

Pope John Paul I, whom the Italian newspapers called "the smiling pope," gives a blessing at his weekly general audience on Sept. 20. The pontiff died Thursday night of a heart attack.

Mourners view Pope John Paul

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Tens of thousands of mourners braving a driving rain Sunday filed solemnly through St. Peter's Square to view the body of Pope John Paul I in a massive outpouring of affection for the "smiling pope."

Cardinals arriving from around the world for Wednesday's funeral and the conclave to elect a new pope made clear they will be seeking a man with the same pastoral background and down-to-earth traits that endeared Pope John Paul to millions, though he reigned only 34 days.

"Everyone wants a pastoral pope like the one who just passed away, a pope who speaks a language everyone understands. I believe there are many who possess such a quality," said Cardinal Timothy Manning, upon flying in from Los Angeles.

Cardinal Humberto Medeiros of Boston said Pope John Paul, who died of a heart attack last Thursday at age 65, had quickly "won the hearts of men and was very valuable to the church."

"Now we put our trust in the Holy Spirit to inspire all of us reunited in the conclave and in the prayers of all the faithful that we may find another great pastor and leader of the church," Medeiros told reporters. The conclave begins Oct. 14.

The pope's body, clad in red robes, white miter and red shoes, was transferred from the Clementine Hall in the papal palace Saturday evening to a platform in front of the main altar in St. Peter's, Christendom's largest church.

Long lines of mourners, including many tourists who had come to Rome to hear Pope John Paul give his weekly Sunday blessing, formed at dawn for the opening of St. Peter's Basilica at 7 a.m.

By 1 p.m. the Vatican estimated that 30,000 had filed past.

Among the first to view the body was the pope's brother, Edoardo Luciani, 62, who had been in Australia on a business trip when the pontiff was stricken.

Many noticed that the pope, his face waxen because of heavy makeup, did not look like the smiling man remembered in pictures holding babies and greeting visitors during his public audiences.

"We were so looking forward to being in the square this morning to hear him speak," said Lee Campbell of Midland, Texas. "It seems impossible that I'm here instead to mourn him."

BOAT SUNK IN SEA CLASH

Israel repels PLO attack

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli gunboat in the Gulf of Aqaba intercepted and sank a Palestinian guerrilla boat speeding north to blast the Israeli port of Eilat with a barrage of rockets, the military said Sunday.

The seaborne clash occurred Saturday afternoon as Eilat, Israel's southernmost town, filled up with tens of thousands of people on holiday for the long Jewish New Year weekend. Hotels had no vacancies and the beaches were crowded with campers.

Later Sunday in Beirut, Yasser Arafat's Al Fatah wing of the Palestine Liberation Organization confirmed the attack but said the boat had succeeded in its mission, hitting Israeli positions with rockets and inflicting "heavy losses in materials and lives."

"At the same time," a PLO statement said, "the ship, loaded with huge quantities of explosives, was automatically set on a sailing course toward Eilat port. It exploded in the area where enemy ships dock, destroying and damaging several of them."

The Israeli report said the boat was sunk before rockets were fired.

The military report confirmed the crew of the Israeli navy boat captured seven guerrillas, three of them wounded. There was no report of any Israeli casualties.

According to the military account:

The boat was spotted south of Dahab beach, 80 miles south of Eilat and 50 miles north of Sharm el-Sheikh, the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula.

The Israeli patrol boat tried to intercept it and its crew began maneuvering in an effort to escape.

Warning shots were fired, but the boat sped on and "the navy boat was forced to fire at the boat in order to damage it. Cannonade fire from the navy boat hit one of the explosive charges on the boat and it began to sink," the account said.

Before the ship sank, Israeli sailors boarded it and counted 42 122mm rockets and a "huge quantity of explosive material." Six of those aboard the boat were captured in the water and one was grabbed on the deck of the boat.

The report said they told interrogators their plan was to fire the rockets at Eilat, then set the ship on a course to run aground on the Eilat beach, where its load of dynamite would explode.

The attack boat carried small rubber boats that the guerrillas planned to use to escape to the Jordanian port of Aqaba, five miles across the gulf from Eilat.

An army spokesperson said the captured boat belonged to the Palestinian guerrilla group Al Fatah. The army spokesperson's office claimed to have no information on where the boat came from.

Palestinian guerrilla leaders have declared they will step up their war against Israel because of last month's Camp David agreements, which paved the way for a separate Israeli-Egyptian peace without providing for the establishment of a Palestinian state.

The reported incident Saturday was the first such in memory in the 100-mile long Gulf of Aqaba, Israel's only sea outlet to the south. Israeli patrol boats recently have been apprehending hashish smugglers in the gulf.

Last March, 11 Palestinian guerrillas came in by boat from the Mediterranean and launched a bloody attack along the Haila Tel Aviv highway before being stopped by Israeli troops. Thirty-five Israelis died. After that terror attack, Israel launched a massive invasion of southern Lebanon to push Palestinian guerrillas away from the Israel-Lebanon border.

Skyjacker captured following air odyssey in bizarre conclusion

By RISTO MAENPAA
Associated Press Writer

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — After 24 hours and 3,000 miles, a bizarre air hijacking came to an unlikely end Sunday when police let the pistol-armed skyjacker go home to cool off before his arrest, then apparently lost patience with him, stormed his house and overpowered him.

The arrest of weary-looking Aarno Lamminporras in Oulu, 350 miles north of here, climaxed a strange odyssey in which the hijacker commandeered a Finnair jetliner. He then spent 16 hours taking it back and forth between Oulu and Helsinki and at one point to Holland.

The hijacker collected $206,000 in ransom, then finally released his hostages and the plane when authorities granted his final demand, that he be allowed to go home with his wife on the assurance he would surrender Monday morning.

"We intend to honor his last wish as well," Finnish Air Traffic Minister Veikko Saarto said as the hijacking came to a peaceful end at Oulu's airport.

There was no explanation why police decided seven hours later to burst into the 37-year-old Lamminporras' house. He had taken his pistol and part of the ransom home with him.

Several eyewitnesses said police, who had trailed Lamminporras home from the airport and then ringed his house, first sent two police dogs through the front door, then followed quickly. The handcuffed man appeared haggard as officers led him away, the witnesses said.

Authorities said Lamminporras was a bankrupt home-building contractor. They said they could find no clear-cut motive for the hijacking but added that he apparently acted under the influence of alcohol. During the plane's many stops he demanded and received two bottles of whiskey.

The hijacker also had ordered that $175,000 of the ransom be given to an orphanage and a veterans' hospital. Finnair paid $168,000, of the ransom and the nation's largest newspaper, Helsingin Sanomat, paid $38,000. The money was not given to the two charities.

The incident began at about Saturday afternoon aboard a scheduled Finnair flight from Oulu to Helsinki. Police said Lamminporras entered the cockpit and ordered the pilot at gunpoint to follow his instructions. The plane, a Super-Caravelle, landed an hour later at Helsinki, and 34 of the 47 other persons aboard were released. At the hijacker's request, a lawyer came aboard. Then the plane:

• flew back to Oulu, where it circled for several hours, then landed. It took on more fuel, and $168,000 in ransom from Finnair was put aboard.

• returned to Helsinki, where Lamminporras demanded $38,000 from the news-

Gas tax hike signed into state law

LANSING (UPI) — Gov. William G. Milliken has signed into law a 2-cent per gallon hike in state gasoline and diesel fuel taxes that will give Michigan the highest rates in the nation starting Jan. 1.

The tax hikes are part of a package of transportation bills signed by Milliken Saturday. He also signed bills increasing weight taxes on personal and commercial vehicles by about 30 percent and earmarking a portion of the sales tax on automobiles and gasoline for comprehensive transit programs.

The three bills, key elements of the governor's transportation program, cleared the Legislature last week after months of debate.

A Milliken spokesperson said the gasoline and diesel fuel tax hike is expected to raise about $96 million for roads, streets and comprehensive transportation programs.

The weight tax bill is expected to produce about $50 million in additional revenue. The third bill will set aside about $21 million for transportation programs.

Martin Mull 'clones' flood bar seeking entertainer's furniture

By PAUL COX and
MICHAEL MEGIERAN
State News Staff Writers

Martin Mull look-alikes, sporting tacky leisure suits and neatly cropped blond hair, lined Dooley's lower level Friday afternoon seeking fame and fortune.

