Candidates for House square off in debate

By ANNE MARIE BIONDO

In an attempt to upset the relatively secure Congressional seat held by U.S. Rep. Robert Carr, the Republican candidate for the 6th District position blasted the incumbent on just about every move he's made in Washington.

Carr met his challenger, state Rep. Michael Conlin, in a political debate sponsored by the MSU School of Journalism Tuesday night in Erickson Kiva.

Conlin blamed rising inflation on the U.S. Congress, saying 25 percent of all American families cannot afford to buy and own homes.

"Congress has been talking about inflation," Conlin said, "but the record shows higher prices for food and housing."

Stressing that he would have strongly supported tax credits for families putting students through college, Conlin criticized Carr for voting against the measure.

Carr called himself an "ardent foe" of tuition tax credits, saying that the credits would help parents rather than students.

"Every student should get financial aid without regard to their family's income," Carr said.

Conlin, meanwhile, opposed unconditional financial aid, saying "grant and loan programs need to be tightened up."

The neutron bomb issue revealed a broad margin of disagreement between the candidates.

Carr has been under much criticism from his constituents after voting in favor of the "enhanced radiation warhead" that would kill human beings in time of war without destroying buildings or property.

The choice (to have an abortion) should not be cut off by a male-dominated Congress — U.S. Rep. Robert Carr.

"Unfortunately, it's a choice between the lesser of two evils," Carr said, "and the lesser evil is the least destructive weapon."

Conlin called the neutron bomb "a bad idea" adding that there is "no such thing as a clean war."

"I'd rather have war and tools for war be so horrible," Conlin said, "that its results are known."

Carr argued that it is false to say the issue is "buildings versus people."

"Let's be clear," he said. "All weapons are horrible."

While claiming to be an Equal Rights Amendment advocate, Conlin said he does have "some reservations about what federal courts might do when they interpret the ERA."

Conlin also said he "has a problem" with using state or federal funds to pay for Medicaid abortions.

As a state representative, Conlin voted for the Medicaid budget package that would have eliminated state funds for welfare abortions.

Carr, on the other hand, said he voted for the ERA and its extension "enthusiastically."

As a supporter of Medicaid abortions, Carr said "the choice (to have an abortion) should not be cut off by a male-dominated Congress."

Former MSU student is deemed mentally competent to stand trial

By RUSS HUMPHREY
State News Staff Writer

A former MSU criminal justice student has been deemed competent to stand trial by the State Forensic Center on four separate felony charges in Eaton County.

Donald G. Miller, 23, 530 Gainesborough Drive, East Lansing, understands the nature of the crimes he is accused of and has sufficient mental capabilities to be tried on the charges, according to a Forensic Center report, said Mike Hocking, assistant chief prosecutor.

Miller was charged Aug. 17 with two counts of assault with intent to murder two youngsters in their Delta Township home near the Lansing State Police Post. He was also charged with one count of criminal first degree sexual conduct, involving a weapon and penetration of a 15-year-old girl, and one count of breaking and entering.

Witnesses at the scene of the Aug. 16 incident told police they saw a man leave a house after a young girl came running down the street naked with a necktie wrapped around her throat.

James Regan, 8454 Billword Highway, described the person involved in the incident as "a nice-looking guy. The kind you'd be proud to have your daughter go out with."

Witnesses described the car to police and told officers the license plate number of the vehicle that sped away from the scene.

Miller was apprehended about an hour later in a police stakeout of the East Lansing home of a woman described as his new girlfriend.

District Court Judge Kenneth Hansen set bond at $100,000 and Miller was lodged in Eaton County Jail, where he has been since his apprehension.

At his Aug. 17 arraignment, Miller's

CARTER TACKLES INFLATION

Wage, price guides unveiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter unveiled a largely voluntary new set of wage and price guidelines Tuesday night and pleaded with the nation "to give this plan a chance to work."

The president, speaking in a broadcast televised from the White House Oval Office, set a maximum guideline of 7 percent in 1979 for increases in wages and fringe benefits and a complex price guideline aimed at holding increases to approximately 5.75 percent next year.

Carter said that if the program is successful this would translate into an inflation rate of 6 percent to 6.5 percent in the next year, well below the current rate of about 8 percent.

He said he would ask Congress to enact tax rebates for workers who comply with the 7 percent wage guide and who would suffer when inflation exceeds that level. Carter called it "real wage insurance."

• To cut the federal deficit to $30 billion or less next year.

• To fill only one of every two new job vacancies in the government for "an indefinite period."

• To "oppose any further reduction in federal income taxes until we have convincing prospects that inflation will be controlled."

• To seek legislation bringing increased competition in the railroad and trucking industries. Earlier Tuesday, Carter signed into law a measure that will phase out federal regulation of air fares.

Carter's wage guideline is intended to limit both wages and benefits to an average of 7 percent a year for all workers except those making less than $4 an hour. Those persons will be exempted from the program.

Also exempted are future pay raises that have already been written into existing contracts.

"From tonight on, every contract signed and every pay raise granted should meet this standard," Carter said.

The price guideline is somewhat more complex. It seeks to limit the average price increase for a firm's product line one half of one percent less than the average for its price increases in 1976 and 1977.

Carter's advisers figure this would result in price increases across the economy of roughly 5.75 percent a year. But they expect it to cut the inflation rate to only about 6 percent to 6.5 percent, because there will be exceptions for firms with "unavoidable" cost increases. Such an exception would be made, for example, for a firm that has an existing wage contract committing it to granting pay raises above the 7 percent guideline.

"This is a standard for everyone to follow," Carter said of the administration's newest anti-inflation offensive. "As far as I am concerned, every business, every union, every professional group, every individual in this country has no excuse not to adhere to these standards. If we meet these standards, the real buying power of your paycheck will rise."

Although the price guidelines will be mainly voluntary, there are some incentives for compliance, such as tax rebates and pressure on corporations with government contracts.

Firms seeking federal contracts of $5 million or more will be required to sign a statement that they are in compliance with both wage and price standards.

Carter said the federal Council on Wage and Price Stability, which currently has a staff of about 30 persons, will get 100 additional employees and will "monitor" all collective bargaining contracts and the prices of the top 400 firms in the nation, those with annual sales of more than 1500 million.

CATA faces lawsuit from anti-mall group

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

An anti-Dayton Hudson mall group filed suit Tuesday against CATA and its advertising agency for breach of contract.

Anti-mall advertisements installed on CATA buses earlier this month were removed within two or three days with no explanations given to the Committee for a Balanced Development, sponsor of the signs, according to a suit filed in Ingham County Circuit Court.

A hearing has been set before Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Jack W. Warren for 8:30 a.m. Friday.

The Committee for a Balanced Development, the campaign organization for Citizens for a Livable Community, spent $96 for one month of advertising space on CATA buses.

The group opposes the building of the Dayton Hudson mall at U.S. 127 and Lake Lansing Road and is campaigning for a "no" vote on the Nov. 7 ballot.

The six signs, placed outside East

Lansing-routed buses, urged a "no" vote on the mall proposal based on CATA's 1977 estimate of $100,000 in increased net costs.

"Bus patrons and taxpayers will pay the bill," the signs read.

"We discovered the signs were removed by hearing of it on the radio (news reports)." (continued on page 11)

Address tape use sparks info act suit

By BETH TUSCHAK
State News Staff Writer

Attempts to obtain a current computer tape of MSU students' names and addresses for use in voter registration drives was thwarted by MSU administrators, an East Lansing voter registration organizer said.

The tape was turned over last Wednesday to Counterforce, an MSU student organization, whose president filed suit against the University under the Michigan Freedom of Information Act.

Although it is too late to use the tape for voter registration purposes as was originally intended, it will be used to send registered voters sample ballots and campaign literature, Counterforce President Larry Kestenbaum said.

Poll shows voters favor Dayton Hudson project

The Dayton Hudson mall will receive the go-ahead on the Nov. 7 ballot from East Lansing voters, according to The State News Election Survey.

The pro-mall position led by 16 percent in the poll of 361 registered East Lansing voters. Even if the 11.3 percent undecided vote were to go against the mall, the shopping center would not be defeated.

Support for the mall totaled 52.1 percent and opposition, 36 percent.

The mall led by a 2-to-1 margin in homeowner precincts but trailed in student precincts. Among fulltime students, 45.9 percent opposed the mall and 34.7 percent supported it.

Most mall opposition centered in the 21-to-30 age group, while supporters came from all age groups.

MSU student Jeffrey Watzman said he favors the mall because it would provide "more jobs for students" that "might even pay something for a change."

The mall would also provide more shops, said Watzman, who uses Hudson's Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi near his home "all the time."

MSU student Daniel Alvarez also supports the mall because it "would help reduce prices over here (East Lansing central business district)" and result in more competition.

However, MSU graduate student W. Lee Minnerly opposes the Dayton Hudson mall, not because he is "against the construction of malls, but because the location is a poor one."

"It would be detrimental to the East Lansing business area and create monstrous traffic problems on Coolidge and Abbott," he said.

MSU student Cindy Yeck also opposes the mall because East Lansing has "everything students need and that's mostly who lives here."

Lansing is not that far if something can't be found in East Lansing, she said.

Homeowner Jinx Steiner said she will vote for the Dayton Hudson mall because it "has more to offer than any store in East Lansing or Lansing."

Steiner said she now travels to Ann Arbor and Birmingham to shop.

Homeowner Floy M. Luger also favors the mall because "East Lansing needs a bigger tax base."

Luger said she doesn't shop in East Lansing because "Grand River is too bad to drive on and the parking is terrible."

A homeowner whose property borders Lake Lansing Road, however, said she is against the mall.

"Property values would badly decrease if we had commercial property backing up on our property instead of the trees that are there now," Lana Hurwitz said. "I am concerned about having a McDonalds back up on our property."

Homeowner Reland Silvernale also opposes the mall because it "won't be good for the city." She said she would "cheerfully give up the chance to shop in an elegant place in order to prevent the problems that will come with a mall."

The number of jobs won't increase because people will just be taken from other jobs, there won't be a net increase in taxes — especially in view of the tax proposals on the ballot, and the traffic situation which is horrendous now will become much, much worse, she said.

Males and females supported the mall in equal numbers. But 44 percent of mall proponents had total family incomes over $25,000 a year.

The mall appears to be a partisan issue. Republicans favored it more than 3-to-1 and independents backed it 57.1 percent to 34.6 percent, but Democrats opposed it 49 to 36.3 percent.

Registered voters were asked in the survey "Do you favor the proposal that would allow Dayton Hudson to build a shopping mall within the northern limits of the city?"

The sampling error for the survey was 5.2 percent, which means results can be interpreted plus or minus 5.2 percent of the percentages shown in the survey.

The State News election telephone survey was conducted Oct. 2 through 11 by MSU Journalism seniors under supervision of instructor David Reddick.

COMMISSIONER RACES UP FOR GRABS

Election survey finds uncertainty

By SHEILA BEACHUM

A pattern of uncertainty for many voters in the 7th, 8th and 9th District Ingham County commissioners' has been brought out in The State News Election Survey.

