Jet crash in Georgia kills 67

HOPE, Ga. (AP) — At least 67 were killed Monday when a Southways DC-9 jet, struggling to make it through bad weather with both engines out, crashed into flames while attempting a landing on a country road.

The plane, flight 242, carried 81 passengers and a crew of four. The pilot reported a bad windshield and both engines were according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

The jet exploded, just like a ball of fire went into the air," said Steve Jones, who saw the crash about 35 miles northwest of Atlanta. "There was total destruction, nothing less." Several injured were taken by helicopter and taken to nearby hospitals.

The flight was bound from Muscle Shoals and Huntsville, Ala., to Atlanta in stormy weather.

The pilot was trying to get to Dobbins Air Force Base at Marietta, Ga., to make an emergency landing but didn't make it, the FAA said.

The jet came down on the highway, in front of a school, but veered off. It crashed through a small general store and slammed into a wooded area where several homes were located, Jones said.

The store owner and his wife, Charles and Mildred Newman, were in the building, but were not killed, according to the Paulding County sheriff's office. "There was fire going everywhere," said

Mrs. John Clayton, wife of the New Hope fire chief. She said bodies were hurtled from the plane. "I saw several that were burned to death."

Some of the wreckage hit a woman standing in a nearby yard, killing her instantly, another eyewitness said.

The debris was scattered over about a mile. Piles of wreckage up to five feet high smoldered near two wrecked cars, a burned-out home and the only recognizable piece of the plane, the tail section, about 30 feet long.

Burned trees, sheared by the plane, marked the first portion of the crash scene. FAA spokesperson Jack Barker said, "The pilot was in radio communication with the Atlanta air traffic control and reported a flameout in both engines."

Another FAA spokesperson said the pilot was "trying to bring it in somewhere, obviously trying to make an emergency landing somewhere out there in that rural area."

The plane went down at 4:15 p.m., EST, he said.

The survivors were being taken to several area hospitals and some were being transferred to the Grady Memorial Hospital burn center in downtown Atlanta.

Most of the bodies were taken to the Hubbard Pahts factory, where a temporary morgue was set up, the Paulding County sheriff's office said. Other bodies were at Paulding County and Kennestone hospitals.

Spartan' slate invalidated; pending report unsigned

By NUNZIO M. LUPO
State News Staff Writer
at Barry, Spartan Spirit candidate and vote-getter in the ASMSU Student Board presidential race, was invalidated by the All University Elections Commission (AUEC) Monday. Unless some judicial action is taken by Tuesday, Counterforce candidate Mary Cloud will be seated as interim president of the Student Board.

Barry and his slate were invalidated for not signing their typewritten spending report. In accordance with the section of the elections code that defines a spending report, it must be signed by a slate representative. Barry said he signed the report, but the only signature actually on the statement is that of Rick Lehrter, the ASMSU comptroller, who accepts the reports.

"It seems this is Counterforce's way of finagling their way in," Barry said of the invalidation. "It's a good try, but I hope it's not successful."

Barry pointed out that AUEC Chairperson Barry Griffiths has in the past been affiliated with the Counterforce slate as a board candidate.

Barry said that when he talked to Griffiths Friday by telephone, he did not mention the lack of a signature on the report. Griffiths said the reports were not examined by the AUEC until Saturday.

"We could not conduct any questions of who is disqualified until we'd all met," he explained.

"I assure you, we're going to challenge this junk," Barry said. "It's a very low political move. I doubt that this will stand up (with the judiciaries)."

Other Spartan Spirit candidates invalidated are: Sue Lalk, College of Human Ecology; Thomas Lammy, College of Natural Science; Eric Heard, College of Social Science; Jack Husted, College of Business; and Kathy Wright, College of Education.

Husted was invalidated for not filing any report with the slate. Heard, who was not the top vote-getter in his race, was also invalidated but did not appear on the list from the AUEC. Griffiths said the omission was an oversight.

Wright has been involved in appeals for the College of Education since last year pending the decision of Vice President of Student Affairs Eldon R. Nonnamaker. She was invalidated in last year's election for filing her spending report late, though she received the highest number of votes.

Mary Cloud, runner-up in that race, as well, was seated in that position until her resignation in February.

Cloud will be seated as interim president of the ASMSU Student Board until a special election can be held, or until the judiciaries have resolved Barry's appeal.

A special election will be held two weeks after the resolution of all appeals if the invalidations are upheld.

Acting as interim Student Board college representatives during the appeals will be: Stuart Carter, College of Natural Science; Timothy Hagle, College of Education; and Debra Schmidt, College of Human Ecology. Schmidt and Carter are members of the Counterforce slate.

Four candidates in addition to the Spartan Spirit slate members were also invalidated for not signing their spending reports. Sixteen candidates were invalidated for not filing reports, but none were the top vote-getters in his/her race.

Zaire breaks relations with Cuban government

NSHAHA, Zaire (AP) — The Zaire government broke relations with Cuba Monday, saying it had uncovered evidence that Cuba was involved in the invasion of copper-rich Province by Angola-based rebels.

The government radio announced the break and claimed that documents proving Cuban involvement were found on an unidentified Cuban diplomat. The radio gave no details of the document.

The broadcast said all Cuban diplomats were ordered to leave the country "in accordance with international usage." There was no indication how many Cuban diplomats are in resident Mobutu Sese Seko's government has repeatedly claimed that Cuba, as well as the Soviet Union and Angola, are backing the invaders in Shaba with military advisers, weapons, arms and equipment.

The Cubans, Russians and Angolans have denied any role in the invasion. Cuban President Fidel Castro told a press conference in Tanzania last month that Mobutu's allegations were an "excuse for getting more military aid from the Yankee imperialists and mean neocolonialists."

Last week Zaire army commanders told newsmen their troops have found Russians, Angolans and Portuguese among dead enemy soldiers. But they offered no evidence to back the claim. The Portuguese are former colonial rulers of Angola.

As many as 15,000 Soviet-backed Cuban troops fought in the Angolan civil war to help Marxist-oriented Popular Movement beat out two pro-Western nationalist factions and bands of Cuban troops are reported still in Angola.

