House vote furthers assassination probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to give its beleaguered assassinations committee two more years to probe the murders of President John F. Kennedy and civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King.

The vote was 230 to 181. The action came only hours after the committee's controversial chief counsel, Richard A. Sprague, resigned his post in an attempt to save the committee by assuaging House members who sought his ouster.

Without the extension, the panel would have died at midnight tonight.

The final vote came after the House rejected a rare motion by an opponent of the assassinations panel to go into secret session to hear the evidence collected so far. "I think we have a right to hear what this evidence is," said Rep. Robert E. Bauman, R-Md.

However, the House rejected that motion 226 to 185 after committee Chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said the committee feared that information such as the names of witnesses the committee has talked to or wants to talk to would leak out and put their lives in danger.

House watchers were unable to say exactly when the House last held a secret session though staff experts said it was sometime in the 1980s. The Senate holds secret sessions occasionally.

Supporters of the committee, including Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., who led the floor battle to keep the panel alive, said killing the committee at this time would only convince the public that a coverup was occurring.

Stokes contended the committee is pursuing new leads and has new witnesses in both investigations and that the strife that has plagued it since the day Congress convened in January is behind it.

The committee accepted chief counsel Sprague's resignation at a meeting only hours before the decisive House vote.

In voting 11 to 1 to accept Sprague's resignation, several committee members bitterly accused former chairperson Henry B. Gonzalez of what they called smear tactics and character assassination to drive Sprague out.

Gonzalez declined to make any immediate comment.

The committee accepted Sprague's resignation after an informal headcount indicated the House might kill the committee if Sprague stayed.

Resentment surfaced this week among some House members who expressed bitterness that Sprague appeared to survive a fight with Gonzalez who had resigned after unsuccessfully attempting to fire Sprague. Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, replaced Gonzalez as chairperson.

Committee members had estimated that such resentment could cost them between 24 and 50 House votes and that this would kill the committee.

The developments came a day after a potential witness in the committee's Kennedy probe was found dead, apparently a suicide. The victim, George de Mohrenschildt, 65, was found fatally shot in an oceanfront mansion near Palm Beach, Fla.

House committee member Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., had called de Mohrenschildt a "crucial witness." De Mohrenschildt, a Russian-born engineer, was a one-time acquaintance of Lee Harvey Oswald, who the Warren Commission said was the sole assassin of Kennedy.

During the Wednesday meeting of the committee on assassination, Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn., defended Sprague. (continued on page 16)

Death of witness ruled to be suicide

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A former friend of Lee Harvey Oswald apparently killed himself within hours after an investigator for the House Assassinations Committee attempted to interview him, authorities ruled Wednesday.

The Palm Beach County medical examiner said an autopsy of George de Mohrenschildt showed the fatal wound was "conducive to that of a self-inflicted gunshot," sheriff's Lt. Richard Sheets said.

Sheets said his office would consider the autopsy results before deciding next week whether to close the case. But he said "something big would have to jump out of the woodwork" to change the theory that the death Tuesday was a suicide.

He also said a tape recorder being used to record a television program in an adjacent room picked up the sounds of de Mohrenschildt firing the gun.

"We have the gunshot on tape," Sheets said, adding that there were no sounds of anyone else in the background. He said that by comparing the tape with television station logs, investigators determined that de Mohrenschildt shot himself at 15 seconds past 2:21 p.m. Tuesday.

De Mohrenschildt, a geologist who taught French at Bishop College in Dallas, had known both Oswald and his wife Marina.

Assassinations committee investigators had been trying to find de Mohrenschildt, 65, and only recently had learned he was in Florida.

Sheets said that at noon Tuesday, committee investigator Gaeton Fonzi went to the palatial three-story mansion of Mrs. Charles Tilton III, where de Mohrenschildt was (continued on page 16)

Amendment to proposal gives 'U' research grant

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer

Amendment giving MSU a $1.3 million grant was approved in lengthy debate on a House bill dealing with the PBB scandal Wednesday.

A measure was added to a bill sponsored by Rep. Francis Spaniola, D-Corunna, which would lower PBB contamination levels and reimburse farmers whose livestock was destroyed.

The bill may be voted on by the House money, already appropriated in the bill, would go to the MSU Agricultural Experiment Station for research on PBB contamination in food.

The amendment's sponsor, Rep. John R. Mount Pleasant, said during debate that he wanted to make sure such an item was included.

"I know that when (State Budget Director) Dr. Jerry Miller takes his red pencil to look at the bill, he may very well eliminate this," Engler said. "But let's put it in today and continue work on it."

Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, a cosponsor of the amendment, said the motion came about as a result of testimony by Sylvan Wittwer, director of the experiment station, during budget proceedings for MSU earlier this week.

"I understand Dr. Wittwer has done some work in this area already," Jondahl said. "Rep. Engler and the others have been concerned about contamination in food chains and we felt this would take care of it."

Rep. Gary Owen, D-Ypsilanti, chairperson of the Higher Education subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, voiced opposition to the amendment, one of many introduced in attempts to alter the bill.

Owen said he felt the research grant should be part of appropriations hearings, adding that MSU might want to use the money differently.

However, Jondahl replied that he felt the PBB bill should deal with all aspects of contamination. The amendment passed by a vote of 67 to 30.

Other debate Wednesday on the PBB bill included a measure that would in effect have killed it.

Rep. Paul Porter, D-Quincy, introduced an amendment that would leave the allowable contamination level at the present .3 parts per million (ppm) instead of Spaniola's proposal of .02 ppm.

However, his move was defeated as was an amendment by Rep. David Hollister, D-Lansing, lowering PBB levels to the smallest detectable amount.

State agriculture officials estimated that Hollister's measure would cost the state up to $500 million in payments to farmers. The Spaniola bill would cost around $25 million.

Spaniola's bill has bipartisan support, though some Republican members are said to be wavering.

GOP leader Dennis Cawthorne, R-Manistee, said he could estimate from 15 to "a majority" of 41 House Republicans in support of the bill.

"However, this is a volatile situation," he smiled. "We'll just have to see."

The PBB situation was created in 1973 when the fire retardant was accidentally mixed with livestock feed.

Since then numerous hearings, bills and lawsuits dealing with the problem have been in the news across the state. The first trial dealing with PBB contamination is currently underway in Cadillac.

Heroin sale profits target of bill package

By JOANNA FIRESTONE

LANSING (UPI) — A team of liberal state lawmakers has offered legislation to take the profits out of heroin trafficking by dispensing heroin to addicts through hospitals.

The three-bill package was introduced Wednesday in the state House.

The first measure would impose stiff mandatory prison sentences on persons caught with heroin — including a life sentence for top-level drug dealers.

The second measure would allow persons convicted of drug-related crimes to be enrolled in a drug withdrawal program in lieu of a prison term or regular probation.

Only those convicted of property offenses, such as burglary, would be eligible for the "guilty but addicted" plea. Persons convicted of violent crimes would have to serve prison terms.

The third in the trio of bills would set up an experimental drug program that would permit hospitals to dispense heroin to registered addicts, with withdrawal as the eventual goal.

Heroin addicted criminals would be eligible for the program only once; those who participated and returned to addiction and crime could not enroll in the withdrawal program again.

The package's major sponsor, Rep. George Cushingberry, D-Detroit, said the bills address both the problem of drug pushing and drug addiction.

He said legislation already pending before the House to impose mandatory sentences for drug dealers is not the whole answer, because it fails to deal with the addict himself.

The daily cost of heroin addiction in Detroit alone is estimated at between $1.5 million and $2 million in terms of burglaries and robberies. Substance abuse officials say there are at least 50,000 heroin addicts in Michigan.

"We have to realistically address ourselves to the problems of the addict," (continued on page 16)

CARTER THREATENS ARMS BUILDUP

SALT talks deteriorate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter said Wednesday he will be forced to consider a speedup of U.S. weapons development if the Soviet Union does not negotiate "in good faith" at another round of arms talks in May.

Talking with reporters following a breakdown of negotiations in Moscow, the President said he intended "to remain very strong" in seeking a comprehensive agreement that makes substantial cuts in the two superpowers' arsenals.

"I'm not in any hurry," Carter said. "It's important enough to proceed methodically."

However, the President said in reference to a newly scheduled bargaining session in May between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko:

"If we feel at the conclusion of next month's discussions that the Soviets are not acting in good faith with us, and that an agreement is unlikely, then I would be forced to consider a much more deep commitment to the development and deployment of additional weapons."

"But I would like to forgo that decision until I am convinced the Soviets are not acting in good faith. I hope they will," he said.

Carter said he has not yet heard from Vance "the specific reasons" for the Soviet rejection of American proposals.

