and representatives of MNA, which is the bargaining agent for the RNs, broke down early Sunday afternoon following a pattern of negotiating set-backs since July.

Contract negotiations originally began on May 23, with the old contract expiring on July 1. Negotiations were then extended until July 29 and again until Aug. 15, with a meeting set for Aug. 12, Schwab said. She said that both state and federal mediators had to be brought in for the negotiations.

Hauser said the negotiations concern three different areas. Two are economic. The other, which concerns the nurses most, is over working conditions. However, the hospital has not put forth a proposal on this third area.

One of the economic concerns is a general package which Hauser said was only brought into the negotiations this past week. That proposal is what the RNs voted on Sunday night.

Hauser would not release any details of the proposal, saying that it would be made public in a news release today.

The other economic concern is part-time nurses who work two days a week or less. These RNs are not required to join the "Right now they don't get sick leave," she said. "So if they get ill, they don't get paid." The third area under negotiation concerns the reassigning of the RNs throughout the hospital.

"It is the hospital's prerogative to temporarily reassign RNs as needed around the institution to complement patient care," Hauser said. "We get temporary fluctuations in staff like any hospital.

"There is a basic disagreement on what the issue is," he said. "They call it understaffing and we don't feel it is." Schwab said that understaffing is why there are reassignments. "It has to do with working conditions and

"The most recent of our proposals concerns a team of 'float' nurses who are available for all departments," Schwab said. 'We asked that the team be increased, but the hospital won't give a proposal." Schwab said that if the hospital had given a proposal on the reassignment issue the negotiations would "certainly be ex-

LONDON (AP) - Merlyn Rees, the man in charge of British police, said Sunday he supported Scotland Yard's decision not to try to ban a right-wing march that provoked a bloody melee in which 110 persons, including 56 policemen, were injured.

The British press called the Saturday violence the worst in postwar Britain and published a spate of recriminations and demands for public inquiries. The Observer asked in a headline: "Is this price of freedom?" Rees, the home secretary in Britain's Labor cabinet, said in a radio interview that he deplores extremism of the left and right. But he added that "what we have to think about all the time even for people whom we despise, hate, disagree with — use what words you will - is the right for people to demonstrate in our sort of society." Nearly 1.6 million Britons, more than 6 per cent of the work force, are currently out of work — the worst unemployment since World War II.

Such rundown areas as Lewisham, where industrial jobs have been disappearing in recent years, have been hotbeds for such extremist groups as th right and the Socialist Workers Party, a Trotskyite group, on the left.

Tentative pact halts Bell workers' strike

DETROIT (UPI) - Most of the state slept through its first Michigan Bell Telephone Co. strike in six years Sunday.

A handful of the 20,000 Michigan Bell orkers represented by the Communications Workers of America started leaving their jobs at 12:01 a.m. EDT. But seven hours later a tentative three-year contract agreement halted the strike almost before

"Even though talks went beyond the midnight deadline, all employes are expected to report to work on their next normally scheduled tour," said Robert F. Salton, Bell assistant vice president for personnel.

Company officials estimated no more than 150 telephone operators were working throughout the state during the early morning hours and supervisory personnel took the place of those who walked out in accordance with a strike deadline.

Brief picket lines were set up in Detroit. Grand Rapids, Lansing, Flint, Port Huron and Saginaw.

But the walkout occurred during a slow traffic period, so the effect of services for Rell's 2.8 million customers was limited to occasional delays in operator assistance

"At that time of day, it's a very low traffic volume period," said Bell spokesperson Lee Lindberg. "There should have been almost no effect on customers, especially those dialing their own calls." e last strike against Michigan Bell was in 1971 and lasted six days. In 1974 sporadio unauthorized walkouts were reported throughout the state system. Bargainers reached agreement on a pact to supplement the national contract negotiated last weekend by the union and American Telephone and Telegraph. The Michigan Bell contract covered local issues such as job classifications, shift schedules, work conditions, fringe benefits and other matters unique to Michigan Bell's Bell said the national and local wage and fringe benefit package would cost the company about $125 million over the next three years. There was no immediate indication if Bell would seek a rate hike to help offset the added expense.

Political conservatives gather funds for Kearney's legal fees

By MARGARET GENTRY WASHINGTON (AP) — Political conservatives and former FBI agents have raised nearly a half million dollars to pay legal fees for John J. Kearney, the onetime bureau supervisor who faces trial in October, and dozens of other FBI men But the fund-raising effort may be hitting a snag because of confusion about the various groups soliciting donations. Only two groups are soliciting contributions specifically for the legal defense of Kearney and other present or former FBI agents involved in the Justice Department investigation of FBI burglaries, mail-opening and wiretapping. But other organizations, such as the American Legion and the Young Americans for Freedom, have declared support for And the newly formed Security and Intelligence Fund has solicited contributions with a letter implying that the money will be used for Kearney's defense, though that's not necessarily so. This has caused consternation among potential contributors who have received three different appeals for money and have heard other groups publicly declare support for Kearney, said John O'Beirne, chairperson of the Washington chapter of the Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI.

Kearney was charged with directing illegal mail opening and viretapping in the search for Weather Underground fugitives in New York from 1970 through 1972. He has pleaded innocent.

The 7,000-member national society has a legal defense fund and this is the only organization which actually receives and pays the legal bills. O'Beirne has been organizing the effort and acting as ison with the other groups.

"The overlapping and duplication in solicitation letters has caused us a little bit of a problem, but we hope we're working it out," he said in an interview.

Through its regular newsletters, the society has solicited contributions from its members, who have donated $290,000 so far, O'Beirne said. "We've already paid out over $110,000 of that to cover the defense of some 47 individuals," he continued

The Ad Hoc Citizens Legal Defense Fund for the FBI has raised $180,000 from about 10,000 persons during the past seven weeks, said its administrative director. Marvin Liebman.

