REPORT CLAIMS SHORTAGES IMMINENT

Dept. overestimates energy

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) - The new Department of Energy has seriously overestimated its ability to cope with another cold winter and resulting natural gas shortages, a congressional report says.

Federal officials have said they will be able to make up 60 percent of expected shortages like those that closed schools and factories last winter.

But in a report released Monday, a Senate subcommittee said "the federal government will not be in a position to help very much," even though it credited officials with doing more than ever to deal with anticipated shortages.

The subcommittee on intergovernmental relations based its conclusions on three days of hearings in which officials outlined a Winter Emergency Energy Plan for 1977-

"Another cold winter is on its way and we are not ready for what it may bring," said Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, the panel's chairperson.

The report's authors said they were impressed with both the detail and scope of the emergency energy plan, prepared by the Federal Energy Administration (FEA). The FEA's responsibilities have been taken over by the new Department of Energy, which went into existence on Oct. 1.

The subcommittee report said the mere existence of the plan represents a far higher level of concern than the federal government has shown previously. But at the same time it said the plan 'appears to seriously overestimate the government's ability to increase natural gas supplies and decrease demand should another cold winter bring about natural gas curtailments."

"Another cold winter is on its way and we are not ready for what it may bring . . . If these figures were correct (federal natural gas shortage reduction percentages), we could clearly go a long way toward easing the impact of any shortfalls this year." — Sen. Edward S. - Sen. Edward S.

In any case, it concluded that federal efforts, no matter how well intentioned, may be too late to have full effect this Testifying at the subcommittee hearing. government and private long-term weather forecasters said the nation can expect the coming winter to be significantly colder than normal, although not as cold as the winter of 1976-1977.

Other witnesses said substantial natural gas curtailments can be expected as early as November.

A reduction of electric power occurred in some Eastern states and cutoffs began in natural gas supplies to large industrial and commercial users.

The subcommittee noted that by Jan. 31, 4,000 factories had been closed and 400,000

The report said the government's emergency energy plan greatly overestimates the impact of the steps it proposes.

It said that while the federal plan is based on the assumption that government action can reduce the expected natural gas shortage by 60 percent, a 22 percent reduction is the more realistic outcome.

"If these figures were correct, we could clearly go a long way toward easing the impact of any shortfalls this year," Muskie

"Unfortunately, the numbers in the emergency energy report do not stand up under careful scrutiny."

He said that in some cases the government does not have the authority to take the actions it proposes. In others, he said that the authority will not be available until

The report made five recommendations it said would improve the administration's emergency plan.

•The administration should begin negotiations immediately with Canada to buy additional natural gas this winter.

 Congress should enact legislation granting President Jimmy Carter authority to allocate natural gas supplies.

•In order to protect jobs that might otherwise be lost, Congress should consider giving the president power to reallocate small amounts of natural gas to pipelines experiencing shortfalls.

•The administration should extend the Special Crisis Intervention Program, which helped two million persons pay last winter's increased fuel bills.

•It should also urge the Department of Energy to act immediately to ease the special problems affecting the distribution of natural gas in New England.

Faculty union hearings postponed until Nov. 16

State News Staff Writer

Today's hearings concerning the proposed MSU faculty union election have been postponed until Nov. 16 by the administration and MSU Faculty Associates (FA), said Philip Korth, former FA president.

The FA requested postponement of the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) hearings so they could have more time to consider some administrative compromises put forth last week by Keith Groty, executive vice president of personnel employee relations.

The election would be one of the final steps necessary to authorize a faculty union

The petition for a bargaining election was filed in January by the FA, which is competing with the MSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) to become the sole bargaining unit for MSU faculty members. A similar 1972 election resulted in 40 percent of the faculty voting for either AAUP or FA to represent them and 60 percent voting for no union.

However, before an election can again be held, the administration and FA have to agree on who should be included in the bargaining unit.

The compromise Groty proposed stated that the administration would agree to have the University ombudsman, assistant chairpersons and some associate chairpersons included in the bargaining unit, as the FA

The administration remains firm in its belief that chairpersons should not be included in the unit, Groty said, adding that it would include only those associate chairpersons who did not share their job responsibility with chairpersons.

"We feel the chairpersons should not be included because their role is that of a supervisor which, under MERC rules, separates them from the people they supervise on the bargaining level," Groty

Only those temporary people who have been at MSU for three terms should be included, he added, because not until then do they seem to have a continuing interest in the University $\boldsymbol{\cdot}$

The FA wants to include those temporary faculty who have been at MSU only two terms, however, arguing that extending the criteria to three terms will eliminate many people from the bargaining unit.

Groty said only about 16 people would be affected by the change.

Korth said more and more instructors are being placed under the category of temporaries, and thus receive lower pay and

"That's economic exploitation," Korth continued, "and we feel that if we can cut that out (by allowing these people to be part of the bargaining unit), we can cut the

"It is a very modest compromise compared to the compromise we had offered last spring, in which we were willing to acquiesce on the other administration demands in order to have a separate election for the medical school," he said.

economic advantage of hiring temporaries.

