House detours network probe

By DAN SPICKLER
State News Staff Writer

A resolution that would form a subcommittee to investigate Michigan State Police surveillance operations was sent to a House committee Thursday. The committee had killed a similar measure earlier this year.

The House voted 64-37 to send the resolution to the House Public Safety Committee. It is almost certain to die there, according to resolution supporters. The committee is headed by Jelt Sietsema, D-Grand Rapids.

Sietsema last month convinced the House to vote for the destruction of all controversial "Red Squad" files, amending a bill that repealed the acts which formed the group.

Rep. David Evans, D-Mt. Clemens, sponsored the measure, considered "watered down" by House leaders in comparison to the previous resolution which included subpoena powers for the proposed subcommittee.

Evans said he did not agree that his version of the resolution was watered down, though subpoena powers were removed.

"The whole intent of this move was to stress the positive results of such an investigation, with the emphasis on improving the police," Evans said. "Instead, we get people shouting police harassment."

The motion to send the bill to committee was offered by Rep. Thaddeus Stopczynski, D-Detroit, a former Detroit police officer.

He said the resolution was a ploy to bring the now outlawed "Red Squad" activities into the political arena.

Republican House floor leader William Bryant, Grosse Pointe, agreed that the motivation for the investigation was political. Bryant said if the resolution was actually spurred by the state Auditor General's report — as stated in the resolution — then other committees in existence could legitimately review the state police.

The year-old report stated that there was a lack of quality control, a lack of reaching objectives and errors in classification of activities of the Michigan Intelligence Network.

The original intent of the network, according to lawmakers, was to attempt to break up organized crime. Liberal lawmakers such as Evans contend that the network has improperly delved into spying on individuals for the purpose of uncovering "subversive activities."

Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, noted that recent reports show the East Lansing Police Department participated in the network. Jondahl said a subcommittee would best handle the immense task of investigating the network with the understanding that possible unconstitutional practices should be brought out and the police department improved in such areas, if warranted.

State police spokesperson Maj. Louis Smith said the police had been confronted with the Auditor General's report and steps were taken to improve the efficiency and proper objectives of the network.

"We have nothing to hide, but we see no reason for the formation of a subcommittee," Smith said. "We have already capitalized on the Auditor General's recommendations."

"First of all, let the courts handle it as they are doing right now," Bryant said. "If anyone was really hurt and can prove it, then the courts will handle that."

"Secondly, I do not see the evidence. I see a lot of 'garbage' — a lot of talk about horrible activities of the state police, but not one piece of evidence," he continued.

"Finally, I feel that the police prevented a lot of bombing and a lot of violence by infiltrating these subversive groups in the sixties," he said.

When asked if the right to privacy was unnecessarily violated in many instances, Bryant said he felt the safety that resulted by such work outweighed the possible violation of human rights.

Doyle Brown, representing the Troopers' Association, said that his group opposed the resolution. "It's a waste of time and an attempt to hassle the police. Why aren't we doing more investigating of the criminals?" he questioned.

Celebration carried away!

Pleading and begging didn't help as MSU student Jim Smith, 775 Burcham Dr., is hauled away by Lansing police Saturday after celebrating MSU's 44-3 win over Northwestern from atop a goal post. Five persons in all, three of them students, were arrested on drunk and disorderly charges during the celebration. The celebration began with 15 seconds left to play, as fans poured onto the field for the traditional season-ending dismantling of the goal posts. The Spartans received a penalty for delaying the game because of the crowded endzone and were forced to move to the opposite end of the field. The three students and one non-student arrested during the post-game festivities were taken to the Public Safety Building until they reached a level of sobriety acceptable to University police.

Selection process, trustee control discussed by ad hoc committee

By PATRICIA LACROIX
State News Staff Writer

Members of the University presidential process and the amount of trustee control over the final choices of the discussion items of the Board of Trustees' ad hoc presidential process Thursday.

The group used the Taylor II Report, prepared by John F.A. Taylor in 1969 to provide a guideline for the selection of the President Clifton R. Wharton Jr., as part of their discussions.

The ad hoc committee will meet Thursday with representatives Board of Trustees Patricia Carrigan, D-Farmington Hills, and Board Vice Chairperson John D. Fraser, to discuss the final draft of the report to be used during the presidential process. The meeting will be held in the Detroit area.

The committee discussed a portion of the Taylor II report which deals with the amount of control the MSU Board of Trustees would have over the presidential process. Individual trustees retained to this section as the "veto clause" in their October board meetings, since the board may override the recommendations of the Search and Selection Committee.

Of course, the hope is that the preferences and the preferences of the committee will be found to coincide, or at least partially overlap, so that the interests of both groups may be readily reconciled," the report states. "It is, however, the frank spirit of this instruction that the Board shall appoint a person from the recommended list."

John D. Fraser, administrative representative to the ad hoc committee, said he was not sure this clause should be excluded. Wharton was elected in 1969, he said, "and was a genuine fear that the trustees would name someone not on the (recommended) list.

"Are we that nervous about this at this time, is this still a fear? If not, there is no point in belaboring the point," Byerrum said.

The committee also decided that the openness of the selection proceedings should be determined by the final Search and Selection Committee.

Guidelines specifying that all the "committees' deliberations" should be as open as is consistent with the committee's purpose in acting for the University community were recommended by the ad hoc committee.

But the guidelines also specified that while "closure may be in some connection essential," the reasons for it should be explained in advance to the University community.

Nominees will also be notified of the openness policy as soon as possible.

Committee members postponed discussion of the actual composition of the final Search and Selection Committee, since they said they felt discussion of the report was more important.

"It would be very dangerous for us not to have any discussion about the process (of presidential selection) prior to our meeting Tuesday," said John Taylor, chairperson of the ad hoc committee. "Without any ideas, we will be doing less of a service to our community."

COMPUTERS HOLD SENSITIVE REPORTS

Protection standards not met

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal HEW study says department computers holding sensitive information on millions of Americans do not come close to meeting minimum standards for protecting that information from unauthorized disclosure and use.

Because of the poor showing by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's computers, there are indications HEW may lower its standards to improve its compliance ratings, says Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C.

The internal report, obtained by the Associated Press, prompted Preyer to ask the General Accounting office to study the security of all major government computers containing personal information.

"Systems security in HEW was far from meeting minimum acceptable standards," the six-month audit said. "The average compliance with security standards was only 36.9 percent."

The standards, established by HEW, are designed to provide protection for personal information in line with the requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, which forbids unauthorized disclosure or use of such information gathered by governmental agencies.

An HEW spokesperson said there would be no comment on the report until Monday.

The computers involved in the audit were not identified specifically. But the study covered the Social Security Administration's computers, which hold information on almost all working and retired American adults; the Health Care Financing Administration's systems, which include Medicare and Medicaid records; and the Office of Education's computers, which hold data on students receiving federal help.

The audit, a summary of 16 other analyses conducted by the HEW task force, is a statistics-filled technical paper. It warned of the risks involved in computer systems.

"Due to the nature of most HEW personal data, the team believes the potential is very high for both harm to individuals and fraudulent alteration of data if the . . . management groups fail to enforce standards," the audit said.

The audit revealed that HEW has begun a program to "correct all violations of department policy" found by the audit. The program is scheduled to be completed within 11 months.

The security and privacy issues are key to the controversy over Project Match, an HEW effort to detect welfare cheaters by using computers to match names from welfare records to payroll records.

Officials have expressed concern that innocent employees might have their records tarnished by faulty matches because of incorrect data or that the information used in Project Match might be used for other unauthorized purposes or be disclosed in violation of the Privacy Act.

Somalia breaks ties with Cuba, U.S.S.R.

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Somalia, once one of Moscow's closest friends in Africa, broke relations with Cuba Sunday, expelled all Russian advisers and terminated Soviet use of air and naval facilities at two Somali ports, the Somali radio said.

The Somalis also ordered the Soviet embassy to cut back its staff and renounced its 1974 friendship treaty with the Kremlin, the radio said.

The moves capped a steady decline in Somali-Soviet relations as Moscow has increasingly thrown its support behind Ethiopia, Somalia's bitter rival.

There was no immediate comment from Moscow.

Sunday's moves followed Somali claims that Cuban troops are fighting alongside Ethiopian forces battling Somali-backed insurgents in Ethiopia's southeastern Ogaden desert.

The Russians have been funneling arms, including tanks and jet fighters, to Ethiopia while at the same time cutting supplies to Somalia, formerly its major ally in the Horn of Africa.

Somali Information Minister Abdulqadir Salad Hasan was quoted in the Somali broadcast from the capital of Mogadishu as saying the Cuban Embassy staff and experts have been given 48 hours to leave the country. He said Soviet military and technical experts, believed to number 3,000 to 4,000, have been ordered out within seven days.

Abdulqadir also said Somalia had "immediately" ended Soviet use of Somali port facilities.

These include the ports of Berbera and Kismayu, used by Moscow's Indian Ocean fleet. Russia also has missile storage provisions at Berbera.

The official announcement over the radio station said the decisions were taken Sunday at a lengthy session of the ruling central committee, headed by President Siad Barre. The committee justified the moves, Abdulqadir said, on the following grounds:

•That the Soviets and Cubans have "brazenly interfered" in the struggle of ethnic Somalis fighting in Ethiopia's Ogaden region to gain "their liberation from the Ethiopian government." The insurgents control more than 90 percent of the region.

•That by supplying Ethiopia with "military assistance and personnel," it has become clear the intention is to launch an attack on Somalia.

Farm Lane Bridge reopens Tuesday

When the Farm Lane Bridge reopens Tuesday, it will not only be safer, but also more attractive.

The bridge has been closed to all traffic since early September to replace the north span. It had deteriorated to the point where weight restrictions had been placed on the bridge, according to Milton Baron, director of Campus Park and Planning.

The nearly 40-year-old bridge has already reached the life expectancy of between 30 and 40 years given for concrete bridges, he said.

Engineers have found the understructure of the bridge satisfactory, Baron said. New concrete decks were laid on the center and south spans to prolong their life a few more years before they need to be replaced.

The lightweight railing separating the street from the bridge sidewalk has also been replaced. Baron said a used highway railing — which perfectly matches the one next to the river — was purchased at a fraction of the cost of a new one.

The matching railing, together with new blacktop across all three spans of the bridge, gives it a new look, Baron said.

After the bridge reopens, the Brody and Circle-Fee bus routes will again use Farm Lane instead of the alternate Bogue Street route to cross the Red Cedar River. The two Capitol Area Transportation Authority campus routes will also use Farm Lane instead of Bogue Street.

Some step and sidewalk repairs under the bridge remain to be completed in the $120,000 bridge project. That work will not affect any traffic over the bridge.

Communist insurgents attack Thai tribe

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Communist insurgents attacked Haw tribe members guarding a road construction crew in northern Thailand and killed 25 of the hill dwellers, border police headquarters reported Sunday.

The incident occurred on a highway in Phayao province, 375 miles north of Bangkok, the border police said.

They said 15 tribe members were wounded when about 50 insurgents attacked with grenades and automatic weapons. The rebels retreated after 30 minutes of heavy fighting.

The Haws were hired to protect a road gang building a 60-mile highway through a wild, mountainous area infested with insurgent hideouts, police said. They said insurgents had sent letters to the construction company demanding it abandon the project.