However, he said, his guess that the U.S. proposal for a comprehensive pact was "such a radical departure" from past negotiations that the Soviets simply need more time to consider it.

When the talks opened Monday, Soviet leader Leonid A. Brezhnev cautioned Vance that unless the United States accepts the principle of "noninterference in internal affairs" the search for constructive relations "is impossible."

"I can't certify there is no linkage (between human rights and arms talks) in the Soviet mind," Carter said. "We have no evidence this was the case."

Outlining the administration's goals, Carter placed first "substantial reductions" in nuclear weapons. Others, he said, included an end to development and deployment of new weapons systems, a "freeze" at 550 intercontinental missiles for each side, a ban on deployment of mobile missiles and "strict limits on the deployment of backfire bombers and development of the American cruise."

"I think it's important for us not to negotiate a superficial pact," he said.

"If concluded," he said, "it will lay a permanent groundwork for a more peaceful world, an alleviation of the great threat of atomic weapons..." (continued on page 16)

Barry ahead in election, spoiled ballot tally shows

Tally of spoiled ballots from the MSU Student Board elections show that candidate Kent Barry well in lead with a 70-vote margin between him and closest pursuant.

Official vote totals should be released sometime today. Elections Commission person Barry Griffiths said Wednesday spoiled ballots are those that are not fit through the computer scoring system, any that are folded, damaged or torn. Any ballots with write-in votes must be hand counted.

Barry, a member of the Spartan spirit slate, led the spoiled vote tally with 190 votes. Mary Cloud, Counterforce candidate for president, followed with 127 votes.

Though Griffiths said the number of spoiled ballots constituted "a statistical sample," the election results are still subject to change with the final tally of the unspoiled ballots.

In last year's ASMSU Student Board election 12,541 students signed out ballots but only 6,613 actually recorded votes in the presidential race.

There were 892 spoiled ballots tallied so far this year for the presidential race.

Brezhnev rejects U.S. arms proposals

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev rejected American nuclear arms control proposals Wednesday, shattering the latest U.S. effort to reach a new strategic arms limitation treaty.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who had waited three days for a response to his SALT proposals, said both a comprehensive and a more limited approach had been offered but the Soviets "did not find either one acceptable."

In Washington, President Carter said Soviet failure to negotiate "in good faith" in the next round of arms talks in May could force a speedup in U.S. weapons development.

After receiving news of the Moscow breakdown, Carter told reporters that if, following the May discussions, he feels "that the Soviets are not acting in good faith with us, and that an agreement is unlikely, then I would be forced to consider a much more deep commitment to the development and deployment of additional weapons." The President added, "But I would like to forego that decision until I am convinced the Soviets are not acting in good faith. I hope they will."

Earlier the President told a hastily convened meeting of congressional leaders that although the American proposals had been rejected, the Moscow talks "were productive."

Flanked by Vice President Walter F. Mondale, the President said a forthcoming joint communiqué summarizing the Moscow talks would note that "The most important and time-consuming" discussions had dealt with strategic arms limitations.

Vance denied the proposals had been turned down because of Soviet unhappiness over American human rights criticism. He said the Russians had rejected both proposals because "they did not coincide with what they consider to be an equitable deal."

The Carter Administration has stressed its commitment to human rights around the world, and Brezhnev has warned publicly that U.S. criticism of internal Soviet affairs could interfere with arms talks and other efforts to improve relations between the two countries.

Vance said he had been unable to reach even his minimum goal of setting up a format for continuing SALT talks.

He said he would bring the arms control matter up again in May at a meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, probably in Western Europe. But Brezhnev is the only single leader who would normally be able to accept American SALT proposals and Vance noted the Middle East "and other items" would also be on the May agenda.

He told reporters he had had a one-hour meeting with Brezhnev, with the Soviet leader "doing all the talking" and proposing "nothing new on their side."

Vance had said he would stay in Moscow longer if progress on the treaty proposals warranted it, but planned after the Brezhnev meeting to leave for Western Europe this morning on schedule.

Senate nixes pay repeal amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Wednesday to require that both houses of Congress take roll-call votes on all future pay increases proposed for members of Congress, federal judges and top federal officials.

At the same time, the Senate turned down an amendment to repeal the 28 percent pay raise that became effective automatically Feb. 20 when neither house voted it down.

The requirement that both houses vote affirmatively before any future pay increase becomes effective was approved 82 to 13 as a Senate amendment to a bill extending emergency unemployment benefits. To become effective, the amendment, sponsored by Sen. Deway F. Bartlett, R-Okla., will have to be accepted also by the House.

Bartlett's second amendment to repeal the Feb. 20 raise that increased congressional salaries from $44,600 to $57,500 was defeated 53 to 41 with the adoption of a tabling motion by Sen. Russell Long, D-La.

Tapes released to crash investigators

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Islands (AP) — Spanish officials agreed Wednesday to release tapes of the last exchanges among two Boeing 747 pilots and the airport tower here, giving investigators a record of events leading up to aviation's worst disaster.

Authorities said the tapes would be flown to Washington at the request of Dutch and American officials for an analysis in the presence of KLM and Pan American crew members who could identify the voices.

Investigators said the last nine minutes of conversation recorded in the cockpits of the Pan Am and KLM Royal Dutch Airways Boeing 747s held the key to why the Dutch pilot began his fatal take off run directly into the American jet. Investigators said the KLM jet had not been given clearance to take off.

Both flight recorders were recovered and impounded by the Spanish, who are in charge of the investigation.

American and Dutch investigators also requested interviews with two Spanish air controllers on duty in the tower Sunday when the collision occurred.

Bishops advise priests on Easter chant

NEW YORK (AP) — A committee of the U.S. Roman Catholic bishops has advised pastors not to use a traditional Easter week chant that long has been considered offensive to Jews.

Jewish leaders hailed the recommendation as a significant contribution to Jewish-Christian relations.

The secretariat of the bishops' committee on liturgy, headed by Archbishop John Quinn of Oklahoma City, said studies are under way in hope of revising the controversial text.

Until the revision is available, the secretariat said it "strongly encourages" Catholic parishes to avoid using the part of the Holy Week services called the "Reproaches," and to substitute optional hymns.

"It's a welcome concrete action translating declared church principle into tangible reality," commented Rabbi Marc H. Tannenbaum, interreligious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee.

Crime drops in seven state cities

DETROIT (UPI) — Major crime in seven Michigan cities dropped almost 1.5 percent during 1976, paced by health declines in Livonia and Grand Rapids and even a slight dip in Detroit, according to FBI statistics.

Lansing, however, had an increase in reports of rapes, killings, robberies and other crimes. The crime rate in Lansing increased 1.5 percent over 1975.

Total reported crimes from seven Michigan cities were 222,223, compared to 225,568 in 1975.

Other Michigan cities used in the compiling of the Uniform Crime Index were Dearborn, Warren and Flint.

Lake Erie comeback reports 'unfounded'

LANSING (UPI) — Recent optimistic reports that Lake Erie is making a comeback in the fight against creeping stagnation are unfounded, federal officials said Wednesday.

They also revealed that Saginaw Bay is in as bad shape as Lake Erie.

"Lake Erie is not getting better," Nelson Thomas of the Environmental Protection Agency said in testimony before the House Conservation Committee.

The committee is considering legislation to ban the use of phosphates in laundry detergents. Phosphates, which spur the growth of algae, are believed to be the major culprit in the lingering death of Lake Erie and other bodies of water.

Overproduction of algae can rob lakes of life-giving oxygen. A lack of oxygen kills more attractive varieties of game fish.

PBB firm shifted misuse responsibility

CADILLAC (UPI) — An executive of a chemical company that made PBB said Wednesday once the dangers of the toxic substance were discovered, the firm required buyers of the chemical to take responsibility for its misuse.

Howard Washer, director of marketing for Michigan Chemical Co. based in Chicago, said that after Michigan's PBB cattle contamination was discovered in 1974, the company required buyers to excuse the maker of liability up to $5 million.

"With the sensitivity of the PBB problem and the yet undefined and unknown risks at that time... we felt the misuse of the product was a liability that the customer was going to be asked to bear," Washer said.

Oil regulations being reviewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Administration is considering taxes and regulations to drive up the prices of oil and natural gas and drive down their use, a government source said Wednesday.

Rough calculations based on proposals under consideration indicate they might add another six cents per gallon to the cost of gasoline and other petroleum fuels, and another $16 per year to the average household gas bill.

Electricity rates might also be increased, depending on the cost and popularity of switching power plants from gas or oil to coal as their primary fuel, and on the tendency of coal prices to increase along with the other fuels.

