were published with malicious intent and were damaging to his reputation as well as future employment prospects with the University and other organizations.

The news item was picked up by other media from Los Angeles to New York, which intensified the amount of damage done by the original stories, Marshall's petition said.

It also states Marshall made numerous attempts to contact both the writer of the stories and the management of the State News in an effort to correct the mistakes in the stories, but was unsuccessful.

Coy said Wednesday the State News would counter these charges.

"We maintain that the reporter involved did the proper job," he said. "There was no intention of personal injury."

Marshall called the damage resulting from the stories "immense."

"I feel that the stories directly contributed to my being traded from L.A. to Atlanta," he said. "If the State News had taken any action to correct this (the alleged mistakes), I wouldn't file suit.'

The State News has been the target of only one or two lawsuits in the 71 years of its operation, Coy said. The last one, filed in the 1960s, was withdrawn by the plaintiff.

Coy added that it would be difficult to prove damages amounting to $2.5 million and said this was "unreasonably high" for a faculty of JMC wants a moratorium placed on freshman admissions so they may explore the mission of lifelong education.

"If we find at the conclusion of the planning period for whatever reason that the mission is not working, I would be the first to second the motion to lift the moratorium," he added.

Michelle Matel, undergraduate Steering Committee representative, presented a statement expressing Student Council's extreme dismay over the procedures used in consideration of the proposed JMC moratorium on freshman admissions.'

She said Student Council opposed the Procedures for discontinuation because they do "not provide an appropriate mode of participation for the Academic Council. # Mercury poison, dancing cats: prelude to death for Ojibways

By Judy Putnam

Lying in a largely rustic, unsettled area, the beautiful English-Wabigoon River snakes its way northwest across the Canadian province of Ontario

Over 1,000 Ojibway Native Americans live on two primitive reservations on lakes fed by the river, and sportsmen fly in from across the continent to catch pike, perch and walleye from the Wabigoon's waters. The fish that are caught are large and appear healthy - deceptively healthy.

This is a story about mercury-poisoned fish, a people who must survive on them, a chemical plant and two MSU professors — Patricia and Frank D'itri. This is also a story about the earth and what Patricia D'itri, an assistant professor of American Thought and Language, has called "the warning lights for the rest of us."

In 1962, a chlor-alkali chemical plant of the Dryden Paper Company began dumping mercury into the Wabigoon River, upstream from the Grassy Narrows and White Dog Reservations. Between then and 1970, when a methyl mercury poisoning problem was first discovered, the plant released an estimated 9,000 to 11,000 kilograms of mercury into the river.

'The scientist has a moral obligation to humanity. It's up to the scientists to make sure what they discover or what they know, is made known to the world." --- Frank D'itri

The dumping did not stop in 1970, however, and the chemical company continued to put mercury into the river until 1975, contaminating the fish which the Ojibways depend on for food. The fish are also important to the Native Americans for income as the Indians serve as tour guides for fishing expeditions, a major industry in the

Communist heads meet, attempt solidarity show

MADRID, Spain (AP) - Leaders of Western Europe's major Communist par-ties met in Madrid for the first time in 40 years Wednesday to show solidarity with the still-outlawed Spanish party and to the Soviet bloc.

George Marchais of France and Enrico Berlinguer of Italy were embraced at the airport by Santiago Carrillo of Spain as they arrived for two days of private talks at a luxury hotel.

The government refused to let the three meet in public, but provided the Communists police protection against possible attacks by right-wing terrorists.

The Communist party has been banned in Spain since the end of the Spanish civil war 40 years ago, and its application for legality is now before the Supreme Court, Carrillo returned from exile in Paris a year ago following the death of long-time dictator Francisco Franco.

Earlier Wednesday, a bomb believed planted by rightists exploded outside the Ministry. No injuries ported.

As the meeting opened, a Madrid newspaper reported that the Spanish government has ordered the expulsion of a Soviet trade official, Yuri Pivovarov, for gathering military information. The Foreign Ministry declined to comment on the report in the paper Diario 16. It would be the first time a Russian was thrown out since Soviet trade and cultural experts began entering Spain in the 1960s nd since Moscow and Madrid re-established diplomatic relations last month.

Sakharov embroiled in new conflict

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov has a new conflict with the authorities — over an apartment swap his family wants to make.

Sakharov went to the Moscow People's Court Wednesday to press his attempt to move his six-member family from two two-room apartments to one four-room apartment. All Soviet housing is regulated by the state.

Sakharov's plan has floundered because one of the seven people in the apartment he wants to move to has not been satisfactorily resettled: The Cheryomushki district housing office said last month that until the seventh person — an elderly woman — is resettled to her satisfaction, the whole switch cannot

The court refused to reverse the housing authorities' decision.

Sakharov attributed the refusal to his political activities. But the official Tass news agency said Sakharov wanted more space than he was entitled to.

Bank guard foils 'mole thieves'

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — An elaborate scheme by "mole thieves" to tunnel into Bologna's main bank from the city sewers was foiled by an alert night guard, police said Wednesday.

Police said the tunnel was within two yards of the steel wall around the basement of the Cassa di Risparmio when it was discovered.

Had the burglars got in, they would have found 3,000 safe-deposit boxes and millions of dollars in cash, the potential makings of the biggest haul in the annals of Italian crime

The police said the gang of what they called "mole thieves" disappeared before police reached the bank. They left behind enough tunneling equipment, from jackhammers to rails and wagons to wheel out the debris, to fill three trucks.

The plan was foiled when a night guard patrolling outside the post office reported to police that he saw two men arrive in a van and throw something down a hole in the street.

Committee paves way for tax package

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Rules Committee paved the way for a quick House vote Thursday on a tax package designed to give most Americans a $50 tax rebate and cut taxes for 45 million taxpayers.

By voice vote Wednesday, the committee authorized the House to vote Thursday on the measure. It is expected to win approval.

The House Ways and Means Committee estimated that 3.7 million couples or single individuals who had paid income taxes in 1976 would owe no taxes at all for 1977 under the measure.

The bill, proposed by the Carter Administration to stimulate the economy, was changed slightly from its original form by the Ways and Means Committee.

One change would eliminate the rebate to all families whose income was above $30,000 and reduce the amount of the rebate to families who earned between $25,000 and $30,000. Carter had proposed $50 payments to almost every man, woman and child no matter how high the family income.

GM investigation under way, paper says

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal officials suspect General Motors Corp. has purposely understated its income and taxes over the past several years, possibly cheating the government out of hundreds of millions of dollars, the Wall Street Journal said Wednesday.

The Journal, in a story from Detroit, said investigators believe GM understated its income by writing off almost $500 million worth of parts and equipment that either did not exist or had been written off before.

GM, the nation's biggest automaker and one of the country's largest taxpayers, denies wrongdoing, and no official charges have been filed, the

The existence of the investigation was confirmed two weeks ago, but details were not available then. The Detroit Free Press reported at that time that a federal investigation was under way.

Oswald sent note to magnate, daily says

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal investigator says a note signed by Lee Harvey Oswald and asking about "my position" was sent to the late Texas oil magnate, H. L. Hunt, two weeks before the murder of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas, the Daily News said Wednesday.