Democratic incumbent Sherry Finkbeiner is leading Republican challenger Gary Anderson in the 7th District Commissioners' race.

Finkbeiner tallied 31 percent of the poll, compared to Anderson's 27 percent.

But almost 41 percent said they were undecided on who they intended to vote for Nov. 7.

The 7th district is predominately homeowners with some renters. Mixed precincts are neighborhoods where homeowners and students reside.

Of the 199 voters in the residential precincts, 31 percent said they would vote for Finkbeiner, compared to the 27 percent who supported Anderson.

A total of 42 percent were undecided. In the mixed precincts in the 7th District, Finkbeiner received the most support with 39 percent, while Anderson got 26 percent.

More than a third of the voters or 36 percent, were not sure who they would vote for.

Statistics show that Finkbeiner is strongest in the 6th Precinct, making up 19 percent of her total support.

Voters who identified themselves as Republicans said they will give over half, or 51 of their votes to Anderson.

Finkbeiner will garner 47 percent of her party's vote, while 40 percent of the voters who identified themselves as Democrats were undecided.

Voters who identified themselves as independents have split their support almost evenly between the republican and democratic candidates with 44 percent of them still undecided.

The 8th District race matches Democratic incumbent Mark Grebner against Republican Larry Gordon.

Grebner has the edge with 29 percent of the voters backing him.

Gordon netted 18 percent of voter support, leaving a large segment of the voters, over 40 percent, still undecided.

A majority of the student precincts are in the 8th District.

Of those voters who identified themselves as students, Grebner took 31 percent of the votes.

Gordon has 19 percent of the respondents backing him and almost half — 46 percent — of the voters are undecided. (continued on page 12)

Israel indecisive about peace treaty

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet adjourned after a seven-hour session Tuesday without making a decision on the draft of a peace treaty with Egypt. President Carter has urged the Israelis to accept the document but some ministers expressed reservations.

Immediately after the meetings, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, Israel's chief negotiators at the talks, briefed Parliament's most powerful body, the Foreign Affairs and Security Committee.

Finance Minister Simcha Ehrlich told Israel radio after the meeting he hoped the draft would be ratified Wednesday. But the radio quoted Energy Minister Yitzhak Mordechai as saying the draft "raises doubts whether this means real peace or just a tactical step which is not real peace."

Official sources confirmed press reports that Carter cabled Prime Minister Menachem Begin to urge Israel to accept the draft, saying the negotiators had produced a good agreement.

But after 11 hours of discussion Monday and Tuesday, the Cabinet had neither accepted the draft or issued new instructions to its negotiators.

'Dr. X' found innocent; Farber released

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Dr. Mario Jascalevich was found innocent Tuesday of killing three hospital patients in the mid-1960s, while New York Times reporter Myron Farber was freed after spending 40 days in jail for refusing to give up his notes on the case.

The jury that acquitted Jascalevich deliberated for only about two hours over two days after a 34-week trial. He had been accused of giving the patients fatal doses of curare, a muscle relaxant.

Jascalevich's defense maintained that the surgeon was framed by other doctors and a conspiracy of the prosecutor, Farber and the New York City medical examiner. Jascalevich never testified.

Shortly before the verdict was announced, Superior Court Judge Theodore W. Trautwein ordered Farber released from the Bergen County Jail on a civil contempt penalty. Trautwein said a six-month criminal penalty would be suspended. The judge said that since the case had gone to the jury, he would no longer keep Farber imprisoned for withholding his notes as evidence.

Eilberg indicted for illegal involvement

PHILADELPHIA (UPI and AP) — A federal grand jury Tuesday indicted Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., on charges he illegally profited from involvement in a federal contract for construction at a hospital in Philadelphia.

The indictment of the 57-year-old Eilberg, now seeking his seventh term, stems from an investigation into the construction of an addition to Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia which received a grant of $14.5 million from the federal Community Services Administration.

At the time, Eilberg's law firm represented the hospital.

The grand jury also indicted three others in connection with the Hahnemann project on charges of mail fraud and bribery, charging them, among other things, with making kickbacks to Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., and his former administrative assistant, Stephen B. Elko.

They were E. Wharton Shober, 51, former Hahnemann president; George L. Guerra, 41, of Glenmoore; and John P. Dixon, 48, of Frackville.

Los Angeles declared fire disaster area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 40,000-acre area of expensive homes was declared a disaster area Tuesday as muggy air and calmer winds helped firefighters battle flames in the brushy hillsides and canyons around Los Angeles.

More than 140 homes were destroyed by the wind-fanned fires. At least a dozen persons were injured, including one critically burned homeowner. Two persons were killed in a car crash on a smoky canyon road.

Shortly before noon, Gov. Edmund G. Brown, Jr. declared the fire site a disaster area, making it immediately eligible for state aid. Brown also was expected to ask President Carter to declare the area a federal disaster area.

It was the winds — twisting, powerful gusts strong enough to roll trash cans up hillsides — that transformed isolated brush fires into unpredictable firestorms.

First women officers to board Navy ships

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women officers will report for duty aboard Navy ships for the first time next week, opening a new chapter in U.S. naval history.

The Navy announced Tuesday that the first 55 women officers picked for sea duty will report to their ships Nov. 1.

The first of 375 enlisted women will become full-fledged crew members of non-combat ships in December, the Navy said.

The way was cleared when Congress enacted legislation ending a longstanding ban on assignment of women to ships other than hospital vessels and transports, none of which is now in service.

The new Navy policy also is in line with a decision by U.S. District Judge John Sirica earlier this year. Sirica ruled against a 30-year-old law banning women from sea duty, except in limited cases.

Judge rejects Westinghouse's guilty plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — A guilty plea by the Westinghouse Electric Corp. in connection with a bribe to a foreign official was rejected Tuesday by a federal judge who was angered at the government's refusal to reveal publicly the names of those involved in the case.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker refused to accept a negotiated plea that called for the company to plead guilty to 30 counts of filing false statements with the government and pay $300,000 in fines.

The agreement provided that names of Westinghouse employees involved, the foreign official who received the money and the country where the payoff occurred would be withheld, and that no criminal charges would be brought against any individuals.

Law frees airlines from federal regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed legislation Tuesday freeing the airline industry from federal regulation, saying it will "ensure American citizens of an opportunity for low-priced air transportation."

"For the first time in decades we have deregulated a major industry," Carter said as he signed the inch-thick bill in the White House Cabinet Room.

The measure establishes a schedule for the gradual elimination of Civil Aeronautics Board jurisdiction over airlines' routes, rates and mergers.

Airlines will be allowed until 1983 to reduce their fares up to 50 percent without obtaining federal approval. Increases of up to 5 percent a year will be allowed in competitive airline markets.

WOULD DROP AERIAL SPY SYSTEM

Iran reports U.S. arms buy cut

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran wants to make drastic cuts in arms purchases from the United States, including cancellation of a $1.2 billion aerial spying system that has annoyed neighboring Russia, Tehran newspapers reported Tuesday.

The newspapers said U.S. and Iranian negotiators met behind closed doors to discuss the cutbacks, which reportedly would save the country $7 billion over the next five years.

Iran ordered the "Advance Warning Airborne Control System," or AWACS, a year ago, and it was to have been used on the Iranian-Soviet border to report Russian military movement, the newspapers said.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said Iran has given American negotiators no indication it wants to back out of previously arranged arms purchases, including the AWACS sale. But the spokesman said Iranian officials have indicated they want to cancel one program worth $15 million.

The State Department spokesman, who did not want to be identified, said the talks in Tehran concerned arms sales that have been negotiated but not formally concluded. He also said the Iranians have suggested they use oil to pay for some of the arms the country wants to buy from U.S. companies.

Moscow radio, in a Persian language commentary, praised the reported decision to eliminate the spy system, saying the money could be put to better use. The radio noted that 2,200 schools or 100 modern hospitals could be built for the price of the spy system.

Observers here said the action also will ease the tense political situation in Iran, which has been rocked by anti-government riots all year.

New drug breakthrough cuts viral brain infection

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what scientists say is a major breakthrough against viral diseases, the Food and Drug Administration approved a new drug to treat a deadly infectious brain ailment.

"Approval of this drug is particularly noteworthy because it holds out the hope that some day we will be able to successfully treat other viral diseases," FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said Tuesday.

The drug, Vidarabine, was developed by Parke, Davis &

Co. of Detroit, which plans to market it under the trade name Vira-A.

Studies sponsored by the National Institutes of Health showed that the drug slashed the death rate caused by Herpes encephalitis from 70 percent to 28 percent and substantially reduced the brain damage often suffered by survivors of the rare disease.

In addition to the drug's life-saving potential in the treatment of one disease, there is great significance in the development, finally, of a drug that can fight viruses.

Since the development of penicillin and other antibiotics, physicians have been able to subdue a wide range of bacterial infections, including the common strep throat, some forms of pneumonia, various localized infections and a host of infectious diseases.

But in diseases caused by a virus, whether it be the common cold, influenza, polio or other life-threatening disorders such as Herpes encephalitis, science can treat only the symptoms while the illness runs its course and the body itself fights back.

U.S., Soviet talks atmosphere warmer

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union appear headed toward a warmer chapter in their relations following nuclear arms limitation talks at the Kremlin.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance spent two days with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and nearly two hours with President Leonid I. Brezhnev. Some issues remain unresolved, but the sessions Sunday and Monday seemed to demonstrate Soviet confidence in the Carter administration as a negotiating partner.

On the eve of Vance's departure, it became known the Soviets had taken another step to improve their image and the bilateral relationship by giving Dr. Benjamin Levich, a prominent physicist, permission to emigrate after nearly seven years of waiting.

Brezhnev's reference in the talks to "negative moments in relations in the past year," as reported by the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, suggested that both sides had put this period behind them.

Charged in killings

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — Billy Hardesty, 21, was arraigned in his hospital bed Tuesday on charges of killing five people, including his mother and father, in a bizarre shooting spree and wounding two others.

Hardesty, still recovering from the wounds he received in the shootout with police that led to his arrest, was charged with five counts of first-degree murder and two counts of assault with intent to murder.

Perjury trial halted due to CIA secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The perjury prosecution of corporation executive Robert Berrellez came to an abrupt halt Tuesday when a federal judge gave the government six days to decide what it wants most, a trial or protection of CIA secrets.

U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. dismissed the jury and gave federal prosecutors until next Monday to decide whether to go forward with the case.

Berrellez, a 58-year-old public affairs officer and expert on Latin America for the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. is accused of lying to a Senate panel about attempts by ITT and the CIA to stop Marxist Salvador Allende from becoming president of Chile in 1970.

The Berrellez case is one of a series in which the government has been faced with the delicate choice of going ahead with a prosecution while running the risk of disclosing secrets of intelligence gathering and covert activities.

Prof rating form argued

By KY OWEN

State News Staff Writer

Use of Level One Student Instructional Ratings system forms is still up in the air after Academic Council did not act on a motion concerning the ratings at Tuesday's meeting.

