

Governor William Milliken (left) announced Tuesday at a news forum that he will veto any Medicaid funding bill that excludes funds for welfare abortions, even if it means cutting off health services for the poor.

Veto is assured on Medicaid bill

By ANNE MARIE BIONDO

Gov. William G. Milliken told reporters Tuesday he will veto the Legislature's second attempt to pass a Medicaid budget that includes an anti-abortion clause.

Milliken spoke at the Plaza Hotel in Lansing at a forum sponsored by the Lansing area Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.

Last month Milliken, a Republican gubernatorial candidate, vetoed the first Medicaid budget plan because it would have cut off state welfare abortions. The move sent legislators back to the drawing board.

With the rejection of a second Medicaid plan, the state faces a new fiscal year next Sunday with no funds for welfare health services.

The second budget was offered as a temporary four-month plan. Although intended to save health services from losing state funds, the plan cuts off aid for Medicaid abortions.

Sticking with his "pro-choice stand," Milliken said he's willing to take the responsibility for cutting off health care services for the poor and the elderly if it means saving welfare-funded abortions.

"I am willing to cut off Medicaid funds," Milliken said, "but I hope the Legislature will reverse its position."

Milliken said if the state Legislature wants to stop welfare abortions it should draft a separate bill to do so. But he said he would veto such a bill.

Milliken said the Legislature is combining the moral issue of abortion with the political issue of whether they should be funded by the state for the poor.

"Locking these two things together is so totally wrong," he said. "I believe in freedom of choice — no one should be required to have a procedure of that kind, but no one should be deprived of it."

Milliken also said at the forum he has not decided whether he supports the ballot proposal to raise the legal drinking age to 21.

"I continue to support raising the drinking age to 19, he said, "but I don't have that option anymore. I don't know how I will vote on Nov. 7."

Although Milliken said he finds the 18-year-old legal age for adults "supportable," there have been "among 18, 19 and 20-year-olds patterns of irresponsibilities in drinking."

Milliken is also opposed to a ballot proposal that would grant collective bargaining for state police troopers.

"Collective bargaining will deprofessionalize this magnificent law enforcement agency,"

Trustees grapple with S. Africa divestiture: 'prudent' is key word

By BETH TUSCHAK
State News Staff Writer

It can be likened to a game of tug-o-war across a river.

On one side are University administrators, calling for "profit, profit — prudently."

Tugging the other end of the rope is the Southern African Liberation Committee, hands linked with the black victims of the apartheid system, chanting "human rights, human rights."

A raft floating precariously in the middle holds the MSU Board of Trustees, surrounded by questioning corporation directors and private citizens.

The stakes, on both sides, are high. Will the board of trustees start a program of Africa:

- No expansion of facilities and operations in South Africa;
- No new licenses, affiliates or subsidiaries in South Africa;
- No importation of technologies, processes or equipment for use by the police, military or for social control.

The board further resolved that the University would withdraw its deposits from and not invest in banks granting or renewing loans to the Republic of South Africa.

When the cheering from SALC died down, the board began to hear rumblings from the corporate team.

In mid-August, they received an opinion from University attorney, Leland Carr, Jr. on the duty and liability of the board — collectively and individually — on the investment of public funds under the board's control and jurisdiction.

The trustees were reminded that they, as individuals and as a board, are public officers exercising control of public funds belonging to the people of the state of Michigan. The opinion said they had an obligation to manage those responsibilities in a sound and prudent business manner.

That brings to the forefront the definition of "prudent," a word which is tossed around, disassembled, browbeaten and stamped on.

A harmless word, "prudent" is secure in the knowledge that it has an irrefutable meaning and a snug place in Webster's.

Prudent: marked by wisdom or judiciousness as one of notable and humane views.

Prudent: shrewd in the management of practical affairs as one who never does anything except for useful end.

And that's the cause of the confusion — will the board by implementing its Dec. 1 divestiture program deadline, later be accused of acting on the basis of "emotional" feelings and not those considered detrimental to good money management?

It's a sticky situation at best, for as Carr pointed out to the board, the trustees are liable as an insurer for the safe keeping of funds in their custody until disbursed in legal course.

THIRD PLANE MAY BE INVOLVED

Probe of air crash begins

By Wire Services

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A second small plane may have confused the pilot of a Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner that collided with a single-engine Cessna killing at least 150 persons, a federal safety expert said Tuesday.

Nearly a fourth of the 150 persons killed were PSA employees.

Phillip Hogue, overseeing the National Transportation Safety Board investigation of the worst air crash in U.S. history, said the jetliner and a twin-engine Cessna had been cleared for landing on the same runway at Lindbergh Field.

Hogue said the PSA pilot had acknowledged an air traffic control warning of another plane near the 727, but may not have noticed the single-engine Cessna 172 that collided with the crowded jetliner. Hogue revealed the "second-plane theory" after listening to tapes of conversations between air traffic controllers and the pilots.

The information indicates that the pilot of the Boeing 727, who had been warned that he was dangerously close to a small plane, saw only a twin-engine Cessna that was ahead of the jet and failed to see the single-engine Cessna to his right that collided with the airliner.

The voices in the tape-recorded conversations between controllers and the PSA pilot were in a calm tone, indicating no emergency existed, investigators said.

"There was no shouting, screaming, panic or terror," Hogue said. "Absolutely no emotion."

He said the control tower at Lindbergh Field advised both the Cessna and jetliner of their positions and both acknowledged.

"The pilot said he was going down," Hogue said, "but he said it in such a calm voice, like something you'd routinely say to an air traffic controller tower."

Hogue emphasized that the theory of the second Cessna was not conclusive and was only a possibility raised by the tapes.

He said investigators are trying to find out who was the pilot of the twin-engine plane, which apparently landed safely.

"It was just another aircraft in the traffic pattern," Hogue said. "How far ahead it was of the other single-engine Cessna, I can't say."

Hogue said the cockpit and tower tapes will be analyzed by NTSB investigators in Washington.

He added that investigators could not determine if the pilot of the single-engine Cessna that crashed had talked with traffic controllers at Lindbergh shortly before the collision.

Also on Tuesday, it was disclosed that the PSA fight was being directed by the Lindbergh tower, while the Cessna 172 was under the control of the tower at Miramar Naval Air Station. Such procedures are common here, with Federal Aviation Administration controllers at Miramar handing over planes to Lindbergh as the craft nears the commercial field.

Investigators said they were still unsure where the Cessna 172 had struck the jetliner. There had been some reports from witnesses Monday that the planes struck head-on. But accounts from other witnesses and photographs appear to show that the smaller plane struck the jetliner's right wing.

"We just don't know," NTSB spokesman Brad Dunbar said.

"Establishing the exact course of both aircraft and their exact angles of approach is a central part of the investigation that will take weeks, not days."

Gas tax boost approved

By JAMES V. HIGGINS

LANSING (UPI) — Lt. Gov. James J. Damman cast a historic tie-breaking vote Tuesday, providing the margin for approval of a gasoline tax increase of 2 cents.

Then the Senate on a 21-15 vote without Damman's assistance, quickly adopted another key element of the proposed comprehensive transportation package — a 30 percent increase in vehicle license plate fees.

Those two bills will yield about $147 million to fund improvements in virtually all phases of transportation at a cost of about $20 a year to the average Michigan motorist.

The House must approve a minor amendment to the gas tax bill before the package goes to the governor's desk.

"I think it is encouraging that we have a transportation package now, and I think it's going to have a major impact on the Economy of Michigan and well being of the people," said Gov. William G. Milliken.

Milliken, who watched Senate debate on the package from the visitor's gallery, said it will be seen in the long run as "a very important move for the future."

It was believed to be only the second time Damman had cast a vote in four years of presiding over the Senate, and the first on a major issue. It broke a 19-19 tie.

Both the Democratic and Republican caucuses were split on the issue.

The measure also hikes diesel fuel taxes by two cents, an increase hotly contested by truck stop owners.

The Senate again rejected amendments to strike the diesel fuel hike, but agreed by a wide margin to provide a one-year expiration date in the tax hike to allow time to work out the concerns of diesel fuel vendors.

The vendors had complained that the higher taxes in Michigan would induce truckers to purchase fuel in other states.

The total transportation package, already approved by the House, would provide $168 million in transportation improvements, including a transfer of $21 million from sales tax revenues.

Opponents said the increase flies in the face of public sentiment against tax increases.

"People in this state and around the country are not talking about increasing taxes, they're talking about decreasing taxes," said Sen. Robert W. Davis, R-Gaylord.

Opponents also charged the gas tax increase would hurt the automobile and tourist industry.

House gives big 'yes' to lobby reform bill

LANSING (UPI) — A landmark reform bill requiring lobbyists to make public their activities in the legislature and state government was approved overwhelmingly by the State House Tuesday.

The bill was returned to the Senate on a 90-9 vote, but its prospects in the upper chamber were clouded by adoption of a House amendment requiring lawmakers and other officials to file their own reports on lobbying activities.

The final vote came after nearly two and one-half hours of debate during which proponents said the Senate-passed measure will allay public suspicions about the legislative process by making transactions with lobbyists open and above-board.

Persistent rumors of secret backroom deals "have poisoned the atmosphere of our nation," said House Democratic Floor Leader Joseph Forbes.

"The vast majority of public officials have nothing to hide," the Oak Park lawmaker said. Lobbying interests and lobbyists themselves are required under the bill to register with the state.

Lobbyists must file quarterly reports detailing their lobbying expenditures including how much they spend winning and dining lawmakers.

They must report the names of officials on whom they spend more than $25 per month or $50 per year in food and drink.

Lobbyists are also required to report business transactions with state officials and lawmakers. Large gifts and loans to state officials are prohibited.

The controversial amendment, sponsored by Reps. Alfred Sheridan, D-Taylor, and Connie Binsfeld, R-Maple City, requires that officials and lawmakers file their own reports on the location, duration and subject of meetings they attend at which lobbyists pick up the tab — as well as how much was spent on them.

Proponents said it was only fair that lawmakers be forced to file the same types of reports they require of others. They also said it protects lawmakers against lobbyists who file false reports.

A wreckage crew attempts to prepare to haul away one of three automobiles involved in a collision that resulted in the death of a Lansing woman. Three other persons involved in the accident are listed in "critical, but stable" condition at Lansing's Sparrow Hospital. The accident occurred Tuesday afternoon at Grand River Avenue and Campus Hill Drive in Meridian Township.

Grand River Avenue three-car collision kills driver, injures three passengers

A Lansing woman was killed and two passengers in her car were injured in a three-car collision on Grand River Avenue Tuesday afternoon, Meridian Township police said.

Cheryl Dornbush, 29, 1527 Redwood Drive, was dead on arrival at Lansing's Sparrow Hospital.

Dornbush's mother, Crystal Brewer, 65, of 1686 Brooks, Muskegon, was listed in "critical but stable" condition at Sparrow Hospital and passenger Jacquelyn Wallace, 20, 1722 S. Washington Ave., was in stable condition.

Police said William Hammond, 23, 5035 Campus Hill Drive, pulled out of southbound Campus Hill Drive heading eastbound when his vehicle struck a car driven by David Boulas, 20, 3031 S. Washington Ave., which was heading westbound on Grand River Avenue.

The impact caused Boulas' car to spin around into the eastbound lane, hitting Dornbush's car, police said.

Boulas is listed in "critical, but stable" condition at Sparrow hospital. Hammond was not injured, police said.

Boulas' passenger, John Morciglio, 20, 3031 S. Washington Ave., was treated and released at Sparrow Hospital.

No tickets have been issued in the accident and police are still investigating.