The News quoted the unnamed investigator as saying the note was dated Nov. 8, 1963, and said:

"Dear Mr. Hunt: I would like information concerning my position. I am asking only for information. I am suggesting that we discuss the matter fully before any steps are taken by me or anyone else. Thank

A comparison of the handwritten note with samples of Oswald's writing led the investigator to conclude it was written by Oswald or someone imitating the handwriting of the alleged assassin of Kennedy, the News said.

Sewage dumped in St. Mary's River

SAULT STE. MARIE (UPI) - The municipal sewage treatment dumped between 600,000 and 900,000 gallons of raw sewage and industrial wastes into the Lower St. Mary's River over a three-day period, city officials disclosed.

Plant Manager Malcolm Warner said the wastes were diverted into the river because the main sewage line became clogged with tree roots and other debris a problem that is more likely to occur during the spring thaw.

The wastes entered the river through a backup discharge line installed some years ago us a safety valve to prevent sewage from backing up into homes or businesses when the main lines become clogged by debris.

The Coast Guard was ordered to investigate the incident.

Court strikes down part of law

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court, further nasrowing how government can legally discriminate between men and women, on Wednesday struck down a portion of the federal Social Security law.

A 5-4 court majority said widowers or husbands of retired women seeking Social Security benefits cannot be required to prove they were financially dependent on their wives because the law makes no such demand on women or widows in similar situations.

Justice Department attorneys, in defending the law, had argued that striking down the proof-of-dependency requirement for men would cost $400 million a year and place "a severe burden on the Social Security trust fund's alreadystrained resources."

Troopers Association, presented the proside of the death penalty at a lively debate a group of 350 people.

Sene Wanger, author of the Michigan prohibition of capital punishment, and Zolton to, MSU professor of criminal justice, took the other side of the question with Judge lotchkiss, Michigan Circuit Court, moderating the debate at Shaw Hall.

mes opened by saying that there is a direct correlation between state-sanctioned tions and the decline of the homicide rate.

By 1955, the homicide rate was a little over 7,000 and there was a steady decline 1955 to 1955." 1935, there were a little over 10,000 homicides committed in that year," Holmes

mes said that capital punishment was permitted in those years, with the high of 1.600 tions carried out in the 1930s. tions carried out in the 1930s. saw a situation in 1968 when the homicide rate went up to 12,500 and in 1972 there were 18,500 homicides in this nation," Holmes added. He said that the last permitted execution was in 1967, barring the recent Gilmore case.

"There is a direct correlation that in state-sanctioned executions for those that commit murder in the first degree go down, the homicide rate goes up." Holmes said.

"First degree murder is a planned, premeditated, willful taking of life — the rational man's homicide," he said. He drew a distinction between first-degree murder and crimes of passion, such as a husband-wife spat or barroom brawl.

"It is my contention that those kind of animals (people commiting first-degree murder) forfeit their right to live in a civilized society the moment they commit that crime," Holmes

Brown said the Supreme Court has never ruled the death penalty unconstitutional. He said that in the 1972 Furman vs. Georgia decision, the Supreme Court struck down the death penalty laws because sentencing procedures of state juries were arbitrary and Once the states such as Georgia, Texas and Florida complied with the Furman decision of 1972, the court in 1976 upheld the constitutionality of the death penalty in those states,"

He also said he doubted that the death penalty is applied in a discriminatory manner. The majority of the 40,000 people who have been executed since 1900 have been white males, the majority of the 350 persons who are on death row today are white male. And this comes from a study by the NAACP," Brown said.

Wanger pointed to the problems of making a mistake when applying the death penalty. "Conviction of the innocent occurs and, of course, execution makes a miscarriage of justice irrevocable," Wanger said.

"In Michigan since 1910, at least 12 persons were known to be wrongfully convicted of first-degree murder. Later, maybe years later, they would have been found innocent and set free," Wanger said.

He differed with Holmes' definition of first-degree murder.

"What Rep. Holmes stated to be the law of first-degre murder is not strictly accurate. For example, the felony murder rule imposes the guilt of first-degree murder on anyone who is part of the felony where a life is taken by someone else,

He gave the example that a person who drove a getaway car from a scene of a crime where a murder had taken place could be charged with first-degree murder.

Wanger said that juries may be hesitant to convict a criminal if the punishment is death.

He cited a Harris poll taken in 1973 which showed that one-third of the people interviewed were not sure they could vote to convict even if guilt was clear if the defendant was to be Kandler said that political pressure needs to be exerted to help get bills out of committee.

Rodger Winthrop, spokesperson PIRGIM, believes that the bill is a good idea and the needed support may be forthcoming this term to get it passed.

"Personally, it sounds like a good bill," he said, "but when the two opposing sides start going at it, things start to change and a lot of trade-offs are made. Any time legislation is introduced which promotes the rights of tenants, I'm pleased.

Ellen Moore, vice president of the Michigan Property Owners Association, has her doubts about the workability of the bill, however, and said complaints have already been voiced by some landlords.

"We've had two or three calls from rental property owners already asking what the bill would mean," she said. "The real problems will lie in student housing situations, especially those around East Lansing.

"It wouldn't affect me because we rent in the city of Lansing, and the property may be rented to other types of tenants," Moore said. "But around campuses, most people already have housing and have signed leases at the beginning of a school year after that, it's hard to find anyone else to

WOULD REQUIRE $439 MILLION

Bill to aid overcrowding

Following is the second article in a State News series examining overcrowding in the state's prisons and what is being done to relieve the situation.

By JANET R. OLSEN State News Staff Writer

A bill introduced in the Michigan House of Representatives in January could drastically aid the problem of inmate overcrowding in the state's correctional facilities; and it would do so to the tune of $439 million over a 20-year period. House Bill 4047, sponsored by Rep. Paul A. Rosenbaum, D-Battle Creek, chairperson of the House Judiciary Committee, would authorize the state to sell general obligation bonds worth $439 million to build new correctional facilties and to make improvements on old ones, provided the voters approve this measure at the general election in November 1978.

The state's correctional facilities have been facing an increase in inmate population since 1973 - an increase that has resulted in inmates sleeping on bunk beds at the end of cell blocks, in hallways, in TV rooms, in classrooms and in gymnasium areas. Large prisons, county jails and minimum security facilities, such as halfway houses, are all facing a shortage of space.
A record 8,000 prisoners are expected to be placed in Michigan prisons in 1977, as compared to the 6,600 inmates who were admitted during 1976. The increase has been attributed to stepped-up action in Detroit's Recorder's Court and the enactment on Jan. 1 of a mandatory two-year sentence for criminals using handguns. Rosenbaum's proposal breaks down into three basic components. First, $100 million would be used to add 2.000 beds to the current prison facilities to house an estimated 14,000 persons in the prison system. The Michigan Department of Corrections has estimated that the prison inmate population will stabilize at 14,000 in the foreseeable future.

Second, $187,250,000 will be used to bring the facilities at 11 existing institutions into conformity with the current correctional standards. Third, $152 million will be used to provide bed space for persons convicted of assaultive felonies and criminal sexual The total per-year costs to each Michigan programs stipulated in Rosenbaum's bill would be $19.22. Rosenbaum said that if the bond question passed by voters in the general election, the state would immediately begin building new prisons and improving older facilities. Rosenbaum said he had visited the state prison in Jackson on Tuesday and that the overcrowding situation in that prison alone is "very, very critical."