Greek premier expected to win election

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Premier Constantine Karamanlis is expected to win another majority in parliamentary elections Nov. 20, but the runner-up could determine how fast he can push Greece into the Common Market and mend fences with the United States.

The prime contenders to finish second are George Mavros, 68, of the Union of the Democratic Center (EDIK) and Andreas Papandreu, 58, of the Panhellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK).

Karamanlis, 70, and Mavros both favor Greece joining the European Economic Community to give the country an economic boost, and they want Greece to return to full participation in the North Atlantic alliance if the long-standing dispute with Turkey over Cyprus can be resolved.

Papandreu is opposed to Greek membership in the EEC and has repeatedly expressed his opposition to NATO, the United States and its allies. He has also pledged to nationalize at least 150 major concerns, including foreign-owned banks.

Technicians remove antenna from embassy

MOSCOW (AP) — American technicians have quietly removed an antenna from the roof of the U.S. Embassy, 17 months after discovering it was sending high-frequency radio signals into a telephone on the American ambassador's desk.

The radio signals were discovered during a radiation monitoring sweep prompted by Soviet bombardment of the embassy with microwaves, sources said.

However, State Department officials waited 17 months before removing the loop-shaped antenna, reportedly because they did not want the Soviets to use it as an excuse to blame the microwave bombardment on U.S. equipment.

U.S. officials have repeatedly denied American electronic equipment was responsible for the microwave levels.

"When we did realize this was happening — and we didn't until after the microwave story broke — we were afraid that the Soviets would more or less use it against us as a political move, saying we were inducing these signals onto ourselves," one U.S. source said.

FCC says blackout disruptions must end

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission said Sunday steps must be taken to eliminate disruptions in communications services during power blackouts.

The commission based its conclusion on a study of electrical failures in New York City in 1965 and last summer, and the resultant interruption in communications services such as radio and television.

FCC commissioner Margita White, who compiled the report, noted that important steps were taken to keep communications lines open after the 1965 blackout. But she added that more improvements are needed.

The commission is responsible for ensuring that communications are maintained during emergencies.

White based her study on a questionnaire sent to the wire services, three television networks, four New York City radio stations and six common carriers that provide national and international telephone service.

The headquarters of the two major wire services and commercial television networks are located in New York.

Honolulu mayor's trial to begin

HONOLULU (AP) — What may be the most important preliminary event in next year's gubernatorial election gets underway this afternoon with opening arguments in the bribery trial of Honolulu Mayor Frank F. Fasi.

The state's case begins on somewhat shaky grounds — the star witness has threatened not to testify. But the prosecutor says he is "prepared for any eventuality."

A state grand jury indictment last March charged that Fasi and businessman Harry C. C. Chung, his campaign treasurer, arranged a $500,000 campaign contribution from Hal Hansen in exchange for development rights to Kukui Plaza, a downtown urban renewal project.

Fasi and Chung deny any wrongdoing. Fasi maintains the case is an attempt by Gov. George R. Ariyoshi to discredit him before next year's elections. Fasi announced his candidacy for governor on the day of his indictment.

If Fasi is convicted, he will be required by state law to give up his office and will be barred from running for governor. Many observers believe that if the state loses its case, Ariyoshi won't have a chance for re-election.

Study refutes TV violence theory

LAS VEGAS, N.M. (AP) — Millions of youngsters may be captivated when Kojak manhandles a mugger on television, but a university study suggests children won't imitate TV violence unless it is reinforced.

Some television critics say the television diet of shootings and beatings is harmful to children. The attorney for Ronny Zamora, a 15-year-old Florida boy convicted of murder, says the teen-ager was driven insane and committed the crime because of television violence.

A three-year study by a New Mexico

Highlands University psychologist indicates other factors must be present before TV will make a child significantly more aggressive.

Dr. Joe Flippo said his tests show television may teach kids how to be violent, but children won't incorporate what they see into their behavior patterns unless they are reinforced.

"They will do what they see in the shows, but only if they are rewarded," said Flippo. "Television is a means of learning aggressive behavior."

PLO participation agreed for Geneva

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization said Sunday it accepts last month's joint U.S.-Soviet declaration on the Middle East as the basis for Palestinian participation at a reconvened Geneva peace conference.

Kamel, head of the PLO delegation from Cairo, read a press statement at the Arab foreign ministers' meetings here saying:

"The minimum basis that the PLO can accept for the participation of representatives of the Palestinian people at a peace conference in Geneva is the U.S.-Soviet statement."

We agree to participate in the Geneva peace conference provided U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, in the name of the two superpowers, invites the representatives of the Palestinian people as part of the Arab delegation to the conference.

The Soviet-American statement, issued in New York last month by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, called for a resumption of Geneva peace talks before the end of the year with the participation of the Palestinian people.

The joint declaration made no reference to the PLO, which has been designated by the Arab states as "the sole representative of the Palestinian people."

Speaking on behalf of Farouk Kaddoumi, who heads the PLO delegation here, Kamel reiterated the PLO is the "sole representative" of the Palestinian people.

But the endorsement of the Soviet-American declaration appeared to leave open the door for the designation of a non-PLO member as spokesperson for the Palestinians at future Geneva talks.

The question of Palestinian representation has been the major stumbling block to reconvening the Geneva peace talks, suspended since December 1973.

Israel has rejected any negotiations with the PLO because the organization's charter calls for eradication of the Jewish state.

But Egypt's President Anwar Sadat suggested last week the Palestinian representative might be an American professor of Palestinian descent.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry rejected the Egyptian proposal for a Palestinian-American professor. But Prime Minister Menahem Begin later told reporters: "If it comes to a concrete proposal, connected with a name, we must first hear the name in order to make a decision."

The PLO's Kamel declined to answer questions on his statement, delivered while Arab foreign ministers met behind closed doors to plan strategy for a Geneva conference and for a proposed Arab summit meeting in Tripoli.

He said the joint U.S.-Soviet statement "should be considered as a document of the United Nations Security Council on the same basis as the Security Council Resolution 242 of 1967."

Carter fills offices by political process

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has put its own men, and three women, into about two-thirds of the 94 U.S. attorney's positions in a process which still is essentially political.

But administration officials say they have taken important steps toward making politics less important in choosing chief prosecutors.

"We've made a definite start," said Associate Atty. Gen. Michael Egan, who supervises the process for Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell.

Egan noted in an interview that the Constitution gives the president the power to appoint U.S. attorneys subject to Senate confirmation.

"As long as that's there, politics is going to be involved. But we think we have made substantial changes," he said.

But some Republican appointees who were replaced by the Carter team have seen it differently.

Jonathan Goldstein blamed "the dictates of typical, traditional, discredited politics" for the administration decision to replace him as the U.S. attorney for New Jersey.

Philip Van Dam said President Carter's decision to fire him as the U.S. attorney in Detroit was an example of "politics as usual."

Carter made the political selection of federal prosecutors a campaign issue when he promised that "all federal judges and prosecutors should be appointed strictly on the basis of merit, without any consideration of political aspect or influence."

Panama visit affects Senator's views of treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd returned from Panama with a more favorable impression of the Panama Canal treaty, but his Republican counterpart, who didn't make the trip, remained uncommitted Sunday.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said he needed more information before deciding whether to vote for the pact. Sens. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., remained steadfast in their views. Dole said he opposes ratification of the treaty in its present form, while Javits said he plans to vote for it.

Byrd and five Democratic Senate colleagues completed a four-day tour of the Canal Zone Saturday, saying they were impressed by pledges made by Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos.

Torrijos told the senators he would halt human rights violations in Panama. And he said he would resign if the U.S. Senate decided his regime was an obstacle to ratification of the treaty.

Although Byrd officially remained uncommitted on the treaty, the West Virginia Democrat left no doubt he is leaning toward ratification.

"We feel the dialogue has been an important and progressive step forward," Byrd said of the fact-finding tour. "I don't see how it can help but improve the atmosphere for ratification in the United States."

Byrd and his colleagues told reporters on the flight back to Washington that Torrijos' promise to improve human rights was an important factor in getting the treaty ratified. Baker did not make a Panama trip, but sent two aides as observers. A number of other senators expected to visit Panama, and Baker may be among them. Meanwhile, Baker, Dole and Javits conceded Sunday the Panama Canal is causing problems for a Republican Party searching for leadership.

"A lot of Republicans like that," Baker said, "are not going to be pushed out of the party."

Autopsy reveals suicide cause of prisoner's death

BONN, West Germany — An autopsy has "left no doubt" that the prison death of a member of the Red Army Faction was a suicide, German authorities said Sunday.

Ingrid Schubert, whose death was demanded by members of a Lufthansa jetliner last month, was found hanging from a rope made of bedsheet in her cell Saturday evening.

The 33-year-old former legal assistant was a member of West Germany's notorious RAF.

Schubert was the RAF member to die in less than a month, and all been ruled suicides by authorities.

New legislation challenges unfair advertising practices

By DANIEL HERMAN

State News Staff Writer

There is a lot of misrepresentation going on, and it is not being commented on, an official in the Michigan Consumers Council.

defined. We could take something to court, and then when the definitions come through, have to throw the case out," John Fors a spokesperson for the Ingham County Prosecutor's office said.

Fors pointed out that consumers can take businesses to small claims court if dealing with $300 or less.

As of January 1, the Attorney General's office will have more power to deal with deceptive advertisers, Frederick Hoffecker, Assistant Attorney General, consumer protection division said.

"There is no doubt the new bill will strengthen the power to 'maintain an action to enjoin a continuing violation of this act.'"

However, John Fors said that for the most part, the act will be used by prosecutors to request a discontinuance of the alleged practice, instead of seeking legal action.

In addition to regulating advertising practices, the bill (senate bill no. 1672) also fixes requirements for the clear and understandable marking of prices (covered by sections 3 and 4 of the bill).

Section 5(1) provides that businesses "shall not knowingly advertise the availability of a consumer item for sale," or at a reduced price unless the advertisement includes, "the dates that the item is available."

Also covered is the requirement that limitations of quantity should be clearly disclosed in advertisements.

Violations of the act, or of injunctions issued pursuant to the act, require a civil penalty of not more than $1000, for the first violation, and up to $5000 for subsequent violations.

Before the bill takes effect, many complaints can be handled using the Consumer Protection Act.

Students with problems or question should call the Michigan Consumers Council, the Attorney General's office, or the Ingham County Prosecutor's office.

Students protest arrival of Shah

By JEANNE BARON

State News Staff Writer

Friday's 30-degree weather did not deter 55 demonstrators who gathered around the year Beaumont Tower to protest the Shah of Iran's impending visit to the United States.

The protest, part of a nationwide demonstration against the visit beginning Tuesday, ended with a rally at Beaumont Tower and concluded with a march down Michigan Avenue to the Capitol.

At the rally, demonstrators marched in a circle carrying posters and chanting "Down the Shah," and "stop torturing political prisoners in Iran."

An Iranian student wearing an orange mask to protect himself from identification by the Iranian secret police, stood in the center of the circle with a bullhorn leading chants.

"The Shah is a fascist butcher," he shouted. "The U.S. gives arms, the Shah gives the Shah the Shah." "Long live Palestine."