George Stewart, a fairly stout MSU student and member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity, beat out 18 other contestants copying Mull's identity and gestures in Pop Entertainment's Martin Mull look-alike contest.

The clones lined the stage to the hooting and hollering of those who came to cheer them on. John Giese and Bill Andres of WILS served as emcees, drumming up audience reaction as each contestant was introduced by number.

Participants, each hoping to walk away with a grand prize that included Mull's fabulous furniture, were judged according to audience reaction.

A loud boo granted just as high a score as a strong cheer, Giese warned the audience, resulting in dead silence during the introduction of some contestants.

Crosby Pulliam, the contest's only black candidate, never lost his confidence. The audience seemed to approve of his initiative, rooting him on to the finals.

"I'm a direct clone," he said. "I sign autographs daily."

Most of the candidates seemed equally assured of victory, but it was Stewart who won the audience over with his Mullish smirk and satirical acknowledgement of the crowd's reaction towards him. Giese asked Stewart why he wanted to be Martin Mull.

"Because he has a great hobby of dancing in the nude," Stewart retorted. The audience went wild.

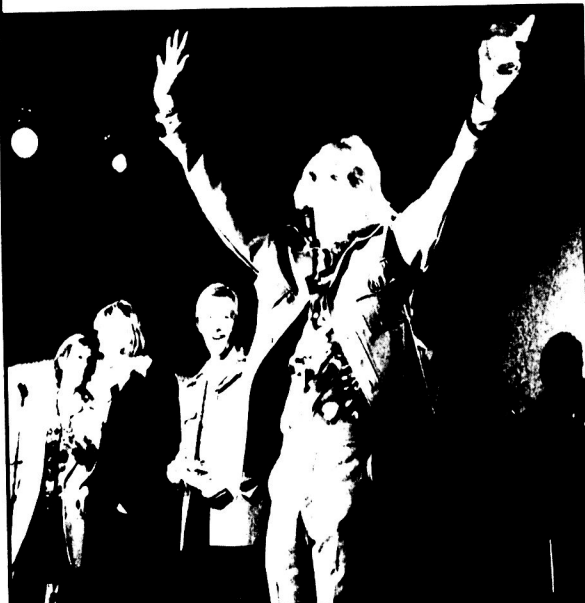

The remaining candidates ranged from rejects from the covers of teenage magazines to near carbon copies of the host of the now-defunct America Tonight show. RHA vice president Michael Zimmer, Stewart's most threatening competition, was passed up by Stewart's fraternal support, which comprised the loudest cheering section in the bar.

As Giese and Andres prepared the audience for the moment of truth, Stewart's moustache, exposed to intense stage lights, began to droop.

"One thing we should point out is that this man's moustache is not real," Giese finally admitted. Stewart continued to smirk.

None of the contestants walked away empty-handed. Each received two tickets to the Mull concert.

"Now let's get back to some of that good disco," Giese said, clearing the stage.

MSU student George Stewart was judged the best "Barth" among 19 hopefuls who entered the Martin Mull look-alike contest held Friday at Dooleys.

Milliken strikes down welfare abortion ban

LANSING (UPI) — Gov. William G. Milliken has again struck down an attempt to ban state-funded welfare abortions.

Milliken signed a three-month Medicaid financing bill Saturday but vetoed the section limiting funding for nontherapeutic abortions to $1.

Earlier this summer he vetoed an entire $520 million Medicaid bill because it restricted welfare abortions. At that time he said no woman should be denied an abortion because of poverty.

The three-month bill, however, was written in such a way to allow the governor to veto only the anti-abortion provision under a last-minute agreement worked out in the Legislature.

The compromise allowed Milliken to restate his objections without jeopardizing Medicaid funds to 900,000 state recipients.

"I believe that no one should be required to have an abortion and that the state should provide counseling services, financing resources, adoption procedures and other services that make it possible for any mother to give birth," Milliken said.

"However, once she has made the intensely personal decision to have this procedure, she should not be denied because of her financial condition," he said.

Anti-abortion lobbyists and legislators were angered by the veto and helped re-enact identical legislation.

Rejections of repeated compromise attempts finally produced a House-Senate conference committee proposal for a three-month bill that was adopted.

With Milliken vetoing only the anti-abortion language, the bill takes immediate effect and continues Medicaid funding for three months while postponing the abortion fight until Jan. 1.

Nicaraguan economy in trouble

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The bloody political crisis that rocked Nicaragua has left its economy in serious trouble, business leaders and economists say.

Merchants and other business leaders are strapped for cash because of a national strike that began Aug. 25 and was followed by fighting between President Anastasio Somoza's national guard and rebels led by Sandinista guerrillas. Many businesses in the capital reopened last week but business leaders complain there are few customers and they are unable to pay employees or taxes.

Unemployment, which averaged 9 percent to 10 percent for the past 10 years by official estimates, is expected to top 22 percent by year's end, said an economics professor at Central American University in Managua.

The economists say the government's economic position has been further weakened by larger emergency expenditures on armaments during the crisis.

Swiss factory workers continue siege

GUATEMALA City, Guatemala (AP) — Government mediation continued here Saturday in an effort to break a siege by disgruntled factory workers holding the Swiss ambassador hostage in his own embassy, authorities reported.

More than 40 workers, demanding the reopening of two Swiss-managed factories, took over the embassy and seized Ambassador Yves Berthoud and an unknown number of embassy personnel on Friday.

Police ringed the embassy in this capital city and Labor Minister Carlos Alarcon continued negotiations with four union officers, representing the workers, and officials of the Productos Duralita cement products plants.

Worker demands include the reopening of the plants, payment of wages lost since they were shut down Sept. 11, and prompt negotiation of a new labor contract.

The Guatemala Labor Federation said the company closed the plants, which employ 400 persons, when the workers demanded a new contract and better working conditions.

Italian terrorist arrested after shootout

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Antonio Savino, described by police as one of Italy's most wanted terrorists, was arrested Sunday after a shootout in which he and an officer were seriously wounded, authorities said.

Police said Savino, 29, who escaped from jail in June 1977, was a member of the Red Brigades, the urban guerrilla gang that kidnapped and killed former Premier Aldo Moro last spring.

The name and photograph of Savino, who formerly worked at the Fiat auto plant in Turin, were included in a list of 18 reputed terrorists circulated nationwide by the government the day after Moro's kidnapping March 16.

Savino was caught at the end of a massive operation directed by Gen. Carlo Alberto Della Chiesa, recently appointed by the government as Italy's No. 1 anti-terrorist operator.

Police, acting on a tip, surrounded a house in Milan, and Savino came out firing. They said Savino was wounded when he ignored an order to stop.

British army kills innocent civilian

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British army admitted Sunday that soldiers killed an innocent member of a hunting party but said the troops believed themselves threatened by terrorists.

An army statement extended sympathy to the family of surveyor James Taylor, 23, and said: "It now appears that the civilians had been wildfowling, were carrying firearms and were not engaged in any criminal activity." Taylor was killed Saturday.

But Taylor's uncle, Given Shuter, who was present at the incident near Coagh, 25 miles west of Belfast, said the shooting followed an argument between Taylor and two companions and the soldiers.

He said the hunters found the tires of their car deflated, walked to his house to borrow a pump and rode with him to their car. They were followed by two cars carrying strangers who were not in uniform, Shuter said.

The hunters accused the strangers of letting the air out of their tires, an argument developed, and Taylor was shot, he said.

Arms agreement cheating impossible

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — President Carter sought to assure the American people Sunday that the United States has adequate means of detecting any Russian cheating on strategic arms agreements.

He confirmed officially for the first time that the United States uses picture-taking satellites to count Russian missiles.

"Photo-reconnaissance satellites have become an important stabilizing factor in world affairs," the president said in remarks prepared for ceremonies honoring six American space heroes. "In the monitoring of arms control agreements, they make an immense contribution to the security of all nations. We shall continue to develop them."

Press secretary Jody Powell said the decision to declassify the use of photo satellites for arms verification was done in part because the administration felt "it is important for people to know that in arms control... we are in a position to verify them the Soviets without relying on good intentions of the other party."