The medical school issue is a major one for the FA, Korth said. The FA believes that the medical schools and their interests are distinct from the rest of the University in many ways and should vote separately from other faculty on the union issue for that reason.

Another reason for postponement of the hearings, Korth added before the hearings was to allow the administration and the FA time to agree on some basic facts about the medical schools such as budget, salary and

If agreement on such basic facts can be worked out. Korth said, more time in the hearings could be devoted to the issue of a separate election.

The FA would like some additional information from Groty before the hearings. Korth said, such as names of people Groty understands would fall under the FA's bargaining unit classification.

The list must be made up and turned in to MERC a few days before the election, according to Korth, but the FA wants to see the list earlier to see if the administration is correctly interpreting the FA's criteria for the bargaining unit. Korth added that the FA wants chairpersons to be included in the bargaining unit because the FA would like to change bylaws to allow chairpersons to be elected by the faculty.

Groty said he was surprised that the FA asked for a delay in the hearings

'U' woman assaulted near Hubbard Hall

An 18 year-old MSU woman was assaulted by an unidentified man early Saturday morning near the bike racks west of Hubbard Hall, according to a Department of Public Safety (DPS) report released Monday.

The woman was beaten in the face and stomach and suffered a black eye from the beating, DPS said. She also suffered a bump on the head resulting from a fall to the

Voter registration ends

Voter registration will take place all over the country today till 8 p.m. but the East Lansing City Clerk's office may be the only one taking registration till midnight.

City Clerk Beverly Colizzi announced Monday that the clerk's office will be taking registration far past normal business hours for the Nov. 8 city council election.

Colizzi said the decision to stay open until 12 a.m. was a result of several deputy clerks wanting to take voter registration throughout the city past 8 p.m. today.

She decided that in order to be fair to all the city's residents, she would ask the State

Elections Division if taking registration at that time was legal.

While it is mandatory to be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on the last day of registration, no laws specified that later hours are illegal.

She said it would be "very unjust and very unfair" to only allow those residents reached by door-to-door deputy registrars to register. Students already registered to vote in their home town can also cancel their registration there and vote in the East Lansing election.

The election will fill two vacant seats on the East Lansing City Council.

Bakke decision favored by MSU students polled

By TERRY PRZYBYLSKI State News Staff Writer

A random sampling of MSU students indicates many support the case of Allan Bakke, who claims he was a victim of "reverse discrimination" in being refused admission to a California medical school which admitted some minority students with grade-point averages and test scores lower than he had.

Bakke, a 37-year-old white man, filed suit against the University of California's Board of Regents after he discovered that the University's medical school at Davis had reserved 16 of its 100 places for "disadvantaged" students, mainly blacks and other minority group members. The California Supreme Court ruled in his favor, and the case is now before the U.S. Supreme Court, which is scheduled to begin oral hearings on it Wednesday.

Most students interviewed said they felt Bakke had a legitimate grievance, and stated that they were particularly opposed to setting up "quota systems" for minorities and women in education and employment.

NCAA probe needed

The National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), long seen as the bastion of respectability and integrity in college sports, now finds itself in the unenviable position — one that it has placed many schools in, including MSU of suspect, of accused, of the investigated.

Whatever the investigatory body — the U.S. House Oversight subcommittee determines about the alleged improprieties of the NCAA's procedures, the outcome can not affect MSU's threeyear football probation. However, that isn't the issue. What is important here is that the NCAA must learn to operate not only within its own guidelines but also within the law.

This is by no means an intimation that anyone is certain the NCAA uses dubious practices in its effort to combat illegal recruiting on college campuses - but on the other hand, enough doubts have been raised to warrant an examination of the sort the House subcommittee has proposed.

There is no way that whatever is discovered on Capitol Hill can help to erase the memory or effect of the probation on MSU's football program, or the impact it has had and will continue to have on the patrons of Michigan State University. The most that can be hoped for is, first, to determine the extent of the NCAA's alleged wrong-doing, and second, a speedy and just solution.

Iran back in news

Last spring the MSU-Iran film contend that providing Iranian project - in which MSU agreed to produce a series of films for the government of Iran, ostensibly for educational purposes - came under intense fire from members of the University community. We believe the protesters had a valid point, and that MSU's role in the project constituted a tacit endorsement of Iran's repressive and undemocratic regime.

Now we learn that the MSU Board of Trustees accepted money from Iran for a project aimed at improving Iranian education through the use of technology. Those who favor the project educators with more advanced teaching methods will help uplift the Iranian people as a group, thereby undermining the Iranian government. This is an idealistic hope, but does not address the main issue: Should MSU - or any major university - have direct dealings with governments that are repressive in nature?

We believe they should not. Obviously there are some exceptions to this rule, but in the case of MSU's connection with Iran — an intensely emotional issue on campus - the trustees would be wise to terminate this project and others, like the film project.