MICHIGAN TAX RESISTERS CREATE FUND Peace organizations get grants

Members of Great Lakes Life Community express their feelings about the amount of tax dollars spent for war-related purposes by dishing up a pie cut to represent tax expenditures. Steven Senesi (Uncle Sam) cuts the pie while Kathi Byrne (The General) and Judy O'Sullivan (The Spectre of Death) receive the most generous portions.

By JOE PIZZO
State News Staff Writer

The spectre of death and a general of the army were vying with starving children and educational programs for slices of the all-American apple pie.

And death and the general won — receiving more than 60 per cent of the pie, intended to represent an American's tax dollar.

That was the scenario at the Capitol Monday as the Great Lakes Life Community (GLLC) presented four $25 grants to organizations in southern Michigan dedicated to peace and non-violence.

Money for the grants — and the apple pie — came from a "Life Sharing Fund" created by tax resisters who have withheld federal taxes in protest of those monies being used by the government "for murder," in the words of GLLC spokesperson Jack Payden-Travers of Kalamazoo.

A grant awarded to the East Lansing Peace Education Center was accepted by Barbara Thibault.

"It will be used specifically against the B1 bomber and for life and freedom for the black majority in South Africa," she said.

Payden-Travers said the money distributed came exclusively from withheld federal taxes — including unpaid federal excise tax that is imposed on phone bills.

He emphasized the relative immunity from prosecution enjoyed by the average tax resister who refuses to pay the nine per cent tax on his phone bill.

The telephone companies will not — and cannot, thanks to court decisions handed down during the heyday of anti-Vietnam protests — interrupt service or remove equipment if the phone bill itself is paid.

"It costs the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) $200 to collect every dollar withheld in phone tax, so we're actually withholding $200 from the government for every dollar of tax," he said.

Payden-Travers estimated the amount withheld from his own phone bill, which averages about $35 monthly, at somewhere around $20 per year.

Steven Senesi, also of Kalamazoo, portrayed Uncle Sam attempting to divide the "tax pie" equally. He noted that so long as the withholding of taxes is done openly, resisters cannot be prosecuted from fraud.

They can only be charged the unpaid tax by the IRS, which then can take such measures as seizing bank accounts or garnishment of paychecks to collect the amount due, he said.

A spokesperson for the IRS in Detroit said that the withholding of taxes for ideological reasons is treated by that agency in the same manner as simple nonpayment.

A recent news release from IRS headquarters in Washington, D.C., promised that taxresisters "can look forward to vigorous civil and criminal enforcement measures" as a consequence of their actions.

"They're about as vigorous as most federal employees," Payden-Travers said with a touch of irony in his voice.

Denial follows claim of computer purchase

By PATRICIA LACROIX
State News Staff Writer

Two MSU departments Monday denied purchasing their own computer systems or going outside of the University to have their programs processed, despite evidence to the contrary.

A report filed in June 1976 by Charles Miller, lead systems programmer for the MSU Data Processing Department, says that University Health Center, the Medical Center, the Medical School, Food Stores and College of Agriculture have either left the MSU system or are seriously considering such a move in the near future.

Allegations such as these assume special relevance since Miller also reported that the main MSU computer has been sitting idle.

A performance analyzer test conducted on the computer in November 1975 indicated that only 28 per cent of the machines' capabilities were being utilized.

The system, which Miller alleges sat idle for this time, costs approximately $60,000 per month. This totals $2,100,000 for the last three years that it has been used in the department.

Miller further stated that the excess computer power was hidden by running inefficient and time-consuming programs. He said Data Processing employees spent their idle time "cutting out snowflakes... sleeping around the machines or reading most of the time."

Internal and external auditing reports requested by MSU President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. indicate the University Health Center purchased its own computer in November 1973. The cost of the Burroughs 13000 mini-computer, which was allegedly purchased, is $7,000 annually. Miller said he drew up a system design which could have been used by the health center in place of the new system, saving between $10,000 and $12,000 per year.

Francis Martin, former director of Data Processing, refused to consider the proposal, Miller said, and the new system was never worked on or tested.

Coffee smugglers executed in Uganda

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan troops have executed a gang of coffee smugglers by burning them alive on an island in Lake Victoria, the daily Nation newspaper said Monday.

The Kenyan paper, quoting what it called reliable sources, said the smugglers were captured as they were running coffee across the lake from Uganda into Kenya for shipment abroad.

The men were taken to Kigulu Island by the soldiers "and told to lie down," the Nation said. Then "they were covered with empty sacks and petrol was poured over them. They were then set alight."

The reported executions were apparently in retaliation for the killing of a soldier by smugglers in an earlier clash, the paper added.

Haitian drought spreads to cities

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The drought that began three years ago in the northwestern corner of Haiti has spread to the cities, raising the specter of epidemic and death in one of the poorest nations of the Western Hemisphere.

While affluent Haitians drill their own wells or learn to conserve water, the poor buy their supplies from local merchants at high prices, or break water mains to fill their buckets.

Electric power is available only four hours a day because the lake which provides water for the country's $35 million hydroelectric dam is drying up. The government has purchased an emergency generating system from an American firm for $2.2 million, but it is not yet in operation.

Rains trigger flooding in South

With little warning, heavy spring rains triggered massive flooding in three states Monday and high winds or tornadoes hit three others, leaving at least 21 persons dead and thousands homeless.

Long-time residents said flooding in parts of Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia was the worst they could remember.

In southeastern Kentucky, with six inches of rain recorded and more expected, the Cumberland River was rising two feet an hour and was expected to smash records and crest 12 to 16 feet over flood stage.

When the Tug Fork River and numerous streams in southern West Virginia went over their banks, they washed several houses and mobile homes away. And in Virginia, hundreds of families were evacuated from flooded homes in the state's mountainous southwest sector.

In all three states, units of the National Guard were called out for evacuation and rescue duty.

Identification of crash victims begins

DOVER, Del. (AP) A team of experts on Monday began the somber task of identifying 326 victims of the world's worst air disaster.

Pan American Airways flew the bodies to the base Sunday from Santa Cruz de Tenerife in the Canary Islands. They were among the 577 killed when two Boeing 747 jumbo jets owned by Pan Am and KLM collided on the runway there March 27.