After nearly 20 minutes of chanting into a bitter wind which blew several posters off the grass, the demonstrators stopped to listen to three speakers.

First, a masked Iranian student, recounted the history of recent protests against SAVAK is violently disrupting the Iranian Student Association (ISA) across the United States, with the assistance of American police forces.

Next, hundreds of police in Chicago attacked protesters," she said. "Many were arrested or arrested."

Administration of President Carter is showing its support of Shah Mohammed Reza and human rights violations in Iran by supporting the visit, she continued.

She has spoken out against human rights violations in the Latin American continent, but never mentioned Iran in his human rights campaign," she said.

She is supporting the Shah because of Iran's oil and strategic location, which makes it a Middle Eastern politics, she told the crowd.

She said the Shah and American bosses deceive the United States people about the conditions underlying the Shah's society?" she asked.

She said the Shah's visit is showing everyone to what extent Carter's human rights policy is a farce of human dignity."

The second speaker was John Masterson, MSU mathematics professor, who talked about "prostitution" of the United States for "jobbing," which may be defined as "selling principles to accomplish a particular job."

Masterson said MSU has been doing that kind of "prostitution for a long time. The University has been jobbing for people with projects," he said. "President Carter has never alluded at any time to the torturing and suffering in Iran."

He said the University of principles is a pretense for jobbing, he said, and he criticized the government for taking part in it.

Masterson cited Carter's affiliation with the Trilateral Commission and David Rockefeller, who set up the Shah's visit as an example of governmental prostitution.

Disc jockey eyes MSU's top job

By PATRICIA LACROIX

State News Staff Writer

An off-campus campaign to fill the position soon to be vacated by MSU

President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. had its kickoff Friday afternoon.

Wearing a green-and-white tuxedo and opening the festivities with the recorded strains of the MSU fight song and "MSU Shadows," WVIC disc jockey Dan Caruso announced his platform.

MSU economics professor C. Patric

"Lash" Larowe is the campaign coordinator.

Speaking to about 35 people in Valley Court Park in East Lansing, Caruso spoke on the issues "closest to everyone's mind."

Saying that student numbers are a device of the administration to "keep students in their place," Caruso suggests abolishing the numbers in favor of personal nicknames for each student.

Caruso also proposes:

•That professors of 8 a.m. classes serve breakfast to students, calling these classes a "necessary evil."

•That the Red Cedar river be stocked with tuna and a fishing fleet begun to ease the problem of student unemployment.

•That all students should be able to get 50-yard-line tickets for home football games, while "rich alumni" will be given tickets in the end zone.

Caruso admits that "there are those cynics" who ask how these programs will be funded, to which he proposes the construction of a "lemonade stand" on the corner of M.A.C. and Grand River Ave., or perhaps holding a bake sale.

Out of respect, Caruso said he thinks it is important for the University to honor "those of us lost in the line of duty" through the construction of a "tomb of the unknown pedestrian" on the median strip of Grand River Ave.

"The Caruso Administration will be concerned with the welfare of the MSU ducks on the river, and also the shortage of nuts on the campus for the squirrels," Larowe said.

MSU economics professor and State News columnist C. Patric "Lash" Larowe, campaign coordinator for WVIC disc jockey Dan Caruso's bid for the presidency of MSU, addresses a news conference Friday in Valley Court Park in East Lansing.

Literary artists unite in the pursuit of the legendary unicorn

By KY OWEN

Thousands of eager hunters search the dense forests and barren wastelands of the world in quest of a sacred and elusive creature — the unicorn.

Unicorns have been hunted illegally for years, but in 1969 the group Unicorn

Limited Conglomerate (ULC) was formed at Lake Superior State College to license the unicorn hunters. According to William Rabe, archivist of the group, ULC hunts unicorns, banishes words and celebrates lost causes.

Peter Thomas, resident poet and profesor at LSSC, is the Senior Herald of ULC. Thomas said, "The pursuit of the unicorn is a lonely quest, but many more embark on that journey than teachers or publishers may recognize."

There are 7,000 licensed unicorn hunters throughout the world, according to Rabe.

Last year, members of the group became concerned because there had been no unicorn sightings reported in the past 2,500 years, ULC members thought the unicorn may have been an endangered species, but the Department of Natural Resources said this claim was "utter nonsense" because research indicated "a high reproductive output of unicorns and a high group survival rate."

Still, ULC decided to switch from "hunting" licenses to "questing" licenses, Rabe said, because hunting implies killing, but questing implies seeking.

Rabe said most members of the group are poets, writers and journalists, but there are also students, bankers and industrialists. The group tried to get columnist Art Buchwald to join, but Buchwald said he was suspicious of the group's intentions, and the group lost track of him, Rabe said.

Rabe said former President Gerald Ford was given a hunting license, but could not be given a membership since a person must apply for it. Ford was sent an application for membership, but the White House replied with a form letter saying that he did not wish to join.

When not searching for unicorns the society celebrates lost causes and works to banish misused words from the English language.

Rabe said last year the society banished the word "detente," since "the only person who knew what it meant was Kissinger and he forgot."

For 1978 Rabe said "We've got 'meaningful' on the run." Other possibilities are: "the bottom line," "to have sex," "get back to you," "to be perfectly candid," and "it's an active possibility."

The newest word nominated for banishment according to Rabe is "celebrification." It was nominated by an Alaska resident who heard Jane Pauley of NBC's Today Show say "Gary Gilmore has undergone celebrification." Rabe said it is a "high priority item" on the banishing list.

When a word is banished, the only ceremony "is calling the wire services," the Associated Press and United Press International) Rabe said. He added some of the group's leaders get together to choose the seven or eight words annually banished. Also, an apologia must be written to explain why the word should be or is being banished, Rabe added.

According to Rabe the ULC kicks off its celebration of lost causes Jan. 13, with "Cuckoo Dancing Week." "Dancing Cuckoos" was the theme for all Laurel and Hardy movies. This is to encourage watching old Laurel and Hardy movies, "So that laughter may be heard and the cuckoos may dance," he deadpanned.

The society celebrates William Shakespeare's birthday April 23 by having a keg of beer and listening to readings from O' Bill.

For those who feel Lizzie Borden is still looked down upon, there is Lizzie Borden Liberation Day August 5. The group is attempting to clear her name, Rabe said. Borden was accused of killing her parents with an ax but was acquitted, Rabe added.

The rules committee for the Stone Skipping tournament will hold a meeting Nov. 25 in Detroit to decide whether or not artificial skipping stones should be allowed in this year's competition.

And of course there is a Millard Fillmore day, Rabe said, for all who want to make it clear that Fillmore did not put the first bathtub in the White House. Rabe said the society believes it is just something American journalist H.L. Mencken made up.

Since many of the group's members are writers, there is a fortnight set aside each year for writing love poems and a day for

National Pan-Hellenic Council seminar reveals lack of Greek participation

By ANNE MARIE BIONDO

"Black fraternities and sororities are losing the cream of the crop in higher education," Charles Wright, president of the National Pan-Hellenic Council, Inc. (NPHC) said at a seminar sponsored by the MSU chapter of the NPHC Friday.

The MSU chapter of the council needs to be recognized by the university, Wright said. He added that a constant flow of communication between the MSU-NPHC and the university is imperative to Greek life on the campus.

The MSU chapter was incorporated into the national council in May. Its intention, according to members, is to encourage beneficial interfraternity relationships by setting standards for the affiliated organizations, in accordance with their national constitution and the rules of MSU.

The NPHC is different from, and not affiliated with, the National Panhellenic Conference, which is made up of sororities.

"Students are segregated from the mainstream of Greek life," Wright said. "One problem is that black fraternities are not participating in the Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC)," he continued.

Ira Combs, Jr., president of the MSU chapter of NPHC said one reason for the lack of black involvement in IFC is "because of the cultural difference."

"The IFC can't serve the needs of black fraternities and

Attention to PBB obscures problems

Much attention has been paid recently to the problems of PBB contamination — by all branches of government and the scientific community as well.

As commendable as this action is, it has not only come too late, but the current trend toward "PBB overkill" serves to obfuscate more serious problems of chemical contamination, such as those posed by PCB and dioxin, found in the wood preservative PCP. Both chemicals are apparently more dangerous to human health than PBB.

It is indeed difficult to view the attention of state legislators and agencies through anything other than a somewhat jaundiced eye, since PBB will undoubtedly be among the most potent weapons in the armamentarium assembled by state Democrats against Gov. William G. Milliken in next November's election. Somehow, the recent spate of concern for the plight of PBB-contaminated farmers is a bit difficult to view as stemming from altruistic motives on the parts of any concerned.

While all the resources available to the Environmental Sciences Laboratory of the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine and the Michigan Department of Public Health have been unable to draw a conclusive link between PBB exposure and human illness, health and environmental problems with PCB and PCP continue to grow.

PCP is also a toxic fire retardant, but the evidence linking exposure to the chemical and subsequent development of impaired liver function and reproductive system damage — as well as cancer — appears much more convincing than similar research findings on the far more publicized PBB.

Whether research as that recently conducted at the University of Michigan — which attempted to establish the existence of a "PBB syndrome" — is truly in the public interest must be considered suspect. The time and money expended by U-M researchers in telling scientists what they already knew could have better been spent on researching PCB and PCP, of which far less is known.

Unfortunately for Michigan's residents, neither PCB nor PCP is as politically valuable to state lawmakers as PBB.

As we all are aware, any legislator at the Capitol can call a news conference denouncing Milliken and his appointees for reprehensible foot-dragging on the PBB issue. The news media cover the news conference, a Milliken spokesperson replies to the charges, and a good time is had by all.

At the recent workshop on PBB held at MSU's Kellogg Center, Mt. Sinai researcher Dr. Irving J. Selikoff told scientists that health and environmental problems posed by PBB were not the first, and will not be the last, crisis caused by environmental contamination with toxic substances. He reminded his colleagues of the necessity for more extensive testing for PBB-caused illness.

Of course, it is impossible to take issue with such suggestions, but the inordinate expenditure of resources on PBB research is indicative of misplaced priorities, dictated by political expediency rather than sincere concern for the environment and human health.

Far less time, money and energy should be directed towards duplicative, unnecessary PBB research and publicizing the results. Proper attention must be promptly paid to the hazards caused by PCB and PCP, even if they are not as politically fashionable as their chemical cousin.

Clarify legal language

All of us have encountered the problem of verbose contracts — loans and leases for instance. Because of indiscernible wording, they are often confusing to anyone of average intelligence.

House Bill 5323, or the Plain Language Act, would rightly do away with the confusing manner in which all legal statements are currently written.

The language of the bill is consistent with what it is proposing — short, concise, thorough, and written in simple language. It would provide protection against complex contracts, dealing with leases, loans, mortgages, insurance policies and judgments. It requires that all "written communication", which is defined in the bill, must be understandable to anyone of average intelligence.

"Average intelligence" is defined in terms of a hypothetical person with measurable intelligence equal to the average intelligence level of all high school graduates in Michigan.

If passed, the bill would solve an immeasurable number of conflicts stemming from the problem of complex, difficult to understand contracts. People would no longer have to worry about obscure loopholes or catches in contracts created by cloudy, complicated language.

Also, those who sign contracts in violation of the bill would be protected if they unknowingly committed an act of omission because they could not understand the provisions of a contract.