Hussein seeking more information

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jordan's King Hussein said Sunday a separate Israeli-Egyptian peace agreement would cause serious upheavals in the Middle East and may "threaten the very existence of an Arab nation in the long run."

He did not name the nation that might be threatened. But there has been speculation that if Jordan were to endorse any such agreement it could face retaliation from Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Hussein reiterated that he wants more information before deciding whether to join the recent agreements reached at the Camp David talks between President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Fighting erupts in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy fighting erupted Sunday between Syrian troops and right-wing Lebanese militias, breaking a cease-fire in east Beirut that lasted less than a day.

A spokesperson for the Christian rightists accused the Syrians of shattering the truce by trying to break through a militia line surrounding a pharmacy where some 50 Syrian troops were trapped.

"All four Syrian assaults, launched behind intensive artillery and rocket fire, were repulsed by the Lebanese forces," the spokesperson said.

The Syrian command of the Arab League peacekeeping force here had no comment on the broken truce.

Witnesses said Sunday's fighting spread from Ashrafieh to the suburb of Hadath, which the Syrians have encircled and shelled since Wednesday.

Police estimated 183 civilians had been killed and 291 wounded since Wednesday in the fighting, which has raged over much of east Beirut.

Hospitals and morgues in the eastern quarter were reported crammed and appeals continued for blood donations.

During the cease-fire lull, more than 30 bodies were pulled out from collapsed buildings in Ashrafieh, rightists said.

A spokesperson for right-wing leader Camille Chamoun said his forces were holding their fire but would open up again if Syrian troops did not withdraw from new positions taken during the cease-fire. Area residents said, however, they saw rightist militiamen resume sniping at Syrian positions.

The cease-fire arranged by Syrian President Hafez Assad and Lebanese President Elias Sarkis on Saturday afternoon was broken about 3 p.m. Sunday — 22½ hours later.

The Syrians form the bulk of the Arab League force, which came into Lebanon in late 1976 to end a bloody civil war that pitted leftist Moslems and their Palestinian allies against the Christians. The Christians at that time welcomed and were saved by the intervention but now resent Syrian occupation of Christian neighborhoods.

Strike ends; trains roll

Trains are moving again as the nation's railroads get back to full operation after nearly the entire rail system was shut down for four days by picketing clerks.

The Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, complying with a federal court order, moved its pickets, and rail workers began going back to their jobs Saturday. Trains began rolling within hours, but normal operation on the nation's 200,000 miles of rail lines were not expected for several more days.

Amtrak, which was able to provide transportation for only about half of its usual 52,000 daily passengers during the strike, resumed its short-distance trains would be returning to service by Monday.

Bus crashes in India; 88 killed, 20 injured

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A packed bus plunged into a flooded ravine in eastern India Sunday, killing 88 persons and injuring 20 others, the United News of India agency reported.

The agency said the bus had swerved to avoid hitting a cow. Cows, sacred to Hindus, wander freely about India's roads and streets.

It said government officials rushed to the scene, 240 miles north of Calcutta in the remote Parganas district of West Bengal State. The area lies between Bangladesh and the kingdom of Bhutan.

Further details on the accident were not immediately available.

Indian buses are often crowded with more than 100 persons.

Passengers fill the seats, aisles and windows and cling to the sides and roofs of the vehicles.

In the past week torrential rain, floods, earthslides and building collapses have claimed more than 200 lives in the state capital of Calcutta and elsewhere in West Bengal. Millions have been displaced, and for three days Calcutta was cut off from the rest of India.

James H. Brickley, president of Eastern Michigan University and Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, spoke before student government leaders from Michigan colleges and universities Saturday at the Olds Plaza Hotel in Lansing.

Brickley said higher education does not enjoy the prestige it once had and legislators have told him that human services must come before colleges as a priority for state funding. Student leaders, he said, must help administrators make decisions in the face of impending tax limitation.

CLC files statement

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

Citizens for a Livable Community filed its campaign expense statement on the Dayton Hudson referendum Friday.

The group missed a Tuesday deadline because of confusion over the due date.

CLC is opposing Dayton Hudson Properties' efforts to gain voter support for a proposed mall to be built in East Lansing.

Whether the mall should be constructed at Lake Lansing Road and U.S. 127 will be decided in a public vote on Nov. 7.

The citizens group filed its expense statement through a formal committee set up to run the campaign as required by state law and to comply with Internal Revenue Service tax regulations. CLC coordinator James Anderson said.

CLC's campaign committee, called Committee for Balanced Development, was organized on Aug. 31, he said.

Expenditures of $1,516 were spent by and on behalf of the CLC campaign committee from Aug. 31 to Sept. 23, according to the filed statement.

Expenses were: campaign staff, $560; bumper stickers, $550; telephone installation, $200; advertising, $96; postage, $70; and office supplies, $40.

Dayton Hudson spent $5,923.59 for the period from Aug. 22 to Sept. 19, according to an expense statement filed last Monday.

Expenses were salaries, $3,559.82; copy, design and production of literature, $1,221.02; office rent, $460; furniture rental, $230.92; office supplies and typewriter rental, $201.33; mailing and postage, $191.86; and copying, $58.64.

The CLC committee listed $1,796.25 in receipts and $240 in non-cash contributions received during the reporting period with an ending balance of $520. But in addition to its expenditures, the group showed debts of $1,050.

Dayton Hudson showed $10,000 on hand at the beginning of the reporting period with a balance of $7,636.23. The corporation didn't include staff salaries of $3,559.82 in arriving at the balance.

The citizens group has asked Dayton Hudson to agree to a $15,000 limit on campaign spending late in August. While Dayton Hudson officials did not agree to an overall ceiling, they did agree to a $4,000 limit on media advertising.

Dayton Hudson Properties director Peter Hutchinson, has said he was confident the corporation would spend less than $15,000 during the entire campaign on activities directly related to influencing voters.

Anderson said if Dayton Hudson did not plan to go over $15,000 it could have agreed to the limit.

Toxicology research center starts at MSU

By PAUL COX
State News Staff Writer

MSU environmental researchers' efforts will now be focused and coordinated by the University's new Center for Environmental Toxicology, said John E. Cantlon, vice president for research and graduate studies.

The center officially began Sunday with the approval of the Board of Trustees. The center will oversee campus research and teaching in environmental toxicology and provide public service in the area, Cantlon said.

If the center would have been in existence in 1973, it could have aided greatly in the PBB incident, Cantlon said.

"We feel this is an important and timely step for the University," MSU President Edgar L. Harden said. "This university was established to teach, do research and provide service. We are fulfilling our obligation as a land grant university."

The center was recommended by the deans of the colleges of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Human Medicine, Osteopathic Medicine and Veterinary Medicine and the director of the Agriculture Experiment Station.

An 18 member toxicology review committee that was established last year also recommended the creation of the center.

No new building is planned as the center will take the form of a director and a small staff, Cantlon said. He added that center personnel will report to his office.

Cantlon said "now we have a formal entity" and the center will be activated as soon as possible. Cantlon and the committee are currently creating a job description for a center director and will then begin an "aggressive" search for a qualified person to fill the job, he said.

There is no excuse for PBB being in MSU's air

PBB — three letters which have come to represent bureaucratic ineptness, at least in the state of Michigan — has once again raised its ugly head in the revelation that MSU has been burning chemically-contaminated cattle since 1974. And burning them in an incinerator ruled inadequate for such a purpose almost exactly a year ago.

Further, according to different sources, nobody and everybody is to blame. The latest PBB fiasco is grim evidence that the lack of communication and direction between state agencies has continued unabated since the fire-retardant chemical was accidentally mixed with cattle feed in 1973.

Once again, Michigan citizens — especially MSU students — have not been protected or served by the state agencies which were created to do just that. Statements made by officials at MSU, the State Department of Agriculture and the Department of Natural Resources simply show the proverbial left hand didn't know what the right hand was doing.

And those in the news business must also accept a share of the blame for failing to ask questions about MSU's PBB research programs.

While state agencies arranged burial pits for PBB-tainted cattle — burial pits because no adequate incineration sites, including MSU, could be found — no one thought to ask MSU what they had done, were doing or were going to do with their stock of contaminated research animals.

Certainly someone at MSU should have been concerned with the state's belief that it was safer to bury animals than to burn them, especially after the state inspected MSU's incinerator for just that purpose in October 1977.