An administration source said Wednesday that the President's energy policy team was working on a number of ideas "in the embryonic stage," which have not yet been submitted to Carter himself. These include:

- Continuing federal regulation of the price of natural gas sold by producers to interstate pipelines, instead of removing it as has been widely proposed. The regulated price ceiling would be raised from the present $1.44 per thousand cubic feet to the equivalent of foreign oil prices, a 96-cent increase.
- Possibly raising this ceiling still higher, by another 15 cents per thousand cubic feet, to make natural gas the highest priced fossil fuel in the nation and further discourage its use.

- Raising natural gas prices through a federal tax excise on gas sold to electric power plants or other industries using the scarce fuel to heat boilers. This is designed to make them shift to coal. The size of such an excise tax was not specified.

- Increasing the cost of some 44 percent of the nation's oil supplies to equal the world market price of oil by imposing high excise taxes on top of the present government-controlled prices.

Compared with recent price patterns, such a tax would add about $2.50 per barrel to the nationwide average cost of oil, or about six cents per gallon if reflected directly in product prices.

- Rebating to the public the huge revenues collected through this excise tax, by distributing the money to state governments which would pass it on to consumers through reductions in their own sales and excise taxes.

- Possibly charging a special additional excise tax on oil fuels burned by power plants and other industrial boilers in an effort, parallel to the suggested natural gas taxes, to persuade them to switch to coal.

ape law query enied by court

ANSING (UPI) — The Michigan Court of Appeals has rejected constitutional challenges to several sections of the state's landmark rape law of 1974. The act was challenged in the appeal of Sam Edward Denmark, who was convicted in 1974 of the rape of his 13-year-old sister-in-law at Traverse City. Denmark said the revised rape law, which has been heralded as model legislation in many states, was unconstitutionally vague. He pointed to several terms used in the law which he claimed were so imprecise that he did not know beforehand that his actions would be considered a criminal offense. In particular, he objected to use of the word "affinity" in the rape law. The law stipulates that a person can be convicted of first degree sexual misconduct if the victim is between ages 13 and 16 and is related by "blood or affinity." Denmark said he saw little merit to the position that defendant lacked adequate notice under the new law because of the unconstitutional vagueness assigned to the word "affinity." The term "affinity" is neither an unusual nor esoteric word, nor does the statute use the term in an uncommon or extraordinary context. Our courts have provided clear, legal definition of the concept on numerous occasions. According to the previously published definition, the court said, affinity is the relationship as a consequence of marriage between each of the married persons and the blood relationship of the other. The appeals court also upheld the law's controversial section dealing with evidence that was introduced at a rape trial. Under the law, a victim need not prove that she resisted attack and her sexual history could not be introduced to erode her credibility. Denmark claimed the provisions were unconstitutional because the legislature does not have the authority to modify common law rules of evidence. The appeals court, however, dismissed that allegation. The evidentiary sections of the criminal sexual conduct act stand as a legitimate exercise of legislative authority until superceded by court rule," it said.

LEAVING MSU WITH 'MIXED EMOTIONS'

Boger looking forward to new job

By ANNES CROWLEY
State News Staff Writer

Provost Lawrence L. Boger will leave a 30-year career at MSU to become president of Oklahoma State University with "mixed emotions," he said. "It's hard to pull up stakes and move out after so long," he explained. "It was a close decision, but now that it's made, I'm looking forward to a new and exciting experience." He came to MSU in January 1947 to do one year of graduate work and has been here ever since, he said. Before being named provost, he served as dean of the College of Agriculture, chairperson of the Agricultural Economics Department and as an instructor. "It's been a long year, but the time has gone fast and it's been fun," he said. "I feel I owe the University more than it owes me and I'm grateful for the opportunities I've had to be of service." Boger said he was sorry he would not be able to participate in the long-range planning exercise initiated this fall by MSU President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. and a new project to raise funds for key MSU projects from the private sector.

Between now and June 1, when he hopes to leave for the Stillwater, Okla., campus and his new duties, he will work to "leave things in good shape for his successor," Boger said. He has promised Oklahoma State officials he will arrive as soon as possible, but he must report by July 1.

He said he has no commitments to initiate specific programs there, but will acclimate himself and decide what must be done to maintain and possibly improve the quality of education there before taking any specific action.

"It won't be easy, but it can be fun," he said. "I plan to make it that way." Oklahoma State's emphasis on agriculture and energy attracted him because of his (continued on page 9)

"SANJAY, MY SON, I THINK PERHAPS I SHOULD HAVE PRACTICED BIRTH CONTROL YEARS AGO."

Democracy spits in Indira's eye

Democracy is like a ponderous beast that just gets around to scratching itself where it itched months ago. But in times of emergency, the beast can strike quickly to wipe out any imminent threat to itself.

Such was the case in India on March 20 when members of the largest democracy in the world voted to depose Indira Gandhi, sweeping her and her Congress party from the offices of government she most adroitly abused.

It was perhaps the most appropriate irony that Gandhi's aunt, Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, vocally denounced her niece before the elections for her rule of terror imposed 21 months earlier — a police state which saw opposition leaders jailed, political prisoners tortured and press freedom trampled. It was fitting that Acting President B. D. Jatti, and not Gandhi, was responsible for lifting the martial law March 21. It was heartening to see the people reject Sanjay Gandhi, Indira's son, as he foisted himself on the political scene and tried to entice the youth vote.

But perhaps the sweetest note of poetic justice is that Gandhi was replaced by a former aide she had thrown in jail. Morarji Desai, who led the Janata (People's) party against Gandhi, has already declared a stand of nonalignment which has caused reserved jubilation among U. S. officials who marked that nation's leaning towards the Soviet Union under Gandhi.

Desai and Jagjivan Ram, who resigned from Gandhi's cabinet and led the nation's untouchable class, worked together to unseat Gandhi. Both of Gandhi's opponents said it was the reign of terror which forged a concerted effort between them to win the election.

Desai faces some interesting times indeed, leading a nation where poverty is the rule rather than the exception.

Let the fate of Indira Gandhi be an example of all despots who think they can bully the animal Democracy with the whip of oppression and then expect to put down their tools of terror and pet it. The animal, through the people, will strike with certain deadly force.

Board the culprit in computer coverup

Charles Miller should be something of a hero to MSU students, yet his name could easily slip into obscurity. He has patiently suggested ways to streamline the Data Processing Department, which can hold down some of the rising costs of education for students. He was rewarded for these efforts by hostility from his bosses and a reprimand, based on feeble charges, that bars him from high-security computer work.

Miller made suggestions to improve the department through management channels for eight years. He finally became frustrated with the political pettiness in the upper echelon and sent a report on mismanagement in the department to MSU Trustee John Bruff, who forwarded it to President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. in June 1976. Wharton sat on Miller's scathing indictment for more than four months, finally employing the MSU Internal Audit Department and Ernst & Ernst, an accounting firm, to audit the center.

Miller's report reveals egregious mistakes in both the utilization of computers and management of personnel in the center.

At the center, expertise is almost a handicap. Employees incompetent in the field of computer programming were promoted to higher levels of management because they supported the status quo.

Programmers in the center were complaining that they had little to do. In one anecdote later confirmed by auditors, people in one department spent their time cutting out snow flakes, sleeping or reading. One employee spent 10 months with nothing to do.

But this is not to imply that the center is incompetent. It seems to be comparatively efficient when it comes to basketball tournaments and college and professional football gambling averages. It does not, however, fare as well with University Health Center records. The electronic marvels seem to have trouble balancing individual records listed on reports.

After the MSU Board of Trustees reviewed the audits, it voted to quash the findings. Instead of implementing some of the constructive measures suggested, the board saw fit to protect MSU's awry processing center.

Miller's criticisms could not be tolerated. Consequently, a formal disciplinary reprimand was lodged against Miller by Donald Perrin, acting director of the center. Miller is accused of violating security by opening a side door to an MSU trustee, Michael Smydra. Heaven only knows what sabotage Smydra could commit while he toured the offices and talked to the employees.

This reprimand is insane. The MSU Board of Trustees and Wharton could dismiss the reprimand of Miller but both parties have refused to do so.

We believe Miller, an honest employee seriously concerned with the conditions in his unit, represents most of the department's employees. He strived to straighten out matters in-house, and it is a design of his that he is not something of a public figure.

But it is the administration's toleration of mismanagement and its consistent refusal to expose the facts and right the wrongs, which warrants the unrestrained disdain of the MSU community.

VIEWPOINT: POPULATION

Now 4,000,000,000!

