

MAJOR ISSUES RESOLVED

Mideast pact within reach

By LARRY THORNSON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Sunday Israel and Egypt have dealt with "most of the problems" in their negotiations for a peace treaty in Washington but the proposed treaty is "not yet ready for signature."

The State Department said in Washington, meanwhile, that the negotiators had reached tentative agreement on the treaty. A State Department spokesperson said the agreement has to be approved by both governments and that some issues are still unresolved.

Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weiz-man, who came home from Washington for consultations with the Israeli government, refused to tell reporters at Tel Aviv's Ben-Gurion Airport exactly what problems have not been solved. Those subjects, they said, will be discussed at a Cabinet meeting Monday evening after the end of the Jewish Sukkot holiday.

But State Department spokesperson George Sherman said the main issues that brought the talks close to a breakdown last week — the linkage Egypt wanted between the separate peace with Israel and an overall Mideast settlement, and the timetable for complete normalization of relations — had been resolved. He would give no details of the proposed treaty.

Dayan told reporters that "what we are bringing with us is a draft text, not yet ready for signature." He said President Carter's intervention had been "very, very helpful and very efficient" but that there was still "important" problems in the draft document.

He said the draft incorporated language "which Egypt and Israel compromised and agreed upon and which we are ready to put before the Israeli government. There was definite movement on the part of the Egyptians toward us."

Observers interpreted that remark as an attempt to blunt criticism from right-wing-ers in Israel who have expressed concern that Israel might be asked to make more concessions at the Washington talks.

A major concern of some Israelis was that the Israel-Egypt peace treaty would be linked to progress toward a solution of the Palestinian issue and the future of the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Dayan said there was no linkage in the draft text but that Israel had made a political commitment to work for progress on the Palestinian issue.

"Our position is — and I think it's well established in the text — that legally the peace treaty between Israel and Egypt should stand on its own feet," he said.

He said the treaty should "not be conditional or depending on any other agreement. But politically, we are committed by Camp David not just to have an effort to reach a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, but to go on with the process of reaching agreement on Gaza and Judea and Samaria." Judea and Samaria are the biblical names for the West Bank.

The breakthrough in the talks came after intensive meetings with Carter and a long session Saturday between the delegations. After those meetings and before he left for Israel late Saturday, Dayan said "We are better off than we were a few days ago" because of Carter's intervention.

Hard-line members of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government coalition, as well as members of the opposition Labor Party, demanded briefings from Dayan and Weizman on the Washington talks.

Kennedy stumps for Fitzgerald; hits Republicans on tax bills

By ANNE MARIE BIONDO
State News Staff Writer

DETROIT — U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy told more than 850 Democrats Sunday night that he came to Michigan because he's "for the Fitzgerald campaign."

He spoke at a $100-a-plate dinner for gubernatorial candidate William B. Fitzgerald.

He urged support for the "Fitzgerald Administration" who, he said, would care about young, old, inner city, rural, urban, and industrial areas.

"I want to make it clear, I didn't come to Michigan because it's got 21 electorate votes," Kennedy said, laughing, to a roaring crowd.

"I came because I'm for the Fitzgerald campaign." And with a name like Fitzgerald if you don't make it in Michigan, come to Massachusetts."

Kennedy also honored U.S. Senate candidate Carl Levin.

"Levin and Kennedy voting together can make a difference (in the U.S. Senate)," he said, referring to the nation's elderly, whom he said have been neglected.

Kennedy also said one-third of all high school graduates of low-income families have "half the chance of going to college and one-fifth the chance of graduating (from college)."

Referring to the tax bills that recently passed Congress, Kennedy said those with less than $55,000 yearly income will see a tax increase next year.

"I didn't hear any members of the Republican party say 'No, we have to look out for the middle-income family,'" Kennedy said. "We need the kind of leadership we have here tonight."

Kennedy said the Senate Health Committee listened to some people from Michigan about PBB.

"They told their sad story of cows dying and of sickness in their families," he said. "They talked about their indifference to their state leaders."

He said the country needs Democratic leadership. "In 1961 there was 7.1 percent unemployment," he said. "That dropped to 3.5 percent by 1963 with 1.2 percent increase in inflation."

He added that former President Gerald Ford left office with a $66 billion deficit and that former President Lyndon B. Johnson left "a surplus."

He praised Fitzgerald for his concern about the economy.

Midwest S. Africa conference criticizes corporate investors

By JOANNE LANE
State News Staff Writer

EVANSTON, Ill. — General Motors, Ford, ITT and Texaco are contributing to black oppression in South Africa, participants in the Midwest Conference on University and Corporate Involvement in South Africa were told this weekend.

The conference, held at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., was sponsored by the Divestiture Working Group of Northwestern University.

Ann Seidman, an economics professor at Brown University, said corporate presence only contributes to the practice of oppressing blacks.

A number of administrative officials from multinational corporations doing business in South Africa were invited to the conference but did not attend.

Seidman, who has taught in Ghana and Tanzania, said student groups can help black Africans by setting the issue before Americans to make them aware of the situation in South Africa.

"Divestment groups must broaden their campaign and really put pressure on corporations to pull out of South Africa," Seidman said.

General Motors and ITT contribute to oppression, Seidman said, by selling trucks and cable used in the white army to the South African government.

The MSU Board of Trustees has made a resolution to divest in companies doing business in South Africa if they do not withdraw their holdings in that country.

"Eighty percent of all foreign investment in Africa is in Southern Africa," Seidman added. "And in the words of one Ford Motor executive, South Africa is profitable, labor and raw materials are cheap."

Also speaking at the conference was Drake Koka, the founder of the Black Allied Trade Union Movement of South Africa.

The Midwest conference, Koka said, was not being held to decide if divestiture is necessary.

"The decision has been made. Black South Africans will rise up to liberate themselves," he shouted. "Power to the people."

Koka, who was held in solitary confinement for eight months for trying to unite black workers, explained that no black person can own a business in South Africa, taxes for blacks are higher than taxes for whites and wage difference between blacks and whites is over $300.

"Whites get an average of $385 a month, blacks get about $70 in the highest paid jobs," he said.

Corporations only employ 100,000 of the total working population in South Africa, Koka said.

The Texaco Corporation in 1962 employed 778 people. In 1977, Texaco had only 452 South African employees due to increased productivity with new machinery, Koka said.

"Texaco claimed that they moved some black workers up in the wage scale this year," Koka said. "What Texaco did not say was they also moved whites up too so no real gain for the blacks was made."

A representative of the United Nations special committee against apartheid told the group that whites are the real stimulators of violence in South Africa.

The conference was broadcast into South Africa on the United Nations radio, the representative said.

South Africans will hear and appreciate American student efforts on their behalf for justice, he added.

"When spiders unite, they can tie up a lion," the representative said.

Incumbents in the top three statewide races have strong leads over their opponents among East Lansing voters, according to the State News Election Survey.

Voters surveyed crossed party lines to give Gov. William G. Milliken and Attorney General Frank J. Kelley three to one margin leads over their opponents, and Secretary of State Richard H. Austin a four-to-one margin lead.

Milliken was the top vote getter in the survey receiving support from 63 percent, or 227 of the respondents. His Democratic opponent, Sen. William B. Fitzgerald, trailed with 17.5 percent.

About 18 percent of the respondents are undecided, and almost 2 percent said they will write in a candidate of their own choice.

Almost half of all Democrats surveyed are crossing party lines to vote for Milliken.

Only 34 percent of the Democrats said they will vote for Fitzgerald.

Milliken who has been governor for eight years, was equally popular among students as well as homeowners.

"I like Milliken," MSU student Clifton Trammel said. "In the economic situation he has kept close to every promise that he's made. Though he may not have met all of his goals, it's getting to where he's got the momentum going to reach them."

One East Lansing Democratic homeowner indicated that he was "satisfied with Milliken" and didn't know much about Fitzgerald.

"It's a vote of confidence for Milliken," Marshall C. White said. "He's got the best interests of Michigan at heart — there aren't too many things I disagree with that he's done."

In the race for secretary of state, incumbent Austin gathered 59.1 percent of the votes while Republican opponent state Rep. Melvin Larsen gathered 15.3 percent.

Voters who were undecided tallied 24.8 percent and .8 percent of the respondents preferred candidates of their own choice.

Austin led in all 37 precincts polled, as well as all age groups.

Austin gained overwhelming support from students with a ten-to-one margin lead over Larsen. He netted 67.3 percent of the student vote while Larsen received 5.8

Party lines were crossed when 47.8 percent of all Republican voters said they would choose the democratic Austin.

In the race for attorney general, Democratic incumbent Kelley received 50 percent of the votes leaving his Republican opponent Stephen Bransdorfer trailing with 15 percent.

Kelley, who was overwhelmingly favored in student precincts 54-to-2, received about 32 percent of the Republican vote as well.

The high percentage favoring incumbents Austin and Kelley reflect that voters recognize their names while they are unfamiliar with their opponents' names. Austin has been secretary of state for eight years, and Kelley has been attorney general for 16 years.

"I'm not really familiar with the other guys," MSU student Robert Schmidt said. "Kelley has been in, so I feel that I'll vote for him," said homeowner J. Diane Hollister. "I haven't heard any derogatory remarks about him."

The State News Election Survey was made up of 361 respondents chosen at random from the East Lansing registered voters list.

The sampling error for the survey is 5.2 percent, which means the results can be interpreted as being plus or minus 5.2 percent of the percentages shown.