Pan Am made arrangements with the government to use the mortuary at Dover

Air Force Base for identification work because it is one of the few facilities that can handle the large number of bodies.

The mortuary — a one-story cinder-block building on the sprawling base — was used extensively during the Vietnam War.

The identification operation was "starting slowly," according to Burt Torrance, Pan Am vice president for the northeast region.

FBI influenced witnesses, O'Neill says

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill said Monday he believes some witnesses of the Warren Commission gave incomplete testimony when they testified about the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

"I don't believe they gave a full and honest description," O'Neill told newsmen. "I think they were reporting the will of the FBI."

The speaker did not elaborate but a source close to him said later he was referring primarily to a man O'Neill talked with about the time the Warren Commission reported its findings.

"When this fellow told them (the FBI) what he was going to say, they said 'Well, don't say all that, it will just confuse things,'" the source said.

O'Neill made the comment when asked if he was convinced the House Committee on Assassinations really has had new evidence justifying the two-year investigation the House approved last week.

Botulism victim sues restaurant

PONTIAC (UPI) — The number of cases in the nation's worst outbreak of botulism climbed to 35 Monday and one of the victims sued the Mexican restaurant that served the tainted food.

Health officials estimated that perhaps

10 or 15 more cases would emerge by late this Friday when the 8-day incubation period for the disease expires, though hundreds of restaurant patrons were still in danger — including some believed to have left the state.

Bell customers hit with increase

LANSING (UPI) — Customers of Michigan Bell Telephone Co. have been socked with their third rate increase in less than one year, and at least one more hike seems likely — perhaps yet this year.

The state Public Service Commission

(PSC) on a 2-1 vote Monday, approved a permanent rate hike of $58.9 million for Bell in a decision which provoked sharp exchange between commission Chairperson Daniel Demlow, who voted with the majority, and Commissioner William Ralls, who dissented.

Soviet leaders welcome Castro

MOSCOW (AP) — Top Soviet leaders welcomed Cuban President Fidel Castro on a visit expected to deal with ways to aid black nationalists fighting white minority governments in southern Africa.

Castro arrived Monday at Moscow's Vnukovo Airport, used for important visitors, after an African tour and a brief stop in East Germany. He was hugged at the airport by Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, 74, who had returned from his own African tour earlier the same day.

Also present were Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, underlining the importance of the visit.

Both Podgorny and Castro, during their African trips, called for a quick end to white-minority government in Rhodesia and South Africa and for the unity of "anti-imperialist" forces on the continent.

Their call for change in South Africa and Rhodesia by means including armed struggle ran counter to efforts by the United States and Britain to arrange a more gradual and peaceful transition to black majority rule. Castro controls the Soviet bloc's most powerful fighting force in Africa; Cuban troops helped leftists win last year's Angolan civil war. The Cuban president said he visited 2,500 Cuban soldiers and civilians on his African tour, presumably mostly in Angola.

Zaire has claimed the Cubans backed exile guerrillas who crossed over from Angola last month to invade the copper-rich southern Province of Shaba. Fighting is still under way in Shaba, and Zaire said Monday it was breaking its relations with Cuba. Castro has denied Cubans were involved in the invasion. Bodgorny visited Tanzania, Zambia and Mozambique, and called "front line" states black efforts to end white government in southern Africa. He made a surprise trip to Somalia, a close Soviet ally in East Africa.

Castro visited the same countries, plus Algeria and Ethiopia. Algeria's government has close ties with both the Soviet Union and Cuba, while Ethiopia has become increasingly friendly toward the Soviet bloc in recent months. Relations between Ethiopia and Somalia themselves, however, have been strained.

CLEAN-AIR REGULATIONS DISPUTED

Justices to hear appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide how far the government can go to make sure the nation's cleanest air gets no dirtier.

The justices voted to hear an appeal by many industries that the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., made a mistake when it ruled that the Environmental Protection Agency has a broad authority in guarding clean air.

The industry representatives claim that the strict clean-air regulations will prohibit manufacturing growth by limiting the number of new plants that can be constructed.

The regulations, if allowed to stand, could cause the nation to lose "its struggle to obtain energy self-sufficiency," the industry representatives said.

Under the 1970 Clean Air Act, some air pollution is allowed.

Amendments to the act, however, were used by the EPA to order states to protect those areas with better air quality than allowed under the act. Those areas should not be subjected to "significant deterioration," the EPA has ordered.

Most of the clean-air areas are located in rural states or in states historically free of heavy manufacturing.

When the federal agency issued its standards, it included only pollution from sulfur dioxide and particulate matter, pollutants most often associated with coal-burning power plants. Industry representatives sued to strike down the standards for the two pollutants.

The Sierra Club, a national group of environmentalists, filed a related suit against the EPA in an attempt to force the regulations to include four other pollutants — nitrogen oxide, hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and petrochemical oxidants. The Sierra Club sought to have its suit combined with the industry representative's suits, but the Supreme Court turned down the environmentalists' appeal.

The Supreme Court combined both suits for its review.

The court also agreed to decide another clean air issue — whether a company charged with criminally violating anti-pollution rules may defend itself by challenging the legality of the rule.

A Detroit demolition firm, Adamo Wrecking, was charged with a criminal violation of the Clean Air Act by not following procedures for guarding against asbestos particle pollution during the demolition of buildings.

Lower courts ruled that the company had no right to challenge the rule during its criminal case.

In other matters Monday, the court:

• Refused to hear an appeal by former Sen. Eugene McCarthy that televised presidential debates cannot exclude "major" candidates without providing them with equal air time.

• Ruled that a state may tax a mail order sales operation that is based in another state if the seller has even a very limited presence within the state.

Bombing injures 33 in Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two bombs exploded in crowded Belfast restaurants Monday, blowing an infant out of its carriage and hurling diners into the street, police and witnesses reported. Thirty-three persons were injured.

The 10-month-old baby and nine other victims were hospitalized.

The bombs, containing between one and three pounds of explosives, were somehow smuggled through the tight security around Belfast's city center, known as the "ring of steel."