By MICHAEL CROFOOT

On March 28, Nineteen Hundred and Seventy Six, the statistician told us that there were at least 4,000,000,000 human animals on this earth. I had a commemorative party. I had my first billion party in 1961 when we achieved at least 3,000,000,000. Do you remember that day? Maybe we'll have our fifth billion party in 1984 when more than a billion will be living in the earth's most nonviable ecosystem — the city.

Currently, we have at least 4,070,000,000 human animals on this starship of which 220,000,000 are in the United States. As a result of our credit gaps (the Hunger and Water and Soil and Veracity Gaps), at least 70 per cent of the world's human population is suffering from varying forms of malnutrition. 50 per cent because of undernutrition and 20 per cent from overnutrition. Decreasing tilled land, water and other resources per capita and the qualitative/quantitative negative balance in world protein trade between the hungry and oversatisfied world contribute to the undernourished people's plight. People are dying from overnutrition for many of the same reasons, in reverse, and the fact that most of them live where the profiteering economic system reigns. The young and old ones are most affected by the two types of malnutrition.

In the Hungry World 10 to 20,000,000 children under 3 years of age are afflicted with severe symptoms of kwashiorkor or marasmus at any one time, most of whom will die without treatment for these protein-calorie undernutrition diseases. In the Oversatisfied World and in the United States in particular, 10 to 20 per cent of the children are overweight and 30 to 50 per cent of the middle-aged are overweight. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) estimates that 20 per cent of the American children, women and men are so overweight that their health is threatened. Between 20,000 and 100,000 children in the Hungry World lose their sight every year for lack of Vitamin A which costs pennies per sufficient injection. Though not nearly so prevalent in the Oversatisfied World, vitamin deficiencies are common, even in higher income groups, partly as a result of opulence and a basic ignorance of nutrition/ecological principles.

Most of the indirect effects of an inadequate diet are invisible in that the relationships of disease, morbidity and maladjustment to nutrition are not easily quantifiable. The visible part is. The first and most obvious effect of starvation in a human is the wasting of fat deposits as the body begins to eat itself. The liver size is drastically reduced and the intestine loses some of its absorptive concurrent with a loss of degrading power in the digestive juices with diarrhea resulting. (Kwashiorkor means "the displaced child" signifying the disease which results when a suckling youngster is replaced by a younger relation at their mother's breast. Nutritionists have coined the diarrhea that results as "weanling diarrhea").

Endema usually occurs as the skin becomes too big for its contents. Infertility and libido sets in, hair becomes dull and stands on end, and the skin becomes dull, gray and develops the consistency/inelasticity of paper. The life of a starving individual is usually terminated by intractable diarrhea as the gut has become essentially nonfunctional. Imagine the psychological effects of starvation and hunger for yourself.

The oversatisfied or affluent diet is a factor in more than one-half of all deaths in those partaking of it. The diet is characterized by a high fat content (directly contributing to the cardiovascular diseases epidemic), high salt and sugar intake (hypertension and diabetes) and low plant fiber roughage (cancers of the digestive system). In the United States more hospital beds are occupied by the mentally ill than the physically ill and anyone can imagine overnutrition's psychological effects.

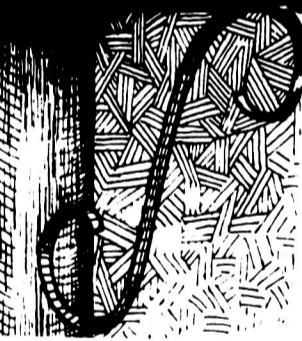

Along with 4,000,000,000 humans, the earth is supporting 16 billion human protein-consumption equivalents in livestock. South America and Africa supply most of the world's animal feed. It is the affluent animals vs. the hungry millions. The 1970s have seen a sharp increase in hunger-induced deaths. The Hunger Gap is widening. The evidence supporting the widening of the Water, Soil and Veracity Gaps is equally convincing. Water mining, pollution and wastage will give the Water Gap top priority in the headlines of the future. The Veracity Gap has been widening every since the Greeks and Eastern sages laid bare the truth.

Take the factors of over and under-consumption and imagine its effects on an aware international community or an aware dialogic educational community — but remember the time factor.

The Western monopoly is breaking up. The Politics of Appeasement are over. But the Trilateral Commission is unilateral in intent. In 1975, $280 billion was spent in world military expenditures employing 40 per cent of the world's most qualified scientists. The arms race is out of control, according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. We must seek a symbiotic, not an entropic, international relationship. It is time to make the invisible hands of hunger and economics visible and realizable.

LETTERS To the Editor

Misunderstanding

It is true, as Mike Litaker's column of March 9 states, that Mike Marshall and I had a misunderstanding over tape-recorded material which had been used for publication in November 1973.

The misunderstanding arose over what had been and what had not been intended for print.

However, contrary to Litaker's knowledge, Marshall and I have since reached an understanding on that particular incident.

Grading profs

Students should have direct control over the faculty's salary and teaching positions. In an institution of higher education there should be no such thing as an inferior professor. Students pay a large amount of money each term for classes and still stand an equal chance of getting a good professor or a bad one. Therefore, students should be able to decide what professors should stay and which professors are of no use for learning purposes to them.

It is a well-known fact that MSU has its share of bad professors. Looking through the book, "Grading the Profs," one can see that MSU does have some professors rated as poor by the students. I suggest that grading of the professors by the students should have more weight than just to warn students of bad professors. At the end of each term, each professor should be graded by his students, and if he doesn't teach up to their expectations, he should be replaced by a more competent professor.

If a professor is a good instructor, he would have more students take him each term and would therefore earn more money than a professor that isn't considered as good. Students paying the faculty's salary directly in that manner would force all professors to teach to their fullest capacities. Hopefully, after a few years, MSU would then have the finest professors teaching, which I don't think is too much to ask.

Fines for good deeds

It's a sad day indeed, when one citizen does another a good deed and is fined by the people hired to "protect and serve." I find it hard to believe that picking up hitchhikers is so incredibly dangerous to traffic if proper precautions are observed. Also, I find it terribly sad that in this huge college town, a fellow student has to wait hitchhiking for a ride as long as he does.

One would think that some kind of camaraderie (or at least, sympathy) would prevail. What ever happened to brotherly love? To the person fined $9 for being generous and kind, it would be a virtuous act of protest to room (on the city) in jail overnight rather than to pay the ticket. I'd back you completely, and do the same if it were me.

Families' Coffee Shop

My family is one of hundreds in this community that belongs to the Families' Coffee Shop. The letter from Phyllis P. Evans on March 7 contains some grossly inaccurate and misleading statements about our organization. The readers deserve the truth.

I agree with Evans in several particulars. The Families have supported abolishing electroshock therapy (EST) and phasing out electroconvulsive therapy (ECT) for several years. I also agree that "humane help" is available for those seeking relief from depression. Psychotherapy is certainly an important mode of treatment. Again, all associated with the Families' Coffee Shop have always promoted psychotherapy. Why does Evans mention only psychotherapy? She must certainly be aware of alternative treatment, especially for very severely depressed patients who cannot be reached by verbal communication.

Evans is willing to state that the Freddie Memorial Fund promotes EST but cites no basis for such an outrageous charge. The truth is that the fund promotes a synthesis of all treatment modalities — psychotherapy, chemotherapy and electrotherapy (but not EST or ECT). The type of electrotherapy sometimes recommended by the medical advisor to the Families, a family psychiatrist, is called ELT (electrolytic therapy), and is a safe, effective and economical segment of treatment for suicidal depression.

I invite Evans, or anyone interested in mental health, to visit the Families' Coffee Shop, 701 N. Logan St., at any time. Forums are held every Saturday at noon where people from all walks of life meet to discuss topics of common interest and to improve the mental health of our community.

Greek god?

Over the past several months I have been completely fed up with the antics of Mike Marshall. Who does he think he is, a Greek god? Well, he is the only one who thinks so. He has abused every privilege given a student and demands more. He is not a resident of this state and probably pays no taxes towards MSU.

The latest "deal" he has pulled is just too much for me, as a taxpayer, to swallow. Using MSU facilities and equipment for his private enterprise is beyond belief. How much longer do we have to put up with his conniving, abuse, destructiveness and diarrhea of the mouth? He gives little regard for the rights of others. He needs to have his diaper removed then a good two by four used on his behind and set in a corner to suck his thumb and think it over.

Once and for all get him off the campus and out of the Lansing — East Lansing area. We do not need him nor want him.

Marguerite Gilbert

EDITOR'S NOTE: Marshall is a resident of East Lansing.

Resemblance

I am surprised by and concerned about the State News advertisement on March 10 regarding the ASMSU presidential candidates radio program. The cartoon figure bears an uncanny resemblance to a tyrannical and hated figure. There has been enough sorrow, grief and torment caused by such political "leaders" in the past. If the State News wants to trumpet about upcoming elections, try to choose a more suitable figure. I really wonder about the cartoonist's sensitivities and the State News Advertising Department's awareness in printing such material.