Egypt campaigning for Arab backing

Egypt (AP) — Egypt launched a diplomatic campaign Tuesday to win Arab backing for the Camp David agreement with Israel, telling Arab ambassadors in Cairo that the accords are only a step toward a comprehensive Mideast settlement.

Most Arab countries, including Saudi Arabia and Jordan, have announced reservations about the agreement signed by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on the grounds it does not specifically provide for the return of East Jerusalem to the Arabs.

Though Jordan and Saudi Arabia have refrained from endorsing the Camp David agreement, they have not joined the hard-line Arab states, led by Syria, in planning active steps against Sadat. Diplomatic sources in Riyadh said Saudi Arabia is expected to continue its moderate oil policies, material support of Egypt and its special relationship with the United States.

Carter, Conyers differ on legislation approach

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Black legislators met with President Carter Tuesday and said they got his pledge of maximum effort behind full-employment legislation, but differed so much on how to do it that one lawmaker walked out of the meeting.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., clearly upset, turned his back on the White House meeting and walked out of the West Wing.

Conyers wanted a "Camp David-type approach," Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., said. He said Conyers suggested the president personally get legislators on both sides of the issue together, as he did the leaders on both sides of the Middle East peace question, and work something out.

Mitchell said, "The president said . . . he would not convene a Camp David-type summit on full employment. But he did stress that he made a commitment to this legislation early on."

Commercial airport dispute grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The collision between a commercial airliner and a private plane over San Diego tragically highlights the growing concern over use of major commercial airports by private aircraft.

The problem is not new, but as the number of private planes increases, the skies become ever more crowded. The Federal Aviation Administration has a policy of trying to get light planes away from major airports, said FAA spokesman Fred Farrar.

Farrar said the FAA has been encouraging construction of so-called relief airports, to take light plane traffic away from the major fields.

Meanwhile, John O'Donnell, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, criticized the Federal Aviation Administration for not pushing development of warning equipment designed to prevent such collisions.

In written testimony for a congressional hearing O'Donnell said the technology has been available for many years.

He said ALPA wants a collision avoidance system installed in aircraft to give pilots direct, immediate knowledge of any impending threat.

Diggs on trial for kickback charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr., D-Mich., went on trial Tuesday on charges he received kickbacks from three congressional aides and hired three others solely to handle his personal affairs.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, predicting the case would last two weeks, told prospective jurors they would be sequestered for the trial because of "widespread public interest."

Diggs, 55, has been elected to the House continuously since 1954 from his inner-city Detroit district. The dean of black members of Congress, he easily won Michigan's Democratic primary last month in a bid for another term.

The 35-count indictment returned in March charged Diggs with mail fraud and lying to a grand jury. It said Diggs, who has pleaded innocent, defrauded the U.S. Treasury of $101,000 from kickbacks and payments to staff members who did no work for the House.

August food prices remain constant

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grocery shoppers got some relief from rising food prices in August but the cost of housing and medical care kept the inflation rate climbing steadily, the Labor Department said Tuesday.

Food purchased at the grocery store remained at about the same price in August while overall consumer prices were going up 0.6 percent, the department said.

The average worker lost ground to inflation during the month because his pay increases failed to keep up with rising prices, the department said.

Administration economists were encouraged by the August price figures, however, because the increases were smaller than at the start of the year.

Prices went up 0.9 percent for three months in a row before rising 0.5 percent in July and 0.6 percent in August.

Gromyko finishes speech despite illness

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko became ill and slumped against the speaker's desk Tuesday while addressing the U.N. General Assembly. He was helped from the podium but returned 55 minutes later to complete his speech.

The 69-year-old Gromyko, a regular participant in United Nations debates, has been talking for about an hour when he broke off his speech. He was pressing at that point for a Soviet-proposed treaty committing nuclear powers not to attack non-nuclear nations.

The large, vaulted General Assembly hall became hushed as Gromyko broke off his speech. He paused for a moment, took a sip of water and then appeared to lower his head. U.N. security guards and members of the Soviet delegation quickly helped him to a room behind the podium.

U.S. WAITS FOR ISRAELI SETTLEMENT NEWS

Aid letter for airbases withheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is withholding the transmission of a letter that promises American aid to build two new Israeli airbases until the issue of Israel's commitment to halt settlements on the West Bank is decided, officials said Tuesday.

But the officials, who declined to be identified, said the delay in releasing the airbase aid agreement is not an effort to pressure Israel into accepting the U.S. view of agreements reached during the Camp David Summit meeting.

The U.S. position is that Israel agreed that new settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River are prohibited for five years. Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin says his recollection is that the settlement freeze was to last only three months.

The settlement issue was one of several at Camp David that were handled separately from the published frameworks for peace signed by Carter, Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Those issues were to be handled in later exchanges of letters.

Last week, most of those supplementary letters were released. Those that were not released were the letters dealing with the West Bank settlements and the one detailing the American pledge to pay for two new airbases for Israel.

The airbases are to be constructed in the Israeli Negev region to replace bases being returned to Egypt in the nearby Sinai region as part of the Camp David accord. The bases being returned to Egypt were lost to the Israelis during the 1967 war.

The West Bank settlements issue has not been decided because of the open dispute between Begin and Carter over exactly what Israel had agreed to at Camp David.

U.S. officials said earlier that the airbase aid agreement was not published because it was not ready. The White House wanted the letter written carefully so that it was clear that Congress would have to approve any financial aid and that Israel and the United States would have to negotiate the type of bases to be built and their cost.

"We were faced with the decision of whether to rush it out by itself or to wait for the other letter and to publish them both together. We decided to wait until we get the letter from Israel on the settlements," one official said. He said the Israeli letter is expected within a few days.

Strike paralyzes rails

WASHINGTON (AP) — Freight and commuter rail service was paralyzed across most of the country Tuesday when a clerks' union expanded its strike against a Virginia-based railroad to 43 other rail carriers.

The striking Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks said early morning picketing had shut down or curtailed operations at two-thirds of the nation's major railroads, affecting every part of the nation except for some portions of the heavily-traveled Northeast corridor.

According to union estimates, more than 330,000 of the nation's half-million railroad workers honored picket lines and stayed off the job, leaving more than 100,000 morning commuters stranded and idling millions of tons of freight.

Amtrak, the national rail passenger line, said service was normal along its Boston-to-Washington routes, but other morning train service was canceled except for one West Coast train. Amtrak said about half of its 52,000 daily riders were denied service.

Amtrak said it planned to operate two trains Tuesday night between New York and Chicago by using track belonging to Conrail, the big freight line which was not picketed.

But Conrail spokesperson

Tom Hoppin said the system's operations which are concentrated in the Northeast, were "seriously affected" by the other shutdowns. Hoppin said 65 percent of Conrail's freight is received from or bound for connecting lines, most of which were halted by Tuesday's picketing.

Farber has a reprieve

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York Times reporter Myron A. Farber won a last-minute reprieve Tuesday from his scheduled return to a New Jersey jail for refusing to reveal his confidential files.

Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart ordered New Jersey authorities to allow Farber to remain free until they hear further from him or the full court.

Farber already has spent 27 days in jail and the Times has paid $130,000 in fines for refusing to surrender confidential information to a New Jersey judge presiding over a murder case.

Tuesday's order also postponed resumption of $5,000 daily fines against the Times until Stewart or the full court, the order did not specify, studies more closely the emergency request.

Farber and the Times want to postpone all penalties against them while the Supreme Court considers their formal appeal.

Chile, Argentina dispute may erupt over islands

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A century-old dispute between Argentina and Chile over ownership of three tiny islands off the tip of South America has heated up to the point that many on both sides fear war.

Negotiators for the two South American neighbors held a round of talks recently in Santiago, working against a backdrop of rumored troop clashes, an accidental incursion by Argentine soldiers two weeks ago, a sharp decline in bilateral trade and expulsion of many Chileans working in Argentina.

The islands of Picton, Lennox and Nueva, south of Tierra del Fuego, have been held by Chile since the last century. Argentina has claimed them almost as long.

The nations are more concerned about the surrounding ocean than the islands because there are unconfirmed reports of petroleum resources nearby.

Britain entered the case as arbitrator at Argentina's request and with Chile's concurrence in 1971. Britain ruled last year that under the 1881 limits treaty between Chile and Argentina the islands belonged to Chile.

Argentina argues that while the 1881 treaty does concede that all Pacific islands south of the Beagle Canal to Cape Horn are in the Atlantic and therefore belong to Argentina. But it is not clear if the islands are in the Atlantic or the Pacific.

Housing contract new, improved

By MICHAEL MEGIERIAN
State News Staff Writer

Ambiguous terms and contractual inadequacies which residence hall officials said they felt existed in the MSU residence hall contract were cleared up last spring, resulting in a contract that should be scrutinized closely by its tenants.

"During orientation, the University's pitch was for incoming students and their parents to read the contract carefully," said Robert Minetti, coordinator of the Residence Hall Programs Office.

Minetti said the contract, which was revised by the Residence Hall Programs Office, is basically the same as last year's contract, but provides a more workable mechanism for enforcing the agreement.

Housing contracts in previous years never mentioned or defined the actions the University could take against a student for violation of the contract, a problem Minetti said has now been alleviated.

Section 19 of the contract states that head advisors or hall managers will investigate alleged violations and notify residents of the action sought against them.

"Housing contracts never used to include due process," Minetti said.

Referral for contract violations in the 1977 contract involved what the clause termed reprimanding by "appropriate University officials."

Though this year's contract stipulates who the appropriate officials are, it vaguely states they will take into consideration the circumstances of each case before determining the proper action.

Minetti was unable to provide a definition of appropriate action, but offered a few examples.

"Sometimes we have to ask someone to leave the residence hall," he said. "And sometimes simple warning is sufficient."

Minetti stressed only a hall manager or area director can terminate a resident's contract and immediate termination only results if a resident commits some act which jeopardizes the "life, limb or property of others."

"We are trying to take arbitrary rulings out of the contract as much as possible," he said. "We can't just evict anyone. It's pretty much the same as living off campus; the tenant has certain rights."

Minetti conceded that the University reserved a number of rights to act on matters that will probably never arise for most residents, but added that he felt the contract should be worded not against the students but in the best interest of the University.

"The University is responsible for the residence hall," he said. "It would be inappropriate not to consider the University's best interests."

CETA workers safe as city council moves to block future layoffs

By SHEILA BEACHUM
State News Staff Writer

A resolution which assures there will be no temporary layoffs of CETA workers was approved by the Lansing City Council Monday.

Manpower Consortium for the Tri-County area has ordered a "freeze" on Comprehensive Employment Training Act positions in the Tri-County area, effective Oct. 2. The tri-county area includes Clinton, Eaton, and Ingham counties.

The Manpower Consortium, composed of elected officials of the three counties and Lansing, is the grantee of the CETA contract and determines policies for the administration of the program in the tri-county area.

The freeze would serve to "save money in residual funds to keep people on the payroll until a new CETA contract is approved by Congress," Councilmember Jack Gunther said.

Gunther called for approval of the resolution saying if it wasn't passed, those "CETA employees we have on board now would be unemployed until further notice."

The resolution would permit a transfer of funds from employment titles under CETA which still have available funds to those which are out of federal money.

"The freeze will continue until Dec. 28 or until CETA monies become available," Councilmember William Brenke said.

Local agencies use the federal monies to pay wages to such "population subgroups" as blacks, chicanos, single parent households, ex-convicts and senior citizens, Councilmember Richard Baker said.

There are 750,000 people employed under CETA nationwide, Baker said.