"We simply don't have enough places to put people now," he said. "The prisons are totally overloaded."

Sen. Kerry Krammer, D-Pontiac, said he strongly supports the bonding proposal for Michigan prisons.

"It's something that must be faced," he said. "Many of our institutions are outdated, anyway."

In February, Krammer introduced legislation to restrict the process by which a convicted criminal can accumulate "good time" in order to shorten his prison term. The bill applies to prisoners serving time for violent crimes in which they were carrying a gun.

Krammer said his bill, if passed, would probably cause the prison population to increase, but he added that an increase "is the price you have to pay for the public's

"The reflex action is to say 'let's keep violent criminals behind bars,' " he said, but we also must make sure there's bars to

The outcome of the overcrowding situation could also be greatly influenced by the final ruling of a court case which is scheduled to begin with oral arguments in the Michigan Court of Appeals Monday.
The suit was originally filed July 15, 1976, in Ingham County Circuit Court by MSU associate professor Zolton Ferency on behalf of the Human Rights party (HRP). The suit sought a declaratory ruling that the department of corrections adopt a policy of refusing to accept additional prisoners until the prison population had been reduced to "proper constitutional limits and standards."

The Circuit Court upheld the position of the HRP and said that if the case were not appealed, it would take further action, (continued on page 9)

'U' to get parking fine revenue

By SEAN HICKEY State News Staff Writer

The establishment of a campus parking violations bureau, to take effect this July 1, will generate revenues for the University of almost $150,000 a year, said Elliot Ballard, assistant to the

"If past experience is any sort of a guide and after excluding the costs to set up the bureau, we expect to net about $150,000 a year,"

Previously, fines collected for parking violations under University ordinances were collected by either the East Lansing or Mason District Court, depending on the court jurisdiction in which the violation occurred.

With the new campus bureau, these fines will be directed to the University rather than Ingham County or East Lansing.

Enforcement for vehicles registered under the Student Motor Vehicle Regulations is already carried out internally by the University and any revenues from the fines for these violations is directed into the Law Enforcement Student Loan Fund. 'All the ordinance does is to remove the function of accepting guilty pleas from the East Lansing and Mason courts and puts it under campus jurisdiction," Ballard said. "All we'll be authorized to do is accept guilty pleas."

Parking violators who do not plead guilty will still go to the appropriate District Court for contested cases to appeal the ticket, According to a state law passed in 1967, public universities and institutions are allowed to establish their own violations bureaus for the purpose of collecting guilty pleas. The bureau was previously recommended by the Department of Public Safety (DPS) and most recently by the Michigan Efficiency Task for Higher Education. Ballard said the funds would be reserved for campus improvements which he said are presently underfunded. The potential uses for these funds include access to campus facilities. campus lighting, bicycle paths, fire safety and other improvements. Ballard said that East Lansing and Ingham County officials would more than likely be upset with losing these parking fine revenues

"This is something that is authorized by state law. Recently other institutions have been doing it, too," Ballard said.

Wayne Cook, manager of the Union Barbershop, works on a customer's coiffure.

Despite trends in hair fashions, MSU barbershop changes little

By MICHAEL SAVEL State News Staff Writer

Over the 29 years since the Union Barbershop opened, the physical appearance has changed little. The six original brown barber chairs, pale green walls and tiled floor remain the same

Two of the three barbers have both been cutting hair in the basement of the Union for about 22 years. The price of haircuts has gone up from the original $1.50 to $4.50 and the sign in the window offers styling and Afro haircuts instead of crewcuts and flat tops, which were the "in things" in the fifties. Back then there were eight full-time barbers when it was almost mandatory to get a haircut every month or so to keep hair off collars. Today there are only three barbers and the number of chairs has been reduced from eight to six. The only addition is a partition added in the back for private styling so customers are not visible when sitting under the dryers.

The barbershop retains the air of an old-fashioned shop complete with the red, white and blue-striped pole on the outside. It is in sharp contrast to today's unisex style shops that blare rock music from elaborate sound systems and offer all the comforts of the good life.

Wayne Cook, manager of the shop, has been cutting hair there since 1955. He has observed the changes in attitudes from the carefree fifties to the radical sixties to the bread-and-butter

In the fifties, when MSU athletic teams had respectable records, that was the main concern of the students, along with getting around ways to evade the dormitory restrictions and no smoking" regulations on campus. "Just about everyone that came in talked about our championship basketball team," Cook said. "In the sixties not many came in, but the ones that did only talked about how they were against everything. And now the conversation is mainly about bread-and-butter things like getting out of school and settling down to work."

Cook praised students today for taking better care of their hair and being cleaner.

"The first radical that came in here was a pretty seedy character," Cook said. "He would come in and talk about overthrowing the authorities. His hair was filthy and I couldn't even get a comb through it.

"At least today most of the students' hair is washed and combed, and even though it is styled to their own preferences, it is being cut shorter," he said.

In the fifties there were dress regulations in the dormitories for dinner, and eigaret smoking was prohibited on campus.

"They were dressed better then because of the regulations and they were cleaner," he said. "I can remember students gathering on the corner at Grand River to smoke before class because in those days it was against the regulations. 'In the fifties the typical student was always dressed properly and followed the rules and regulations. Even if I wore the clothes I wear today on campus back then, the cops would the attitude changes across campus

"The returning vets didn't like all the campus regulations and that was when the big moves started off campus," he said. "The sixties' radicalism took a long time to build up and ended with the Vietnam demonstrations where they were jumping up and down and trying to burn buildings down."

Amin's reign of terror must be opposed

"He seized power in January 1971 to survive. He has killed ever since for the same reason." Thus the reasoning behind Ugandan President Idi Amin's reign of terror as told by British journalist David Martin, and Amin has indeed shown this to be true.

Since the successful coup that ousted former Ugandan leader Milton Obote, Amin has ruled his country with an iron fist. He has used extremely ruthless tactics in quelling possible coups, and has shown a strong desire to make Uganda a country to be reckoned with in the future.

Amin has declared himself president for life, a quest that appears unstoppable in light of the numerous injustices and atrocities he has committed against his own people and others.

Published accounts offer substantial evidence for such a conclusion:

•In November 1974, Amin ordered several British diplomats death. out of Uganda after a British been unsuccessful plots to assassinate Amin;

•Amin ordered the firing squad execution of a British subject after about Amin in a book;

•During the Entebbe Airport incident in July 1976, Amin allowed his country to become a minor battlefield between Israel and pro-Palestinians at the expense of his own people;

•Ugandan troops killed five students, wounded dozens more and arrested about 700 students in July 1976 at Makere University in the capital of Uganda after Amin's son had complained that his classmates had snubbed and threatened him;

•Also in July at the university, Amin's troops reportedly killed more than 100 students and arrested another 500 to 700 more after half the student body protested the government's failure to meet student grievances;

On Feb. 28, 1977, the family of a freelance journalist who was slain by Ugandan troops nearly six years ago stated that they believed Amin had marked him for

Other deaths that have occurred newspaper reported there had in Uganda remain shrouded with mystery though many observers claim that Amin was responsible.

