Setting up such a fund was common practice at the time, officials said, and was one of many sources of revenue that enabled MSU to finance 80 construction projects over the 10-year period at a cost of $198 million.

"I don't think the board of trustees gives a damn whether we get money for helping brutally repressive regimes or as likely in Vietnam, the CIA."

The projects are nonpolitical, he said in an interview last spring, because they are aimed solely at improving the average citizen's lifestyle. If MSU wanted to exert some influence on a nation's political conditions, Smuckler said, a project would give it better leverage to effect a change.

E. Germany demands money for trains

BERLIN (AP) — Communist East Germany, in an unprecedented move, is demanding more money for pulling allied military trains through its territory and wants to negotiate with the Western powers directly, a published report said Thursday.

East German locomotives pull U.S., British and French trains through East Germany as they head back and forth, some on a daily basis, between West Germany and West Berlin.

An allied spokesperson refused to comment on the report, appearing in the West Berlin newspaper Berliner Morgenpost.

However, reliable sources said the Western allies continue to view their rail access to West Berlin as a matter concerning Soviet rather than East German authorities.

Soviet space station disintegrates

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet space station Salyut 4, launched more than two years ago and the home for two cosmonaut crews, disintegrated over the Pacific Ocean Thursday, Tass reported.

The empty research station, probably no longer operable, was deliberately destroyed when it was moved by ground signal into earth atmosphere where it burned up, according to the Tass report.

This is standard procedure for Soviet space stations which have outlived their usefulness.

Salyut 4 had the longest and most successful career to date in the six-year-old Soviet space lab program. It housed four cosmonauts for a total of 93 days and had made 12,188 orbits of earth since it was launched Dec. 26, 1974, Tass reported.

Vance intends to explore arms cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Thursday he intends to explore with the Russians a mutual cutback in conventional weapons and arms sales as well as lowering the limit that the two superpowers have tentatively placed on their nuclear arsenals.

In his first interview since assuming office, Vance said a reduction of nonnuclear arms "is of critical importance" and "is the area where the largest amount of money is spent."

Therefore, he said, while both the United States and the Soviet Union must "try to block the logjam" that has stalled completion of a new treaty restricting strategic nuclear weapons, his agenda for his mission to Moscow in late March also will include "the broad subject of disarmament or arms reduction in the conventional arms area."

Meanwhile, a Soviet commentator wrote Thursday that conditions are ripe for a Soviet-American arms reduction if Western leaders can resist pressure from hard-liners trying to undermine détente.

Congressmen seek pot reform law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three members of Congress Thursday asked President Carter to support the decriminalization of marijuana possession and its nonprofit transfer in small quantities.

Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Rep. Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y., wrote Carter suggesting early action on the reform of federal marijuana laws and the development of a comprehensive policy on drug abuse.

The congressmen said marijuana policy should be primarily a function of state government, but that it is difficult for states to change their policies unless the federal law is changed.

Carter has said he supports decriminalization for possession of marijuana in small amounts.

Jury indicts airlines in antitrust action

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted Pan American World Airways, Trans World Airlines and Lufthansa German Airlines on Thursday in the first criminal antitrust action involving airline rate fixing.

The three carriers were charged with conspiring to fix the price of the military excursion fare between the United States and Germany for U.S. military personnel on leave and their dependents.

The indictment and a companion civil suit were filed in U.S. District Court in Washington and announced by Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell.

The indictment charges that between late 1971 and late 1974 the three airlines conspired to fix and raise the price of the military excursion fare. The fare costs are borne entirely by military personnel and their families.

Compensation awarded to employees

LANSING (UPI) — The Michigan Civil Rights Commission has ordered unemployment compensation to be paid to a number of women who missed work because of pregnancy and childbirth.

The commission cited the Michigan Department of Civil Service and the McGraw Edison Co. for violation of the Fair Employment Practices Act, which prohibits discrimination because of sex. Under commission guidelines, pregnancy and childbirth are regarded as a "temporary disability," the length of which varies from woman to woman.

The state and McGraw Edison were ordered to cease and desist from unlawful sex discrimination.

'Lemon' bill may protect car buyers

LANSING (UPI) — Legislation aimed at protecting consumers who purchase defective cars and other warranted goods is being given a second chance in the legislature after failing last year.

Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, Thursday reintroduced the so-called automobile "lemon" bill which would allow purchasers to stop payments on defective cars.

Meanwhile, Sen. David A. Plawewski, D-Dearborn Heights, again offered legislation that would extend the warranties on cars, appliances or other guaranteed items that are in continual need of repair.

Gas transfer underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting quickly under the new emergency natural gas law, the Federal Power Commission ordered the first transfer of gas from west to east Thursday to aid shortage-stricken pipelines and their customers.

FPC Chairperson Richard L. Dunham told a news conference the gas has already started flowing and should take only a few hours to start aiding eastern states with severe gas shortages but only to a relatively small degree.

The diverted gas had been intended for Oregon and Washington but is now heading to the East, he said.

Dunham said the commission is looking for other additional gas supplies, and has had an offer from the state of California and is working on possible gas imports from Mexico and Canada. Diplomatic sources in Mexico City said Mexico will sell 40 million cubic feet of gas a day to the United States, beginning next week.

The FPC's new regulations immediately allow interstate pipelines to purchase emergency gas until August 31 at higher prices than those normally permitted by nationwide price ceilings.

Dunham could not estimate how much more gas could be drawn to interstate pipelines from the unregulated intrastate market of gas-producing states under this arrangement.

Nor could he estimate the impact on consumer prices because that would depend on the amount of higher-priced gas to be mixed with the regulated, priced major supplies of each pipeline and distributor.

Emergency legislation authorizing the actions was passed by Congress Wednesday and signed by President Carter the same evening, shortly before Carter told the nation in a broadcast "fireside chat" to turn down the heat and conserve energy for a long time to come.

Carter then assigned the FPC chairperson to administer the new law, which allows for both the above-ceiling emergency gas sales and for the diversion of supplies from one interstate pipeline to another.

Dunham said the first diversion taps natural gas being released by industries and utilities in the states of Washington and Oregon which can replace it with substitute fuels or which have surplus gas in storage.

Instead, it makes it possible for pipelines serving the Northwest to reduce their deliveries and sell the gas to Transcontinental Gas Pipeline, which serves states all along the Coast.

The FPC order authorizes the LoVaca Gathering Company pipeline not normally allowed to transport interstate gas move the gas across Texas to deliver it to Transcontinental Pipeline.

Carter rebate criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairperson Arthur Burns said Thursday he will cooperate with President Carter and Congress in encouraging faster economic growth and reduced unemployment this year.

However, Burns told the House Banking Committee he doesn't think Carter's $31 billion economic program will make much difference to the economy, which he contended should grow quite well without it. And he termed Carter's plan to give a $50 rebate to most Americans "an inefficient way to stimulate the economy."

Burns, 72, who was appointed to his position by former President Richard M. Nixon, said he has had the same close contacts with the Carter Administration as he did with the administration of former President Gerald R. Ford.

He said the board's money growth targets for 1977 are for an increase in the basic money supply of 4.5 to 6.5 percent. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal told the committee Wednesday that money growth in that range should help the success of Carter's economic program.

Burns said he agrees with Carter's goals of a 6 percent economic growth rate and per cent unemployment rate by the end of 1977. The rate in December was 7.2 percent.

"Our nation needs to progress during 1977 in doing more jobs and in expanding industrial capacity," said. "We at the Federal Reserve fully recognize this as our recent policy have made clear."

However, his reactions to specifics of the Carter program appeared almost contradictory.

On one hand, he said, "has put together a package, the size of which is smaller, more prudent than many had urged on him. Burns also repeatedly criticized Carter's plan to distribute $50 tax rebates to most Americans, saying effect of the rebates will be off after two or three months."

"A lot of money will be on a very small result, my judgment," he said.

While Burns' approval needed for Carter's plan to go a long way toward mining success or failure program through the money and interest rates it follows.

Armament critic faces questioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Warnke, President Carter's choice to become chief U.S. disarmament negotiator, is going to face hostile questioning from Senate critics when he appears before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for his confirmation hearing.

Critics claim Warnke's long-standing advocacy of unilateral steps by the United States toward arms reductions would make him too willing to make concessions to the Soviet Union in arms negotiations.

His nomination to the arms control post would require confirmation hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Members of that panel generally are considered favorable to Warnke and inclined to support his confirmation. However, Committee Chairperson John Sparkman, D-Ala., has invited members of the Senate Armed Services Committee to the hearings and to quiz Warnke about arms limitations.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Thursday that Carter "is committed to this appointment" of Warnke and expressed the view that Warnke's forthcoming nomination is being "generally well received" in the Senate.