Liebman operates the fund out of his New York public relations office. The fund was created by three prominent conservative Republicans - former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon former Sen. James Buckley, Con. R.-N.Y., and former Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce

Liebman said the money he collects, minus mailing and other costs, will be turned over to the society of ex-agents.

Most of the confusion arose from the solicitation letter mailed by the Security and Intelligence Fund to more than 100,000 persons

James Angleton, former counterintelligence chief of the CIA who was ousted in the wake of disclosures of improper CIA activities, is chairperson of the fund and one of its founders.

"Kearney's defense is our defense!" the solicitation letter proclaimed. "We've set up the Security and Intelligence Fund to defend John Kearney and any others in the intelligence community who have served their country in the line of duty and may now be forced to use their life savings to defend themselves."

Hotel workers walk of MADRID (AP) - More than 30,000 porters, waiters, cooks and other workers walked off the job Sunday at hotels on Spain's tourist-jammed southern Costa del Sol, leaving tens of thousands of guests to fend for themselves.

Dozens of airline flights were canceled or rerouted, some tourists slept in cars as reservations went by the board, and others scrounged sandwiches from hotel kitchens.

'We had an excellent Sunday cold buffet lunch," said Briton Alan Greenwood, making do at the four-star Hotel Fuerte in Marbella on the "Sun Coast." He said the hotel managers have been just great. They have kept the bar open.'

Guests were on a self-service system for towels, elevators, coffee and sheets, Greenwood said.

The effects of the paralyzing strike were made more acute when workers shut down scores of cafes and restaurants in sympathy with the hotel employes. hotel workers, demanding higher pay, struck at 8 a.m. Sunday in the Malaga region, at the center of the Sun Coast, which is the heart of Spain's tourist belt. The strike shut down 3,000 hotels with 200,000 beds at the peak of the tourist season.

Another 10,000 workers stayed off the job for the second straight day at hotels in the cities of La Coruna, Gijon, El Ferrol del Caudillo and Santiago de Compostela in northern Spain, at Cadiz in southern Spain and at Zaragoza in northTourist agencies reported that as the strike got under way flights carrying several thousand foreign tourists were diverted from the Sun Coast resorts of Torremolinos, Malaga, Marbella Fuengirola and Benalmadena to the Canary Islands, whose hotels supposedly were able to handle the sudden influx. But officials of the government labor and tourism agencies said they feared that the hotel walkout might spread later in the week to the Balearic and Canary islands, the packed Costa Brava around Barcelona, and eventually to the Spanish capital itself if the dispute settled.

When the temperature increased during the July heat MSU Library, the East Lansing wave the number of sex crimes reported to DPS during that period increased as well.

This was not the first time the man in the Library exposed himself, according to police, and it may not be his last, even though he was arrested on this particular occasion.

He told DPS officers after his arrest that he prefers to do his exposing at libraries and that he usually alternates between the Library and the Lansing Library

He told the officers he wears no underwear beneath his short cutoffs and looks around "looking for chicks with short skirts or shorts on." He told DPS he picked the MSU Library this particular day because it was air conditioned

The classic explanation behind indecent exposure is that the man is insecure and feels he has to demonstrate to women, and to himself, that he has a penis. The man is looking for shock value. If the woman is afraid or expresses some kind of reaction when he exposes himself. he is satisfied.

Bex crime rate higher during summer

Dr. Arnold Werner, associate professor of psychiatry at MSU, said people who expose themselves are insecure and are "acting out some kind of psy-chological conflict" which may have arisen while they were growing up. He also noted it is interesting that in our culture women don't expose themselves to men in the same blatant manner

Victims of indecent exposures do not seem to be in any physical danger, but the difficulty is determining if exposing himself is the man's only motive.

Zutaut said he could not think of any incident since he has been on campus when an indecent exposure has generated anything more serious.

"But I don't want to leave a false sense of security," he added Dr. Werner explained that people who engage in exhibitionist kinds of sex crimes are doing so mainly to reassure themselves.

"Generally speaking, people who expose themselves are people who are relatively afraid of any direct contact," he said. Dr. Werner added that he did

As with any crime, the chances of apprehending a man who has committed a sex crime increase with the quickness of reporting it to police. Zutaut said it is important for the victim to get a good description of the person and his car if he

Dr. Werner warned that since it is difficult to determine the man's motive, a woman who is confronted with an indecent exposure should try to get out of the situation as soon as possible.

LANSING (UPI) - Gov. William G. Milliken forcefully restated his opposition to Project Seafarer Friday and asked President Jimmy Carter to declare publicly whether he will rule out Michigan as a potential site "In recent days, Pentagon officials have

"I want to not only reiterate my opposition to locating Seafarer in Michigan, but also to again urge a direct confirmation from you that the wishes of the people will be respected," Milliken said.

Carter has not formally responded to Milliken's March 18 "veto" of Seafarer, but the President said recently he believes an extremely low frequency system for communicating with deep-running nuclear submarines is essential to national security.

Other top federal officials either have ignored Milliken's detailed objections to the project or have played down their impor-

The letter, sent to U.S. Rep. Elford Cederburg, R-Mich., said: "Finally, I want you to know that if we do decide to request funds for deployment of any sort of Seafarer systems in Michigan, I will be reviewing this issue personally."

Milliken referred in his letter to a statement issued by Carter's campaign headquarters at the height of last year's presidential campaign saying that he would oppose the construction of Seafarer in Michigan if the people objected.