The University Committee on Academic Policy presented an amendment to the SIRS policy which would simplify the Level One form and require faculty to use ratings once a year in each course rather than every term.

Since 1977 UCAP has been evaluating the SIRS Level One form and considering possible alternatives.

Level Two forms are currently filled out by students each term, asking questions concerning course design and teaching performance.

Level One questions are designed to check if faculty are acting in compliance with the Code of Teaching Responsibility. The revised Level One form includes brief questions such as: "Did the instructor meet the class at the regularly scheduled time?"

Several council members said they felt the Level One forms were ineffective because the information is not valid.

Ralph Taggart, associate professor of botany and plant biology, said student input is needed, but Level One is not the way to find it.

"Many Level One concerns, which involve the department, are going to surface in Level Two," Taggart said. "Why have another piece of paper. I would rather have students take the time to write two more meaningful sentences."

Richard Lewis, dean of the College of Business, said, "We have used Level Two for the last four years and have not found off-the-wall comments, but very reflective ones."

Mordechai Kreinin, professor of economics said some of the questions from Level One should be added to Level Two.

"Use of the Level One form in isolation should not be done," Kreinin said.

Bruce Maughan, assistant professor of business law and office administration, said there are "better ways of finding out what's wrong. Students tell us what's wrong on Level Two."

Maughan introduced an amendment to the UCAP proposal which calls for faculty to use Level Two forms only, with Level One use being optional. The amendment was approved.

Another motion to send the entire SIRS policy document back to UCAP for complete deletion of Level One was defeated because some council members felt the form should still be optional.

The UCAP proposal was still on the floor at 5 p.m., when council meetings are scheduled to end and the meeting was adjourned with no action taken.

The next council meeting is Nov. 7.

Griffin says Levin's lead is declining

By ANNE MARIE BIONDO

State News Staff Writer

Sen. Robert P. Griffin said Tuesday that the most recent state-wide poll indicates Democratic candidate Carl Levin is slipping in his lead in the U.S. Senate race.

According to an Oct. 22 Market Opinion Research poll paid for by Griffin's re-election campaign, Levin's lead has narrowed to three percentage points with 10 percent undecided.

The tide is clearly turning in the current campaign — U.S. Sen. Robert P. Griffin

The poll surveyed 547 likely voters throughout Michigan showing that Levin is favored with 46 percent and Griffin close behind receiving 43 percent.

An Oct. 10 Market Opinion Research poll published in the Detroit News revealed Levin had a 7 point edge over Griffin with only 7 percent undecided.

"The tide is clearly turning in the current campaign," Griffin said at a forum sponsored by the Central Michigan Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, the Society of Professional Journalists.

Griffin attributed his gain in the polls to the fact that he has been able to campaign full time since Congress recessed Oct. 15.

"From a seven-point lead to three-points — we're running neck and neck," Griffin said. "But the undecided column is growing, and that's a good sign for us."

Griffin criticized the Carter administration

Transport recommendations next

Traffic through neighborhoods and safety around schools are chief concerns of some East Lansing residents.

Citizen input gathered by the Transportation Advisory Committee at meetings held throughout the city was presented to the Transportation Commission Tuesday.

Bus transportation, congestion on Grand River Avenue, facilities for bikers and pedestrian traffic on Grand River Avenue ranked next in importance to residents, according to the report.

The committee was established to advise the Planning Commission on transportation issues as part of the city's program to devise a new Comprehensive Plan.

Now that the neighborhood meetings are completed, the advisory committee will formulate several solutions to the city's transportation problems. Another series of public hearings will then be held on these recommendations.

The commission was also informed of a rate reduction to 15 cents on Capital Area Transportation Authority's route 17 (Towar Gardens) effective Nov. 20. The route is similar to the Burcham-Hagadorn run but does not go on campus.

The bus travels north on M.A.C. Avenue, east on Burcham Drive, north on Hagadorn Road to Towar Circle and Lake Lansing Road, and south on Hagadorn Road and Spartan Street to Grand River Avenue.

Councilmember and CATA board member John B. Czarnecki suggested that a post-election priority be given to looking at the bus system throughout the city and long-range service to the area.

"We should begin to communicate with Meridian Township on how better to serve overlapping areas," he said.

The commission will also recommend to City Council that sidewalks be an essential safety consideration for all urban areas.

Demonstration planned

A demonstration, sponsored by the South African Liberation Committee, will be today at noon in front of the Administration Building.

The demonstration is in support of an MSU Board of Trustees resolution passed in March that commits MSU to prudent divestiture from corporations doing business in South Africa.

Maggie Vascasseno, a committee spokesperson, said Thursday's Board of Trustees meeting is the last one before the Dec. 1 divestiture deadline.

"Our pressure is crucial now," she said.

Election to determine ASMSU business rep

By R.W. ROBINSON

State News Staff Writer

A special ASMSU election to fill the vacant College of Business seat on the Student Board and to determine if the student fee tax assessment will be increased by 50 cents will be on Nov. 1.

Polls for the election are located at Bessey, Wells and Berkey halls, and Eppley Center. The College of Business seat has been vacant since spring term when there was a general election for other college board positions.

At that time, Kathy Lamb, a prospective candidate for the seat, was denied certification by the All-University Elections Commission because she was not officially registered in the College of Business.

Lamb, a dual major in economics and James Madison College, is officially registered in the residential college.

She appealed the decision to the All-University Student Judiciary which upheld the commission's decision, saying the AUEC had interpreted the ASMSU Code of Operations correctly.

Because some of the representatives feel the decision was made on an implied policy, a bill allowing dual-majors to represent the college of their choice was introduced, but voted down in a policy committee.

The election hosts three candidates:

- Bob Deziel, a sophomore majoring in accounting;
- Jan McKillop, a senior double majoring in accounting and financial administration and marketing; and
- Edward Wood, a senior majoring in economics.

The three candidates can spend up to $20 in campaign expenses during this special election. Board candidates can normally spend up to $50 in the spring term general election.

The proposed 50-cent increase in student fee tax assessments will go entirely toward helping the Programming Board keep up with rising entertainment costs.

The proposal would increase the student tax from $2.50 to $3.

The election will cost the AUEC $250 which will come from its ASMSU account — a subsidiary fund under the direction of the Student Board. The commission is allotted funds solely for preparing campuswide elections.

WKAR returns to air

WKAR-TV, channel 23, returned to the air Friday at 9 a.m. for the first time following the August 22 fire that put the station out of commission.

The MSU station was broadcasting on cable channel 13 during the rebuilding process and will continue on that station, Jeff Greene, of the production department, said.

"Everything is back to normal except the transmitter," Greene said. "It takes time to tune in a sophisticated transmitter."

Coalition fights drink age hike

LANSING (UPI) — Several groups against a ballot proposal which would raise the State legal drinking age to 21 announced Tuesday the formation of a statewide Coalition Against 21.

The new group has vowed to wage war on Proposal D, countering the efforts of the Coalition for 21, which supports the Nov. 7 ballot proposal.

Its two main components are the Three O'Clock Lobby, a group of high school and college students opposed to the higher drinking age, and the Michigan Committee for the Age of Responsibility, chaired by Sen. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, made up of liquor dealers and tavern and restaurant owners with a smattering of state officials, including a member of the State Board of Education.

Recent polls have indicated that the proposal is winning public support by a three-to-one margin, — a situation Vaughn described at a news conference as a wave of "tremendous prejudice" against youth.

"It is pure discrimination," Vaughn said of the proposal.

They are not aware of the facts. They are aware of a problem but don't know how great the problem is. They are caught up in a wave of emotionalism — Chris Magnus, chairperson, Coalition Against 21.

The Coalition Against 21 is made up of youth organizations, civil libertarians and alcoholic beverage vendors who do not want to lose the 18 to 20 year old market.

Coalition members accused proponents of the higher drinking age of misrepresenting problems of youth alcoholism, booze in public schools and alcohol-related traffic accidents among youths.

Those arguments have whipped up overwhelming support for the proposal — support which coalition chairperson Chris Magnus equated with resistance to the civil rights movement of the early 1960s.

"They are not aware of the facts," Magnus said. "They are aware of a problem but don't know how great the problem is. They are caught up in a wave of emotionalism."

Magnus said the coalition would try to convince voters that counseling and education are better ways to solve alcohol problems where they exist among youth. He flatly denied drinking and driving in the 18-20 age group is worse than in many other categories of drivers.

"If the idea is to get alcohol out of the hands of as many people as possible, the Coalition for 21 should put a proposal on the ballot that would take away the right to drink from all age groups," Magnus said.

'D' opponents plan rally

A rally for those interested in opposing Proposal D will be at Beaumont Tower from noon until 1:30 p.m. and will continue at the Capitol at 2 p.m. Thursday.

The rally is sponsored by MSU Students to Oppose Proposition D and the Three O'Clock Lobby, a high school student advocacy organization.

Dan Black, director of ASMSU Legislative Relations Cabinet, said buses will be provided by the Michigan Committee for the Age of Responsibility and the Legislative Relations cabinet to move rally supporters to the Capitol between 1:30 and 2 p.m.

The ASMSU Student Board passed a resolution opposing Proposal D two weeks ago and granted funds to support the student group forming to act against the proposition.

City thwarts rehab home

By SHEILA BEACHUM

State News Staff Writer

Chances for a new halfway house in Lansing look bleak.

The request for a special use permit to set up a halfway house met opposition from four quarters — the mayor, Planning Board, City Council and residents — at the Lansing City Council meeting Monday.

If granted, a special use permit would allow New Way In, Inc., to establish a rehabilitation center for former criminal offenders in a residentially zoned neighborhood.

The Spartan Motel, 501 E. Kalamazoo St., is the proposed site for the halfway house.

Mayor Gerald W. Graves vetoed Oct. 2 council action which allocated $18,706 to New Way In.

The mayor pointed out errors in dollar figures cited in the resolution authorizing the funds, to justify his veto.

The resolution had errors which amounted to $667 more than New Way In requested.

"The budget from all sources for the program . . . is beyond reason," the mayor's letter read.

The Planning Board, in a letter to the mayor, recommended the city deny the request for a special use permit for two reasons.

The number of persons to be housed in the facility should be "limited to a lesser number," the recommendation said.

The recommendation also said such facilities should be spread throughout the tri-county area, rather than concentrated in the city.

To compromise, the Reverend Raymond Kacirk, representative of New Way In, said organization officials would be willing to reduce the number to be housed in the facility.

Instead of 70 people, the number would be cut to 35.

Also, New Way In would lease 40 percent of the Spartan Motel instead of buying it.

Nearly 60 residents opposed to the halfway house showed up at the public hearing.

They were mainly concerned with the possibility that the halfway house would reverse the re-development trend of the downtown and riverfront areas.

Many residents complained that "prostitutes, bums and winos" already frequent their neighborhoods.

Lawrence R. Curtis, 1104 E. Kalamazoo St., told the council the halfway house would bring more fear to their neighborhood.

"I think I can speak for the neighborhood — sorry, no sale," he said.

Kacirk asked that the former offenders be given a chance to prove themselves.