The district is surrounded by a high steel fence and guarded by troops and police who check and search all who enter.

The militant Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the blasts in telephoned statements to several Belfast news organizations.

The almost exclusively Roman Catholic IRA is fighting to drive the British out of Northern Ireland and merge the Protestant-dominated province with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic.

A spokesperson for Northern Ireland Secretary Roy Mason, Britain's Minister in charge of the embattled province, said an investigation would be launched to find out how the security net was breached.

Security authorities said they suspect that women terrorists may be smuggling explosives past the city center checkpoints and assembling the bombs once inside. Three weeks ago similar blasts wrecked three stores but no one was injured.

Palestinian issue called conflict core

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egypt's President Anwar Sadat served notice Monday that "the Palestinian cause" is the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

"No progress whatsoever can be achieved so long as this problem remains unresolved," he told President Jimmy Carter during an arrival ceremony at the White House.

Referring to Carter's public endorsement of a "homeland" for Palestinian refugees, Sadat told the President: "You came very close to the proper remedy."

But prodding Carter to go further, Sadat said, "What is needed is the establishment of a political entity where the Palestinians can, at long last, be a community of citizens, not a group of refugees."

"The humanitarian dimension of their plight is merely one of the aspects of the problem. Their yearning to exercise their normal rights remains the heart of the issue."

The apparent diversion in views between Sadat and Carter is not a minor matter.

Sadat, who publicly champions the Palestinian cause, seemed to be pressing for national statehood, though he altered his text to say "normal rights" instead of "national rights."

Carter, who referred to the Palestinians as refugees, as the Israelis do, left considerable room for interpretation. The "homeland" he endorsed could be either an independent state or an enclave of Jordan under King Hussein's control.

The Carter-Sadat meeting, Carter's first with an Arab leader, began in the Oval Office and moved to the Cabinet Room. Sadat's visit will last three days.

In welcoming Sadat, Carter steered clear of sensitive issues. This contrasted with his statement while greeting Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin last month that the Jewish state is entitled to "defensible borders," which implied retention of some of the Arab territory captured in the 1967 war.

The closest the President came Monday to touching on a controversy was to point out that in the Middle East there are "opportunities for improved trade, economic benefits, and harmony with one another."

The two leaders met for about an hour and three-quarters in the Cabinet Room, with Vice President Walter F. Mondale, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, Egyptian Foreign Minister Imad Falah and others sitting in. The session was described by Joe Powell, the White House press secretary, as "exploratory in the most part."

Besides the Palestinian issue, the spokesperson said Carter and Sadat discussed the "nature of peace" and "territorial considerations."

Experiment aids drops, adds

ANNE S. CROWLEY
State News Staff Writer

Students may be spending a less time dropping and adding courses if an experiment at the Natural Science Department of University College is successful, said Tim Gottleber, a staff member who works for the department.

University College natural science drops and adds were processed through a computer terminal in addition to being checked against a class by a department staff member.

Donald Weinshank, a natural science professor, originated the idea. The program was developed by Doug Bock, a student and University employee, on his own time.

Gottleber, who operated the computer terminal, said computer processing would take about one-fourth as long as dropping or adding through the present system.

It would also cost less because the amount of employee time and paperwork would be sharply reduced, Gottleber said.

Under the present system, a staff member must check and maintain a class list for each section of each course to determine if any openings exist.

"It's really surprising that no one's done this before," he said. "The University is fossilizing itself by doing it by hand. We had monks and scribes doing it by hand thousands of years ago."

The Natural Science Department will probably continue the experiment, with modifications, for summer term and put it into effect next fall, Gottleber added.

Three terminals will probably be used summer term, he said. With one computer doing the work about four times as fast as the present process, drops and adds may be done as much as 12 times as fast.

Other departments, including American Thought and Language, are also watching the experiment and may adopt the system if it works well, he added.

Bernard Engel, chairperson of the ATL department, was unavailable for comment.

William Hughes, assistant dean of the College of Arts and Letters, was enthusiastic about the possibility of processing drops and adds by computer.

"I am in favor of anything that would take the burden off all sorts of people," he said.

"Hallelujah! would be my view."

In addition to testing the new method, computer tabulation of drops and adds will allow University College natural science instructors to have a final class list Wednesday, the day after drops and adds end, rather than waiting until midterms as all other professors must do, Gottleber said.

Because the experiment is being run through the Computer Science Department and not the Data Processing Department, the students can be logged onto the computer for laboratory work much faster.

Purchase of computer systems denied

That the health center did enter a lease agreement with Burroughs, John Siddall, acting director of health center, said he did not know anything about the computer and would not answer questions regarding the alleged purchase.

Miller's report also states that the MSU College of Agriculture was planning on renting a Four-Phase mini-computer for its own use by July 1, 1978.

The decision was made by the college due to excessive machine and programming charges, delays in getting their work returned and lack of cooperation from the Data Processing Department, Miller said.

College of Agriculture officials were unavailable for comment.

unknown financial amount; and

*That the MSU Medical School was purchasing a PDP II computer in the near future.

David Rovner, professor of medicine, said there was nothing unusual about medical facilities purchasing their own computers. He said this is popularly done in order to process results of research quickly.

Roger Wilkinson, vice president of business and finance, said the users of the present MSU system have been generally satisfied with the utilization of the equipment, and no major misuse has been indicated.

Steve Terry, assistant vice president of business and finance, said the department is "Currently severely underfunded and somewhat understaffed."

He added that increased demands for services have created a backlog of programs waiting to be run "which extends years into the future."

Ernst and Ernst, the accounting firm which conducted the external audit, said the department's equipment was being used to the fullest "during major portions of the day."

CALLS POURING INTO ENFORCEMENT OFFICE

Handicappers utilizing new rights acts

ROXANNE L. BROWN
State News Staff Writer

has been in effect for less than a week, but the Michigan Handicapper Civil Rights Act has created a reactionary ripple of handicappers across the state.

The bill, taking effect March 1, was designed to eliminate discriminatory practices and employment, public accommodations, housing and education.