The State News election telephone survey was conducted Oct. 2 through 11 by MSU journalism seniors under supervision of instructor David Reddick.

Esmail in Lansing; plans return to MSU

By PAUL COX
State News Staff Writer

Sami Esmail, the 24-year-old MSU graduate student recently paroled from an Israeli prison term, returned to the Lansing area Sunday saying he wants to resume his education immediately.

Amid shouts of "Long Live Palestine," Esmail arrived at Capitol City Airport early Sunday afternoon after being granted parole Wednesday. He had served 10 months of his 15-month sentence stemming from his conviction of membership in an organization "hostile" to the state of Israel.

About 100 people showed up at the airport to greet him, including many members of the Committee to Defend the Human Rights of Sami Esmail. The sign and banner toting supporters erupted in cheers as Esmail deplaned, holding his left index finger aloft in a victory greeting.

Following many personal reunions, Esmail made a statement thanking everyone who "had the guts to stand up" and help get him out of prison.

The international publicity created by his supporters made his arrest and imprisonment an embarrassment to the Israeli government, he said.

Esmail singled out his attorney Felicia Langer for putting up "with a lot of grief" throughout the ordeal. He said she was "like a mother" to him.

Esmail has been enrolled at MSU this term to continue his work on a masters degree in electrical engineering, said Ruth Ann Osborn, office supervisor of the department of electrical engineering and systems science.

"I asked him if he wanted to take classes on a visitor status but he said he wanted to get right back into his studies full-time," Osborn said.

"I am already in school," Esmail said. "I had my books with me in prison and I tried to keep up."

Esmail appeared to be in good health when he arrived in Lansing.

"He's all right, 100 percent," said his brother Basim. "I talked to him and he seems fine." A condition of Esmail's parole was deportation and he can never return to Israel or the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River where some of his relatives live. Esmail said he was whisked out of the country before he could see those relatives.

"I figured they would allow me to come back for a week or two," he said.

Esmail said he is deeply disappointed about not being allowed to return to Israel. At his parole hearing, Esmail futilely offered to serve the remainder of his sentence in exchange for the right to visit Israel later.

While Esmail said he will be involved in the Palestinian cause in the future, he did not specify what the activity would be.

Henry Jurkiewicz, of the East Lansing Hillel Foundation, said he fears that Esmail's supporters will use the return of Sami as a political tool to further their own causes concerning the liberation of Palestine.

"We are hoping that in the spirit of Camp David, his release will be accepted and can help lead to a resolution of the conflict," Jurkiewicz said.

Defense committee member Ashraf El Bayoumi, MSU professor of biophysics, said the return of Esmail should be an occasion to rally around the Palestinian cause.

"Let us use the return of Sami to help us defeat Zionism," El Bayoumi said.

But East Lansing Rabbi Daniel Allen said the incident is "dead" and that if the committee continues to exist, its motives throughout the affair are suspect. This would indicate, he added, that the committee does not care about Esmail, but is committed to the destruction of Israel.

"I hope the whole thing will be dropped and we can now work for peace," Allen said.

Asian powers end four decades of war

TOKYO (AP) — Teng Hsiao-ping, the highest-ranking Chinese Communist leader ever to visit Japan, flew here Sunday from Peking for the ceremonial conclusion of a peace treaty formally ending four decades of war and hostility between the two Asian powers.

On Monday, the Chinese vice premier will witness the exchange of instruments of ratification of the Chinese-Japanese peace and friendship treaty signed Aug.

12 in Peking, and after the ceremony will become the first Chinese leader ever to meet with Emperor Hirohito. Teng also is to meet with Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda and other Japanese leaders during his eight-day visit.

Although Japan recognized the Peking government in 1972, the treaty formally ends four decades of hostility between the two countries that began when Japan invaded China in the 1930s.

Rome and Bologna hit by terrorists

ROME (AP) — Terrorists fire bombed targets in Rome and Bologna Saturday night, and responsibility for three incidents in Rome was claimed by the West German terrorist organization Red Army Faction, police said Sunday.

Damage was said to be slight from the attacks, which came on the eve of the inauguration of Pope John Paul II.

The Rome attacks claimed by the RAF were against the offices of the B. Ticino, an industrial firm with business in West Germany, a telecommunications office of the Italian police, and a Volkswagen dealership. The fourth target hit in Rome was a downtown movie theater frequented by leftists.

The RAF last year kidnapped and later murdered West German industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

In Bologna terrorists threw a flaming gasoline container against the house of the city's assistant attorney, Giuseppe Persico. Police said Persico witnessed the attack from a window and fired several pistol shots at the fleeing attackers.

SALT talks continue; U.S. optimistic

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators wound up almost eight hours of talks late Sunday without reporting a breakthrough on a new treaty to limit strategic arms. But the Americans sounded an optimistic note.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance described the day's second round of talks aimed at clearing key obstacles to an agreement as "constructive," a Vance spokesperson said.

The two-day round of talks is scheduled to wind up Monday but spokesperson Hadding Carter said Vance "obviously is willing to stay as long as it takes."

The impediments to a treaty restricting strategic bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles, which would be effective until 1985, are more than just matters of detail, although some compromises have been struck over the past several months.

Town searches for people to fill jobs

WARSAW, Ind. (AP) — Mayor Dale Tucker has a different kind of municipal problem — his town has more jobs than it has people to fill them.

Warsaw, a community of 10,000 situated on rolling farmland and near 100 lakes in northeastern Indiana, has an unemployment rate of 1.5 percent, and a business boom that shows no sign of slowing down.

The town conducted a survey in April to determine the employment needs of its major industries. A conservative estimate was that 1,000 additional workers would be required during the next 20 months.

So in June, Tucker raised $5,000 in contributions from local businesses and Warsaw citizens to finance a slide-tape presentation that is the cornerstone of the town's recruitment effort.

So far, the effort has attracted several new employees to Warsaw companies and scores of prospects — mainly from vocational schools.

Curiously, Warsaw was one of the cities that received federal funds under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act to provide jobs for the hard-core unemployed.

"We had a heck of a time trying to find someone to put on that program," Tucker said. "We finally came up with eight or nine fellows."

Search continues for 10 crewmembers

ST. INIGOES, Md. (AP) — One body was found and hopes dimmed for 10 other missing crewmembers Sunday as Navy and Coast Guard divers penetrated the gashed-in hull of a Coast Guard cutter that collided with a freighter and sank in the Chesapeake Bay.

Coast Guard spokesperson Lt. Joe Bridger said the body was discovered just outside the sunken cutter Cuyahoga Sunday morning.

The dead and missing men were among 29 aboard the 51-year-old Cuyahoga when it collided with a 521-foot coal freighter Friday night and sank almost immediately off Smith Point about four miles from Reedville, near the Maryland-Virginia border.

The divers, five from the Coast Guard and eight from the Navy, went to the steel-hulled 125-foot cutter, which lay on its left side on the hard sand bottom in about 57 feet of water and marked its bow and stern with buoys Sunday morning.

Boats and helicopters continued a search for the missing men, all but one of whom were Coast Guard crewmembers.

Firestone agrees to historic tire recall

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Months of intense wrangling between Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and the U.S. Transportation Department over the company's controversial "500" steel-belted radial tire have concluded on an unusual note.

While proclaiming the "500" is not defective, Firestone has nonetheless agreed to the biggest tire recall in history — potentially 7.5 million tires.

Even for a corporate giant like Firestone, the results are staggering. The recall itself will cost the tiremaker some $230 million, Firestone chairperson and Chief Executive Officer Richard A. Riley readily acknowledged. Reduced sales resulting from adverse publicity surrounding the dispute may add millions more to the Firestone's losses.

The battle over the "500" was prompted by reports of 41 deaths and 65 injuries allegedly resulting from failures of the tires.

CASTRO MAY ALLOW MORE TO EMIGRATE

Exiles criticize Cuban releases

MIAMI (AP) — Cuban dissidents in a prison near Havana say they don't understand why some exiles here are criticizing the first large-scale release of political prisoners from Cuban jails since the 1960s.

A group of 46 prisoners and 33 relatives, who were given permission to emigrate to the United States by the Castro government in August, were flown from Havana to Miami Saturday.

Some of those people who are objecting still have friends here in this prison," said Diosdado Caguana Diaz, a former Cuban Air Force MiG-17 fighter pilot who disagreed with the Castro regime and is serving a 20-year prison term. "If they were in prison, how would they propose to gain their freedom?" he asked.

Some segments of the Cuban exile community, who are opposed to any dialogue with the Castro government, have criticized the efforts of a small group of exiles who worked for almost two years to obtain the release of the prisoners.

Castro told the reporters in Havana that he may allow an additional 1,000 prisoners to emigrate to the United States by the end of the year. An estimated 3,000 such prisoners remain in the communist country.

The Castro government's decision to allow the group to emigrate was made public in August by the Justice Department in Washington.

Justice Department spokesperson Terrence Adamson said then that up to 1,000 Cubans may apply for entry to the United States under a screening program set up by U.S. authorities. The screening program was intended to weed out "spies, terrorists and common criminals," Adamson said.

Former soldier recalls his part in atomic test

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. (AP) — In 1945 the U.S. Army awarded special commendations to 133 soldiers who subjected "themselves to pain, discomfort and possible permanent injury" in a secret weapons test five months before the atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima.

Charles McGinnis was one of the volunteers who took part in the test, and he remembers how "everything turned black" and "the animals screamed and howled and then died."