Clarification

On March 9 there were a number of articles and letters to the editor about Marshall. I do not know the man, contact with him has been limited to telephone call. My intention is not to defend the man, but rather to clarify statements by Henry Collier, a graduate student, Frank Beeman, the director of intramural sports, and Mike Litaker, sports writer for the State News.

Collier, a friend of mine, is part of admissions staff in the Graduate School Business. I am amused when he knowingly states that Marshall has "lost" his — obviously the Atlanta Braves do agree. I am less amused when Henry Collier, a graduate student in the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department to deny readmission Marshall after the current baseball season because of Marshall's refusal to behave in a manner acceptable to Collier.

The letter submitted by Frank Beeman was of greater concern to me. His historical data showing people using the batting cage. He also says there has been difficulty obtaining the batting cage for any season since 1973 as evidenced by reservations required to gain access to the batting cage. This simply was not the case in the fall of 1974 and winter of 1975. The reason Beeman's records indicate few people using the batting cage in the fall and winter, at least in 1974, was because the IM refused people permission to use the cage. Or at least that was the experience of a friend of mine and mine, wonder the records indicate few people using the cage. It is difficult to have people making reservations when the refuses to accept them.

Litaker's column merits detailed review. It was irresponsible journalism. He written an extremely critical advertisement Marshall, apparently under the justification that "the point being, is that doesn't want the press when they need then he'd better expect the same who needs the press."

But there is more of this immature in his next paragraph he observes Marshall placed an advertisement which urged MSU students, faculty and staff call the Men's IM and flood the reservation list for the turf arena as a means of showing University officials that there was a demand for the practice area. Litaker states he finds it difficult to understand why Marshall encouraged baseball players to be a "... pain in the ass for IM Director Frank Beeman by making ridiculous phone calls." Litaker's statements concerning advertisement are a gross misstatement of the facts. The advertisement requested that callers identify themselves to the possibility of a few people flooding the lines. The telephone number to be called was not the IM number, it was a number in the offices of the State News.

Litaker concludes his column by stating he were 4 years old, so he can act like Marshall. After reading his column appears the only remaining step to Litaker's wish is for him to dress like a 4-year-old.

I.M. Notes

Edward L.
Ronders
Where will
'Big 3' go?

Some things that need to be said:
The answer is, "I don't know."
The question is, "Where are Earvin Johnson and Jay Vincent going to college?"

It seems every time I turn around someone wants the answer to that query. Well, I've got news for you all. So do Jay and Earvin want an answer.

The two premiere cagers in the state are the subject of one of the most intensive recruiting campaigns seen in these parts since the Dave DeBusschere and Chet Walker era.

And that campaign has netted them teams of publicity. Personally, I felt that it wasn't totally responsible for the State News to write articles concerning the dynamic duo during their senior year. They had enough pressure to bear, which they did most admirably, without more coming from this corner.

But now Earvin has led his Everett Vikings to the state crown and Jay has signed a Big Ten letter of intent with MSU. The first chance for a final decision is scheduled for April 13 when they are eligible to sign national letters of intent.

In Vincent's case, even though the Eastern great has signed on the Big Ten dotted line, he is still free to attend any other college in the land, except the remaining nine institutions in the conference.

Spartan coach Jud Heathcote explained that his staff refuses to rest on Jay's Big Ten signature. "We're not taking Jay for granted. It would be a grave mistake if we were to say we have him in our hip pocket. We want to make Jay feel important, because he is," Jud stated.

The first-year Spartan mentor also stated that he felt Vincent is as fine a player as the Lansing area has seen and that fact would have been more evident if it hadn't been for Earvin Johnson.

But Vincent sees nothing wrong playing in the shadow of his friend, one Earvin Johnson. "I had a good three years at Eastern. I really like the way the people came to see us play," Vincent explained.

An indicator of Vincent's — and perhaps several others' — final decision surfaced through his remarks. "I visited Arizona recently, but-man, I don't know. I'd really like to stay close to home."

Vincent also detailed some of the reasons why he chose MSU over the Blue and Yellow of Ann Arbor. "I sat down and thought one day and felt there was nothing wrong with Michigan. But I'd like to build a program rather than keeping one going," Vincent noted.

And, pray tell, didn't the "Barn" known as Jenison deter Vincent in his decision? "Hey, I like the way Jenison is built. It wouldn't bother me at all to play there. Remember, it's not the floor you play on but how you play," he commented.

But, gee Jay, that's in direct contrast to what U-M assistant Billy Frieder declared in January.

Frieder was quoted in the Michigan Daily as not understanding why Earvin or Jay would want to play in such a barn, when Michigan had Crisler arena. His thoughts also included criticism of the Spartans' schedule and lack of national TV exposure.

Well, the last I checked, remarks like that are considered negative recruiting — which is frowned on (and probably nothing more) by Wayne (Do-Nothing) Duke. No, I can't lower myself to Frieder's level of desperation.

However, the finalists in the recruiting derby figure to be MSU, Maryland and Wild Bill Frieder.

And, the winner just may hit the cage trifecta. Vincent commented that Earvin, himself and Brother Rice's fine guard Kevin Smith have talked about a package deal which would keep the three together throughout their college careers. Heathcote echoed this sentiment: "Kevin has had a friendship with Jay and Earvin. Sometimes, though, those early package deals lessen in significance as the recruiting season moves along. But, Kevin was more pro-Michigan in the past and now he is more open to investigating what other schools have to offer."

The only advice this corner will offer to the dynamic duo is a personal sentiment. MSU is made up of real live people. People who make mistakes but also people who care.

And they're the same type of people who, if Earvin, Jay and Kevin decided to cast their lot elsewhere, would wish them the best of everything even when they face the Green and White.

There will be a required officials' clinic for anyone interested in umpiring softball in the women's intramural league. The clinic is slated for 7 p.m. in 137 of the Women's IM Building. There will be a meeting for those wishing to umpire in the men's IM and league tonight at 6. For those wishing to officiate in both leagues, attendance is mandatory at both meetings.

The MSU Weightlifting Club is hosting the National Collegiate Championships in the Men's IM Building sports arena Saturday and Sunday. The tourney begins at 10:30 a.m. both days.

MSU's cheerleading squad is holding tryouts April 7 for the 1977-78 unit. Those interested are asked to meet at the Fieldhouse for an orientation session Monday at 4 p.m.

Pashnick evens MSU's spring

It might be premature to say that MSU pitcher Larry Pashnick is ahead of last year's pace. But the Spartan right-hander won his second game of the season Tuesday night, as many as he won all last season, beating Pan-American 8-5, in the nightcap of a doubleheader.

After dropping the opener, 9-5, the Spartan hitters came alive for Pashnick with three seventh-inning runs. Pan-Am got to the junior hurler for two runs of its own in the bottom of the inning before John Lincoln came out of the bullpen to get the final out.

First baseman Randy Pruitt beat out an infield hit to start the seventh frame rally, his third safety of the game. Dave Radke walked before catcher Joe Bakunas delivered an RBI single to score Pruitt.

Shortstop Rodger Bastein walked and Tony Spada laid down a squeeze-bunt single to score Radke before Ty Willingham singled to score the final run and pick up his second RBI of the night.

The win gave the Spartans a 7-7 slate to end the spring schedule in Edinburg, Tex.

While Pashnick was penciling himself into the starting rotation for the Big Ten season, senior Jim Kniivila caused further concern for MSU coach Danny Litwhiler on how to use his veteran starter.

Kniivila, chased by Wright State in his other start of the spring, didn't make it out of the first inning after yielding six runs and giving up four walks.

Perennially slow to come around in the spring because of wildness, Kniivila has always managed to rebound in time for the regular season. But his last two outings may have put his spot on the pitching staff in jeopardy.

Buddy Baker took over for Kniivila and lasted until the sixth before giving way to Lincoln, who finished up. MSU was able to close the score to 6-5 before Pan-Am pushed in three runs in the sixth, on an RBI double by Jerry Weller and third-sacker Cliff Northey's third hit of the day to score another.

Northey's bat could cause Litwhiler to reconsider his decision to go with Spada at the hot corner to start the season. The junior from Troy is getting his first shot with the varsity after sitting out last year with a back injury and his currently ticketed to caddy for the more experienced Spada.

Catching is still a suspect position with the team heading north. The job has been narrowed down between Bakunas and Tony Wenson but Pan-Am had a field day on the bases in the nightcap with four steals.

