Inflation guideline enforcement vowed

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration's top inflation fighters said Tuesday they will concentrate as much as 80 percent of their efforts on enforcing the administration's new price guidelines.

But they said it could be more than a year before the new wage and price guidelines will result in a slow down in the rate of inflation, now about 8 percent.

"I am not going to set a time on it, but I would be surprised if within less than a year one were able to show a tapering off and possibly a downturn. There are so many other factors involved," said Albert Kahn, chairperson of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

Kahn, however, said there should be some positive results of the program within a few months, though they may not show up in the government's inflation statistics.

"I don't like to think about failure," he said. "If we don't bring inflation under control there is enormous danger of a recession. . . . We are determined to make this program work."

The guidelines are aimed at holding wage increases to 7 percent and price hikes to an average of 5.75 percent, although considerable flexibility is allowed for price behavior. Basically, companies are supposed to keep price increases 0.5 percent below the average increases for the previous two years.

In announcing the program last week, Carter said it is aimed at reducing the rate of inflation to between 6 percent and 6.5 percent next year. However, Kahn appeared doubtful about that goal when he said he would be surprised if inflation is reduced within a year.

Kahn said he is satisfied with much of the initial reaction to the program by organized labor, though the AFL-CIO assailed the voluntary anti-inflation program Tuesday, rejecting it as unfair to workers and calling instead for mandatory wage and price controls.

Labor leaders urged the president to scrap his voluntary wage-price guidelines and call a special session of Congress this fall to pass a bill authorizing "full economic controls" on prices, wages, profits, interest rates, dividends, rents and other sources of inflation.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, in his first public statement on the anti-inflation program, pummeled virtually every part of the plan and opened the way for mass defiance of the wage guidelines by the 106 member unions.

The administration wasted little time reacting to Meany's statement.

"The AFL-CIO leadership waited less than a week before condemning the program, obviously without a fair test," said Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, who added:

"We will continue to work with those leaders and rank and file workers interested in helping to fight inflation, and I continue to expect that everyone — everyone — will respect the guidelines President Carter has proposed. We will not hesitate to use our full authority to encourage compliance with these guidelines."

Kahn responded Tuesday that he thinks individual unions will support the program because it "has been painstakingly drawn up to be as scrupulously fair as possible."

Kahn, rejecting a proposal of a special congressional session to consider the matter, suggested that Meany does not speak for all organized labor and said he is confident that "leaders of unions who actually do the bargaining" as well as rank and file members will cooperate once the administration proves the program is fair.

Speaking earlier in the day, Meany said, "The plan his (Carter's) advisers have devised is unfair and inequitable and the end result of their ill-considered proposals could well be another recession."

"We now believe the time has come for mandatory, legislated economic controls. We do not like controls. . . . but recession is worse," Meany said, reading a statement that was adopted unanimously by the AFL-CIO's 35 member executive council.

Administration officials have said that support for the program from the 14 million member federation is crucial to its success.

State appropriations head says burn PBB

By THE STATE NEWS

and UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Jerome Hart said Tuesday PBB-tainted livestock should be incinerated rather than buried.

Hart, a Saginaw Democrat, said he arrived at that conclusion after a series of hearings on a Department of Natural Resources request for $565,000 to continue the burial operations.

"The animals should have been incinerated in the first place and that's exactly what the DNR recommended to the governor," Hart said.

"Instead, the wishes of the people of Oscoda County were completely ignored." DNR officials told the appropriations committee they originally recommended incineration as the best alternative but became convinced that burial at a site near Mio was appropriate in light of several pressing circumstances at the time the decision was made.

Hart said the DNR could have constructed an incinerator for PBB-tainted livestock by April of this year. If that course of action had been taken, the request for additional funds would have been unnecessary, he said.

"You've got to take the safest, most logical course of action on a matter as sensitive as PBB," Hart said.

"Incineration of the animals is safer and more acceptable to the public."

MSU officials have said they have discovered low levels of PBB in soil samples taken near an incinerator where animals contaminated with the chemical were burned between 1974 and 1977.

MSU professor Matthew J. Zabik said further tests will be necessary to determine whether the PBB came from the incinerator or if the contamination levels found are typical for the state.

Zabik said he does not believe the levels of contamination found — ranging as high as 41 parts per billion — amount to a health hazard.

The PBB was found in soil samples taken downwind from the incinerator.

Officials said they will compare the levels of PBB in those soil samples with samples taken in other parts of the state. Campus ground water has apparently not been affected.

About 2.2 pounds of the chemical were burned at MSU, the bulk of it in 1974.