He believes it when he looked up. He remembers the pitiful bleating of goats tethered to trees nearby.

Later, the soldiers were taken to a concrete block building where they were marched single-file through a room in which a man behind a glass shield undressed them with mechanical arms. They showered and went to a makeshift hospital.

Soon afterward, McGinnis was mustered out of the Army. His special commendation said he "voluntarily submitted himself to chemical agents in 21 March to 4 April 1945."

McGinnis said he has no bitterness for the Army. "I'd do anything again for my country if I thought it would be worthwhile," he said. "Even now."

Thousands view papal ceremony

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II assumed the throne of St. Peter Sunday before one of the largest crowds in Vatican history and reached out symbolically to Roman Catholics in the Soviet bloc.

Polish pilgrims waved the red-and-white flag of their Communist land as the former archbishop of Krakow was installed as leader of the world's 700 million Roman Catholics, history's first Polish-born pope.

Like the Sept. 3 installation of his predecessor, John Paul I, the new pope decided against the traditional crowning with the beehive-shaped papal tiara, and against being carried by a dozen footmen in the gilded, portable throne.

Instead, the 58-year-old pontiff donned a simple white wool stole signifying his duty as the bishop of Rome and the patriarch of the church. He then celebrated Mass with 112 cardinals.

The Vatican said 300,000 persons crammed into St. Peter's Square under cloudy skies for the solemn rite.

Dayton Hudson issue continues to heat up as election day nears

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

In a public forum, a participant doesn't usually pose the first question to his opponent; but then the Dayton Hudson mall battle is not your ordinary political campaign.

Voters will decide the fate of the proposed regional mall Nov. 7 after months of controversy over whether residents could indeed have the final say on a rezoning issue.

So Peter Hutchinson of Dayton Hudson Properties and James Anderson of Citizens for a Livable Community, the group that led the referendum drive, are debating the pros and cons of the regional mall throughout the city.

At the Bailey neighborhood Pump House Thursday, Hutchinson asked the first question:

"What alternatives would Citizens for a Livable Community pose as better locations for a Dayton Hudson mall?"

Anderson said his group doesn't believe there is a need for a full-scale mall but there seems to be a demand for a limited retail facility such as a Hudson's. He suggested Lansing, Frandor and East Lansing as possible options.

"I hate to give up on the potential for development in downtown East Lansing," he said. "We put in a Jacobson's without drastic harm."

Hutchinson said his corporation reviewed Lansing and the Frandor area at great length but neither had adequate roadways or parking.

After Hutchinson explained how his company had helped turn Minneapolis around by pouring a great deal of money into a downtown Hudson's which was declining along with the rest of the city, Anderson asked him why his company wasn't willing to do that in this area.

Hutchinson said no establishments had to be torn down in Minneapolis to make room for the Hudson's facility. In Frandor, it would be a question of which retailers to throw out of business, he said.

Concerns about strip development were brought up by an East Lansing resident living near Lake Lansing Road.

Anderson questioned whether strip development could be avoided even though the city and Dayton Hudson were opposed to it.

"Courts tend to take the position that owners of land cannot be denied the reasonable use of their property," he said.

The mall is the "trigger decision" because it would be perceived by the courts as a drastic change in land use planning in East Lansing, he said.

Hutchinson said although courts do vest rights in ownership, they don't "vest rights to put junk up." The site plan review process which a developer must go through after land has been rezoned is the more important step for guaranteeing quality development, he said. East Lansing's review process demands high standards, he said.

Anderson said East Lansing would not have control over pressures toward strip development on Lake Lansing Road in Meridian Township to the east and Lansing to the west.

Councilmember John B. Czarnecki, a resident of the Bailey neighborhood, said the City Council does not want strip development on Lake Lansing Road and would fight it.

Though he couldn't guarantee strip development wouldn't take place because of how the courts might rule, Czarnecki said the trend is toward letting cities develop as they see necessary for the health, safety and welfare of the residents.

International study topic at open house

By THERESA D. McCLELLAN
State News Staff Writer

Students and professors who participated in the previous Overseas Studies Programs were present at an open house held at the International Center Friday evening.

Various tables were set up where interested students could gather information about overseas programs and the financial aid available for them.

"Even though enrollments have tripled over the last couple of years, there are still students that are unaware of what we have to offer," said Charles Gliozzo, director of International Programs.

The establishment of a minority grant is one of the new things the overseas program has to offer, Gliozzo said.

This grant was started to bring more minority students into the program, he said.

'There is less than 5 percent participation from minorities and we would really like to see more,' Charles Gliozzo, director of International Programs.

"There is less than 5 percent participation from minorities and we would really like to see more," Gliozzo said.

"We would also like to see more programs in Latin America and Africa," he said.

Sophomores Marita Kesper and Kim Harper told of their experiences in the Canadian Rockies in the Natural Science Program.

"We usually hiked 12 to 14 miles a day," Kesper explained. "I was experienced in backpacking but my tenting partner, Kim, was not."

"It was really good because we got to get a firsthand view of the different rock formations and we also learned how to backpack," Harper said.

"I was really impressed with England's national health care service," said Junior Betsy Leib while relating her experiences concerning the Humanities and Social Studies program in London.

"Some of the students were sick and doctors made house calls," she said.

On her first day in London, Leib's wallet was taken from her purse. She demanded it back, she said, and the pickpocket reluctantly returned it.

"I was surprised that he gave it back so easily," she said. "I didn't have anything to hurt him with."

"However," she said, "I do not want anyone to get the wrong impression of London because that can happen anywhere. I was also impressed with the amount of cultural events offered. They were very reasonable."

However, she said, most things were more expensive in London but that was to be expected.

"That is one other thing I wish we could combat," Gliozzo said, "the decline of the dollar."

Mondale rallies support for Fitzgerald campaign

YPSILANTI — Vice President Walter Mondale stopped here Friday morning to rally support from Eastern Michigan University students for the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, William B. Fitzgerald.

Speaking to about 900 enthusiastic Democratic supporters, Mondale emphasized Fitzgerald's leadership capabilities, something Gov. William G. Milliken, who is seeking re-election, has been quick to criticize.

During the state gubernatorial race Milliken has pointed to Fitzgerald's low roll-call attendance, citing it as an example of his inability to lead the state.

"Clearly the issue of this campaign is leadership," Milliken has said on several occasions. "Fitzgerald preaches it but he has not practiced it." Milliken has claimed that Fitzgerald has missed 2,837 roll call votes this year.

In spite of these political blasts, Mondale commended Fitzgerald for his "leadership" role in successfully developing several critical areas of the state.

"Bill led the fight for what is known around the country as the sunshine laws," Mondale said, "opening the doors of the legislative process so the people can find out what is going on behind those doors."

Mondale also credited Fitzgerald as a leader of campaign financing reform.

Charging that too much money is made available for political campaigns, Mondale said the present campaign financing "raises possibility to compromise and even corruption."

"Bill Fitzgerald has been one of the leaders demanding change and reform that is so much needed," he added.

Also present on the platform were Fitzgerald's running mate, Olivia P. Maynard, U.S. Senate candidate Carl Levin and state Supreme Court candidate Justice G. Mennen Williams.

Speaking against James Brickley, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor and currently president of EMU, Mondale took a chance and received applause and cheers.

"Olivia's opponent announced that he never wanted to spend another day as lieutenant governor," Mondale said, "and you can help him achieve that." Brickley served as lieutenant governor to Milliken from 1970 to 1974.

Prior to the rally, Mondale addressed a closed press conference answering reporters' questions unrelated to the statewide elections.

He denied rumors that the Mideast peace talks in Washington are failing between Israel and Egypt.

"I think good progress is being made," he said. "It is expected that there will be negotiating disputes. I am very confident that there will be an Egyptian Israeli peace treaty, and I hope very soon."

On inflation, Mondale said the administration is "working in a broad range" to raise the value of the U.S. dollar.

He said President Carter will be announcing an "anti-inflation program" soon.

In addition, Mondale said it is expected that the new energy package and export policy will be "helpful."

"We've also dropped the deficit we inherited by $28 million," Mondale said.

"All of these steps will be helpful," he added. "We're going to see the dollar coming back."

City chamber supports mall

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

The proposed Dayton Hudson mall gained the support of the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce Friday.

Chamber President Nanette Martin told members of the media at the 10:30 a.m. press conference, "We welcome 'The Cedars' and trust for an overwhelming yes vote on the mall proposal."

Dayton Hudson properties director Peter Hutchinson said the mall would house about 100 specialty stores and three major department stores, including Hudson's, J.C. Penney's and a yet undetermined third store.

East Lansing residents will vote on whether or not the mall is to be built at the U.S. 127 and Lake Lansing site on the Nov. 7 referendum.

Chamber board of directors met with Dayton Hudson; Citizens for a Livable Community, an anti-mall group; and Lansing area merchants before reaching a decision, Martin said.

Board members separated "emotion from facts" and decided to support the mall, Martin said.

"There is little or no base for many of the opponents' statistics," she said.

Martin cited a claim made by Citizens for a Livable Community that pointed to a 10 percent decline over the last six years in retail sales. Martin said opponents who made the claim admitted that the figure was only an approximation, not an actual statistic.

James Anderson, coordinator for Citizens for a Livable Community, told the State News the state treasury department discontinued publishing county breakdown of sales in 1975. Sales figures were still published after 1975 concerning statewide sales, Anderson said.