New law 'surprise' to rep

By KRISTIN VAN VORST
State News Staff Writer

Charles F. Seeley, director of MSU Admissions and Scholarships, said Wednesday he is "not even aware" of a law going into effect today that changes what information requests are permitted on admission application forms.

The Michigan Civil Rights Act will prohibit educational institutions from asking, either written or orally, the religion, race, color, national origin, age, sex or marital status of an applicant. Exceptions may be made if such information is required by federal regulations, or as provided by a ruling of the Michigan Department of Civil Rights or as part of affirmative action policies. Information concerning religion, national origin, and marital status has already been deleted from the MSU form and information concerning a person's race is permitted on the admissions form as part of a University affirmative action policy. Requests for an applicant's age and sex still appear on the present form.

Seeley said last year he facetiously made the comment that information concerning a person's sex would be eliminated this year. Under the new law, requesting the applicant's sex is prohibited.

He also said that the residence halls will have fun with the change, trying to match roommates of the same sex.

"They (the prohibitions) get more ridiculous every year," Seeley said.

He said that the office is now in the process of redoing the admissions application and a meeting is scheduled for Friday to discuss changes already proposed.

"Now we'll have to get a copy of the law," Seeley said. "We'll have to check it out with our attorney."

The law also prohibits employers from requesting, in oral or written form, information concerning the religion, race, color, national origin, age, sex, height, weight or marital status of a prospective employee.

The religion, race, color, national origin or sex of an applicant are not on the present University employment application form according to Gerald O'Connor, director of the MSU personnel office.

However, age, height and weight are still requested. The form also requests the name and the place of employment of the applicant's spouse.

O'Connor said he has not seen the act yet but is aware of the new law. He said he had been on vacation and had not had a chance to look at it.

The bill was approved by Gov. William G. Milliken January 13. The law will also cover student employment forms. Information concerning weight, height and age of the applicant is requested on the present form.

Phyllis McKesson, director of the division of public affairs of the Michigan Department of Civil Rights in Lansing, said that until now the state law protected only people between the ages of 18 and 60. She said the new law protects everyone. She said if a 68-year-old person is turned down for employment because of age but has all the other qualifications, "starting Thursday she/he will have grounds for complaint."

Grocery chains studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you think grocery chains charge higher prices when they face little competition, you're right, according to a new study released Wednesday.

"Large food chain prices are about 5 per cent higher where the largest four firms in a market hold 70 percent of the market than where they hold only 40 per cent," University of Wisconsin researchers concluded after studying corporate records.

"In many markets consumers are paying the leading food retailers extremely large dollar overcharges," the study said.

The researchers estimated that consumers paid $662.4 million extra in 1974, a sum representing the difference between grocery prices in areas with substantial competition and areas where there is little competition, the study said.

The study, entitled, "The Profit and Price Performance of Leading Food Chains, 1970-1974," was released by the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, which subpoenaed records from 17 of the largest national grocery chains.

The 17 chains are: Safeway, A&P, Kroger, Winn-Dixie, Acme, Lucky Jewel, Food Fair, Grand Union, Supermarket General, National Tea, Stop and Shop, Fisher Foods, Albertsons', Allied, First National and Giant.

The study noted the trend toward larger and fewer grocery stores. Chains with 11 or more stores increased their share of food sales from 34 per cent in 1948 to 57 per cent in 1972, the study said.

Though grocery chains' profits are lower than those of many other industries, the study said, "profits are significantly higher in markets where a few firms control most grocery store sales."

Mobutu may be losing control of Zaire

By LARRY HEINZERLING
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President Mobutu Sese Seko may be gradually losing control over events in politically volatile and strategic

Analysis

Zaire, according to Western diplomats in Kinshasa. The diplomats point to the deteriorating military situation in Shaba Province, once known as Katanga Province, and widespread discontent over the nation's critically ailing economy.

An invading force of about 12,000 exiled Katangan rebels in Shaba who crossed into Zaire from Angola last month is gradually advancing on two fronts as Zaire's army retreats. Diplomatic observers in Kinshasa, Zaire's capital, say the threat in Shaba is spurring other exiled antigovernment movements into action.

The French government, which has supported Mobutu for years, is reliably reported to be consulting with anti-Mobutu leaders in Paris, apparently on the assumption his days in power are numbered.

Some of the Western diplomats contend, however, that

Deteriorating military, ailing economy attributed causes of wide discontent

while Mobutu faces his most serious challenge in the field, power 12 years ago, he may yet come out on top.

"Mobutu is a survivor," observed one Western diplomat. "He may pull it off as he has in the past but things look bad."

A serious problem for Mobutu is that it is becoming increasingly clear in Kinshasa that none of Zaire's traditional allies — Belgium, France and the United States — now appears willing to mount a major rescue operation.

The reasons are complex. But, simply put, they reflect the point of view that Mobutu's power has been maintained by as discredited at home as he is abroad.

"The unknown may not necessarily be as bad as the known," observed one diplomat in Zaire.

A new president in the White House, upcoming Belgian elections and French concern for African opinion also play a part.

Mobutu has dominated his potentially rich and unwieldy country of 25 million people, once called the Congo, with a deft mixture of force, patronage and a flare for the flamboyant.

Mobutu's great achievement has been maintaining stability in a culturally diverse nation of 200 tribes once synonymous with political chaos, bloody tribal wars and secession.

The "president-for-life," a man who wields immense personal power and leads a life of great luxury, still controls the nation's sole political party, the army, the government and the press.

Diplomats say the claim by the rebels in Shaba that they are part of a "popular uprising" is being welcomed in Shaba and elsewhere in the country. Whether or not Marxist Angola and its Soviet and Cuban allies are behind the Shaba invasion, as Mobutu claims, it could not have come at a worse time.

Political observers say that more than a decade of one-man autocratic rule has emptied the national treasury, left the economy debt-ridden and created deep-felt resentment at all levels.

"There is deep disaffection within the party," says one party member. "People in the street are not happy."

Mobutu has been hard hit by a drop in the price of copper, Zaire's chief export; his prestige has fallen for supporting the losing side in Angola's civil war, and people are hungry.

"What does that do for the people?" asked one Zairian pointing to a giant monument dedicated to the "Martyrs of Colonialism."

"Go look at the hospitals or the market place. There is no medicine, no food, no money," he said. "Mobutu is just a capitalist."

Mobutu has acquired several plush villas and other retreats in Belgium, Switzerland, France and Zaire.

Perhaps most critical is the state of Zaire's 25,000-man army, which observers say is underpaid, poorly trained and undisciplined.

A great fear expressed in Kinshasa's diplomatic circles is that if Mobutu loses his grip, Zaire could be torn apart by ancient tribal and regional rivalries he has suppressed for long.

Thin rings seen circling Uranus

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Five thin rings have been detected surrounding the mysterious planet Uranus, and scientists said Wednesday they constitute the first major structural discovery in the solar system in 50 years.

Until the sighting from an airborne space laboratory earlier this month and followup confirmation by earthbound astronomers, Saturn was believed to be the only one of the solar system's nine known planets to have such rings.

Details of the finding were discussed by researcher James Elliott in an interview.

"The possibility of the rings had been vaguely speculated before, but the discovery caught everyone by surprise," said Elliott, an astronomer at Cornell University.

Elliott said he and his co-workers at the Ames Research Center in California were studying the stars around Uranus from the laboratory aircraft 41,000 feet above the Indian Ocean when the abrupt sighting was made.

The rings had not been discovered before, he explained, because the light reflected from the planet is usually so bright it obscures lesser reflections from the rings. But on March 10, the planet's position on the night-side of earth provided the right light conditions for detecting the rings.

Elliott said the rings are similar to the rings around Saturn, but much thinner. Much more research remains to be done, he added.

"We don't know why they are so thin," he said. "They are only a few miles thin, and the thickest one is 30 to 60 miles. Saturn's rings are thousands of miles thick."

"We can't really tell what the rings are made of," he said. "One good guess would be some type of ice. One theory about Saturn's rings is that they are made out of snowballs."

One possibility, he said, is that the rings are remnants of a moon or are composed of material present during the formation of solar system that never coalesced into moons.

He also said the discovery of the rings could have a major impact on current knowledge of Uranus.

Presently, scientists believe Uranus is four times larger than Earth and has a surface temperature of 300 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit. It is 1.7 billion miles from the sun.

After the National Aeronautics and Space Agency teams first reported the rings, observers around the world were asked to confirm the sighting. Existence of the rings since has been confirmed from observatories in India and Australia.

The last major scientific discovery in the solar system was the planet Pluto in 1930.

MANY OUTDOOR ACTIVITIES PLANNED Event-laden spring in store

By SEAN HICKEY
State News Staff Writer

If MSU students are not spending time toiling over books in the Library or swilling beer in bars this spring term, they will more than likely be participating in a wide variety of student-sponsored events, concerts and service projects scheduled for this term.