In October 1977 the DNR said the Veterinary Clinic incinerator was inadequate for destruction of PBB-tainted cattle because it does not generate the 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit necessary to destroy the chemical.

State officials said that PBB burned at lower temperatures can vaporize into dangerous dioxins or remain in the ashes.

Iran oil worker strike threatens production halt

By PARVIZ RAEIN
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A strike by 37,000 refinery workers threatened to cripple Iran's huge petroleum industry Tuesday. Oil exports from this riot-torn country to the United States and other world markets were reduced by 40 percent, a government official said.

The oil workers' demands include higher pay and repeal of martial law.

In Washington, President Carter issued a strong public statement in support of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, praising him for moving "toward democracy." Carter also met with the Shah's son, Crown Prince Reza.

U.S. energy officials in Washington said it was too early to determine what impact the strike will have on the U.S., which imports a total of 9.16 million barrels of oil daily. But state department spokesperson Hoddging Carter said the strike would have no immediate effect in the United States because transport of oil from Iran requires six to eight weeks.

Iran, which produces about 10 percent of the oil in the non-communist world, is the second biggest U.S. oil supplier behind Saudi Arabia. The United States imports 919,700 barrels a day from Iran and 1.2 million barrels daily from the Saudis.

Information Minister Mohammed-Reza Ameli-Tehran said the government maintained 60 percent of its daily oil export quota of 5 million barrels. He did not say whether the government would be able to continue to export oil or how it managed to get the oil out of the country Tuesday.

The information minister denied that Iranian soldiers had occupied oil installations but said troops were stationed near them to prevent sabotage.

Meanwhile, thousands of protesters staged anti-government demonstrations in at least two Iranian cities, but no injuries were reported. Officials said 35,000 persons participated in a demonstration on the campus of Tehran University, but that the crowd dispersed when it rained. About 30,000 demonstrators reportedly took part in a demonstration in Qum.

Another government source who did not want to be named said an "emergency" plan was drawn up last week to enable the country to maintain 60 percent of its oil exports in the event of a crisis in the oil industry. The source declined to reveal details of the plan.

Prime Minister Jaafar Sharif-Emani told Parliament the strike had created a "dangerous situation" that could seriously affect the country's economy.

"Those who provoke the oil company workers to strike should know that the halt in the export of oil will have dangerous repercussions for the entire nation," he told the deputies.

The strike further jolted the government, already shaken by rioting of conservative Moslems seeking an end to the Shah's Westernized reforms.

In New York, John Lichtblau, director of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, said the Iranian strike would have little effect unless it lasted at least several weeks.

"If the fields stay closed for two or three weeks and the other countries don't increase their production, there would be a crunch," he said.

Lichtblau said other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries could offset the loss of Iranian oil by increasing production as much as possible. He said Japan and several European countries, including West Germany and France, are particularly dependent on Iranian oil. Israel also imports a substantial amount of oil from Iran.

Sharif-Emani said Iran will lose $60 million a day in revenue until the strike ends. Iran produces 6 million barrels a day but 1 million barrels are consumed in the country.

The strike also affected Iran's refineries, and experts said it could bring the nation's transportation system to a halt within a week unless a solution is found.

The oil workers went on strike last week demanding wage increases, the lifting of martial law, and trial for former SAVAK Iranian secret police Chief Nematullah Nasiri.

Israel visit postponed; air base talks suspended 'for time being'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon has postponed "for the time being" a visit by a high-level delegation to Israel to discuss arrangements for building two new military air bases for the Israeli Air Force in the Negev Desert, a spokesperson said Tuesday.

But the spokesperson, Thomas Ross, sidestepped questions aimed at determining whether the postponement was linked to the U.S. government's objections to an Israeli government decision to "thicken" Israeli settlements in the disputed West Bank area.

Ross referred questions on this to the White House and State Department. He gave no indication when Assistant Defense Secretary David McGiffert and other senior officials will travel to Israel. McGiffert also is expected to visit Egypt on the same trip.

However, the Pentagon spokesperson noted that a team of U.S. Air Force and Army engineer experts will leave Sunday for Israel to begin consultations with Israeli technicians on construction of two bases in the Negev to replace two other bases the Israelis have agreed to evacuate in the Sinai under an Israeli-Egyptian peace arrangement.

There have been various estimates as to how much the new bases will cost, ranging from about $150 million to $500 million each.

The United States is expected to pay all or most of the cost of these new bases.

According to Ross, when McGiffert does make the trip, his discussions are to be limited only to the base matter. Ross said McGiffert is not authorized to go into such questions as the pace of Israeli troop withdrawals from the Sinai.