COMMISSION NODS TO BUS CHANGES

Full accessibility planned

By JANET R. OLSEN
State News Staff Writer

What one commissioner called "a big, big step forward" took place Wednesday night at the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission meeting when members voted 13 to 2 to mandate lifts on all new buses purchased in the next two years by the Capital Area Transit Authority (CATA).

"This is the first region in Michigan to make that kind of commitment," said Lansing City Councilmember Richard Baker, who is also a commissioner. "It's a major step forward."

After two hours of discussion between the audience and the commissioners, the members voted in favor of the final recommendations of the Transportation Services Integration (TSIP) report. However, the recommendations were limited to include a report by the Program and Grant Review (SGR) committee.

Specifically, the A 95 report stated that "all vehicles, both line (buses) and special, purchased in the next two years, along with the next bus ordered, shall be equipped with ramps and other devices so as to be accessible for all persons, including handicapped."

Community College graduate, told the commission that CATA's Spectran system was "absolutely ridiculous." The Spectran system consists of eight small buses with wheelchair lifts. To use the buses, people must call 24 hours in advance for the service.

Bob Ryan, coordinator of handicapped in the Lansing area, told the commission that the Spectran is no help since it "is designed to fail."

"CATA is trying to pull the wool over our eyes," he said. "We don't want it (Spectran) and we can't use it. CATA just doesn't listen."

Jim Dunn, executive director of the Michigan Public Transit Association, and Kooyers argued against the regional mandate for total accessibility of buses. These arguments came despite the offer made by CATA at its January board meeting that it serve as a state demonstration project by having a totally accessible system. Under this proposal, all operational and maintenance costs would be paid by the state.

"Whether wheelchair users could use the system is open to conjecture," Dunn said, adding that he recommended the commission accept the TSIP report without the amendment inclusion.

Kooyers said the proposed demonstration grant would offer a chance to retroactively update the existing buses and then look at the system as it is when totally accessible.

Rezoning request first hurdle for planned mall

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer

The possibly lengthy hassle over the rezoning request for the Dayton-Hudson mall in northern East Lansing entered the first round Wednesday night at a planning commission session.

Dayton-Hudson Properties, based in Southfield, is asking the City Council to change the zoning of the land it has purchased over the last 10 years from agricultural to unrestricted commercial classification.

The planning commission, which is reviewing the request before making a recommendation to the council, has also been looking into the possibility of adding restrictions to the requested B2 zone to control the commercial development envisioned in the northern sector of the city.

The planning commission is expecting a large turnout at the public hearing on the Dayton-Hudson rezoning request Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Planning Commissioner Ed Church said there may be a minor battle over reworking the zone, but that "all hell may break loose" when the actual development model is submitted.

The Prototype discussed by Dayton-Hudson representatives in October was a two-level mall with approximately 100 stores anchored by a J.L. Hudson's and another undiscussed department store.

Development in the immediate area may include convenience stores, apartments and restaurants.

City Atty. Dennis McGinty stated in a memorandum that the city may require site plan review provisions when a building permit is requested, but that a contract zone — where restrictions are imposed on a particular developer — is illegal.

"We may have trouble agreeing to something that is illegal on its face," said Daniel

Swanko, project director of Dayton-Hudson Properties. "Our time table will be to use a one year period for the preparation of construction drawings and the design of the center itself, then apply for the building permits."

Swanko said a site plan review is not an unreasonable request, since such commercial reviews are common in city zoning ordinances, but he questioned the city's apprehension about the project and the possibility of excessive regulation.

"Our consultants were not for effect," Swanko said, referring to the almost $100,000 worth of traffic, environmental and market impact studies Dayton-Hudson conducted last year.

Swanko asked that his local legal representative, John L. Cote of East Lansing, work with McGinty on the exact wording of any amendments to the

Wet T-shirt display planned by Ranch

The Rainbow Ranch is having a "Wet T-Shirt" TG today from 7 to 9 p.m.

The "Wet T-Shirt" contest entails having braless women parade before the patrons. The women will have water poured over them before a winner is chosen.

Lansing's last "T-Shirt" TG occurred a few years ago at Coral Gables, and resulted in a near riot when patrons of the bar called for the women to "take it all off."

The display resulted in public outcry condemning the management of Coral Gables, patrons of the bar, and participants in the "event."

The manager of the Ranch said a $100 prize will be awarded to the contestant "who gets the most applause." A $25 prize will be awarded to the runner-up.

The contestants are generally for the most part female, said, "though we aren't limiting it to that."

Proceeds from the $1 cover will be used toward equipment and facilities for the Rainbow Ranch Boxing Club.

Caller leaves with receiver

Nothing can be something. So learned DPS officers when they received a phone call from an X Lot emergency telephone Tuesday night.

The officers who responded to the call, which is made directly to the police station when the receiver is lifted, discovered absolutely no one in distress.

What they did find was a dangling telephone cord without a receiver.

Someone had seen fit to abscond with the handset, valued at $30, without hanging around to complete the call.

Anyone calling the State News Tuesday night from 5 until 9:30 heard only a busy signal. Seems if a snowy boot connects with a phone wire the wire soaks up the water and, presto — an entire phone system is knocked out. U.S. must speak out in favor of freedom

President Carter's lukewarm endorsement of a courageous State Department declaration objecting to Soviet harassment of dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov is a depressing sign that the ghost of Henry Kissinger still haunts the United States government.

Carter made things perfectly muddy by suggesting that, though he agreed with the statement, he was irritated by the fact that it was released without his prior knowledge and consent. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance added to the confusion by lecturing his own government against "strident or polemical criticism" of practices in other countries.

Such doubletalk is reminiscent of Kissinger's reign at the State Department, when any act or utterance that could be construed as offensive to Kremlin bigwigs was ruled out of order. Carter's glowing campaign rhetoric about "human rights" at home and abroad had led many of us to believe that a change in policy would be forthcoming. Early returns indicate we were wrong.

We find it difficult to understand why the United States should maintain silence in the face of massive Soviet oppression of its own citizens. The Soviet government has for years engaged in "strident and polemical" rantings against our system, while simultaneously promoting the need for "detente." The Kremlin has never felt compelled to tailor its public statements to meet our approval, and we should not feel similarly constrained.

Criticizing Soviet oppression of its own citizens will not reignite the cold war. The Russians have a desperate need for American technology and foodstuffs, and "the passion for freedom" — to use Carter's own words — is rising in the Soviet Union. The United States must use its moral influence to sustain that passion.

The Sakharov statement should have been fully endorsed by President Carter, not weakened by timid qualifiers. It appears that the process of exorcising Kissinger's ghost from government is going to be a long and arduous one.

Dirty Dixon forced to eat words

It is disgusting to note how low our government officials have sunk in expressing themselves publicly. Earl Butz described the aspirations of blacks in less than flattering terms — nothing new for Butz. Only he saw fit to relate his "salty" humor in the presence of a reporter so that we could have a good laugh at someone else's expense.

Butz' protege, Federal Trade Commissioner Paul Rand Dixon, scored one up on Butz when he decided to share his gratuitous remarks about Ralph Nader with 50 businessmen in Virginia.

Dixon referred to Nader as a "son-of-a-bitch and a dirty Arab." After insulting Nader, who is of Lebanese descent, Dixon added the coup de grace to his career by saying he would never apologize.

The reaction to Dixon's insult was immediate. An industrial businessman of Arab descent complained and Dixon began the first of his mea culpas.

Dixon, reeling from public outrage, retreated from his original "no apology" stance to say he regretted the remark "which could be interpreted as a derogatory reference to Nader's ethnic background or to others of Arab descent" and later sent Nader a personal apology.

But Rep. Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y., wants to impeach Dixon for using "vile language in a public forum."

Dixon's statements not only smack of bigotry, but also cast serious doubt on his ability to work with the public. And this is disastrous for the head of a public agency.

Perhaps Dixon and Butz should engage in something more suited to their talents, like coauthoring an ethnic joke book.

CD money approval ignores student needs

The city of East Lansing has once again blown the chance to use federal funds to help solve its increasingly serious housing problems.

The East Lansing City Council approved the $602,000 federal Community Development (CD) money targeted for the city on projects that make us wonder if the council realizes that the main purpose of the CD act is to provide housing for low- and moderate-income persons.

One way of looking at the city's final decision on how to spend the money is to call it a nice compromise between the bone-headed practicality of the planning commission, which recommended spending nearly all the available funds on housing needs and neighborhood improvements, and city staff, which wanted to use the lion's share of the funds for beautification-type projects.

Up until recently, the city claimed that it did not realize CD money could be used for housing or co-op improvements. Now that the city realizes it can, indeed, use this bonanza of federal funds to upgrade the quality of rental housing, it is not using the money as it should.