As spring term brings on warmer weather, many of the activities move to the outdoors and will feature both RHA and Greek Week as major events, both to be held from May 15 to 21.

RHA Week, which will involve the nearly 18,000 students who live in residence halls, will sponsor events which include a war over the Red Cedar River, complexwide picnics, a mile running marathon, triathlon, an all-night swimming party at the IM pool and the third annual outdoor for-all concert set up by MSU Pop Entertainment.

The all-day concert, which is held on the Red Cedar River next to the Auditorium, will finish up the RHA week on Saturday and will feature two or three different performers and groups.

Greek Week will sponsor similar events which include a tug of war, chug contests, tricycle races, Greek sing, a feast, canoe races, Frisbee contests and the all-University Junior 500, which involves racing and pushing go-carts.

The Junior 500, sponsored by Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, will include teams from residence hall floors and Greek houses racing through a one-mile course over West Circle Drive on campus.

If outdoor activities and hijinks are unappealing to some, students can find refuge with a number of concerts, lectures and plays that will be sponsored under both ASMSU and the Union Activities Board.

Pop Entertainment, under ASMSU, will have the Doobie Brothers in concert on April 22 with tickets going on sale in two weeks.

ShowcaseJazz will feature Earl Kaigh and the Heath Brothers on May 20 and 21 and Great Issues will have Tony Antonabrice in a combination concert and speech on April 3 and 6.

Other concerts from these student organizations and others such as Mariah and Ebony and Ten Pound Fiddle will be announced as contracts become final.

The Players Gallery will be performing the play "Kanta" on April 15 and 16 and UAB will sponsor the production, "How to Succeed in Business" with auditions for interested students on April 1, 2 and 3.

Many students will also be involved with a number of service projects this term through the Office of Volunteers Programs. Last term nearly 1,600 students were involved in over 42 different service projects throughout central Michigan.

This term, student participation in volunteer programs which deal with such projects as special education and assistance to handicappers is expected to increase.

A tramp-a-thon, a bike-a-thon, a bounce-a-thon and a pancake eating contest are some projects that are being sponsored by various Greek houses this spring to raise money for such charities as muscular dystrophy and diabetes.

The Student Foundation will be organizing plans for the Spartan Spirit Block next fall and the Homecoming Committee will also be planning for next year.

Boger leaving MSU with 'mixed emotions'

extensive agricultural background, Boger said. He added that the importance of solving energy and food supply problems in the future made the job especially attractive.

Though he was chosen from a field of over 150 candidates, he did not apply for the position but learned from his circle of friends that he had been nominated, he said. He then responded to a letter requesting credentials, was interviewed and selected.

In the meantime, Wharton must begin the search to find a replacement for Boger, who was just approved as provost last Aug. 2 by the MSU Board of Trustees. He had served as acting provost 11 months before that.

Boger said he will be as helpful as he can in selecting a new provost, but added that he would take no initiative because he does not think he should choose his successor.

Members of the MSU Chapter of the American Association of University Professors had protested Wharton's appointment of Boger to act as provost without consulting the faculty at a trustee meeting last May.

Boger said Wharton would probably consult with a group like the Executive Committee of the Academic Council before recommending anyone to fill the position.

"Those who were involved have indicated to me in private that it was the principle and not the person which concerned them," he added. "I have worked very effectively with several of them since then."

Tossing the baby in the bathing water

It's kinda strange to be walking securely on solid ground one minute, and then the next minute, there's nothing.

It's even stranger to be crawling along on solid ground one instant, and then the next, nothing.

Nothing you can put your feet — or your hands and knees — on, anyway.

Nothing but stinging eyes, muffled noises, mouths full of water and plenty of adult hands holding you up.

They start anywhere from 3 months to a year old. They're only babies, and the new frontier is a swimming pool.

It all takes place at the Women's IM Building and at East Lansing High School, where the basic idea is to get infants familiar with water and encourage them to develop automatic responses to keep floating and to thrash toward the pool wall, and to know where to go to get to a pool wall.

It may sound like quite an ordeal for an infant to be put through, but directors of the program, which is known as "Water Babies," say it really isn't so difficult.

Children, ranging up to an autumnal 6 years old, learn easily when they go at their own pace and aren't overtaxed.

And the smaller they are, the colder they get and parents, who are expected to accompany their offspring into the watery terrain need to take extra-special care that the infants don't get frigid.

Freedom report aces revision amendment

By NANCY ROGIER
State News Staff Writer

Among the many proposals and agenda items facing approval or completion by the Academic Council spring term is a proposal that Carolyn Stieber, University ombudsman and ex-officio member of the council, feels is a "victory for students" and that time for its approval is now.

The proposal is an amendment to Article II of the Academic Freedom Report which outlines academic rights and responsibilities of students.

The proposed amendment would require a professor to grant a grade change providing the grade is shown to be unfair or based on factors other than a student's performance. The new grade would then be implemented by the dean of the respective college.

In accordance to the amendment, the section of Article II dealing with grade change now has an additional sentence. It states "In the event that a grade is determined to be based on factors other than a student's performance, following the procedure of 2.1.4.8. (a section which outlines channels for receiving and considering student complaints), the dean of the college shall cause the student's performance to be reassessed and the appropriate grade awarded."

The significance of this addition lies in the fact that prior to the amendment, even if a professor was shown to have given an unfair grade, no action could be taken to remedy the situation. A student could show the grade to be unfair using the available channels, but procedures to actually implement a grade change were not included. Now, however, steps can be taken to insure that a fair grade be assessed.

The measure jumped a major hurdle when it was approved by the Faculty Council in its March 15 meeting. The next step is to have the amendment approved by the Committee on Student Affairs and ASMSU, and then sent to Student Council and Academic Council for final approval.

Stieber, a supporter of the Article II amendment, said that any changes made in the proposal would be unwise. "I'm prepared to argue against any changes," she said and added that time spent in making any changes would "only be the death" of the amendment. "I really can't imagine any student constituency turning this down," she said.

Stieber, who has backed the amendment for two years, feels that the Faculty Council's approval of the amendment is a "victory for students" and a "significant change."

"I have been operating on every level I could to push this through," she said.

Other proposals facing Academic Council this term include amended procedures for selecting the all-University level officers and administrators other than the president and clarifying the Bylaws for Academic Governance. Robert Maddox, chairperson of the University committee on Academic Governance, said that no big arguments should ensue over approval of clarifications.

The council's definite goal is to complete business on the amendments to the Academic Freedom Report by this term, though there is a possibility that the measure could be held up by either Student Affairs or ASMSU.

"I pray night and day that there is no holdup," said Michelle Matel, undergraduate member of the Academic Council Steering Committee and former chairperson of the University Committee on Student Affairs.

COLLEGE OF SOCIAL SCIENCE UNDERGRADUATES

Petitions for Candidacy as College of Social Science Undergraduate Representatives to the Academic Council are now being accepted by the Student Advisory Council of the College. Petitions may be picked up in any Department or School Main Office in the College. They must be returned to Dr. Baljit Singh Assistant Dean for Academic Affairs, 205 Berkeley, by 5 p.m., April 8, 1977 for transmittal to the Council.

The Student Constituency of the College of Social Science includes all full-time regularly-enrolled students assigned a Curriculum Code beginning with the letter N (designation of a major in the College).

Student enters race for City Council

By GEORGIA HANSHEW
State News Staff Writer

MSU junior Alan Fox today became first to announce his candidacy for one of two East Lansing City Council seats to be filled in the Nov. 8 city election.

White House roll featuring real eggs

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Jimmy Carter, youngsters will get real eggs, not the plastic imitations used on the White House lawn during the past two Easter egg rolls.

About four dozen eggs will be provided by the Georgia Egg Commission for the Easter Sunday contest on April 11, industry officials said Wednesday.

The commission offered to furnish up to 20,000 eggs so that all children could have some to take home, but the White House rejected that offer and is accepting only about four dozen to be used in the egg roll contests.

Children under 8 years of age participate in the event by pushing eggs along a prescribed course on the lawn with spoons. Last years some 8,614 children and adults showed up for the Easter egg roll, a decline from 10,230 in 1975. Officials blamed 93 degree heat for the smaller turnout.

Two years ago the Ford

Administration substituted plastic imitations for hard-boiled eggs in an attempt to prevent the squishy messes that have occurred at White House egg rolls since they were begun in the administration of Rutherford B. Hayes.

Amore in Italy blooms early

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Love Italian-style blossoms at an early age.

A poll of 25,000 young Italians has shown that 43 per cent of the respondents had their first sexual experience between the ages of 16 and 18.