And certainly Department of Natural Resources officials who investigated MSU as a possible incineration site should have followed-up their investigation by telling MSU about the incinerator's inability to properly destroy the chemical.

It is difficult to imagine, considering the publicity relating to MSU's PBB research, that someone from DNR didn't think to ask MSU about its disposal methods. Sadly, it appears no one did.

The State Department of Agriculture and the state veterinarian, who are in daily contact with the laboratory where the PBB animals were tested and destroyed, were also seemingly oblivious to the matter of disposal.

It is true the release of dangerous dioxins by burning PBB at temperatures lower than 2,000 degrees was not known until early this year. But that fact simply underscores the haltingly slow and inept investigation into the overall effects of PBB.

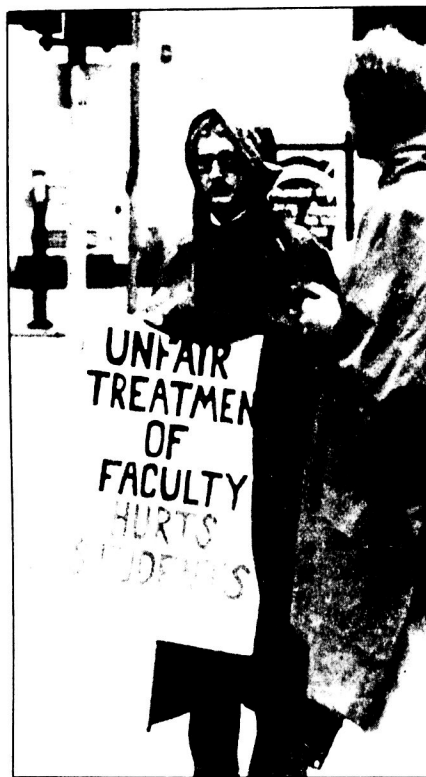

It is also true the animal diagnostic laboratory at MSU has a responsibility to dispose of diseased and infectious animals as quickly as possible, but not at the risk of the unknown effects of PBB on human health.

Despite the obvious political timing of this current revelation, it is necessary for MSU, the DNR and the state agriculture department to immediately investigate the possible harmful effects to the MSU community which may have resulted from the burning of PBB-contaminated cattle.

A testing of students and faculty, who were at MSU from 1974 to the present, especially those here in the 1974-1976 period when cows with 200,000 times the state legal limit were incinerated, is definitely in order. Tests involving the air and soil at MSU and surrounding areas should also be mandated.

The relationship and communications between regulatory state agencies is once again in question and should be finally answered. One DNR official said of the incident "in an ideal world the department (DNR) should have been aware of this." But if this were an ideal world, the need for a DNR would not exist.

Once and for all, the possible hazards of burning or burying PBB-contaminated cattle should be thoroughly studied and laid out publicly for Michigan citizens.

Injunction favorable to LCC students

Although the Lansing Community College labor dispute is far from over, the teacher walkout has ended because of a student lawsuit. The suit asked for an injunction to end the walkout, block a threatened dismissal of faculty members, and force a return to the bargaining table to bargain in good faith.

The injunction will serve all parties in different ways. The faculty will benefit if the Board of Trustees and the administration are forced to return to the bargaining table and bargain in good faith.

The administration demand will be served by the return of teachers to the classroom. The strike served as an excuse for the administration to refuse to bargain.

Although teachers are losing their strike weapon for now, they do not lose out completely. Forced bargaining is the best substitute for the strike. Now that the courts have entered the dispute, mediation, fact-finding and binding arbitration are possibilities. Both sides will have to make concessions, but court-forced good faith bargaining will result. That — bargaining — was the purpose of the strike.

The real winners, though, are the students. The students have been involved in the strike all along. Many joined the picket lines to show their support for the faculty's demands. But it soon became obvious the demands were falling on deaf ears. While the participants haggled about business, the students were left with nothing to gain and everything to lose.

The administration put inexperienced and unqualified instructors in the classrooms to hand out assignments. It gave the administration time to hide from the issues and continue their refusal to bargain in good faith. They told the faculty to go ahead and strike — LCC could go on without them.

But the play failed to fool students. By filing suit, they indicated they were aware of the administration's intent and said they wouldn't tolerate it. While they support the faculty's position, they have shown they feel their education is more important than a labor dispute. They have a right to the education they paid their tuition for.

VIEWPOINT: ACADEMIC FREEDOM REPORT

Students rights are due for revision

By PAUL MITCHELL NEWMAN

There was a time not too many years ago when students at Michigan State University and around the country were subjected to disciplinary action without any guarantees of due process or appeals procedures, nor could they challenge any faculty or administrative decisions.

Today, thanks to student activism and the formation of the Academic Freedom Report, we are now provided with these guarantees. This may not seem like a great accomplishment at first glance, especially if you belong to the current population of students exemplifying apathy and unconcern; but the more discerning student realizes the vast importance of these protections. Now you are allowed to face your accuser during a hearing process conducted in a fair and impartial manner. You are innocent until proven guilty in almost all cases, and you have the right to appeal any decision against you. It is this appeal procedure which is the issue behind an ASMSU resolution introduced by Steven Politowicz, chairperson of the Programming Board.

Simply stated, the resolution would remove Eldon Nonnamaker as the final appeal in the judicial structure, a position he holds concurrently with his duties as vice president for student affairs. Aside from the obvious difficulties of wearing two hats (administrator and judge) the potential exists for inappropriate influences upon the judicial structure. As a hypothetical example, suppose a student is suspended for disciplinary reasons whose father or relatives have influential positions in large organizations, i.e. labor, politics, etc. Letters and phone calls to the board of trustees, if not the vice president himself, could create immense pressures to overturn or modify the decision of the lower judiciary.

These pressures are very real and in the past they have affected the autonomy of the system. Nonnamaker has told me in private that the situation should be changed to remove the administration's influence from the appeals process. Further, it would cut down on the time by which a student could delay a decision by using all of his/her appeals. I have been involved with cases that were delayed for over two terms, thereby allowing the student to graduate before a decision against him/her could be finally settled by the vice president.

This is just the tip of an iceberg of inadequacies inherent in the AFR, a document marred by ambiguities, inconsistencies, and a lack of clarity in many instances. These flaws can only detract from the primary purpose of the document, that is to protect the students against arbitrary decisions and guarantee them fair procedures for answering accusations and challenging administrative or faculty decisions.

"Recognize them (your student rights), understand them, appreciate them, and for your own sake fight to keep them."

One example of these flaws can be found if you examine the procedures governing a student who has been accused of allegedly committing academic dishonesty. The faculty member has the discretion to give the student a 0.0 for cheating, whereupon the "guilty" student must proceed to prove his/her innocence by challenging that grade in a hearing before the Student-Faculty Judiciary. The list of problems goes on, yet the bureaucratic committee system merely spins its wheels and does nothing constructive to resolve the problem. The directors of the Judicial Programs Office have for many years been suggesting possible revisions, and up till now their recommendations have gone unheeded.

Most of you reading this viewpoint will hopefully never have to exercise your rights as guaranteed by the AFR, but be thankful that they are there when you need them. Recognize them, understand them, appreciate them, and for your own sake fight to keep them. If you do not already own a copy of the AFR, go to the Judicial Programs Office in the Student Services Building and request that they give you one. I trust you will find it very interesting reading! Yet, it must be overhauled, updated and revised by knowledgeable people, and with all due haste.

I fully endorse and will actively support Politowicz's resolution and urge quick approval at all levels. I further urge that all students, especially the freshmen who will be here to reap the benefits of their efforts, to write or call your student representative and the board of trustees and let them know just how you feel about the issue. Tell them, as I will, that the time has come for them to recognize their responsibilities to both the students and the institution by realizing the magnitude of the problems created by the AFR's deficiencies and to place its revision high on the priority list of the University.

Our apologies extended to Dr. Kenneth Harrow, MSU's African students

Editors note: In the last issue of summer term, the State News reported on a lecture by an MSU professor recently returned from his work in Cameroon. The reporter erred when it was reported the MSU professor had been the only Ph.D. at the Cameroon University.