Trees and parks and recreation equipment are important to the quality of life in a city; there is no disputing that. But when the still vital needs in other areas housing, the priority should be those more crucial needs, parks and trees coming in at the bottom of that list of priorities.

A paradise lost

Being a fool for the '60s, here are a few kind words on romanticism and the memory of paradise lost.

I was a bit reluctant to attend Tom Hayden's MSU appearance, anticipating cultural shock in seeing the metamorphosis of another adolescent hero into conservative sellout zombie. However, though he comes across much mellow, his mind and words are as enlightened as ever. He did recently play the role of politician, but there's one major difference between him and all other candidates: Tom Hayden has (and no doubt will) put his life on the line for his beliefs. He is currently illustrating what is best explained through his own thesis: "Today, America's rebels may wear many honest costumes."

Hayden is on a campaign to tempt students out of mid-'70s passivity, but his success isn't even moderate. I discussed my feeling with others who hadn't attended, but soon discovered that nobody seemed to give a damn. Total defeat set in when the umpteenth person asked, "Was Jane Fonda there?"

Today's student is caught in a dilemma. Most were too young to be '60s activists, but were old enough to have some sort of world view developed by that era. After all, even adolescents had personal concern in that the Vietnam War might soon call for them. Everyone remembers the '60s consciousness, when the word "student" was spoken with fear, or the controversy stirred by Abbie Hoffman's "flag shirt" and whether it was better to wear one or die for one.

But something happened. Looking upon the counterculture's corpse today, one discovers many scars in the forms of burn-out deaths, drug wars, Manson, Altamont, Kent State, "psychedelic" bedspreads, sacred rock music transformed to elevator "pop," and when it became "revolutionary" to simply grow your hair, swallow quaaludes and use four-letter words. The biggest blow, however, was Nixon's CIA controlled "COINTELPRO," set up specifically to combat national radicalism. So powerful was the agency that when I ask my ex-SDS friends what happened, they aren't exactly sure.

And today's student answers, "Why bother?" Hayden believes "the radicalism of the '60s is the common sense of the '70s." True to an extent, but there is no political mass movement today, only political resignation. National schizophrenia is rampant, and ideas of the fake TV-set-mass-media-America still exist in many minds. There's nothing to protest, even though the issues that burned before still exist.

What aren't they admitting? Who cares? There's the CIA's foreign assassination policy, the FBI conspiracies in the Kennedy murders and the recent evidence of a government plot behind the Manson caper to use as counterculture propaganda. Big (yawn) deal.

The CIA-engineered public torture murder of Chile's Victor Jara (who?) was sponsored with U.S. tax dollars. More details could be given, but why spoil your day? Aren't we really more concerned with what we should wear to Dooley's tonight? Abbie Hoffman is a fugitive. Wayne Kramer rots in jail. Harry Reems is on trial for indecency and Dick Nixon plays golf at San Clemente. But, really, aren't the '70s like the '50s, all milk and cookies, even though it's known that the milk producers illegally donated millions to CREPE for favors?

In the '50s, the radicalism of the Rosenbergs was silenced, as is the case with any sparks fired in this decade. There was the same depression of spirit then as there is now, but it ended with JFK and a nation's symbolic desire for change. We, too, recently voted for a change, and while it's necessary to guard against Carter's false optimism, it is something different and a time to get back in shape. The vision of the '60s was, and still is, essentially correct. However, the needs are rapidly outgrowing the solutions. People find themselves depressed as a result.

The "brotherly love" concept will no longer work. Concrete answers and ways of enhancing positive energy are needed. Reading "Do It!" "Woodstock Nation" and the other Yippie manifestos today is still entertaining, but they are as nonsensical as a "National Lampoon" parody. And the whole point is that we no longer need Ginsburgs, Dylans, Lennons, Learys, Rubins, etc., as idols to lead us on. All we need is to rediscover the word "commitment" to use in place of the word "apathy."

To quote Solzhenitsyn: "The salvation of mankind lies only in making everything the concern of all." Some believe it can never happen, but "never" comes soon enough, and one can interpret that anyway one wishes. A fool? Perhaps, but so was the one on the hill. And, no, Jane Fonda wasn't there.

Gays and Greeks

The MSU Gay Council has been conducting panel discussions for many groups over the years. We do these for many classes and have had them in all dormitories.

Recently I made an effort through the sorority and fraternity council presidents to set up some of these discussions in any house that so chose. None chose. Both presidents assured me that all the houses were given the option and all opted not to have such a program. Some of my gay friends living in various houses told me differently. If the possibility was discussed, it was done so in poor taste.

All this aside, I feel badly. I'm ignorant about the entire Greek system. I sincerely would like to know more about its people, functions and lifestyle.

To help me find out about the Greek lifestyle, I'm going to rush a couple of houses this spring. I strongly urge my gay brothers and sisters to join me so we can break down the stereotypes we have of sorority and fraternity lifestyles.

VIEWPOINT: ARABS vs. ISRAELIS

Media misinforms public about Palestine

News reporters speak of war between Arabs and Israelis, oil stoppages by the Arabs causing economic unrest in the world and a "tiny Israel" surrounded by hordes of enemies refusing to recognize it or negotiate with it. These reports, however, present one side of the story only; the other side, which they suppress or, of which they are themselves ignorant, is that this "tiny Israel" is a country which came into being by putting an end to the existence of another country, Palestine. Israel is a country that has continued since its creation to develop and utilize its American-acquired military power of territorial expansion at the expense of its neighbors, to flout all universally accepted principles of international law and to defy and hold in contempt of the United Nations, the very organization that created it. Israel's people, collected from different lands either forcibly displaced or killed the indigenous people, the Palestinians, who have thus been dispersed into dozens of lands. The land is occupied but not owned or otherwise rightfully acquired by its present occupants. This is, in brief, the Palestine problem.

A great deal of falsification of history by the Zionists, through their control of much of the Western world's media, continues to misinform people and condone this injustice. How this has succeeded has been graphically described by William Zukerman in the Jewish Newsletter, Dec. 7, 1958.

"To this observer, nothing demonstrates more sharply than the terrible uncanny power of modern propaganda to control minds, sway emotions and brutalize people than the Zionist propaganda on the Arab refugees during the last decade. It literally succeeded in turning black into white, a big blatant lie into an act of justice glorified by thousands. It has turned clever people with more than average intelligence into starchy-eyed fools, believing everything they are told, and has converted kindly and gentle men and women with a strong sense of mercy into callous fanatics, insensible to the suffering of any people except their own."

The American public has been brainwashed to such an extent that it refuses to see and believe the true picture — that there are millions of refugees living in tents and surviving on United Nations' rations at 15 cents per person a day and others living under the Israelis as third-class citizens and that these unfortunate men, women and children are being killed by bombs, shells and napalm. And when these usurped people try to regain their homeland and the right to exist, they are labeled as fanatics. This is where the American double code of morality comes into light. Where was this morality when the Israelis wiped out whole villages? No one raised a finger when napalm was dropped on an orphanage in Egypt. Perhaps the American public never heard about an Arab village called Deir Yassin. An account of the barbaric massacre that took place there was given by Jacques de Reynir, chief delegate to the International Red Cross who was able to reach the village and witness the entire populace with respect to the so-called "natural gas shortage."

Had Carter been a rational man with the interests of the American public at heart, he would have generously thanked former President Ford for making a politically tough decision to de-control the price of natural gas in the waning days of his administration. But, the new president chose instead to block this order, thereby insuring the recent turn of events (plant and school closings, forced conservation in the home, etc.).

What was the rationale for this action? What purpose is served by regulating the sale of natural gas? If consumers are willing to pay the price, they will. If not, they will turn to energy conservation to avoid such costs. Clearly, what has been proposed by the Carter boys in Washington, D.C. (a temporary lifting of controls on the price of natural gas), is no more than a Band-aid where major surgery would be more appropriate.

If Jimmy Carter is truly interested in reforming the Washington bureaucracy, he would be well advised to begin by lifting government controls on the price of natural gas, thereby insuring that people who need the gas can get it without begging some bureaucrat.

Not 'Roots'

As I have tried, without success, to touch with the State News board James Hamilton concerning my "The Woman Warrior" which appeared Monday, I thought it best to write a letter.

First of all, I appreciate his devoting entire book page to my review. However, it appeared under my name, I should not have substituted my paragraph for one of his own. His opinion rendered obscure some of the obscurity at times increased by my cutting. Moreover, I do not expect that the book is a Chinese "Roots."