The verbosity of present contracts makes it nearly impossible for the average person to discern what a legal contract is saying. The Plain Language Act would clarify communication between the signing parties, both when the contract is signed and for the duration agreed upon. The proposal is long overdue and should be passed as quickly as possible.

KKK and the masses

A couple of weeks ago members of the Klux Klan planted themselves just outside the United States border hoping to catch Mexicans immigrating illegally.

This effort was organized by the wing of the Klan, the "liberal" faction, group whose members are currently a their pointed little heads straight for America.

The Klan's pitch? Illegal immigrants taking jobs away from deserving Americans, or so said the group's Louisiana-based leader in a radio interview (recovered in the latest issue of Time magazine). Time reports that immediately following the interview, the leader launched a diatribe (my word "diatribe" of black America, a "history" obviously designed to denigrate blacks (as well as other minorities, Jews in particular) and reaffirm Klan's deep-seated bigotry.

According to figures quoted in Time magazine, the Klan's new image hasn't won many average Americans. The facade of open-minded, liberated, non-racist hasn't converted or convinced.

It's a low insult from one of the groups in America to hope that a cellophane smiles reflect the emerging new sensibility on the part of the Klan.

We now see Klansmembers in portraits: Dad and Mom robed in hideous white costumes holding baby fashion his or her own white supremacist garb.

Perhaps some white Americans seriously scared that minority groups usurping, or will usurp, their rights, the pendulum of bigotry will swing and bring their lily-white suburban crashing down. It's hard to believe, but does weird things to the minds of other sane, fair persons.

Wharton's new game

There is a new game being played in East Lansing these days, and it is quite a hit.

It's called the "Let's-Try-To-Get-In-Touch-With-MSU-President-Clifton-R.-Wharton-Jr." game, and while the game can be fun, it is also very frustrating — and frankly, nine times out of ten, very disappointing.

There are a few ways of going about the game. One method is calling his office and leaving a message — but don't expect good results from this.

Then, another way is just strolling over to the office on the outside chance that he is waiting for someone to play the game.

Naturally, the chances of this paying off are even less than the first way described.

If the player happens to know where Wharton is — say at a meeting in Wells

Hall, for instance — another way of playing the game is waiting outside for the meeting to break up and catching him on the way back to the Administration Building.

And we all know that once he is inside those doors, he is home free. Consider the game lost and move over for the next player.

Ollie-ollie-oxen-free.

It's really an unfair game, though, because generally, Wharton has more team players. There are more people in the Administration Building just willing to cover for Wharton than people who covered for Nixon during the Watergate days.

Not the least of these is his personal secretary. This woman seems to have been hired for one purpose — screening all the people trying to play the game. Rest assured that she earns every penny of her salary.

One of the guaranteed ways of getting in touch with Wharton USED to be to drop in his open hours, formally held in his office every other Friday afternoon.

But now that he has canceled these sessions, even that avenue is closed. Only the clever person, quick to devise new ways to play, may continue the game.

(On a related issue, but primarily unrelated to this:)

It was suggested at one point, even before Wharton canceled these hours, that he institute them just to demonstrate his accessibility to the Search and Selection Committee reviewing candidates for the Chancellorship at State University of New York (SUNY).

For the first time in eight years as president of MSU, Wharton (all of a sudden) decided to institute regular open hours during which time any member of the University community could come in and discuss their problems concerning the University.

This benevolent practice was begun at the beginning of fall term — Wharton knew he was being considered for the Chancellorship of SUNY at the end of summer.

Coincidence?? Then just days after he had been offered and accepted the position, the practice ended.

These "coincidences" would not be nearly as incriminating if SUNY trustees had not expressly said that they were looking for someone who as accessible not only to the presidents of the various universities within that system, but also to the students.

"Surely, the accessibility thing was probably first in the search committees' mind when they were interviewing candidates for the position," one SUNY trustee said. "After all, the students are the most important people."

The point of this vitriol is not to intimate that Wharton will not be busy during the next months of the transition from President of MSU to Chancellor SUNY — only that while it may be tempting to have one foot at SUNY and the other ready to leave East Lansing at any minute, he still does have ties — and responsibilities — here.

The future commitments of being SUNY Chancellor should never preempt his present responsibilities as MSU president.

The SUNY trustee also said that Wharton was busy establishing ties with administrators and politicians in New York. Must be, because he was in there just Monday of last week holding his first press conference with New York reporters.

But he made it back to town to be here Saturday to accept the glowing words of praise bestowed upon him during the halftime show.

By the way, don't even attempt to play the game with Wharton before Thursday — he'll be out of town until then.

Kam no computer

I have until recently accredited the State News and its readers with a sense of human decency that obviously they do not possess. Paul Slomeana's letter about Kam Hunter not only displayed Mr. Slomeana's total disregard for another person's feelings, but also shows that the State News condones such senseless ignorance.

Despite Mr. Slomeana's beliefs, Kam Hunter's superior intelligence does not make him a computer. He cannot turn himself off. I'm sure that Kam finds his position disturbing enough at times that he does not need someone to remind him that he is somewhat out of place.

Asking Kam Hunter to "at least try to act a little stupid" is just as absurd as asking Paul Slomeana to grow up and stop criticizing people in order to make up for his own inadequacies.

I'm afraid that you are seven years behind Kam Hunter in more ways than one, Paul.

Council appreciative

Gay Council would like to express deep gratitude to everyone who showed their support for us this past week. Everyone's input was important in keeping Gay Council intact. A personal thank you would be in order for all who helped, but we hope you realize that the council has much to do, especially in making up for time we spent on supporting our existence.

Kent Barry's action to remove our organization as an official council was, as some have said, "a rude slap in the face to gays." From one side, yes. And yet, anything less would have kept many of the board members in the closet with their feelings. Barry's move got things out in the open. The vast support shown to the board by concerned gays and non-gays was effective in increasing the sensitivity levels of the board.

It is our hope that those who came to increased awareness on the situation can maintain that willingness to understand and/or support us. It's a difficult thing to do in this society. Gay Council will be around if you've ever got any questions you need answered.

We hope the move by ASMSU demonstrates to all that understanding gays requires open-mindedness and effort. We hope everyone takes advantage of our panel discussions in dorms and classes and the council office on the third floor of Student Services. The office serves the entire MSU community.

The Opinion Page welcomes all letters and viewpoints. Readers should follow a few rules to insure that as many letters as possible appear in print.

All letters and viewpoints should be typed on 65-space lines and triple-spaced. Letters and viewpoints must be signed and include local address, student, faculty or staff standing — if any — and phone number. No letter or viewpoint without these items will be considered for publication.

Letters should be 25 lines or less and may be edited for State News style and conciseness to fit as many letters as possible on a page. Viewpoints may be no longer than 75 lines, and may also be edited.

But there is no doubt that the Klan stands for and practices the worst disease imaginable: racism. The Klan always been regarded with utter disdain by any American with even the slightest of integrity, and it is the Klan's present performance that confirms intentions to continue its doctrine of hate.

I am fearful that people will ignore facts for the glossy new Klan. Its members are college graduates and have learned, eloquent, deceptive double-talk that has elevated to an art form.

We are a country of people with memories, easily impressed with appearances. The Klan may still be crosses and shout "nigger" and "kike" if it's done with taste and decorum, but our citizens are going to buy it, regardless of what current figures indicate.

The KKK, like all groups of this kind, feeds off our innate fear of the unknown. This fascist potential for all it's in. In too many cases, the tapping is on the potential plentiful.

I would have once believed these unnecessary to a university audience. Recent events have proven otherwise. Very discussion of self-evident truths, rights of gays, blacks, women, minority — is evidence enough that fooled into trusting people simply they were reasonably well-educated.

I will not make the same mistake. But since the discussion of these to which have now, my God, become issues — are still needed, I hope continue them. At the very least, be fooled by words that spill forth from sides of the mouth.

RESTAURANTS TRYING TO SAVE 'Water by choice' supported by diners

By PAMELA ROARK

If you drink water with your meal while dining out, you may be ordering it from now on.

In an effort to cut down on energy usage, time, money and manpower, some Lansing area restaurants are making that traditional glass of water a matter of choice.

Elías Brothers' Big Boy Restaurants, Denny's and Howard Johnson's have made the water-by-choice program a company policy for most franchises. There are exceptions to this policy since some franchises are privately owned and operated and therefore are not bound by company regulations.

In a pamphlet distributed by Elías Brothers', it is estimated that each eight-ounce glass of water served with a meal requires another 16 ounces for washing. This results in over 7 million gallons of water used per day, given the 70 million meals that are served daily in America's restaurants.

It has been further estimated that between 70-80 percent of the water served comes back untouched.

Not included in these estimates is the cost of electricity used to freeze the ice, and to soften and heat the water used for washing. Shirley Malear, manager of the Elías Brothers on West Saginaw Street in Lansing said public reaction to the new policy has been very favorable.

"Because we serve water on request, we haven't had a single complaint," she said. "We don't have actual figures, but Big Boy has a research team that is gathering statistical results of the policy. In this restaurant alone, I know that 75 percent of the water served came back unused. We've saved immensely."

Manager Nancy Timmerman of the East Saginaw Street Howard Johnson's said their 846 company-owned stores have also adopted the policy and have found that it working well.

Fran DeRoock, manager of Denny's in East Lansing, the first in the area to adopt the program, said Denny's is adopting many energy saving policies as well as installing energy-saving equipment.

"Denny's first started serving water by choice in California because of the drought there. There was such a difference in the electric bills that the company went nationwide with the policy," she said.

"A lot of people think we're over-reacting, but we're realizing a tremendous savings. The figures on the corporate level are especially shocking. The savings in energy also results in lower menu prices," DeRoock said.

In a survey of East Lansing restaurants, most establishments serve water automatically with meals at the present time, but some are considering the switch to the water-by-choice policy.

Jerry Foltz, manager of Dooley's, said they tried serving water on request a few years ago, but so many customers asked for it, they returned to serving it automatically. He admitted that a lot of the water is wasted, because many people just drink small amounts.

Midge Regier, manager of Lizard's Underground, said currently the restaurant automatically serves it, but have been discussing the possibility of changing. "We will decide in a couple of weeks," she said.

Matthew Capario, owner of Matteo's and Buono Appetito, said that presently they serve water automatically, but next spring will probably start serving it on request only.

In a random survey of MSU students most said they thought that the policy of water-on-request was good because it eliminated unnecessary waste.

MSU student Rodd Decker said he thought the policy was good, because "Most people don't drink the water anyway."

Raymond Maly, a freshman in pre-dentistry, said he doesn't drink water, so the policy wouldn't bother him.

Pam Maynard, a freshman in agriculture said, "as long as I can still get water if I ask for it, I don't mind it."

Carol Oudsema, freshman, said "It is not a problem for me to ask for it, but I would not expect to have to in a nicer restaurant. You pay more there for the extras."

Anthony Hall invaded by cold turkeys

By DELINDA KARTE
State News Staff Writer

Five hundred turkeys have invaded the basement of Anthony Hall.

Two gigantic freezers are storing fresh-frozen, oven-ready turkeys for the Poultry Science Club's ninth annual turkey sale, currently in progress. The turkeys, which weigh from 10 to 25 pounds, will be sold for 70 cents a pound until Christmas break.

