 and was much involved in the Lansing Common Council, was responsible for the additions to the house. The house was remodeled between 1900 and 1906 by local architect Dairus

Moon's reconstruction consisted of adding a third floor in the center, a second floor on each side and additional first floor area to the west side of the building. These changes are very evident on the inside dwork style of the house. While moving from room to room, the woodwork styles indicate that one is moving back and forth between the original house and the later

"It was a nice, light airy house where several generations of children grew up," Wiskemann said. "But it was not elegant and it was not a

Sold to College When the last Turner de scendents moved out of the house in 1958, it was sold to the Great Lakes Bible College, which used the building and grounds as a campus. The college moved out in 1972 and were sold to the City of Lansing in 1974. The land was purchased with federal grant money and the house was "thrown in for nothing," Wiskemann said.

The Lansing Jaycees leased the house from the city of Lansing in July 1975 for a two-year period to end July 4, 1977. In a summary of intent presented to the city, the Jaycees said their primary purpose in leasing the building was to make the house "a viable asset to the Lansing community by creating a community meeting place and gallery and office space for community organizations in a local setting.

The Jaycees listed two major goals in their undertaking: promoting, coordinating and participating in the physical renovation of the interior of the building to function as a meeting place; and the promoting and coordinating of the public use of the building during and after renovation.

"Basically, we became involved to save the building from whatever might have happened to it and to promote it for public use," said Don

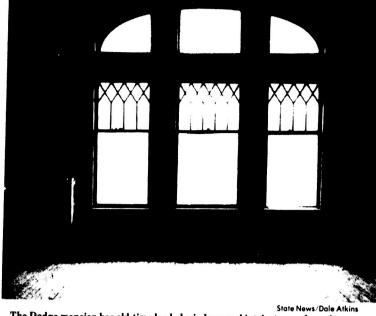

Hartwick, a member of the Jaycees who is now in charge of the renovation work. "There are not many public meeting places available for the people of north Lansing."

Groups interested in obtaining use of the Dodge-Turner house can contact the Lansing Jaycees for information.

The renovation work has not rooms back to the decor and furnishings of the period, though this might be a possibility for parts of the first floor in the future, Hartwick said.

The renovation is being done "the best we can, conducive to meeting purposes," he said. The trimmings in the rooms are being restored and the ceilings, which are mostly tin or other metal, are being repaired. Many of the burlap walls are quite hard to work with, and the sand plaster with horsehair is difficult to repair because of it is so brittle, he said.

Volunteers contribute

The renovation work has all been done voluntarily by members of the Jaycees and many other community groups including the Transcendental Meditation Society, the Intercity Council of Federated Garden Clubs and the North Lansing Study of cigarets Community Assn. A Lansing Community College trades class restored the third-floor shows gas danger

"The renovation work has been a lot slower than we ever anticipated," Hartwick said. "It very, very complicated and time consuming.

Reasons for the slow renovation are very evident. For example, the amount of manhours required for the stripping of the oak trim in the house was much greater than originally anticiptated, due to the five or six layers of paint on the trim. However, Hartwick added that much work has been done in all parts of the house.

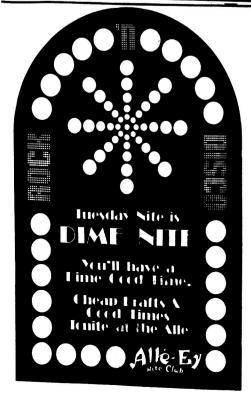

Site for art shows

Hartwick said the Jaycees have had much success with the community use of the building during the period of renovation. There have been arts and crafts shows and meetings both on the grounds of the house, which is the responsibility of the city of Lansing, and in the interior.

"My position is that we will keep it going but we are trying to find another way to do it," Scott Hillary, another Jaycees member, said, referring to the bureaucratic problems the group has had during renova-

"It will be quite a deal if anyone can pull it off," he said.

others either insult or applaud him. His popularity has never been without bounds, but the loyalty of his true fans is beyond reproach. At times utilizing lyrics bordering on disgust, Zappa's crudeness allows him to produce an all but inimitable style.

"Wind Up Workin' In A Gas Station" is Zappa music as known and loved (!?!). With munchkin vocals and an ever-changing tempo, Zappa buffets you with his most familiar musical style. This cut leads into a more elusive Zappa — a very talented, but unheralded guitarist. This cut is a solo performed during a concert stop in Osaka, Japan, earlier this year.