Normally such an error would have received an immediate correction, however the lateness of the story prevented a correction during summer term. Our hesitancy toward printing Professor Harrow's response stems from the fact that during the summer term there were only 10,000 people reading the State News and now there are four times that number — three-quarters of whom would not even realize the nature of Harrow's complaint.

On further consideration, we decided the error warranted the printing of Harrow's letter despite the fact that the majority of our readers never read the original story. Here now is professor Harrow's letter with apologies to any offended parties, particularly Professor Harrow and especially MSU African students.

I recently gave a slide presentation on Tunisia and Cameroon after which I was interviewed by one of your reporters. I am afraid a number of errors and misrepresentations managed to creep into the article which substantially distort the picture I was attempting to create.

First, I am by no means the only Ph.D. at the University of Yaounde. I was referring to the faculty of the English Department. The University of Yaounde is a large, multi-faceted institution with impressive schools of law, medicine, and international relations, in addition to the usual undergraduate colleges. There are many respectable scholars with doctorates from many different universities who teach there.

The basic task I face is to improve academic standards — not that none exist, but that they are poor and require rigorous and continuous effort to be maintained.

I sincerely hope you will make an effort to print this clarification as I know that the distortions in your article are highly offensive to our African community here at MSU and that it would be tragic to further our misconceptions about Africa through inadvertent errors in reporting.

VIEWPOINT: WORLD COOPERATION

It's up to the educated to get over world disputes

By IFTIKHAR H. MALIK

When I look around the world today, I am horrified to see the stereotypes, racial prejudices and stratification of the human population based on inhuman standards. A vast majority of people around the globe live very miserable lives because of numberless social, economic and political problems.

The industrialized and developed nations of the world, generally referred to as Western countries, are blessed with all the material prosperity. Thanks to science and technology, at least some nations of our agonized world have certain goodies to offer their inhabitants. This is by no means the universal reality.

Since winning freedom from their colonial masters, nations in Afro Asian countries are still striving in search of identity. The corrupt political systems, joined by arrogant bureaucracies and bankrupt economies, have virtually left no hope whatsoever for their people. The few educated ones from such nations either become part of the system or alienate themselves totally. The brain drain phenomenon has worsened this tragic situation.

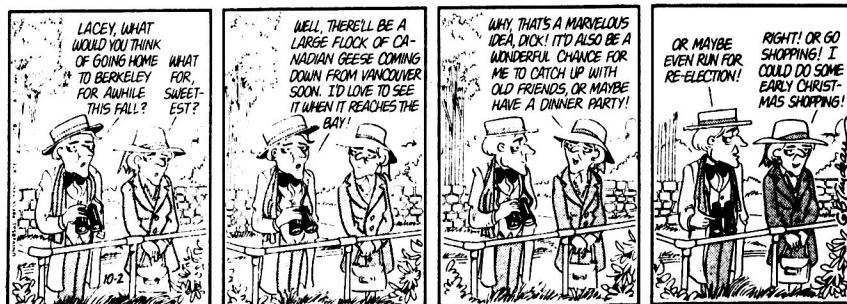

The Western nations have many things to share with their Eastern counterparts. So far the relationships between the governments of the countries have proved partial and temporary. Our world needs stronger relationships among its people and not among the governments of the world. We all need to share each other's successes and achievements. It is time that universities in developed countries, particularly in the U.S., rise to the occasion. This voluntary sort of cooperation with educated people in the Eastern world will boost hopes for a better future for humanity.

Rising tuition fees, high living expenses, restrictions on admissions, lack of assistantships and no temporary job opportunities for the foreign students from less-developed nations are no help at all. "After a few years," as one of my friends put it, "you will see only students from rich countries on campuses like MSU, and no one from poor nations." It is true, the number of the students from poor countries is decreasing while, no doubt, the rich countries retain the largest representation.

MSU CLERICAL-TECHNICAL WORKERS

Union protests contract

Members of MSU's clerical-technical union once again demonstrated their dissatisfaction with contract negotiations Friday, at a noon protest in front of the Administration Building.

In a vote taken Thursday, members of the union decided to extend their University contract, which ended Saturday, until negotiations with administrators could continue.

A breakdown in negotiations took place Wednesday at 5 a.m., without any progress toward a contract settlement.

Linda L. Johnson, office assistant in the College of Natural Science and a member of MSUEA, said she was "fed-up" with the way negotiations were proceeding and believed that other clerical-technical workers, felt the same.

Negotiations between the two sides started again Sunday at 3 p.m.

Johnson said the members of the clerical-technical union will stage another protest Monday, if there is still no progress toward settling the contract issue.

The center will be initially funded by $170,000 from the budget of the Agricultural Experiment Station, said James H. Anderson, dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Cantlon said in the future there will be a good chance of receiving federal grants from the Environmental Protection Agency, the National Institute of Environmental Health and the National Cancer Institute.

There is currently $2.2 million in federal funding for ongoing research at 28 MSU sites. With the center to unify these efforts more research money and better methods for the deployment of information will be possible, Cantlon said.

"When you look at the chemical world we live in, we need a vehicle where we can produce reliable data," Anderson said.

"The toxicology center will provide a vehicle to coordinate the total toxicology effort of the campus — with a great potential payoff for the citizens of Michigan."

Cooley Law students force admission of limitations from state police official

By RUSS HUMPHREY
State News Staff Writer

Questions asked by law students at a public seminar Saturday in Lansing's Thomas M. Cooley Law School forced a Michigan State Police official to admit training schools are limited.

After a lengthy presentation on police training, Michigan State Police Sgt. Barry Beck of the training division said taking verbal and physical abuse from suspects cannot be taught adequately in a police academy.

The seminar, sponsored by the Young Lawyers Club of Cooley Law School, was offered as a supplement to the school's curriculum and to inform the public of law enforcement procedures.

Divisions from the Michigan State Police were invited to answer questions from young lawyers and explain general training, interrogation, polygraph testing and traffic control techniques.

During the four-hour seminar, Beck said excessive abuse from suspects is troublesome to police officers. But a "too light to fight, too thin to win" attitude should prevail in difficult arrests, he said.

Officers should neither brawl with an individual nor attempt to arrest a person out of a group without extreme caution, he said.

He said persuasion, compassion and empathy must lead an officer in the field. Of course, he added not all police show such attitudes in their work.

Search procedures in vehicles were also discussed.

"If you can see it, then it is yours," he said, referring to vehicle searches.

By asking to see vehicle registration, which is usually kept in a glove compartment, an officer can see potential evidence, Beck said.

He mentioned other clever techniques employed by police agencies to search automobiles without the driver being fully

The state requires expense statements to be filed with the Ingham County Clerk's office 35 days from the date a proposition is qualified for the ballot. The Dayton Hudson ballot question was passed by East Lansing City Council on Aug. 22.

However, CLC coordinator James Anderson considered the due date to be later than Sept. 26 because the East Lansing City Clerk had only notified the County Clerk's Office of the exact ballot language shortly before the Sept. 19 due date for such information.

The second campaign expense statement is due Oct. 30.

"Grease" was the word at the Lansing Civic Center Friday night, as Frankie Valli presented a show that emphasized the newer side of his material.

Valli: Four Seasons and Greasy kids stuff

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

When we were kids, my younger brother's favorite band was the Four Seasons. My brother could sing just like Frankie Valli. Only difference was that my brother hadn't reached puberty yet, and while big girls may not cry-yi-yi, big boys don't sing like that, and I used to tease him about his musical taste.

But, to be honest, I really enjoyed it when he listened to those early records. Frankie Valli stood with the Beach Boys as one of the greats who used voice as a rock instrument, and he created some of the happiest teenage pop-rock of the '60s Camelot era.

The best part of Valli's performance was the film that opened it. The flick, which traced Valli's 16-year career, was cleverly done with scenes from the Rock Dreams book, shots of the Carter family during "Peanuts," and a shot of Valli sitting next to Bob Dylan during "Don't Think Twice." The film was entertaining and amusing, which is more than I can say about Valli's very disco-oriented (lights, styles, and music) show.

I didn't mind that he opened with "Grease." After all, it was inevitable that he'd do it, and there was a whole new generation of kiddie Frankie Valli fans present for that song alone. What I did mind was that Valli performed the song two more times during the course of his 60-minute-plus show. What I also minded was that he did a lot of numbers from his new LP, mentioning no less than three times that the audience should go out and "buy it."