Handicappers who are now being subjected to discrimination are taking advantage of the civil rights act. According to Director of Enforcement for Detroit's Civil Rights Department Edward Chastang, the office has been swamped with callers wanting further information concerning the bill.

Chastang said that calls from handicappers complaining of earlier cases of discrimination have also been flowing in. Only complaints where the alleged discrimination took place on or after March 31 can be accepted.

Several of the inquiring handicappers, according to Chastang, have complaints dated before the bill went into effect and nothing can be done about these.

Only two accusations of discrimination have become official, meaning they are the only two thus far, to be sent in from the 11 state offices, to the enforcement office in Detroit that follows through on the complaints.

One of the validated charges came from a male handicapper who has allegedly not been allowed to progress to a different position even though he has been experiencing physical pain continuing the work he does now. Chastang said the other formal complaint is from a Michigan male student who filed because he was denied admittance into a large university, allegedly because of his handicap.

Lansing area Civil Rights Commission has had an upswing in persons calling in regard to the Handicapper Civil Rights Act, but according to one spokesperson, actual complaints and charges will not be tallied until they have gone through processing and reached the enforcement office.

Concerning the area of employment, the bill states that an employer cannot fail or refuse to hire, recruit, or promote handicapper individuals if the individual's ability to perform the job's skills is not impaired by his or her mental or physical characteristic. If adaptive devices can be used enabling the handicapper to perform the job, discrimination is also unlawful. Handicappers cannot be classified or segregated in employment, either.

Handicappers cannot be denied the utilization of public accommodations, goods or services because of characteristics unrelated to their ability to use and benefit from the service.

Under the new law, handicappers cannot be subjected to printed statements that state they cannot utilize public services or accommodations. Solely on the basis of being a handicapper, persons cannot be denied housing or the financial assistance usually available in acquiring property.

Ellen Smith, MSU student and organizer of MIRROR, a group for the mentally retarded, said that she is generally pleased that the bill has finally gone into effect. The bill was signed by the governor the latter part of July of last year, but it has been passing through the legislature for the last nine months.

Smith, who was active in the fight for passage of the bill, said she plans on fighting for amendments to the bill which would include the mentally retarded under the areas of education, employment and public accommodation and not just under housing. An amendment of the bill now would make the bill ineffective for six months, so Smith said she has chosen to delay her actions.

"We do not want to hinder the implication of the bill, but we do have lawyers from the Civil Rights Commission working on moves for amendments," Smith said.

concert with GLCC aims.

On Friday, members of the Abrahamic Community in East Lansing, one of eight communities affiliated with GLCC, passed out about 200 leaflets with dimes attached to them at the intersection of Michigan Avenue and Grand Street in downtown Lansing.

The dimes came from taxes withheld by resisters in the area, and recipients were asked to use them "to ride a bus, make a phone call or buy some candy for a child."

Listening Ear sets meetings, seeks prospective volunteers

The Listening Ear, East Lansing's crisis intervention center, will hold orientations for volunteers in Olds Hall Wednesday at 7 p.m. and Saturday at 1 p.m. Room numbers of the orientations will be posted in Olds Hall.

Volunteers need attend only one of the orientation sessions.

The orientations will be an opportunity for prospective volunteers to fill out applications, about the operations of the Listening Ear, and out what will be expected of them as volunteers, said Maurice Grondin, director of the Listening Ear.

"We're looking for as many people as possible," Grondin said. "Even if people are just curious about what the Ear is all about, they should Volunteers are expected to stay six months to a year at the Listening Ear, working at least one four-hour shift per week.

"The main thing we're looking for (in volunteers) is a commitment to working at the Ear," he said. "Volunteers should also have a caring attitude and be open to learning."

Those applicants chosen to be volunteers will attend a 70-hour training session, April 21 through May 1, conducted by the Listening Ear staff. The session will teach volunteers how to handle the many problems people call in about, such as depression, loneliness and sexuality.

"We're a place where people can call or walk in and talk about what's bothering them," Grondin said. "People often come to us when they don't know who to turn to."

Three public hearings set for council meeting

Lansing City Council should have a long evening ahead of it, as three public hearings will be held, beginning at 7:30, at the regular meeting in the city hall council chambers.

The subject of the first hearing will be the use of about $400,000 of revenue sharing monies for 1977-78. This is the fifth year the city has received these federal funds, granted to all local governments to help meet increasing expenses.

Public input will be taken into consideration by the city manager making up his budget proposal, which is due to be released 11.

The second public hearing will deal with a proposed amendment to city ordinance on off-street motor vehicles, formulated in response to complaints from residents in the Tamarisk neighborhood about the use of motorbikes in a nearby empty field.

The third hearing will consider a report by City Planner Scott suggesting 12 alternative sites for the construction of a fire station.

12 proposed sites are located on Abbott Road. Council will vote on a site sometime this spring, and a bonding proposal for a station will probably be placed on the ballot in the November election.

Council will receive recommendations from the transportation commission for the integration of the bus systems of MSU and the local Area Transportation Authority, and from the cable commission for interconnection of the Lansing and East Lansing TV systems.

A resolution on South Africa submitted to council by the Africa Liberation Committee, a task force of the East Lansing Peace Center, has not been included on tonight's agenda.

Not sure what to do after graduation? Do what Cal Kendrick and Les Webster did. They bought a business — a business on wheels — and they move products for northAmerican Van Lines all over the United States.

As Cal puts it: "This business may not be what we trained for in college, but there's no question that our education has helped in putting us near the top of the northAmerican owner-operator fleet."

If you want something more than just a job, do what Cal and Les did . . . be your own boss, traveling the country and making money doing it. northAmerican will furnish the tractor for a reasonable down payment and they'll furnish the loads, too. There's no experience required.

Like any other business, it requires an outlay of time and an initial investment. A minimum investment of $2,100 to a maximum of $3,800 includes the down payment on a tractor and interim living expenses. northAmerican provides training which covers driving, business operations, loading and paperwork.

ms of Bertolucci heduled for series

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

Marcello Bertolucci, best known in the United States for his 1970 film "Last Tango in Paris," will be the featured director of the spring term of the Choice film series.