The two seats become vacant this fall with the expiration of the four-year terms of Council members John Polomsky and Mary Sharp.

Neither councilmember has announced intentions to run for re-election, though they have not ruled out the possibility.

"I've not decided yet," Polomsky said. "I have to think of first things first."

Polomsky said he will be too busy working on city drainage problems and the 1977-78 city budget to be concerned about the election.

Sharp could not be reached for comment Wednesday afternoon, though she has consistently refused to say whether she will run for a fourth term on the council.

Polomsky has served on the council for four years, while Sharp has been a council member since 1965.

Fox, 21, a history major, has been a resident of East Lansing since 1959 and graduated from East Lansing High School.

He has been an aide to the State House of Representatives Consumers Committee since 1975, is a former board member of the Michigan Student Environmental Confederation and has been an East Lansing deputy voter registrar since 1973.

In addition, Fox was vice-chairperson of the Ingham County Democratic Party from November 1974 to 1976 and is a member of ACLU Common Cause, Environmental Action, Consumers Union and Council for a Livable World.

"I see cities in general, and that includes East Lansing, as not really looking too far ahead," Fox said, "dealing instead with day-to-day problems."

"They're not looking at what the cities are going to look like 15 to 20 years into the future."

He cited as an example the proposed construction of a Dayton-Hudson shopping mall north of East Lansing. If those citizens opposed to construction of the mall had known five years ago what was going to be done with the land, he said, they would now have a better chance of combating the proposed project.

Fox said he is getting a head start on his campaign so he can reach the students before they leave East Lansing for the summer.

"About half this city is going to be out of town about two months before the (primary) election," Fox said.

"The people who are going to be out of town deserve the same level of campaign as those who will be here," he said.

A primary election will be held Aug. 2 if more than four candidates vie for the two seats. The four highest vote-getters in the primary election will contend in the Nov. 8 city election.

The only other person who has obtained a petition from the city clerk's office for council candidacy is Joey Reagan, an MSU doctoral student. Reagan could not be reached for comment.

Students can apply for absentee ballots at the city clerk's office May 19.

Former protesters becoming policemen, CJ official reports

New breed of officers called more sympathetic

By DIANE COX

Former protesters who threw rocks at police officers during the 1960s are now successfully entering the field of law enforcement, according to Robert C. Trojanowicz, acting director of the MSU School of Criminal Justice.

Trojanowicz said if the riots of that decade were to occur again, the college-educated policeman would probably be less violent now because he understands the reasons for the situations and the methods most suitable to deal with it.

He added that the protesters-turned-policemen may be more sympathetic in such situations than their traditional counterparts because they have been there themselves.

In addition, the college-educated policeman has a wider insight into other lifestyles and can find alternative ways to handle disturbances, Trojanowicz said.

"The policeman with a college degree doesn't see the law as fixed and inflexible," he said.

"He is exposed to different lifestyles and philosophies. So when he goes out into the community he is better able to see the world through someone else's eyes."

Trojanowicz said that only 10 per cent of the police in the 1960s had a college education, but today the figure is much higher, including law enforcement students going to school while on the job.

"These people get extensive training in human relations and verbal skills," he said.

"The more well-rounded and articulate a person is, the more able he is to work things out verbally instead of with violence."

The "new policeman" has also learned to depersonalize violence, viewing it more objectively, but still might find it necessary to react violently in self-defense, Trojanowicz said.

"He knows that he is a symbol of authority and realizes that the violence isn't against him personally, but against this symbol," he explained.

"However, if the confrontation gets to the point of a rock in the head or a broken jaw, the natural reaction of self-preservation takes over logic," he said.

No matter how adept the new policemen become in dealing with the public, the police officer will always be perceived by some with hostility, Trojanowicz said.

Vote extends killings probe

"I think in the case of Richard Sprague we have seen a witch hunt and a devastation of human rights that I never expected to see again," McKinney said. "I think a man has been systematically and publicly destroyed by rumor, innuendo."

Gonzalez tried to fire Sprague on Feb. 10, accusing him of deceit, dishonesty and malfeasance and refusing to carry out orders to cooperate in cutting costs.

Gonzalez expanded on those charges in hour-long speeches on the floor Monday and Tuesday of this week and raised questions about Sprague's ethics in the past in some of his law cases.

Rep. Floyd Fithian, D-Ind., a committee member, challenged Gonzalez to make those statements off the House floor where he could be sued for slander.

The committee was established late last year and has been embroiled in controversy from the first day this Congress opened in January.

Efforts to give it life for the full two years of this Congress were at first resisted because of opposition to the committee's original support of a $6.5 million budget for its first year and statements by Sprague indicating that committee investigators would be using such electronic devices as lie detectors and voice stress analyzers.

The House decided in January to give the committee interim life through Wednesday because of the controversy and to give more time to decide whether to give the investigation full life.

But the investigations came to a halt Feb. 10 when Gonzalez publicly called Sprague a "prima donna" and tried to fire him.

Other committee members told Sprague to stay after getting a ruling from the House parliamentarian that the committee rather than the chairperson had to do any firing.

Gonzalez resigned, accusing House leaders of not supporting his efforts to fire Sprague, and Stokes was made the new chairperson.

The committee issued an interim report this week saying it is pursuing new leads of possible mobster involvement in the Kennedy assassination and a witness's claim that Lee Harvey Oswald appeared to be an FBI informant.

The report said that investigators are concentrating in the King assassination on whether James Earl Ray's large expenses were paid by a businessman's association or other conspirators in that assassination.

Witness' death ruled suicide

visiting a relative. He said Fonzi asked to see De Mohrenschildt, was told by De Mohrenschildt's daughter that he was not at home and left saying he would return that evening.

The man's body was found by his daughter, Alexandra, 33, several hours later. He had been shot in the head and a 20-gauge shotgun lay nearby, Sheets said. He said there was no suicide note.

"At the time of the shooting, he was alone in the house except for two maids who said they did not hear the shot," Sheets said.

Dutch journalist Willem Oltmans, who has been interviewed by assassination committee investigators, has quoted the Russian-born De Mohrenschildt as saying that he felt some responsibility for Kennedy's slaying.

But it wasn't clear from the interview whether De Mohrenschildt said anything other than that, as an acquaintance of Oswald, he felt he might have been able to stop the assassination in some way.

Kennedy's assassination was the work of Oswald alone and was not part of any conspiracy, the Warren Commission concluded.

De Mohrenschildt had testified before the Warren Commission that he had a close friendship with Oswald, but knew nothing of Oswald's plans or his reasons for shooting Kennedy.

SALT talks

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill emerged from the meeting with the President and said "everything is going on as we anticipated. We're delighted by the fact there will be further meetings in May."

House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas said the Soviet move was not "wholly unexpected. It would have been surprising if the Russians said, 'Fine, we accept it.'"

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said he was "not surprised" by the developments in Moscow because there "always is an element of uncertainty" in dealing with the Russians. The minority leader said that Carter told the group he would "hang tough."

Asked whether Carter's strong stand on human rights was an element, Baker said "it's hard to say, no one knows."

However, Rep. John Rhodes, R-Ariz., told reporters that "we were told that human rights didn't have anything to do with it."

Baker emphasized that Carter has Republican support. Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said, "There is no reason for alarm over this entirely predictable reaction of the Kremlin. It only emphasizes the critical importance of human rights as an issue, and of the implementation of the Helsinki Declaration."

Drug sales target of bills

Cushingberry said. "He will have his heroin, by whatever means."

"It makes more sense to let him join in a state program where he can get what he needs, receive treatment and hopefully live a useful life without crime. The illegal narcotics trade would not be able to compete with this type of program."

"The huge profits would disappear and would not be worth the risk of imprisonment for as much as life."

Neo-classic Renaissance

soaring five-octave voice, closes side one. The back-up instrumentation is more than adequate, if not superior.

"Midas Man" falls into the "Carpet of the Sun" genre — a short, but extremely charming song with a breezy background supporting engaging lyrics. The multitracked vocal overlays are technically outstanding. "The Captive Heart" is a shorter piece centered around the intertwining of Halsam and Tout's vocals, and tasteful piano runs. Oddly enough, it reminds me of a few of the finer ballads from the Jefferson Airplane's "Surrealistic Pillow."

"Touching Once (is so hard to keep)" closes out this superb album. It is a classical piano embellishment, typical in the Renaissance mold of deftly crafted songs. Drummer Terence Sullivan should also be noted as a fine musician, considering the fact that he has to keep time not only with the other members, but an orchestra as well.

Novella is the best album of 1977. It will take an extraordinary effort in the next 8 months to prove otherwise.