CETA is a federally funded program which operates as an employment agency and an education and training program.

Money from CETA contracts with various agencies is used to pay workers to do anything from public works jobs to supervisory positions, Baker said.

Wages range from minimum wage to as high as $17,000 per year, Baker said.

A CETA employee netting $17,000 a year has the first $10,000 paid by CETA with the remainder being covered by the local agency with which the employee is affiliated, Baker said.

Pact settlements still in planning

Separate contract settlements involving the University, clerical-technical employees and the MSU supervisory employees are still in the planning stages.

Supervisory employees and MSU were able to reach a tentative agreement early Saturday morning concerning a 26-month contract which will be voted on today in the Physical Plant lunch room at 5 and 7 p.m.

If approved the contract will become effective Oct. 1.

Negotiations continue, however, between the University and clerical-technical employees whose contract ends Sept. 30.

New Men's IM facility additions to benefit women, handicappers

By JOY L. HAENLEIN
State News Staff Writer

Additional facilities at the Men's IM Building for women and handicappers are slated to open next month, University officials said Tuesday.

The additions, which include lockers, showers and toilets, were funded through a $114,000 allocation approved by the MSU Board of Trustees.

"We recognize that we are not able to serve women here," said Frank Beeman, director of the Men's IM, adding that it is illegal not to have equal facilities for men and women.

Title IX, a provision monitored by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, calls for equal opportunity for men and women in all federally-funded educational programs, including sports.

The additions include 2,500 lockers which were partitioned off from the men's locker room to enlarge the women's, a steam room, hairdriers, showers and toilets which are accessible to everyone.

The weight training room will be open to men and women other than MSU varsity athletes for the first time, while a new corridor leading from the women's locker room to the equipment check-out area has been constructed to add convenience, Dennis Mayer, assistant director of the Men's IM, said.

"Hopefully, more women will come over here," Mayer said. "We're trying our best to serve the students better and we hope our overcrowding problem will be no worse than before."

However, Mayer cautioned a new IM is needed as "we are taxing what we have right now."

One problem with new additions may be the failure of women to take full advantage of them, said Carol Harding, director of the Women's IM Building.

"Women must be more assertive," she said.

Harding said she noticed many women at the Women's IM giving up courts to men who arrived after them, for no apparent reason.

Recommendations from handicapper students indicated a desire to use the IM facilities, said Judy Taylor, director of the Office of Programs for Handicappers.

Taylor said events such as handicapper's field day and wheelchair Olympics have increased their interest in sports activities, especially swimming and weight work.

REACT TO FIRING DECISION

LCC students suggest boycott

Editor's note: The following information was compiled by State News staff writers Sheila Beachum, Sandra Holt and Nancy Rogier.

LCC students demanded answers and suggested a boycott of classes in response to the decision to fire striking faculty members at a heated two-hour Board of Trustees meeting Monday night.

"We want our professors," Maggie Beard, a student government representative said to the 150 students and faculty who attended the meeting.

"But we are fighting more for ourselves, from a student's point of view," she said while students attempted to solidify their position before hearing the board's decision.

The trustees met at 7 p.m. and went to closed session, emerging at an hour and 15 minutes later to announce their decision to fire striking faculty who do not return to work by Thursday.

"Our first concern is for the students," LCC president Phil Gannon said.

Gannon assured students the tuition refund period for dissatisfied students would be extended and every effort would be made to help students keep their financial aid.

"Financial aid is not being cancelled," Conrad McRoberts, assistant director of financial aids, said.

"Right now we are waiting for recommendations from the Office of Education and until we know what will happen here before we decide what to do," he said.

Students asked questions about maintaining the quality of education and indicated they would accept a tuition hike, if it became necessary.

Gannon replied by saying equally qualified instructors would be hired as replacements if striking members do not return.

Bernard Gullett, president of student government, said student support and concern has grown as a result of the meeting.

"A lot of students feel their questions were not answered," he said.

Gullett said the possibility of a student boycott of classes was being discussed with a lawyer Tuesday.

Students demanded the board urge administrators and faculty to reopen negotiations as soon as possible.

LCC Director of Public Relations Wes VanMalsen said negotiations resumed Tuesday at 7 p.m. He added that requests for student representation at the negotiations have been denied.

Michigan Education Association is the collective bargaining agent representing LCC faculty.

"Gannon knows the administration has the advantage under our current bargaining law," said Herman Coleman, executive director of MEA.

"He's using the notion that because the professors are breaking the law by striking, he will be able to intimidate them," he continued.

While the trustee meeting was being conducted, in another part of the city, John Madden, a representative from the LCC student government, petitioned Lansing City Council to take action on the matter of the strike.

Madden asked the councilmembers to "put pressure" on the administration and faculty negotiating teams to bring an end to the week-old strike.

"The community does not benefit from the split," Madden said.

An earlier resolution proposing that the council become involved in negotiations was not approved, Councilmember William Brenke said.

Joe Finkbeiner, president of UAW Local 1618, said the UAW supports the strike. Members already striking, many of whom attend or teach courses at LCC, have indicated they will picket in large numbers if the strike lasts any longer.

Other official reactions to the strike were stated when five state Legislators, among 19 community leaders, expressed their concern over the strike situation in a letter issued Tuesday to LCC trustees, faculty and student government representatives.

Sen. Earl E. Nelson, D-Lansing; Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing; Rep. Thomas "Hoke" Holcomb, D-Lansing; and Rep. David C. Hollister, D-Lansing, appeared at a press conference Tuesday at 4 p.m. at the state capital to deliver the letter.

The Legislators were accompanied by four city government and community officials.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's State News that MSU Faculty Associates is asking Academic Council to refuse credit to MSU graduate students hired to replace striking Lansing Community College faculty.

FA is asking the council to consider the quality of credits earned in LCC classes taught by replacement faculty before accepting such credits from students transferring from LCC to MSU.

Former MSU president back to drum up funds

By KIM CRAWFORD
State News Staff Writer

Almost 10 years after he resigned as president of MSU to go on to positions with the U.S. State Department and the United Nations, John A. Hannah is back.

The man who has served as acting assistant to the Secretary of Defense and chairperson of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission under presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Nixon currently works in a small office on the second floor of the Nisbet building where he seeks to gain contributions for the Capital Enrichment Drive.

The enrichment fund goal has been set at $17 million with most of the money going toward the construction of the Performing Arts Center.

"There's always been an understanding that the University wanted me back," the 75-year-old Hannah said.

Hannah said he has tried retiring, but added, "I don't feel old."

Hannah led MSU through years of phenomenal growth from 1941 to 1969. During his years as president, enrollments increased seven fold and the physical campus burgeoned.

Hannah returned to MSU in September after resigning as director of the United Nations World Food Council. This week he and Leslie Scott, vice president for development and president of the MSU Foundation will travel to California to meet with alumni to solicit contributions to the enrichment fund.

"We've got to get more money if the Performing Arts Center is going to get built," he said. "We've got to find a way of soliciting $4 million more than is now in sight. I know it's not going to be easy."

Hannah said MSU was one of the first universities to start international programs aiding developing nations after World War II and it was this involvement that "turned this institution around."

In recent years, though, some MSU overseas program's have come under fire because of their connections with oppressive governments and military dictator-

Anti-cancer drug discovered at MSU may soon meet the approval of FDA

By PAUL COX
State News Staff Writer

An effective anti-cancer drug, accidentally discovered at MSU by Barnett Rosenberg, professor of biophysics, may soon be approved for use by the Food and Drug Administration.

Cisplatin was developed about 10 years ago and is unusually effective in treating testicular and ovarian cancer, Rosenberg said. He added that the FDA has been asked to approve the drug and until the federal agency does he feels it is "inappropriate" for him to discuss it in detail.

"While news articles point out that the drug has not yet received FDA approval, there are many desperately ill people who will now attempt to gain treatment with cisplatin," Rosenberg said.

The drug was discovered as a result of "basic research" studying the effects of electrical fields on bacteria cells, Rosenberg said. Cisplatin is a compound of platinum combined with chlorine and ammonia. This chemical structure is unique in anti-cancer drugs.

"The point is the thing works," Rosenberg said.

"I don't think there's any doubt that cisplatin has entered us into a new era in the treatment of testicular cancer," said Dr. Robert Golbey, of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York. "I think with testicular cancer we're at a point where it's within our grasp to cure a cancer."

Cisplatin was the subject of a two-day National Cancer Institute conference last week, held in anticipation of the FDA allowing Bristol Laboratories of Syracuse, N.Y. to begin marketing the drug under the name Platinol.

In the United States, about 3,700 cases of testicular cancer are diagnosed annually in men in their 20s and 30s. Dr. Franco M. Muggia, head of the NCI's cancer evaluation effort, said treatment including cisplatin can eliminate all signs of the cancer for many months in more than half the patients with advanced forms of the disease.

Following treatment with cisplatin and other drugs, 68 percent of patients with advanced forms of the cancer have been disease-free for more than two years, said Dr. Lawrence Einhorn of the Indiana Medical Center. He said he believes that during a two-year period the drug could have a 99 percent effectiveness rate.

In 1964, the average survival rate was 13 percent for a man with advanced testicular cancer.

Physical side effects are the major drawback to cisplatin. The drug causes nausea and vomiting in all patients and can cause kidney damage, partial hearing loss, a ringing in the ears and other ill effects.

Because of these negative effects, intravenous doses of the drug must be carefully regulated and sometimes halted. In advanced cancer cases, doctors are experimenting with the most effective dosage.

The NCI is also considering tests to see if the drug should be used in less serious cases.

Swallowed pride is the only insurance for peace

Despite the smiling visages exhibited by Jimmy Carter, Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat at the close of the Camp David Summit, Mideast peace prospects are still quite dismal.

Aside from the impending exit of Israel from Sinai, the only firm conclusion made was that Mideast peace could not work without cooperation by two key countries: Saudi Arabia and Jordan. If the two failed to acknowledge their roles in the peace framework, the fragile plan was doomed to collapse. That much was known before anything was signed; the onus was taken off Israel and Egypt and placed squarely on the two peripheral countries.

King Hussein of Jordan and King Khaled of Saudi Arabia undoubtedly felt the burden of the onus as well as the eyes of the world being focused on them. But more important to both of them were the eyes of the Arab world, specifically the eyes of PLO's Arafat, Libya's Khadafi and Syria's Assad. Even though these three (except Arafat) are even more peripheral in the specifics of Israeli concessions than Jordan or Saudi Arabia, they do hold extensive power and influence in the Arab world as a whole.

Much more influence, apparently than the veiled threats delivered by a smiling Cyrus Vance could muster. Did Carter's experts really expect anything less? Obviously the United States has significant economic pull over the two leaders, but the pull is only a short-run influence. In the long run, Jordan and Saudi Arabia must live with their neighbors and the living will be much easier when all the parties — including peripheral parties — understand each other's position.

Understanding each other's position will mean more than reading news stories about what each other are saying, however. It means understanding that Arafat and his allies will continue to call for the extermination of Israel, it means the Israelis will still say "who?" when someone mentions the PLO and it means the rest of the Arab world will continue to express concern for homeless Palestinians — as long as the home eventually provided is not on their own soil.

Despite what is being said by all the parties, there are certain accommodations that must be made and all concerned know exactly what these are. At this point it is a waiting game to see who will break first and admit the obvious.

It is obvious that the PLO must forget about annihilating Israel, it is obvious that Israel must forget past and present PLO atrocities and bargain with Arafat, and it is obvious the rest of the Arab world must qualify their support of the Palestinians by admitting that they really aren't that concerned with the refugees — they just don't like Israel.