The new accessibility

It is often remarked that at a University of this size and breadth, proper access to officials in charge is of paramount importance. In an attempt to create such access. President Clifton R. VIEWPOINT: THE BAKKE CASE

By BRUCE GUTHRIE

The time has come for the Supreme Court to rule on the Bakke case and the legitimacy of affirmative action. Too often.

affirmative action—a quota system designed to open at least a number of high socio-economic occupations to disadvantaged minorities—has been left in the racial arena. To oppose "reverse discrimination" is to open yourself to charges of racism and results in the likes of Ed Lion's "First of all I'd like to clear the air

The issue is not racism. What is actually being tossed around is the myth of equal opportunity in America. The University of California medical school has a differential admissions policy which gives preferential treatment to racial minority students. Michigan

State University has a student employment policy (work study) which substantially improves the chances of a student on financial aid of finding employment. Work study has some obvious faults-job grants are for a fixed amount and the financially-strapped student is usually fired once he exceeds the limit while the economically secure student can go onto earn still more—but, like affirmative action, it is designed to promote a disadvantaged group to a position through criterion other than the ability to perform

There is little open resentment to work study because few ssociate any prestige with having a campus job. Affirmative action, however, reserves jobs with status for "someone else" and middle class white males feel threatened. Their flag-bearer is Horatio Alger. They worked hard to get to where they are today and obviously the minorities and women didn't because their test cores are lower. Nothing-what you look like, your race or sex, where you live, how much education your parents could afford for you—nothing effects the rule: with lick, hard work, and inherent skills, you can start at the bottom and advance as far as you choose.

The Horatio Alger fantasy requires the ideal of equal opportunity to be emotionally wholesome; everyone has an equal chance at any position in society and placement is awarded to those working hardest. Notice how this blends with free enterprise, democracy

Let's face it, if we all believed in equal opportunity and accepted that all people were basically equal and therefore inclined to try equally as hard for success, there would be no problem whatsoever eccepting a system which promoted people based on their relative population in society. That affirmative action must be fought for should indicate that we are professing a nonexistant

Those who attack affirmative action as an affront to the value of hard work should realize that the latter means little without equal opportunity and equal opportunity does not exist here to be affronted. If the value of hard work is a goal to achieve, then affirmative action- which I envision to someday include quotas on women and lower-class whites—is the only vehicle through which

Of course it's hard for the white middle class to sacrifice their own self-interest for something which the United States has never seen. They cry that their promotions may be lost so someone less qualified can be promoted instead. Logically, this situation could occur for only a small percentage of whites, the number bumped by the quota system. This number, currently hovering around 16 per cent, is the number of citizens bumped throughout our history

By shifting that 16 per cent to the group of white males, equal opportunity may be restored to the system and people can in the future be promoted according to their abilities. Rationally, nothing is lost by a shift of the pointer, and, infact, everything is gained

Needless to say, those who must worry about being bumped can because they belonged to minority races.

Wharton should be honest about futur

It seems like everytime you look, President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. is being considered for another job. And each time he's asked about it he issues the same vague collection of mumble: I do not want to add speculation, et cetera.

Despite the fact that we're all interested Wharton's career, we're also interested in just what the future holds for the president's office at MSU. In an editorial last Thursday entitled "Wharton Should Level," the State News asked that Wharton provide us all-students, faculty, administrators, trustees-with the facts behind his potential departure from MSU for the chancellorship at the State University of New York.

Perhaps "potential departure" is too dramatic, since Wharton has been considered several times in the past for prestigious academic positions. Each time he has, of course, evaded the issue, protecting himself with a veil of mystery and disinterest, as if he knows nothing of the job offers.

Well, first of all, we know that he's visited the Albany campus of the New York system at least twice, once during summer and again about three weeks ago. What I would like to know, and what the State News asked last week, are for only simple answers to simple questions, which we, as students and taxpayers of Michigan, have a right to know. Wharton refuses to even confirm or deny reliable information that he has met with university officials in New

When you are dealing with public institutions, educational institutions at that, it's an entirely different situation than a private business or industry. The officials of the institution-MSU-are directly accountable to the public. Therefore, whatever proper questions they are asked they must answer. The arrogance which Wharton displays in glossing over this issue, indeed, in deliberately evading the issue, is intoler-

I cannot respect a man who will not be honest with the people he supposedly serves. Neither can I understand how members of the Board of Trustees, elected officials who compose the governing body of this University, can sit by stunned that their own president is being considered for a post elsewhere, and one which he has own some interest in

When you get comments like "Well, I'll he darned" from Trustee Blanche Martin or "It's news to me" from Trustee Michael Smydra, you just have to wonder whether anybody at all is doing their jobs. How can Wharton's immediate superiors not even have an inkling that he's job-interviewing around the country? It's the same old story; if they knew about it then they had the responsibility of telling us; if they didn't know they weren't doing their jobs properly.

But the best comment of all came from Trustee Donald Stevens, a Democrat from Bloomfield Hills, who said he had "not bothered" to discuss Wharton's possible departure because Wharton was always getting job offers. (But is he always actively interviewing for them?)