INDIVIDUALS, MANY CITIES UNAIDED

Headlee proposal misunderstood by voters

By MICHELLE CHAMBERS
State News Staff Writer
Third of four parts

Of the three tax proposals, the so-called Headlee amendment has received the most attention.

Also known as the tax limitation proposal and Proposal E, the Headlee amendment was created by Taxpayers United, Inc., an organization with support at the state and national level. It received its name from the chairperson of the Michigan organization, Richard Headlee, a Farmington Hills insurance executive.

Considered the most complex of the three, the tax limitation proposal gained the unqualified support of many at the onset. However, since that time, careful examination of the Headlee amendment has shown that it will not cut taxes but merely put a lid on them.

The complexity of the proposal is undiscernable to the average citizen, but professional economists contend that while it might have an effect on state financing in the future, it will not help many Michigan communities.

Specifically, the Headlee amendment would change the current system of assessing property taxes.

The authors of the tax proposal explain that the amendment provides that:

- total property taxes of a local government will not be allowed to rise any faster than the rate of inflation as indicated in U.S. consumer price index;
- if total property assessments rise faster than the rate of inflation, all property taxes in that community will be cut back uniformly through a millage reduction; and

• if the increases of total property tax assessments do not reach the rate of inflation, there would be no property tax reductions for homeowners in that community.

The most misunderstood aspect of the Headlee proposal is that most voters believe it will give individual property tax breaks and reform the tax system. However, the tax limitation proposal explicitly states that it will only cap community taxes.

The Michigan Department of Management and Budget has explained that the proposal would only largely affect areas with heavy demand for real estate and quickly-rising property values.

Many economists agreed that the most favorable aspect of the proposal is that the amendment limits total state revenues to a percentage of the total personal income of Michigan taxpayers. The percentage would not be allowed to grow past the present level. Total state taxes currently equal about 9.5 percent of personal income.

However, several revenues will not be limited by the proposed amendment including tuition, city income taxes, fines, hook-up charges and licenses.

The proposal has received substantial support from the business sector and for good reason, according to Zolton Ferency, MSU professor of criminal justice.

Ferency explains that because state property taxes will remain at a flat-rate of 9.5 percent of personal income, the Headlee proposal becomes a corporate tax shelter.

Big businesses will never be called on to pay more than the set percentage no matter how much profit was made or how many improvements were implemented.

He pointed out that the amendment states if state revenues exceed the 9.5 percent limit by more than 1 percent it will be rebated based on the liability reported on the state income tax.

However, Ferency explained, the rebate will only go to those who pay personal and business taxes. It will not be returned to those who do not pay these taxes though they have contributed to the state revenue.

American trade with China increases

HONG KONG (AP) — American business deals at the Canton Trade Fair, the wide-ranging exposition of Chinese wares made available to international business leaders, should amount to more than $75 million this fall, a leading expert on U.S.-China trade said Tuesday.

John Kamm, Hong Kong representative for the National Council for U.S.-China Trade, predicted the level of trading will be higher than at the annual spring fair when U.S. business leaders did $73 million worth of business.

Kamm stressed, however, that U.S. trade with China has increased substantially overall.

UGANDAN TROOPS ADVANCE

Tanzania forces battle invaders

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Tanzania said Tuesday night its armed forces were engaged in battle with invading Ugandan troops in an area in northern Tanzania along the western shore of Lake Victoria.

In a statement, the government said Ugandan troops, supported by tanks and heavy artillery, crossed the border Monday and that Ugandan soldiers had advanced as far as Kyaka, about 15 miles inside Tanzania.

The statement said Uganda claims that Tanzanian forces invaded Uganda last week were "instant news."

There was no word about the fate of 16 Americans and 27

Canadians believed living near the reported battle zone. The 16 Americans, Western diplomatic sources said, include 11 missionaries and five members of an archaeological team from Brown University. Some other foreigners were being evacuated.

Only Monday, Tanzania had scoffed again at repeated claims by Uganda that it was fighting an invasion of Tanzanians.

But Tanzanian sources said Tuesday "heavy fighting" between the two East African countries was centered around the Tanzanian town of Bukoba, five miles south of the border and about 650 miles east of Dar Es Salaam, following an invasion Monday.

Radio Tanzania, in a broadcast monitored in Johannesburg, South Africa, said Tuesday night that Uganda made several air strikes into its northern province during the weekend and several Ugandan warplanes were shot down.

Sources in the Ugandan exile community in Nairobi, capital of neighboring Kenya, said about 200 wounded Ugandan soldiers arrived at the Makinde police barracks at Kampala, the Ugandan capital, Tuesday morning aboard 10 helicopters.