Milliken has said he considers eight separate advisory votes in the Upper Peninsula and personal contacts with Peninsula and personal contacts Michigan residents evidence of over-whelming opposition — though some federal officials have cast doubt on that

The governor also said he was notified in a Jan. 31 telephone conversation with a Carter aide that the President would honor the veto authority given to Milliken by the Ford Administration.

"Yet, Pentagon officials periodically make statements at variance with this understanding," Milliken said.

The governor also restated his opposition to a scaled-down Seafarer proposal calling for two relatively small underground communication cable grids located in Michigan and Wisconsin, rather than the massive 4,000-square mile grid originally proposed for the central U.P.

Songs, skits highlight anniversary festivities

By TERRY PRZYBYLSKI State News Staff Writer

The sweet smell of incense hung heavy in the air, and the orange, white and green tricolor of India decorated the stage as over 100 people celebrated the 30th anniversary of India's independence from Great Britain in the Asbury Hall Auditorium Saturday night at the United Ministries in Higher Education.

The program, which lasted about three hours, began with a classic Indian devotional song by Prowati Kundu of East Lansing. This was followed by a demonstration of Indian shadow acting by M. Chengappa, two comical skits, a rendition of "Blowin' in the Wind" and several Indian folk songs.

One of the types of folk song, the gazal, a song often sung in India by close friends and lovers upon separating, was performed several times during the program. A gazal sung by Rajan Rai was especially well-received by the audience, composed mostly of members of East Lansing's Indian community. The singers were accompanied by Mrs. Kundu who played the harmonium, an accordion-like instrument popular in India.

After the performances, the audience joined the performers in the singing of India's national anthem

After refreshments and Indian food were served during an intermission, the audience saw a movie entitled "Plem Pujari" ("The Love-Worshipper") about a soldier who is jailed by the Indian army because he refuses to fight, believing it wrong to take another man's life. He escapes from prison, flies to London and becomes involved in a spy intrigue while running from the men who have been sent to capture him. In the end, he returns to India in the midst of a war and shoots a spy.

The theme of nonviolence was especially appropriate to the Indian independence celebration, according to Madan M. Kundu, a Ph.D. student in special education, since the leader of the independence movement in India, Mahatma Gandhi, stressed nonviolent resistance to the British in gaining independence for India, which was achieved on Aug. 15, 1947.

Kundu said that though India is, both ethnically and linguistically, a very diverse country, with over 20 major languages and more than 200 dialects, the Hindu religion acts as a powerful unifying agent throughout the country.

"There is a kind of unity within our diversity," Kundu said.

Kundu noted that the same culture and traditions which unite Indians also account for usually good relationships with India's neighbors, especially Bangladesh and Moslem Pakistan.

"India and Pakistan were divided by the British according to religious lines," he said, "but they have much the same culture."

Kundu also said the recent downfall of Indira Gandhi contributed no real significance to the independence celebration, saying that "it was just an internal matter."

All elective surgery at the hospitals was initially canceled. However, shipments from other parts of the county Thursday allowed a relaxation of the surgery ban.

Canal treaty a worthwhile one; Senate hawks the next hurdle

By negotiating a treaty to relinguish control of the Panama Canal to the government of Panama, the United States has taken a positive step toward defusing potential violence in that country and, perhaps, toward dramatically improving America's image among its Latin American neighbors.

The big stumbling block will now be in persuading the U.S. Senate to ratify the treaty. Administration sources believe that only 50 of the 67 votes necessary for ratification can be counted on.

The treaty would cede control of the canal itself to Panama by the year 2000 and the adjacent Canal Zone within three years after the treaty is signed. Panama would guarantee the neutrality of the canal and grant the United States intervention rights in case of attack.

Already conservatives are marshalling their forces to combat the treaty. Ronald Reagan, who effectively used the canal issue to politically bludgeon former president Gerald Ford during last year's primaries, is expected to lead public opposition. In the Senate, ultraright-wingers Strom Thurmond and Jesse Helms plan tooth and nail resistance against ratification.

Conservatives claim that the United States, which in 1903 negotiated a treaty with Panama granting U.S. control over the canal "in perpetuity," built and paid for the canal and ought to keep it. The jingoistic and simpleminded aspect of this argument is readily discernable.

In the first place, the United States bought and built the canal only after using its military and political influence to bully Panama into surrendering the necessary territory. Secondly, the canal as it is presently constituted is strategically indefensible and adds nothing to U.S. defense interests. Moreover, the Panamanian people, rightly upset at America's continued toe-hold in their country, are becoming increasingly restive and could easily sabotage the canal. The Canal Zone riots of 1964 demonstrate how volatile the situation there is.

The United States will lose nothing by granting Panama sovereignity over the region. It will retain the right to use the canal and, more importantly, project an image of friendship and conciliation to the people of Latin America, whose suspicion and distrust of "damn Yankees" is well-documented.

There is growing evidence that Carter's emphasis on human rights has made him an object of veneration among the people, if not the governments, of Latin America. A peaceful and orderly transfer of the canal and the Canal Zone into the hands of Panama would reinforce that perception and possibly extend it to the United States as a whole.

It would be tragic if a small clique of right wing hawks in the Senate manage to sabotage the painstaking negotiating efforts of the Carter Administration. The result could be rioting and bloodshed in the Canal Zone, and a steep decline in America's prestige abroad. The United States now has an opportunity to break new ground in hemisphereic relations. To pass up that opportunity would be sheer folly.

Mideast powderkeg

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's diplomatic swing through the Middle East bears the scent of disappointment.

Vance failed to draw concessions out of the Arab nations, which are still waiting for Israel to take a softer line. Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin has complicated the Mideast picture by rejecting any meaningful withdrawal from territories occupied during the 1967

The sense of hope generated by news that the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) might be willing to recognize and deal with Israel was deflated when Begin made it clear Israel would not even talk with the PLO. So we are back to ground zero.