The turkeys are the best available, said Timothy S. Chang, professor of poultry science and advisor of the club.

"We have never had anyone complain about our turkeys," he said.

Chang said that the club buys its turkeys from a professional turkey processor.

"Many people think we raise our own turkeys," he said. "However, we are only amateurs in the turkey business and our turkeys would not be as good as the processor's."

Chang added that the club's turkeys are much cheaper than the current market price for turkeys of equal quality.

The turkey sale is the only money-making project of the club. Proceeds are used to sponsor field trips and pay for guest speakers on campus. The club recently visited the Eli Lilly Co. in Greenfield, Ind. Members have also toured the Upjohn Co. in Kalamazoo and the Dow Chemical Co. in Midland. Last year the members attended the Southwestern Poultry Convention in Atlanta.

"Michigan is not a poultry state," Chang explained. "Most of our students have never had the opportunity to travel and have never seen the big industry they belong to. I want them to get a feeling for it before they graduate."

Last year the club sold 900 turkeys, but Chang expects to sell less this year. So far he has only ordered 500 turkeys from the processor.

"The prices have gone up and some businesses which bought from us last year told us they were going to cut down on their orders this year," he explained.

He also said that sales may be low due to the traditional American preference for beef. However, turkey is more nutritious, has less fat and is cheaper, he added.

Chang said that orders for 150 turkeys have already been received. Turkeys can be reserved by calling 355-8425 or 355-8413. Discounts of two cents per pound are given for orders of 20 or more turkeys.

Radar decoys trick speeders

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The state Traffic Safety Commission is buying 30 solar-powered "black boxes" to fool speeders who use detectors to warn them of highway radar traps.

Transmitters enclosed in small plastic boxes will be put along the roads. They operate on solar batteries and don't have to have bright sunlight to work, said commission Director, Walt Friel. He said the devices cost about $300.

"If speeders want to gamble with me that this is not radar, let them try it," he said.

Group offers energy information

By JAMES MOORE

While Congress struggles to push complex energy reforms through the legislative sawmill in Washington, a local energy affairs group is taking a more direct and personal approach to combating the energy crisis.

The Lansing Energy Affairs Network (LEAN) is a group of citizens and students who want to bridge the communication gap between people who hold information on the energy crisis and those needing it to act. LEAN coordinator Steve Ferns said.

The main present function of the group is educating people in the tri-county (Ingham, Eaton and Clinton) area about the energy crisis, Ferns said.

A major project of LEAN, he said, is the compilation of data for an energy directory, which will be published this winter. It will contain information on activities, interests and skills of area residents working on the energy problem in the tri-county area.

According to the Oct. 13 issue of Connections, the group's newsletter, these problems include "decreasing fossil fuel availability, increasing energy costs and the transition to other energy sources."

Ferns, a senior in the MSU Department of Resource Development, co-edits Connections. Ferns and other writers and researchers have published three issues to date.

LEAN was founded in April by Jim Grossfeldt.

LEAN, with membership and meeting participation increasing sharply, agreed to set up a temporary executive board, of which Ferns was named acting chairperson on Aug. 21. Ferns said elections for a permanent board are scheduled for this month.

The seven-member acting board sets up committees to work on LEAN's projects, such as the newsletter and directory. Ferns said they also hope to set up membership, fund-raising and "specific interest" committees in the near future.

"The meetings are very loosely structured," Ferns said. "Participation and membership on committees are open."

In the near future, Ferns said, LEAN hopes to work with other energy-concerned groups to improve energy education and legislation in the tri-county area by setting up forums on energy issues.

LEAN still needs volunteers to help with functions such as compiling research, typing and telephoning, Ferns said. Membership fees are $5 per individual and $10 per institution. Members receive the newsletter and a reduced price on the energy directory that will be published this winter. All members vote in general meetings.

Ferns says membership applications can be obtained at the next meeting during the first week of December.

More smokers want to buy low-tar cigarettes; tobacco companies respond with more brands

NEW YORK (AP) — Health-conscious American smokers are looking for increasing numbers to low-tar cigarettes and tobacco companies are spending millions to promote a proliferation of new

The so-called low-tar market is growing extremely rapidly," said William Kloefer Jr. of The Tobacco Institute Inc. a trade organization. "It probably now exceeds 20 percent of the market."

There are about 60 low-tar cigarette brands on the market and more are planned, he says. He likens the growth in low-tar cigarettes to the boom in filter-tipped cigarettes in the 1950s.

The rise parallels the history of filter cigarettes, beginning in 1953," Kloefer said. "The curve at the moment is pretty much on the same course. In '53, filters were an oddity on the market. Today, filters are 90 percent of the market. No one knows where the curve will go."

Kloefer said the cigarette industry "goes along with a Federal Commission characterization of low-tar as yielding 15 mg of tar or less per cigarette."

Ten years ago, low-tar brands captured about 2 percent of the cigarette market, he said.

But it began leaping after about 1971. And with the emotional competition now evident, it's rising very rapidly.

This year, low-tar will account for just under 25 percent of the market," said John O. Maxwell Jr. of Morgan Stanley & Co.

About 55 million Americans, or 38 percent of the adult population, smoke, Kloefer said.

The American Cancer Society and the federal government, by warning of the potential dangers of cigarettes, have boosted the demand for low-tar cigarettes, says society spokesman Irving Rimer.

"There's been a revolution in the manufacture of cigarettes in this country," Rimer said. "When the Surgeon General's report came out in '64, about 85 percent of cigarettes on the market were nonfilter. Today, 85 percent are filters, so obviously, what the cigarette companies are doing is meeting consumer's demand for a cigarette that will do as much as possible to assure them that they are not endangering their health."

He said the American Cancer Society "believes that if people are going to continue to smoke that it is in their best interest to smoke the low-tar cigarettes. There is, however, no such thing as a safe cigarette, and the wisest thing for any smoker to do is not smoke at all."

Richard Bogacki, the tobacco analyst for Standard and Poor's Corp., said all major cigarette companies now manufacture low tars.

"Every year they are taking more and more of the market," Bogacki said. "It was 16 percent last year, and it'll be over 20 percent this year. It may be 30 percent or more next year."

Although low-tars are booming, they still lag considerably behind older brands in consumption. For example, more than 61 billion Winston cigarettes were sold last year, compared with 12 billion for Vantage, the most popular of the low-tar brands, Bogacki said.

M.D. in FOREIGN MEDICAL SCHOOLS

The Institute of International Medical Education offers total medical education leading to practice in the U.S.

1. M.S. in cooperation with recognized colleges and universities in the United States leading to advanced placement in Spanish, Italian or other foreign medical schools.

2. While in attendance at the medical school, the Institute will provide a supplemental Basic Medical Sciences Curriculum which prepares students for transfer into an American medical school. (COTRANS)

3. For those students who do not transfer, the Institute provides accredited supervised clinical clerkships at co-operating United States hospitals.

4. During the final year of foreign medical school, the Institute provides a supplemental and comprehensive clinical medicine curriculum which prepares the student to take the ECFMG examination

The Institute has been responsible for processing more American students to foreign medical schools than any other organization.

ATL offers literature class on sci-fi by women authors

Women writers of Gothic horror and science fiction will be featured this winter in an ATL 380 class entitled "Women in America: Arts and the Self." Students will examine how these forms were used by women writers of the 19th and 20th centuries to reveal oppressive conditions in society and to suggest alternatives.

"The course is aimed at women and men interested in looking at literature from a woman's point of view so they can understand themselves better," explained Associate Professor Joyce R. Ladenson.

"It is not intended to be an abstract course, but an opportunity for women in particular to think about their dreams and fantasies and what they have to say about the kind of lives that they lead," she said.

Topics will include psychological fears surrounding childbirth, female self-imprisonment in Victorian culture, androgyny and a gender-free society, and socialist-feminist utopias.

Nineteenth-century authors to be discussed will be Mary Shelley, author of "Frankenstein"; and Charlotte Perkins Gilman, who wrote "The Yellow Wallpaper."

The three contemporary authors to be studied are Ursula LeGuin, author of "The Dispossessed"; poet and novelist Marge Piercy, who wrote "Woman on the Edge of Time"; and Joanna Russ, who wrote "The Female Man." All suggest views of future feminist women's culture.

Sociological and psychological analyses such as "Complaints and Disorders: The Sexual Politics of Sickness" by Barbara Ehrenreich and Deirdre English and "Women and Madness" by Phyllis Chesler will also be used in the course.

The class, which will be conducted primarily by discussion, is included in the thematic concentration in Women's Studies or can be used for general upper-division elective credit.

ATL 380 is a four-credit course and will meet on Tuesday and Thursday from 10:20 to 12:20 in 246 Fairchild. The sequence number 000-2185. It was accidentally omitted from the winter schedule of courses.

Of the six attempts to recruit professors to MSU under the John A. Hannah Distinguished Professorships, only two have been successful so far, according to a memo released Friday by Provost Clarence L. Winder.

The Hannah Professorships were established in 1966 in honor of Former MSU president, John A. Hannah.

Through outside grants awarded to the Hannah professorship fund, MSU can hire outstanding professors of national stature to come to MSU. Those hired as Hannah professors hold their position throughout their time at MSU. Winder said he sent the memo to the faculty council in light of the debate over Endowed Faculty Chairs at the last Faculty Council meeting.

A goal of $1.75 million has been established for use toward endowed faculty chairs and professorships with the University's $17 Million Enrichment Program, a fund-raising drive begun last spring.

Since debate arose at the Faculty Council Meeting over possible criteria for these endowed chairs, Winder said he thought it would be helpful to send a memo to council members explaining how MSU's current Hannah professorships were established.

The Hannah Professorships are only partially endowed chairs, meaning only part of the money for salaries comes from outsided funding.

The university supplies the recipient a 10-month academic year salary equal to that of a full professorship. The person also receives an increment of approximately equal size from the Hannah professorship fund.

"The committees have been highly selective in terms of candidates considered, perhaps more than they needed to be," Winder said in the memo, explaining why not all attempts to award the professorships have been successful.

"The committees have targeted on exceptional people and have not always been willing enough to invest in an individual who shows great promise but may not have established himself or herself in the sense of a National Academy membership."

The criteria involved in hiring a Hannah professor also may make it difficult to fill the position, said John E. Cantlon, vice president of research and graduate studies.

"The criteria specifically state that the person must be an outstanding faculty member and agree to be involved in teaching," he said. "Most people who come for these things want to just do research."

Another stipulation, Cantlon said, was that the person who takes the professorship must be willing to do interdisciplinary teaching and research and not just focus on one area of study.

The general criteria and selection procedures for Hannah professorships were established in 1967 by the provost's office, the memo explained.

Cantlon said various colleges request consideration for a Hannah professor. When funding is available, the provost's office decides which college will be awarded the professorship.

The provost then appoints a search committee to recruit a Hannah professor. Committee members include the department chairperson, college dean, and representatives from other University departments.

Final award of the chairs are made by the MSU Board of Trustees upon recommendation by the Provost and President, with the consultation of the search committee.

The unsuccessful attempts to fill the professorships were in the areas of history, psychology, and organizational behavior.