How did Stevens find out about Wharton's mysterious rendezvous in New York? From a friend who lives there. How utterly absurd. I'd be embarrassed to admit that I was that far out of touch with things. Wharton is a prominent figure in American education and it benefits MSU's image to keep him on as president. Wharton attended Harvard, John Hopkins and the University of Chicago; has and still serves on many major corporate boards; is considered an expert on the economic development of Latin America and Southeast Asia; was vice president of the Agricultural Development Council, an affiliate of the Rockefeller Foundation; and, is often mentioned when universities like Columbia or California are looking for new persons for top positions.

Wharton took over as president of MSU in January 1970, following in the footsteps of the well-liked and respected MSU professor of economics, Walter Adams, who served as acting president after John Hannah (as in the John Hannah Administration Building) left.

Wharton was up against tough competition, Oakland University Chancellor Durward Varner; University Secretary (and now executive vice president) Jack Breslin; and former Michigan governor (not state supreme court justice) G. Mennen Slices. . .

It is a name that may sound insignificant, but in the context of what this page proposes to do, it takes on a larger meaning. Slices is a feature that will appear every Tuesday. Its purpose is to stir the university community out of its traditional apathy; to stimulate a meaningful dialog and interchange of ideas on the issues facing this campus, this city, this state . . indeed, the entire nation and world. Its goal is to transmute ideas into slices of written information and ideas.

What issues? Whose ideas?

Yours, to a large extent. Each week the Slices page will feature a different topic. Contributions to the page will be solicited a week ahead of time. Next Tuesday's page, for example, will deal with the broad issue of nuclear energy. Contributors should consider the following: what are the uses - and potential misuses - of this energy source? What are the advantages or disadvantages of tying America's energy needs to breeder reactors? What alternate sources of energy are feasible?

These are merely suggestions. Contributors should feel free to expand on this topic in any way they see fit. Articles should be addressed "Slices," State News, 343 Student Services Building.

True, education can play an enormous role in helping us to overcome our ecologically lunatic and ethologically perverse daily activities. Not so, however, if academia's teaching and research is bridled, scheduled and channelled as the fund granting government agencies and foundations see fit. Not so, as long as a university is mistaken for an information processing data bank to train a phalanx of spiritually defunct, colorless and single-visionary experts who are morally committed to devote their learned ignorance to the beneift to technocratic society. Not so, as long as a technocratic law and order superstructure financially stimulates you to be creative and instructs you in the art of wrecking your life

True, the multi-disciplinary systems approach is a helpful tool to forecase trends, assess impacts, open up alternative avenues and widen horizons. As a protective armor it may proclaim itself successful in its struggle to outwit nature's wisdom, but without the non- and prescientific dimensions of ethics and mythical consciousness it will enjoy only the flimsy fame of a Pyrrhic victory. MSU's women harriers literally ran away with the last ne meet of their season Saturday, as coach Mark Pittman's team won the invitational with the low score of 15.

They outran both Central Michigan and Hillsdale, who came away with scores of 60 and 69, respectively. Ball State and Bowling Green, who were also invited to compete, cancelled late last week.

The Spartan women domi-nated the entire race, taking the first eight places in the finish. It was an easy victory for MSU at Forrest Akers Golf Course despite the cold and damp conditions. Once again it was MSU's Cynthia Wadsworth who led the way for the harriers, coming in first with a time of 18:48. She was followed by Maryann Opalewski at 19:01 and Lil Warnes at 19:19.

Naturally, Pittman has been pleased with the team's perfor-"They ran a split. . .forty seconds between the first and fifth place finisher." Pittman has been working on the squad's speed in an effort to achieve a twenty second split between the first and fifth place finishers.

Yankees host LA in Series opener

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, who won the 31st American League pennant of their history Sunday night with a three-run ninth-inning rally, will host the National League's Los Angeles Dodgers in the opener of the World Series here tonight in an 8 p.m. televised game.

Three outs from oblivion at K. 1888 City, the Yankees struck for the runs on a rally fueled by Paul Blair's leadoff single and highlighted by Willie Randolph's sacrifice fly.

Blair, in the lineup because of a controversial decision by Yankees Manager Billy Martin to bench slugger Reggie Jackson, touched off New York's last chance with a soft single to center against Dennis (continued on page 7) middle guard Kim Rowekamp injured his right knee.

Rogers had announced after Saturday's game that Rowe-kamp will miss the rest of the year, but he shed a ray of hope on Monday. He said team physician Herb Ross would examine Rowekamp, and there is a possibility that he can play if there is no ligament damage.

"We just don't know right now," Rogers said. "At this point we're not sure whether it was ligament or cartilage damage.

The Spartans have also been hurt by injuries on the offen-sive side of the line.

Eugene Byrd, who was MSU's second leading receiver last year, separated a shoulder ment Edgar Wilson, who is among the top receivers in the Big Ten, suffered a hip pointer against Michigan. The severity of the injury has not been this won't happen.

"I don't think there's any reason why we can't get our team emotionally ready for Indiana," he said. "Indiana is a good team, much better than they were last year. But we shouldn't have any problems getting ready for them.