I truly believe no malice was intended, as a professional scholar responsible for what appears to be name and hope, therefore, that in such liberties will not be taken work of other scholars.

the aftermath of the massacre:

"Three hundred persons were massacred without any military reason or provocation. Old men, women, children, new born were savagely murdered with great knives by Jewish troops of the Irgun entirely under the control of their chief." The leader was no other than Menchen Bugin who was an Israeli cabinet member. Toynbee described it as comparable to crimes committed against Jews by Nazi Joseph, one-time governor of the Israel sector of Jerusalem and later minister of the Dier Yassin massacre, "deliberate and unprovoked attack." But Menchen said, "the massacre was not only justified, but there would not have been a state without the victory at Dier Yassin." Unashamed of their deed and unaffected condemnation, the Zionist forces, using loudspeakers, roamed the streets warning Arab inhabitants, "The Jerico road is still open." They told Jerusalem Arabs from Jerusalem before you are killed like those in Dier Yassin.

The height of inhumanity is clearly portrayed in the massacre of Kafr Qasim village in Israel. On Oct. 29, 1956, 53 villagers were shot individually at point-blank range on returning at the end of the day to the village from their fields. Their violation of a curfew that was imposed on the village an hour earlier and was communicated to them. At the time of the shooting, the murderous police officers knew this fact.

In 1948 the Hagana, a Zionist terrorist organization, bombed civilian concentration order to terrorize the Palestinian people into submission. Hagana leaders subsequent prime ministers of Israel from Ben Gurion to Rabin.

Professor Maxine Rodinson, of the Sorbonne in Paris and himself a Jew, stated "The Arab population of Palestine was native in all senses of the word and the Palestine can be traced back at least 40 centuries, long before the Israelites first Palestine after their exodus from Egypt."

Here lies the crux of the matter, the national rights of the Palestinians in the country. It is these people who were rounded up by the thousands by the Zionist group, the Hagana, and marched off to the border with guns firing over their heads then moving from the land where their forefathers were born. Without the rest these usurped just rights, it is certain that the struggle will continue and there peace without justice in the Middle East. Even Albert Einstein, the Jewish opposition to Zionism on the grounds of its injustice to native Palestinians. Ultimately will recognize these true facts, and hopefully there will be peace with justice Palestinians.

A university by nature — and especially a Land Grant University — is characterized by myriad identities. A university may be looked upon as a place which trains people for jobs, an arena in which to seek knowledge, a laboratory in which to develop vehicles to solve some of the world's problems. The way people don't usually look at universities, however, is as an employee — something which is paid to work for others. MSU, for example, is employed by the federal government, foundations, state agencies and multinational corporations. All of the entities pay MSU to work for them. Most, if not all, of the work done for them is in the way of research. MSU is doing work for the federal government worth about $25.7 million. All in all, MSU's current employers — if you look at them that way — will pump a grand total of more than $41 million into MSU coffers as remuneration for the work done by this employee. The basic rundown on MSU's employers, as outlined in a November, 1976 memorandum prepared by Vice President for Research and Graduate Studies John Taylor, goes something like this:

Civil rights under attack

By CHARLENE G. GRAY
State News Staff Writer

In 1975, a suit was filed by a white student against the MSU medical school. In New York recently, a white man applied to a magazine for a job. He also later filed suit. What do these two suits have in common? They both charged "reverse discrimination."

In reverse discrimination cases, a non-minority contends that a program such as affirmative action favors minorities over nonminorities and thus discriminates in reverse.

The result of a program or law devised in recent years to treat racial minorities equally to "remedy" the effects of past discrimination is specifically attacked by those who complain of reverse discrimination.

Despite the sour and growing controversy of what some people are calling "reverse discrimination," there is a question as to the validity and even the existence of the practice. Many observers contend the charge to be highly ambiguous and nonetheless redundant. But on the other hand, there is no question that some people feel discriminated against in the reverse.

MSU Trustee John B. Bruff, D-Mount Clemens, said the affirmative action program at MSU is not designed to result in reverse discrimination but to a certain extent it hides behind the curtain of affirmative action "as I understand the term."

Bruff said affirmative action is intended to insure there is no discrimination, but not to result in preferential treatment as some contend is inherent in the implementation of such a program.

The goal of affirmative action as expressed in the mandated order issued in 1972 by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare legally required all public institutions to develop affirmative action plans. The HEW mandate's theme called for the inclusion of previously excluded groups, primarily women and racial minorities.

The goal of "rectifying" past and present inequities in opportunity seemed by proponents of the program to be a "step in the right direction." But it has been considered a danger by its opponents.

In dramatic protest against affirmative action last year, a trio of white-robed and hooded MSU students, reminiscent of the Ku Klux Klan, read a statement explaining their bitterness toward affirmative action programs. The trio expressed the belief that such programs promoted discrimination against whites and promoted unqualified minorities and women.

That protest, in part, displays the gist of the argument used in suits.

But the question still persists. Does reverse discrimination exist? And how are past grievances redressed without making a concerted effort — especially where discriminatory practices would persist if there was not an effort?

Tom Wicker, columnist for New York Times, commented this way: The need for affirmative action arose only because some groups — primarily white males — for years were greatly advantaged at the expense of others.

Dan Courtney, Intrafraternity Council representative of ASMSU, said he doesn't believe that affirmative action automatically results in reverse discrimination.

"Many times this is used as a crutch. If there is reverse discrimination, it only exists in a good way," Courtney said.

Courtney continued that the affirmative action program was progressive and people must go through this time period to make the program get through the "stormy" stage.

"However, there wasn't an orientation period before affirmative action and people haven't been educated to it," Courtney explained. "The program is probably too much, too soon."

Reverse discrimination is discussed with some reluctance by officials for fear of being labeled "racist" or "sexist," but it is openly and commonly a subject for complaint. This is all the more true for students applying to professional schools.

According to Bruff, several reverse discrimination suits are currently pending against MSU, but the most noted case was the $100,000 damage suit against the MSU college of Human Medicine. Filed by William H. Dery in 1975, it charged that his constitutional and civil rights were violated by imposing stricter admissions requirements for whites than nonwhites.

Though the case was eventually dropped because of Dery's acceptance into another medical school, it left an important legal question behind. The courts have not dealt with such suits directly until last September.

In a landmark decision, the California Supreme Court ruled last fall that a special admissions program for minorities at UC-Davis Medical School was unconstitutional because it discriminated against whites. The decision has been appealed to the U.S. (continued on page 12)

John Taylor: 'good profs, old paths'

By MARTHA G. BENEDETTI
State News Staff Writer

John Taylor's office held the silence of a church. The scholarly atmosphere reflected the dignity and refinement embodied by the MSU philosophy professor.

The distinguished-looking professor said that the student population's shift away from humanities studies to applied humanities presents a dilemma.

"I regard this as a real problem, not for me as a philosophy educator but for the society at large. There are problems of justice in society such as the women's role in our society or human rights, and these problems involve everyone."

"I am concerned about the decline in liberal arts enrollment, as are the History and English departments," he said. "One can be trained in a specific field, but a look at one's capacity as a human being is almost needed human pursuit."

Taylor came to MSU in 1946 as professor and head of what was called the Department of Literature and Fine Arts, an incorporation of English and art history classes. Since 1952, he has taught philosophy with an emphasis in ethics and aesthetics, which he terms "the philosophy of art."

Born in Texas and raised in California, Taylor moved east to New Jersey and received a bachelor's and doctorate degree in philosophy at Princeton University.

"When I attended Princeton in the 1930s, an education in liberal arts was taken for granted. A person majoring in philosophy was able to express himself through rigorous and profound thought and logic," Taylor said, projecting an air of intrinsic knowledge. "At that time, a student may have thought about a career in law or teaching if he became a historian, but mainly students were concerned with getting a broad, rounded education."

Also an art historian, Taylor said the arts, such as literary plays or fiction, further enable one to gain self-knowledge and self-awareness through imaginative observation. The audience sees things the players or characters do not. The audience becomes more aware, through the plights, tragedies and joys of other people.

Taylor believes that the College of Arts and Letters, of which philosophy is a part, is concerned with preserving the applied sciences by providing reflection on the aims and objectives of these skills.

"Philosophy is not an absenteeism from society but a reflection on good life and good society," he said. "We want to apply philosophy to what is going on. Liberal arts do not just belong in the concert hall or art museum."

Taylor's book, written in 1966, entitled "The Masks of Society" shows his avid interest in the tie that exists between society and philosophy.

After a summer and fall term sabbatical in Italy, Greece and Egypt, Taylor completed his manuscript of 10 years subtitled "The Role of the Community of Scholars in an Industrial, Urban and Corporate Society," which he is considering publishing.

"This is my examination of how the scholar's role or function in relation to society has transformed in the wake of two world wars," he explained proudly.

Taylor served as chairperson of the MSU Faculty Steering Committee from 1966 through 1968. This position put him in close touch with the turbulent activities on campus at that time.