Using county breakdown figures for 1972 through 1975 and statewide figures for the remaining two years, plus information from Lansing area merchants, the group deduced that retail sales adjusted for inflation were down by almost 10 percent, Anderson said.

"Business is there," Martin said. "Surveys have been done. Dayton Hudson knows they have reason to spend large funds."

Bicyclist avoids killer tigers and elephants

By MICHAEL MEGIERIAN
State News Staff Writer

Lloyd Sumner pedaled out of his native Riner, Va. home on a brisk morning in Nov. 1971 — and kept on going.

Four years and 28,478 miles later he returned, crossing four continents on his bike with only 40 pounds of supplies and a load of self-determination.

Sumner, a 34-year-old computer artist, embarked on the voyage after finding himself homeless in Charlottesville, Va.

"A friend offered me room and board," he said. "But then he got married and kicked me out."

So Sumner began his journey West, ignoring the warnings and jeers of his friends. Pedaling through the near-freezing temperatures of the southern Midwest, Sumner pitched his camp along the road in the light blankets of late-autumn snow.

Besides finding refuge one night in a Dustin, Okla. jail, Sumner accepted lodging offers from families, which he said he was able to do about 50 percent of the time.

Sumner met the Pacific Ocean a few months later and proceeded north to Alaska. Climbing Mt. McKinley was the most thrilling venture of the trip, Sumner said, describing the climb as "walking with the angels."

The peak's sub-zero conditions greatly contrasted Sumner's experience in Hawaii, where he literally looked into one of the island's many volcanoes.

New Zealand was the next stop, where Sumner said he observed a land of 3 million people and 60 million sheep. Australia followed, a most barren land, said Sumner, who added he traveled Australia's 720-mile Nullarbor plain without seeing a soul.

However, he did observe many galahs and parrots, who travelled about him for miles at a time, stopping when he did and slowing their flight to maintain an equal pace with the lone biker.

Sumner's first contact with the Eastern world came in Timor, Indonesia, where he and the captain of the ship that transported them across the sea befriended three locals. Sumner offered the men chewing gum, a friendly gesture, he said, which produced amusing results.

"Two of the men chewed the gum up and all," he said. "The other man said he was saving it as an engagement gift for his fiancée."

Sumner had his own encounter with near-marital bliss. While in Java, he inadvertently accepted a marriage proposal from a young native. But it was his encounter with white magic that is most memorable to him.

"I felt like there was a porcupine in me," he said. "This woman who had no education offered to make me well. In five minutes I was as healthy as I am now."

Throughout the sojourn, Sumner said he was rarely afraid.

"As long as I am living fully each moment," he said. "I don't care when I die."

But while pedaling through Sumatra and Malaysia, Sumner said he was warned many times of the killer tigers, which had struck 43 times in one year. Sumner asked a local if the animals had killed anyone riding a bicycle.

"No," the man replied. "Tigers don't ride bicycles."

The rest of Sumner's trip included being chased three miles by an elephant, riding an ostrich, proceeding west to Africa after a quiet Christmas in India and treading the permanent snow in Kenya, an area five miles from the equator.

Upon reaching Victoria Falls, Sumner's odometer read 24,901 miles — the distance around the world.

Sumner, who presented slides and an informal talk sponsored by MSU Cooperative Extension Service in Keldie Hall Saturday, said his expenses were minimal. Food and shelter averaged out to about $2.07 per day, he said, and bicycle expenses were just over a penny per day.

ASMSU joins drive to halt tuition aid for private universities

By CATHERINE RAFTREY
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU will join the Michigan Council About Higher Education in a drive aimed at halting a $6.2 million tuition aid program for private colleges and universities.

MCHE is a new organization which has been formed with the immediate goal of combating Public Act 105.

Last spring Public Act 105 was enacted, requiring the state to provide $500 in tuition aid to every full-time Michigan freshman in an approved private college.

Another incoming class will be covered each succeeding year until all college students in Michigan at designated private schools have tuition subsidies in 1981.

The law provides automatic tuition grants to students regardless of financial need or academic merit.

The first payments are scheduled to be made this fall for the fiscal year which began Oct. 1.

Gov. William G. Milliken supports this measure claiming such financial assistance is justified because of the educational contributions private institutions make.

The state already finances private education by reimbursing private colleges for the number of degrees awarded. Allocations of $2.8 million in addition to scholarships, tuition grants and payments for professional degrees were made last year.

MCHE describe themselves as an organization which responds against laws and actions which threaten the integrity and viability of public higher education.

The organization is led by Robert Carins, dean of the College of Engineering at University of Michigan-Dearborn, and Annetta Miller, vice president of the State Board of Education.

Dan Black, director of the ASMSU Legislative relations cabinet, said they will initiate a petition drive sometime after Nov. 7.

He explained that the reason for the delay was because they were already involved in several other programs concerning the upcoming November election.

Robert Perrin, vice president for University and federal relations said, MSU has not yet made a public stand on the issue.

Members of MCHE charge that the act will divert funds from needy students at public colleges and universities. It will also violate the Bill of Rights, which calls for separation of church and state by giving money to schools with religious ties.

The council launched a petition drive Sept. 7 to try to halt the program and force a referendum on the law.

If the drive is successful in obtaining the 132,851 needed signatures, the referendum will be placed on the November election ballot in 1980. The program would be discontinued if the necessary signatures are gathered until voted on during that election.

"We're trying our darndest to stop this law," Carins exclaimed, adding that "There are several reasons why it's bad."

He charged the law was "unconstitutional and ridiculous" because the "government and Legislature acknowledged they cannot adequately support the existing 44 state schools."

Carins said the law would make the taxpayers support 44 additional schools and give money to students whether they needed it or not.

Since the petition drive began, a lawsuit has been brought against the MCHE.

Miller said supporters of the law are charging the state promised money to students attending private schools which gave them a false impression regarding tuition costs. She explained it was not the state, but rather the universities and colleges themselves who promised the money.

Carins explained 11 students at private universities and colleges are bringing about the suit, which will be heard today by Circuit Court Judge Harrison at 2 p.m. in Mason.

"MCHE is under the impression the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities has sponsored the group," Carins said.

"They're the ones that are responsible for the Legislature passing the dumb law," he added.

Carins said he believed the association putting up the money for the lawsuit, yet explained he did not have proof.

Rhodesia deserves what Zimbabweans will bring

After the events of last week, Rhodesia is ever so much closer to becoming Zimbabwe — the land of black majority rule. Ian Smith's government, in a "daring" attempt to wipe out its opposition, has done the opposite. The rocket attacks on "guerilla" bases located in neighboring Zambia and Mozambique, which killed over 1,500 people, will undoubtedly serve to solidify black Africans in their hate for Smith's regime.

Smith agreed recently to U.S. and British proposals of an all-parties conference including two ex-patriated leaders of black Zimbabweans, Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo. Smith agreed on the talks with the provision that there would be no conditions imposed on him by the two black leaders. As Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere pointed out, an all-parties meeting without conditions is an all-parties meeting on Smith's conditions.

Rhodesia's generals, apparently angered by Smith's sellout to the idea of an all-parties conference, felt obliged to take it upon themselves to ensure that there would be no conference. One definite way to ensure that was to stage the massive raids that they did. As could be expected, both black leaders have since rejected the idea of any talks, with or without conditions and said in effect the conference will be Spoken with bullets.

In the short run, Smith has scored a victory. There will be no all-parties talks, as the United States had hoped. And in a technical sense, the black leaders will be found at fault since they will be the parties backing out. Smith will be able to trumpet, as he has been doing all along, that he has buckled to the whims of the United States and British and abided by their requests. Once again the blame will be put on the black leaders and once again Smith will beg for arms to control his enemies.

Which brings up another point. Where did Rhodesia get the rockets and napalm to blast the rebel bases? Supposedly there is a United Nations-imposed arms embargo on Rhodesia, yet they continue to slaughter with U.S. and British-made arms. Third party intermediaries such as South Africa, Belgium and Israel are possibilities, but the Rhodesians refuse to say. They are definitely not produced in Rhodesia, however. The only thing being produced in Rhodesia at this time is hate. Smith's actions imply that he cultivates this hate in hope that the Western world will take pity on his "democracy." But Smith's Rhodesia does not deserve pity — it deserves the fate Nkomo and Mugabe have planned for it.

CBS made proper choice

CBS has decided to postpone broadcast of an episode of the "Lou Grant" show starring Ed Asner because of concerns over the political effects the show might have. That episode, loosely patterned after Michigan's PBB fiasco, examines the bureaucratic response to a chemical mishap and subsequent health problems.

State Democratic Chairperson Morley Winograd has expressed his discontent with network explanations that the show was postponed at the request of affiliate stations. He has hinted that the Republicans, fearful of a potential backlash against Milliken's handling of the PBB mess after the scheduled Nov. 6 broadcast, asked the network to pull the show.

There is no basis for the Democrat's concerns. The Republicans would be stooping pretty low if they tried to influence a network to postpone or cancel a program. It would be politically damaging weeks before the election. The Democrats would be reasoning the same political low if they attempted to influence a network to broadcast that same show. They seem to be doing just that.

There is a good reason for postponing the broadcast until after the Nov. 7 election. Many people are unable to distinguish between fact and fiction on television. The show, although based on a true incident, is still spiced with inaccuracies to give it entertainment value. Too many people would assume that the show's heroes and villains have real-life counterparts; after all, they would reason, the incident really did happen.