King Khaled

Cyrus Vance

Because certain things are obvious does not mean anything will be simple. It will take an incredible amount of swallowed national pride for anybody to admit the obvious, but swallowed pride is the only route to peace. At this point Israel must swallow first.

A tentative move was made with the Sinai concession and Begin's arrest of Israeli settlers in the West Bank. But these concessions are small change compared to the supreme sacrifice Israel has yet to make: recognition of the PLO as at least one agent of the Palestinians, if not the sole agent. Until this earth-shaking concession is made, there can be no peace.

A good bill passed 10 years late

Congratulations to the Michigan Legislature for finally getting off their partisan duffs and passing a transportation package that should have been passed 10 years ago.

The timing of the transportation package passage was at this time crucial for many reasons. Resolution before the Nov. 7 general election was necessary. If either the tax limitation or tax cutting proposals passes, money could conceivably be taken from the revenue-producing areas of the transportation system and diverted to the general fund. Also, failure to act before Oct. 1 would delay for a year the implementation of the new vehicle weight tax to be collected through license plate fees.

There has been general agreement that the funding program was necessary. Both gubernatorial candidates supported the transportation package. Democrat William Fitzgerald, as chairperson of the Senate Committee on Highways and Transportation, was instrumental in drafting funding mechanisms for the mass transit programs. Governor Milliken pledged support for the package.

Both candidates urged a divorce from petty partisan politics because of the need for mass transit funding. Their desire, though, was largely ignored.

Senate Democrats could have passed the measure alone; the support was there. They felt, however, that if they approved the package their Republican election opponents would point to it as excessive spending.

The Republicans, many from outstate areas, felt the program had nothing to offer for them except criticism from constituents for spending money for what they felt to be basically Detroit-area improvements. The program is actually intended for the entire state.

The tax increases will result in a higher cost of automobile operation, but they will also facilitate the much-needed development of an alternative to gas-guzzling cars: mass transit.

The need for mass transit is obvious. Unfortunately, plans have been held up for years while legislators play politics and stubbornly refuse to appropriate the necessary sums.

Michigan still lacks a comprehensive mass transit system. It is agreed the need is there, but legislators are afraid to give the necessary money. They appropriate just enough to give lip service to the cause, yet still an inadequate amount to make the systems successful. Then they sit back and say the systems cannot work because their insufficient half-scale attempts have failed to produce full-scale results.

Not until a full-scale effort is made will positive results be shown. The bill passed Tuesday will assist in the program, but a great need for funding still exists.

Third world ignorance

Commander Zero flies from Panama to Nicaragua, holds the entire Senate hostage and is granted all his demands. The Associated Press and United Press International both declare Zero a terrorist guerrilla, yet thousands of Nicaraguans line the streets and cheer his departure.

Khomeini, the spiritual leader of Islamic Iran, is holed up in neighboring Iraq. Driven there by the Shah of Iran's soldiers, he is labeled by the Shah and the Western press as a fanatical extremist opposed to democracy. Yet to read any of Khomeini's words one finds he is morally opposed to pornography and liquor — not democracy.

An American video journalist interviews a leader of SWAPO, the South West African Peoples Army, and gets right to the meat of the issue, "Will you seek military assistance from the Soviet Union?"

The leader replies cautiously, knowing full well what the question means to American audiences, "We will gratefully accept assistance from whoever understands why we struggle."

The reporter goes for the kill: "You mean even the Russians?" The leader looks at him with exasperation and disgust. "Yes, if we have to we will. We do not want to, but if that is what it will take for us to triumph, we will — without reservation."

Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay — all proclaim to have democracies, yet Amnesty International reports thousands of political prisoners a year. Not just detention, but cattle prods to the genitals, starvation, psychological torture, maybe even bamboo shoots under the fingernails. Who knows?

Some of us try to know, or at least try to find out. But where does one go to really know? Definitely not to any American newsmagazine or newspaper. It is not that we necessarily believe everything that comes over our AP and UPI wires, but what else do we have to go on?

We try to be skeptical when Iranian stories come over the wire, we try to be skeptical when reports from Zaire come in, but what can we do? If we did believe the news was slanted or insufficient, would that be enough to decide not to print the report? Is half news better than no news at all? We have always opted for half news or slanted news over no news for the simple reason that we have no choice, and even more important, we can't be sure that it has been slanted — it is only a gut reaction.

To many paranoids, there is no doubt — the news is all lies designed to perpetuate the capitalist imperialist conspiracy and that is that. While many of us may be a bit paranoid, it has not yet come to that. But still, it is obvious that there is more going on than we are told.

It doesn't have to be. Here at this University resides the greatest wealth of information on the Third World in the world — except for maybe the United Nations.

The challenge has been issued: What the hell is going on in your home countries? We realize that many foreign students are here at the discretion of their governments. We realize that if it weren't for these governments many wouldn't have an opportunity to better themselves. But that is no excuse for remaining silent.

Foreign students: When repression exists in your native countries and you are aware of it and continue to remain silent, you legitimize that repression. Not only do you have an obligation to the people of your homes, you have an obligation to us — misinformed Americans. For better or worse, we are citizens of the most powerful nation on earth. Eventually we will run this country (or at least rise to some position of authority). What kind of job can we do when we don't even know what is going on?

The challenge is simple: Make us aware, force us to accept reality, dispel the simple message we are given that the world is being overrun by "communists," help us put our wire service stories in perspective. We guarantee that significant information will be printed on this page. And we guarantee — if the situation warrants it — that the source of this information will remain confidential.

We understand that most students simply want to go back to their respective countries and lead unharassed, productive lives. But really, what kind of life is that? We want to help, but we can't do it alone.

BRUCE GUTHRIE

Is there any life out there?

When I was in high school, I had to rewrite an article for the school paper on changes being proposed for the library. Libraries are pretty bland things to write about most any time. Since our library only had one room, there weren't too many newsworthy changes that could be made anyway so this article before me was deathly dull. Having worked at the library and being familiar with it, I felt qualified to add bits of semi-interesting trivia to the story.

Hail the gods of laminated plastic

Yesterday I participated in the other American Autumnal ritual (other than football and the harvest), Registration.

Shepherded with thousands of the hopeful, I walked mesmerized from table to table, guided by acolytes chanting, "Fill this out." "That course is closed." "On campus or off campus?" I was overwhelmed, drawn past racquetball shrines from great hall to great hall where other smiling attendants assisted those choosing, signing, proceeding, paying.

Those of us with the necessary devotion and piety were able to achieve a spiritual awareness that lifted our souls as we were awarded the symbol of the order: a laminated near likeness of the person who had begun Registration, the person now transformed and given new identity with a card to prove it.

Some did not survive the rigors. One girl failed. She shrieked, crushed a ball point pen in her hands, then wept because she was not worthy, because her cards were sinfully incorrect; she could not register, she could not gain a permit to park her car on campus.

Thankful after leaving the Men's Intramural Building, I knelt in the parking lot, oblivious to passing stars, clutching sheets describing the infinite yet personal meaning of the Jogging Club, Meditative Tennis, Hari Krishna, the Born Again Club, the Young Republicans, Existentialist Disco; I knelt and thanked God and The Registrar for giving direction to my life, when, before Registration, my uninspired goal had been merely one evening course, on Thursday.

'Blood Secrets' of an MSU grad

BLOOD SECRETS

By Craig Jones
Harper & Row
$8.95Reviewed by
DAVE DIMARTINO

Craig Jones' novel, his first, is noteworthy for three reasons.

First, it is one of few "Harper Finds," a status which Harper & Row describes as being by an author "whose work is so fresh and original, whose future as a writer seems so assured, that they (Harper & Row) believe the book should be singled out for special attention." Thus the book joins such past finds as Betty Smith's A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, Margaret Leech's Reverie in Washington, and John Cheever's The Wapshot Chronicle.

Secondly, and certainly of more local interest, Jones himself is an MSU graduate who received a bachelor of arts degree in English here during the mid-60's. According to his press bio, Jones was raised in Ionia until turning 16, at which point he and his family relocated in Lansing. After receiving his master's degree in English in New York in 1968, he began teaching creative writing there and, at present, he is on leave of absence working on a play and a new novel.

And finally, perhaps of greatest interest, Jones has set his novel in his own college environment. Though never directly stated, Blood Secrets is in fact set here at MSU. The main characters are both MSU graduates, one working on campus as an instructor, the other as a teacher at a nearby high school.

Blood Secrets is an extremely well written account of a relationship between a man and a woman who meet at college, become lovers and eventually marry and raise a daughter. On the surface a relatively simple story with an unusual concluding twist, the novel is deceptively deep, operating on several levels of human psychology. Indeed, "secrets" is a key word here; the dictionary definition, "kept from knowledge or view," describes what becomes Blood Secrets' main theme. A secondary theme, that of trust, sets up the novel's main conflict — how much can be shared between two people, how deep can intimacy extend in a relationship before trust is replaced by alienation and, eventually, fear?

Immediately, Jones captures the reader's interest by letting the narrator, Irene, mention her status as defendant in a murder trial. Who was murdered and why are left unrevealed until the book's climax, thereby injecting a tension that operates throughout the entire book. The first few pages recount Irene's meeting with Frank, an awkward, mysterious type whom Irene is immediately attracted to simply because he appears totally disinterested in her. Gloria, Irene's classmate and best friend, refers to Frank as "the weirdo" who lives in her apartment building; both she and Irene's parents see little but trouble and curiosity in Irene's un-died pursuit of the unwilling Frank.

Eventually Frank reveals that his initial coldness to Irene's advances was merely a defense mechanism; the physically insecure Frank finds it hard to believe that someone like Irene — a witty, beautiful and sophisticated English grad student — might find him literature.

Like all truly fine books, Blood Secrets is remembered long after it is read, if not for its unique storyline then for the elements of doubt and the ultimate fragility of the relationships it involves. Because it works and works well, the book is successful on levels that very attractive. Eventually the odd-ball pairing culminates in marriage, and soon after, a very spoiled daughter, Regina.

On the surface a relatively simple story with an unusual concluding twist, the novel is deceptively deep, operating on several levels of human psychology.

The mysteries in Blood Secrets are mostly Frank's; he is reluctant to speak of his family, and when prodded by the naturally curious Irene, is almost viciously blunt in his refusal to speak of them. Only a few scattered references and remarks by Frank — such as "I hate people who just breed" — indicate Frank's relationship and depth of feeling toward his relatives.

Blood Secrets success is due for the most part in its ability to work on several levels simultaneously. On the surface, it is a tightly woven suspense tale; underneath the storyline there is an even deeper recounting of human relationships, of every man and wife and the secrets that are common to them both; finally, it is a case study of truly excellent writing. In speaking through his narrator Irene, Jones constructs an admirably complete character. His writing style is very much in keeping with what might be expected from a character such as Irene; the gloom and ultimate negativism of the tale make it all the more remarkable a piece of few novelists can ever hope to reach. Considering its status as Jones' first novel, one can only look forward to what's due from him in the future.

Stars come out for Logan

MOVIE STARS, REAL PEOPLE AND ME
By Joshua Logan
Dell Publishing Co.
$9.95
Reviewed by ANNE MARIE BIONDO

Movie stars have long been thought of as mystical figures who live untouchable lives far off in their own private heavens.

Joshua Logan, an accomplished Broadway and Hollywood director, took it upon himself to shatter this myth and bring the stars back to earth in his book Movie Stars, Real People and Me.

He fails in an effort to tell the world that movie stars are in fact real people like you and me. Instead Logan seems to be saying that he is as famous as the stars he writes about.