"Indiana is a big game for us, the thing we have to do is get it back together against them." When asked whether Indiana would be his choice as the pivotal game of the year for the Spartans, Rogers said wryly,

GOALIES ARE MSU'S STRENGTH

Skaters host U-N

By JOE CENTERS State News Sports Writer

Usually Spartan hockey fans have to wait until the middle of the season before they get a chance to see MSU battle it out with Michigan, but not this year. Saturday night the 1977-'78 Spartan hockey team will host the Wolverines in an exibition game at Munn Arena to give both teams a chance to preview their teams and to iron out their problems before the start of the regular season (which, for MSU, will be Oct. 21 at home against Toronto). Game time Saturday will be 7:30 and there will be a three dollar charge for everyone. The money from the game will be divided up evenly between MSU, U-M and Western Collegiate Hockey Association (WCHA). There are no reserved seats. The Spartans will also play their annual Green and White game Wednesday at Munn in a 7:30 game. There is no admission charge.

Coach Amo Bessone is optimistic about this year's team, which will be centered around the strength of the two goalies.

"(Dave) Versical and (Mark) Mazzoleni are as good as goalies as anyone in the league,' Bessone said. "I don't know yet whether I will rotate them or not, I just have to wait and freshmen, Dan Sutton, from Rexdale, Ontario, and Mitch Horsch, from Hastings, Minn. are "two of the best looking defensemen in practice so far," according to Bessone. "Both can carry the puck and handle themselves well, they should add a little speed to the defense," Bessone added.

Bessone feels that the best teams in the WCHA this year will be Wisconsin, defending league and national champion, Michigan, which lost to Wisconsin last year in the NCAA playoffs, and Denver, which, "improved at the tail end of last year."

Bessone says that MSU rates in this group and that Michigan Tech will be a question

"Tech has the biggest recruiting group," Bessone commented. "They brought in 18 bodies and two of them are from Sweden. I have sent a letter to all of the league schools protesting the Swedish players and will make an official protest if I have to."

Bessone is upset about the two Swedish players because of the way Europeans classify their amateurs.

"Their class A players are professionals," Bessone said, "And they should be illegal." A wild season may be shaping up already, and the feisty Bessone is letting it be known that MSU wants to be right in the action.

New scanning device to provide better pictures

By PETER BRONSON State News Staff Writer

Studying the X-rays of a ten-year-old child's adrenal gland, a physician detects what appears to be calcification. If further chemical tests fail to confirm his diagnosis of the patient's problem, the doctor must often perform surgery to get a closer look at the affected organ.

The time, expense and suffering involved in exploratory surgery may all soon be obso-lete due to MSU's new piece of medical technology, the CAT Scanner. An innovative approach to X-ray technology. the CAT Scanner flashes X-rays through a series of 680 crystals which form a ring around the patient, then processes the results through computers which produce an actual picture of the inside of the patient's body.

Dr. James Potchen, chairman of the MSU radiology depart-ment which installed the CAT Scanner last week, said the new piece of equipment will be a valuable tool for research and will greatly improve patient care at the Clinical Center.

"The scanner measures absolute density of tissue to a much higher degree of accuracy, and gives us a three-dimensional icture of the patient. For the first time we can see inside the human body what would normally require surgery to see."

Far more sophisticated and more heavily computer-based conventional X-ray systems, which produce only two-dimensional pictures, MSU's CAT Scanner is one of pictures, only three of its kind in the country. It allows diagnosis of a diseases formerly identifiable only by exploratory surgery.

Totally painless, the CAT Scanner can produce a crosssection of any part of the human body that is "almost like number of conditions and a photograph of your insides," according to radiology engineer Jim Siebert.

Along with providing doctors with more accurate information for improved patient care, re-search done by Potchen and his associates utilizing the CAT Scanner may eventually lead to more streamlined and efficient

"While most university medical centers study disease, we at Michigan State are unique in that we study patient care. Our primary, interest is improved care for the patient, and this will be the goal of our research with the CAT Scanner," he said.

"By determining the indications of its use, and its effectiveness in comparison to other alternatives, we hope to make recommendations for more efficient allocation of resources."

Potchen said his department will seek to determine how many hospitals in a given area really need the CAT Scanner. By surveying cases, they hope to learn which specific types of patients it will benefit the most.

"With this new equipment, we know we are getting better pictures, but we want to find out what good this is doing for the patient," he said.

In addition to research in the field of patient care, the department of radiology also plans to use the new equipment to research lung function.

"The CAT Scanner will allow us to use inert gases such as xenon and krypton for contrast pictures observing lung function," Potchen said.

The inert gases are harmless and will provide a safe method of observing exactly how people breathe.

"We have a lot of research going on here and it all is going very well," Potchen said.

The CAT Scanner was pur chased at a price of $687,500 and installed for a total cost of approximately $750,000.

The equipment will pay for itself in five years and isn't costing the university any thing. All of our equipment is either leased or purchased on a pay back system and not purchased with university money, Potchen explained.

Patient use of the CAT Scanner is scheduled to begin Talbott explained, was named after the great ship erroneously believed to be unsinkable. He likened that belief to a similar self-deception engaged in by most addicted physicians.