"Lou Grant" is not a documentary. It is not pure fact. If the show was based on an incident totally unrelated to real life, there would be no problem. Viewers could take everything as contrived. But some parts of the show are bound to be based on fact, and some not, creating a problem where we don't know what to believe. Many viewers, their emotions aroused, could conceivably believe everything they are told. This would cause a great injustice to the villain's real-life counterpart, presumably the governor.

An earlier broadcast date could have brought the issue out into the open, where the fatty fiction would have been picked away from the meat. But a show broadcast the night before the election would have given it all the meat indistinguishable from the fat. It was too late to schedule the show for earlier, so the network was forced to postpone the episode until a later date.

The later date may not bring the issue into a proper political perspective, but it will keep the show from being distorted for political purposes.

Winograd, in a telegram to CBS president Gene Jankowski, said "the political implications of this action are obvious and require immediate public explanation." CBS and the Republicans have denied a Republican influence in the show's postponement. Perhaps the actions which require immediate public explanation are those of the state Democrats.

Iran can decide own fate

The recent fracas between MSU Iranian students and the Spartacus Youth League at the International Center brings into focus a problem that many Westerners face when trying to understand Iran and its turmoil. On one hand are Iranian students, citing democratic principles as they call for the end of the Shah's blood-stained regime. On the other is Young Spartacus, also citing democratic principles as they call for the end of the Shah's regime. Though on the surface they don't appear as contradictions, they definitely are at opposites.

Who is right and who is wrong? To the Western mind, the Young Spartacus would be right. But by the definition of democracy, the Iranians are. The Spartacus like the situation in Iran to the even of the 1917 Bolshevik revolution. After the revolution, they would contend, Iran will be ready for democratic-type civil liberties — free speech, free press, free associations and a separation of church and state.

However, there is nothing inherent in democracy to guarantee such conditions. Democracy, quite simply, is one person, one vote. And nothing more. The liberties that Western minds have grown accustomed to lumping with the definition of democracy are guaranteed by a written constitution — our Bill of Rights.

If Iran were suddenly allowed to exercise democracy, one can be sure that separation of church and state would not occur. Iran would in fact become a Muslim state, guided by the ancient laws of the Koran. This would mean liquor would be illegal, cinemas would be outlawed, women would wear veils, gambling would be forbidden and capitalism — the ultimate form of gambling — would not be tolerated. By Western definitions, it would be a reactionary trend, a step backwards in time. But it would come about by democratic means — even the women who are reduced to second-class citizens, by Western standards, would vote in the church overwhelming.

If that is so, one may argue, then the Shah must be construed as a progressive, liberalizing force in Iran. To conventional Western minds, that would be true. The Shah has brought Western ideals to Iran. But Iranians, as the thousands of deaths more than prove, do not want this for their country.

But hope is not gone for Iran. The only thing to strive for is education — a slow transition for Iran. As each Iranian student comes to America — the first lesson learned is tolerance. Americans can and do bear just about anything. Strict Muslims attribute this to moral decay, but the lesson is still learned. These young, educated Iranians are the elites — they will run Iran in 20 years. The lessons will not be forgotten, their religious state will know tolerance — something the Young Spartacus and the Shah of Iran cannot fathom.

Public expects perfection from only human police

In few other professions are the hassles more prevalent or the rewards less satisfying than that in police work.

As pointed out in a column last week, police officers suffer from professional isolationism and serious mental health maladies, which are brought about by the nature of their work.

But to point the finger of blame only at the law enforcement profession is blatantly unfair. Anytime one points a guilty finger at someone else there are three other fingers pointing back at the accuser.

Police officers are the way they are partly because of their job, but many of the problems and expectations put on them by the public contribute directly to their attitudes about "us."

In almost every facet of police work the final results are a "no-win" proposition.

That is especially true in the non-violent and routine police-citizen contacts that are so conspicuously absent in dramatic TV series' about cops.

In the routine, day-to-day world of police work, demands by citizens create innate frustration and a hardened police exterior to the petty complaints of people in general.

Frustrated parents call upon and expect the police to "straighten out" their wayward children. Fighting spouses want the police to solve their marital difficulties and lonely alcoholics call them simply because no one else wants to listen.

Citizens want their streets safe from speeding cars, but they don't want the police giving "them" speeding tickets.

People want a place to park when they go downtown, but "they" don't want a ticket when they overstay their welcome at the meter.

One of the main problems with our society is that there exists an overabundance of laws and ordinances which cover offenses ranging from murder to dogs moving their bowels on public sidewalks.

Many times we direct our anger and frustration about the proliferation of stupid laws at those who enforce them and not those who make them. It is, after all, the easy way out.

Take the true example of a mayor of a small city who complains to the police chief that there are too many speeding cars on Main Street.

The chief puts an officer out to trap the speeding motorists, and guess who the first one nabbed is, yep, the complaining mayor. Does the mayor get a ticket; yes. Does the mayor have to pay; no, because the chief quietly dismisses the tag before it makes its way to court.

Was there frustration for the officer who was doing his job as he was told to do it? You better believe it.

A police officer learns directly that which the rest of us only suspect — that there is a double standard of justice. Mayors, who can afford to pay their tickets, don't have to. But someone on welfare either pays or goes to jail.

It's wrong, but it's real, and no one knows it better or likes it less than patrol officers. Justice translates to "just us" when the power structure of the country is affected.

Cops work in the cesspool of society, so it is not incomprehensible that they become hardened and seemingly uninterested in problems which may seem momentarily monumental to "us."

We ask cops to handle our neighborhood dirty work, like telling our neighbors to quiet their party or their dog. What ever happened to neighbors communicating with their neighbors?

Officers are sometimes asked to play chauffeur for important officials both on private and official business. Council persons often have officers deliver, ala the Postal Service, their council mail instead of driving down to city hall and picking it up themselves.

In short, we ask police officers to be pleasant, kind and understanding, while at the same time they must be firm, brave and sometimes hard-nosed.

Concurrently, we require them to be the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker — willing to do a myriad of petty chores we would be better off handling ourselves.

There exist many internal problems and policies associated with police departments that should be addressed for the welfare of citizens, but let's not forget we on the outside must share the blame.

Next time: Police weaponry — Too much, too little or just enough?

System is fine

The proposed presidential structural change coming before the ASMSU Student Board is not only an unnecessary change, it is totally unfair to undergraduate students. As an active member of several University-funded student committees, I have had ample opportunity to prejudice the strengths and weaknesses of the MSU student government system from within. Despite its weaknesses, ASMSU has been quite responsive to student input largely because undergraduate students currently have the right to directly vote their president into office. It is my belief that any structural change in the present ASMSU constitution will promote increased ineffectiveness within the system.

evening, as did everyone else I talked to. As for your appearance, very crude to say the least. Anyone who goes to a grand opening press party looking like a scuzz and acting as one would expect from a dog in heat should be treated like a peon!

I wish to thank the people who planned and organized the press party for the fine evening and generous conduct which I received. It was pure class!

Sami not required to remain silent

Let us hope that Rabbi Daniel Allen was misquoted in last Thursday's State News when he labelled Sami Esmail a "convicted terrorist" and summarily abridged First Amendment rights of free speech by contending that "Esmail will have to prove himself by acting in a quiet and peaceful manner." The Israeli courts did not convict Sami of terrorist activity, so why should Rabbi Allen? Sami was convicted on vague charges of membership in an organization hostile to the state of Israel, and both the evidence and the verdict were, at best, "controversial." Nor is any American citizen required to remain "quiet" or "peaceful" — lawful political protest is still protected by our First Amendment, despite the efforts of some local citizens, federal agencies and the Israeli government to discourage it.

If there was a misquotation, Rabbi Allen will hopefully clarify his position. Otherwise, it will take a heroic individual to readjust to a climate of bigotry and prejudice which some members of the community have displayed, and to which this type of remark contributes.

'Drive Away Cancer' marathon features 1979 Pinto first prize

By MICHAEL MEGERIAN
State News Staff Writer

Members of Delta Chi Fraternity will soon be holding on to their horse — or at least a Pinto.

The fraternity, in cooperation with the American Cancer Society, will be signing up persons interested in participating in Delta Chi's "Drive Away Cancer" marathon now through Oct. 26.

The 72-hour marathon, which will be held Nov. 2 and continue through Nov. 4, will feature a 1979 Ford Pinto as first prize.

Participants will be required to gather $300 in pledges to qualify for the event. All contestants will hold onto ropes attached to the car and the winner will be judged according to whoever holds on the longest and collects the most pledges.

Curtis Ford, a Lansing area car dealer, donated the new Pinto, which is valued at $3,325. Eric Curtis, general manager of Curtis Ford, said the American Cancer Society contacted him about the drive. Curtis said he thought it was a good idea.

"I've appreciated the efforts of the society in the past," he said. "So we decided to help out."

Carl Bressler, who along with Terry Moffat is coordinating the drive, said the marathon will be held outside the car dealership, 3003 E. Michigan Ave., under a tent. Bressler added that heaters will be provided.

Participants will be allowed to bring one article of comfort such as a sleeping bag, blanket or chair. Participants will also be allowed to stand, sit or lie down during the competition. Breaks will be limited to 10 minutes per hour and no alcoholic beverages will be allowed.

Moffatt said one Delta Chi member will be participating in the marathon and has already collected about $1,000 in pledges.

Moffatt added that Delta Chi members will be visiting area high schools and soliciting pledges from students.

Moffatt said the American Cancer Society approached the fraternity while the drive was already in operation.