Bertolucci, born in Italy in 1941, began making home movies as an adolescent and in 1962, published a prize-winning book of poetry. It was then, Bertolucci said, "I finished with poetry on paper." That year he made his first feature, "Grim Reaper," loosely based on a story by Pier Paolo Pasolini. Two years later, Bertolucci made his celebrated "The Revolution," which brought him worldwide acclaim.

Bertolucci's work is typified by lushly romantic, visually rich subjects. Critic Joseph B. Stack has written: "Bertolucci's romanticism struggles in its own way with his Marxism. . . . Bertolucci says his films are a form of his own ambivalence." Pauline Kael has called him "the greatest natural of his generation for making movies as sensual celebrations."

Bertolucci's most recent work is a five and one-half hour film, "1900." Starring Al Pacino, De Niro, Dominique Monaghan, Sterling Hayden and John Sutherland, among others, it tells the story of an international actor's life.

The series schedule continues with "Before The Revolution" (1964, 110 minutes), with director Costa Gavras, and "The Conformist" (1970, 108 minutes), with director Liliana Cavani. The first film in the series is "Last Tango in Paris" (1972, 129 minutes) with Marlon Brando, Maria Schneider, Jean-Pierre L  aud, Massimo Girotti.

Marlon Brando gave the most brilliant performance of his career in Bertolucci's brooding essay on sex and death and middle-age. In 16mm Color. All films will be shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m. in Fairchild Theatre. Admission is $1.50 at the door, and series tickets, available at the Union Ticket Office, are $5 for five admissions.

The first four films are in Italian with English subtitles. "Last Tango in Paris" is in French with English subtitles.

April 26: "Partner" (1968, 112 minutes) with Pierre Clementi, and "The Conformist" (1970, 108 minutes) with Liliana Cavani.

Based on the novel by Alberto Moravia, Marcello is a young would-be Fascist, driven toward an unreachable sense of security and need for acceptance. Critic Richard Schickel has written of "The Conformist," "...assuredly the work of an artist — very possibly a great one — and the movie itself is filled with the most extraordinary emotional energy, cinematic facility and social and psychological acuteness." In 16mm Color.

May 4: "The Conformist" (1970, 108 minutes) with Jean-Louis Trintignant, Stefania Sandrelli, Dominique Sanda, Pierre Clementi.

Mysteries of light unraveled in visual 'Spectrum' of color

By JOHN CASEY
State News Reviewer

"Spectrum," the latest edition of cosmic entertainment to fill the Sky Theatre, is visually exciting and intellectually rewarding. Conceived and produced by Denver's Gates Planetarium, "Spectrum" deals insightfully with man's most valuable natural resource — light.

Be it a star, light years away, or a simple light bulb, this phenomenon of nature called sunlight defines our world and is the direct and indirect source of all earthly power.

"Spectrum" traces the history of light during the times of scientific misconception concerning the earth's central relationship to the sun, and focuses on the new surge of interest in solar energy.

The Abrams Planetarium dome fills with a rainbow of effects, which build extremely realistic thunderstorms complete with blinding flashes of thunder, the visual pitter-patter of a torrential downpour, accompanied by actual drops of water sprinkled on the Planetarium crowd. If that isn't convincing, a strong gust of wind whips through the theatre, creating an overall effect of a more-than-real experience. The consequence leaves one practically breathless.

The calm after the storm involves the explanation of two natural occurrences — one involving the existence of light, the other, the result of no light.

A rainbow takes on more than esthetically pleasing dimensions when the events behind the phenomena are tutored in scientific, yet easily understood terms.

Apparently the raindrops act as multitudes of prisms, reflecting white light into red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet. Looking closely, one may observe a secondary rainbow where these colors are reversed: the seven rays are bent from violet on the inside of the outer violet band. An optical meteorological phenomena de-mystified.

"Spectrum" takes the audience to the east coast of Africa where a total eclipse, a rare happening, was last to appear. Tracing the path of the sun and the moon to the point where they will eerily become congruent, the total eclipse is re-created on the planetarium bubble with an authentic visual presentation.

"Spectrum" is a success based on the absence of coy humor that has afflicted planetarium presentations in the past. Leaving the Sky Theatre with bits of knowledge from this one-hour enlightening experience is more pleasing than mere entertainment.

Showtimes for "Spectrum" are Fridays and Saturdays at 8 and 10 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 and 4 p.m.

Admission is $1.25 for adults, $1 for MSU students, and 50 cents for children. No preschoolers will be admitted.

Forward Russ Welch gained an honorable mention for MSU along with goalie Dave Versical, who finished sixth in the voting with 12 points.

Michigan put Kris Manery and league scoring champion Dave Debol on the first team while Wisconsin goalie Julian Baretta and defenseman Craig Norwich were named to the team after guiding the Badgers to the NCAA title at Olympia in Detroit.

Scoring runner-up Brian Walsh and defenseman Jack Brownschilde of Notre Dame rounded out the first team selections.

Softball has reached its peak

By TOM SHANAHAN
State News Sports Writer

MSU's intramural softball league has grown and grown until now it has reached its maximum growth.

Tom VanderWeele, assistant director of Intramural Sports, expects more than 700 teams in 1977's spring season. But the cut-off will be 700, so any team that isn't in the first 700 will be put on a waiting list.

It's the same procedure the intramural department used when it had to limit the number of basketball teams to 500 because they're aren't enough facilities.

This year the department has added three new fields on the east campus fields and will start games at 2:15 p.m. on Sundays and 5:15 p.m. during the week and start the final games at 11:15 p.m.

"This is the only way we can get 700 teams in the league," VanderWeele said. "Last year we had to start games at 4:15 and start the last game at 1:15 a.m., but that was just too much to ask. It sounded better to the teams when they signed up than when it came time to play."

"The league will never be any bigger than it is now and we anticipate it getting smaller because we just don't see where we can go," VanderWeele said. "We've reached the point now that we face limitations that have never been there before."

The league may get smaller since the additional fields are only temporary because of anticipated future building on campus.

Intramural softball was a league of 483 teams in 1974 and it has grown steadily since then. Intramural softball became more popular at MSU as slow-pitch captured more interest than fast-pitch.