"The Torture Never Stops" is a bizarre, nonsensical tribute to torture. The sadistic vocals are only topped by the screams of some unfortunate female. The screams, by the way, are credited to Zappa, who along with guitar, bass, keyboards and vocals also hold the title of director of recreational activities!

Flip side action starts with "Find Her Finder" which describes the best way to get your hands on that special person you've been checking out. "Friendly Little Finger" is a marimba highlighted instrumental with more probing guitar by

"Wonderful Wino" is one of the more decisive rock and roll numbers of the record. The sympathetic picture of the chronic wino painted in this tune all but forces you to be more understanding of this fixture of our society.

Another fine instrumental is the title track, "Zoot Allures," and fine direction and production show through here. Finally, there is "Disco Boy"
— the true problem child. Here, using some real life experience, Zappa matches disco boy with disco girl and appropriately insults them both.
What more can be said? Frank Zappa, the mad purveyor of sadistic, grotesque, insulting and disgusting lyrics and music continues to produce unusual, exciting, influencing and very unique music in his always brilliant style.

Paintings unfold Michigan history

By MARTHA G. BENEDETTI

State News Reviewer The bold and historically significant paintings at the Kresge Art Gallery are aimed to satisfy the viewing pleasure of the 19th century painting enthusiast as well as the gen-

The long-term endeavors of MSU art history professor Sadayoshi Omoto, Kresge gallery director Joseph Ishakawa and Bicentennial Inventory Coordinator Abigail Booth of the National Collection of Fine Arts made the show, "Early Michigan Paintings," possible.

The paintings set out to correct the record of the late 19th and early 20th century Michigan painting by showing that there were significant artists outside the immediate

During this same era, Paris was producing the art works of painters like Monet, Van Gogh, Matisse and Picasso.

The 61 paintings displayed have been done by artists associated with the state of Michigan by place of birth or by artistic reputation upon moving

"Michigan is not unique among other states in this Midwest region, which also produced artists who responded to their immediate environment," Omoto said. "Michigan's uniqueness, however, lies in its own history and peculiarities."

The show is divided into four basic categories, which include foreign study, American study, cultivated tradition and native

The foreign artists are Mathias Joseph Alten, Frederick Stuart Church and F. Harold Hayward.

Alten studied in Paris under a group of Spanish modernists and through his experiences produced a series of paintings depicting fishermen in Valencia. Church's "Maiden with a Tiger," executed in 1904, is a delight for the eye with a style comparable to Monet.

Hayward studied painting in Paris under Whistler and Jean-Paul Laurens, also a teacher of Alten. The portrait entitled, "Dr. Abner Hayward," Hayward's father, delineates a good deal of French influence.

Under the heading of American study, Robert Hopkin's landscape paintings are most akin to Michigan. Hopkin was where he acquired his lifelong fascination with the sea.

He later immigrated to Detroit and worked as a commissioned artist throughout the country and abroad. Yet Hop-kin remained a Detroit artist. His favorite subjects remained the Detroit River and the Great Lakes.

Ella Marie Gale Kedzie, a traditional artist, is proof that early Michigan women painters did more than china paintings. Kedzie moved to Lansing in 1892, where she gave art lessons at the Michigan Agricul-tural College, (MAC), now

Her father-in-law, Robert C. Kedzie, an early MAC chemistry professor, is remembered through his namesake, MSU's Kedzie Hall.

The category of native paint ings are fascinating in that they serve as accurate documentation of a bygone era. Norman captured the spirit of the lumbering industry, the pioneer farm and early rural transportation methods. Horatio W. Shaw, born 6 miles west of Adrian, was a highly trained painter who managed a 200-acre Michigan farm. His sole interest was his sheep, which he painted from memory. Shaw's "Two Ewes and a Ram" is an intriguing, almost mystical, composition. His un-derstanding and love for his sheep is effectively depicted in the color subdued, yet highly contrasted paintings.

The exhibit will run through Jan. 2 and then travel to Escanaba, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo and Port Huron.

God, man and Yale do not a prestigious school make

"Michigan State University that's located in Ann Arbor, right?" asked the secretary of a major RCA Records executive. "No," I replied. "That's the University of Michigan. MSU is in East Lansing."

Suddenly stunned by this realization, the secretary im-mediately replied, "Oh well, then I can't help you, and Mr. Meyers (the RCA executive and her boss) can't speak with This curious exchange took place when, as the State News classical music critic, I tried obtaining review copies of RCA Red Seal releases. This began a two-week odys sey of "We will call you back," (which, of course, they never did), "We will put you on hold," after which I heard "We will call you back;" and finally the ever-popular "He is not available."