"We've never had a continual social services project," he said. "When the society got my name, we agreed to help out. We're sort of running the show for them."

Persons interested in participating in the marathon may call Moffatt at 332-0866.

Greeks ask housing rehabilitation

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

A request from 29 fraternity and sorority houses totaling $125,000 for housing rehabilitation was made to the East Lansing Commission on Housing and Community Development.

Eugene Fattore, 239 Oakhill, a member of Phi Gamma Delta, represented the Greeks at a public hearing of the CHCD Thursday night in 54B District Court, 301 M.A.C. Ave.

The hearing was the first of six to be held by the CHCD for citizens to give input on the next three-year multi-million dollar community development program.

Community development funds, which are administered through the department of Housing and Urban Development, must be used to eliminate and prevent slums and blight. They must also primarily benefit low- and moderate-income families and persons.

"Several houses are having problems with plumbing and several need better insulation and electrical rewiring," Fattore said.

A number of sorority houses need eaves troughs, re-roofing, storm doors and windows, and the repair of cracks in basement walls Fattore added.

The 29 Greek houses are in "target areas" that are slated for funding under the community development program.

Several commissioners asked Fattore if the housing problems were actual code violations. Community development funds are designed to bring houses up to city code standards.

"We need certification from the houses that their residents are low and moderate income, IRS statements will suffice," said Brad Pryce, group manager for housing and community development.

Commissioner Audrey Maron requested that the Greeks supply the commission with a list of the 29 houses and the amount of dues paid by each member. Also, Maron requested the date the houses were last inspected and the number of violations found in each house and where the upkeep income for each house comes from.

Fattore said that the Greek houses are primarily owned by housing corporations and that they are non-profit housing units like co-ops.

Pryce said they "probably would be eligible for funds" because most of the residents are low- or moderate-income persons.

The Tenants Resource Center also requested $10,000 from the Community development funds to provide an "on site" counseling service for city tenants and landlords who cannot attend the TRC during regular hours.

"We have in the past received various requests for on-site counseling," Yvonne Nanasi, TRC center director said.

The funds would go for hiring four on-site counselors, one information service director, and office supplies.

Community development funds would provide 20 percent of the workers' fees and 80 percent would come from MSU's work study program.

Commissioner Bill Beachler suggested that this might be duplicating existing city services and recommended that the TRC investigate this before submitting a final proposal.

EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequalled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Hall and Oates show style, power

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

Daryl Hall and John Oates were surprisingly fine in concert Friday night, pulling off their third triumphant arena appearance with a combination of style and powerful rock 'n' roll.

Such a success is vital for the duo at this point in their careers — the success of "Sara Smile" and "Rich Girl" now being well behind them — and their appearance at the MSU Auditorium, billed as the most intimate appearance of their "14 tour," confirmed that the pair hasn't just ridden with its audience.

Being the same band they brought to town last year, Hall and Oates touched on their hits but never relied on them, instead presenting their newer material and letting the power of the band take care of everything else. Calling the band "The John Oates Band" is not only inaccurate but also somewhat collectively consisting of guitarist Caleb Quaye, bassist Kenny Passarelli, drummer Roger Pope, saxophonist Charlie De Chant and keyboardist David Kent, the band is clearly all its own and one of Hall and Oates' greatest assets.

Again, Daryl Hall is the dominating creative force of the duo, writing the lion's share of material and singing most of Friday night's lead vocals. Tall and very skinny, Hall alternately played keyboards and electric guitar as he sang. Hall's stage presence in many ways suggests that of a slightly more aloof Todd Rundgren, of ten compared with Rundgren, Hall shares with the guitarist a similar Philadelphia background and excellent ear for melody, and a penchant for creative experimentation. The word is that the much awaited Daryl Hall Robert Fripp collaboration is due for release after Along the Red Ledge. Hall and Oates' new album, reaches its commercial peak. The collaboration should be extremely interesting.

State News: Ira Strickstein

Conclusive proof that Daryl Hall is twice the size of the mustached John Oates? It may just be a matter of perspective, but literally or figuratively, proportions didn't matter in Friday night's power-packed rock 'n' roll show.

John Oates seemed content in the background Friday night, playing rhythm guitar and contributing an occasional backing vocal on Hall's songs. Oates is nowhere near the prolific writer Hall is. Red Ledge contains only three tunes by him and a few minor lyrical contributions to those by Hall.

Of the pair, Oates has the most "soulful" voice and comes across as the warmer performer. Hall's androgyny occasionally seemed vaguely unsettling in concert, suggesting an unspoken element of insincerity or a "show biz" fixation that seers toward coldness. It's interesting that Hall is the dominant figure of the two, as

Hall and Oates' current direction is aimed entirely toward Hall's rock inclinations rather than Oates' own R&B preference.

Much like Beauty on a Backstreet, the new Hall and Oates album favors heavy rock 'n' roll with only occasional references to the R & B dynamism that brought the pair to fame. There are no "Sara Smile"s or "She's Gone"s on the duo's new records, and therefore were few in their stage show Friday night. Interestingly, few people really seemed to mind. Sure, "Sara Smile" and "Rich Girl" were greeted with hoots of appreciation — but so did the new single "It's a Laugh," a rock-based song that's a far cry from Philly soul.

To their credit, Hall and Oates are moving forward continually. As their Rundgren-produced War Babies was an abrupt about-face from its Abandoned Luncheonette predecessor, Hall and Oates seem to be disregarding their past with all eyes set for the future, toward an artistic goal that they've apparently yet to reach. Such a choice on their part is entirely commendable.

And as for live performance — their show's never been better. The band, now with Hall and Oates for over a year, has tightened up into a superb unit totally familiar with the material and continually improving on it. Especially noticeable was guitarist Quaye, who tastefully injected a few heavy metal riffs into some of Oates' more soulful songs, thereby making what ever musical directional differences their might be entirely minimal.

In all, Hall and Oates seem to know exactly what they're doing, writing and playing unique music that is entirely their own. Certainly the best I've ever seen them play, the duo's performance was clearly just one of another in a line of successes for them. Keep a lookout for the Hall-Fripp LP, and if you haven't picked up Along the Red Ledge yet, believe me — you should. They're good, and they certainly showed it Friday night.

Editor's note: City Boy, Friday night's opening band, will be looked at in greater detail in tomorrow's State News.

'The Wiz' at MSU: what can be said but 'great'?

By REGINALD THOMAS
State News Reviewer

Everything that could be said about the original Broadway musical The Wiz has been said. Its music was chosen as best musical score and received a Grammy and a Tony award while the play itself won seven Tony awards.

So after such acclaim, what can an East Lansing reviewer say about The Wiz that has not already been said? Not much — except that it was great.

Not as great as the original Broadway cast. But as great as anticipated.

The Wiz, presented Thursday night at the MSU Auditorium, takes the old adage of The Wonderful Wizard of Oz and sets it to a swinging soulful beat. The characters are made "hip" and modern while maintaining some of their original characteristics.

The play opens in the yard of Dorothy (Deborah Malone) who questions her worth. Soon a tornado hits and the audience is propelled into Dorothy's fantasy world.

Dorothy's Broadway fantasy takes her and the audience along a singing and dancing yellow brick road. The road is as fascinating as any of the other characters. Through Dorothy we meet some of the most interesting people possible.

Where else but in Dorothy's fantasy can one meet a Scarecrow, Tinman and Lion that talk, sing, and dance?

Malone easily accepts her role and executes it like a true professional. Her portrayal of Dorothy was plausible and consistently good. She adds to the character her own little touches. The most noticeable was a cute laugh that this reviewer enjoyed immensely.

But Malone was slightly overshadowed by Bobby Hill (the Lion).

Hill, who was seen last year in the American Theatre Production's Bubbling Brown Sugar, stood above everyone else. And it is not wonder, since Hill is well over six feet tall. But his height is not his only asset. Hill's acting ability made the Lion the most pleasant character in the play. From his entrance on stage to the play's end, he was the most noticeable. His presence was always felt. He stood out in every scene — including crowd scenes.

number as exciting and breathtaking as the preceding one. The music was performed with flair and precision.

The most outstanding tunes were "The Feeling We Once Had," "Slide Some Oil To Me,"

So after such acclaim, what can an East Lansing reviewer say about The Wiz that has not already been said? Not much — except that it was great.

In spite of Hill overshadowing the others, the acting was uniformly good. Each character had his own way of making their portrayal work. The scarecrow became a super-cool Joe Blow that — even with his costume — might be seen on a city street.

The choreography was well-timed and the costumes and lighting were awe inspiring. The set design made each dance

"What Would I Do If I Could Feel," "Don't Nobody Bring Me No Bad News," and "Home."

Hearing these tunes performed on stage by actors who can sing rather than singers who can't act seemed by far the more pleasant alternative. So if a sound track for The Wiz is wanted, the best buy would be the original Broadway sound track, not the movie sound-track.

WHAT'S AN NSA CAREER?

It's different things to different people.

Of course, all employees at the National Security Agency have certain things in common: they are civilian employees of the Department of Defense; they are engaged in technical projects vital to our nation's communications security or a foreign intelligence production mission; and they all enjoy the benefits that accompany Federal employment. However, the differences between our career opportunities are just as interesting as their similarities. For example...

TO THE ELECTRONIC ENGINEER (BS MS): An NSA career means delving into unique projects which can span every phase of the R&D cycle. An engineer may design, develop, test and manage contracts on communications, recording, and information storage devices and systems whose capacities and speeds are still considered futuristic in most quarters.