As Talbott summed it up:

"We were taught this (drug or alcohol addiction) could never happen to us."

This sentiment was shared by Dr. X.

"Doctors are used to being gods themselves," he said.

For those addicted physicians who cannot admit powerlessness over addictive substances, "their only recovery is death" Dr. X. said.

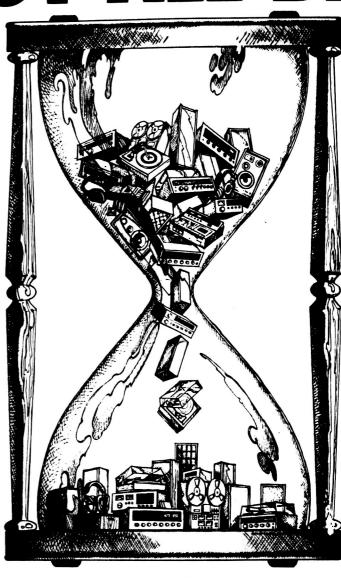

"Being a doctor, you turn to other doctors for help," he said of his own fruitless search for help among his professional colleagues and friends. "There's no place a doctor can go where he can get help. There's no place to turn," he sighed.

Some that have applied think it's really convenient,"

One reason receiving aid seems simple is the increased accessibility created by the Union location. Students are immediately given an application with the option of returning the information before Oct.

MASON - ABBOTT'S 'INTELLIGENT DRINKING PARTY'

Enjoying a float without a float

By RALPH W. ROBINSON The drinks didn't have the potency of a whiskey sour, nor the hearty aftertaste one gets from a cold Miller's. But it seemed as though most of the three hundred students at a recent Abbott Hall party were enjoying themselves just as much with root-beer floats as they would have been with an alcoholic beverage.

The so-called "Intelligent Drinking Party" is a non-alcoholic event that began last year in various dormitories. The party was not an effort by the Residence Hall Program Office (RHPO) and the Mason-Abbott halls Residence Assistants (RA) to decry the evils of alcohol, but designed to give students substitutes that could be just as enjoyable, according to Abbott RA, Dave Waters, the party coordinator and disc

Waters commented on student alcohol use, saying that students should know their limit and be honest with themselves so they can deal with personal alcohol use and eventually cut down. RHPO hopes to take the intelligent drinking party and variations of it throughout the campus.

WKAR-TV, MSU's public television station, was on hand to video-tape the festivities for possible future rebroadcast, but no one knew when that might be done.

Abbott student cafeteria supervisor, Chuck Haywood, said mixed feelings could be expected about the party.

"I can see myself still having just as much of a good time with root beer floats as with a half gallon of beer," he said.

Waters explained that students were not limited to drinking root beer and were allowed to bring their own alcoholic beverages if they

However, students appeared to be unconcerned that only root beer floats were being served - most were busy dancing to the disco music on the Abbott cafeteria floor, turning around occasionally to see if they were being filmed.

In a corner near the cafeteria entrance party-goers were discussing the unique get-togeth-

"Parties of this kind are great because they will get students to drink substitutes more often eventually. Some people may feel they are being preached at, but that is not what's hppening to them at all," said Mason Hall freshman, Becky Solomon.

Another party goer maintained that the idea of root beer float parties would work throughout campus because a lot of people would come just to listen to the music. Referring to the party's title the student d, "Exactly what makes a root beer float an intelligent drink anyway?"

Darryl Hollister, a Mason resident, said he thinks students are limited in what they can drink when alcoholic beverages are not also offered.

"The party is fine," one partygoer said. "People are dancing and having a really good time." She added though that there was no way a root beer float could substitute for the enjoyment she was getting from the cold can of beer in her hand. The same student went on to say that "a beer relaxes you a little more where you are able to meet people easier and have a better time."

An intelligent drinking party, according to one student, is where people "can drink and still drive home afterwards.' He said he also believes the program will cut down alcohol use, but never replace it.

Waters said more non-alcohol parties will be planned each term, and a slide presentation on alcohol abuse may also be shown on campus, but where and when has not been decided.

Full trial begins on Pigeon River issue

By SCOTT WIERENGA State News Staff Writer

The long-standing Pigeon River oil-drilling controversy is finally going to full trial at 9:30 this morning in Ingham County Circuit Court, in Mason. The court will decide the legality of ten drilling permits issued by the state in August.

In a victory for environment-alists, the Michigan Court of Appeals in September effectively prohibited any oil and gas development activities at ten exploratory wells until December and ordered that the drilling issue be brought to trial in Circuit Judge Thomas Brown's court.

In August, drilling permits were issued for the ten sites by State Dept. of Natural Re-ard Tanner. The ten drilling sites are located in the southern one-third of the 145 square-mile Pigeon River Country State Forest. The forest is located in extreme northern Lower Michigan considered one of the last large wilderness areas in the Lower Peninsula and is also the home of the only wild elk herd this side of the Mississippi River. The area is also located directly over $1.5 billion worth

The entire area was originally leased to oil companies in 1968. About 75 percent of the leases are held by Shell, Amoco, Getty Oil, and Northern Michigan Exploration (Consumers Power Co.). Three of these compaines have agreed to Conner maintains the permits violate provisions of the Michigan Environmental Protection Act, the Oil and Gas Act, and the act which set up the DNR.