Finally, two weeks to the day after my first call, I was able to speak with Meyers. This time, I was calling concerning RCA's policy toward the disbursement of classical records for review-

First Meyers explained, "Let me begin by saying we have a certain size requirement. The paper must, of course, first request the records, and we try to keep publications - college papers — above a circulation of 25,000."

News has a circulation of about 40,000 and that a request had been made a month ago.

Meyers responded that his offices had not received the request and then I was put on hold so he could confer with his secretary. Five minutes later, it was ascertained that RCA had actually received the letter but that it had been misplaced.

I was, however, puzzled by his requirement that a college paper have a circulation of over 25,000 and pointed out that Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Brown and Columbia universities and other "prestige" schools have circulations well under 10,000.

Meyers immediately com-mented, "...certain universities with great prestige, of course, do receive records. Anyone with any common sense can see that you can't compare a college like Harvard to M..., ah, to some two-bit college in the Northwest."

So, the folks at RCA Red Seal records do not feel MSU is worth the price of postage.

One official at RCA who wished her name not be used (like so many other RCA employees - I wonder if RCA has something to hide) confided that the Lansing-East Lansing area did not sell enough RCA Red Seal records to make it worth RCA's while to send the

Filmmaker to attend preview of fantasy

RHA will present filmmaker Ralph Bakshi at a showing of his new animated film, "War Wizards," tonight at 8 in Fairchild Auditorium.

'War Wizards," to be released in February by Twentieth Century-Fox, is described as "a tale of sword and sorcery in the year 2,000,000 A.D." The PG-rated fantasy features the battles of an evil sorcerer named Blackwolf and his Nazi-like armies of Goblins, against his good brother, Avatar, and his handful of forces. Bakshi describes "War Wizards" as "the most incredible fantasy the world has ever seen."

Bakshi, whose feature films include "Fritz The Cat,"
"Heavy Traffic," "Coonskin" and the unreleased "Hey, Good Lookin'," will discuss his film, answer questions from the audience and talk about his current project for Metro-Goldwyn Mayer, "Lord of The Rings."

Admission is $2 for students, faculty and staff and $2.50 for the general public. Tickets are available at the door at 7 p.m.

Bates' beliefs bedeck barn

Benjamin Bates, who will be 84 in January, says he found the Lord when he was 58. He had a sign company from Holland, Mich., paint this message on his barn in Douglas, Mich., a small town on the shore of Lake Michigan. He uses the barn as a garage for his van, which is also decorated with religious messages. For the last 19 years, Bates has also maintained a billboard near his home which carries a similar inspirational text.

By SUZIE ROLLINS State News Staff Writer

Students who are aggravated about the quality of instruction they are receiving in Math 108 now have a chance to sign a petition to express their discontent in the course, according to an ASMSU Legal Services Cabinet member.

Signing a petition is a way to express your dissatisfaction with the course," Scott Schreiber, Legal Services staff member, said. "If a student signs a petition it will in no way jeopardize his grade."

The petition which was drawn up by Legal Services, states an objection to the instructional methods used in teaching Math 108. It addresses the complaint that students have not been adequately or uniformly prepared to demonstrate their competencies on the uniform final exam.

The petition does not support a boycott of the uniform final Results will be submitted to the MSU Board of Trustees to make

China's experimental nuclear explosions spark queries concerning safety provided by current regulations on fallout in USA

With the two recent experimental nuclear explosions in the People's Republic of China, discussion has arisen regarding current fallout standards and whether these standards reflect a true margin of

Survey rates housewife role

(ZNS) Are "housewives" going out of

This may be the case, according to a new survey which indicates that only three per cent of girls in the United States 17 years of age want to become housewives.

The survey, conducted by the National Assessment for Education Progress, also shows that 37 per cent of the 17-year-old girls polled fully expected to work outside me most of their lives, whether they married or became mothers.

Only three in 100 said they would settle for the traditional housewife roles of settling down, having children and taking

The exposure limit of 500 milirems over a period of one year is presently used by the Michigan Dept. of Public Health and the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). This means that to be harmed, an individual must receive 500 milirems of radioactivity continuously for one year.

Joseph Hennigan, nuclear engineer for the department, said this limit may not be noticeably harmful and that genetic damage would be more likely to occur.

Richard Pollock, associate editor for the nuclear energy oriented publication, Critical Mass, said the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) follows the limit of 170 milirems and is considering changing this limit to 25 milirems.