•Dora Bloch, who held dual British and Israeli citizenship, was he made derogatory statements reported hospitalized during the Entebbe raid when other hostages were rescued. Amin never explained her disappearance. One Ugandan who fled to Kenya said he had seen the half-burned body of Bloch in a forest near the capital etty.

The deaths of an Anglican archbishop and two government ministers in February 1977 are still unsolved.

Most recently, Americans were given cause for alarm with Amin's order that U.S. citizens in Uganda assemble for a meeting at Entebbe and that no Americans could leave the country. Though Ar rescinded his order barring parture, his actions cannot s our uneasiness.

Amin is a petty tyrant thrives on publicity. Militarily, United States will and ought ignore him as long as he does violate the life and liberty Americans in Uganda, But Ar richly deserves the scorn censure of the community nations — both black and white for the havoc he tries daily wreak upon the world and upon own people.

LETTIERS To the Editor

'Waffling'

In an editorial on Feb. 21 entitled "The Wharton Shuffle" it is stated in the second paragraph, "...Wharton has continued his grand tradition of sidestepping and waffling the issues at hand." My dictionary defines waffle as "A crisp batter cake. . .'
Substituting this in your article,

. .tradition of sidestepping and crisp batter cake(ing). . ." Apparently the State News has some other meaning for waffling. would you enlighten us?

Robert A. Langkawel 1307-H University Village

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Waffling" is a term widely used by the American media when a reon (neuelly politicians) refuses to take a stand on an issue. "Crisp batter cakes" seem to be a major part of Wharton's daily

Gratitude

As a student at MSU, I wish to express gratitude to the State News for its coverage on Feb. 27 of the "Breakthru 77" employment job fair held in the Student Services Building. It gave female students excellent opportunities to meet with various company representatives and sign up for job interviews. The job fair was also a chance to become aware of the variety of people associated with different aspects of seeking employment.

I never had the experience of meeting personally with people of whom I may in the future be working for. I obtained information about the types of jobs that will be available, their locations and even how much the job pays. The most important benefit for me was bringing in resumes and actually communicating with employers who had first-hand information about their company to answer questions.

Another benefit was that the job fair was designed especially to help female students to get jobs when they graduate. This is an asset to women because they don't usually have the same chances of getting equal employment as men. I hope that there will be more job fairs for women that will be as successful as "Breakthru 77" at MSU.

'I remember...'

I would like to take time out to thank the University for its responsible and economi cally sound method in determining class scheduling and credits per hour. In these days of ever increasing inflation, it is good to know there are still some fine bargains to be found on college campuses.

I'll never forget my father telling me of how a triple scoop of ice cream cost a nickel, bubble gum could be bought for a penny and many other tantalizing bargains of yesteryear. Well Dad, I have got an exceptional winner of an economic deal for you. The deals are in two areas, the first concerning Microbiology 429. Can you imagine my ecstasy at finding out that for the price of five credits I can receive a full 10 hours of assigned class time? My second unbelievable find deals with Organic Chemistry labs in the 240 series. I cannot begin to express my enjoyment at being able to spend three full hours in a lab with a teaching assistant who speaks fluent broken English. Then I return home faced with the enviable task of writing up these labors of love. I am truly moved by these most generous attempts by the University to help the ever poor college students by giving them more than they

Minority aides

Many of the minority students at this predominately white University would be lost socially as well as educationally if it were not for the help of minority aides. More people should be aware of what this program is all about and why it is so

Minority aides get first-hand information about University affairs that may be of great importance to the minority students. The aides pass on this information that the student may not have received or would have overlooked otherwise.

The role of the minority aide is not to segregate the minority students from the majority white students, but to make sure the minority students are never at a disadvantage. This is one way to bridge the gap that exists between students of different cultures and backgrounds and help students understand each other better. This will ultimately lead to a better atmosphere on campus.

Minority aides are not just there when as a personal friend when you just need someone to talk to. A student can go to their minority aide at any time and they will be more than willing to help, no matter what the problem.

I am a minority student and I feel justified in saying that the minority aides program is beneficial and worth recognition. The minority aides program has made my freshman year a lot more tolerable and should be continued at MSU.

Input needed

For the past 11 years, Justin Morrill College (JMC) has provided a vital alternative to "traditional" education for exceptional students who have sought more responsibility for their education. The flexibility of the field of concentration and field study requirements in JMC allows students to design unique programs hest suited to their individual needs and interests. The achievements of JMC alumni in graduate and professional schools, in business and in the arts, demonstrate the viability of these programs as well as their practical applications.

Part of JMC's success is due to the active participation of students in its governing process. The growth and harmony of any institution is enhanced by input from all its members. Students can make valuable contributions to a college; the present Life of Inquiry program in JMC was developed with much help from students.

We are presently concerned that student input is not as welcome as it once was. We feel that our contributions are still important. Although we understand the state of the college is tentative and that the future is yet unclear, we feel that better communication and more information on the issues would enrich our participation. We believe that student input into the new direction of the college is valuable and warranted.

Students in JMC do care and are interested in the future of the college. JMC Student Caucus JMC academic assistants

Support movement

Recently, a representative of the West German government publicly acknowledged the deplorable fact that since 1959, West Germany has actively co-operated with SAVAK, the secret police of Iran, in an attempt to undermine the activity of Iranian students in West Germany, which is aimed at exposing the fascist regime of the Shah of Iran and lending support to the resistance movement

This alliance has resulted in the outlawing of all public demonstrations sponsored by the World Confederation of Iranian Students, house searches of confederation members and various forms of provocation and pressure. Further, the West German representative admitted that under certain conditions, names of Iranian students will be provided for SAVAK despite the knowledge that the fate of these students will almost certainly be arrest, imprisonment and brutal torture.

Advertising Manager

This public admission has now added West Germany to the list of Western nations who collaborate with a regime that has been condemned throughout the world and has been characterized as one of the most repressive and inhumane governments to emerge in modern human history. Consequently, the repression of Iranian students in West Germany is not an isolated case. Here in the United States the cooperations between SAVAK and the U.S. government has been exposed both in Senate subcomittee hearings and in an interview with the Shah on CBS television This was well manifested last fall in Houston, Tex., when peacefully dem strating Iranian students were attacked. beaten and arrested.

Clearly, then, the Shah's repressive rule has been extended into this country's boundaries, and, as disclosed during Senate hearings, is occurring with the consent and aid of the U.S. government. Despite this repression we will continue to expose and denounce the Shah and his fascist government, and with each repressive action taken against us, whether here or in Europe, we ecome ever more determined to continue in our struggle. In this context we appeal to the American people for their support. In particular, we ask that Americans contact their congressional representatives, demanding that SAVAK agents and informers be expelled from the U.S. We also ask that concerned Americans send letters and telegrams to the West German embassy denouncing the West German-Iranian

Amy - reading at state dinner

WASHINGTON - To show you what a crazy town this is, President Jimmy Carter just presented his new budget to Congress and it provides for a $59 billion deficit. Hardly anyone raised an eyebrow. But when people in Washington read that Amy Carter had attended a state dinner for Prime Minister Trudeau, and read a book between courses, everyone went into a frenzy.

The capital is now divided between those who think it's outrageous to allow a 9-year-old child to read books at a state dinner, and those who believe if you get a kid to read these days, let her do it anywhere she

I'm on Amv's side. I haven't attended many state dinners in Washington, but there are many times I wish I had a book to read at the dinner table. There have even been embassy dinners where I wouldn't have minded perusing Hustler magazine.