"I request that we be able to prove a point," he said, "to overcome the fear in the hearts of the people."

Wendy Ring, a staff member of New Way In, said people in the facilities are required to hold jobs, maintain a $200 savings account and live in approved housing.

First Ward Councilmember Robert Hull said the council will probably deny the request for a special use permit.

The area around the proposed location already has increased rates of breaking and entering, drug traffic and prostitution, Hull said.

U.S. Senator Robert G. Griffin answered questions in an open forum Tuesday sponsored by Sigma Delta Chi.

tion for operating the federal budget on deficit spending.

"I believe that the only way to have a balanced budget," Griffin said, "is to have a Constitutional amendment saying the country can't spend more money than it takes in."

Confident that the latest poll results prove that people are suspicious of the "High Cost of Levin," Griffin said his opponent advocates high taxes and double-digit inflation.

"If people believe in McGovern's (U.S. Sen. George McGovern, D-S. Dakota) general philosophy that deficit spending is not a problem and we ought to cut back on the military posture," Griffin said, "then they ought to vote for Levin because that's what he stands for."

Griffin said his experience of 22 years in Congress is needed to represent Michigan in Washington.

If re-elected, Griffin said he would be the senior ranking Republican on the Commerce, Science and Regulatory Committee which effects the auto industry and transportation.

"That's got to be better for Michigan," he said, "than starting over from scratch with a freshman senator."

Board must adopt Harden guidelines

As a University sworn to uphold a land-grant philosophy, it was inevitable that minorities would eventually assume their proper place in University enrollment figures and bureaucratic hierarchy. Back in 1855, it was an easy philosophy to swallow, since the realization of that dream was to be postponed for well over 100 years.

Only now is the impact of that commitment beginning to be felt. And to the people impacted — white males — that commitment is beginning to feel like a burden. Understandable hesitancy is surfacing, especially after being bolstered by the clear-cut judicial victory for their class — the Bakke decision.

Last week, MSU President Edgar L. Harden issued an affirmative action guideline that is equally noble as the idea of 1855. Though less sweeping, it is just as significant — and just as susceptible to postponement.

The plan, awaiting approval by the Board of Trustees, both spreads and centralizes past programs. It centralizes authority to the president's office and creates a presidential assistant to coordinate the activities of two other offices: executive vice-president, handling non-academic affairs, and the provost, handling academic affairs.

The staff of the Human Relations Department, headed by Ralph Bonner, will still handle day-to-day activities, but their direct access to the president will be greatly enhanced by the presidential assistant.

That proposed assistant — Lou Anna Simon — has much potential and has been well-received in some quarters. University women have generally been pleased with the choice for a number of reasons: she was selected from within and is familiar with needs of MSU women, she is experienced at collecting data and making sense from figures and she knows how to play the bureaucratic ballgame.

But University women are only half of the affirmative action story. In fact, women are not even a numerical minority, they are only treated as such. Sad to say, the majority of this non-minority fail to understand the severity of the situation.

Genuine minorities, however — blacks and Hispanics — have little problem grasping the imperativeness of affirmative action programs. Lee June, president of Black Faculty and Administrators Association, expressed justifiable reservations with the appointment of Simon, as have several student groups. Though Simon's appointment undoubtedly stems from the outrage of Mary Pollock's summer term firing, it does little to dispell the legitimate grievances of MSU blacks — the crux of that grievance being the University is terribly behind in its commitment toward minorities.

It would be a terrible disservice to everyone if women and minorities were played against each other in vying for limited positions. We sincerely hope both women and blacks are above such counter-productive tactics. The best possible way to negate that potential is for both women and blacks, both student and faculty and both administrators and clericals, to hammer out future policies in an equitable manner — together.

The first place to start would be for all of the above to make it clear to the Board of Trustees just how crucial the acceptance of President Harden's framework really is.

Blackmail cannot affect divestiture

The old cliché that large corporations think only of money is proving true as the University attempts to either get companies to divest their holdings in South Africa or have MSU divest its holdings in those companies.

MSU Vice President for Business and Finance Roger Wilkinson contacted 17 such corporations in August in compliance with a Board of Trustees resolution to eliminate MSU involvement in South Africa and its apartheid policies. Wilkinson advised the companies of MSU's intent to divest and asked if the companies were considering withdrawing from the country.

All refused to divest South African holdings.

The South African provides cheap labor for American business. General Motors pays its black employees between 97 cents and $2.62 per hour, depending on the work grade. Whites, who work the higher grades by law, are paid between $1.12 and $3.36 per hour, far less than American factory workers earn.

The companies doing business in South Africa stress their belief in the "Sullivan Principles," which are an attempt to provide for fair treatment of black Africans. Several companies boast their gains in providing non-segregated facilities. They talk of great gains they have made. Yet their presence tacitly legitimizes the South African policy of apartheid. Apartheid is the law of the land. To implement the Sullivan Principles to their noble fullest would be breaking the laws of South Africa. Already the South African government is pressuring companies to stay out of internal affairs.

All the companies claim they are helping improve the African society by offering economic growth it otherwise would not know. They believe there are only two alternatives: Operate in South Africa and try to improve conditions or leave and have the country revert back to absolute racism, ignoring the "gains" that have been made.

There is, however, a third: the exit of corporate capital to force change.

American business either fails to see or chooses to ignore the power of the dollar. American corporations have brought pressures to bear on the U.S. government to bail out Lockheed, to involve itself in wars when the economy deemed it beneficial, to overthrow dictators, to toy with the American people when it came to product safety. Somehow they feel the only way to change South Africa's apartheid policy is to sit across from a conference table and politely joust with parliamentary procedure and economic analysis. They seem afraid to put their vast wealth behind the statements they make deploring apartheid and threaten the South African government with economic disaster.

American businesses contacted, notably Dow Chemical, have implied the Board of Trustees are "blackmailing" them and have mentioned they won't think favorably of our grads and school's financial needs. Who is blackmailing whom? Are our grads suddenly worthless because their school has taught them to have a social conscience?

The Board of Trustees must continue their plan to divest MSU's stock portfolio of companies doing business in South Africa. The dehumanistic corporate approach may not end, but the University's support for that approach should.

PBB: Relax, it's almost as tasteless as this column

The media never seems to shut up about PBB. Sure, I can see where they would be mad because they missed what the politicians call a big story when it broke, but the politicians always seem to find trouble before the press.

The only real people yelling about PBB are the farmers, and that's just because they lost their cho bucos when they went and buried their cattle. It seems to me they just overreacted to an honest worker's mistake.

Which brings me to the main point. What's wrong with a fire retardant being poured into cattle feed? First of all, when the cows eat that feed, the PBB is absorbed into their bodies. And if cows are fireproof, I can't burn the expensive beef. Hell, money doesn't grow on trees, you know!

Second, if people become fireproof after eating the meat, that's even better. Just the other day I put my finger on the stove burner. If I didn't have PBB in my body, who knows what would have happened. I could have set my whole hand on fire. From eating Michigan cattle, people everywhere could avoid the needless misery of burns. Of course, some cultures do not eat cattle, so we would have to fireproof some other food sources for them.

Now that PBB has been in the system for so long, it's very possible that we humans (and maybe even the animals) have built up a dependence upon the substance. If we took away our body's calcium, our bones would probably fall out. Well, who knows what would happen if we eliminated PBB from our diets now.

Sure, so PBB was mixed as a mistake. Well, that doesn't make it necessarily bad. After all, many of the world's greatest discoveries have resulted from mistakes. Penicillin, electricity, and democracy come to mind, just to name a few.

And if cows are fireproof, I can't burn the expensive beef.

I think research and development deserves a pat on the back for making such a "mistake" to the benefit of the human species. And the industrial and technical decision makers who gave PBB to all Michiganders without regard to race, creed, color, condition of previous health or financial condition deserve our thanks also.

As you can see, PBB has many benefits to human and animal alike. Maybe if the farmers got off their fireproof butts and realized this, they'd quit worrying about PBB as an election issue and get to the good stuff like keeping the Indians off the lakes or something.

Fan shenanigans create concerns

As a MSU football fan, I'm proud of our team's performance. I only wish I could be as proud of some of the spectators in the student sections of the stadium. Our football team tries hard to win. I wish we would try a little harder to behave like human beings. I'm not writing this to slap anyone's hand or insult anyone. I'm writing this because I'm genuinely concerned.

I'm concerned when I see students steal the hats from stadium guards merely because they're wearing a blue uniform. I'm concerned when I see 50-pound ice bags being tossed over the sides of the stadium with a roar of applause. (Did anyone look first to see if anyone might be below?). I'm concerned when I see more people amusingly watch irate or "spirited" students hassle stadium guards, cheerleaders and each other, than watch what they paid to see: a football game (perhaps I'm wrong in assuming that's what they paid to see?).

I appeal to those of you who seem to enjoy embarrassing the rest of us with what you consider to be a good show. We want to have a good time; not just some at the expense of others! Put yourself in the shoes of the stadium guard who has to confront a thousand red-faced, screaming, obstinate fans to get his stolen hat back.

We are all human and we all make mistakes. Realizing this, let's try to understand and tolerate the shortcomings of others and respect their rights as co-heirs to this world.

Letter Policy

The Opinion Page welcomes all letters and viewpoints. Readers should follow a few rules to insure that as many letters as possible appear in print.

All letters and viewpoints should be typed on 65-space lines and triple-spaced. Letters and viewpoints must be signed and include local address, student, faculty or staff standing—if any—and phone number. No letter or viewpoint without these items will be considered for publication.

Letters should be 25 lines or less and may be edited for State News style and conciseness to fit as many letters as possible on a page. Viewpoints may be no longer than 75 lines and may also be edited.

One issue splits the pack in half

I disagree with the implication of a recent "MSU Shadows" cartoon, that the candidates in the coming election are vague on issues. On one subject at least, the candidates are remarkably clear in offering the voters a choice. This is the abortion question, considered by many on both sides to be an important issue. Carr pro/Conlin against;

You're a fine one to talk about "pure class," Kevin Twining! Whether or not the Bus Stop epitomizes these qualities is primarily a matter of personal conjecture. ### How dare you guys be civilized?

It was with great disdain that I read the article in the Oct. 19 State News, regarding Shaw Hall's Terrace West floor.

The farce that took place at Yakely Hall could hardly have been an attempt to "set the record straight." In fact, the image "of being animals" is something that has been maintained for years, proudly handed down from school year to school year. It is that legacy which has in the past united the residents of Terrace West into a fraternal brotherhood, unnumbered by the confines of a charter or any set of rules or regulations.

If the boys involved in the Yakely fiasco are not happy with the reputation of Terrace West, let them move back home and take correspondence courses, or better yet, move upstairs with the "commoners" of Shaw Hall.

It may be that times have changed so much that the student apathy of the '70s has affected some of the current residents of Terrace West; but, let me say this to "set the record straight." For the thousands of people who have, over the years, lived in Shaw Hall and across campus; and especially for the scores of former residents of Terrace West: it will take more than 25 boys in three-piece suits to "lay to rest" the legendary image of THE ANIMALS OF TERRACE WEST.