Unless some basis is laid for a peace conference in Geneva later this year, the prospects of yet another Mideast war will become greater.

Infantile

Though most of the student body of MSU consists of adults, there are a few students who have not matured past the "potty training" stage, and sometimes act under the influence of a "Freudian slip." This was exemplified Sunday evening when we attempted to use the Men's IM pool during the late swim hours. To our disgust the pool was closed and had been closed all day because of the foul act of defecation in the

Because this has happend numerous times this summer, a guard has been hired to watch the facilities to prevent further abuse to the pool. After each incident, the pool must be superchlorinated and closed for 24 hours before anyone is again allowed to swim. This revolting act had led to cutbacks in IM pool hours, increased costs to the students, and utter disgrace to the student body of MSU.

It seems to us a shame that any "adult" displays such infantile behavior, and it is our hope that whoever these individuals are, they will look back on this incident and realize how immaturely they behaved, at the expense of the rest of the student body. Anne Stimson Mari-Beth Repokis 5000 S. Hagadorn #16

Educate with a global perspective

By STANLEY P. WRONSKI

Norman Cousins recently remarked that the greatest achievement of the American space missions to the moon was not the actual setting foot on the lunar surface but the viewing and photographing of the earth from outer It affirmed with dramatic emphasis the validity of the concept of spaceship earth.

In a similar manner global education attempts -vicariously, to be sure- to place all members of humankind in a mental position to view ourselves from this type of global perspective. Such a perspective is an indispensable framework within which other problems facing the human race -environment, war, population, food- must be faced if any viable solutions are to be found.

Global education programs in the schools are merely attempts to provide curricular rationales, instructional materials and teaching strategies to imple ment the need for global perspectives in pupils at all grade levels. The aims of global education, though potentially revolutionary in the long run, are initially modest and feasible. They are well expressed by Robert Hanvey in the title of his excellent pamphlet, "An Attainable Global Perspective." 'It contains no grandiose claims, no pie-in-thesky goals. Its initial purpose is to introduce an incremental but highly signifias fellow travellers on spaceship earth, but to employ this fact as a basic given number of social, economic and technological problems facing us. fads come and go. But there is more than a wistful wish in the observation that global education will make a significant impact on American education. The Center for Global Perspectives (formerly the Center for War/ Peace Studies) has distributed instructional materials to hundreds of educators and school districts in the United States. And the Mid-America Program for Global Perspectives in Education. despite its apparently restricted clientele, is having a similar impact.

In Michigan the State Department of Education has not only prepared a Global Education Guidelines for distribution to each school district but has, in effect, put its money where its mouth is by supporting (through Title IV grants) four school districts which have em barked on exemplary programs in global education. Aside from the compelling theoretical case that can be de for global education, the State of Michigan has an additional fact of economic life supporting its concern about world affairs. Of the total amount of goods produced in Michigan a larger percentage of it finds its way in international trade than that of any other

But man does not live by bread alone. As Jan Tinbergen and his associates point out in the latest Club of Rome eport, Reshaping the International Order, an enormous amount of our production goes for arms, armament and other military expenditures. "The problem" they write, "is not to shift from a war to a peace economy, but from a war to a peace mentality."

Global education is an attempt to move in that direction.

Damper rods pulled on nuclear lobby

The Silent Bomb: A Guide to the Nuclear Controversy edited by Peter Faulkner Vintage/Friends of the Earth

By Michael Winter

"We nuclear people have made a Faustian bargain with society. On the one hand, we offer - in the catalytic nuclear burner – an inexhaustible source of energy... But the price that we demand is both a vigilance and a longevity of our social institutions that we are quite unaccustomed to."

-Alvin Weinberg, former director of the Oak Ridge (Tenn.) National Laboratory.

Since Dec. 2, 1942, when, under the auspices of Enrico Fermi, the first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction was de veloped beneath the west stands at the University of Chicago's Stagg Field, the pros and cons of nuclear energy have been bandied about like free

Hiroshima and Nagasaki stand as silent epitaphs to the devastation which can result from harnessing the power of atoms. They remain the nucleus from which criticism of the development of atomic energy radiates. The annihilation of hundreds of thousands of people awakened both the scientific community and general public to the startling reality that the United States had opened a dusty old bottle containing secrets of the eons, and let out the proverbial atomic genie which could eventually obliterate all traces of life, no matter how advanced or primitive.

Once realized, however, the power of the atom was turned toward helping, rather than hurting, the world's peoples. Scientists, politicians and engineers promised a new era in the evolution of energy and promised the imminent conversion of the world's energy dependence to nuclear power. The Atomic Age had begun.

It seemed simple enough: learn to control nuclear fission. build the facilities for generatsafety features to prevent a nuclear accident/catastrophe, find uranium deposits, mine them, ship them off to the nuclear reactor sites, and presto; instant energy — all the United States and the world could ever use or want.

Nuclear proponents claim the bottle has been capped and the once uncontrollable genie now is quite tame and responding on command, to fulfill America's every energy wish. But the "pros" have lost considerable ground to the ever-growing

The opposition says the genie can never completely be controlled as long as it is allowed to remain relatively free. As long as nuclear reactors continue to operate, consume nuclear fuels operate, consume nuclear uses and produce deadly radioactive particles and radioactive wastes, the people and the ecosystems of this country (world) remain in jeopardy.

People have begun to see the long and short term dangers of nuclear fission/fusion; they realize nuclear energy is not benign nor the Saving Grace of our energy woes.

The Silent Bomb is a Mc-Guffy's Eclectic Reader for antinuclear advocates. The book's editor, a former systems application engineer (whatever that may be) for the Nuclear Services Corporation, and now the nuclear consultant for the world-wide environmental organization Friends of the Earth. Peter Faulkner, has put to gether a potpourri of works by scientists, engineers, economists, politicians and journalists which dampen the arguments put forth by nuclear energy proponents.