But the anti-Amy reading people argue that the President's da is setting a bad example for children

One mother told me: "If she wants to read, why don't they feed her in the kitchen?"

Another said: "My daughter now brings her homework to the table. I told her it was forbidden and she replied, 'Amy can read at the table,' and I told her, 'When we have the Trudeaus over for dinner you can

ART BUCHWALD

I believe that most people are overreacting to Amy sticking her nose in a book between courses. I also am quite certain the Carters know what they're doing.

Every time a head of state comes to Washington he is testing the new President. He wants to see how far he can push Carter. The President is too smart to admit he knows what the head of state is doing, and he's too much of a political animal to react to the testing directly.

So he invites Amy to attend his state dinners. While the head of the state is trying to get down to business he keeps glancing at the President's 9-year-old daughter with her nose stuck in a book. It's very disconcerting and throws the prime minister completely off balance. Even Brezhnev would have a tough time making a point for the Soviet Union to President Carter with Amy sitting at the table reading "The Mystery of the Black Lake with Nancy Drew."

have another theory. And that Amy isn't really reading, but listening to everything everyone at the table is saying. After dinner her father and members of the CIA go w to her bedroom and debrief her. People will say anything that comes to their heads when they see a child reading, and Amy may be providing the President with some of his most vital national security intelligence.

I, for one, don't buy this. I believe that Amy has decided that most state dinners are a waste of time and the parents make her attend them used duress, she's going to use the open tunity to catch up on books that she been wanting to pad for wars her been wanting to read for years, but which weren't available to her is Plains, Ga.

My wife, who is a literary agent has even come up with an idea that could make the both of us wealthy She wants to start an "Amy Boo of-the-Meal Club." People would be asked to subscribe to the club and would receive a book a meal which would be selected by Amy. Ther would be an alternate book selection for milk and crackers after school you purchased a week's supply of books for mealtime reading, you would get a free book for Su brunch.

After all the publicity about Amy reading habits at state dinners m wife feels a "Book of the Meal Club" is an idea whose time has come.

course in an adversary process, parties may in good faith disagree as to the level of a utility's revenue deficiency, but there is no responsible advocate who can argue that a utility should not be allowed to increase rates so as to compensate it for losses which were not the result of imprudent managerial decisions.

Utility rate decisions are only made after a public hearing that has been duly noticed. Any affected person is allowed to participate in the quasi-judicial administrative hearing and the decisions of the commission are appealable to Circuit Court. It is interesting to note that when decisions have been appealed to the Circuit Court and the court has altered the rates approved by the commission, the result has, more often than not, been an increase in the rates previously approved by the PSC.

Furthermore, if the authors of the editorial had read any of the recent rate decisions of the commission, they would have noticed that the PSC has allowed millions less than has been requested by utilities and in one recent decision (General Telephone) authorized a rate decrease.

The PSC has a national reputation for being one of the most conscientious and demanding regulators of utilities. In fact, contrary to the State News belief that the PSC is soft on utilities, Wall Street consistently criticizes the commission for creating a poor regulatory climate for utilities, that is, one in which profits are not maximized.

Regarding the PSC's concern for the utility customer, it should be remembered that the commission proposed on its own initiative the so-called "Bill of Rights" for utility customers

The commission's entire staff, the Consumer Services Division, has been devoted to the implementation of the Consumers' Bill of Rights and has been delegated the responsibility of acting as the intermediary between utilities and customers who believe they have been the victims of unfair or illegal treatment on the part of the utilities. It is very easy to single out for criticism a regulatory agen-cy that acts on a regulated entity's rate requests, especially when the results of its decisions are felt where it hurts most - in the pocketbook. It is very easy to devise a theory of conspiracy as a way of explaining the reason why rate relief is granted to a utility. It is easy to characterize the regulator as the party that is really being regulated or manipulated. At the least, I must say that such hypotheses are based on incorrect assumptions. In a viewpoint published by the State News on Feb. 10, I claimed that the Brazilian government was a fascistic dictatorship and tortured political prisoners as a matter of public policy. I also suggested the need for a public dialog on the desirability of MSU's large-scale involvement in that country.

Who says that there is nothing but apathy on the campus? Here is a count of public expression on the Brazil Project within only the last two and a half weeks: the State News has published two news stories and two editorials; two viewpoints have been written (Dolores Wharton and C. Patric Larrowe); six persons have written either supportive or critical letters to the editor; and three professors (Zolton Ferency, James McKee and John Henderson) have disassociated themselves publicly from Brazil Project at a meeting of the Academic Council. Clearly, the days of wine and roses are over for the Brazil Project at MSU.

VIEWPOINT: BRAZIL

The economics of a ripoff

So many issues have been raised by this project, in fact, that a further attempt to resolve some of the controversy must be selective. Probably, the core of the issue is whether MSU can do any good in Brazil. Those who defend the project argue that our involvement will modernize the agricultural industry and thereby raise the level of living for the Brazilian rural population. Some even believe that our presence will help to liberalize and sensitize the

But none of this will come to pass because of the goals and economic policy of the "aristocracy wearing uniforms." Briefly stated, the goal of the military is to achieve super-power status for Brazil, while their basic strategy for this purpose is the accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few. In the words of Brazilian Sen. Jose Sarnei, to develop is to concentrate.

American multinationals are principal instruments of this strategy. Encouraged by tax exemption, cheap labor and controlled unions, they import their high technology, employ relatively few workers because of their capital intensity and only produce products (e.g. refrigerators and automobiles) for the rich and for export.

Who comes out on ton in this game? Principally, the 5 per cent of the population that is rich and the multinationals; even the 15 per cent of the population that is middle class have received increases in their real income that are significantly below productivity increases, while the 80 percent of the population that is poor is completely left out of this so-called economic miracle.

In fact, the rural poor have become even worse off, for land reform really means modernizing the haciendas for export purposes with the result that plantation workers are displaced through mechanization. This has caused a massive and uncontrolled rural exodus to the cities, where the peasants have become unemployed and live in squalor.

Even the Indians are not spared. As the multinationals have moved into the Amazon, the Indians have been robbed of their property, and even have been dynamited from the air. Genocide has become part of growth Brazilian-style.

With such massive exploitation, it is only to be expected that repression is necessary, a denial of human rights is general and torture (even of children) is endemic. Even the Archbishop of Recife, Dom Helder Camara, must live in the underground. If he surfaced, he would be arrested for helping the poor.

And what is MSU's role in all of this? Our degrees of freedom are no greater than in Park's South Korea or in the Shah's Iran. We must conform to the economic and political model. But it is even worse than this. We are training the agri-business technicians that will make the exploitative system in Brazil even more efficient.

Think about that, shortand long-run consultants, on your next jet trip to Rio and Sao Paulo.

Divers spring into Big Ten

By MATTHEW GRYZAN State News Sports Writer

Three MSU tankers will spearhead an effort to sink a flotilla of teams at the Big Ten meet held here today thru Saturday. Dave Burgering, Jesse Griffin and Marc Steiner will attempt to keep their undefeated season in diving intact and thus provide a core of points for the Spartans.