In each behind-the-scenes anecdote, Logan apparently is trying to bring the reader closer to the star by sharing a secret about that person which is exclusive to him. In some instances he succeeds, but for the most part the reader is bound to reply after reading a chapter: "I guess you had to be there."

Logan opens his book with a

short story describing the peculiar personality of the late Jack Warner. At a distinguished dinner party given by Warner for the Princess of Liechtenstein, Warner attempted to tell a funny story but the humor failed when he bleeped out the nasty but necessary words out of respect for the princess.

"Finally," Logan writes, "Jack, squirming in utter agony at having failed, barked out in a very loud voice, 'The trouble with that goddamned story is that you just gotta use the word 'piss.'"

Logan directed such plays and movies as Annie Get Your Gun, Mister Roberts, South Pacific, Picnic, Bus Stop, Sayonara, Fanny, Mr. President, Camelot, and Paint Your Wagon, and worked with such stars as Kim Novak, Marlon Brando, Mel Brooks, Bette Davis, Clint Eastwood and Marilyn Monroe. He devotes 24 earnest chapters to his favorites.

Of Logan's personal recollections of the stars and professionals he encountered in his career, the one that he expressed as special — the kind of special that is found rarely if at all in one's lifetime — is his recollection of Marilyn Monroe. Logan wrote not of a goddess or of an angel, but of a person — a uniquely talented person — who, when given the freedom to act what she felt, and was not inhibited by the shallow commands of directors of the technical impossibilities of cameras, did great things.

He also directed Kim Novak, Jane Fonda and Jack Nicholson early in their careers. He speaks affectionately of each explaining that they helped lift him through some of his "low spots."

About three-fourths of the 350 pages are dedicated to the "movie stars and real people." In the remainder of the book Logan writes about himself, his wife and their two children.

Logan is a manic depressive. "It's not just an illness; it is like a ride on the giant swing at Coney Island," he writes. "It swoops its victims from low to high without warning — from inky black depression where life is all hopelessness and despair into a wild state past happiness and joy of life to the upper regions of their irresponsibility."

But Logan is under control now. A chemical salt named lithium carbonate, made from a white clay from the earth, has saved him. Logan visits his doctor monthly to check the level of lithium in his blood. Then he takes his white clay capsules according to his needs.

Although some doctors have told him that manic depression is inherited, Logan also suspects that the illness is prevalent in "overachievers." "Was that why I was able to do so much in such a short time?" he asks philosophically at the close of his book.

Paperbacks: 'Heartstone', Francis

HEARTSTONE by Phillip Margolin (Pocket 80945-8, $1.95): This book carries on its cover a blurb by Dorothy Uhnak, author of The Investigation, calling Margolin's novel "the classic 'page-turner.'" A bit much, actually, though Heartstone is a well-written, relatively intricate story. A mystery of sorts, the story lies in the framework of a seven-year-old unsolved murder case that, through the intervention of a tramp named Willie Heartstone, is finally solved. Framed by a modern-day prologue and epilogue, the bulk of the book is set in the '60s and deals with a murder and its resulting trial. The book is at times a little too improbable: the murder case's main witness is an emotionally-disturbed young woman who is hypnotized by investigators, eventually giving the testimony she thinks her questioners would like to hear. While characterization is at times weak, the book's plot manages to hold the reader's interest throughout. Heartstone's well-structured plot carries it through.

IN THE FRAME by Dick Francis (Pocket

81883-X, $1.95): Francis is an excellent British mystery writer who was in fact a jockey before turning to writing as a career. Interestingly, each of his books deal in some way with horses; in this case, the protagonist is an artist who deals with an Australian ring of thieves, murderers and arsonists. Based in an Australian group of art galleries, the criminals paint forgeries, sell them, and then steal them back. The paintings, as is Francis' way, are of horses — and that's the setting for the book, in which artist Charles Todd jets halfway around the world in pursuit of the criminals.

Very well written, In The Frame occasionally lacks suspense due to the criminals' relative invisibility through most of the book. Yet to its credit, the book maintains reader interest constantly; Francis' characterizations are very well done and involving, and the book is generally fine reading. Not only for Francis fans, or mystery fans for that matter, the book is a fine addition to Francis' catalog.

'Take Off': puns and more

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

It goes without saying that there are many inherent differences between mainstream feature films and porn movies. These differences — in audience appeal, intent, and budget, especially — effectively prevent fair comparisons between the two genres and necessitate separate sets of critical standards. In other words, for a porn film to be reviewed fairly, it has to be judged in relation to the other films in that genre.

This being the case, I won't hesitate to say that Take Off is one hell of a fine movie. It easily eclipses any other porn film I have ever viewed, and will probably set the standards by which future porn films will be judged.

Where most exploitation films are built on a pretense, Take Off has a for real plot. It is based loosely on Oscar Wilde's Picture of Dorian Gray — with a few imaginative twists, of course. The story follows the sexual adventures of one Darren Blue, played by Wade Nichols, who was filmed flagrante delicto by his kinky, rich lover during the 1920's. After seeing for the first time how beautiful he is on film, Blue takes a vow never to grow old. From that point on his celluloid image does the aging, allowing Blue to maintain his youthful vigor through the next five decades of sexual encounters.

It may sound contrived, but it works — largely on the strength of the script written by producer-director Armand Weston and D. Price. Both writers must be true old film buffs, because as the plot develops they manage to pay tongue-in-cheek homage to all the greats of Hollywood mythology. As Blue moves through time he alternately looks like Valentino, Cagney, Bogart, and James Dean, while movie allusions turn up left and right in both the scenes and dialogue.

Surreal and absurd touches abound in Take Off, along with an amazing number of bad puns. For example, in one scene Blue is shown in his Bogart-Brian Ferry outfit, lying back on his bed and reading a Dashiell Hammet novel. Better than this, even, is the scene where the James Dean lookalike is trying to convince a young beauty to perform oral sex on him while astride his cycle. When the girl protests that "good girls don't do that," he rolls his eyes back and says wistfully, "Natalie would." The movie is literally peppered with lines like this, and even the ones that fall flat are better than what passes for dialogue in most hard-core porn.

The need to advance the plot necessarily cuts down on the amount of onscreen sex, but I found that this fact tended to make the movie more, rather than less, enjoyable. After the first scene or so most porn films tend to look more like lessons in geometry and applied hydraulics, with huge intersecting planes of abstract flesh and wide-angle panoramas of white and brown and pink. Take Off's sex scenes, while fewer in number, tended to be much more erotic.

A lot of the credit for this must go to the performers, who looked as if they cared about and enjoyed what they were doing. Georgina Spelvin, Leslie Hovee and Annette Haven have all starred in several major porn films, and so naturally turned in performances far better than could be expected from $100-a-film 'actresses.' And to be totally unsexist I should point out that the main characters of both sexes were surprisingly good looking.

As an extra bonus, the movie's soundtrack was composed and performed by Elephant's Memory, who were John Lennon's band on his Sometime in New York City album and put out several albums of their own. They do an admirable job of coordinating the music to the decade in question — especially for the '50's, '60's, and '70's, where their rock background is put to good use.

Take Off is far from being a great — or even good — movie, but its position as great porn is unassailable. In fact, it has probably spoiled me, because now I won't be too ready to see run-of-the-mill porn for a while. On the other hand, I'm sort of glad. If all porn movies were as well done as Take Off, chances are I would become thoroughly addicted.

"Take Off" is being shown on campus this week by the Beal Film Group.

Galumphing Gourmet

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first half of a two-part guide to restaurants in East Lansing. The second half will appear on tomorrow's Entertainment page.

For the hungry student who is sick of dorm food and who doesn't care to waste his or her own precious time trying to figure out how to boil water, East Lansing teems with dozens of restaurants. These vary widely from fast-food franchises to formidable hotshot gourmet palaces that feature steak dinner specials at $9.95 a throw. Here are some of the more interesting ones:

Classification I. Fast Food.

Let's get this out of the way fast. The East Lansing boasts three McDonald's, plus Taco Bell, Burger King, Arby's, Arthur Treacher's, Olga's, Famous Recipe Fried Chicken, etc. — These are homogenized products of American capitalism which, thanks to Madison Avenue and the miracles of 1970s franchise operation, you have probably experienced already. So no need for details here, except to say that the food at Olga's tends to be especially bland and overpriced.

Classification II. Pizzas, Subs, And Other Monstrosities.

Giovanni's (514 Michigan) has nice big rich thick pizzas, but you'll have to take them home to eat them for the joint has no eating space; it's strictly take-out.

For an unusual pizza, try Bell's at either 225 M.A.C. Ave. or 1135 E. Grand River Ave. Their "Greek Pizza" is a touch greasy but tasty, and light years from what you'll get in most other places. Their grinders (submarines) are also good. Domino's and Sir Pizza (which does not deliver), at 966 Trowbridge Road and 122 W. Harrison Road respectively, put out good products in the conventional vein. For just pizza, Little Caesar's is usually economical, what with their frequent coupon specials and all. The others (Mr. Tony's, Campus Pizza, and Mr. D's) are largely average. Galley Sub at 2850 E. Grand River Ave. is cheap.

Classification III. Medium-Priced Eats.

The Bagel-Fragel Factory, at 521 E. Grand River Ave., features good sandwiches on a wide variety of good bagels. Or you can get the bagels plain, for 17 cents each. The food at the Peanut Barrel next door (same address) is mediocre, except for the chili — which isn't bad, if you get it to go (the portion is larger that way).

Both Dooley's (131 Albert St.) and the Alle-Ey (220 M.A.C. Ave.) are thought of in this town as primarily bars, which is just as well; their food is abysmal. Lizard's (224 Abbott Road) and Beggar's Banquet (218 Abbott Road), on the other hand, are both pretty decent. The salad bar at Lizard's is not to be topped, and Beggar's has a diverse menu featuring such superb stuff as trout with cream sauce, pork Sylvester, and chicken Kiev. They also serve the best chili in town for $1 a bowl; its Richter scale rating is posted daily. The Varsity Inn (1227 E. Grand River Ave.) and the Silver Dollar (3411 E. Michigan Ave.) are about average restaurants.

Moon's (231 M.A.C. Ave.) is notable for its specials: fish and chips with a draft for 99 cents on Tuesdays after 5 p.m., and 25-cent hot dogs on Mondays and Wednesdays. Olde World (221 M.A.C. Ave.) and Hobbie's (930 Trowbridge Road) both have excellent sandwiches. The America's Cup features an antiseptic interior and overpriced sandwiches.

Of the three places in East Lansing which serve Italian cuisine, the much-overlooked Gino's Roma (254 W. Grand River Ave.) is probably the best. Matteo's (136 W. Grand River Ave.), however, features an all-you-can-eat dinner buffet Monday through Friday for $2.75. Buono Appetito is very economical. A short drive into Lansing, however, brings one to Emil's East (2022 E. Michigan Ave.), which definitely outdoes the three just mentioned; and their Tuesday night all-you-can-eat spaghetti special is just $1.75.

In a class of its own is the Small Planet (225 Ann St.), which serves delicious entrees and soups: all meatless. El Aztec is another fine eating place; its tacos cost only a few cents more than the ones at Taco Bell, but are in an entirely different world. At El Aztec you can fill up on good Mexican food very cheaply.

The Red Lobster (3130 E. Saginaw St.) has economical seafood. The Spaghetti Tree (220 S. Howard St.) has mediocre spaghetti. Uncle John's Pancake House (2820 E. Grand River Ave.) has fabulous pancakes; the variety is wide. — On Wednesday nights, all the pancakes you can eat cost only 89¢, a real bargain if you're hungry.