Running the gamut of the nuclear controversy, The Silent Bomb reveals the deficiencies in the design, operation, safety systems, control, storage of wastes and fuel of nuclear reactors. It cites several federal agencies directly responsible for overseeing the nuclear in-dustry with gross negligence for relicensing nuclear facilities which lack adequate safety features. The Silent Bomb refutes reactor safety studies conducted by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, and private firms, picking each apart and showing the failure of researchers to properly consider all aspects of nuclear reactor operation and safety. It challenges the nuclear advocates with their own data putting the Atomic Industrial Complex on the defensive.

Faulkner has interspersed his own experience and expertise in the nuclear energy field throughout The Silent Bomb. He exposes dilemmas involving storage of radioactive wastes, acts of theft/terrorism involving nuclear materials, inadequate safety precautions at nuclear facilities and the fact that the nuclear industry will soon price itself out of the energy market.

Following each author's selection, Faulkner poses many questions and answers for the reader to mull over. He does not preach with righteous indignation. He intertwines history, scientific knowledge and hy pothesizing, beginning each "Is sues and Comments" section with a theme explored in the article. He reiterates arguments, raises questions and points to and clears up muddy areas in an author's work. Faulkner becomes redundant by reiterating the same examples over and over. He relies on a relatively small selection of works and milks each to its limit. The Silent Bomb, as its title suggests, does not conjure up an image of a violent and devastating holocaust (in the vein of Hiroshima) but it does create a picture of a holocaust that may be mute, yet none of Western civilization hinges.

Ah, well. On such weighty matters the fate

Witcover, a skeptic but not a cynic, stops short of stating the obvious. Ford, a dodo, and Carter, a whining churl, were ill-fitted contenders for a position supposedly so august as the presidency. It would be unseemly for the author, long recognized as an eminent political observer and reporter, to hand down such an overt judgment.
Witcover's book contrasts sharply with Theodore White's Making of the President series. White, who in 1972 churned out a disgraceful niece of Nixon-puffery, has mercifully hung up his typewriter ribbon. Unlike White, Witcover makes no pretensions of being unbiased or blessed with unfathomable insights. He is a confirmed Nixon-hater, piteous or scornful of most of the 1976 candidates, studiedly respectful of Jimmy Carter's political instincts and organization. His doggedness in digging up facts and chronicling the history of the primary season is laudable. Witcover is an indefatagible, no-nonsense journalist, and it shows in this book. One of the more fascinating revelations supplied by Witcover is the fact that George McGovern strongly considered another bid for the presidency in 1976. As Witcover notes, there is no sure immunization against Potomac fever. McGovern, we learn, nurtured the fatuous idea that he might have won in 1972, had only he staked out positions as radical or more so than the ones he took. Witcover, acting as a friend, must have been eternally patient in not persuading the South Dakota Senator of the foolishness of this idea.

Too, we learn that the blithering ol' windbag. Hubert Humphrey, was hooked on the idea of running (surprise!), and seriously weighed a suggestion by McGovern that they run as a team with HHH heading the ticket, of course. When the press queried Humphrey about his prospects, he would only say, in his typically dishonest manner, that McGovern was urging him to run while saying nothing about McGovern's teamticket concept.

Witcover's writing may lack the drama and pace of White's but it is far more down to earth and common sensical. Marathon almost certainly will go down as the definitive analysis of the 1976 campaign. And if Carter turns out to be a bumbling failure in the White House, Witcover will not have to eat crow, as White did when he scribbled Breach of Faith, his ponderous eulogy to Nixon's demise that sounded more like a rationalization for White's past misconceptions.

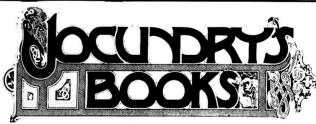

ROBINSON CRUSOE

Had Robinson Crusoe never left the highest, or more correctly the most visible point of his island, from desire for comfort, or timidity, or fear, or ignorance, or longing. he would soon have perished; but since without paying any attention to passing ships and their feeble telescopes he started to explore the whole island and take pleasure in it, he managed to keep himself alive and finally was found after all, by a chain of causality that was, of course, logically inevitable

DETROIT (UPI) - Rookie Tim Corcoran pinch-hit home run with one out in the eighth inning Sunday to stake rookie right-hander Dave Rozema to his 13th victory and give the Detroit Tigers a 6-5 tri-umph over the Minnesota

Corcoran's third home run and 18th hit of his brief major league career came one out after ace Tom Johnson entered the game and it tagged the Twins ace reliever with his fourth loss in 16 games.

Rozema, who has the best record of any rookie pitcher in baseball, scattered eight hits and won his sixth game in a row in raising his record to 13-4. It was his eighth straight complete game. He gave up four runs and five hits in the fourth inning, with Larry Hisle's 24th homer, a three-run shot, capping the rally

MSU cagers preparing for winter season tip-o

By EDWARD L. RONDERS State News Sports Writer

The dog days of summer are dribbling away for the veterans and rookies of MSU's baskethall team.

While baseball gears for salary drives and pennant pushes and football comes into focus, Spartans Greg Kelser and Earvin Johnson have been polishing their skills.

For Johnson, the highly sought prep All-American who will enroll at MSU next month, the summer has just been an extension of a nearly year-long season. "Every time I say I'm gonna take a break from playing ball I never do," Johnson commented.

"I love the game so much that when I see other guys playing I want to get involved too. I just can't stay away from basketball.' Johnson's love of the game has not gone unanswered. Following a prep career at Lansing Everett, Johnson played ball in Europe last spring and has continued his season with a group of Michigan prep all-stars.