What I minded more than anything was that Valli devoted no more than a total of 10 minutes to two medleys of his "oldies," which included "Working My Way Back," "Stay," "Let's Hang On," "Sherry," "Walk Like a Man," "Big Girls Don't Cry," and "Bye Bye, Baby." Valli was so unenthusiastic about these tunes that it seemed like he was simply filling an obligation and trying to get them out of the way. He almost completely avoided using his trademark falsetto, using it about the equivalent it was used on Jackson Browne's version of "Stay." Most of the crowd didn't seem to mind. After all, he did "Grease" three times!

After the show, my brother (who knows his Frankie Valli) described it as "disappointing" and "terrible." Later, I sat in front of my TV and watched Wolfman Jack scream, "Mah! Mah! Mah! Here's Frankie Valli with the biggest-selling hit of this summer..." "Grease is the word..." I realized that Valli probably sold a lot of records Friday night, but watching TV, I couldn't help thinking of another more important guy that my brother and I listened to when we were kids. This guy, Elvis Presley, stayed cool until the end. He used to shoot out TV screens.

Leontyne Price harmonizes sensibility and technique

By ATSUKO HIRAI
State News Reviewer

Clad in a patina green chiffon dress and adorned with a long pearl necklace, Leontyne Price of the Metropolitan Opera opened her third concert at MSU Saturday night with the aria, "Somm Dei," from Handel's opera, Radamisto. An invocation of an 11-word text ("Supreme gods, who behold mine anguish, Ah, protect a trembling heart"), the song and Price's soulful rendition of it provided a quietly moving prelude to an evening of a great musical experience.

Price is not only abundantly gifted vocally, but also a woman of deep and bountiful feelings, who knows self-restraint as well as total self-abandon, be it to sorrow, joy, despair, or anger. When such sensibility is fully harmonized with her rich technique and presented in person, her singing leaves her listener no choice but to genuinely live with the often dramatic moments which she is portraying.

One such moment came Saturday night when she sang Rachmaninoff's "The Soldier's Wife." A simple melody, repeated on wave-like moving notes, wrapped the audience in the desolation of a woman whose husband was killed in a war and who carries the burden of life alone in a foreign land. The effect of Price's art sank so deep in the audience that they momentarily forgot to applaud when the song ended.

In keeping with her great operatic career, Price sang two major arias listed in the program and three more for encore. From Mozart's Don Giovanni she selected Donna Anna's "Non mi dir." This is one of Mozart's vocally exacting arias which expresses in a difficult bravura Donna Anna's deep agitation, mixed with her hope that happiness and sunshine will come when her father's death at Don Giovanni's hand is avenged. Taking the tempo most comfortable for her voice, Price sang it with an emphasis on grace and dignity rather than florid overflow of notes.

The other selection on the program was Leonora's supplication to God, "Pace, mio Dio," from Verdi's La Forza del Destino. It is this portrayal that won Price many prolonged standing ovations. True to such acclaims, she poured into "Pace..." her vocal capacity in entirety, filling the large auditorium with her voice, Leonora's outbursts, and the roaring applause of the audience.

The three encores were "Tu? tu? tu?" from Puccini's Madama Butterfly, "Summertime" from Gershwin's Porgy and Bess, and "Vissi d'arte" from Puccini's Tosca. The first is Butterfly's farewell to her child, sung right before her suicide, which ends the opera. Price enacted the drama with meticulous care and passion, creating perhaps the most heart-rending operatic scene and singing of the evening.

Technically there were some rough spots in Miss Price's performance. For example, the diminuendo that follows the B-flat in "Vissi d'arte" bumped twice at the beginning and was not as impeccable as the one she effected in her recording of the Puccini arias (RCA LSC 3337). But the wonder is that she always swiftly recovered and expertly executed her work like a true prima donna. Her ending of Leonora's aria showed her keen awareness of her performance and control over technique.

Mulling over Martin

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

It might well have been a toss-up as to who was funnier at MSU's Auditorium Friday night — Martin Mull or his audience.

"Oh, so this is Lansing," said Mull, looking around the stage with obvious respect. "Hey, I bet you've probably even done it!"

And in the audience sat a very rowdy, feisty crowd, who'd just had the pleasure of booing the eminently forgettable Reverend Billy Sheets off the stage, and were prepared to do their best with Mull also. Aside from the unavoidable cries of "Where's Jerry?", members of the audience contributed their best heckling only to find that Mull wasn't quite the dimwit the opening act was.

Typical patter: "MARTIN!! There's about 500 bitches here that want your body!"

Replied Mull: "Yeah? Well there's about three cannibals here that want yours — and they're vegetarians."

Mull's unique ability to seemingly speak in italics — his sarcasm knows no bounds — can carry him across any rough spots in his material or in his audience interactions. With cracks emerging from the audience at the rate of three or four a minute, Mull's inventiveness and stage presence didn't let him down for a moment.

After a particularly pointless jibe, Mull beamed, announcing "Hey, don't get me wrong, there's room here for all races, creeds and religions. So there must be room for assholes, too." Thinking it over, he muttered, "If there weren't I'd be out of a job."

But by no means was the night dominated by hecklers from the audience. Mull's rapport with the audience — greatly strengthened by his continuous presence on the now-canceled America 2-night show — was admirable. Somehow, the fact that Mull is a certified "television star" made him more than the standard Pop Entertainment billing; the audience, hanging on to Mull's every word, seemed to sense it.

Onstage, Mull and his piano-playing accompanist alternated songs with monologues, some, like "Normal", very funny, others, like "Do the Nothing", a little better on the conceptual level than on the stage. A highlight was his "Delta Blues," played with a ukelele and "slide" baby bottle. The lyrics:

"Well I woke up this afternoon, saw that both cars were gone/ I felt so lowdown deep inside/ I threw my drink across the lawn."

But the night's best moments were Mull's interactions with the audience. "Hey, ya wanna boogie?" Mull asked, his eyebrows furrowing seductively. A pause. "Okay, go ahead. I love watching people boogie . . ." Calling for an audience-participation number, Mull noted "as in any audience-participation number, the tragically-hip are excused." The audience, asked to tap metallic objects against their seats in order to simulate a tap-dancing effect, was told: "I realize a lot of you have very little to tap on."

Nostalgia being what it is, it

Martin Mull

State News Ira Strickstein

probably would have been a lot more fun had Fred Willard — "Jerry Hubbard" to the uninitiated — been up there onstage with Mull, maybe even with Happy Kynne. Most likely, Mull doesn't want to prolong his Barth Gimble role any more than he needs to, with a healthy film career apparently in his future. A wise move, certainly — but it really would have been a lot more fun. As Mull noted, "There's a little bit of Jerry in all of you."

In all, Mull seemed caught off guard by the audience only once. Announcing that he'd just been married three weeks ago, he told the audience that he'd soon be returning home to his new wife. He seemed genuinely pleased, showing a rare glimpse of deep feeling that usually remains concealed by his normal sarcastic stage manner. Flashing a lascivious grin, Mull leered "Oh, boy! . . . She'll be pregnant by noon." Interrupting the audience's laughter, he thoughtfully added: "Of course, I don't know by whom." To which a particularly bright audience member screamed "JERRY!!" and for once, Mull was at a loss for words.

Alvin Ailey Theater show energy, sensitivity

By CONSTANCE A. WARNER
State News Reviewer

Standing ovations must be pretty routine by now for the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater. The company received their customary well-deserved tribute at the close of the second performance of their two-night engagement in the University Auditorium last Wednesday and Thursday. The two programs included several interesting revivals, three recent works by Tony Award winning choreographer George Faison, and, of course, Ailey's own stunningly effective Revelations.

One pleasant surprise was the new production of Talley Beatty's The Road of the Phoebe Snow, choreographed in 1959. In the opening tableau, a woman lies dead — or at least unconscious — upstage center. In the remainder of the work, we discover how and why she got there, as the unfortunate characters from the wrong side of the track meet, flirt, make love, fight, and almost casually destroy each other. Sarita Allen and Ulysses Dove were affecting and more than technically competent as the doomed couple, and Peter Woodin was appropriately hulking and menacing as the offhandedly cruel killer.