Flag racers bow to red hot pants

In the aftermath of the Spartans' glorious Homecoming victory, Indiana's best play of the afternoon should not be left unnoticed. I am not speaking of the Hoosier's futile attempts at the game of football; rather, the assault from two dozen or so of Indiana's finest — dressed in smart red — on the traditional "flag race" between the third and fourth quarters.

For the first time in four years the Spartans lost this part of the contest. It was all in good fun, but let's not see the Green and White behind any other colors in Spartan Stadium again!

Martin Luther King's life retold

King: A Biography
(Second Edition)
by David L. Lewis
University of Illinois press
Price: Cloth, $17.50 paper,
$5.95

By REGINALD THOMAS
Since the untimely death of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. various historians, sociologists and leaders have tried to analyze the man and his motivations.

These analyses have left many dumbfounded. Few seem to understand King's motivations or can objectively discuss the outside forces that shaped his life.

But in King: A Biography, author David L. Lewis tries to look beyond the public King to create a clearer understanding of the private King. By doing this he gives a better understanding of the effects of the civil rights movements on the man.

Lewis begins by briefly discussing King's childhood, quickly relating the impact his domineering father had on him. Lewis also sets the tone for the racial encounters King had to face.

More importantly, Lewis begins to formulate a possible theory: King had always seen himself as a martyr.

Lewis cites two separate incidents in which Martin Jr. attempts suicide, and shows that King felt, through some offbeat and morbid reasoning, that he had to bear the suffering of others. Lewis even suggests that King might have thought of himself as a Christ figure.

Lewis does this by telling of King's preference for the gospel song "I Want To Be More and More Like Jesus." He elaborates on this further by relating the causes of these two suicide attempts.

According to Lewis, King's first attempted suicide occurred when King had thought his brother A.D. King was the cause of his grandmother's death. He explains that A.D. accidentally injured his grandmother, but did not kill her as Martin Jr. thought.

Lewis goes on to explain that King also attempted suicide when he had "stolen away" a sin by watching a parade on Sunday." Lewis adds that his grandmother died of a heart attack the same day.

Once again King found himself bearing the brunt of her death. Lewis says that King, 12 years old at the time leapt from the second-story window of his home.

Although Lewis does not come straight out and state this martyr theory, he does suggest it indirectly. Unfortunately, Lewis doesn't develop it any further.

Because of King's love for his grandmother, his reactions might be explained as an unwillingness to live without her. King's actions can be comprehended in numerous ways without leading one to believe that King had always seen himself as a martyr.

What Lewis does do, whether consciously or unconsciously, is establish the old concept of black leaders relying heavily on religion as a guiding light in their struggle.

Lewis first explains King's contempt for the religious leaders and the methodology of preaching. King is shown searching for a non-religious profession. Lewis shows King enrolled as a medical student at Morehouse College, later becoming a sociology student and eventually a student of theology.

Lewis takes the fallacies that surround King and the movement and further illuminates them. He maintains some of these fallacies while destroying others.

King is written in simple, straight-forward English. The book explains King's religious precepts and his non-violent philosophy, and doesn't simply look at the movement; instead it tries to go deeper by explaining the forces of the civil rights movement.

Lewis has succeeded in portraying an idea of the movement without making the man the entire movement. He shows that although King was propelled into the position as leader by his contemporaries, he was not ill-prepared.

Lewis follows King through the Selma march to his assassination and discusses the effect the violent Black Power movement had on King's support.

Lewis says that many white liberal King supporters became leery of the civil rights movement when Stokely Carmichael and H. Rap Brown became more vocal and visual.

"The faint-hearted liberals concluded that the pace of civil rights had become impossibly rapid," Lewis adds that "one by one King's allies begin to desert him."

In a section entitled "Killers of the Dream" Lewis discusses the philosophical opposition in King's later years. No longer was King the monumental leader supported by the fervor of the black community; he became the victim of changing times. The shout of "We Shall Overcome" was changed to "We Shall Overrun." King was also the victim of verbal abuse, not only from the white media but from black leaders as well.

While in Chicago he became the victim of SNCC's Monroe Sharp. Sharp attacked King, saying he lead "Counterproductive marches into white communities."

Not only was King being attacked and shaken by the outer forces of the movement, but also those within the movement. Members of the NAACP were criticizing King for his anti-Vietnam statements. Even Dr. Ralph Bunche said King was overstepping his bounds and should "give up one (civil rights movement) or the other (anti-Vietnam sentiments)."

Lewis has taken a controversial period in American and Afro-American history and shed some light on it. He discusses the relationship of the FBI and other governmental organizations with King and the movement.

He briefly discusses the conspiracy theory surrounding King's death. His exploration of the movement takes the reader through the back woods of Mississippi to the streets of Chicago and Detroit.

Lewis has succeeded in portraying the movement without making the man the entire movement. He shows that although King was propelled into the position as leader by his contemporaries, he was not ill-prepared.

Regardless of how he achieved his position and role, he assumed it with great vigor and fervor. And Lewis shows this with precision.

Unlike the movie King, the book does not overplay the role of King's lawyer or anyone else. Lewis simply establishes the roles of King's constituents and allows them to take their course.

Lewis' book illustrates the impact of a movement on a man and a man on the world.

'Dr. Y': Anne Sexton's last

WORDS FOR DR. Y

By Anne Sexton
Edited by Linda Gray Sexton
Houghton Mifflin
$8.95

Reviewed by ANNE STUART

Words for Dr. Y is an unsettling but fascinating collection of Anne Sexton's previously unpublished works.

Unsettling because the collection is divided into four utterly unrelated sections with no transitional thread linking the parts to each other.

Fascinating because much of the work is presented in rough draft forms, allowing the reader to view the poems before the agonizing process of revision and re-shaping that usually precedes a Sexton publication.

The collection is best described as the leftover-though choice-bits of unpublished material gleaned from the poet's files and manuscripts following her suicide in 1974. Linda Gray Sexton, the poet's oldest daughter and editor of the collection, explains in her forward that the works had never been published during her mother's lifetime because they were incomplete, too intensely personal or out-of-place thematically with other collections.

It's difficult to generalize about the book, since the poems and short stories span nearly 15 years of Sexton's career and have no overall theme or common style. The four diverse sections add up to a rather scattered, disconcerting package.

All of which is not intended to imply that the works, individually, are not superb. They are.

The title section is a series of 23 poems written between 1960 and 1970 to Dr. Y, an imaginary psychiatrist. The untitled poems, arranged chronologically, parallel the characteristics and feelings in Sexton's real life, including her frequent fits of depression and obsession with death.

Some contain bitter rhetorical questions addressed to the psychiatrist, such as one written in January 1962 about keeping a journal: "I begin again, Dr. Y/this neverland journal,/full of my own sense of filth./Why else keep a journal, if not/to examine your own filth?"

Others concentrate on the irony of doctor-patient dialogue, in which the eternal serenity of the psychiatrist contrasts with the hysteria felt by the poet. In a poem written in June, 1960, Sexton tries to explain to the good doctor her frustration about writing. She describes her work as "A disorderly display of words,/one after the other./ It's a huge gathering ball of words,/not a snowball, but an old string ball,/one from the rag bag."

The doctor's calm reply throughout the poem is "Where is the order? Where is the order?"

The second section, consists of scattered poems written in the final years of Sexton's life. They are unrelated, but all deal bluntly with bitterness and dissatisfaction.

The third section, titled "Scorpio, Bad Spider, Die" is a series of zodiac poems written in 1971 and on a newspaper horoscope column. Each poem is a reaction to a line from that day's horoscope. They are intensely personal, and return to her earlier, more structured style.

The fourth section of the book is a surprise, since fiction is not generally considered a Sexton genre. It contains three short Gothic stories written shortly before Sexton's death in 1974. The stories are psychologically terrifying in painfully comparing ghosts, vampires and bats with relationships, aging and death. Especially powerful is "The Ghost", which is written as if the narrator is the ghost of a Victorian lady, but is actually Sexton's mother, a would-be poet whose jealousy of her daughter's talent haunted Anne for the rest of her life.

On the whole, Words for Dr. Y is like a collection of uncut diamonds — rough and unpolished, but still valuable to those who recognize their worth.

1994: a group with a future

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

1994 may not be a very well-known band right now — with just one LP to their credit and a rapidly shifting lineup confusing the issue, that's probably unavoidable. But with a few more performances like Monday night's Silver Dollar Saloon show under their belt, their future success should be no problem.

One of very few hard rock bands featuring a female lead vocalist, 1994 is an outgrowth of the L.A. Jets, and a band that's changed considerably since the release of its debut LP. Originally featuring lead vocalist Karen Lawrence and drummer John Desautels (both of the L.A. Jets), bassist Bill Rhodes and guitarist Steve Schiff, the band recently lost Schiff and acquired the talents of two new, extremely talented guitarists.

As it turned out, those two added guitarists were the highlight of Monday night's show. Steve Hunter — of Mitch Ryder's Detroit, Lou Reed, Alice Cooper and Bob Ezrin fame — joined new addition Rick Armand for a series of guitar battles that once and for all proves that the spirit of the Yardbirds' "Stroll On" has not left rock 'n' roll. Like the famous-but-few Jeff Beck-Jimmy Page heavy-metal duels, Hunter and Armand alternated high-energy, frenetic rock leads while lead vocalist Lawrence sang and strutted across the stage. It was like a blast of rock 'n' roll de-ja-vu: after punk, after disco and after bands like Force, the night's opener, it's always good to know that the basics of classic rock have not been forgotten.

Opening with "Shoot To Kill," the band pretty much stuck to LP material and, to the guitarists' credit, improved upon it vastly. Hunter, whose associations with fellow-guitarist Richard Wagner and Bob Ezrin have unfortunately given him an undesirable "play-with-anybody-for-bucks" image, certainly dispelling any notions of mercantilism on his part with his continually energetic, highly-spirited playing. Though he and guitarist Armand haven't been together long enough to work out any system of harmony leads, their alternating, shotgun approach is down to a science and superb.

Karen Lawrence, lead vocalist of 1994, brought a band featuring guitarist Steve Hunter to the Silver Dollar Saloon Monday night and had no trouble at all in winning over the crowd.

The only night's failing was the p.a. system, which boosted all the instruments so much that vocalist Lawrence could rarely be heard at equal balance. As displayed on the group's LP, her voice is just fine for the band's heavy-metal style; unfortunately, she appeared to be straining it at times in an effort to be heard.

Lawrence's stage presence is something in itself. Always moving, she plays games with the mike stand, with the audience, and with her voice. Her role is not an easy one — strong female rock 'n' roll stars aren't very easy to come by — but her stage persona ranks up there with the best of them. Lawrence's vocal talents have already been heard on Aerosmith and Frankie Miller albums; one little-known fact is that she and drummer Desautels are responsible for writing Barbra Streisand's "Prisoner," used in The Eyes of Laura Mars.