The Coral Gables, (2838 E. Grand River Ave.) has good pizza and an assortment of dinner specials in the $3-$4 range every day except Friday.

Sears starting new radio dramas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rumors that network radio drama is dead proved a bit exaggerated when the CBS Radio Mystery Theater began nearly five years ago. Now, another new ear series will be heard from.

It's the Sears Radio Theater, a one-hour, Monday-through-Friday collection of Westerns, other adventures, romances, Gothic horror tales and comedies. It'll start Feb. 5 on the CBS Radio network.

Its installment as a nightly feature is being announced today by Sam Cook Digges, president of that network, at its annual affiliates convention being held this year in Phoenix, Ariz.

Unlike Mystery, made in New York and hosted by actor E. G. Marshall, the new work comes from HOLLYWOOD. Various stars will host it each night. Vincent Price and Andy Griffith are already signed up.

CBS says work on the show has begun here. The man in charge is Elliot Lewis, a veteran radio actor and producer.

Young folks haven't heard of him, but he was heard in radio's heyday as, to cite one character, Frankie Remley, Phil Harris' wisecracking guitarist on a variety series called The Fitch Bandwagon.

The network's Mystery theater which celebrates its fifth year on the air next January, currently is heard on 230 stations, most of them CBS affiliates, the network says.

Genya Ravan's street-tough return

BY BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

Phil Spector would have loved Genya Ravan during the early '60s, and he probably would have incorporated her into one of his many teen dreams. Ravan stands with Patti Smith as a 1970s descendant of the tough-yet-angelic, "good bad but no evil" Ronnie Spector/Shangri-Las school of rock, a school of street-oriented women performers who could rock with the best of them in the male dominated world of rock 'n' roll.

On Urban Desire (20th Century Fox T-562), her first solo album in several years, Ravan demonstrates that she definitely isn't one of the sweet little "rock" girls moaning about lost love and self pity on the radio today, something which just may hinder her chances at commercial accessibility. As the title of the LP suggests, Urban Desire deals with two of rock's major obsessions — street life and sex.

During the late '60s and early '70s, Ravan was lead vocalist with Ten Wheel Drive, a New York City brass-oriented band. Her work with TWD and her solo efforts following the band's demise received little if any attention. Prior to TWD, Ravan (whose real name is Goldie Zelkowitz), had formed Goldie

& the Gingerbreads, one of NYC's first all-female punk bands. Last year, she gained a great deal of media attention, and re-entered the limelight, by producing the Dead Boys' debut Young, Loud & Snotty LP. As impressive as her background may be, her previous work is mediocre compared to the new LP.

Ravan's voice often sounds reminiscent of Janis Joplin, and sometimes her style brings to ant, ranking right up there with some of the best keyboard players in rock history.

A fine example of both singer and band is "Jerry's Pigeons," the LP's opening track. The number is a tribute-of-sorts to Phil Spector, and the band succeeds exceptionally well in creating the Spector wall of sound. When Ravan sings "I met him on a Sunday and my heart stood still/There's a moon out tonight/This is dedicated to the one I love/Remember, baby?" at the song's conclusion, you really do remember, and are reminded of exactly where she's coming from. The song is close enough to "Be My Baby" to thrill the listener, and that song is probably the closest we'll ever come to hearing what heaven must be all about.

In the same vein, Ravan turns in a splendid cover of Motown's "Back In My Arms Again," which is in its own way every bit as great as the Supremes' original. The song, which features Ivan Kral from Patti Smith's band on backing vocals, would make a perfect single. While on the subject of guest artists, street king Lou Reed puts in an appearance on "Aye Colorado," in which he portrays a Puerto Rican street gang punk. When Reed and Ravan sing to each other, and then harmonize on the chorus — Lou, naturally, off key — the effect is pure magic.

When I say I'm in love, you best believe I'm in love, L.U.V., and I'm totally in LOVE with the first side of this LP. Unfortunately, though it is by no means bad, I'm a little less enthusiastic about side two. With the exception of a terrific cover of John Cale's "Darling, I Need You" and the slow tempo "Shadowboxing," the second side is composed of mostly heavy metal like hard rock. It's better than Heart and much, much better than the techno-flash we're getting from Ravan's macho counterparts. However, it somewhat pales beside the collective masterpiece of the first side.

As Reverend Charles Young pointed out in Rolling Stone, Ravan's major danger is that her harder rock side usually appeals to 14-year-old adolescents fond of bands that scream about what he labeled "penile prowess." Still, there is a definite audience for both sides of the LP, and there's always the first side plus the Cale cover to appease rock fanatics like myself.

Word has it that Ravan might be appearing at a local bar in the near future, and, if Urban Desire is any indication, it promises to be an excellent show.

Rollins, Tyner, Carter embark on U.S. tour

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sonny Rollins is a Virgo and that, he says, makes him a "perfectionist" who "wants everything to come out just so."

The astrological sign poses potential creative problems for the New York-born tenor saxophonist, who has played jazz with such greats as Miles Davis, John Coltrane and Max Roach.

"When you're dealing with spontaneous creations, after you listen back to something, you say, 'Well, I could have done this better. I could have done that better,'" Rollins sighed.

Early in his career, stuffed into a cramped apartment and bowing to the needs of a pregnant neighbor who said she needed sleep, Rollins — ever striving to perfect his art — took to practicing on a footpath of the Williamsburg Bridge, which connects Brooklyn and Manhattan.

But now, Rollins, pianist McCoy Tyner, bassist Ron Carter and drummer Al Foster are visiting more conventional concert settings in a bundle of cities as members of a quartet whose individual strength and combined force may be unparalleled in recent jazz history.

On Sept. 16, the group opened a tour that takes them to such cities as Seattle, San Francisco, Denver, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Chicago, and Boston — winding up Oct. 29 in Philadelphia, Tyner's birth place.

Along the way are stops Oct. 21 at the Beacon Theater in

New York — Rollins' home turf — and Oct. 14 at the Royal Oak Theater in Detroit, where Carter was born 41 years ago.

In all, the tour includes concerts in 19 cities.

The musicians conceded the nationwide crisscross was conceived by Milestone Records to make them more visible and advertise their newest releases. Still, the trip brings back nostalgic moments.

"I worked with Sonny for about 10 or 12 weeks in the late '60s in a trio," Carter said of Rollins. "I've made McCoy's last five or six records. And Al Foster and I worked together for Horace Silver's last five or six records."

Settling his lanky frame into an armchair, Carter, also a one-time Miles Davis sideman, said, "I've played with them all at one time or another."

For Tyner — once at the nucleus of saxophonist Coltrane's revolutionary jazz band — there were similar memories. "Ron's done a lot of recording with me," he said. "I just did a thing in Japan which was a live concert, and we had a night of my music and he had a night of his music. He's been doing a few things with me off-and-on."

Tyner, 39, recalled that the first time he worked with Rollins "was at the age of 18 in Max Roach's group."

Rollins, 49, thought about the two intervening decades and laughed: "I was pretty young, myself."

Jazz aficionados caught a brief preview of the group — with drummer Roach subbing for Foster — at the tribute to the Newport Jazz Festival held

June 18 on the White House lawn. Ron Carter came face-to-face with another Carter — Jimmy — and the quartet played "Sonnyum for Two."

Idleness bothers MSU quarterback Smith; Vaughn fills the void

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

For the past two seasons, Eddie Smith has been re-writing the MSU passing records as the Spartans' starting quarterback.

This year, Smith's last at MSU, was supposed to be a special year for him. With the Spartans riding a five game winning streak from last season and first class schedule on tap, the senior from Hallandale, Fla., thought that he and his teammates could really make a name for themselves.

Well, those plans, at least for himself, are now in limbo while he recovers from a broken finger on his throwing hand which occurred two weeks ago in MSU's opening game against Purdue.

No one, including Smith, is quite sure when he will be able to return to action. At his press conference on Monday, coach Darryl Rogers said he will wait until Thursday before he makes any decision on what quarterbacks will make the trip to Los Angeles for Friday night's game with Southern California.

"I just don't know," Smith said. "It would be more satisfying for me if I knew I could play Friday against USC."

"It's tough not playing. It's tough watching from the sidelines in your street clothes." On the play that Smith got hurt, he rolled right looking for a receiver and when no one could get open, he tucked the ball in and ran for the endzone. He got the three yards he needed for a touchdown, but he also got a quick exit from the game.

"As soon as I hit the ground I felt pain," Smith said. "I tried to get to the sidelines as quick as I could to see the doctor, but everyone was jumping on me. . . . At least it was a touchdown."

"It's over and there's nothing you can do about it."

All Smith can do now is get his hand back to the point where he can start taking snaps again. Once he can do that, he feels that he will be ready to play.

"It's (the layoff) not affecting me too much," Smith said. "I'm trying to keep sharp reading the defenses and I'm trying to keep mentally sharp."

"With the experience I have starting the last two years, I think I could step right in (once his hand heals)."

While Smith has been on the sidelines, his position has been filled by sophomore Bert Vaughn.

"I've gained an awful lot getting to play and not just watching," Vaughn said.

Vaughn completed 12 passes in 21 attempts in the last three quarters against Purdue, but he couldn't lead the team like Smith could.

ADDING SCORING PUNCH, TOO

Nielsen now with soccer team

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

When MSU's all-time leading football scorer, placekicker Hans Nielsen, used up his four years of eligibility last year, it looked like Spartan fans would never get to see him in action again.

But after being cut by the Atlanta Falcons, the 25-year-old from Vejle, Denmark, is back playing another role in MSU athletics.

This time it's for the soccer team where he has scored both of MSU's goals during their opening back-to-back, 1-0 victories.

The Spartans will attempt to sweep their three game home stand today at 3:30 against Calvin. MSU defeated the Knights 1-0 in overtime last year. Last season Calvin was 9-4-1.

Though he has been helping the Spartans solve their scoring problems, Nielsen hasn't been totally satisfied with his play.

"I've had many chances to score and missed. Therefore, I'm not satisfied," Nielsen said. "I guess my main responsibility is to score goals, but I've been missing a lot of chances."

"The goal that I scored against Ferris State could have been done by anybody," Scott Campbell gave me a good pass and the goalie ran out when he shouldn't have. It was just a little bit of luck."

While he lived in Denmark, Nielsen played soccer for 11 years, but he has not played since he's been in East Lansing.

"I didn't play big time or anything like that in Denmark, but just because everybody else there played soccer," Nielsen said.

Nielsen feels being away from soccer for four years has hampered his play.

"I think I was better before I came to MSU," Nielsen said.

"I haven't had much game experience lately. I'm not used to practicing with the round thing (the soccer ball) and using the right foot as well as the left foot."

Nevertheless, Nielsen does enjoy playing under coach Joe Baum while he uses this term to complete his degree in biological science.

"I'm learning a lot right now," Nielsen said. "Joe's an excellent coach and we have a lot of good players that give me good passes. We have a good hustling team. If we start scoring according to our potential, then we'll be in real good shape."

Nielsen is also finding himself in a different atmosphere with soccer. It's the game situation that Nielsen finds to be the biggest difference from football.

"In soccer, the game is so spontaneous that you have to be alert all the time," Nielsen said. "I used to get nervous before the football games, but it seemed to disappear when the game started. I guess it's because I worked at it so much."

Nielsen tried to make the Atlanta Falcons team as a free agent, but the NFL team decided to stick with last year's kicker, Fred Steinfort.

"They wanted someone with game experience, but they never really gave me a fair chance in the exhibition games," Nielsen said. "It's strange being so close to football for four years and then being out so quickly."