TO THE COMPUTER SCIENTIST (BS MS): It means applying his or her knowledge in a wide range of sub-disciplines such as systems design, systems programming, operating systems, computer applications analysis, and retrieval systems.

TO THE MATHEMATICIAN (MS): A career means defining, formulating, and solving complex communications-related problems. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra and combinatorial analysis are just a few of the tools applied by the NSA mathematician.

Light Bulb!

Samson "Light Bulb" Howard makes a spectacular catch on the four yard line to set up the Spartans' third touchdown in their 49-14 romp over Indiana. On the day, "Light Bulb" caught four passes for 119 yards and one touchdown.

State News: Ira Strickstein

Lee Corso is an enigma. The energetic head coach of the Indiana Hoosiers is perhaps the most colorful personality in college football. He is also one of the most likeable coaches.

There's a sort of magnetism about him that makes you want to listen every time he talks. When sports writers talk about the talent gap closing in the Big Ten, Corso is usually the person that is mentioned.

They write about how Corso is developing a once-anemic team into a legitimate contender. They write about how Corso's rapport with his players is unsurpassed. They write about how Corso's teams are winning one more game every season, coming closer to the Big Two every year.

They write all this, but one thing that is very rarely mentioned is Corso's overall record with the Hoosiers. It is now 17-42-2. And that is terrible.

When you look at the record, the first inclination would be to replace Corso. But he is the kind of coach who could come back to haunt you when he takes over a new team.

Actually, his 17-42-2 record is somewhat deceiving. In his first two years as Indiana head coach, his teams compiled records of 2-9 and 1-10. The last two seasons, the Hoosiers have won five games each season.

However, Corso has not been that successful, when you consider some of the talent he has had to work with. This was supposed to be Indiana's year to make its real move towards the top.

This is what Corso said prior to the season: "When I came to Indiana, I felt like I was in a long, dark tunnel with just a faint glimmer of light far off at the end. But the light has been getting brighter each year, and after 55 games, plus 1,000 heartaches, when we stepped off the field with our second consecutive victory over Purdue, we emerged from the tunnel into the bright light of the day." Little did Corso know that down the road a ways was another tunnel... perhaps not as long, but just as dark.

It has been a strange season indeed for Indiana. Corso's team started out with a credible effort in a 24-17 loss to Louisiana State, with Heisman Trophy candidate Charles Alexander. Then came a great win over last year's Rose Bowl champs, Washington.

That prompted Corso to do a little boasting prior to the televised games against Nebraska. The result: Nebraska romped, 69-17. After a loss to Wisconsin came a win over Northwestern... and a little more boasting from Corso.

MIKE KLOCKE

Corso is colorful, but unsuccessful

He said that the last three times a team has upset Michigan, the Hoosiers have come back and defeated them (Washington, Minnesota and Purdue). That streak ended with MSU's 49-14 triumph Saturday at Spartan Stadium.

Indiana is now 2-4 on the year, and the team has reached the other tunnel. With a 1-2 Big Ten record, the chances for a third consecutive first division finish are slim. It's kind of unfortunate that things have turned around like this for Corso and his team. Corso has the kind of attitude you wish every coach would have in dealing with college athletes.

This summer, in explaining the way he recruits players, Corso said, "You build a team with players who have character, you don't build it with characters."

Maybe Corso's team will make an about face. Maybe they'll come back and win their third straight over Purdue in the season opener. Purdue is unbeaten right now in conference play, and I'm sure Corso wouldn't mind a win over the Boilermakers.

I'm sure Darryl Rogers wouldn't mind, either... not to mention Bo Schembechler and Woody Hayes.

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

In this week's issue of Sports Illustrated, there is a story about the "Deep Threat," explaining how the long pass is making its way back into the National Football League. Spartan quarterback Eddie Smith must have been doing some extra reading before MSU's 49-14 pounding of Indiana Saturday.

Before Smith could even work up a sweat, he had already thrown two touchdown passes, an 86-yarder to Kirk Gibson and a 55-yard strike to Samson "Light Bulb" Howard, to all but assure MSU of a homecoming victory after just three offensive plays.

Smith completed all seven of his passes in the first quarter for 202 yards, and on the day he hit 20 of his 30 aeriels for 369 yards and three touchdowns.

The 369 yards broke the Big Ten records for both passing and total offense which was set just last week by Ohio State quarterback Art Schlichter. In all, Smith completed passes to nine different Spartans.

"Man, I've got some good receivers, don't I?" Smith said after the game. "When they get the ball they can run."

And run they did. Both opening touchdowns were perfect examples of what can happen when you mix good hands with lightning speed. Gibson and Howard ran almost the same pattern and after catching the ball, both just out-distanced everyone to the goal line.

All season long, the three Spartan receivers — Gibson, Eugene Byrd and Mark Brammer — have been touted by many as the three best receivers, as a group, in the country. But nothing was ever said about Howard, a freshman from Miami, Fla.

Byrd was injured last week against Michigan so Howard got his first chance to start at MSU.

"I played a great game but I know I can do better," Howard said. "I try to do my best and Gibson did some talking to me before the game."

Later on in the first quarter, Howard, who was called "Light Bulb" in high school because "They said every time I caught the ball the scoreboard lit up," made an unbelievable catch on the four yard line which set up MSU's third touchdown.

The Spartans scored the first four times they had the ball. After Howard's diving catch, Leroy McGee ran in from two yards out to put MSU up 21-0. Steve Smith jacked the score up to 28-0 on a 36-yard sweep and the Spartans were having a field day.

The Hoosiers scored their only offensive touchdown of the day on a five-yard pass from Tim Clifford to Bob Stephenson and Smith scored his second touchdown of the game on a two-yard run to give MSU a 35-7 lead at the half.

With the exception of the first Indiana score, the Spartan defense held the Hoosiers in check most of the day. Bernard Hay stopped Indiana's first drive of the game when he blocked David Freud's 32-yard field goal attempt, the first time all season that Freud had missed a kick.

"The defense played much better than it has," Rogers said. "The key to us as a football team is total defense."

"I think the defense did a pretty good job," said safety Mark Anderson, who quietly gets his job done week after week. "We shut them off completely in the second half."

"That takes an unbelievable amount of pressure off the defense when you have two touchdowns in your back pocket. It's a big lift. I think we're just clicking as a team. We're hitting our peak."

Smith went back to work in the second half as he hit Brammer on an 18-yard pass over the middle to raise the score to 42-7. The next time the Spartans got the ball, Smith was intercepted by Tim Wilbur, which snapped Smith's string of 106 straight passes without an interception.

Wilbur intercepted another Smith pass on the Spartans' next drive and raced 98 yards for the Hoosiers' second and last touchdown of the day.

Freshman Derek Hughes scored MSU's final touchdown on a 10-yard romp and Morten Andersen kicked his seventh extra point of the day to make the final score 49-14. Steve Smith was the leading rusher for MSU as he picked up 69 yards on eight carries and he also caught three passes for 23 yards.

Smith has been getting more playing time the last two weeks and that suits him just fine.

"I love it, he said. "That's the way I like it. That's the way I want it. I wouldn't mind playing the whole game, but I'll play as much as I can."

With Eddie Smith putting the ball in the air so much, it cuts down on the number of chances Steve Smith gets but he likes the way the Spartan offense is run.

"That's one of the keys to a good team," Smith said. "The more you throw the pass the better you can run. The more we can throw the pass and push the linebackers back, the better our running game is."

"If they concentrate on the pass like they do, every time I run I can get 20 or 30 yards instead of five or 10 yards."

Icers sweep weekend series with Ohio State

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

Between two Ohio State defenders, MSU's Russ Welch fires a shot at Buckeye goaltender Steve Jones during Saturday's 5-1 win. The victory concluded a weekend Spartan sweep as they won their season opener Friday night 4-1. It was the first time MSU's hockey team had swept a weekend series in over a year. The last weekend sweep was Feb. 4 and 5 of 1977 when MSU swept Minnesota-Duluth 6-3, 8-3. The Spartans will have a tougher battle next week at Denver.

Before any of the opening game weekend action got underway against Ohio State, it looked like it was going to be another one of those MSU hockey weekends. When Russ Welch came out for the introductions of the starting line-ups, he slipped into his teammates, knocking them down like a bowling ball leveling the pins.

But by the time MSU had finished off the Buckeyes, they had raised some eyebrows, sweeping the weekend series, something the team never did last year, 4-1 on Friday and 5-1 Saturday.

"The games were good for our confidence," coach Amo Bessone said. "Our goaltending was superb both nights. If our defense continues to improve, we'll be all right."

The games also turned back whatever hopes Ohio State had of proving that the Central Collegiate Hockey Association was as good as the Western Collegiate Hockey Association.

"They (Ohio State) consider themselves the best in the league, but first he (coach Jerry Welsh) will have to learn to control his players, Bessone said. "Ohio State has the talent, but their kind of play spoils the game. A rough game is tough to play."

Once the Buckeyes found out they couldn't outplay the Spartans, they tried to outmuscle them and feuds were brewing throughout the contests.

The big breakout didn't occur until there was a little over two minutes remaining in Saturday's game. Buckeye Paul Tilley started mixing things up with the smallest player in the game in Ken Paraskevin. Although Paraskevin, who was giving up 15 pounds to Tilley, got the better part of the fisticuffs, the fight cost him next Friday night's game at Denver.

"We were trying to get him the hattrick, and then he gets kicked out of the game," Bessone said.