Diving coach John Narcy said that this year's competition in the Big Ten is really tough. He said some of the real contenders in the meet will include Ohio State, Indiana, Wisconsin

Defending champion Indiana features Olympian sprint star Jim Montgomery, who won the 50-, 100- and 200-yard freestyle races in the 1976 Big Ten meet. Michigan will be a contender with Gordon Downie in the butterfly and Wisconsin brings Chris Woo.

The Hoosiers have won the conference meet 16 consecutive times and are heavily favored to do it again. Preliminaries for the meet get underway at 1 p.m. today and Friday and noon on Saturday at the Men's IM Building. The final events all three days start at 7:30 p.m. Admission to the preliminary events is $1 with the finals costing $2 for the general public. Students will be charged $1.

But Narcy said the MSU trio hopes to recreate its magnificent performance over U-M where it slammed the Wolverines, 16-2, in diving. The Spartans polished off U-M in that dual meet, 63-60, to finish their season with a 7-2 record. Narcy gave two advantages the Spartan divers possess

"We will have a hair of an advantage in the Big Ten meet," Narcy said, "because we are the home team."

"And we have talent," he said with a gleam in his eye, "mixed with one hell of a lot of hard work. This is the best diving team I've ever had.'

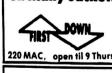

Narcy said he was pleased with the performance of the diving team but stressed that is Burgering began his brilliant career at MSU. "One reason for coming to MSU was the scholarship, but I did have several other offers from different schools. The main reason was that I knew the program and the coaches," Burgering said. Burgering has topped off this year with an undefeated record of 9-0 on the low boards and five firsts and one second on the three-meter board.

His bread-and-butter dive is the forward three-and-a-half somersault, which has a high degree of difficulty. He said he would like to stay around the Lansing area and use his degree in physical paring for the Olympics.

Griffin has known Burgering since grade school and has competed with him at Lansing Sexton High School.

He captured the state championship in diving while he was a senior at Sexton and then began to be recruited heavily

"I was kind of a product of an MSU graduate, Jim Henderson, and the Spartan Swim Club. When it came to picking a college, it was between MSU and U.M. but I just liked the staff at MSU better," Griffin

Griffin, a junior in physical education, ended the season with three thirds and four seconds on the low board and a pair of firsts and four seconds on the three-meter board.

"My real point getting dive is a front two-and-a-half somersault with a full twist," Griffin

One problem Narcy pointed out that would give the Spartans trouble after the Big Ten meet is time on the road before the nationals. He said they would be on the road for five consecutive weeks.

Street closure Viking expert to present talk to be continued

East Lansing City Council voted Tuesday night to continue the closure of Grove Street for an additional six months and approved a realignment of several voter precincts.

Following a hearing on the extension of Cornbrook Road in northwest East Lansing, attended by about 80 city residents, council took care of some routine business.

The closure of Grove Street, which has been in effect since August, was supported by several citizens and the city transportation commission. No objections were voiced.

The closure is a pilot project organized by Councilmember John Czarnecki in an attempt to keep traffic away from residential

The street is blocked off by a tree planter, and the area will be landscaped if the closure becomes permanent. Council will review the matter in another six months to decide whether to keep traffic out of the area.

Council gave quick and unanimous approval to the city clerk's revised election precincts.

Candidates seek more effective board

By ANNE S. CROWLEY State News Staff Writer

There are seven nonslate candidates running for ASMSU Student Board president and they all want to make ASMSU more effective, but each has his own approach to the problems.

Kirk Weber, a junior in James Madison College and psychology, said he hopes to make ASMSU an effective body by lobbying for student rights in the governmental units rather than with the University administration.

"This is where policy can be changed, not by passing petitions or sitting in on trustee meetings, but by lobbying and pressing for improvements through a more powerful political body," Weber

He added that he supports a campuswide escort system, repeal of the University housing requirement for freshmen, easier release from housing contracts, revision of the definition of in-state and independent student status and state financing of MSU.

Patrick Johnson, a junior in business administration, said ASMSU should get back to business and work with the University rather than against it.

Johnson declined further comment Elliot Nadel, a junior in financial administration, said he is a candidate of synthesis and plans to use all the good ideas he hears during the campaign if elected.

Winners who take office with a set program tend to believe they have a mandate from the voters for their programs at the expense of everything else said in the campaign, he said.

"All of the candidates have good ideas and there's no reason not to use them except that I didn't think of them." he said. Peter B. Coughlan, a junior in criminal justice, said he thought he was the only populist running for Student Board president and that he wants to improve the quality of education at MSU and the society its students live in. To improve the education MSU offers, Coughlan suggested developing a cooperative program of education which would use the students' expertise "for the community's good," emphasizing understanding of oneself and the world in education and preventing a style of education which stereotypes.

Coughlan also suggested giving the students free farm land from the University to grow food for the community and for the hungry of the world.

Michael Conlin, a junior in psychology, said students will be more intersted in ASMSU if it represented them better. The problem is perpetuated by a two-way lack of communication, Conlin said.

Because of the lack, the Student Board does not represent the students' interests, Conlin said.

ASMSU must deal with a diversity of issues to involve the entire student body and then make itself more available and visible to its constituency, he explained.

Charlie Crumm, a junior in elementary education, said he is running because ASMSU has not fulfilled its function.

Crumm said he would like to see more communication between the students and the Student Board, perhaps with a committee for each college or department advising its representative and with the representatives themselves circulating among the students

While attending Oakland Community College fall term, (he attended MSU the two previous years) Crumm was che student government president, student representative to the Oakland Board of Trustees and student  $_{\mbox{\scriptsize member of the}}$  president's advisory committee.

Larry Ramsey, a sophomore in Justin Morrill College, ASMSU must be a diverse body to unify the students' many what and opinions and apply them to "make our college days best "I think the best thing ASMSU can do is restore pridy integrity to the board," Ramsey said. "The board should be a where people can bring ideas and see them turned into really," ASMSU board should show confidence and optimism in the

To All Undergraduate Students:

A University-Wide Referendum, to be voted on during Spring Term Registration, will determine whether or not MSU students want The Michigan State Radio Network to pursue an FM Broadcasting License. This license would insure student-oriented radio programming, free of commercial interruption to all members of the MSII commercial interruption to all members of the MSU

The referendum does not guarantee FM broadcast from any of the Network's affiliate stations (WMSN, WBRS, WMCD) at community. this time. However, with its passage, the Network has the authorization to pursue the FM situation to its fullest

The obvious question is "How much will an FM station cost With the passage of this referendum the Network would have the authority to assess each undergraduate student at MSU $1.00 per term. If you are living on-campus you are already paying this assessment; the FM benefit would cost you no more.

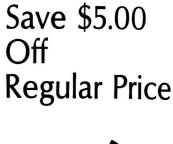

In order to continue to fully serve the needs of the Michigan State student community The Michigan State Radio Network feels it cannot stand still on this matter any longer. We ask your support with a "YES" vote on the FM Referendum during registration this Spring Term.