One of 101-FM's Hundred-and-One-Cent concerts, the show drew an average-sized crowd that readily warmed up to the band, eventually filling the dance floor and causing another blast of de-ja-vu. Rock 'n' roll CAN be danced to, and 1994's show made that clear. At this point, 1994 are in a very interesting position. Steve Hunter's presence alone guarantees the band a larger-than-average following, yet the group is by no means Steve Hunter's any more than it's Karen Lawrence's. What's coming in the future from the band, their next album, will make a big difference.

If 1994 can work out a slightly more complex system of guitar interplay — and that certainly should come with time — and if Lawrence's vocals stay at their same high level, 1994 should be drawing MUCH larger crowds next time they're in town. And if it's any indication, Monday night's reaction to the band may make that happen very soon.

Party Time

By MIKE MEGERIAN
State News Staff Writer

"All parties are alike," I told myself cynically as I approached the dimly-lit house. It was in Lansing, an area I thought was off-limits to student parties. But the neighbors didn't seem to mind; in fact, I never saw one the entire evening.

I walked through the door and was greeted by a few yells and all-too-familiar atmosphere. The house was quaint, seemingly disguised as a barrelhouse with a shag carpet. A potential bed of intimacy existed, I thought, the brightest light being the stereo's VU meters, flip-flopping back and forth in time to the blaring music.

Now if three years of college has taught me anything, it's shown me how to become an upperclassman partier: arrive around midnight, consume moderately while everyone is trashed and continue to consume moderately until everyone is really trashed. Relegating myself to the kitchen, I dumped my 12-pack into the refrigerator and never saw it again.

Everyone was going strong. I did manage to talk to everyone, if only briefly, because they all came to the refrigerator within the next five minutes. I crowded myself against the back wall, inadvertently bent the dish towel rack and had my private parts jabbed more times than I can count by a rambunctious partier, who rammed the refrigerator's handle at me continuously.

"Watch it," I cried. "Can't you see I'm here?"

"Sure, there's plenty of beer," the person replied. So much for communication; it was time to moderately consume.

I began conversing with one of my colleagues and his friend Joey while people darted in and out, shouting things like "I'm not really here" and "give me that thing." Daniel Jay was sucking on a lime. I was discussing Peter Gabriel. Wally was smoking and coughing. In that order. And Joey, he just grinned.

I glanced at the clock and noticed it was after 12. Saturday Night Live was on, and I was told it was on in one of the bedrooms. "Screw this," I said pulling away from someone who wanted to know if I was really Armenian. "I'm going to catch 'Weekend Update'."

I entered the room and sat down on the bed, sharing the tube with someone everybody called Mr. Bill. "Not dancing?" I asked, knowing the answer. Mr. Bill just shook his head. "No, no," he replied. He shook his head some more. We watched Frank Zappa act straight in a skit, denying his experiences with drugs to some of the not-ready-for-prime-time players. Zappa was best when he conducted his orchestra a little later in the show. It was good jazz. But Donna Summer was flitting in from under the door. Thump, thump, thump, thump.

"Let's get some beer," I said. Mr. Bill informed me he was allergic to beer but decided to go along. I collected some money from a few of the folks, borrowed a car, and after stalling it six times, we were off.

Mr. Bill was rather quiet, but seemed like a friendly chap. The drive included some of the best conversation I had all night. Intoxicated, we discussed our vices, which is always fun.

I grabbed some beer, made the cash transition, and we left. "Boy, I'm glad you took care of that," Mr. Bill said. "Cause I am really f---d up!" Wonderful conversation!

We arrived back at the house, where the guy who kept jabbing me with the refrigerator handle waited like a vulture on the front steps. Everybody else soon gathered, like a scene from The Birds. The vulture charged, flying from the steps and rushing the beer-filled bag until all I could see in front of me was the logo on his t-shirt. It was not ready for this. I escaped to the house, losing poor Mr. Bill, still shaking his head, before the unruly crowd caught up with me in the kitchen and proceeded to pounce on the beer.

"Oh well," I thought. "At least they're not dancing."

But they left, and were soon twisting and turning to a brand new tape. I was approached by a rather diminutive woman who insisted that I join the dancers. I declined, explaining that dancing just didn't turn me on.

"Hey," she said, "you don't have to be turned on to enjoy it." I asked her to explain.

"Well hey," she continued, "There's a difference between getting off on it and enjoying it." She was persistent and very attractive. That combination, plus her million-dollar smile eventually lured me onto the dance floor, where I almost threw my back out, dipping.

I was awkward to say the least, but made small talk in a futile attempt to remain poised.

"All those reruns of American Bandstand never did me any good," I joked.

"How are you going to know you like it if you don't try it yourself?" she asked.

"Yes," I said staring at her, "It's important to know what turns you on."

She for some reason gave me an incredulous look. "OK," she said, and went on dancing.

Existentialists will tell you the ultimate in living is dying. I would say the ultimate in partying is sleeping, because that's what everyone was doing by the end of the night. "Oh well," I thought. "At least they're not dancing."

But that's all I remember. I mean, I was really drunk at the time...

Riding on the 'Midnight Express'

Mike Kellin and Brad Davis in a scene from Midnight Express, the film based on the true story of an American student imprisoned for trying to smuggle hashish out of Turkey.

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

In October 1970, a young American named Billy Hayes was arrested at the Istanbul airport for trying to smuggle 4.3 pounds of hashish out of Turkey. He was sentenced to four years in prison — a sentence that was changed to 30 years when the first sentence had only 53 days left to run. Angered by this unexpected turnabout, Hayes made a daring escape in 1975 and returned to this country.

Midnight Express is Billy Hayes' story. Adapted from his best-seller of the same name, it is a powerful movie which graphically depicts Hayes' ordeal inside Turkey's sordid Sagmalcilar prison. You may or may not like the movie — that's your choice — but you certainly won't forget it once you've seen it.

Billy Hayes made the mistake of trying to smuggle hashish at a time when skyjacks were terrorizing the airports of the world. For his trouble he was beaten, tortured and dehumanized — and he would probably still be in prison today had he not escaped. Midnight Express doesn't try to make Hayes sound innocent — all it asks is whether the punishment fits the crime.

The movie leaves no doubt with the viewer as to which side it's on. Within minutes after the scene showing Hayes' arrest at the airport we see him being beaten sadistically by his captors. Other beatings soon follow, and we can only watch in awe and disgust as prison officials slowly reduce Hayes from a "guy next door" to an inhuman animal.

For example, in one incredibly graphic scene he brutally mauls an informer who has framed one of his friends for drugs. After beating him senseless, Hayes bites off the man's tongue, abandoning the last vestiges of human decency in an environment that has no place for such luxuries.

In another very moving scene we see how far Hayes has sunk when he is allowed a visit from his girlfriend. Mumbling almost incoherently, Hayes demands that she bare her breasts for him while he masturbates. It is after this act of supreme debasement that Hayes finally regains his spirit and begins to search for a way to escape.

Billy Hayes is played by 28-year-old Brad Davis, whom TV fans may remember as the friendly sharecropper in Roots. While he bears few physical similarities with the blonde, curly-haired Hayes, Davis turns in an impressive performance in this, his first feature film.

Supporting Davis is an equally fine cast that includes Randy Quaid and John Hurt as fellow prisoners Jimmy Booth and drug-eroded Max, Paul Smith as the brutal head guard, and Mike Kellin as Billy's father, who smuggles in American money to help his son escape. Hayes' girlfriend is played by another film novice, Irene Miracle, who makes the difficult scene in the meeting booth both convincing and touching.

Much of the power of Midnight Express can be attributed to the fact that it is for the most part a true story. The viewer should keep in mind, however, that certain changes have been made in the story for the sake of dramatic impact. According to the real Billy Hayes, these changes in no way interfere with the "emotional reality" of his story.

Some of the changes include the addition of the tongue-biting scene, which is purely fictional, and a change in the film's ending.

While the real Billy Hayes was moved to an island prison, from which he made his escape by swimming out to some rowboats during a storm, the movie has him stealing a uniform and walking away from Sagmalcilar.

The movie also skirts the issue of Hayes' homosexual encounters in the prison, which were described in the original best-seller. It seems unfair that the producers pulled their punches on this issue after so thoroughly stacking the deck in Hayes' favor anyway, especially since — if tastefully done — this would tend to support the film's theme of "a man driven to extremes."

Still, the truth which DOES come out in Midnight Express more than makes up for the liberties that were taken with the story. Amnesty International has estimated that there are a few thousand Americans currently rotting in the jails of 40 countries around the world, many of whom no doubt have stories similar to Billy Hayes'. The expressed intention of Midnight Express is to make people aware of the plights of these people, and on that level, at least, it should be an admirable success.

The opening Handel German Arias and the closing Ravel Songs of Madagascar highlighted the splendid accompaniment of the assisting artists. Pianist Edith Kraft displayed her instinct for proper balance and support at all times. The measured bass tones of her piano, together with the mournful sighing of Israel Borouchoff's beautiful flute playing elicited thoughts of a long line of slaves oppressed without hope in Ravel Aqua-Aqua! Owen Carman's rich cello engaged in mellow harmonies with Harsanyi in the Nahandove, while Borouchoff's piccolo added to the delicacy of the Repos, last of the Ravel cycle.

In the Handel, violinist Walter Verderhr's expressive playing complemented Harsanyi's voice in a dialogue which underscored the operatic quality that Handel brings to sacred music.

Sylvia Plath, both Harsanyi and clarinetist Elsa Ludwig Verdehr evoked the tortured soul of the poetess whose constant preoccupation with death verges on the morbid. Yet the consummate skills of the two performers gave musical credibility even to such painful lines as "My skin — bright as a Nazi lampshade." Ludwig-Verdehr's uncanny beauty of shading and intonation transformed even the piercing tones of the Rorem score into a sympathetic expression of the terror of the words. Harsanyi, at the same time, moved from pure sustained tones to near shrieks to a final groan, articulating in form the content of Plath's message that "dying is an art, like anything else."

In the Spohr, who preceded the golden age of romantic German lieder, clarinetist and soprano were in perfect empathy, bringing out the more subtle and refined phrasings of their respective instruments. In these lieder Ludwig-Verdehr was so able to display the full range of her instrument with every nuance of sound and phrasing so that the quiet of the Cradle Song and the bright announcement of morning in Awake supported Harsanyi's articulation of the poet's varied moods — peaceful, melancholy, and joyful.

State News Reviewer

Kresge Art Gallery opened its doors Sunday to this season's first chamber music concert with a program balanced between well-known and rarely heard chamber works. The Kresge players, a select group of MSU music faculty members and visiting artists has always been distinguished by this kind of innovative programming, combining the familiar and the avant garde, and sometimes bringing to campus premiere performances of the works of living artists.

Sunday's program ran true to form, presenting soprano Janice Harsanyi of the North Carolina School of the Arts, a well-known Decca and Columbia recording artist with an active concert career, superbly accompanied by the Kresge players in a program that ran the gamut from Handel's Baroque through the early 19th century romantic lieder of Spohr, to Ravel and to the contemporary composer Ned Rorem.

All of the selections were distinguished by Harsanyi's fine interpretive abilities and by her knack for drawing the listener into the inner mood of the music, and by the superb accompaniment.