Paraskevin scored two goals Saturday, another one into an empty net Friday, and he had an assist before getting kicked out of the game.

"They came out hitting and played a cheap game," Paraskevin said, after Saturday's contest. "But our conditioning from running showed off in the end."

Behind the excellent display of acrobatics in goal by MSU's Mark Mazzolini, MSU scored three straight goals for a 4-1 Friday night win.

MSU's Ted Heusing and Ohio State's Dan Mandich exchanged power play goals from the point to open up the scoring. The 1-1 deadlock was the closest Ohio State came to winning all weekend.

MSU's Paul Klasinski tucked in a rebound from in front of the crease for the winning goal. Aaron Rucks then fed a wide-open Dave Gandini, who fired it in for the insurance goal. Paraskevin finished the evening's scoring with an empty net, short-handed goal from center ice.

"They are a good veteran team, and they should bounce back. They'll be tougher tomorrow night," Bessone warned after Friday's game.

But in Saturday's battle, Ohio State looked even worse. MSU dominated play more than the 5-1 score indicated, missing numerous additional scoring opportunities.

By the 6:26 mark of the first period, MSU had scored three goals in just over a three-minute time period.

Freshman Joe Omiccioli sent in a backhand into the net after receiving Jeff Bacon's pass to open the scoring. Paraskevin rebounded Frank Finn's shot into the net for the second goal before Dave Gandini finished the early scoring rampage.

After MSU spent most of its time in the penalty box during a scoreless second period, the Spartans made the score 4-0 when Paraskevin took a pass from Bruce Porter, beat a defender and slapped it in for his second tally of the game.

"In the second period, we were playing their game," Paraskevin said. "Amo game me a lot of ice time tonight to do the penalty killing, and I'm just pleased that I got to score also."

Ohio State then beat MSU freshman goaltender Doug Belland with Larry Marson scoring. Although Belland wasn't called upon as heavily as Mazzolini was the previous night, he still played a steady game with 24 saves.

Forty seconds after Ohio State's goal, Russ Welch deflected in Paul Klasinski's shot at the nine-minute mark of the third period to finish Saturday night's scoring.

"We made some mistakes over the weekend, but the team's hustle made up for them," Bessone said.

Evaluating the team after Saturday's game, Paraskevin said, "We're progressing really well. Our attitude is great, and we've been working hard."

LOSE TO EVENTUAL CHAMPION PURDUE

Stickers bow early in Big Ten tourney

By CHERYL FISH
State News Sports Writer

The Big Ten field hockey tournament Friday and Saturday was a tough battle for several evenly-matched teams. MSU was right in the thick of it before losing in the first round to Purdue on a series of penalty flicks, 3-2.

This was their first loss, their record now at 7-1-2.

Purdue emerged the winner of the tournament, shutting out Indiana, 2-0.

The Spartan-Boilermaker match-up was a long, hard game. Although MSU dominated the first half and was in Purdue territory nearly 70 percent of the time, it only led 2-1 at the half. MSU goals were scored by Nancy Lyons and Jennie Klepinger. Purdue tied the game on a penalty shot, and the two teams remained in a deadlock. One overtime was played on Friday, and due to darkness, a second one was held on Saturday morning. The game had to be decided on penalty flicks. Five women from each team went one-on-one against their opponent's goalie. Purdue came out ahead of the Spartans.

"Our flicks were not close enough. It was very frustrating to dominate the game and then lose on penalty flicks," said coach Sam Kajornsin. "We have to work on flicks," he added.

This tournament does not count toward the state or regional title. It was regarded as a regular game for the Spartans. "It was good experience for us to play against strong teams," Kajornsin said.

Four of the teams were evenly matched, with games going into overtimes and penalty flicks. Kajornsin stressed the closeness of the games between Purdue, MSU, Indiana and Iowa. "If teams are so close, it's harder to score. It's sometimes a matter of chance," he said.

Some teams score one goal and then lose their concentration. "The team should make up their mind to work harder. We don't have that problem," Kajornsin said. He added that this loss will make the team work harder. "It is not good to dwell upon a loss. We talked about it and we all understand. It will not effect us — it was just tough luck for the women."

The stickers have four games remaining before the state finals on Nov. 4 and 5. They will face Central Michigan at home on Tuesday at 3 p.m. on Old College Field. Kajornsin expects everything to be as usual. "Everybody loses sometimes. We will go out there and bounce right back," he said.

Indiana head coach Lee Corso and MSU quarterback Ed Smith have a brief talk after MSU's 49-14 win Saturday. For a column on the colorful Indiana coach, see page 8.

Men's harriers lose to tough Eastern team

The MSU men's cross country team lost their fourth meet of the season to Eastern Michigan University on Friday by a score of 18-43.

They now have a record of 2-4.

Roger Jones of EMU won the race with a time of 31:05. He was followed by teammates Scott Ferguson, 31:10 and Terry Doherty, 31:38. MSU's Martin Schulist took fourth place with a time of 31:49. Michael White finished sixth, at 32:04. Other Spartan finishes were Harold Rutla, 10th, 32:22; Steve Carlson, 12th, 32:38; Tim Kerr, 13th, 32:44; Keith Moore, 14th, 32:50; Mark Mesler, 15th, 32:51.

"They just did not run well. You can expect that to happen at least once. We just weren't fired up mentally," said head coach Jim Gibbard.

The course was 10,000 meters, (6.2 miles) and had many sharp curves and flat surfaces. "It was a bad course to run, but Eastern had to run it just like us," Gibbard said.

He pointed out that it takes freshmen time to get used to running different courses, and just the experience will be beneficial to the young team. "We ran well against Michigan last week and we just had an off day," Gibbard remarked.

The Big Ten meet is coming up at Bloomington, Ind. That race will be 5,000 meters. "We will work on faster speeds this week. There is a different strategy for shorter races," Gibbard said.

Gibbard was impressed by the Eastern harriers. "They should be favored to win their conference. They have mostly sophomores and juniors — it takes a while to get your team together," he said of the team that is defending Mid American champions.

However, he feels confident that his team will continue to improve. "You have to expect a bad race once in a while," Gibbard said.

Spartans demolish Hoosiers

With the linebackers dropping back like they were, the middle was opening up for the short pass. In all, Eddie Smith completed nine passes to his four tailbacks.

"They've been telling me they have been open," Eddie Smith said. "And when they get the ball they can run."

"The linebackers cheat so much on the pass plays it leaves a hole over the middle for the backs," Steve Smith said. "We're like a safety valve."

The Spartans are now 3-3 for the season, 2-1 in the Big Ten with five games left on the schedule. Rogers said they have to take the last five games one day at a time and their next step in the fight for the Big Ten Championship will come Saturday at Spartan Stadium against Wisconsin.

Series
Presentation

At Frye,
we use our hands to give your feet style.

We start at the top.
If the leather isn't the best,
we don't use it.
Period.
All the staining of the leather is done by hand, not by machine.
Are we just being romantic about boot making?

No.
Because if it's hand stained, it looks better longer.
The lining of each boot is cemented
by hand, too.
Why?
Because you can pull out more wrinkles by hand than by machine. And that makes the boot more comfortable on your foot.
Our boots are stitched so well the leather will tear before the stitching will give way.
By the time we're through putting together a pair of boots, 190 hands have inspected and handled them.
Any one of those hands can reject the boots
if they're not up to Frye quality.
Sometimes they do.
So now when you step out in a pair of Frye boots, you'll step out in style. Because good style is good quality.
When you spend your money on boots, start at the top with Frye.

Lay your boots away
now.

Something Ventured

That's you, becoming a part of one of the fastest growing and most successful mass merchandising networks in the nation. Joining the innovative, aggressive company of Venture Stores.

Something Gained

That's valuable experience, beginning with a three month Venture management training program. It's opportunity to express your ideas in an open, accepting environment. Not to mention a salary commensurate with your education and experience. And an excellent benefit package.

At Venture, what you "gain" is the kind of career that lets you grow and make the most of your potential.

If you have or will have a Bachelors in Business or Liberal Arts, or a Masters in a Business field, schedule an interview with the Venture representatives when they visit your campus on October 26 and 27.

Or submit a letter and resume to: Recruitment Coordinator

WITH HUGE CARLOADS OF MERCHANDISE!

HUGHES & HATCHER OUTLET SALE

thousands and thousands of items in men's, women's & boys' fashions, marked down to

1/2 - 2/3 off

the prices these items originally sold for in our stores

Wrap up some exciting pre-holiday savings — on all sorts of fashions, many of them by the country's outstanding makers. You'll find thousands of things for men, women and boys, at markdowns from 1/2 to 2/3 off the prices these items originally sold for in our stores. Included are special purchases we made on items that would normally sell for at least double the price that we've marked them for this extraordinary sale. It's a wonderful opportunity to stock up on everything you need for fall and winter, for the holidays, and for gift-giving — at way, way less than they originally sold for!

YEAR-ROUND & SUMMER SUITS, SPORT COATS, TOPCOATS, OVERCOATS, SLACKS, RAINCOATS, SPORTSWEAR, FURNISHINGS, WOMEN'S FASHIONS, AND BOYS' WEAR

Note: many of these items have been accumulated from previous sales and clearances. The prices these items originally sold for are shown, as well as the current markdown prices for this sale (intermediate seasonal markdowns have been taken on most of these items since they originally appeared in our stocks). Included, too, are new fashions specially purchased for this sale, to sell at much less than the regular retail price.