During the three months that Nielsen worked out in preparing for his try-out, he felt he had seen improvement. He will give another shot at the pros next year.

"I think I have improved and I feel better about my kicking," Nielsen said. "I'm going to keep on trying to make the pros until I feel I have been really beaten. I just want to work at my kicking and get better. I don't have anything to lose by doing it."

Right now, however, Nielsen is concentrating on his soccer game. If he and his linemates start getting the ball in the net more often, Nielsen can finish his one year stint of soccer as a winner just like his Spartan career ended in football last year.

State News Bunny Moison

After receiving a pass from teammate Bruce Wilden, Hans Nielsen slips the ball into the net for the only goal of the game against Hope College Saturday. Nielsen has scored both Spartan goals this season.

"It seems like there are two things in life—a job that you really like or one where you make money. If the day comes when the alarm goes off and I don't want to get up, then it'll be time to get another job."

—Dennis Mayer, new assistant director of men's intramurals.

Mayer enthused with position

By CHERYL FISH
State News Sports Writer

As the new assistant director of the MSU men's intramural department, Dennis Mayer has returned to the source of what he calls "the finest IM program in the entire country."

Mayer obtained his master's degree here, where he learned many of the ideas, procedures and methods used to run an organized and extensive program. He then became director of IM programs at Northern Michigan University, where he was in charge of everything, from equipment to schedule planning.

"I learned a lot of everything from that job," Mayer recalled. "It taught me many responsibilities and I feel I matured from it. Now I feel confident that I can handle my job here," he added. The program he set up at NMU now resembles the one at MSU.

The main difference between working at Northern and MSU is the size of the student participation. This term, 180 men's teams have already signed up for touch football—that's more than there were in the three years Mayer worked at Northern.

Mayer, who has officiated football and basketball for many years, is in charge of officials for IM games, as well as men's competitive programs and scheduling. In this initial year, he plans to "keep my mouth shut and eyes and ears open."

"Next year I'll have a better feel of the program and I can make better decisions," he said.

Working closely with the rest of the IM staff, Mayer credits IM Director Frank Beeman and Associate Director Larry Sierra for helping him learn the procedures.

A sports lover himself, Mayer feels fortunate to be working in an atmosphere he enjoys.

"It seems like there are two things in life—a job that you really like or one where you make money. If the day comes when the alarm goes off and I don't want to get up, then it'll be time to get another job."

Mayer gets pleasure from keeping in touch with students, something that his job allows. He has an open door policy, and encourages anyone with questions to come in.

"We need the feedback so that we know what the students want," he said. "It's important that they let us know how they feel about things."

Right now, Mayer is more than pleased with the response to IM sports programs and facilities. "We're happy with the great awareness on the part of the student body. Hopefully, we'll get the new IM facilities so we can make our programs even better," he said. "The new IM building would give added space both indoors and out, and with the increased participation we have, it is highly anticipated," he added.

If Mayer is enthusiastic with the job so far, others feel the same way about him.

"He's a hard worker and has an easy rapport with people on all levels—whether they are students or deans," said Beeman. "His sincerity comes through immediately, and it's great to have someone who has been through the MSU system. We have the confidence in him."

Mayer is replacing Tome Vanderweele, who left the IM Department to pursue his interest in acting.

Vaughn leads MSU; Smith recovers

Last week against Syracuse, though, Vaughn played like an experienced quarterback and led the Spartans to their 49-21 ramp over the Orangemen. He completed nine passes in 19 attempts for 183 yards and two touchdowns.

"He's still got a long way to go and he needs work," Rogers said. "But he's got a lot of potential. His temperament and awareness are very good for a football player."

Rogers said that when Smith is healthy, he is MSU's starting quarterback, so while Smith is in limbo about playing, Vaughn is in limbo about being the starting quarterback.

"I'd like to play every play," Vaughn said. "But Eddie knows more of what's going on than I do."

"Eddie deserves to play, I've got to wait my turn."

As of Monday, though, Vaughn was still the number one quarterback so he had to start preparing himself for USC.

"We're going out there and playing the top people," Vaughn said. "We can show other people that we are a top team. We can get some recognition."

"We can do it. Needless to say, we're going to have to play our best. Four quarters and not just a half."

IM Notes

Outdoor pool hours at the Men's IM Building are (weather permitting): Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

The indoor pool at the Men's IM Building will be closed until Monday, Oct. 2, for repairs. Once opened, the pool hours will be: Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday, 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. (family swim); Saturday and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Weather permitting, indoor pool hours will be transferred to the outdoor pool until the indoor pool opens.

Early Bird Swim at the Women's IM indoor pool will be Monday through Friday, 6:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. (co-rec). When the Men's IM pool is opened, Early Bird Swim will be held 6:30 a.m. to 8 a.m.

The Men's IM indoor pool will be closed on the days of home football games and swim meets.

Second Lion player walks off NFL club

PONTIAC (UPI) — Veteran center Mike Montler, the only experienced player on Coach Monte Clark's offensive line, has become the second member of the Detroit Lions to walk out on the team in two weeks.

Montler, an off-season acquisition from the Denver Broncos, "left during practice Monday," Clark said Tuesday at his weekly press briefing. "I'm not sure what the reason was, I haven't been able to get in touch with him."

Spare defensive end Ernest Price, a six-year veteran, "retired" last week but Clark said he was having second thoughts "once he found out the paychecks stopped." He said the Lions did not want Price back and were trying to trade him.

Wrestling

tryouts set

All people interested in trying out for the MSU wrestling team report to 208 Men's IM Bldg. on Monday, Oct. 2, at 3:30 p.m. All walk-ons are welcome.

Club Sports

The MSU Skiing team will hold its first meeting of the year tonight in 215 Men's IM Bldg. at 7 p.m. All who are interested in competing this season, including veterans, must attend. Fall training will start Monday.

The Spartan Rifle team, varsity and ROTC, will hold its organizational meeting on Monday, Oct. 2, at the rifle range at Demonstration Hall. All University students, with or without competitive shooting experience, are welcome to attend. For further information, contact Captain Leeds, Military Science Dept., at 355-1914.

Spartan Spirits sign-up

Students who were in the Spartan Spirits for the 1977-78 basketball season will have the first chance to join the Spirits this season. All former members interested in joining again should attend an organizational meeting Monday, Oct. 2, at 7 p.m. in the MSU Union, Parlors A,B and C.

Those who would like to join the Spirits as new members for 1978-79 should sign up Thursday, Oct. 5, in 333 MSU Union, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. If more students sign up than there are seats available, a lottery will be conducted the next day. The Spirits are comprised of 150 men and 150 women.

Pilots' radio frequency changes may be one cause of air crash

By JEFFREY MILLS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "Two unusual situations" might have combined to cause Monday's plane collision in San Diego that killed at least 150 persons, the government's chief accident investigator told congress on Tuesday.

Elwood T. Driver, acting chairperson of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the collision occurred as a light aircraft was ascending from a practice instrument approach and a Pacific Southwest Airlines Boeing 727 was landing.

Pilots of both aircraft were switching from one radio frequency to another to communicate with different air traffic control stations.

Driver emphasized that his testimony to a House Government Operations subcommittee was based on very preliminary information about the collision, the worst in U.S. aviation history.

Driver said that even though the weather was good, the pilot of the single-engine Cessna plane was practicing the use of instruments for landing in foul weather. The Cessna was approaching a runway and then pulled up without touching the runway, he said.

Meanwhile, the airliner carrying 135 passengers was coming in for a landing on a different runway, he said.

The two airplanes were communicating with air traffic controllers at both San Diego's Lindbergh Field and the nearby naval facility where controllers guide pilots into their approach. Driver said the two facilities must use different radio frequencies, requiring pilots to shift frequencies between the approach and landing.

Driver noted that the Cessna is a high-wing aircraft "which might have made visual contact with the PSA airliner more difficult."

He said the controller at the naval facility "noticed the two blips coming together." Warnings were issued to both airplanes, but Driver said he does not know if either responded. In San Diego, Bruce Chamber, a spokesperson for the Federal Aviation Administration said both aircraft acknowledged that the other was in sight.

The subcommittee chairperson, Rep. John Burton, D-Calif., said if both airplanes had been on the same frequency, the accident might have been avoided.

Driver said the board favors use of collision avoidance systems designed to prevent mid-air collisions.

A representative of the Air Line Pilots Association testified that the Federal Aviation Administration has delayed requiring such a system even though the technology has been available for many years.

John J. O'Donnell, president of the pilots group, said, "Hundreds of airline passengers have died in midair collisions in the past 20 years due to deficiencies in the present air traffic control system and its dependence on the 'see-and-be-seen' principle."

O'Donnell said the FAA's airline certification "does not insure the highest possible level of safety. Instead, what is attained is the level of safety that the manufacturers can induce the FAA to accept."

The agency which directs air traffic controllers, is dedicated to a ground-based system, but pilots favor systems situated in the cockpits, O'Donnell said.

"The only thing that forces an FAA rule is to kill enough people," he added.

FAA spokesperson Bruce Chambers denied in a telephone interview that the agency was guilty of "foot dragging." He said the FAA is carefully working to eliminate problems with collision warning devices, including a tendency to sound alarms when there is no danger of a collision.

Tobacco company denies cancer link

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Liggett & Myers tobacco company today denied a claim by a health researcher that the company had acknowledged a link between tobacco and cancer in an application for a patent on a new filter.

Milliken

he said. He supports a ballot proposal to give courts authority to deny bail to violent criminals.

On PBB, Milliken said with the "benefit of hindsight," he would have acted differently.

"I might have relied less on the assurance given me by the FDA (Food and Drug Administration)," he said. "I would have worked harder, earlier to lower the tolerance level (of PBB in food) even though FDA levels remain higher today."

Milliken also said he would have "worked more effectively" with the public to explain "steps that were being taken."

"But the important thing now is to look to the future," he urged. "We can all benefit from past experience."

Liggett & Myers applied for the patent in October, citing evidence that mice painted with untreated tobacco developed skin tumors more frequently than those painted with tobacco which had been mixed with certain chemical additives. The additives were contained in the proposed filter.

In their conclusion, L&M researchers wrote that "untreated tobacco produced the earliest and highest incidence of tumors" on the skins of mice in the experiments.

Dr. Dietrich Hoffman, a biochemist and researcher for the American Health Foundation, said that the wording was a significant first for a tobacco company.

Lobby bill passes

Opponents of the amendment said its adoption will ensure Senate rejection of the bill.

Some opponents of the lobby reform bill claimed it is not needed nor demanded by the public.

"I haven't received a single letter from a voter demanding that we have this lobby reform," said Rep. Quincy Hoffman, R-Applegate.

Funding fails

compromise — a four-month appropriation continuing the current policy of providing funds for abortions to Medicaid recipients.

"We simply don't have the time this week to solve the 1978-79 budget and this question," Huffman said. "The first of the month the checks stop."

Last week, the House approved a 12-month budget that included the vetoed anti-abortion language. The Legislature plans to adjourn this week for the fall election campaigns.

Huffman said the partial Medicaid funds keep flowing while giving all parties time to reach an agreement on the abortion issue.

On a 6-5 vote, the committee restored the anti-abortion language to the four-month budget and sent it to the Senate floor.

The abortion issue is one of the few on which Milliken and his Democratic opponent, Sen. William B. Fitzgerald, differ in personal philosophy. Milliken describes himself as pro-choice, while Fitzgerald is opposed to abortions.

One Republican member of the appropriations committee, Sen. Charles O. Zollar, R-Benton Harbor, charged that party politics was a major factor in the committee action.