Two Hannah professorships which have been awarded, however, are to Dr. A.W.A. Brown in 1973, College of Natural Science, and in 1974 to Dr. Peter Carlson, Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Brown has since retired, and a search committee is currently seeking a candidate to replace him. A committee is also considering to look for someone to the organizational behavior professorship.

"It's the most difficult recruiting job next to finding a university president," Cantlon said.

Councilmember Larry Owen said Sunday that he is interested in filling the position of mayor pro-tem vacated by Mary Sharp who decided not seek reelection this year.

The council will also hear remarks by City Attorney Dennis McGinty and City Manager Jerry Coffman. The first regular business meeting of the new council will be Tuesday night.

Fulbright award winners meet, promote educational exchanges

By JEANNE BARON
State news Staff Writer

A group of about 40 former Fulbright award winners, most of whom are now at MSU, met Friday at the Center for the Alumni Association Dinner in Michigan State University. The main reasons for the meeting were to promote the Fulbright Program and to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the Fulbright program, he said. Paul Ferlazzo, professor of American Thought and Language, explained.

The three-month-old association is designed to utilize the experience and knowledge of Fulbrighters and in the process more directly in international educational and cultural exchanges, an association brochure said.

The Fulbright Program is named for Sen. J. William Fulbright, who initiated legislation for the Fulbright Act of 1946.

The act provides government awards for graduate students, research, teaching or professional training, where United States recipients go abroad and foreign recipients come to the United States.

Arthur Dudden, president of the association, said there are 120,000 Fulbrighters in more than 100 countries, and 600 are dues-paying members of the association.

The association grew out of meetings held as part of the U.S. Bicentennial and celebration of the 30th anniversary of the Fulbright program, he said. "At all of these meetings it was agreed that the experience (being Fulbright award winners) had been great and important for the individual, education and the world," he said. "We believe in education, we seek to make it as good as it's always been and we seek to improve it, that's why we take a great interest in national programs."

Dudden said the group needs to be taken seriously by the Congress and the White House because international exchanges are valuable experiences.

"No one wants to see the Fulbright program get lost in a bureaucratic shuffle," he said. "The whole country can be strong if we do what we have to do, if we include the whole world in these comings together and in talking about the experiences we had."

However, Dudden expressed concern that the integrity and autonomy of the organization may be questioned if a proposed congressional reorganization plan goes into effect.

The plan establishes an International Communication Agency, which would take over the functions of the U.S. information service, and transfers administrative responsibility to the Fulbright Program to the agency.

"The program symbolizes something that's very important in international education programs: it transcends current policy and current aspirations," he said.

"We need to be financially independent and politically independent."

Ronstadt: golden dream for Tarnished Age

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

At first, I thought that everything I had to say about Linda Ronstadt was already said in my Simple Dreams review several weeks ago. However, although I think the statements made in that review are still fair, perhaps it was a bit more cynical than was necessary. Ya see, a strong hard cynicism is quite effective in disguising a vulnerable weakness that comes from being a romantic. (Experience a failed love absurdity sometime, and you'll feel what I'm talking about.) Anyway, on second thought and after seeing her perform again, I gotta thank God for lovely Linda. She is one of the few performers today who maintains a true romantic ethic, something generally lacking in this doldrum "ME" era.

But first things first. Thursday night's concert was perfect from an entertainment perspective. Stephen Bishop was an excellent choice for Linda's opening act. He was very reminiscent of Andrew Gold (who used to open her shows), although Bishop is a better performer. I've never been very turned on by his recorded material, but, after seeing his charismatic act, it's more than mere speculation to say that he's going to be very big.

Even without Gold, Linda's band is still superb. A live environment gives these musicians a freedom they don't always have on records, and the instrumentalists on songs like "You're No Good" take on an even greater glow. Special mention must be made of pianist Don Grönick, who has been mostly ignored in recent Ronstadt reviews. Grönick seems to be the core of Linda's current band, and his accompaniments on "Crazy" and "Desperado" prove that he is one of the true virtuosos in popular music today. And then above it all is Linda.

Ah, Linda! Ah, love! If anyone who attended the show didn't fall in love with her during the first five minutes, I hope they send us a letter. Linda and love go hand in hand, and her Thursday night persona was the ultimate symbol of romanticism in the 1970s, that is, beautiful dreams combined with a lost innocence. ("This is a real love song for the '70s. It's called 'Faithless Love.'") And despite the sorrow of it all, there is still great strength in her fragility when she maintains a religious dedication to perfect love even in the face of rejection. If you've ever experienced a broken heart, perhaps you've felt the strength that can be gained through the survival poetry of artists like Neil Young and Jackson Browne. While these artists say it best, no one expresses it like Linda.

I could really sense this time that she is REAL. Linda generally doesn't talk much in concert, but she apparently felt somewhat more comfortable with college students. Her many conversations revealed an underlying human nervousness and insecurity. LINDA: (after performing "Silver Threads") "This is 'Silver Threads & Golden Needles.' (pause) Oops! Well, ya see what kinda student I was. This is a song by my friend, J.D. Souther. (pause) Oh, s — ! That's still the wrong song! (takes out a list) This is a truck drivin' song called 'Willin.' Sometimes I think like a truck driver! Or consider her comment: "I hit myself in my mike with the mouth!" Who wouldn't be endeared to someone as human as this?

And in regard to all the crap that's come out on the subject, Linda's simple "Love Me Tender" is still the most beautiful tribute the King I've experienced. Speaking of which, a recent Elvis commemorative article spoke of how his music transcends classification, and how someday all such music (rock, pop, country, R&B, etc.)

Once in love with Linda

will simply be referred to as "American Music." It occurred to me that Linda Ronstadt is the female equivalent of the "American Music" model. Country music? she's even better than Dolly. Pop music? Is there anyone more popular? Rock music? Screw the Wilson sisters (no pun intended). Linda could sing in front of The Rolling Stones, a fact she illustrates on "Tumbling Dice."

What else can I say? LINDA, I LOVE YOU! A sincere "thanks" to Rick Franks, Pop Entertainment, and everyone else involved in giving us the opportunity to spend a luscious evening with Ronstadt.

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

Many people screamed when Linda Ronstadt emerged on stage at Munn Arena Thursday night, and with good reason. Ronstadt is probably the foremost female rock vocalist in the country; her performance locally, after last year's appearance on the cover of Time, People, and a number of other equally prominent places, was guaranteed to raise cheers of delight. Because above all else, Linda Ronstadt is a STAR.

Linda Ronstadt conquers

Thus, allusions that Thursday night's audience was applauding the myth rather than the performer might be appropriate here. One hang-up, though: Ronstadt is so good — a performer blessed with such a superbly warm voice, a perfect one for the idioms she has chosen — that it's hard to make a distinction between myth and performer.

Following a pleasantly pop-pish set by Steven Bishop guaranteed to considerably boost his album's sales figures in the area, Ronstadt and her band opened with Karla Bonoff's "Lose Again." A slightly ironic choice, certainly, as Bonoff herself performed the same tune at Dooley's less than a month ago. But more on that later.

To hear Ronstadt's famous voice in a live setting for the first time is an experience guaranteed to send proverbial chills down the spine of even the most heartless of jaded rock critics. Unfortunately, the sound system at Munn Arena wasn't particularly in its glory Thursday night — because, one suspects, of an "unprecedented demand" for tickets that forced stage speakers to be placed horizontally, rather than vertically, on the stage so that those sitting in nebulous arena territory could be afforded a clear view. The end result? Ronstadt's singing voice came across quite clear, but her stage patter, as such, was at times inaudible.

For a guy who's not particularly a Linda Ronstadt fan, or at least not a fan of her current direction, I have to admit that almost every tune performed by Ronstadt I'd heard several times before. Her chain of successful singles from "You're No Good" onwards to "Blue Bayou" are of course what's drawing the big audiences, but her status as an AM/FM artist, heard on both types of radio, is probably what's keeping them there. Actually, there aren't too many program directors that don't like Linda Ronstadt these days.

Yet there's trouble brewing for Ronstadt, trouble that can't be avoided, because she is, most definitely, a singer and NOT a songwriter. She's written a few tunes now and then, certainly, but generally her post-"He Like A Wheel" success has been drawn from her covering other peoples' tunes.

Someone like Karla Bonoff, mentioned before, who is now off launching her own career, will not be as prone to give Ronstadt her better tunes when she's out trying to drum up airplay for her own versions of her own tunes. Thus Ronstadt is placed in a position where she can sing only what's available to her, and John David Souther's tunes do not a hit single make. Buddy Holly tunes, however, DO.

But she is always able to back on her voice, and with such a voice, she doesn't have to back very far. Shouts of "Love You, Linda!" heard plain in Munn Arena Thursday night and probably everywhere else five years, prove that Ronstadt generates an audience rapport that few vocalists can match. It might be the sad, lost-in-song she sings; it might be her rambling, haphazard stage manner; but whatever it is, audiences do indeed love Linda, and if she can love them back long enough and hard enough they'll love her for a very long time.

Art Guild offers weaving exhibition

By STEVE SZILAGYI
State News Reviewer

The Lansing Art Gallery is the temporary home of an exhibit featuring weaving by the members of the Lansing Weaver's Guild and paintings by local artist Donna Bacon.

The Weaver's Guild is an organization of 40 amateur and professional weavers from the Lansing area.

Martha Brownscombe said the works on exhibit have been jury selected. The pieces represent the best work of the guild, she said, and offer a sampling of various weaving styles.

The pieces on display include plant baskets, wall hangings, tapestries, and clothing. Brownscombe said the works reflect the diversity of the personalities of the artists as well as the differences in weaving styles.

Along with the weaving are paintings by local artist Donna Bacon. Bacon's paintings are made up of geometric patterns based on the mathematical equations of musical chords. Bacon said she first became interested in plotting the equations for musical forms when she did some work for the Department of Music at MSU. To begin a painting, Bacon first figures out which musical chord she will base the painting on, and then plots the equation either with the aid of a computer or by hand on graph paper.

The design is then transferred to canvas, after which she tapes off parts of the design and covers the open areas with layers of acrylic paint. The result is a colorful, op-art type geometric design.

The exhibit will be open until Nov. 27. The Lansing Art Gallery is in the Lansing Center for the Arts on Grand Avenue in downtown Lansing.

ISRAEL

MUHAMMED AND ME

When Peace will come to be,
Down the pathways we will run,
Among the grass in the orchard.
Muhammed and me.

When Peace will come,
I'll give my hand to Muhammed,
To the Jordan we will go.
Together sing and hum.

When Peace will be on every side,
Arm in arm shall we go
The two of us hiking all over —
And up to Jerusalem, we'll take a ride

When Peace will come and fighting ends,
We shall walk then, holding hands,
As far as Gilead —
Two happy friends.

Crawler: tasty new British album

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

This album will really surprise a few people.

It's tasty, it's British, and it comes from a band that most people presumed had died at the same time as its lead guitarist did.

The guitarist was Paul Kossoff, R.I.P., once the extremely talented driving force of Free. After that band's breakup, several very serious drug problems, and Kossoff's actually DYING, believe it or not, until a rapidly administered heart massage started his ticker working again, Kossoff formed Back Street Crawler, a group named after Kossoff's post-Free, pre-heavy drug solo album.