Choreographed in an idiom of '50s jazz and "standard" modern dance techniques, The Road of the Phoebe Snow has a naive, slightly dated look, yet it wears its age well. The steps seem finished, down to the smallest hand gesture that accents and completes a given pose or step. Beatty uses a full range of dynamics and shading; this makes his work look complex and sophisticated, even while he occasionally pulls standard old show-biz tricks.

Unfortunately, the works presented here by George Faison — Gazelle, Hobo Sapiens, Suite Otis — seem rather blatant and oversimplified when compared to Beatty's sophisticated and intricately crafted Phoebe Snow. In Faison's ballets, the chore-

HOW CAN PROVINCIAL HOSPITAL SERVE YOU?

Did you know that over 70% of the people being treated in hospital emergency rooms are receiving non-emergency care? Did you also know that more and more insurance companies are rejecting claims for this non-emergency treatment received in hospital emergency rooms?

Nevertheless, many people often use the hospital emergency room because they need medical attention after their own physician's normal office hours. This is a very expensive way to receive non-emergency treatment; but until recently there has been little choice. Now, Provincial Hospital offers an appropriate alternative, where the cost of a physician visit is about 1/3 the cost of a hospital emergency room visit.

Trojans spoil Rogers' return, 30-9

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — When MSU football coach Darryl Rogers made his first coaching appearance in California since leaving San Jose State three years ago Friday night, he had a big welcome wagon waiting for him — the Southern California Trojans.

But the Trojans weren't very hospitable to Rogers and the Spartans; in fact, USC just used the Spartans to prove what kind of football team it really is by pounding the visitors, 30-9.

"There is no question about (Alabama's football coach) Bear Bryant's statement," Rogers said. "They're a fine team. I think USC has the best personnel in the country."

"We could not make any mistakes and hope that they made a lot."

That case didn't hold true as the Trojans did everything well. There was some thought before the game that USC might let down after its big 24-14 win over Alabama the week before, but that letdown wasn't at all evident against the Spartans.

"We knew that they (MSU) would come out and play a good game," said Charles White, USC's All-American and Heisman Trophy candidate. "They were awfully physical and they were big."

If White thought that MSU was big, he's lucky he plays with USC and not against them. The Trojans were giants and they had much depth. USC kept sending in new players and each one that came into the game was as good as the guy before him.

The Spartans opened the scoring in the game, and controlled the ball in the opening quarter but they could come away with only three points out of three good drives in the first half.

On MSU's second possession, the Spartans used a 35-yard pass from Ed Smith to Eugene Byrd to get down as far as the USC 21, but couldn't get any farther and had to settle for a 38-yard field goal by freshman Morton Andersen. It was Andersen's first field goal as a Spartan.

White headed toward Heisman

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — Following Southern California's 30-9 win over MSU Friday night, the Trojans' All-American and Heisman Trophy candidate Charles White quietly accepted congratulations from his teammates and friends.

White was held to just 82 yards in 20 carries by the Spartans, only the fifth time in 17 starts as a Trojan that he didn't get over 100 yards, but he was still satisfied with his performance.

"I'm always satisfied with the way I run," White said. "The cause even if I get five yards I'm helping the team the best I can."

White did help his team a lot more than his 82 yards on the ground. He scored two touchdowns and returned one kickoff for 43 yards to get the Trojans rolling in the third quarter.

Although he is only a junior, White is a strong candidate for the Heisman Trophy and is ranked fifth in USC's career rushing with 3,061 yards. A head of White are Mike Garrett, O.J. Simpson, Ricky Bell and Anthony Davis, who ran for 3,928 yards as a Trojan.

"Right now I'm not actually thinking about it," White said.

"When you start thinking about the Heisman and breaking records you start getting lackadaisical and let down the team."

"You don't do all your detail work and that's important."

White got pounded by the Spartan defense and suffered a slight hip pointer before he was taken out in the fourth quarter. "They (MSU) played a great game," White said. "You know how people play against USC. They come to play."

The tailback position at USC is probably the most well known position in college football. The Trojans' offense is based around the tailback and that's what makes USC such a good team year after year.

The Trojans are built around their tailback but also famous for their passing attack, which gives them such great balance.

White said that he had always hoped to play college football and that it was his dream to play at USC.

"I told myself in the 10th grade if I'm going to play ball continued on page 12)

That lead was short lived as the Trojans took the kickoff and marched 81 yards in 12 plays to score on a 13-yard pass from Paul McDonald to tight end James Hunter.

The Spartans had scoring chances on their next two possessions, but the first drive stalled on the USC 28 yard line and Anderson was wide to the right on a 45-yard field goal attempt. The second ended on the 50 yard line when Byrd fumbled the ball after a pass completion.

That fumble led to the Trojans' second touchdown, which was scored by White, and the half ended with USC on top 14-3.

White, who was ranked third in the nation in rushing with a 176 yard per game average, was held to just 82 yards in 20 carries by the Spartans. In White's previous 16 starts as a Trojan, he was held under 100 yards in rushing only four times.

The second-half kickoff was returned 43 yards by White and the Trojans went straight for the kill. They cashed in on a 35 yard field goal on their first possession of the half and on a 50-yard bomb to Calvin Sweeney the next time they had the ball.

Both teams added a touchdown, USC's coming on White's second score of the night and MSU's coming on a pass from Smith to Mike Hans with 20 seconds left on the clock.

"I figured we could have fought a little better than that," Rogers said after the game. "It (playing USC) gives us a start. I think that's neat. We know where we are."

Rogers' return to California wasn't a very good one, but he knows that there will be more. He was even thinking about the future Saturday morning in the hotel lobby. With a nod and his usual soft voice he made one thing clear.

"We'll be back," he said. And that's all he had to say.

Southern California's standout tailback Charles White (12) soars over the MSU line to score the Trojans' second touchdown Friday.

Harriers defeat Kent State

The MSU cross country team posted its first victory of the year against Kent State University Saturday, 36-21, now giving the Spartans a 1-1 record.

Freshman Martin Schulist was the winner of the 10,000 meter (6.2 miles) race, his time 30:12.

"That's a really excellent time," head coach Jim Gibbard said.

Schulist had kept with the Kent State runners for some time before taking over the race.

Steve Deperro of Kent

State came in second, in 30:26. MSU's Harold Rutula took third, in 30:39. Spartan Michael White came in fourth, at 31:06. Other Spartan places were: Tim Kerr, sixth, in 31:41; Keith Moore, seventh, in 31:46; John McMillan, eighth, in 31:49; John Young, ninth, in 32:04; Jim Featherstone, 12th, in 32:50; Mark Habitz, 13th, in 32:55; Steve Carlson, 14th, in 33:02.

"It was a very fine meet, even though we had to leave Mark Mesler home because of his hip injury," Gibbard remarked.

Gibbard credits experience for the vast improvement in his team's running. "After the first meet, things got easier and we gained that valuable experience. The ability was always there," he said.

He also said the longer running distance was good for his team. In their first meet, a loss to Notre Dame, the running distance was only five miles.

"We've still got a long season ahead of us, but this was a nice first win," Gibbard said.

Spartan spikers finish fifth

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

Consistency was the key to winning the 10 team Spartan Invitational over the weekend and MSU's volleyball team didn't have it as they had to settle for fifth place.

Coach Annelies Knoppers' team's 4-5 mark during pool play Friday wasn't good enough to get them into the championship bracket for Saturday and have a shot at eventual winner DePaul.

Therefore, the best MSU could do in on Saturday's single-elimination bracket play was to get fifth place, which they did by avenging its earlier defeat to Indiana, 15-12, 14-16, 15-10.

"When we found out we didn't make the championship bracket, our goal was to take fifth place, which we achieved," Knoppers said. "Winning all three of our matches today (Saturday) made it a nice way to end the tournament."

On Friday, MSU held its ground against their tough opponents by splitting with runner up Chicago Circle, 15-9, 12-15 and Central Michigan who finished fourth, 17-19, 15-9. But splitting with its weaker opponents, Wisconsin Parkside and Cincinnati, kept MSU from reaching the championship bracket.

"We had a lot of letdowns on Friday which comes from playing a lot of matches," assistant coach Nancy Steel said. "We have to learn on concentrating more and staying on top of our game."