"We were in Florida a few months ago and we won the tournament championship," Johnson recalled. In that affair, the future Spartan was named Most Valuable Player and outstanding offensive player.

The accolades indicate Johnson's potential since All-American Albert King, of New York, also played in the tourney.

Johnson may have his first opportunity to face King, who is slated to perform for Lefty Driesell at Maryland, in the near "We're supposed to go to New York for a tournament next

He probably wanted to say he was looking forward to playing against me," Johnson explained. If King is anticipating playing against Johnson, then the anticipation is mutual. "Yeah, it'll be a challenge," Johnson mused.

weekend. Albert called me yesterday (Thursday) but I missed him.

The squad which will possibly pit King against Johnson originates from Detroit's own basketball factory known as

"Mr. (Sam) Washington runs a fine program there," Johnson said. "It can really help a player improve his game. That is, if the guy has his mind on improving part of his game. If he just goes out there and tries to score 40 points, then he's not helping himself,"

Washington's Ceciliaville consists of various leagues of competition for high school and even pro players, Another player who has graced the courts of Washington college is Kelser.

"Once you begin college you aren't allowed to participate "Once you begin conege you at all the said from his organized league like Ceciliaville," Kelser said from his organized league like Ceciliaville, "Kelser said from his organized league like Ceciliaville," home. "But, during and right after high school I pl Ceciliaville and it really helped me.'

While forbidden to compete in Washington's program by rules, Kelser nevertheless has honed his game for the campaign.

"I played some ball this summer until I twisted my anke,

"I've been in East Lansing, and Earvin, Chapman, Alfred and some of the guys have played some ball."

Despite the lack of "organization" Kelser used the games advantage. "I worked on my ballhandling. Last summer it shooting," he said.

The competition also brought out another aspect of the "I've known Earvin since high school, but now we've together and played ball and we're coming to know each at the court," Kelser noted.

Earvin concurred, saying, "Guys on the team have been with things like telling me that when I pass to keep more pointing out their style of play."

One particular move Earvin and Greg have been polishing lob-dunk. "Yeah, I've been working on a lob pass to Green dunks it home," Johnson said with a hint of excitement in his

While Kelser is resting his sore ankle and Johnson continuous longest season, both agree they're anxious for the 1977-78 of MSU basketball to begin.

"We've got the right combination of players," Johnson to "We got guys who can shoot, guys who can handle the ba "I can't wait for the season to start, but I will wait," he

Kelser echoed his teammate's statement, saying, "Imp enjoy my vacation because I know once school starts it stib back to work. But yeah, I'm anxious to get it on!" he ded

For Johnson, though, there's the unfinished business of a The Big Apple and an appointment with Mr. King next we

"After that, I am gonna take a break and be fresh season," the newest Spartan concluded.

O.J. scores twice, Bills beat Detroit 17-1

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — O.J. Simpson ran for touchdowns of one and fifteen yards Saturday night to lead the Buffalo Bills to a 17-10 victory over the Detroit Lions in a pre-season National Foot-League (NFL) game at Rich Stadium.

"I know this," Carew noted. "We're going to give up some runs, but we're going to score some runs, too.

Simpson, who missed the ills' first pre-season game while undergoing tests for blurred vision in his left eye, carried for 55 yards.

Simpson's one yard touchdown run at 12:46 of the first quarter culminated in a 49-yard scoring drive that took 10 plays. Quarterback Joe Ferguson, who played the entire game for Buffalo, drove the Bills to the Detroit four, but two Lions' penalties following a third and three situation gave Buffalo the ball on the Detroit one and Simpson scored.

Buffalo's second touchdown drive began late in the first quarter on the Detroit 42 following a punt by Lions rookie kicker John Stufflebeen. Ferguson drove the Bills to the Detroit 15 and Simpson went off to the left, zigzagged to the right and went into the end zone standing up.

Detroit's touchdown came at 6:10 of the fourth quarter when Leonard Thompson picked up a blocked punt at the Buffalo 10 The punt was blocked at the Buffalo 46 by the Lions' Jon Morris. Detroit threatened again on another blocked punt later in the quarter but was stopped at the Bills' 11.

Bob Wood kicked a 25-yard field goal at 13:05 of the second quarter for Detroit, and George Jakowenko kicked a 25-yard field goal for Buffalo at 10:38 of the third quarter.

Local raccoon a 'junk food junkie'

A raccoon hooked on junk food? That's what the Steward family of 404 Charles St. seem to have on their hands.

The two-month-old raccoon, affectionately named Frosty, was raised by Kandi Warner of Okemos before it was given to the Stewards last Frosty, who now weighs five pounds, has been on a diet consisting of cat food, blueberries, ice cream, popcorn and chocolate chips.

Diana Steward, 19, who plans on majoring in Wildlife Behavior at Lansing Community College next fall, hopes to get Frosty out of the junk food habit and back on to a more natural diet consisting of corn, crayfish, grains and berries. The Stewards hope Frosty will become accustomed to this diet by the time she weighs 10 pounds. That is when the Stewards plan on releasing the omniverous animal into the wilds where ice cream and popcorn are not so plentiful.

Once there, Frosty will most likely head for water and a hollow tree as most raccoons tend to Frosty will still be able to take her daily walks as she does now, but in addition to junk food she will have to give up another luxury of civilized society — her daily bike rides.

Eating chocolate chips (left) and playing with buttons (above) keep Frosty amused during her protective captivity. At right, Diana Steward shares an intimate moment with her recently acquired pet.

State News Reviewer

MacArthur is a bland and tedious film treatment of the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Scenarists Hal Barwood and Matthew Robbins (who scripted The Sugarland Express and last year's Bingo Long) have failed to distill the experiences and turbulent times of the controversial war dog into a dramatically sound narrative. Director Joseph Sargent has treated the subject as though it were another of the many made-for-teevee movies he has helmed; his direction is uninspired and perfunctory.