There has not been any one major change in philosophy between the '60s and '70s, he stated, but there has been a change of emphasis.

"The motives that cause students to go to applied studies are an indication that they want to bring themselves back into some respective relevance. They want to bring about direct effects and philosophy's effects are always indirect. The benefits are long-range rather than short-range."

"However, unless one gets himself philosophically right, all the arts and sciences are a delusion."

"An effort to make philosophy practical and real is necessary to the formation of a good society," he smiled and paused. "My colleagues' interests lie in their application of philosophy to law and medicine. They deal with ethics and bringing knowledge to bear upon the truth."

Taylor's philosophical thought processes began at a young age. He felt a sheer fascination with philosophy and it remains a passionate interest.

Though he realizes the job market for philosophy graduate students is poor, there (continued on page 12)

Making the forests work

By MIKE MACKSOOD
State News Staff Writer

Energy plantations. Farmers across Michigan growing energy crops and selling their produce to the power companies.

MSU researchers are working to make this scene possible in the not so distant future.

James W. Hanover, professor of forestry, and Donald I. Dickmann, associate professor of forestry, are working under a $30,000 research grant from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources to study ways of increasing levels of productivity and quality of Michigan's forests.

Hanover and Dickmann will be looking for ways to apply genetic and cultural improvement techniques to forest lands.

"What this work amounts to is agro-forestry, which means treating trees as we have treated crops in the past," Hanover said.

Hanover said there is a definite need for this type of research.

"Estimates predict that by the year 2000 our need for fiber will have more than doubled," Hanover said, "and if trees become a source of energy the need for more trees will be even greater."

Hanover said it is very possible trees will be used more as an energy source in the future, either by directly burning them or by getting chemical fuels from trees.

Dickmann said that Michigan now has enough trees to meet present needs but our ability to meet the needs of the future is questionable.

Dickmann said it is not assumed that trees will ever supply a large part of the national need for energy "but at least to some degree on a local level it may be possible to use trees to supply energy, either by burning them in power plants or by directly heating homes."

"Winter has brought the problem of energy before the eyes of many people as they sit shivering in their living rooms," Dickmann said. "It is possible to trap the energy of the sun in the wood produced by trees."

Dickmann said this energy can be used directly by burning or can be converted to other substances.

It is possible to produce methanol and methane gas from wood.

"We've been talking to Consumers Power Co. about the possibility of converting wood to fuel gas," Dickmann said.

But to be able to use trees as an energy source in the future or to even meet our growing needs for wood it will be necessary to increase the productivity of forests.

This is precisely what Hanover and Dickmann hope to do.

In their study they will be using a radically new method developed by the MSU forestry department for greatly accelerating the growth of tree seedlings by growing them in greenhouses under continuous light.

"This work would take a very long time if we could not use the accelerated growth program which allows year-round growth," Hanover said.

Hanover said trees grown by this "accel-o-gro" method grow about 10 times faster than in nature.

In his work Hanover will be collecting seeds from superior trees in nature and growing the offspring from these seeds in greenhouses. He will try to develop hybrids of different superior trees.

After the trees are ready to plant, Dickmann will try and find the optimum environment for raising these trees.

Dickmann said if trees are to be raised as a crop they can not be planted just anywhere. Cultural techniques such as weed control, fertilization and (continued on page 14)

Albert Drake, a part of MSU since 1966, learns from his students as they learn from him, especially in the craft of writing. "My purpose," Drake said, "is to improve the student's writing structure. There is a difference between guiding and pushing." Writing, he said, is characterized as a natural impulse. "While an energy crisis might occur due to lack of fuel, paper and ink will still be available."

Drake: exploring problem-solving writing

By MARTHA G. BENEDETTI
State News Staff Writer

Albert Drake's demeanor serves as a positive element in his position as an MSU educator.

The associate professor of English maintains a casual style that erases the often-distinct barriers existing between many students and instructors.

Since 1966, Drake has taught beginning and advanced fiction writing, introduction to poetry writing and an independent writing class. Next term, he will teach a newly initiated graduate-level poetry workshop.

Drake has had a flexibility within the University, which has enabled him to instruct the English classes he chooses.

"This term I am teaching a science-fiction writing workshop," Drake said. "It is comprised of mainly science majors. I am learning from them while they learn from me."

Drake is a structured individual when it comes to teaching.

"Everyone has to know how to write a basic story before they can go on to create their own writing style," he explained. "The whole act of writing is a matter of process. Self-analysis, ego and self-expression are involved in writing."

"I feel my purpose is to improve the student's writing structure," he pointed out. "There is a difference between guiding and pushing."

Drake has written a book entitled "Tillamook Burn," which will be published in the spring. It is composed of stories, poems, visuals and photographs. In the past, he has written several small, paperback books such as "By Breathing In and Out," "Riding Bike" and "Cheap Thrills."

"Writing is a useful device in working out problems, thoughts and feelings," Drake said, rubbing his hands together.

"Writing is problem solving. It allows one to sort things out. One's psyche processes often come out of the characters in their story."

Teaching, his family, his printing, editing and writing, together with a strong interest in cars and machines, are included in the life of Albert Drake.

In the summer, Drake goes back to his native Oregon, where he received his education, and occupies a cabin in the woods that he and his wife Barbara built.

"The summer is that quarter of the year separate from the rest, we rejuvenate ourselves," he said.

Barbara Drake teaches American Thought and Language at MSU and is also a writer.

The easy-going Drake said he is happy with what he is doing.

"I like to look back on a class I have taught and know that out of the 20 people I instructed, four of those people will continue writing. I have seen many students come and go and every so often there is an outstanding writing talent. I think students' writing is getting better and better.

Drake teaches his classes as if all the students were destined to become professional writers.

"Sometimes I do get tired of reading class manuscripts. Time is often invested without return. It is often a dead-end activity. Yet, it is worthwhile if only a few students come back for further discussion. Everyone has the ability to improve their writing."

He finds it is often difficult to get across to students what needs to be changed in their writing.

"I think that what I have written that has been any good got that way through revision," Drake said.

He believes there is a writing activity on the campus.

"Many students of all are interested in writing said. 'Writing is very natural impulse. While an energy crisis might occur due to fuel, paper and ink will be available,'

Band, ensemble to hold free concert

"The culmination of a tremendous amount of hard work," is what Kenneth G. Bloomquist, director of MSU bands, said he is looking forward to Sunday at 8:15 p.m. when the MSU Wind Ensemble and Symphonic Band present a joint concert in Fairchild Auditorium.

The free concert will feature music not previously performed on campus.

The Wind Ensemble will open the concert with the Hindemith "Symphony in B Flat" and Alberto Ginastera's "Danza Final" from the Estancia Ballet. Closing the concert will be the Symphonic Band performing Alfred Reed's complete "Armenian Dances" and Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Concerto for Bass Tuba," featuring Curtis Olson, assistant professor of music, on bass tuba. Olson, a recent addition to the music faculty, earned a bachelor of science degree in music education from Bemidji State College and a master's degree in music performance from the Eastman School of Music, where he was a member of the Eastman Trombone Choir.

Bloomquist said there is a lack of standard repertoire for winds in terms of band music, since "the band is a relatively new organization in the history of music."

'A Chorus Line'

lauded by British

LONDON (AP) — The American hit musical "A Chorus Line" won the prestigious London Evening Standard award Wednesday for best musical of the year.

The show drew fresh rave reviews when it reopened with an all-British cast Tuesday following a six-month run with an American cast.

The award was presented by veteran British actor Sir John Mills at a glittering and star-studded gathering at London's Savoy Hotel. The Evening Standard awards, instituted 25 years ago, are among the most coveted in the English theater.

There is the issue of reasonableness," Cote said. "There is an extreme of wanting to regulate the color of the bricks, the style of streetlights, the style of landscaping, the style of the point where it's not a project."

the public, such as noise pollution, sight pollution and light pollution from the street lights.
But Cote said the regulations may not stand up in court if they are deemed "arbitrary, capricious or discriminatory."
Chappelle said his major concern was the future of the land if Dayton-Hudson pulled out after the zone was changed to commercial and the city could do nothing to stop the rampant development of the area.

"We rarely go into a community where all the implications of development are found in the existing code," Swantko said. "We're playing with a full deck on top of the table. We've got nothing to hide. Our other malls speak for themselves."
He said the corporation expects to pick up its share of all utilities and public services provided to the shopping mall area.
Swantko dangled the bait of the extension of Coolidge Road north of Lake Lansing Road before the commission.
"If you approve the project as planned, we will bear the cost of the extension totally," Swantko said. "We will also pay our proportion of the widening of Marfitt Road.