'LIGHT BULB' SHINES IN DEBUT

Howard stands tall among receivers

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

Just as the auto companies unveil their new cars every year, MSU football coach Darryl Rogers did some unveiling of his own last Saturday against Indiana.

When split end Eugene Byrd, who was injured against Michigan the week before, was not ready to start against the Hoosiers, Rogers had to reach into his bag of aerial tricks to see what he could come up with.

What he pulled out was Samson "Light Bulb" Howard, the 5-foot-8, 165-pound freshman split end from Miami, Fla., who has had a few sneak previews earlier in the season.

Samson Howard

Howard caught one pass against Southern California, and two passes against Notre Dame, one of those for a touchdown, but he didn't get his first start as a Spartan until Saturday.

In the game he caught three passes for 119 yards and one touchdown, a 55-yard strike from Eddie Smith on MSU's third offensive play of the game. Later in the first quarter, Howard made a spectacular diving catch on the four yard line which set up the Spartan's third score of the game.

Howard said he didn't know he was going to start until right before the game and when he found out, some of the older players talked to him. Especially ly quarterback Eddie Smith.

"I think he's (Smith) the best," Light Bulb said. "I like him a whole lot. Like Saturday was my first day starting and he encouraged me a lot in the huddle."

He also said that the receivers help him out in practice.

The way he caught the ball against Indiana, it looks like encouragement is all he needs. The rest is already there.

Howard came to MSU last year but he was still ailing from a knee operation. He tore the ligaments in his knee in a high school All Star game his senior year and wasn't ready to play until the seventh game last season.

He was finally red-shirted and never did see any action.

"Now that I took the extra year I'm happy," Howard said. "I would have played in only five games. A year is better than five games."

While in high school, Howard played both split end and free safety, and he also ran back punts and kickoffs. He said he wants to get the chance to return kickoffs along with playing split end while at MSU.

Howard said he decided to come to MSU because he liked the people, but the fact the Spartans throw the ball sure didn't hurt any. He said between what Ray Green (the receiver's coach at the time) said and the films he saw, made him decide to leave Florida to play Big Ten football.

Because the Spartans cannot participate in a bowl game this season due to their probation, Howard, like many of his teammates, are pointing to the 1980 Rose Bowl game as a team goal. For himself, Light Bulb is also shooting for the top.

"Well, I want to make All-Big Ten," Howard said confidently. "Hopefully All-American."

He may only be 19 years old, and a lot smaller than the 5-foot-8 he is listed at, but when it comes to ability and confidence, Light Bulb measures up to the best of them.

State News/Bunny Maison

MSU attacker Michael Price advances the ball upfield against Hope College earlier in the season. The Spartan soccer team will play its final home game of the year today against Central Michigan.

BOOTERS HOST CHIPPEWAS IN FINAL HOME GAME

Co-captain Haidler wants to finish as a winner

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

Being a mainstay on the Spartan defense, MSU soccer co-captain John Haidler has seen MSU's record slip from 10-2 in his freshman year to 5-6, MSU's first losing season ever, last year.

And with five games remaining on the Spartan schedule, Haidler would like to end his collegiate career in the same way he started it — as a winner.

"My freshman year, we were 10-2, but we haven't done as well since then," Haidler said. "But if we win the rest of our games, then we can come close to the record of my first year. A good finish would also be a good stepping block for next year's team."

Haidler, who is in his second year as the team's co-captain, will play his final home game this afternoon against Central Michigan University at 3:30 p.m. The other senior starters playing their last home game are co-captain Mike Price, Peer Brunnschweiler, Obi Nwabara and Solomon Younes.

"The four years have gone by mighty fast," Haidler said. "I'll cherish this game since playing at home was always the best."

MSU, 4-3-2, will try to avenge last year's 2-1 loss to the Chippewas. But it won't be an easy task either as Central Michigan is 8-2-1 and riding a seven game winning streak.

"They have played a state schedule so far," coach Joe Baum said. "Since we are regarded as one of the top teams in the state, Central Michigan considers this a big game for them. We'll just have to get pumped up like we did for Spring Arbor."

The Spartans have had a six-day rest after playing four games in eight days.

"We've had a good week of practice, and just about everybody is healthy," Baum said. "There shouldn't be a letdown after the Spring Arbor game since it was a week ago that we played them. We hope to keep the second half going along."

Haidler also hopes that the team can keep it going after their trouncing of Spring Arbor, 4-1.

"Until the Spring Arbor game, I hadn't played like I wanted to," Haidler said. "I think I was better last year. But I'm looking for five more good games."

The Spartan defense has been the strength of the team this year with Haidler working with Nick Bowen, Obi Nwabara and Bill Abbott.

"Things work out a lot because we hustle," Haidler said. "Nick is an easy player to work with, and we've been close when we've played together."

Though Haidler is one of the captains, he says that he doesn't necessarily have to show very much leadership since the players can drive themselves.

"When I was a freshman and a sophomore, I played up to the players on defense," Haidler said. "That way, things seemed more secure. Now I'm the old man, and the other players depend on me. It's tough getting used to."

The one moment that Haidler will remember the best when he leaves MSU was during the off-season. The Spartans defeated Hartwick, which won the national title last year, indoors at Akron during winter term two years ago.

"That was the best I had ever played," Haidler said. "I'll miss playing for a school team and being around the players."

Haidler, who hopes to keep on playing some kind of organized soccer, feels it will be difficult to just watch the team play next fall while he completes his degree in mechanical engineering.

Haidler does, though, see a bright future in himself. (continued on page 9)

Golden Bears: top independent team . . . Wyvern a power in dorm grid scene

By CHERYL FISH
State News Sports Writer

For three years, the Golden Bears have played independent "A" league IM football and have compiled an impressive 37-2 record. Not bad for a team that considers themselves high school athletes too small to play for the MSU football team.

Quarterback Rick Fracassa and some of the other team members were recruited by small schools such as Albion and Saginaw. "But they were too small. I've always loved MSU and football is an addictive game," Fracassa explained.

He and some friends from Brother Rice High School in Birmingham found the kind of game they were looking for in the IM "air force" style of football. Basically a very offense-oriented game, the ball may be passed continually down the field. This makes for the famous "razzle-dazzle" play the Golden Bears return to consistently.

"We don't believe in practicing or planning our plays ahead. We have to look over the team before we decide. We improvise and sometimes we get great results," Fracassa said.

So far this season, the Bears are 3-0, outscoring their opponents 118-2. Fracassa attributes this awesome record to the fact that the team is carefully picked so that everyone can throw and catch the ball well.

Besides Fracassa, only Jim Levois and Steve Tepper remain from the original team of three years ago. "This year we did some recruiting and picked up some good athletes," Jeff Rowe, Gary Dietz and Joe Appuzzo, Fracassa said.

The other team members are Tom Lewandowski and Mat McColl.

The Bears are a small team with only eight members. Seven are allowed on the field at once, leaving them one substitute.

"A small team is better. There's no bitching because we all get to play," Fracassa pointed out. He especially likes to win when the other team has 50 players on the sidelines. "Once we went with only six and still won," he recalled.

The team does not look impressive before a game, which is part of the plan for psyching out the opposition. "We're very informal, we just toss around the ball. We don't wear fancy uniforms," Fracassa said. "But we do it on the field. People know who we are now," he added.

This year's goal is to capture the independent "A" league title, which the Bears lost in the finals last year to former Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Mike Marshall's team, Red Obscenity. I think we'll win but it will be very tough this year. This league has all the best athletes," Fracassa said. Teams to watch out for are Achilles Alumni and Goldfinger.

The play-offs will begin in three weeks, giving all 80 teams a chance to play. It usually takes five or six rounds until the finals.

Fracassa and some of the other Bears also play football with their fraternity teams, which are more serious rivalries. Sometimes, they must play against each other. However, Fracassa prefers the Golden Bears because "we win, and winning is very important."

There is also the fun of it. "It's a good time, a place to make a lot of new friends and it gets your mind off of studying," Fracassa said.

The Spartans take their Saturdays seriously, but for the Golden Bears, it's Sunday. "The competition is fierce. People don't take it lightly at all," Fracassa stressed.

By DAVE JANSSEN

A Wyvern is a fabulous animal, a two-winged creature resembling a dragon. The men of three West Wilson Hall (Wyvern VI) have lived up to their name.

Over the past three years, Wyvern has become a name to be feared in the IM dorm football ranks.

In 1975 Wyvern was 7-1 but lost in the Wilson block playoffs. In 1976 and 1977, they broke loose for Wilson Hall and South Complex championships, settling for third place finishes in the University after losing out in the semi-finals to the eventual University champs. In these two years they were 20-2, last season outscoring opponents, 332-39.

Even with this impressive showing, Wyvern still is not satisfied. Fourth-year quarterback coach Dorne Dalrymple makes it clear, "This year we're shooting for the whole thing."

It seems Wyvern has the power to back its claim. It has lost only one man on offense and three men on defense from last year's powerful team. With the defense unscathed upon, the team has already breezed past its first two opponents this season.

Dalrymple says organization is the key reason for the team's success in the past three years. "One of our main advantages is that we have people coming back every year that can teach the game to the new kids. Most floors just have a lot of freshmen that don't know how to play the game," he adds that his team uses many of the same plays each year which gives them another advantage over most other teams.

The effect of Wyvern's continuity is most evident when the team is out on the field. "Everybody knows exactly where they're supposed to be and what they're supposed to do," explains

Dalrymple.

The Wyvern coach also feels that there is a psychological factor involved in IM football success. He says that getting fired up for a game is an individual thing with his team. However, he also believes that a lot of teams are "psyched out" when they meet Wyvern. For example, Dalrymple explains, "When you come out with matching jerseys and everybody's running around yelling and screaming, it's got to be a factor in what's going to happen in the game."

But don't get the wrong impression from all the yelling and screaming. According to the Wyvern philosophy, it is not high pressure, win-at-all-costs football.

Wyvern does not recruit. "We just take what we get and try to work with it," Dalrymple said. Practice, held three to four times a week, is not mandatory. In fact, if five or six people are opposed, practice is dropped altogether. Says Dalrymple, "We take it more as a fun thing. We want to have fun but we want to win, too. I guess you could say we want to have fun winning."

Although many team members seem quite confident, Wyvern will surely have to struggle to win the University championship. Dalrymple can foresee having trouble getting past the South Complex, especially certain teams from Wonders. He already knows that the East Complex, featuring Akers' Achilles, defending University champs, will be tough.

But Dalrymple knows the team well. He feels that one of the unique qualities of Wyvern is the closeness of the floor. "It's an unexplainable type of thing," he says, "every year the guys are really close." He believes that the fact that Wyvern is more closely-knit than most floors will be of great help in pulling the team through.

Mighty Cowboys having trouble

DALLAS (UPI) — Since things have been a little hectic in the life of the Dallas Cowboys lately, Coach Tom Landry thought Monday might be as good a time as any for a day off.

Even though the Minnesota Vikings are due in for an engagement on Thursday night, Landry told his squad — Tony Dorsett included — to stay home for the day.