Gil Scott-Heron laced his music with doses of social ommentary as the Midnight Band sailed into Afro-

Scott-Heron, Midnight Band tantalize with excellent music

By JOHN CASEY State News Reviewe

From the wings of the Fairchild Theatre on Tuesday night, a tall, lanky figure emerged with an infectious smile and a cool demeanor. Articulate and soft-spoken, he began to rap. Proclaiming the "communication" through "360 degrees of rhythm," this imposing person launched into a primer of ghetto code and how it was resurfaced into style once again. Dot, dot, diddy; dot, dot,

He couldn't understand the hypocrisy of English language. The alphabet begins with "a" for alpha, the beginning; the letter "q" is the omega, the end, but "what about the last nine letters?" he wondered. Dot, dot, diddy; dot, dot, dash.

What about the months of the year? September, literally translated, means seven, but it is the ninth month. The last month of the year derives from 10, but it is really the twelfth. Dot. dot, iddy; dot, dot, dash. Gil Scott-Heron could have "communicated" like that all night and gotten away with it, but his message is in his music and his music is excitingly dynamic in presentation and content. Along with the multitalented Brian Jackson and a kinetic assembly of adept musicians comprising the rest of the Midnight Band, Scott-Heron blew the audience members out of their seats in a supreme performance. He was enlightening as well as amusing.

Scott-Heron and the Midnight Band sailed into a samba-rhythm beat and African percussion driven opening, showcasing two black nationalist anthems — "Jo'burg" and "Liberation Song (Red, Green and Black)." Members of the band danced around the stage with traditional African instruments, pounding out a mesmerizing flow of percussion. The feeling was intense as the band cooked up a tantilizing blend of funk (no, not disco, thank you) and soul.

Scott-Heron's voice is magnetic in its appeal, reminiscent of a younger Lou Rawls. Introducing a song dedicated to the giant of jazz, John Coltrane, Scott-Heron's delicate interpretation of "Tomorrow's Trane" was sweetly interwoven with Bilal Sunni-Ali's tenor sax, which vividly evoked the memory of Retiring to the side of the stage, Scott-Heron let his friend and fellow musician of the past seven years — Victor Brown — take over the spotlight as he alternated moods in the song from the second Arista album, "From South Africa To South Carolina." The song "Beginnings" seemed custom-made for Brown's smooth "Ain't No Such Thing As Superman" is a perfect song for Scott-Heron; he is mild-mannered, but certainly does not have a "cape on his back or an 'S' on the front," because he knows it is impossible for one man to change social wrongs. With his music, though, he gets people thinking. Listen to the words of "It's Your World" and you will realize how much a realist Scott-Heron is.

keeping a low profile, but he anchored the pace of the concert better than anyone on the Fairchild stage. He arranges and composes a majority of the songs, and adds a fine texture with his

For the eerie "Winter in America," Jackson came out from behind his keyboards and led the band with his exquisite ilute playing. Accompanied by Sunni-Ali on second flute and Delbert Taylor on trumpet, Jackson provided the mellow underlining for Scott-Heron's piercing vocal. The contrast of the biting lyrics with the soothing melody was striking.

Scott-Heron paid tribute to "old turf" as he focused on the people who robbed New York City and left the innocent to fend for themselves in the sad tale called "New York City, I Don't Know Why I Love You."

The last half-hour of the two-hour concert was a highly-charged, electrical ecstasy called "The Bottle." As Scott-Heron's volatile vocal filled the auditorium, the entire Midnight Band took turns exciting the audience with musical abandon on various instru-

Scott-Heron calls it "gua-gua-gua-co rhythm" but it is not unlike the hot salsa beat. The band churned out the neavy Latin sound and the crowd responded accordingly.

With emphasis on timbales and congas, the band whipped the audience into a frenzy until they were breathless.

energy, charm and conviction by Stallone) is a slow-witted, endearing lug, a second rate Philadelphia boxer self-billed as the "Italian Stallion," When he isn't boxing or working out at Mickey's gym or trying to make time with shy, seemingly plain Adrian (beautifully portrayed by Talia Shire), the sister of his ddy Paulie (earthily acted by Burt Young), he is feeding his two turtles, "Cuff" and "Link." But the Rock is aging. Bouts are few and getting further apart. To make ends meet, he gently shakes down deadbeats for a local loan shark (Joe Spinell). Suddenly - somewhat in the rapid, random, rags-to-riches manner which once was so typical and satisfying in Hollywood movies - the heavyweight champion, a fellow with the marvelous name of Apollo Creed (well played by former Oakland Raider Carl Weathers), needs a ringer to fight at a special Bicentennial Championship bout to be mounted in Philadelphia. While leafing through a mug book of local boxers, Creed spies the photo of an unknown who calls him self the "Italian Stallion." The odd nickname and the vague allusion to Columbus appeals to the Champ, and Rocky is on his Few believe Creed's handpicked patsy is a serious threat to his crown, but they reckon without Rocky's persistence and perseverance. Under the gnarled, cantankerous management of gym-owner Mickey (Burgess Meredith, in a great character turn), Rocky trains arduously, and by the time the fight arrives, he is prepared.

The story may be a wishful populist fantasy, but most of it works. The love story is feelingly realized - Talia Shire seems to slowly blossom over the course of the narrative, and Stallone embodies somewhat a gentle gallantry not seen very much any more.

The boxing and training sequences are exhilaratingly realized. The fight action is powerful, painstakingly chore ographed (by Stallone) and brilliantly edited (by Richard Halsey and Scott Conrad) Visually, the film is striking,

Avildsen is served well by his primary cameraman, James Crabe, and a special photographic consultant named Garrett Brown utilizes a newly developed camera gyro mount the "steadicam," which gives a thrilling fluidity to the ex tensive hand-held camera work of the action sequences.

Avildsen here finally fulfills the promise inherent in his earlier "Joe" and "Cry Uncle." "Rocky" is the most mature and sustained work of his career.

Despite the burden of a ridiculously small budget ($980,000 which is small change in Hollywood these days), he has directed Stallone's script with great skill and a tough, streetwise tone, Avildsen also displays a particular finesse in working with his actors. The performances are sterling.

The United Artists release is

Cheering for the hero in all of us...

By BILL BRIENZA State News Reviewer

Sylvester Stallone as "Rocky" is the biggest "little you'll ever see. The brawny Stallone's portrait of a hulking prizefighter celebrates his status as a self-proclaimed "nobody," one of the many "little people," who suddenly, incredibly, gets the chance to be a "somebody" - a real hero.

"Rocky" re-establishes the classic "Cinderella" myth. Given a shot at the heavyweight title by champion Apollo Creed (obviously modeled after Muhammed Ali) for no reason other than to huckster the fight, - the man turns it into a crusade for self-respect, recognition and the first real identity

For Rocky, the goal is appealhas no chance to win - he will satisfy himself if he can "go the distance" with the champ. No one has ever been standing at the end of a fight with Creed.

Stallone's life almost seems to have imitated his art. His success was against all odds and on his own terms. He struggled to have the script he wrote presented to the public in the way he envisioned it, no compromises. That is, with Stallone himself in the title

The studios in Hollywood liked his writing, but none could see him as Rocky. So, rather than sell his script and be sure of having it turned into a major film. Stallone held out. United Artists gave in and Stallone scripted a film which seems to be the leading candidate for this year's Academy Award and box-office successes. He risked a lot and scored a smashing triumph.