Ugandan President Idi Amin has warned that Ugandan jets may bomb strategic targets inside Tanzania in retaliation.

Railroads seek freight rate hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The

nation's railroads are seeking an average of 5.5 percent increase in freight rates that would affect prices of vegetables, electricity, liquor and thousands of other items.

The proposal, to be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission on Wednesday, will provide an early test of how a rate-setting agency reacts to new presidential price guidelines.

The overall increase and the increase in shipping some individual items would exceed the administration's 7.9 percent price guideline for the rail industry.

But industry officials at the Association of American Railroads said the increase eventually approved should bring the figure to 7.6 percent. They said the railroads should qualify for exceptions applying to industries that have experienced substantial increases in costs and prices.

Alfred Kahn, who chairs the president's Council of Wage and Price Stability, told reporters, "On its face an 8 percent price increase... might well be in violation of the standards."

For Midwestern farmers, the proposal would mean an additional maximum cost of 13 percent to ship barley, corn and wheat.

Charges for shipping carrots, onions, beets, radishes, broccoli, lettuce and other fresh vegetables would go up 12 percent.

The drug, sulindac, is unique among anti-arthritis drugs because it does not go to work until after it is absorbed by the digestive system. Doctors say that reduces stomach upset and the chance for ulcers.

Moreover, it needs to be taken only twice a day, instead of three or four times a day as with aspirin and most other drugs.

Dr. Herbert Diamond, one of 200 researchers who helped in the 12 years of tests of sulindac, said sulindac will be useful for patients who have trouble taking aspirin, still the most widely used anti-arthritis drug in the United States.

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 25 million Americans suffering from arthritis may find new relief from a drug which goes on the market Wednesday and has fewer side effects than aspirin, its developers said Tuesday.

Israeli complaints cloud Begin sojourn to U.S.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime

Minister Menachem Begin leaves Wednesday on a trip to the United States and Canada amid hopes for an early signing of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty. But some Israeli officials grumbled Tuesday that Washington was obstructing progress on the pact.

Israeli officials are showing growing irritation and resentment over the U.S. position in the talks, which they described as more pro-Arab than Egypt's stand.

"We are really puzzled by what's going on. The Egyptians seem willing to go further than the Americans are willing to let them," said one official, who refused to be identified.

No government spokesperson was prepared to speak officially to reporters for fear of widening the rift, but privately on official called the U.S. stand "bizarre."

Sources said the U.S. negotiators are more insistent than Egypt on building a link between an Egyptian-Israeli treaty and separate negotiation over the West Bank of Jordan and the Palestinian issues. Israel wants the treaty to stand on its own to avoid further concessions on the West Bank for now.

An Israeli analyst, who declined to be named, said the American stance appears to be a strategy of attempting to gain influence with the Arab world.

In rejecting Tacoma's $250,000 damage suit last week after a 14-month trial, Wexford County Circuit Judge William Peterson ruled Tacoma failed to prove low-level PBB contamination destroyed his dairy business or that low-level contamination was harmful.

A spokesperson for the Tacoma said Tuesday animals on Tacoma's farm still contain 1.62 parts per million of the toxic fire retardant in their bodies, 81 times in excess of levels mandated under state law.

"Any time they want to sell any animal they have to have it tested," the spokesperson said. "It's been a long time since they sold any."

Deming said the Tacoma farm is one of a handful left in the state where entire herds remain under quarantine for excessive levels of PBB.

Dr. Duane Deming, a veterinarian in the Agriculture Department's PBB Unit, said the state has not tested Tacoma's herd for at least two years because of Tacoma's suit against Michigan Chemical Co. and Michigan Farm Bureau Services Inc. The suit resulted from a 1973 accident which mixed PBB with livestock feed.

Deming said the quarantine applies only to cattle for slaughter and that because Tacoma's herd exhibits no PBB contamination in its milk the farmer is not barred from selling his milk.

Dr. Duane Deming, a veterinarian in the Agriculture Department's PBB Unit, said the state has not tested Tacoma's herd for at least two years because of Tacoma's suit against Michigan Chemical Co. and Michigan Farm Bureau Services Inc. The suit resulted from a 1973 accident which mixed PBB with livestock feed.

Deming said the quarantine applies only to cattle for slaughter and that because Tacoma's herd exhibits no PBB contamination in its milk the farmer is not barred from selling his milk.

Ferrises blend marriage, jobs

By JENNIFER DIXON
State News Staff Writer
Editor's note: This is the third of five interviews with MSU faculty members who are married and work at the University.

Being parents as well as professionals works out well for one couple on campus, who teach in a related field and in the same building.