"This is now a political football that involves peoples' lives whether you're pro or con on the abortion issue," Zollar said.

But Sen. Thomas Guastell, D-Sterling Heights, who proposed the anti-abortion language, said he believes it is wrong to force taxpayers to support welfare abortions.

Trustees grapple with prudence of S. Africa divestiture

They are liable for losses which occur, even though they cannot be blamed directly, except possibly by "an act of God or by public enemies," the legal opinion stated.

Acting on their opinion, Carr and Assistant Vice President for Legal Affairs Byron H.

Higgins submitted a summary of suggestions and guidelines to the board.
Their summary said the policy of noninvestment in corporations doing business in South Africa may be approved only if it is subordinate to the primary responsibility of the board.

The summary defined as a primary responsibility a prudent investment policy which preserves and enhances the funds under its control.

Carr and Higgins also recommended that written advice on the feasibility of their proposal be obtained from a reputable outside investment counselor, an action board members accepted and put into resolution form at their Sept. 22 meeting.

In addition, the board's resolution asks that suggestions concerning divestiture and future investments be put to MSU's current money management firm of Scudder, Stevens and Clark, which is now acting under the March 31 restrictions.

The resolution asks both investment firms if MSU can divest or minimize the University's holding in corporations doing business in South Africa and still maintain a prudently managed portfolio.

The resolution also asks if the University can prudently exclude from the purchase list investments in corporations doing business in South Africa.

If the answer to any of the questions is yes, the resolution asks what then are the appropriate steps to take towards attaining those goals.

Trustee John Bruff, D-Fraser, asked Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, to investigate further, examining divestiture guidelines set forth by Stanford University and the University of Wisconsin.

"We need to know what the policy is of other Big Ten schools towards prudent investment," Bruff said.

"If two stocks are equally good, and 'x' has holdings in South Africa and 'y' doesn't, is there any policy among schools which says what stock should be purchased?"

In outlining its program, Stanford University Vice President for Business and Finance William F. Massy has said, "It is both law and tradition that our endowment funds shall be invested to seek a maximum financial return commensurate with an appropriate level of risk."

"A blanket action taken knowingly in the expectation that it will result directly in a significantly lower total return and higher investment risk appears to be in violation of the spirit if not the letter of the law."

In Wisconsin, the state attorney general informed the University of Wisconsin: "... a company, corporation or other business entity which does significant business in South Africa practices discrimination on the basis of race even though such companies would argue that they do not condone it."

Now the eyes are on MSU. Economists, corporation heads and some board of trustee candidates are saying that divestiture would be the ultimate in economic suicide.

They maintain that divestiture, in reference to South Africa, would hurt rather than help black African workers, and could cause American companies to withdraw thousands of dollars in University directed grants and gifts.

Peace organizations, civil rights groups and self-proclaimed humanists argue that blacks will never be totally "free" to make decisions, good or bad, until American-run corporations pull out of South Africa.

Some, like C. Patric "Lash" Larowe, professor of economics, maintain that the board got itself into this mess, let the whole thing be tossed to the courts and made a test case."

And in the midst of all this chaos sit the board of trustees, a board that made a refreshingly "new" decision back in March but is feeling the tremors of the aftershock. The reverberations are so strong that even the board itself appears split on the issue, as shown at the last board meeting when Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R-East Lansing angrily shouted at the other trustees, "You people just aren't taking this thing seriously!"

Right now the board is committed — verbally, not legally — to its decision to divest. But it could be wading ever so carefully towards the other side of the river.

Signing the letter as "citizens of the Lansing area community," they urged teachers and administration to reassess their differences "before further irreparable damage is done."

Signees urged the two parties to consider several options including calling in state and federal mediators, initiating binding arbitration, calling a 30 day cooling off period and applying injunctive relief.

The letter also called for LCC trustees, the MEA and faculty negotiators to jointly make public all details of their last settlement offer.

"You people just aren't taking this thing seriously!" — Aubrey Radcliffe, R-East Lansing

"We need to know what the policy is of other Big Ten schools toward prudent investment," — John Bruff, D-Fraser

Don't go straight to see this movie!

Because there's going to be nothing straight about a CHEECH & CHONG film.

Every generation has had their own comedy duo: the 30's had Laurel and Hardy, Abbott & Costello broke up the 40's and Martin and Lewis really fractured the 50's.

CHEECH & CHONG have helped make the 70's go "UP IN SMOKE."

CHEECH & CHONG are the comedy team that gave birth to rock comedy and in the process of turning on a whole generation, sold ten million albums, picked up numerous awards, including Cash Box and Billboard's best comedy duo, and a Grammy for their album, "Los Cochinos."

Now it's time for a CHEECH & CHONG movie.

C & C's "UP IN SMOKE" will make you feel very funny.

So don't go straight to see this movie!

SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING MAJORS: TAKE OUT INSURANCE NOW

How about an "insurance" policy that your science or engineering degree will really be used? It would be nice. Especially considering the work you put into such a degree.

The Air Force will use your talents. We have openings for young men and women majoring in selected science and engineering academic fields... like Aeronautical, Aerospace, General and Electrical Engineering, Mathematics, Physics and Computer Technology, and many more.

One way to get into these jobs is through Air Force ROTC. Our AFROTC scholarship can help you financially so you can concentrate on getting your degree. AFROTC is a great opportunity to help yourself through college, and the Air Force is a great opportunity to really use what you learn.

Look into the Air Force ROTC program at your campus. It's good insurance.

Tenant-landlord meet set

Legal rights and responsibilities of tenants and landlords will be discussed at 7 p.m. tonight at a city sponsored workshop.

The East Lansing Human Relations Commission is holding the Tenant and Landlord Workshop at the Valley Court Community Recreation Center, 201 Hillside Court.

"The workshop will be an attempt at explaining the rights and responsibilities of tenants and landlords," said Terry Redford, human relations commissioner.

Mayor George L. Griffiths will introduce a four-member panel which will discuss the legal aspects of rental contracts and security deposits, and how city zoning affects the occupancy of rental units.

After individual panel members make their presentation, a public question answer period will follow.

"If it works out really well we'll do it again," Redford said. "A lot of landlords were very enthusiastic about it."

Recreation survey response small, but still aid to planning

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

Response to an East Lansing survey on residents' recreation needs and desires wasn't overwhelming, but was still helpful, city planners said.

Of the 16,822 recreation commission city staff surveys distributed to city residents and MSU students, 531 were returned and only 470 were usable.

The survey has helped city planners develop a preliminary recreation plan which will be a basic element of a new comprehensive plan, City Planner Robert Owen said.

The comprehensive plan, developed in the 1960s, was intended to project the city's growth through 1980. But "unforeseen problems" have out dated the plan.

Parks and recreation proposals will be a part of the new comprehensive plan the city is developing.

"You always hope for a very solid high percentage of response, but with anything that is not an emotional issue or doesn't hit people in the pocket book — you're not going to get a response," Owen said.

The city's concern for recreational planning is focused mainly on East Lansing residents and off-campus MSU students, Owen said.

The on-campus survey was mainly conducted to see if needs were being met.

"The survey will be helpful in checking and cross-checking other data we have including usability studies of the parks and recreation facilities," Owen said.

Recreation facilities of other cities with the same population as East Lansing's are not comparable to park facilities here, Owen said.

"We probably have four to five times more tennis courts compared to cities with the same population," Owen said. "We're a unique population area, predominantly made up of young people."

The unique population of East Lansing and changing recreational needs would pose problems for long-range planners, Owen said, so the city is going to fulfill leisure needs on a year-to-year basis as the budget allows.

Experimental ATLs fight basic skill deficiencies

By CATHERINE RAFTREY
State News Staff Writer

MSU is becoming increasingly aware of the nation wide problems of lowered reading and writing skills facing today's young people.

To combat the problem existing at the college level, nine experimental sections of the required three-term sequences of American Thought and Language are being conducted at MSU.

The new sections offered this fall are in addition to some 200 "regular" sections and 50 sections of comprehensive English for those students in need of extra help.

Henry J. Silverman, chairperson of the ATL department, explained that increased college enrollment and the acceptance of lower test scores has added to the need for special programs to help college students.

He believes that society is partly to blame for not placing enough emphasis on reading and writing skills.

"Our new experimental sections are open to all students," Silverman explained. "They don't need to have low test scores to get into the program."

He pointed out that one of the biggest problems is getting the individual to realize he or she has a problem and can benefit from extra help by signing up for the new classes.

Silverman explained that the experimental sections have a maximum of 20 as opposed to 30 individuals enrolled and meet for five instead of three hours a week.

The classes which meet for the longer amount of time do not give more work to the students, he said.

"They do most of their writing in class, rather than at home," he explained.

Silverman also said that the ATL faculty have taken to the new program "very well."

There is a better classroom atmosphere and not as much frustration as in larger classrooms, he said.

He also clarified that those teaching the new sections were all volunteers and went through special in-service training sessions to prepare for the classes.

In January, Silverman will be one of 22 writing experts chosen from across the nation for a six-month program of study and research at the National Institute of Writing at the University of Iowa.

The experimental courses will study the effects of increased student-teacher contact hours, take a look at oral literature and weigh the importance of writing labs.

A testing program also will be conducted, with pre-tests and post-tests developed to examine the degree of improvement in writing skills in both experimental and regular courses.

Dayton Hudson files expense statement; CLC's a mystery

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

Dayton Hudson Properties has filed a state-required campaign expense statement in accordance with a Tuesday deadline.

But information on Citizens for a Livable Community's statement was less clear-cut.

A spokesperson for the Ingham County Clerk's Office said Tuesday CLC's statement hadn't been received. But CLC campaign manager Dick Kruch said the group's coordinator, James Anderson, told him he had personally delivered the report Friday morning. Anderson was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Financial statements are required to be filed 35 days from the date a ballot question is adopted, the county spokesperson said. The statement covers the period from Aug. 22 to Sept. 19.

Dayton Hudson and CLC are vying for voter support on whether the Dayton Hudson mall should be built. The issue will be decided in a public vote

Nov. 7.

Dayton Hudson spent $5,923.59 during the designated period, according to the filed statement. Salaries for the director of Dayton Hudson, two campaign staff people and an accountant made up $3,559.82 of the total.

Other major expenses were copy, design and production of literature, $1,221.02; office rent, $460; furniture rental, $230.92; office supplies and typewriter rental, $201.33; mailing and postage, $191.86; and copying, $58.64.

Dayton Hudson Properties director, Peter Hutchinson, said last week he was confident his group would spend less than $15,000 during the entire campaign on activities directly related to influencing voters.

At that time, he said the money spent on Dayton Hudson's brochure was the major expenditure of the campaign.

In an Aug. 28 letter to Citizens for a Livable Community, Hutchinson agreed to a $4,000 limit on media advertising.

The new 10% car loan from your credit union.

No one in town can give you a better deal ...except your rich grandmother!*

While the cost of new cars and trucks may be going up, the cost of financing one at your credit union just went down. Down to an annual percentage rate of just 10%!

Nowhere else in town will you find such a low rate unless you're lucky enough to have a well-heeled — and generous — ancestor!

Generally, there's no down payment required with credit union financing and loan protection (credit life) insurance is provided at no additional charge to eligible members.

The 10% new car loan rate is available for new 1978 and 1979 model cars and trucks until December 31, 1978. The credit union also offers a very favorable rate for demonstrators and other used cars.

Arrange your financing before you go new car shopping. Simply stop by or give us a call. Just ask for the "Grandmother Loan." We'll know what you mean!