With so little assistance from either script or direction, star Gregory Peck is unable to shed much light on the inner workings and thoughts of the fivestar General. There must have been the makings of a powerful and absorbing film in MacArthur's still controversial mili tary career (some feel the man was an institution, while others insist he belonged in an institu tion), but this is not it.

Using MacArthur's famous "duty ... honor ... country ..." speech at West Point in the early 1960s as a framing device, the film flashes back to his presumed days of glory beginning in 1942 in the Philippines. It's a curious place to start, inasmuch as the importance of neither the general nor the embattled islands are made very clear - perhaps Barwood and Robbins, born in 1939 and 1941 respectively, assumed we all had lived through the period and were intimate with it.

In slow succession we see MacArthur reluctantly depart the Philippines under orders from high command, and watch him as he vows to eventually return in triumph to the islands, achieves rapid victories against the Japanese in New Guinea, and proposes to President Franklin D. Roosevelt (Dan O'Herlihy) a daring plan for the liberation of the Philip pines. Sure enough, MacArthur returns to the islands, frees them, and is just about to implement his glorious master plan to totally defeat the Jap anese when Roosevelt dies and Harry Truman (Ed Flanders) decides instead to use the atomic bomb and end the war once and for all.

MacArthur isn't left with time on his hands, though - he gets to supervise the surrender ceremony, and afterwards is placed in charge of the occupation of Japan. Life goes on for a while as the seasoned war dog democratizes Japan, and unsuccessfully participates in a modest campaign for the U.S. presidency. However, before life becomes mundane, the old soldier is rewarded with a last military action to try his teeth - Korea!

His free-wheeling supervision of what was planned as a limited police action enrages Truman, who ultimately feels forced to relieve MacArthur of his command. This gives the general a fine opportunity to come home, receive a mammoth ticker-tape parade, and address a joint session of Congress on how "old soldiers never die. they just fade away . . . "

The picture never comes to grips with the flamboyance, the irrationality, and egocentrity reputed to be the sources of both the great strengths and great weaknesses of the general. We learn of MacArthur's purportedly outrageous behavior only from indirect sources: the grumblings of Roosevelt, Truman and assorted bit-players. We certainly don't see it in Peck, who seems a quietly proud man, hardly capable of the actions and attitudes attributed to him.

The physical production is ramshackle; Universal, receiving near full cooperation from the armed forces (the end credits acknowledge the assistance of the Defense Dept., the Army, the Navy, the Marines - that's almost every body, isn't it?) found it cheaper to reconstruct most of the locales called for in the script in California. John J. Lloyd's production design utilizes sets very much resemble what they are — artifacts built and decorated by the Universal art departments. Albert Whitlock's matte paintings, how ever, are another matter. The vistas stunningly (and fairly economically) create period and location ambiance. Mario Tosi's cinematography is a hodge-podge of lighting styles intercut occasionally with the result of another economic move pioneered by the studio last year in Midway: nearly all the big battle scenes are depicted through the use of grainy, often out-of-focus Signal Corps footage of actual World War II battles. Whereas this cut-rate technique is not utilized as extensively in Mac-Arthur as it was in the earlier film, but despite the obvious authenticity of the film material it seems too aesthetically disruptive and out of place to be intercut so freely.

The large cast, mostly drawn from television character actors and unemployed New York

'Showboat' sinks at moorings

By JOE PIZZO State News Reviewer

In order to view the LCC production of Showboat, the playgoer must be willing to run the risk of contracting mycoplasma pneumonia and other exotic upper respiratory infections. It ain't worth it!

Reviewers may put in for hazard pay, or comprehensive medical insurance—lay persons are expected to purchase tickets. . . . Could this be a plot instigated by the American Medical Association to drum up patients during a lax summer season?

The play itself, based on Edna Ferber's novel adapted for the stage by Oscar Hammerstein II (book and lyrics) and Jerome Kern (music), is among the warhorses of the American musical theater. As such, LCC's Department of Performing and Creative Arts should have had the decency to leave it grazing at pasture instead of attempting the impossible-a flowing, coherent, well-directed production.

Other than a severe dearth of directorial and acting talent, "technical difficulties" were the show's largest stumbling block. It is difficult for even the most dedicated of playgoers to be enthralled by inaudible lines

There were several bright spots in this production of Showboat, but none shone brightly enough to justify pay ing real money to see the show. Showboat's finest moment may well have been Vinson B. Dudley's rendition of "Old Man River," beautifully backed up by the impressionistic dancing of Emory Lynch. It would have worked well, had the audience been able to see and hear it.

The play is supposed to span nearly a fifty-year period in American history, but if not for the program notes, one would never know it.

To permit Carl Saloga, who directed this disaster, to get off scott-free would be tantamount to putting the "Son of Sam" on six months' probation! LANSING (UPI) - The Panax newspaper chain, which publishes five daily and three weekly groups of newspapers in Michigan, says the National Press Council has proven itself to be a "kangaroo court" in its proceedings against the company for its dismissal of a dissident editor.

The newspaper group said it was denied due process by the council and demanded that the panel void its earlier action and start over, follow its own rules and fairly consider all the facts.

In a letter to the council, Panax also accused its chairperson, Norman E. Isaacs of repeated demonstrations of consuming bias" and said he should disqualify himself in any future deliberations involving the newspaper chain.

The company was particular ly critical of the telephone poll of council members in which the censure vote against Panax was taken.