On the other side of the coin Swantko told what will happen if Dayton Hudson does not get its way.
"We're going to dispose of the land unless the city acquires it to keep it in its natural state," Swantko said. "We don't see our land just sitting there doing nothing for 10 to 20 years."

Seafarer Week activities scheduled

The chairperson of the Senate Health, Social Services and Environment Committee said Thursday he is not convinced by U.S. Navy claims that the proposed submarine communications Project is safe.
Sen. John Otterbacher, D-Grand Rapids, said he has reports that contradict Navy claims that the antenna-grid project is not a health hazard.
Otterbacher made the statement after a two-hour long meeting with Navy officials Wednesday. The officials brought with them reports that say Seafarer's radiation is less dangerous than the radiation from a hair dryer.
However, the senator said the public is not getting all the facts on the impact the communications project could have on persons living near the proposed Upper Peninsula site.
He has research that indicates exposure to extremely low frequency radiation can have a damaging effect on people young and old," Otterbacher said.
Navy officials said the proposed project would only emit .07 milliwatts of radiation when a person is standing directly over it. This compares to 100 volts put out by a color television set or a hair dryer.
Otterbacher asked the officials for further studies on the project which he has been unable to obtain. He said that until he gets these studies, he will continue to oppose Seafarer.

Milliken wants higher education board

By GEORGIA HANSHEW
State News Staff Writer

A state constitutional amendment which would create a board of higher education to deal specifically with institutions like MSU has been proposed by Gov. William G. Milliken.

The proposal, designed to help coordinate planning among Michigan's postsecondary institutions, depends upon a two-thirds approval by the Michigan House and Senate to be placed on the ballot in the general election in 1978 — Milliken's goal.

The governor's office is currently talking to lawmakers about the measure, hoping to reverse some of the votes which kept the proposal from being placed on the ballot last year.

Prompted by what he saw as limitations in Michigan's planning and coordination system for higher education, a loss of confidence in the usefulness of a higher education, and concern for the future of college enrollments, Milliken appointed a commission in 1972 to study the situation.

The commission came back in October 1974 with a recommendation for a board which would be separate from the existing State

To solve problems of state structure

Board of Education, to deal only with postsecondary education. "Postsecondary" was defined as education beyond high school, or for persons who are beyond the compulsory school age (16).

This board of postsecondary education, the commission said, would help eliminate the problems of having one board handle all levels of education, kindergarten through college.

"The unique and significant problems of postsecondary education require concentrated attention," the commission reported.

Problems of increasing costs, the possibility of declining college enrollment in the future and the need for more specialized educational services are going to have to be dealt with by a full-time body, the commission concluded.

It suggested that a nine-member bipartisan board be appointed by the governor, with no more than five members from the same political party.

The board would study the situation of postsecondary education and advise the governor and legislature on the need for new programs, schools, departments and funds.

At present, each of Michigan's 13 colleges and universities has its own governing board, completely free of centralized control.

The proposed board would not change the independent status of the colleges, said James Phelps, special assistant to the governor. It would merely coordinate the individual programs and goals of the various schools to avoid possible conflicts and overlaps.

Phelps gave the example of Michigan's three forestry programs, at Michigan Technological University, the University of Michigan and MSU.

"We should take the best of what we have in each institution," he said, "and put it together so we have one nationally renowned program, rather than three mediocre programs."

The Council of College Presidents in Michigan has supported the proposed constitutional amendment, though several college administrators have expressed some reservations.

"Most of us in education have felt that if there is going to be a state board, there ought to be a separate one," U-M President Robben Fleming said, explaining his support for the proposal.

However, he said, "My first preference would be for the decentralized system the way it is now."

There is some need to coordinate programs among the colleges, Fleming said, but added, "I think it's really overrated."

REALTORS, ATTORNEYS LEAD SESSIONS

Program offers home-buying tips

By NANCY JO HALE
State News Staff Writer

Students might not think learning how to buy a house is important when they are buried under piles of homework in their dormitory rooms.

But, "Homeownership: A Practical Program For the Consumer," a learning series sponsored by MSU's Center for Urban Affairs, might be just the thing for a student who likes to store up information for later use or just escape homework.

The program, which costs $5 and is available for MSU Continuing Education Units, began Feb. 3 and will meet for four more Thursdays at 6:30 p.m. at the Main Street Elementary School, 1715 W. Main St. in Lansing.

Though registration is no longer open the program will be repeated next fall, David Pursell, director of the program, said.

The program's sessions include information about pre-purchase, home maintenance and home sale. Area realtors, attorneys and members of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) are among those who lead the sessions.

The program is second in a series begun in 1976 by Pursell, who is director of community development programs for MSU's Center for Urban Affairs.

His own problems with buying a house led him to conceive the idea of providing the public a way to learn the intricacies of house buying and selling.

"I was scared to death," he said. "When you go out to buy a house you are faced with new pressures and decisions to make. You find out how little you really know about buying a house."

Most people do not want to appear stupid in front of realtors or home owners they are considering buying from, he said. "So they don't ask the right questions," he said.

People who participate in the sessions learn what questions to ask and what to look for in a house, Pursell said.

Joe Murphy, president of MSU's Student Housing Corporation, which is frequently involved in buying houses to be used for co-ops, said he sees the merits of such a learning series.

"Some people buy houses that are lemons just like some buy cars that are lemons," he said. "You have to know what you are buying. Realtors can only help you so much."

Free smoking clinic set

Anyone interested in attempting to break the smoking habit can attend a public information meeting of the Greater Lansing Smoking Withdrawal Clinic tonight at 8 in 207 Sparrow Hospital.

The initial free meeting of the clinic, which has a 52 percent success rate, is to inform the public of clinic procedure and technique. The clinic will begin Monday, and costs $20, a fee that includes a lifetime membership and continuing contact with the clinic to help ex-smokers stay off the cigarettes.

The nonprofit clinic puts together groups of about 20 to 25 people who meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday for two hours a night for four weeks. During the meetings, professionals come in and talk about the body and smoking.

Also included in the 10-year-old clinic, which is staffed by volunteers, are films on smoking and talk sessions. All members of the clinic are required to quit smoking "cold-turkey" on the first night of the clinic.

Security, festival topics of RHA meet

By NUNZIO M. LUPO conducting regular business.
A board presentation and dormitory security at meeting Wednesday

for the MSU Student Foundation-sponsored "Winter Weekend" were presented to by representative Rick
The foundation is composed of people responsible for Spartan Spirit Block at ball games earlier this year.
RHA representative
asked RHA representa-to help publicize the festival in their residence halls. The event will take place Feb. 16 through 20.
The activities will be a formal dance in the Union Room on Feb. 18. Tickets are on sale Tuesday at the Union Ticket Office and Marshall Music. Nonalcoholic beverages will be served at the dance.

Information about broom and another Winter Weekend event, will be available to interested students through dormitory hall governments.
The event will take place on the Clear River and trophies will be awarded as prizes.

Another big event planned for a snow sculpture contest. Floors or groups interested in entering a sculpture contest will be invited to enter the theme of "A Salute to Michigan." They should contact their dormitory governments for information.
The deadline for entering the snow sculpture contest is Feb. 14 p.m. and Feb. 19 is the deadline for the snow sculpture contest. Entry fees are $2 for individuals and sign-ups are in Student Services Bldg.
The Student Foundation is coordinating "special"

nights with area bars for that week.
In other discussion Douglas Zatechka of the Residence Halls

Programs Office asked RHA representatives about dormitory security.
While some of the representatives felt that there was not adequate security, it was their unanimous decision that residence halls are as secure as possible without restricting individual freedom. Zatechka said more security would perhaps make the dormitories "represive."

RHA representatives, however suggested in-door peepholes and safety chains as extra security measures.

In new business, Brian Hough was appointed to fill the vacant editor-in-chief position on the RHA publication, Rha-port. The position was vacated when former Editor-in-Chief Bruce Ray Walker resigned last week. RHA also approved a revised structure for Rha-

RHA President Terry Borg announced that ASMSU Student Board approved the proposal to grant the RHA Judiciary more disciplinary powers.
The proposal was supported by RHA last week and passed by the student board on Tuesday.

Full accessibility planned for area buses

Meridian Township Commissioner Carlene Webster, who also sits on the CATA Board of Directors, was one of the two commissioners to vote "no" on the issue.

"The big question is who is going to pay for this," she said.
"I am concerned that the legislature has discussed this and until they are willing to make a commitment, I have serious reservations."

Baker, one of the commission's early supporters of the issue, pointed out that the solution to the problem involves a very complex system.
He said that line haul vehicles should be totally accessible and offer frequent line haul service.
He said that especially in rural areas, demand response systems operating as feeder lines into the regular line haul system are needed.

"We also need buses for the disabled people who are not self mobile," he said. "And we need an increase in the usage of private enterprise in mass transit.