"They like slow-pitch because of the enjoyable aspects of the game," VanderWeele said. "It emphasizes hitting the ball, making plays in the field and scoring runs."

"Prior to that a good team could dominate a fast-pitch league with a good pitcher. Slow-pitch has also picked up popularity because it happens right after winter and people want to get outside."

The weather and condition of the field are VanderWeele's biggest problems.

"The weather is a super-problem to me," he said. "The last two to three years we've lost 10 to 12 nights that we'd normally play — and if we lose a Sunday, it's like losing two nights."

With 90 games a night being played in the 700-team-10,500-player league, even one night disappoints a lot of players.

And according to the 1977 doesn't look like spring 1977 doesn't look like a wet spring or a dry summer," VanderWeele said glumly.

He also said that the being worn by students in the main fields by the Complex and the east fields gradually becoming more hazardous to the players, also makes a bad playing and harder for the grow.

Costs are a problem too. Equipment prices have gone up. The staff has also reached with 85 umpires and two supervisors under VanderWeele.

But after the warnings, they're still lighting up

"Warning: The Surgeon General has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

That cautionary message is printed on every pack of cigarettes made or imported into the United States, and in every magazine advertisement displaying them.

But, despite what the surgeon general has determined, there is still a controversy surrounding the dangers of cigaret smoking. And if it is dangerous, how much and to whom?

Though most doctors agree smoking is harmful to those who engage in it, some organizations believe there is not enough scientific proof to substantiate that as a fact. And not too surprisingly, The Tobacco Institute, a lobbying organization for American cigaret manufacturers, is one of them.

"It is not a proven case that cigarettes are harmful to people who smoke them," said Anne H. Duffin, vice president of the organization. "Science doesn't know that, we don't know, you don't know."

Most authorities on the subject of cigaret smoking, however, would disagree with Duffin and the Tobacco Institute. The degree of danger might be disputable, but according to Dr. Gio Gori, the director of the National Cancer Institute, a government organization, they are definitely harmful.

"It's not an opinion, it's an established fact that cigarettes are harmful," Gori said. "And that is a scientific fact as far as I'm concerned."

Still the American public continues to smoke. In 1970, it consumed 536.5 billion cigarettes, according to the Tobacco Institute, 607.2 billion in 1975 and 620 billion last year.

"The percentage of the population who smokes has gone down," said Duffin. "But because of the population increase, more people are smoking cigarettes now than there were in the past."

The American Lung Association estimates that 300,000 persons die prematurely each year, in the United States, from the effects of smoking. They believe cigaret smoking is a major cause of emphysema, chronic bronchitis, lung cancer and many heart disorders.

The national association and most doctors say that the nicotine, tars and carbon monoxide are the most harmful chemical compounds found in tobacco. Nicotine constricts blood vessels, which raises a person's blood pressure and increases his heart beat. Tar is believed to damage lung tissues, and carbon monoxide drives oxygen out of red blood cells.

"The only safe cigaret is the one you don't smoke," Gori said. "But if people can't quit, they should at least try to use low tar and nicotine cigarettes."

An even more disputed issue is the harm cigaret smoke has on nonsmokers.

The Association for Non-Smokers Rights (ANSR), a national organization which is concerned with the social costs of smoking, says the sidestream smoke actually has a higher concentration of chemical compounds than the smoke inhaled by the user.

ANSR says that sidestream smoke, the smoke from the burning end of a cigaret, results in increased heart rates and blood pressures for nonsmokers.

Not everybody agrees with this, however.

"As far as healthy people are concerned, we don't have any evidence that sidestream smoke makes them ill," said Harold Rogers, director of the Michigan Lung Association. "For people who already have an emphysema or bronchitis condition, it can be harmful."

"You might get discomfort effects from smoke such as headaches and coughing," Gori said. "But the evidence we have indicates no harmful effects to nonsmokers."

NOT STARTING AGAIN THE HARD PART Quitting smoking easy to do

So you want to quit smoking. Giving up cigarettes is one of the hardest things to do. No matter how many different methods you see on the market, there are only two ways of doing it.

Either you give them up all at once, cold turkey, or you taper off until you are no longer smoking. There are simply no other ways to do it.

Every program and product that is available is really only an aid to one of these two methods. In the end, many smokers have acknowledged, it is the person's own willpower and not the method that enables him to "kick the habit."

While there are a variety of ways you can do it, group discussion programs are the most successful in the percentage of smokers who do quit.

There are two such groups in the Lansing area, the Greater Lansing Smoking Withdrawal Clinic and the Seventh Day Adventist Five-Day Plan, and both boast a success rate of over 50 per cent.

The idea behind both programs is for all groups of 20 to 30 smokers to meet periodically and discuss the problems they encounter while going through cold turkey. The difference between the programs is their length. The Seventh Day Adventist runs only one week while the withdrawal clinic meets three times a week for a month.

The method we use to get alcoholics to stop drinking," said Dr. Richard Bates, who runs the withdrawal program in 1966 at Sparrow Hospital, "I simply applied to smokers trying to quit. "When a person walks into the clinic he has already committed himself and has stopped smoking. Our problem or objective here is to keep him from starting again."

When a smoker attends his first clinic, which are held six times a year at Sparrow Hospital, he pays a $20 membership fee. If he reverts to smoking at any time during the month, he must drop out of the clinic and forfeit his fee.

The group meetings are closed to the public to help the members develop strong ties and cohesiveness. This is the key to success for both the withdrawal clinic and Seventh Day Adventist plan.

By meeting together, the members can relate to each other's problems, tell of helpful aids and most importantly, give support for those whose willpower is weakening.

"My desire for a cigaret was so great that for a while I was living for the next meeting," said Doug Zatechka, MSU area director of residence halls who attended the clinic. "I would get to the hospital a half hour early just to tell somebody of my agony."

"Our group had really strong emotional bonds between us," Zatechka said. "We still keep in contact and it's like seeing an old Army buddy."

The Seventh Day Adventist plan also provides a tight group atmosphere to help its members through the first week. And like the withdrawal clinic, they buddy up smokers for additional support when the group is not meeting.