Back Street Crawler recorded two excellent though underrated albums, The Band Plays

On and 2nd Street. Before the latter LP saw its release, however, Kossoff had tragically died. When it came, it was "Dedicated To Koss" and pretty much interpreted as the last we'd be hearing from that crew.

Fortunately, the release of Crawler proves that this is not the case.

CBS Records, the people responsible for the album's release, have been pushing Crawler as "the new Boston" and while (fortunately) the group sounds nothing like Boston, CBS is backing a winner. The LP has been in store racks since the end of the summer, and it doesn't take a genius to figure out that it will stay there unless it gets heard. CBS hopes it will, and for once, I must agree with their verdict.

Crawler is one hot little band. Finding Geoff Whitehorn as a replacement for Kossoff, Crawler dropped the "Back Street" and put together a superb LP. Now slightly in the Bad Company vein, at least vocally the band is slicker than they ever were with Kossoff.

With Whitehorn as lead vocalist Terry Wilson-Slesser, drummer Tony Braunagel, and bassist Terry Wilson, the mainstays of the new Crawler. Yet interestingly, it is pianist John "Rabbit" Bundrick of the better compositions on Crawler. Bundrick, a solo artist himself and now also a member of Crawler was an old friend of Kossoff's from their days shared in Free (Mark II version, that is) as a transplanted American. Bundrick was responsible for introducing the rest of Crawler, who, at that time, themselves a starvin' American band known as Bloontz, to Kossoff, who at that time, was on the lookout for a new band.

While officially joining Crawler during the recording of 2nd Street, Bundrick's presence seems much more dominant on this new LP. The albums best cut, "Stone Cold Sober," Columbia's first choice for single release, is a Bundrick composition and a warm ending for what, with several listings, seems to be one of the most notable group "debut" albums of the year. If at all possible, give it a listen.

riding the crest of the New Wave

LAST 1) IMPORT EP

one of the nicest aspects of New Wave scene is the community it has given for the small independent labels record artists once considered "uncommercial" by the corporate labels.

Costello's most successful label is San Francisco's Sire Records which has given the adorable Jonathan Demme & The Modern Britain's answer to the New Wave's "Pure" (Pure Now People) Records has found its tour de force in Elvis Costello. The big name is that Costello's LP currently in the British charts and he has become what of a national sensation in the U.K.

Costello has adopted the role of an outright symbol of devotion to the rock spirit. Costello, who is a little like Bruce Springsteen without the gruff and horns, demonstrates knowledge of manipulative music. My Aim Is True, the debut LP I've heard by since the British Invasion and psychedelic era.

The only word for this album is DYNAMITE. Costello blends almost every style known to the rock idiom into a brilliant synthesis, and his voice is one of the most emotional sounds to hit pop music in many a year. In addition, his works all deal with the universal themes of belief in romantic love and sexual rejection, i.e., the whole "it's-my-party-and-I'll-cry-if-I-want-to" syndrome.

Costello has also been compared to Graham Parker. Not surprising since both artists share the same producer, Nick Lowe, who also works with the great Dave Edmunds and New Wave's The Damned. It looks like Lowemay become the Phil Spector of the '70s, and his first solo EP reveals that he shares the same eccentric traits as his mentor.

A concept EP (Side A is "Live"; Side B is "Dead"), the music is the same happy pop generally associated with Lowe. However, unlike Costello, Lowe's lyrics may be questionable if your sense of humor runs toward the prudish. The "Dead" side begins with a tongue-in-cheek look at hero worship about a silent screen star who gets eaten by her hungry canine ("She was a winner/Who became the doggie's dinner"). The music's still great and interesting enough to stir up anticipation for Lowe's first album, Wireless World, to be released later this month.

Elvis Costello's album is now available in the U.S. on the Columbia label (JC 35037).

strangely enough, the American version includes a selection not on the British version. If you already own the Elvis import and want the additional song, check out the Hit's Great- est Stiffs LP, an anthology of Stiff's various artists.

Either way, make sure you check out Elvis Costello. Depriving yourself of such pleasure would only be masochistic.

Wildcats are feeling hurt

The fans at MSU had a weekend in which they didn't have to cling to their Michigan allegiance to root for a winner.

It was a weekend where you could go to the football game at Spartan Stadium Saturday afternoon and watch MSU destroy Northwestern 44-3, go to Munn Ice Arena Saturday night and watch the hockey team blast nine goals past No. 1 ranked Michigan for a 9-4 win, and then see the basketball team walk over Windsor at Jensen Fieldhouse Sunday in an exhibition game.

The fans and athletic officials can't help but look down the road to where MSU is heading.

But in extreme contrast to what happened at MSU this weekend are the Northwestern Wildcats, their fans and athletic officials.

Friday night a wire service story was sent out of Omaha, Neb. claiming Nebraska would jump out of the Big Eight conference and join the Big Ten after Northwestern leaves the Big Ten.

The Northwestern people were visibly hurt by it, and by all the criticism they have endured through their winless season.

"I was very disturbed by those reports last night," said John Pont, Northwestern football coach and athletic director, after the game Saturday. "I consider that very irresponsible reporting. At the very least, couldn't the people running those reports check with the athletic director, the football coach (at Northwestern) or the commissioner of the Big Ten? Those reports are totally unfounded. I understand they originated from Omaha. Who in the world from the Big Ten is in Omaha on a Friday night? I'm very upset. I think it was very irresponsible reporting not to make some attempt to check it out before using the rumor."

For the past few years writers have been claiming it's time for Northwestern to leave the Big Ten, because as a small private school they don't have the resources to keep up with the other Big Ten schools.

Pont replies the only people Northwestern hears that from are writers and fans. He says no one from the Big Ten has ever suggested Northwestern should leave.

"Northwestern will be back," Pont said at the beginning of the year. "Northwestern is good for the Big Ten and the Big Ten is good for Northwestern."

In all of Northwestern's games this year, they have had to face opponent's fans laughing at them. The Wildcats have lost all 10 games this year and were 1-10 last year.

In every game they play, the opposition has had a chance for some fun and an opportunity to just beat them up like MSU did Saturday. The Spartans could do anything they wanted. They could pass for 70 yards, run for 62 yards or pour through the opposition's front line to cream anyone in the Wildcat backfield.

The Northwestern officials have become very defensive. They believe the Wildcats belong in the Big Ten and they don't understand why people have turned on them.

They are quick to point out that since Michigan and Ohio State began dominating the conference in 1968 Northwestern has been the only other team to finish second. The Wildcats tied for second in 1970 (6-1) and beat out Ohio State for second in 1971 (6-3, Ohio State was 5-3).

It was sad watching the smaller and slower Wildcats run a play, struggle back to the huddle and then have to try again. Pont said the team didn't fold or "I'd be mad as hell."

You couldn't help but notice the discouragement. The Wildcats' heads were bowed and their arms were folded as they sat quietly on the sidelines waiting for yet another MSU kickoff.

But the two persons to really feel sorry for were MSU feature twirlers Nancy and Kathy Skelton. They did their routine in 34 degree, 15-mile-an-hour windy weather.

SPARTANS CLINCH THIRD PLACE

Gridders topple Northwestern, 44-3

By MICHAEL KLOCKE

State News Sports Writer

It was only a matter of seconds after Van Williams scored MSU's final touchdown that the goalposts in the south end of Spartan Stadium were swaying from the force of what seemed to be the whole student cheering section.

No, MSU hadn't beaten Michigan or Ohio State. No, they hadn't won the Big Ten Championship. In fact, all they had done was give winless Northwestern yet another defeat.

But the 44-3 win over Northwestern Saturday was a big one for the Spartans. The victory raised their record to 6-3-1 (5-1-1 in the Big Ten) and assured them of at least a third-place finish.

Darryl Rogers said after the game that it would be hard to single out outstanding individual performances since both the offense and defense played so well.

And the statistics indicate both units were devastating. On offense, the Spartans came up with a season high of 607 total yards. On defense, they limited the Wildcats to 189 yards, recovered four fumbles and intercepted a pass.

"We still made some mistakes, but we got momentum going early," Rogers said. "It's been an enjoyable year so far, but next week we've got a very good opponent (Iowa). It's going to be a dogfight."

The Wildcats scored after the opening kickoff on a 38-yard field goal by Sam Poulos.

But with the exception of a fumble and an interception, MSU could do no wrong in the rest of the half.

After Hans Nielsen's 28-yard field goal tied the score, MSU scored four more first-half touchdowns to go ahead 31-3.

Eddie Smith, who had his best passing game of the year, threw two touchdown strikes —

16 yards to Mark Brammer and eight yards to Kirk Gibson. Steve Smith scored the other two first-half touchdowns on runs of 12 and one yards.

The receiving of Gibson and Brammer was the key to the Spartan offense. Brammer caught seven passes — mostly on quick look-in patterns — for 108 yards. In addition to his touchdown, Gibson caught a 70-yard pass, a 25-yard pass and he ran for 35 yards on a double reverse.

The Spartans moved the ball just as easily in the second half, but a couple of gutsy efforts by the Wildcats stopped several drives.

MSU also stopped themselves a couple times: Once on a fumble into the endzone by Jim Earley after he had broken loose for a 62-yard run.

"It was frustrating when we weren't scoring in the second half," Smith said. "But we did move the ball well."

The Spartans' first touchdown of the second half came on a nine-yard scramble by Smith — his first collegiate touchdown.

"Coach (offensive line coach C.T.) Hewgley always tells me to run the ball," Smith said. "I told him I was going to run today, and if I'd been down by the student section when I scored, I would have thrown the ball into the stands."

The Spartan defense was paced by tackles Melvin Land (17 tackles) and Larry Bethea (10 tackles) and a fumble recovery. MSU defenders stopped Wildcat runners for losses 15 times.

"I don't think there's a better defensive tackle in the country than Larry Bethea," Rogers said. "He should be an All-American."

To finish second MSU must win over Iowa next Saturday and Ohio State must defeat Michigan in "the big one."

"It would be nice to finish second, but I'm only interested in Iowa," Rogers said. "I don't have any control over what happens in the other game."

"Michigan plays well when they have to and Ohio State is a fine football team. I don't have a prediction — publicly."

MSU tight end Mark Brammer bobbled this pass before catching it. But Brammer latched onto six other Ed Smith passes, including a 16-yard touchdown reception.

'New' MSU cagers jolt Windsor, 114-6

The MSU basketball team erupted for 68 second-half points they downed a much shorter University of Windsor squad, 114-6, in an exhibition game Sunday.

Windsor used full-court man-to-man pressure in the first half they stayed close to the Spartans, 46-34, at the intermission. Jud Heathcote rotated three different units into the game in the first half.

In the second half, frontliners Earvin Johnson, Greg Kelsey and Jay Vincent put on an offensive display for the crowd of over 2,000. Kelser slammed home three dunks among his game high 21 points — all three dunks coming off passes from Johnson.

As expected, Johnson dazzled the crowd with his play. He had 15 assists, 15 points, a team-leading 12 rebounds, and six steals. Vincent turned in a crowd-pleasing performance with 20 points and 10 rebounds.

"People are going to be surprised at how well Jay handled the ball," Heathcote said after the game.

"It's always good, regardless of the competition, to play someone other than yourselves in a scrimmage. We were able to get everyone into the game."