"You don't mandate how people will live, and without total accessibility, we make that choice for them."

Organizational meet set

The organizational meeting of the Greater East Lansing
Community Service and Referral Center will be held at 2 p.m.
Sunday at 601 E. Grand River Ave.

Ingham County Commissioner Jess Sobel, D-East Lansing, is trying to locate interested people to help start the center which will deal with various ways for people to "cut through the red tape of social service bureaucracies," he said.

"We are also interested in serving as an advocate for various student concerns such as assisting out-of-state students who wish to qualify for in-state status at MSU."

All interested persons are invited to attend.

Vote scheduled

The Okemos school district is holding an election Monday on a $2.1 million bond proposal for major high school and elementary school improvements.

MSU students living in the Okemos school district who are registered to vote can visit their precinct polling location

Sports

Spartans and Bulldogs to meet in cellar battle

By MIKE LITAKER

State News Sports Writer

an attempt to put the word "back" in his team's play, hockey coach Amo Bessone will revert back to a set power play unit for this week's series against Minnesota at Munn Arena.

After watching his squad net five goals in its last 33 man game opportunities, Bessone decided to junk the three-man power play format in favor of a regular unit idea.

Another dubious distinction for MSU in the face of this trend is the prospect of losing a new team record for games in a season. The Spartans have fallen 17 times this year compared to the 18 setbacks in 1955-56 and 1959-60. "We were trying to work it by lines but that hasn't worked so we're going to try it this way. What else is there left to do?" Bessone said, shrugging his shoulders.

Kevin Coughlin and Ron Heaslip will man the points with Russ Welch and Paul Klasinski handling the wings in the new power play alignment. Dave Kelly will get the nod at center. Bessone's revival of the fixed unit is something that caused some of the Spartan players to grumble privately last season about the lack of playing time they were getting. But with a 7-16-1 WCHA record and last-place Duluth just three points behind the Spartans, Bessone has decided he has seen enough.

"Some of the guys were doing a helluva lot of squawking last year because they weren't playing enough," said Bessone. "This year they're playing and aren't doing anything. Anything we do on our power play will be an improvement."

This will be the first meeting of the season for MSU and Duluth with tonight's contest starting at 7:30 and for the final time this season, 2:30 p.m. on Saturday. Both games will be carried on WKAR radio.

Winners of four of their last six contests, the Bulldogs are led in goal by Rick Heinz and center Dan Lempe, the third leading scorer in the WCHA. Winger Monty Jones and defenseman Curt Giles are also back for UMD.

Thought to be dead and buried in last place for the remainder of the season, Duluth underwent its resurrection several weeks ago to make a challenge for the final playoff spot while the Spartans have not collected a point in three weeks.

With the Bulldogs having played two less games than the Spartans, who have an idle weekend coming up, the MSU skaters can ill afford anything less than a sweep of the series.

"Right now this looms as our biggest series of the season, bigger than Michigan," Bessone noted. "We're fighting for 10th place right now."

"We're gonna tell 'em we're playing Michigan instead of Duluth," mused Bessone, whose team has the worst home record in the league. "Then maybe we'll get more out of our kids."

Slapshots

MSU will likely have a new face in the line-up tonight at right wing on the third line with Ken Brothers and Rob Harris. Freshman Bryan Cammett will get his first chance since being slowed last fall with a groin injury. The 6-0 Grosse Pointe Farms native was a teammate of Darryl DiPace on last season's Detroit Junior Red Wings team.

MSU will pass the 100,000 season attendance mark for the third straight year tonight. The current season head count at Munn Arena stands at 95,237.

Welch's two goals last week against Wisconsin gave the freshman forward 18 for the season and the team scoring lead with 32 points. Jim Cunningham is second with 30 points while linemate Paul Klasinski holds down third with 26 and his 11 goals make him the only other Spartan to reach the double figure goal plateau.

Lacrosse team set to meet new coach

All team members and prospects will have the opportunity to meet MSU's new lacrosse coach Monday.

The athletic department announced today that newly appointed coach Boku Hendrickson will meet the squad in 225 Jenison Fieldhouse at 6:30 p.m.

Hendrickson, a former Cortland St. All-American, succeeds Fred Hartman, who resigned earlier.

Hendrickson, who had been an unofficial assistant coach the past two years at MSU, is currently enrolled as a graduate student in special education.

The 24-year-old Hendrickson played for the East Lansing club lacrosse team and was a teammate of Hartman last year.

Hartman, who guided the team to a 3-10 record last spring, moved to Ann Arbor last fall when his wife entered law school at U-M.

Hartman leaves MSU with a three-year coaching slate of 14-25.

East Lansing senior Ann Weaver will lead the MSU women's gymnastics team this weekend as the Spartans tune up for the Big Ten Championships.

Tumblers take to road, hope to up 7-0 record

By JOHN SINGLER

State News Sports Writer

For the first time in nearly a month, the MSU women's gymnastics team must concern itself with more than just how high the judges are scoring their routines.

The Spartans travel to Champaign, Ill., this weekend for a Saturday matinee against Illinois-Chicago Circle and defending Big Ten champions, the Illinois Fighting Illini.

Since a season-opening cliff-hanger at Kent State, MSU has breezed to its 7-0 record, including a rout of arch-rival Michigan in Ann Arbor last weekend.

Head coach Barb McKenzie has been stressing strength exercises recently and the results were evident in preparation this week, much to the delight of the fourth-year Spartan mentor.

Against Chicago Circle, the Spartans face the picture of consistency in Diane Cepke, a nationally ranked all-arounder.

"She doesn't have a weak event," McKenzie said.

The Illini feature two such stars in Nancy Thies and Patty Carmichael. Thies was a member of the U.S. Olympic team in 1972 and Carmichael is the defending Big Ten all-around champion.

McKenzie will make one change for the weekend meet. Marie Cederna will compete in the vault only, bypassing the beam and uneven bars.

Pam Steckrodt, Diane Lovato and the Skillman sisters — Kitty and Sara — will compete in a most talented field of all-arounders.

Senior cocaptain Ann Weaver is gradually working herself towards a season debut in the floor exercise. McKenzie is pointing to Southern Illinois, Feb. 19, for Weaver's return to the event in which she was injured seriously last March.

"The routine is starting to come together for her," McKenzie said.

Meanwhile, Weaver will continue to compete in the vault and on the uneven bars.

The meet this weekend offers MSU and Illinois a final tune-up for the Big Ten Championships, Feb. 11 and 12, also in Champaign.

The MSU men's Varsity Club will hold its semi-monthly meeting Sunday at 6:30 p.m. The meeting will be held in the Varsity Club Room at Spartan Stadium. All members and letter winners are invited to attend. Among topics to be discussed is the Green-White broom hockey game scheduled for this spring.

The MSU Frisbee team will present a demonstration during the halftime of the MSU-Indiana basketball game Saturday.

CAGERS AIM FOR REPEAT

Indiana wary of MSU

By GEOFFETNYRE

State News Sports Writer

Knights and the Indiana Hoosiers will tread warily on the basketball court Saturday night as the Spartans battle to bust out of their losing streak.

Fourth-place Hoosiers, who have good reason to be wary since Judas charges edged Indiana earlier in the year.

MSU Spartans, 3-6 for the season, expect to dump their losing streak, they will have to make it two straight over the Hoosiers — a formidable task by any team.

The Hoosiers are led by All-American center Kent Benson, touted as the best college basketball player in the nation. The NBA's Kansas City-Omaha Kings have already announced they will pick Benson first in the draft should they get first choice.

Earlier in the season Heathcote quoted an unknown source as saying, "They could take Kent Benson and four coeds from the student body and still win the NCAA tournament."

While that prophecy has not quite panned out, Benson has found some strong support in the person of 6-foot-5 freshman forward Mike Woodson.

Benson ranks third in Big Ten scoring at 21.0 points per game but Woodson is right behind in fifth place with a 20.0 point average. And if that isn't enough, Benson and Woodson are fourth and seventh, respectively, in conference rebounding.

"I think Woodson is just a super player," Heathcote said. "I'd have to say he's the best freshman basketball player I've seen in the Big Ten."

In MSU's upset over Indiana the Spartans shut down Benson with a hustling zone defense, as the 6-foot-11 center only scored 11 points, though Woodson picked up some of the slack with 26 points.

"To win this time I think we're going to have to key on both Benson and Woodson," Heathcote said. "(Jim) Coutre has to work hard at denying Benson the ball, but he'll get some help."

MSU sees Adrian in game Saturday

After coming off a big win against Eastern Michigan Tuesday night, the women's basketball team will go head-on into a game with Adrian College Saturday at 5 p.m. at Adrian.