The last time Dorsett stayed home it got him in big trouble with Landry, a situation that still has not run its course.

Sometimes during the week Landry must decide whether he will start Dorsett, who missed practice last Saturday and was benched for not reporting in, or Preston Pearson, who filled in during Dallas' 14-7 victory over Philadelphia last Sunday.

In the meantime, Landry has other things to concern him. The play of his offensive line continues to be less than dynamic and defensive star Harvey Martin still is suffering from a hyper-extended knee that kept him out of the Eagles game and could prevent him from playing against the Vikings as well.

But there are some good signs. The Cowboys defense has begun to play a lot like it did last year and Dallas is also tied for the division lead thanks to a slump by Washington.

"Since our game with the Redskins our defense has shown that it is a pretty tough outfit," Landry said. "That is good to see. They played very well against the Eagles."

Final home game today for kickers

MSU soccer. "Joe (Baum) is setting goals for the team," Haidler said. "He know what a national championship team looks like since he played on one. He may not have the material right now, but if he gets the facilities, they'll have places to go in five to 10 years."

THIRD EDITION ON SALE THIS WEEK

Grebner enjoys 'grading profs'

By DARLENE DONLOE
State News Staff Writer
It all started one morning about 5 a.m. That is when he does his best thinking. It came while he was sleeping.

"I could pay people to help me put it together and then I could sell it to the bookstores," he dreamed.

"At the same time, I could aggravate a lot of people." That is how Mark Grebner, D-East Lansing, Ingham County commissioner and a sixth year senior at MSU, started his popular "Grading the Profs" pamphlet.

The pamphlet is designed to show what students feel about individual professors' teaching and grading performances.

The third and maybe last edition of "Grading the Profs" will be in the bookstores this week.

Grebner said he enjoys producing the pamphlet, but feels it is time for him to move on to different things.

"I've enjoyed this enterprise and aggravated a lot of people, but it's beginning to wear," he said.

The questionnaires used in the survey each term are sorted and tabulated and averages are calculated for each regular faculty who teaches undergraduate non-remedial courses of at least two credits.

The information in the third edition pamphlet is from a survey taken winter term.

Grebner said it takes his helpers about six months to compile all the information in the pamphlet.

He said many people feel he started the idea as a great million dollar scheme.

Since 1974 there have been 10,000 copies sold which have reaped a profit of $6,000.

However, Grebner said, of that amount $4,500 goes to printers, typists and the people who help put the pamphlet together. Grebner gets paid only if the stores sell enough copies.

Grebner said a few controversies have arisen from professors who feel they have been rated low.

Low rated professors ignore the pamphlet and feel that all students really want are easy classes and professors, he said adding that it also shows there are many "hard" professors who get high ratings.

The pamphlet pays for itself and is done carefully every two years, he said, to cut down on mistakes.

"We have taken additional precautions in this edition, but we have little doubt that a few mistakes have slipped past," Grebner explained.

Responses from students are generally favorable and then agree with 80 percent of the information in the pamphlet, he said.

Grebner, who thinks of himself as a person who gets up and does things other people talk about and are afraid to do, said when 1980 rolls around he hopes someone continues where he left off.

MSU prof Koenig to speak on energy

Herman Koenig, MSU professor of electrical engineering and systems science, will be the featured speaker at the second of three Global Issues Forum on Pathway to the Future.

Speaking today at 3:30 p.m. in Erickson Kiva, Koenig's lecture is entitled "Energy: Crisis and Opportunity."

Koenig will also discuss the concept that Gross National Product is no longer an adequate social indicator, and the intellectual creativity of today's students is a precious resource.

A dinner forum will be held at 5:30 p.m. in 61 Case Hall. Students in residence halls may present ID cards, others must pay $2.65.

Mall debate slated

Whether the Dayton Hudson regional mall should be built in East Lansing will be the subject of a public debate at 8 tonight in the east formal lounge of Landon Hall.

The anti-mall position will be argued by Cooley Law School student Paul Ross, a member of the steering committee of Citizens for a Livable Community.

The pro-mall side will be debated by Peter Hutchinson, director of Dayton Hudson Properties.

The fate of the proposed regional mall will be decided by East Lansing voters Nov. 7.

Speech on delinquents

Causes and effects of juvenile delinquents in the Lansing area will be discussed at 12:30 p.m. Thursday at the Lansing Elks Club, 3535 Moores River Drive.

John Kempainen, Probate Court Program director for Ingham County, will speak about the problems the county faces without adequate facilities to house convicted juveniles.

Currently, the Ingham County Detention Facility in Lansing has enough space available for 17 juveniles, Kempainen said. An increase of "serious felony crimes" has indicated that more space is needed.

He said the talk will inform concerned people about possible causes of serious crimes.

The talk is being sponsored by the Lansing Area Safety Council, Women's Division.

U.S. energy use up

A Department of Energy survey on natural gas says that since 1968, the United States has been producing and consuming more natural gas each year than the Nation has been finding in the form of new reserves. In 1974, natural gas production declined for the first time, a drop of almost 6 percent from the 1973 level.

the aid of the taped student directory, since the printed one is not out yet," Kestenbaum said, "and inform them that our volunteers could change their addresses for them if given permission."

"The majority of students who move each year do not bother to change their addresses on their voter registration cards with the city clerk," Kestenbaum, also a member of the East Lansing Planning Commission, said.

"This means when it comes time to vote they may have to travel a much greater distance back to their old precinct," he said. Kestenbaum said he lost in his efforts to get the tape before the registration deadline through "stalling on the part of the MSU administration."

Byron Higgins, assistant vice president for legal affairs, said the University did not want to release the tape because some students may have felt it would be an invasion of privacy.

He said the tapes were University property, and under the Buckley Amendment of 1974, a school cannot release student records without the expressed consent of the student.

"We lost under an exception of the Buckley Amendment, which states student directories are exempt because students have a choice at registration whether or not they want to release their names and addresses," Higgins said.

Although he offered to give Kestenbaum a computer printout of the directory, Higgins said he did not want to release the tape because it cost the University $3,000 to put together.

In his decision, Ingham County Judge Michael Harrison gave the tape to Kestenbaum, but put certain restrictions on its use.

Harrison said the tape was only to be used for purposes of the 1978 election and it must be erased following the election.

Mark Grebner, incumbent candidate for Ingham County Board of Commissioners and a student voter registration organizer, was asked by Kestenbaum to help with the project because of his knowledge of computer programming.

Grebner said he was pleased with the decision to release the tape, but felt it was handed over "too late to help with its primary purpose."

"We started asking for the tapes at the beginning of August because we wanted to reach as many registered voters as possible and get correct addresses," Grebner said.

"We were told repeatedly in verbal agreements with Information Services Director Dale Arnold and Higgins that the tape would be ours any day, very soon, and then tomorrow," he said.

Grebner said he was a victim of "a stalling game" on the part of University administrators, who kept pushing the date for release back until voter registration was over.

"That's when we filed the suit," Grebner said, "and although its primary purpose has been lost we are still going to use the tape to reach students with sample ballots and campaign literature."

"We're not trying to deluge people with campaign literature, especially the ones who are not registered to vote," Grebner said. "That was the purpose of getting an accurate listing of East Lansing voters."

Career night to offer tips

An MSU Placement Services official and two MSU graduates will offer tips for job-seekers at the Senior Class Council's Career Night at 7 tonight in 109 Anthony Hall.

Ed Fitzpatrick, assistant director of MSU Placement Services, will speak on resume writing, interviewing and the job outlook for prospective graduates.

Jane Warner, an MSU graduate and employee of the salary personnel department at General Motors Corp., will speak on what employers look for and the college graduate's place in the job market.

Bruce Leech, a 1978 MSU graduate who is employed by the Harris Bank of Chicago, will speak on his own expectations versus the reality of the job market and what the graduate should expect to learn from a job interview.

CATA faces lawsuit from anti-mall group

James Anderson, CLC coordinator said.

CATA advertising personnel told the State News last week the signs were removed on grounds of "improper identification."

Bus sign frames covered the name of the ad's sponsor, Bob Giffer, vice-president of Batchelder Co., CATA's advertising agency, said.

The anti-mall group said in its suit that signs were submitted "prior to actual placement" and that neither CATA nor its advertising distributor had previously informed the group of any possible problems.

"CATA lost its cool on this issue," Anderson said. The Committee for a Balanced Development is willing to enlarge or relocate the advertising disclaimer in order to continue its campaign, he said. "CATA has refused to answer our phone calls. We have the right under our advertising contract to take down what may prove detrimental," Duane Kooyers, CATA projects manager told the State News last week.

CATA does not support or oppose the proposal, Kooyers said. "As a public authority, we shall remain neutral," he said.

If the public gets the impression CATA is taking sides, the signs should not be put up, Kooyers said.

Responding to the CBD's formal request for reinstatement of the signs, the suit charged that the signs "were distortions, inaccurate, and misrepresentative of the truth."

"We believe the sign is an accurate and fair representation," Anderson told reporters when the group announced its intentions to file suit Tuesday.

Voters show indecision

The 3rd Precinct, which is a mixture of students and homeowners, is Gordon's strongest. Voters are giving him 39 percent of their support, while Grebner is favored by 8 percent of the respondents.

Grebner has his strongest support in the student precincts. Sixty-seven percent of the voters polled in the student 20th Precinct have opted for Grebner, while Gordon is receiving only 17 percent of their votes, leaving 17 percent undecided.

Republicans in the 8th District will vote with less regard to party lines than Democrats will.

Voters who identified themselves as Republicans said they will give 25 percent of their votes to Gordon.

Grebner got 17 percent of the support of Republican voters and 58 percent were still undecided.

Democrats, however, say they will give Grebner 40 percent of their votes.

Voter response from the 9th District commissioner's race has Republican Thomas Brennan, Jr. leading with 32 percent of the voters backing him.

The Democratic candidate, Gina Torielli, is lagging with only 10 percent of the voters supporting her.

Fifty-seven percent of the voters were not sure how they would vote in the elections.

Brennan is garnering most of his support in the residential precincts.

Torielli, however, is doing best in the mixed precincts.

Democrats are for the most part largely undecided yet as to who will get their vote in November.

Of the voters who identified themselves as Democrats, 14 percent said they would vote for Torielli and the remainder are undecided.

Fifty-seven percent of those identified as Republicans will vote along party lines for the 9th District race.

Almost 9 percent of those Republicans polled said they would cross party lines to vote for Torielli.

The 10th District commissioner's race has Democratic incumbent Jess Sobel paired off against Republican Fred Girard.

This survey was conducted when Cathy Luden was the Republican challenger in the 10th District.

Luden withdrew from the race and Fred Girard was nominated by the Ingham County Republican Committee to replace her.

Since the survey was done while Luden was still officially in the race, statistics for the Sobel-Girard race have not been tabulated.

The survey consisted of 381 respondents who were randomly selected from the East Lansing registered voter's list.

The sampling error for the survey is 5.2 percent. This means the results can be interpreted as being plus or minus 5.2 of the percentages shown in the survey.