"We had group reinforcement, and every person also had a buddy," said Leo Jolley, 38, of Lansing, who stopped smoking through the five-day plan. "He was somebody you could call in the morning, the day or even the night when you needed some help."

The Seventh Day Adventist plan involves another factor in giving up cigarettes — the spiritual point of view.

"Though persons from all faiths and atheists attend our program, we bring in the spiritual angle," said Pastor Ron Ruskier, the director of the five-day plan. "If the good lord is there and wants us healthy, he is going to help us."

If cold turkey and group withdrawal is not your style, then you might find help with several products that are currently being sold. Among them are filter systems and tablets designed to gradually ease a person out of the habit of smoking.

Water Pik's "One Step at a Time" is a series of four filters which cut down the amount of nicotine a person receives from a cigaret. The last filter in the eight-week plan traps 90 per cent of the nicotine and reduces the amount of nicotine in a pack to that in two cigarettes.

From there the smoker is supposed to quit all together. But that can still be a problem.

"I made it to the last filter, but I never really gave up smoking," said Cyndi Mesagher of Farmington Hills. "It worked in only terms of cutting down the nicotine."

"After a while it got to be too much of a hassle. Every time you turn around you had to clean out the filter."

Tablets, such as Nicoban produced by the N.R. Thompson Corp. and Pantron made by the Canpana Corp., are another alternative to those persons trying to give up smoking.

Both possess chemicals with the same qualities as nicotine, only not as harmful. The smoker pops in a tablet whenever he has an urge to smoke, and according to the producers, he will get the same satisfaction as he would from a cigaret. Thus he can gradually quit or just cut down the amount he smokes.

The problem with this method, as Frank Darbay, assistant director of public relations for the Canpana Corp. put it, is "your system still craves nicotine."

"You still have to have the willpower and desire to withdraw," said Dr. John Parker, director of research for the Canpana Corp. "The product only works if the person is motivated; it is only an aid."

And that is basically true of any method a smoker uses to quit smoking.

Laying off butts life-long battle, ex-smokers' testimony shows

Doug Zatechka, 34, was driving last fall when a young boy jumped out in front of his car. He slammed on his brakes, swerved to the side and gave a sigh of relief as the boy ran across the street unharmed.

The sudden stop popped open his glove compartment and an old cigaret fell out. The MSU area director for residence halls had not smoked one in over a month, but he had an incredible desire to light it up and take a drag.

Instead he thought about it for a minute, crumbled up the cigaret and threw it in the ash tray.

Leo Jolley, 38, finished with his dinner last November and quickly excused himself from the table, leaving his family sitting in the kitchen.

The Lansing streetlight foreman knew if he remained in the kitchen the smell of his wife's coffee would create an uncontrollable passion in him to smoke a cigaret, something he had not done since the middle of October.

Mike Griffiths, 25, woke up last week and jumped right out of bed into the shower. The MSU student, who for the last two weeks has been on the Water Pik "One Step at a Time" plan, was proud of himself. It was the second straight day he had not smoked a cigaret before getting out of bed.

Once on a lecture tour someone asked Mark Twain if it was hard to quit smoking.

"Anybody can quit smoking," the author quipped. "I've done it a thousand times."

So have a million other Americans. But the problem, as Zatechka, Jolley and Griffiths found out, is not starting again. And it is not easy. Many doctors compare the difficulty of giving up cigarettes with that of breaking heroin addiction.

Despite the challenge, the American Lung Association has estimated that over 30 million persons in the country have quit smoking for a variety of reasons.

"When I attended the (Seventh Day Adventist) five-day plan, I wasn't intending to quit," said Jolley, who broke a habit of one and a half packs a day. "But after I heard the people there say cigarettes were controlling their lives, I decided it was time to give them up."

"I didn't want anything controlling my life."

Griffiths, a junior, started smoking when he was 17 years old and was averaging one and a half packs a day. He had tried to quit often, and the Water Pik plan was the latest method he was using.

"For a while I was quitting about twice a month," said the social science major. "I'd go a day or two and say 'what the heck.' " Zatechka started smoking at the age of 21 and was consuming two and a half packs a day before he attended the month-long Greater Lansing Withdrawal Clinic at Sparrow Hospital last October.

He quit the day of the first session and has not lit a cigaret since.

"I still don't know that I have quit for good," said Zatechka, who had given up cigarettes several times before and once for as long as 11 months. "I have this constant fear that I'll start smoking again. I guess if I really want to quit I have to accept the fact that I can never touch another cigaret."

The physical effects for all three smokers were few and lasted only a week. They were more tired at night, light-headed occasionally, and as Zatechka put it, had "a constant urge to reach for your shirt pocket."

The mental effects of giving up cigarettes, however, were numerous. They ranged from increased anger and irritability to an urge to light a cigaret whenever typing and the acquisition of new habits.

The most noticeable effect was an increase of eating.

"The cigaret is an oral thing, so you need something to replace it in the mouth," Jolley said. "Food is the natural substitute."

Zatechka gained 37 pounds in the first three months after quitting. Jolley picked up an extra 10 and Griffiths, though he is only in the third week of the eight-week plan, is already working out to keep his weight down.

They also had to forget the psychological things which would prompt them to smoke a cigaret. For Jolley it was coffee, Griffiths waking up, and Zatechka the telephone.

"The phone would ring and I wanted a cigaret because I was so used to smoking while talking to someone," Zatechka said. "I'd get up in the morning and I wanted one. I'd start the car and I wanted a cigaret. It drove me crazy."

The cure of that, at least for Jolley and Zatechka, was to keep themselves occupied and take their minds off the desire of having a cigaret. This was done by picking up other habits such as chewing pens, talking more or constantly doing something.

"I went nuts trying to keep busy," Zatechka said. "For a while there I was waxing my car three times a week just to give me something to do. I would even use a toothbrush to clean and wax the trim."

For Jolley and Zatechka, after months of battling temptation, their efforts are paying off. Their wind is stronger, they are more at ease, the money they are saving is considerable and their taste has improved.

But for all three, and for every person who has given up cigarettes, the fear of resuming an old habit will always be there. "I'm very competitive and I look at breaking this habit as a challenge," Jolley said. "So far I'm winning."