MSU coach Karen Langeland said after the game with Eastern that she felt the team was on to another win streak, and the Spartans have been practicing hard this week to make that goal. Langeland doesn't foresee any difficulty in getting by Adrian, but she is looking to a tough game coming up on Monday with Wayne State.

The game will be played at 6 p.m. in the Men's IM Building gym, and Langeland said that the game will be a rough one, and if the Spartans can beat Wayne, they may regain their No. 1 seed in the state of Michigan tournaments in early March.

The team has a bigger worry next weekend however, as the Spartans play in the Big Ten Invitational championships. Langeland thinks that MSU is strong enough to win the confrontation, but she has expressed concern with the Spartan schedule, in which MSU has faced only one Big Ten team this year. That team was U-M, and MSU won by one point. The Spartans had scheduled a game with Indiana State, but the game had to be canceled due to weather.

"I wish that we could play more Big Ten teams, and more out-of-state teams, but the schedule was drawn up a year ago and there is nothing we can do about it, except hope that we can schedule more Big Ten games next year," Langeland said.

BUT SET SIGHTS FOR NCAA MEET

Harriers gun for WMU relays

The distance medley team will be gunning to lower its NCAA meet qualifying time of 9:48.2 when the Spartan trackmen travel to Kalamazoo Saturday for the Western Michigan Relays Saturday.

The team of Keith Moore (880), Tim Klein (440), Stan Mavis (three-quarter mile) and Herb Lindsay (mile) bettered the mark of 9:53.0 to qualify for the NCAA indoor meet March 11 and 12 at Cobo Hall. The quartet's time was tops at the Michigan Relays Jan. 22.

Saturday's relays will draw "practically all of the Michigan schools," coach Jim Bibbs said, and that includes Michigan and sprinter Doug Livingston.

And where you find Hennigar you'll find the Spartans' Randy Smith.

Smith jumped the gun last week against Michigan in a dual meet and under the new NCAA ruling once is too much. Hennigar coasted to a 6.2 victory as Smith watched from the sidelines.

"It's a mistake that a young freshman has to make but I don't think you'll see him do it again," Bibbs said. "Randy really wanted to hit 6.0 last week."

In the shuttle hurdle relay football flanker Eugene Byrd makes his collegiate track debut. Byrd, who hasn't run track since he was a junior in high school, joins veterans Howard Neely, Tim Klein and freshman Rob Cummings as the foursome tries to lower the Spartan best of 30.0 for this year.

State will center on student issues

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
State News Staff Writer

Independent people unified in their hope to bring fresh ideas to the government make up the Rainbow slate for the upcoming MSU elections, presidential candidate John Cantwell said.

Other than concentrating on image-building, Cantwell said, state members will try to focus the campaign on the issues.

State members include:

Cantwell, who worked last year for the Student Workers Union, for president. He is a junior in psychology.

Joe Huebner, a junior in agriculture, for the College of Agriculture.

Michael Spaulding, a junior in art, for the College of Arts and Sciences.

John Riker, a sophomore in communication, for the College of Communication Arts and Sciences.

John Renn, a junior in English, for the College of Education.

The slate is called Rainbow, Riker said, because it encompasses a spectrum of people who are not very much alike. The slate shows colors, is diverse, attractive and progressive, she added.

Cantwell stressed the new ideas they would bring to ASMSU, supporting their campaign to President Jimmy Carter's.

You can't write us off as strictly liberal, radical or conservative," he said. "We represent a rainbow of fresh ideas."

Cantwell said he would try to spend ASMSU's money more wisely if elected, as the present budget does "almost nothing" for the students now.

The slate members will form no definite platform until they get together with the students and find out what they need, Riker said.

We don't want to make any promises we can't keep," she said. "We won't decide on a platform until we know what they want."

He promised many appearances by the slate members and said they might even meet to discuss the issues with other candidates.

Among the issues, Cantwell and Riker said, are rape, poor housing, the need for more parking on campus, expanding athletic and arts programs and improving cooperation between ASMSU and the State News in getting information to the students.

cultivation must be implemented.

"Genetically improved strains need good cultural control," Dickmann said, "because hybrids are often not as tolerant of weeds, for example, as are trees produced in nature." Dickmann also said not all forest lands are suitable for "hyper tree growth" and so another part of the study will be to identify the lands best suited to these techniques.

"We would like to develop these techniques so that some day farmers have the option of growing trees as a cash crop in place of traditional crops," Dickmann said.

Also, the techniques could be used by the DNR, power companies and the forest industry.

The work being done here by Hanover and Dickmann is part of an overall program to increase production of Michigan forests.

The Michigan State Cooperative Tree Improvement Program is composed of universities, private industries and various public agencies.

Hanover has been working in this area for over 15 years.

Huge nude woman beside Red Cedar project of advanced sculpture student

There is a huge nude woman lying beside the frozen Red Cedar River!

After 10 hours of work in the bitter cold, Christina Anderson finished her first mammoth snow sculpture. The work is called "Nude Reclining in a Hammock Thinking of Winter on a Hot Summer Day!"

Anderson, a fine arts major, said it took three weeks to organize the project.

The sculpture counts as credit for the Advanced Sculpture 428 class.

When the project is finished, Anderson said she will have spent $50 on the film and development of pictures capturing the entire sculpting process.

But the fine arts senior is not ready to take on any more massive snow sculptures.

"I got too cold," she said. "However, I would like to try some more environmental sculptures."

While Anderson was working on the nude, students on their way to classes stopped and asked her what she was doing. When the sculptor told them, they re-examined the work. As they envisioned a nude reclining in a hammock thinking of winter on a hot summer day, smiles overcame their faces and they seemed to walk away a little warmer.

"Overall, I received a positive reaction from the students," Anderson said.

The purpose of the project was to do something cheap, she said. Anderson said rope and snow came to her mind as cheap materials which would allow her to build a large work. Once she had the materials in mind, she said it was just a matter of thinking up a suitable title.

Anderson, who doesn't believe art has to be deeply significant to be good, described her work as "whimsical." "I think it's suggestive," she said. "It brightens things up."

When one looks at the nude, his thoughts race to spring vacation and Daytona Beach. There is a darkly tanned beauty bathing in the hot sun. The notes of the latest songs coming from her radio are hushed by the warm rushing Atlantic. Then one sees the white suds ooze through her toes and he remembers that it is only snow.

Restoring the Missing

THIRD DIMENSION

in Stereo Reproduction

The unique, patented, construction of the Dahlquist DQ-10 imparts to it the rare ability to reproduce depth images!

From the very first, one is struck by the unusual degree of spaciousness and three-dimensional depth. Next, one becomes aware of its incredible definition. Subtle inner detail that would ordinarily be unheard is reproduced clearly and distinctly. Further listening discloses an overall coherence and airy smoothness in response. All five drivers blend perfectly, behaving as if they were a single full-range element.

Somehow the DQ-10 does not sound like a loudspeaker.
Its accuracy is almost startling.

FOOD FOR EMIL'S

Helping Students thru Midterms for over 50 years.

Serving their complete menu until 1 a.m.

Emil's menu tells the history of a family serving the Lansing area for 54 years. Emil's East in the 2000 block of Michigan Ave. and Emil's 6025 West Saginaw are two fine Italian restaurants full of little nooks and crannies and alcoves.

That friendly Italian atmosphere began when Emil DeMarco opened a fruit stand on the location 54 years ago. It went from a fruit stand to a soda fountain until after Prohibition when Emil obtained one of the first bar licenses in the state.

Emil's atmosphere is perfect for a cozy dinner of Lasagne, which they claim has the best sauce in town. Another favorite at Emil's is Canelloni, rolled Italian pastry filled with meat, smothered with mozzarella cheese and covered with Emil's spaghetti sauce.

Even though Emil's is a genuine Italian restaurant, they offer items for the vegetarian, including Fettucini, Manicotti or Italian Sea Shells. The menu at Emil's is rounded out nicely, they also offer seafood and American house specialties. Everyone should be happy eating at Emil's. Every evening Emil's offers a dinner special. On Sunday, Monday and Thursday nights enjoy their famous Pizza and Pitcher special. On Tuesdays it's ALL YOU CAN EAT spaghetti for only $1.50. Wednesdays traditionally are "VIVA ITALIAN" night. You'll be able to choose one of many complete Italian dinners. This includes an antipasto, tossed salad, glass of wine and vanilla ice cream or Italian cookie.

Emil's offers daily luncheon specials that are always different. It's a great and affordable way to enjoy an Italian lunch.

Emil's happy hour is a great deal, 3-6 Monday through Friday.

Emil's hours, 11:00 a.m. till 2:00 a.m. seven days a week. Spend an evening with this Italian family, they're gracious hosts, with half a century of service behind them.