David Rood of the Escanaba Daily Press quit and Robert Skuggen of the Marquette Mining Journal was fired after they refused to run two controversial articles about President Jimmy Carter written by a Panax New York correspon-

One article claimed the President condoned promiscuity among his staffers and the second alleged that Carter is grooming his wife to become vice president.

The two editors refused to run the stories because they said they were poorly written, speculative and unsupported.

"No Panax Corporation editors were ordered to publish news stories they found unacceptable and no editors were discharged directly or indirectly for violating any such order,' the company said in its letter to Panax President John P. McGoff had claimed that Rood and Skuggen were insubordinate and that the incident just preceding their departures was not the first time they had been reprimanded.

Attempt to sell tapes criticized

NEW YORK (AP) - The president of the American Bar Association said Sunday that a lawyer's attempt to sell tape recordings of conversations with his client. David Berkowitz, the accused .44-caliber killer, was "on the edge of ethicality."
William B. Spahn Jr. also said he could not understand why the lawyer involved in the case, Phillip Peltz, a convicted felon, was permitted to practice law in New York State.

On Saturday, U.S. Atty. Robert B. Fiske said he had called for an immediate investigation of Peltz, who was convicted of four felony counts in 1969 in a stock fraud case for providing the services of a prostitute to an official of the Securities and Exchange

Commission (SEC) in return for information about a pending investigation. Spahn was questioned about the so-called "Son of Sam" case on the CBS program "Face the Nation.

Asked if he thought Berkowitz could get a fair trial in New York "after all this fuss about the tapes and TV film," Spahn said: "Can you get a fair trial anywhere, media coverage being what it is today? They know as much in Los Angeles as they do in New York." Commenting on Peltz' reported offer to sell tapes of the accused man's conversations to the New York Daily News, Spahn said under state law local bar associations are voluntary groups without disciplinary authority. Still, he said, "I don't know why they have permitted a convicted felon to continue practice."

The Appellate Division of state Supreme Court in Brooklyn plans to investigate the alleged attempt to sell the rights to the taped conversations to the Daily News for $50,000 and some other rights to the New York Post for $100,000.

Court officials also said they would try to find out how Peltz got into the case in the first

Carter gives himself high marks

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Jimmy Carter gives himself "fairly high" marks for improving the tone of the government and the people's attitude toward it, but says the nation's economy is disappointing and "we have not had any major breakthrough in foreign affairs."

In a personal report card on his first six months in office, Carter summed up his grades this way: "Specifics - too early to say.

Tone, trust — pretty good."

The President, who campaigned as an outsider to Washington, said he is feeling "more and more like an insider" — thanks largely to what he called a spirit of cooperation and harmony with the leadership in Congress, on both sides of the aisle.

"If all of our programs are adopted, then I think this administration will be a great one," he said, echoing his inaugural eve declaration that he has a chance to be a great President.

"But we are going to have a lot of failures and a lot of frustrations, and I think the American people have got to realize that the government can't provide magic answers for difficult questions and problems."

Carter rated himself as President in an interview with ABC News. The interview was held at the home of his mother, Lillian Carter, on Wednesday, the last day of his five-day visit to his hometown of Plains, Ga. It was broadcast Sunday.

The President took the opportunity to voice public confidence in Budget Director Bert Lance, whose private financial dealings are the target of an investigation by the comptroller of the currency.

"I have confidence in both the government officials in the Treasury Department and also in Bert Lance," Carter said. He declared that no improprieties have been proven, but added that if any were found he was sure Lance would quit.

"I have enough confidence in Bert Lance," Carter said, "to know that if any improprieties do exist that he would take the initiative

The investigation is focused on the circumstances under which Lance received two loans totaling $6 million from banks in Chicago and New York. Carter and his spokespersons have withheld any comment, saying they did not want to look like they were trying to influence the probe

Carter has talked about it publicly on only one other occasion He told a news conference in Plains on Aug. 6 that he had confidence in Lance and the comptroller to handle the probe. But he stopped short then of expressing confidence in Lance

The President also used the interview to express confidence in United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, whom he called "a great national treasury." He predicted "a growing realization of the value of Andrew Young to our country."

The ambassador has been criticized several times during Carter's first six months in office for statements he has made. In a recent instance, Young described several former presidents as racists, including Richard Nixon and Abraham Lincoln.

Both Carter and Young said at the time that the ambassador's remarks should have been understood in their full context - that such leaders served at times and in circumstances that kept them from being as aware of racial concerns as they should have been.

"I might say," Carter declared in the interview, "there has never been any difference of opinion on basic issues among Andrew Young, the secretary of state, the National Security Council or

As for his own report card, Carter said:

"I think as far as the tone of the government and the attitude of our people toward the government, the marks would be fairly high. As far as tangible results in this first six months on economy, they have been somewhat disappointing.

Carter cited specifically the inflation rate. He noted the unemployment rate has dropped a little more than a percentage point since his inauguration.

"We have not had any major breakthrough in foreign affairs, though we have a very coherent program that we are pursuing," Carter said. "We are tenacious and determined to improve the situation in Southern Africa, in the Middle East, with the Soviets. on SALT (a strategic arms limitation treaty) and test bans against

In the Middle East, Carter said, "no one can expect miracles." He noted that generations have sought peace there and added: "We may or may not be successful, but we are going to continue to try."

He said he would continue to make his foreign policy initiatives public as much as possible, and that he has not regretted doing so in the past, despite criticism for it.

One reason, he indicated, was because some national leaders take different public and private positions. He named no one but, speaking in the context of the Middle East, stated:

"We will continue to labor at it, taking slings and arrows from all directions, criticisms, publicly in nations when privately the leaders say, 'We are willing to do this,' when we come out publicly

"Quite often for domestic political consumption, there is an adamant, very disputive and antagonistic attitude taken on the part of some leaders. But we are willing to accept this