Stallone, like Rocky, against the odds, "went the distance" and stayed on his feet. But Rocky could only go the dis-tance in one way — the ring. tance in one way Stallone didn't have to take his risks. As a writer, he is an Apollo Creed - talented and polished in a superior league, no underdog.

Stallone's script has been overshadowed by his acting. Good as his portrayal of Rocky is (he IS Rocky...who else could the studios have imagined doing a better job?), Stallone is only fleshing out the classic character that he himself had

The dialog sparkles with a life and charm missing for too long from Hollywood. Through it, Rocky is superbly defined.

Watching TV with Rocky, a bartender sees Creed and starts criticizing. Rocky says, "He took his best shot and he's the champ. Who are you to say anything about him? What shot you ever take?"

An old trainer, who wants to be Rocky's manager to prepare him for Creed, tells him sad stories about how his life has faded from the '20's when he was a contender in his "prime." At least you had a prime..., Rocky says. "I never had no

Mercury poisoning can kill. It shortens lives and damages the brain and the rest of the central nervous system, resulting in retardation, paralysis and a host of other symptoms. It is especially vicious to unborn

The Canadian government has done little.

The D'itris' involvement began in 1971 when Frank D'itri. an assistant professor of water chemistry, was asked to write an extended bibliography on mercury pollution for the Michigan House of Representatives. was then that he decided there was a need for a book on mercury as a worldwide pollution problem.

But, while his wife was helping him compile the bibliography, they found that the problem extended beyond analytical science and they joined coauthoring "Mercury tamination: A Human Tragedy," to connect the scientific aspects to the social, economic, political and emotional issues

"Personally, I have learned the sense of role that science plays with a role of the humanist." Patricia D'itri said. The data released (when studying pollution problems) is in the scientific form but the legislative, political problems are still there." The D'itris, a young and pleasant couple, have finished their soon-to-be released book. which traces mercury contamination incidents around the world and looks at the problem from a human perspective.

"The scientist has a moral obligation to humanity." Frank said. "It's up to scientists to make sure what they discover or what they know, is made known to the world."

In Canada, the D'itris say, the mercury is a pollution problem but it is also a class issue and a racial conflict. The people in the white communities have a more varied diet and do not depend upon fish as their

The Indians are just a minority that they don't pay too much attention to," Patricia D'itri said, adding that the real concern of the government is on have on the tourist business. "They would like to forget about the Indians" she said The Indians are fishing again and guiding tourists. They are told to keep their mouths shut about mercury. Their health is endangered but if they talk about it, they lose their jobs."

People in the white communities and in the tourist bureaus. she said, claim that there is no mercury problem and that the Indians are complaining just to get more welfare money.

Mercury poisoning has been called Minamata disease, after the deaths and physical deformities occurring in a peasant and fishing village in Japan in the 1950s from mercury-con-taminated fish. A chemical company was located on Minamata

The situation is similar to the Native Americans, the D'itris point out, as it is a small. uneducated and poor population which has been afflicted.

In the early 1950s the cats living in the Japanese village were noticed for their strange behavior — they would scream and they seemed to be dancing. Often they drowned themselves by jumping into the sea.

The behavior of the cats foreshadowed the discovery in Minamata in 1956 and again in 1965 in another village, of mass poisoning among the villagers. Since then, many have died and hundreds have been afflicted.

Children have been born with misshaped limbs and brain damage. The dancing cats have appeared on the reservations in Canada. Mercury levels in fish in the river system are comparable to fish in Minamata Ray and the 1972 levels of mercury in Walleye from the English-Wabigoon are the highest ever

And like Minamata, Frank D'itri said, the government has the "iumped all around the prob lem." No autopsies have been performed on Native Americans from the two reservations who have died, though autopsy is the only definitive way to show methyl mercury poison-

"In my opinion, the Canadian government is not conducting the type of tests it should, Frank D'itri said. "They have formed autopsies on Indians but they haven't formed an autopsy on Native Americans from the two reservations. The same thing happened in Japan. The Japanese government checked other plants (than the ones in question.)

The government "sat on information" on mercury levels from 1971 to 1973, Patricia D'itri said, calling the lack of concern for the Ojibways "genocide by neglect."

The D'itris say that the government is not looking for ercury poisoning among the Oiibways and has taken blood samples of Native Americans who live 300 miles north.

tests," Frank D'itri said, "they can go on saying 'We have no conclusive proof."
So, the Ojibways continue to eat the fish. The tour guides eat daily shore lunches with the fishermen they guide, who, unlike the Indians, eat the fish only a few weeks a year.

The government has provided freezers in the reservation with fish from other areas, but, Patricia D'itri said, the Indians do not trust frozen fish and continue to eat the fish from the Wabigoon which do not look unhealthy. In the memorable photo-essay book, "Minamata,' the disease was documented by W. Eugene and Aileen Smith. igene Smith, the famed Life photographer, was beaten while working on the essay, allegedly by goons of the polluting company, the Chisso Corp. Aileen Smith has since become involved with the plight of the Ojibway, accompanying a group of Japanese to meet with the Oilbways on their reserva-

In August 1975, she also traveled with a group of Ojibway men to Minamata to try to show the Indians the outcome of eating polluted fish. Some of the Oiibway women are now planning a trip to meet with Minamata mothers.

Patricia D'itri tells a story about how the problems are making the women, traditionally less assertive than the males, take stronger leadership roles. Josephine Mandamin, wife of the White Dog Chief, told her, "I used to walk a few steps ehind Issac. I don't do that anymore."

As of now, no action has been taken against the company which has stopped the mercury dumping. Frank D'itri said that it was not known until 1970 that the inorganic mercury, the type dumped by the company, would combine with naturally occur-ring bacteria to create methyl rcury, the well-documented

"Where I have to co this company," he said, "is that after they realized what was happening (1970), they didn't change their process.

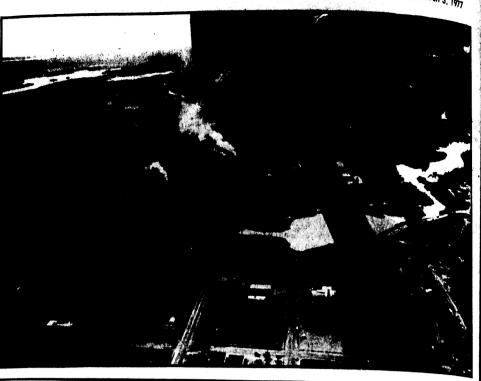

Patricia D'itri tells an anecdote of a Tokyo professor, Jun Ui, whom she described as a "Ralph Nader of Japan." When she first became involved with the Native Americans' prob-lem, she said she felt she was helping the Ojibways. But, she said, Ui told her: "We're not

Michigan National Bank, you may be losing money. If your savings account isn't

FREE PIZZA

Little Caesars Para

If your bank pays quarterly interest, you're losing money.

When you put money in a savings account, you're lending money to the bank. So you should earn interest on that money for every day it's on deposit. But if your bank pays only quarterly interest on savings, you don't get pays only quarterly interest until they've held your pays only sworth of interest until they've held your pays.

Let's say you withdraw money from a quarterly interest savings account midway in the quarter. Instead of receiving interest for the time your money has been on deposit, the money you withdraw your money has been on interest at all for the entire quarter. That we want to the second of the second of quarter starts, you're losing money. If you make deposits after the