Though the Court of Appeals denied the environmentalist's request for an injunction against all drilling activity, the court took a broad interpretation of "drilling activity", indicating that it meant all action preparatory to actual drilling, including the cutting of trees and improving of roads. Therefore the ruling has the same effect as an injunction.

Nosy secretary awarded prize

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -One boss stripped to the waist so his secretary could scratch his back, another warned against crumbling paper before it was tossed in the trash, and another ordered his secretary to do his wife's schoolwork.

Those were among the responses to a contest staged by the San Francisco Examiner which asked: What is the pettiest office procedure you ever encountered?

For obvious reasons, identities weren't disclosed.

The prize, a dinner for two. went to the secretary who said, "My boss keeps a large supply of shirts in the closet in the office for a quick change in case of an important meeting or an unexpected dash to the airport for out-of-town business . . . Unfortunately these are not a particularly fresh supply of shirts. And since we all become accustomed to our own scent, he assigns me the task of sniffing out the most fragrant.'

Bakke favored in 'U' sampling

"I'm strongly in favor of Bakke," said Collette Mercier. "Minority students and women should not be admitted if they're not qualified. I don't want to be accepted because I'm a woman, but because of my ability."

"I think he was discriminated against," said Steve Schwartz, 258 E. McDonel Hall. "Maybe minorities need some special breaks, but I think they should find another way to do it besides quotas. I don't think either party should be discriminated against."

"I think he has a legitimate gripe," another student said. "Reverse discrimination is wrong. They shouldn't make up for past discrimination by discriminating now against qualified people.

Other students, however,

"There's something to be said for his complaint," said Meg Upchurch, 1135 E. Michigan Ave., but some whites that were admitted (to Davis) had lower scores than Bakke, too. I won-der if there's something about Another student said that Bakke erred in suing the University of California, and should have sued the federal government instead, because "the school had to answer to certain

Mushroom hunters: be alert

Poisonous mushrooms contain a chemical compound toxic to the human body, Beneke explained. The compounds, which vary among poisonous species, serve no known purpose to the fungus, he said Ninety percent of the persons who eat destroying angel mushrooms die because of the amatine they contain, he said. The pure white fungus, which grows in the fall, has both a ring and a cup

The fly agaric, another autumn-furiting poisonous species, contains muscatine, which stimulates the nervous system like alcohol, causing a few hours of nausea. It is rarely fatal, Beneke

Fly agaric's reddish-orange caps — which are speckled with wart-like bumps — grow to 18 inches across. Mushroom poisonings are rare in Michigan, added Beneke, who could think of only one in the recent past.

"I guess people are careful not to eat them if they're unsure what they are," he said. "They (poisonings) certainly occur elsewhere." Many suspected mushroom poisonings are really cases of someone eating old, rotten mushrooms, he said, adding, "That's not a true poisoning - it's like eating bad left-overs."

A guide to Elvis paraphernalia

By BILL HOLDSHIP

State News Staff Writer Sometimes a small part of me is almost glad that his face has replaced Farrah's and Son Of Sam's since it has made me slowly realize that I'm not going to wake up some morning and read in the headlines: "IT WAS ALL A BIG JOKE." But, as so many people see that face on their t.v. or local news stand selling something for the fiftieth time that day, they must wonder which items are really worth spending their hard earned American bucks

What follows is a comprehensive list of paraphernalia that may someday be helpful when your kids and their kids ask who this Elvis guy was (God forbid we should ever forget) chosen by someone who cared with an almost religious conviction and is still finding it difficult to "goodbye" to that part of his life.

RECORDINGS: Elvis' best records were unquestionably made between the years 1954-60. Unfortunately, when stered became hot, RCA reprocessed the mono recordings, making the records sound like they've been through a nuclear holocaust. Fortunately, some of the better songs on the first two albums ("Blue Suede Shoes," "Money Honey," etc.) have been preserved on mono

Worldwide 50 Gold Award Hits, Vol. I & II (RCA) are an exception, including every gold single from "Heartbreak Hotel" through 1971's "The Wonder of You" in their original form. The price is relatively high as both sets include four records, but

well worth it to own a group of songs that either rock your tail off or take your breath away.

The Sun Sessions (RCA) should be owned by every rock 'n roller, fan or not, simply because it's the first pure rock ever put on vinyl and a classic chunk of history. Elvis' Christmas Album (RCA Camden), the best rock holiday recording in existence, is usually available for under two dollars, and includes the great "Blue Christmas" in addition to X-mas themed songs by Leiber & Stoller ("Jailhouse Rock"). I've been known to put it on my turntable in the middle of July. Two bootleg albums, From The Waist Up (Golden Archives 150) and Elvis Dorsey Shows (Golden Archives 100), feature Elvis' appearances on the Ed Sullivan and Dorsey Brothers shows. Both are semi-legal, and shouldn't be passed up if found. Excerpts from the t.v. shows can also be found on the legal The Sun Years (Sun 1001) which additionally features inter views with 19 year old Elvis "The Cat" Presley.