After splitting its first eight games on Friday, MSU still had a shot at the championship bracket, but they lost their playoff game to Michigan, 15-10, a team the Spartans swept in three games earlier in the season. Indiana then defeated the Wolverines, 15-10, to face DePaul in the first round of the championship bracket.

On Saturday, MSU faced Wisconsin Parkside in the first round of the consolation bracket. After splitting the first two games, the Spartans were trailing in the third and final game, 9-4. But then they started their first of a series of comebacks by outscoring their opponents 11-4 for a 15-14 win.

Against Michigan in the next round, MSU took advantage of the Wolverines' passive play and pounded them, 15-3. The second game, however, was a more difficult battle: MSU trailed 6-2 before squirming out a 17-15 win.

MSU then faced Indiana, which fell back into the consolation bracket after losing to DePaul, and split the first two games 15-12, 14-16. The Spartans trailed 8-1 in the third game before starting their finest of the day's comebacks. MSU closed the gap to 9-5 before taking seven straight points behind Joan Ferguson's serving for a 12-9 lead which was never relinquished.

"All day today, we hung in there and kept going," Knoppers said. "I'm pleased with that. We also have had a lot of players playing positions that they normally don't play and still did well."

STUDENT LEGAL SERVICES

Undergraduate MSU students now are eligible to participate in a pre-paid legal services plan. The plan enables students to consult a staff attorney on any legal matter. The plan also provides an attorney to represent students in a variety of civil and criminal matters.

MOST TYPICAL KINDS OF LEGAL ADVICE AND CASES HANDLED:

1. Landlord tenant problems, security deposits, interpretation of leases.
2. Small claims advice and procedure.
3. Traffic tickets, including speeding and drunk driving.
4. Minor Criminal and Civil matters.
5. Student Legal Services will refer students to various attorneys in the community for specialized legal needs.
6. The Student Defender Division provides undergraduate students with advice regarding university regulations, judiciary programs, and any other type of para-legal help necessary to resolve intra-university problems.

Student Legal Services strongly advises students to consult a staff attorney in any of the following instances:

1. Prior to filing a suit in small claims or making a court appearance in any civil or criminal matter.
2. Prior to making an agreement to settle any claim of any nature against another party.
3. Prior to giving notice of termination of lease to your landlord or co tenant.

MSU women golfers third in tourney

MSU women's golf coach Mary Fossum's feelings could best be described as optimistic but somewhat disappointed after her Spartans finished third in the Purdue Invitational this weekend.

BUF sign-up

Registration for teams for the Blue-United Front Basketball League will be today and Tuesday. Tonight's session is from 6 to 8 p.m. in 208 Men's IM Bldg. Tuesday's sign-up is from 6 to 8 p.m. in 215 Men's IM total. But the Spartans ran into some trouble Saturday and their 651 total was 30 strokes behind the winning Buckeyes.

"I was a little disappointed that we didn't do better," said Fossum, who had four freshmen playing. "The greens were in terrible condition, but you can't use that for an excuse; you just have to adjust your game."

On the brighter side, MSU senior Sue Ertl was the tournament's medalist with a 152 total. Ertl shot a 72 Friday, but she ran into some trouble with three double bogies on the back nine Saturday. "I'm glad she hung on to win the medalist honors, because she was the classiest player there," Fossum said.

The Spartans missed the services of co-captain Suzi Conlin, who was unable to make the trip. "We missed her golf and her leadership," Fossum said.

Among the freshmen, Fossum was pleased with the play of Marianne Utz of Cincinnati. Utz, despite three-putting the final green Friday, finished with an 80. On Saturday, though, she went up to an 89 for a 169 total.

Other MSU scores were:

Beth Sierra, 85-82 for 167; Lisa Speaker, 81-87 for 168; Karyn Colbert, 87-84 for 171; and Peg Bearden, 89-88 for 178.

"Marianne wasn't able to maintain it on Saturday, but she showed me a lot Friday," Fossum said.

"I guess I don't want to feel that the freshmen are being pressured. The talent is definitely there and it will just take time to develop," she continued.

The Spartans now have only two more tournaments remaining in the fall season. They will then return for a spring schedule which includes a southern trip.

MSU will play in the Indiana Invitational in Bloomington, Ind., this weekend before the Midwest Regionals the following week.

"We've had a lot of ups and downs," Fossum said. "Hopefully we can put it together the last two weeks."

USC Trojans share home

The Rams are moving to Anaheim Stadium in 1980 and UCLA is looking into the possibility of playing its home games in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena.

Perry said that the Coliseum is considered "the home of the Trojans" because of its closeness to the USC campus and that bothers UCLA but he doesn't think they will move because a move to the Rose Bowl would create too many problems for them. He also feels that the NFL will move another team into the Coliseum.

Perry feels that it is the tradition of USC that brings the people in week after week. He said the same holds true in basketball in UCLA's favor. Last year UCLA averaged over 12,000 in attendance per game while USC averaged just around 6,000.

USC has quite a tradition in football and the fact that they don't have their own stadium doesn't take anything away from that tradition. If anything, playing in the Los Angeles Coliseum adds to that tradition. The Coliseum was built for the 1932 Summer Olympics and will be the sight of the 1980 Olympics.

Southern Cal's Charles White headed for Heisman

I'm going to play with the best," White said. "If you want to be the best you have to play with the best."

White has a long career at USC and if he stays healthy and keeps up the same pace, he will easily surpass Davis' career rushing record which would put him at the top of a pretty impressive list.

He said that he isn't thinking about the records and the Heisman Trophy.

Mike Garrett and O.J. Simpson have both won the Heisman Trophy while at USC, and with two good shots left at winning it, Charles White could very possibly be the third.

graphy (and the dancers) are intensely, unremittingly, and monotonously energetic, with almost no variation in dynamics. The effect is rather like that of a continuous explosion — one quickly becomes numbed and unresponsive to the very real charms of parts of his works. Also, a somewhat larger vocabulary would help: one has the feeling that, when his inspiration flags, Faison merely shuffles the same steps around in slightly different combinations. In the process, his favorite steps — such as the end dedans attitude turn — get somewhat overused.

Alvin Ailey's Masakela Language, to a score by the South African trumpeter Hugh Masakela, is a somber and powerful work. In Masakela Language, the customers in a South African bar — complete with juke box, overhead fan, and blinking neon Miller High Life sign — dance out their frustration and alienation. By the end of the ballet, they have barely managed to repress their fury and despair, as they stare at the audience over the body of a wounded rioter who has staggered into the bar to die.

Masakela Language is, in many ways, a recapitulation of an earlier Ailey work, Blues Suite. The theme is essentially the same, i.e. how the downtrodden and hopeless deal with their hopelessness. Many of the familiar Ailey characters and situations recur in Masakela Language — for example, the lovable man chasing klutz, the male quartet, the assorted couples dancing in the bar, the identical beginning and ending of the work, etc. Yet the differences between Masakela Language and Blues Suite are even more striking.

For one thing, the individuality of the characters in Masakela Language is more clearly delineated. Instead of being universal "types" with virtually identical costumes (as in Blues Suite), the Masakela characters emerge as highly distinct personalities in a particular and realistically depicted milieu.

Also different is the way the two sets of characters resolve their dilemma. In Blues Suite, the characters know, at the end of the ballet, that there is no escape from their despair and from the forces that oppress them. In Masakela Language, the characters show a sort of sullen defiance in their defeat and impotence; and there is at least the suggestion that next time, things may turn out differently.

aware that property can be confiscated. It is better to list property, whether stolen or not, in a vehicle when a suspect has been arrested, "so the garage can't rip it off," he said.

Results from polygraph testing cannot be used as evidence in court, but as an investigating aid at times it is invaluable, Det. Lt. Ronald Beauchine, chief polygraph operator for the Michigan State Police, said.

It is an extremely effective method of establishing the truth, Beauchine said.

The principle of its use relies on a suspect's "fear of detection" and the briefing of the particular case by prosecutors and attorneys, he said.

paper. About $18,000 of it was put aboard and 11 passengers were freed.

• flew to Schiphol Airport in Amsterdam, the Netherlands, where it landed and refueled.

• flew back to Helsinki, picked up the balance of the newspaper's share of the ransom, and

• returned to Oulu, where Lamminporras freed his final three hostages, all crew members, and joined his wife. They were driven home in a car provided by authorities.