Three other Spartans hit double figures: Terry Donnell, Feldreich, 11; and Bob Chapman, 10. Charlie Pearsall led Windsor with 14 points.

Wolverines explode past U-M

By JOE CENTERS

State News Sports Writer
Hockey in the Western College Hockey Association (WCHA) is a funny game — and everybody was laughing Saturday night.

The Spartans defeated Michigan Saturday night, 9-4, to avenge the 8-4 shellacking they took in Friday night's game at Ann Arbor.

Friday's game was all Michigan. The Wolverines jumped off to a quick 2-0 lead and they were in charge the whole game, but Saturday was all MSU. We wanted it worse than did," coach Amo Bessone said. "Our kids were up for it."

The Spartans jumped off to a first period lead and they held home the rest of the way. Heaslip opened the scoring for MSU at the 9:17 mark of the opening period when he scored with his shot. Palmer getting a delayed penalty let up, but Heaslip didn't let the puck long enough into the right position and shot home. Russ Welch and Heaslip assisted on the goal.

Michigan came back to tie the game with Mark Miller's goal that was the last time that the Wolverines were in the lead. Lynett put the Spartans up for good at the 13:33 mark of the period when he scored the first of his two goals that night, and that's when the game started.

Jelacie upped the score 4-1 when he scored while Michigan had a two-man advantage. McDonald and Kevin Smith assisted on the first of MSU power play goals. Smith and Russ Welch sandwiched goals around a Michigan shot to put the Spartans on top for two periods.

In the third period, nothing went wrong for the Spartans. Marty McLaughlin, who played for the first time this season, made up for lost time as he scored two goals and had the crowd on its feet like he did so many times last year.

McLaughlin's second goal came on a perfect pass from Mark DeCenzo as DeCenzo held the puck long enough to pull Palmer out of the net. He flipped a pass to McLaughlin who was home free.

Heaslip added his second goal of the game when he rifled a shot past the bewildered

Palmer and Darryl DiPace finished the shelling, but this time of Frank Zimmerman, who replaced Palmer.

"DeCenzo was the outstanding player this weekend," Bessone said after the game. "(Mark) Mazzoleni, (Spartan goalie) played a fantastic game. We've broken the Saturday night jinx."

Mazzoleni won his first game of the season as he stopped 24 Michigan shots and he closed the door on the high-scoring Wolverines.

"I waited a long time for this," Mazzoleni said. "I was starting to wonder . . ."

In Friday's game, the Wolverines jumped off to a 2-0 lead, and the Spartans had to play catch-up all night.

Doug Todd scored a three-goal hat trick as goalie Dave Versical did all he could to keep MSU in the game. Versical was shelled with 38 shots — the score could have been a lot higher.

MSU is now 3-3 in the WCHA and 3-5 overall. The Spartans will host Michigan Tech this weekend.

Tony Jelacie (27) slipped the puck past Michigan's Rick Palmer in the Spartan's 9-4 win Saturday night.

Long Distance.

When you have a special feeling about someone and want to keep in touch, why go through the hassle of writing letters and waiting for replies . . . especially since it's so much easier and more personal to call each other on the phone?

Besides, with Long Distance it doesn't take a big reason or a big bankroll just to keep in touch. You can talk to that crazy character in Kalamazoo or an old friend in New York for a lot less than you may think, particularly when you dial direct.

So check the chart above. Then clip and hang it on the wall by the phone . . . or put it in your wallet with the money you'll save by dialing when rates are lowest.

Remember, Long Distance is cheaper when you dial direct on weeknights after 5 p.m. or on the weekend before 5 p.m. Sunday.

Protestors against Shah of Iran

The commission, founded by Rockefeller in 1973, acts as a private committee for capitalists and members include many corporation heads from Western Europe, Japan and the United States.

Among the 200 members who met in 1973 were Carter and U.S. Vice President Walter Mondale.

In addition, Cyrus Vance, Secretary of State; Harold Brown, Secretary of Defense; Michael Blumenthal, Secretary of the Treasury and Zbigniew Brzezinski, Director of the National Security Council were reported as attendants.

"Most of the Iranian students I've talked to know about the Trilateral Commission and Carter's connection with it," Masterson said, "but few Americans have even heard about it." For those interested, a lecture on the Trilateral Commission will be presented by Sheldon Axler, MSU professor of mathematics, Nov. 19 at 9:30 a.m. in the Fireplace Room of Edgewood United Church, 469 N. Hagadorn in E. Lansing.

C. Patric "Lash" Larowe, MSU economics professor, was the rally's last speaker. Larowe told the crowd that the United States put the Shah in the position he now occupies.

He said a CIA member termed the agency's role in Iran which allowed the Shah to come to power, "as one of the CIA's successes."

"I think the American people should express their sense of shame for the United States having put the Shah where he is today," Larowe said.

"And we should protest the fact that MSU is involved in Iran, propping up the fascist dictatorship of the Shah."

He said he was addressing himself primarily to the Americans in the audience since the Iranian students were already actively opposing the Shah at great risk to themselves.

"Individuals every once in a while can make a difference. If all of us write letters to our elected representatives they may have second thoughts," he said.

At the end of Larowe's talk, the demonstrators began their march to the capital with the chant, "The people united will never be defeated."

Interfraternity relationships encouraged

sororities," he said.

Another reason is a financial one, dealing with the cost problems of membership dues into the IFC, Combs said.

"Realistically," he said, "white fraternities and sororities are many years ahead." The black fraternities and sororities have to be developed in order to "catch up."

Wright said he believes it should be a requirement for members of the black fraternities to belong to the IFC.

Another major problem, according to Wright, is that the MSU chapter needs assistance at the undergraduate level from NPHC. Wright suggested the university help bring NPHC people to work with students in understanding and practicing Greek life customs.

"The organization (MSU-NPHC), the NPHC and the university should work simultaneously," Wright commented.

The NPHC has advantages in that it is a "co-educational experience, a coming together of males and females," Wright said. "It is a gain in the black experience."

Search of unicorns by licensed hunters

For Sherlock Holmes buffs there is a "Mrs. Hudson's Breakfast" on the first Friday in January.

According to Rabe, legend has it that Mrs. Hudson, Holmes' landlady, was very irritated by Holmes' target shooting practice, disreputable friends, and his chemistry experiments. Holmes eventually paid her a substantial sum of money to stay in the house, adding insult to injury.

Mrs. Hudson once said she had "as good an idea of a breakfast as a Scotswoman," Rabe added, and this is why a breakfast is held.

Other Holmes-buffs activities include a William Gillette luncheon, (Gillette played Holmes on stage) a Dr. Watson cocktail party, and a Sherlock Holmes dinner. The breakfast will be held in New York City, Rabe said, but locations for the other events have not been chosen, except for the dinner. And this site cannot be revealed since the dinner is only for invited guests.

But Rabe said the main purpose of the unicorn society is to seek the unicorn.

"The unicorn society firmly believes that every man has a unicorn which he is predestined to hunt. It's not necessary that he find or slay this unicorn, merely that he diligently seek it." This is symbolic, according to Rabe, of man seeking his inner self "or getting your head together."

Rabe said anyone can be a member of the unicorn society by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Unicorns, Lake Superior State College, Sault St. Marie, Mich., 49783.

Rabe admitted that an envelope cannot address itself, "but we're still using it. We'll banish that one some day, too."

IT PAYS TO BE IN DEMAND.

Air Force ROTC has scholarships, allowances and jobs for selected science and engineering majors.

Air Force ROTC has openings for young men and women majoring in specified science and engineering academic fields. Fields such as Aeronautical, Aerospace, General and Electrical Engineering, Mathematics, Physics and Computer Technology. AFOTC enrollment pays well now and could keep paying off in the future.

Air Force ROTC offers 4-year, 3-year and 2-year scholarships with $100 monthly tax-free allowance. AFOTC also offers the $100 tax-free monthly allowance during the last two years to non-scholarship students.

Upon graduation you'll receive a commission in the U.S. Air Force and compete for challenging jobs. There'll be numerous opportunities for advanced education in your field, plus you'll have financial security and start your way up the promotion ladder where your ability and ambition are the only limits.

It pays to be in demand, and if you're the type we're looking for, it pays to get the details. No obligations, naturally.

PRESENT FINAL PROPOSALS

State workers negotiating wage hike

By NANCY MONSON
After two weeks of arguments and counter-arguments, representatives for the state and state employees have presented final proposals which will result in wage and benefit increases for the majority of Michigan's employees. This system of negotiations is

Skate mishaps may increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skateboard injuries are expected to double this year compared with 1976, and 40 percent of the accidents will require emergency room treatment, according to a federal report.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that 375,000 injuries will occur this year. No other product under the commission's jurisdiction experienced a similar increase, said William Kitzes, commission program manager for sports and recreation.

Skateboard injuries are expected to surpass football injuries, not including professional, total about 370,000 a year, he added.

The information was gathered ed by the commission during the first half of 1977. The study is in draft form and will not be released until next month, Kitzes said in a telephone interview.

Kitzes said 30 percent of the emergency treatment involves fractures of the lower arms and lower legs. Contusions and abrasions account for 24 percent and strains and sprains comprise 18 percent.

When the full commission takes up the issue in several months, the options could range from a ban to a safety campaign.

Kitzes said a ban is not likely, adding: "The trend is toward safer skateboarding. That's what we're interested in."

a new concept in public sector bargaining. It provides for a recommendation to be submitted by the Compensation Hearings Panel, a neutral arbitrating board, following each party's final proposals.

It is then presented to the State Civil Service Commission (CSC). The CSC draws up the final wage and benefit proposal and submits it to the legislature for appropriation.

Negotiations were made possible when the state devised a "meet and confer policy" last fall; a form of wage and benefit negotiating which approaches collective bargaining, but reserves the right of the state to make the final decisions in pay matters.

Increases had previously been granted without the benefit of feedback from employee representatives.

The state employer has offered a four-percent increase.

"The state is offering four percent because that's what demands dictate, not what's justified," Michael Cavanaugh, attorney for the state employees said. "This hardly strikes us as justice."

"The cost of living is only one factor," state attorney William Whitbeck said, adding that the proposals are based on economic forecasts and the ability of the state to pay the increases.

Compensation improvements and readjustment proposals are annually reviewed a year before the change will go into effect. Funding for the increases could have an adverse effect on taxes or public services.

The final proposal is based on four criteria: the ability of the state to pay, the comparability of wages in competing labor markets, employee production increases and economic fluctuations.

The United States Department of Commerce reports that in 1976 "per capita income increased fastest in Michigan (13.5 percent), faster than in any other state."

Pay raises for state employees in recent years have remained constant with the rate of inflation, but have lagged behind the annual increases in the state's revenues.

State employees will need a seven-percent increase to keep them in line with inflation for the fiscal year of 1978-79. They are also finding themselves in a favorable bargaining position because of the continued spiraling inflation experienced since 1974.

State employees do not have the right to collective bargaining as is common in major private industries throughout the U.S. They are forbidden the right to strike; they are considered public servants paid by the taxpayers, (wages are appropriated by the legislature). If services were suspended it could pose a threat to the security and welfare of the state's citizens.

"Public sector bargaining is now at the stage that collective bargaining was at in the 1930s," said one of the research analysts for the state employees.