Elvis' later albums aren't necessarily bad. Most of them (especially the numerous live LPs) include some real winners. The only problem is they include some losers too. How-ever, Elvis NBC-TV Special (RCA), a recording of his 1968 return to the throne in the midst of The Beatles, Stones, and Dylan, is a definite must. It is probably the most fitting tribute to the King's force, portraying him as young and beautiful forever. PUBLICATIONS: The definitive essay on Elvis can be found in rock critic supreme Greil Marcus' Mystery Train: Images Of America In Rock 'N Music (Dutton, 1976). while the best biography is still Jerry Hopkins' Elvis (Warner, 1972). The only other book worth owning is W.A. Harbinson's The Illustrated Elvis (Tempo, 1976). Harbinson's poetic sociology is brilliant, and the book includes never before published photos from Elvis Fan Club members which depict Elvis as "the first generation punk" at his height of bump 'n grind, an image that has been suppressed in recent tive issue is one of the best treatments on Elvis, including final tributes by Bruce Springsteen. Greil Marcus, and my favorite rock dreamer, Dave Marsh. However, as usual, Rolling Stone has been surpassed by Crawdaddy magazine. Crawdaddy looks at his death as a time for national reassessment, and the result is excellence. The essay by Abbie Hoffman shouldn't be missed.

Not surprisingly, the best-seller is Elvis: What Happen ed? (Ballantine, 1977), the socalled "bodyguard book." I can't comment on this book any better than Robert Ward, who was originally asked to write it, but who explains in Crawdaddy that he refused because "it smelled of s Instead, Steve Dunleavy, Rupert Murdoch's ace reporter, became the author, and that alone speaks for itself. It's not that the book isn't true (So what?). It's just that Dunleavy's calibre of writing also falls under Ward's above description.

Dunleavy and Murdoch brings us to the final area of tabloids and "Collectors Edition" magazines. They're all garbage. If you're interested in the latter, the best is probably Photoplay's "Tribute," an anthology of plastic-Hollywood articles like "His Mother Calls From Her Grave." As far as the tabloids go, let's put it this way: When I was a kid and loved Elvis for helping me escape life's realities, there was nothing I wanted more than a picture of the King Of Rock 'N Roll in his casket. So now The National Enquirer has given it to us, suitable for framing. I just can't help wondering if now we're too big to cry?

Utopia on 'Wrong Planer

By DAVE DIMARTINO State News Reviewer Todd Rundgren & Utopia:

Oops! Wrong Planet (Bearsville 6970) Todd Rundgren really gets on my nerves. He's an inconsistency. Great with the Nazz, great for three or four of his own albums, and extremely negligible thereafter.

"Negligible" really isn't the right word, though. If it was, I wouldn't be writing about him at this point.

It's just this: BORING. DULL. REPETI-TIOUS. Those are three of the right words. The right words that describe the wayward boy's decline after the extremely progressive, almost perfect A Wizard/A True Star effort of a few years back. It's been downhill

Todd had some fine parts, but just as much

The first Utopia LP — you remember, the one with the classic Japanese "eye" art was limpid Mahavishnu Orchestra outtakes and little ele

His Initiation was an aptly titled Hell Night for those masochistic enough to subject themselves to the second side's "Treatise on Cosmic Fire." Excess is not success, at least not in Rundgren's case.

But the next LP. Another Live - with believe it or not, even more grotesque cover made some of the Mahavishnuisms listenable while presenting one or two discernible melodies including "The Wheel" which, along with "Do Ya" made the album surprisingly worthwhile. Possibly, I remember thinking at the time, the boy has found his way home. And, come next album, it seemed he had,

Faithful was in fact the best Rundpul since Wisard. This despite the fact fact the entire side was totally unlistenable. This side of the album, in which Rundgreath his studio talent by virtually dupled classics of the mid-sixties, after one to would drive all but the deaf listener by their collections to ferret out the real their collections to the real their collections to the side of the second side was the biggie, thous The second side was the biggie, though collection of tunes the likes of which never attempted since.

Next came Ra, an abysmal Utopia Next came Ra, an abysmai Utopia which featured a new, "everyone to lineup and some of the crummiest that A sickeningly naive ode to Hiroshina second-rate imitation of the Smill Woodan's Nut Gone" suite. The very Thumbs down.

Let this all serve as a prela Rundgren's newest, Oops! Wrong P. I ask you: have you ever tried to RR like an album? I did.

I looked at this one when I got it, thought: "Oh boy, lots of songs", "Thus even sound like the Nazz!", "Nice LPth

After many attempts at hearing the might be missing, I must report that record is, indeed, no good.

why? Well, for starters, Rundgra relinquished much of his control one band, even songwriting. The only soan listenable on the LP are the ones to alone wrote; the others are ordinary. At My advice to Todd Rundgren: Dum band. Keep the bassist, though, beca actually sings well. Write more good Make a good album. OK?