He said this limit has been in effect since World War I and was reaffirmed by the Federal Radiation Council in 1961 and 1964. But Pollock emphasized that several scientists have opposed this limit during the last two decades saying radiation at any level is harmful.

"Two notable scientists testified before Congress," Pollock said, "saying that the guidelines may be off by a factor of 100." It was after these hearings and "much prodding" that the EPA considered changing the current regulations, he said.

Pollock noted the "disorganization among federal agencies" as a key to the conflicting health requirements. He said that only after an interagency meeting did improved fallout detection methods emerge. Hennigan said the health department uses several methods of radiation detection in Michigan. The air monitor, he said, is used to measure airborne radiation and is the quickest one available. He explained that paper filters are used to collect radiation particles. These filters are changed every 24 hours, but a five-hour wait is needed to allow natural background radiation to decay.

"This enables us to detect radiation four to 29 hours after it is here," Hennigan said. Milk samples are also used, showing radiation ingested by cows and transfered into their milk.

Directional equipment is available for detection of radiation when it first appears and to tell which direction it is coming from. But a spokesperson from Critical Mass, a publication affilitated with consumer activist Ralph Nader, said all these monitoring systems are of no avail if safety regulations: are not known or enforced or if the standards are set too high.

When the last nuclear cloud passed over the United States a few weeks ago, Pollock as to how precaution measures should be instigated.

Pollock said William Rowe, EPA administrator for radiation programs, personally told him the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) had been alerted of the need to decontaminate aircraft flying through and around the cloud

The chief of Washington National Airport, Pollock said, was not informed of the

"I contacted the chief five hours later and he had not heard anything," he said. "He did not even have a Geiger counter to know if radiation was present."

In addition, Pollock said, the airport chief considered decontamination procedures impossible since the planes had only 20 minutes to refuel and leave for their next destination.

Pollock said he contacted Rowe after his talk with the airport chief and was again reassured the alert had been given.

"Rowe reassured me by foresight, but it wasn't carried through to implementation," Pollock said. "It was later discovered that minute contamination was present on aircraft, but had it not been minute, aircraft, could have carried it throughout the United

"We were inexperienced to what we wanted to have done on offense," he added. "We were starting a freshman, a junior college transfer and (Greg) Kelser is at a new position.

Chippewa Leonard (Snake) Drake and MSU's Bob Chapman staged a personal battle the entire game as they were assigned to Chapman finished with a game high 24 points to Drake's 16. "I thought Bob played well in spurts, but he didn't play well defensively, but then again, the playmaking guard position is new to him too," Heathcote explained.

It was Heathcote's coaching debut at MSU and the results left him somewhat dismayed. "I'm very disappointed that we lost our first ballgame," he said. "I knew we'd made mistakes, it wasn't unexpected - this is a young team. But there's no way we can play like that this year if we're going to win ballgames."

The Spartans held a 41-39 halftime lead as Ron Charles sank a

Pot experimentation higher, report says

(ZNS) A new government survey has found that more than half the members of high school classes graduating this Bicentennial year have smoked

The National Institute on Drug Abuse says that a survey of 1,700 high school seniors reveals that 53 per cent have experimented with the weed, a figure 5 per cent higher than Thirty-two per cent reportedly regarded themselves as current pot users. Marijuana, according to the survey still trailed both tobacco and alcohol as the most widely used drug.

Fifty-seven per cent of the high schoolers questioned voiced a concern about health risks from tobacco use, while only 40 per cent said they were worried about using pot.

While the smoking of marijuana was up slightly over a year ago, the study found that LSD and cocaine use - as well as that of hard drugs remained unchanged.

"We have even had to combine some positions to fill vacancies." Welser said he agrees with President Wharton that MSU's budgetary problems are largely the result of inequality in legislative funding.

"The whole problem revolves around the fact that MSU is doing more in terms of research and instruction than other institutions, but is not receiving the same level of funding," he said.

"Obviously, when inflation strikes, we are going to be harder hit than others.

There are many people in Columbus, Ohio, and other places, who are afraid to go on the record. While the entire picture of OSU violations has yet to be put together, it is certainly not one of innocence and bliss.

One recent incident brings to focus the stranglehold Hayes has on OSU boosters.

While in Columbus this summer, a State News reporter contacted a source near campus. When phoned earlier in the day, the source agreed to meet that evening and supply the reporter with some information he would check out during the

The source had checked with a friend about the violation tip. His friend informed him that he had no information and speculated that this lead was possibly a blind alley.

This friend said he had no particular sentiments towards Hayes in one way or another. But the source said that his friend had mentioned that the reporter should not turn his