Maxine and John who goes by Jake, Ferris, both have joint appointments to teach, research and do extension work. He is a professor of agricultural economics and she is an associate professor in the Agriculture and Natural Resources Education Institute.

The Ferrises look at their careers in terms of a trade-off, Maxine said. She has worked at the University since 1976 and before that was at home with their two boys, now in sixth and eighth grade.

So now when their friends ask her husband why he lets her travel so much, he tells them "she's built up a big bank account to draw upon over the years," she said.

She will be teaching in Tucson, Ariz. this winter and "he'll be manning the home front," Maxine said.

They also balance jobs around the house. "It's assumed I take care of the groceries and clothing. He does the yard work, shovels snow and pays the bills," Maxine said.

The two boys do a lot too, she said. Having both parents work has taught the Ferris children to be self-reliant, Maxine explained.

"Dad and I are only at the other end of the telephone," she added. "We tell them where we can be reached and expect the same from them."

"We've crossed our fingers knowing the kids have a couple hours after school," John said. "They have all their friends over. The major problem is finger prints on the wall."

When the Ferrises are at home they try to spend more time with their children and make an effort to do things with the boys. John said he likes to "shoot baskets" with them.

"This is a generation that women can do more things. We're open at home. When I'm under the gun, I'm more crabby than usual," Maxine said. "And the boys understand."

John Ferris

The Ferris children have benefitted from having their parents both work and their parents have also learned a few things.

"Parenting is a joint thing," Maxine said. "Jake does more sports things and I help them with their homework."

The Ferrises have been married 15 years and met downstairs at the Union Building Cafeteria when she was a graduate student and he was on the faculty.

"I would never want to be in the same department as my husband," Maxine said. "It's not a good idea politically and would be too much of a good thing."

"Let there be spaces in your togetherness," she said, saying she was quoting Khalil Gibran, author of The Prophet.

The most time they spend together during a day is on their way into work, usually a silent drive as neither is good at getting up in the morning. But the last one awake makes the bed.

Dayton Hudson, CLC file budget statements

Campaign spending by both pro and con Dayton Hudson mall forces is increasing as Nov. 7 nears.

The Committee for Balanced Development, the campaign arm of Citizens for a Livable Community, had expenses of $4,414 for the second reporting period, according to a financial statement filed with the Ingham County Clerk's Office. Expenses for the entire campaign through Oct. 22 totaled $5,930.

Dayton Hudson Properties spent $9,180 during the second filing period. Total campaign expenses through Oct. 22 were $15,103.

CLC's major expenses for the second filing period were salaries, $1,771; newspaper advertisements $940; printing, $470; postage, $420; design and layout, $225; campaign pencils, $231; telephone, $115; and office supplies, $135.

Dayton Hudson's major expenses for the second reporting period were salaries, $5,000; literature production, $1,303; data processing, $986; copying, $536; office, typewriter and furniture rental $508; telephone, $296; refreshments, $249; and mailing and postage, $168.

CLC listed $3,694 in receipts and $280 in non-cash contributions received during the reporting period. Receipts and non-cash contributions for the entire campaign to Oct. 22 totaled $6,011.

The ending balance for the period was $332 with outstanding debts of $1,050. Dayton Hudson had a beginning balance of $7,636 for the reporting period and an ending balance of $3,456. Salaries were not subtracted in arriving at the ending balance in the report.

Early in the campaign, CLC asked Dayton Hudson to agree to an overall campaign limit of $15,000. While Dayton Hudson did not agree to the ceiling on spending, it did agree to a $4,000 limit on media advertising.

Both groups are well below the media limit as the date nears for East Lansing voters to decide the fate of the proposed regional mall.

INFORMAL COMPLAINT 'QUICKER'

Official explains disco case

By THERESA D. McCLELLAN
State News Staff Writer

The informal route taken by the Civil Rights Commission in handling the racial discrimination complaint against the Bus Stop was used because of its ability to achieve quicker results, said Vance Sims, director of the commission.

"If we had treated the issue as a formal case the Bus Stop owners would not have known that a complaint was lodged against them until three weeks later," he said.

"And the case would not have come to court until six months later," he said. "I didn't want to wait that long with this type of situation," he said.

Owners of the Bus Stop have agreed to a uniform policy of admittance after meeting informally with the commission. Students who have complained seem to be pleased with the action taken by the commission.

"As long as they follow a uniform policy of admittance, that is what I was after," said Susan Thrasher, 20, one of the 14 complainants.

"It did not bother me that they were asking for three pieces of ID as long as they asked everyone for three pieces of ID," she said.

Johnny Johns, who owns the building which houses the Bus Stop, said he was not in Lansing when "whatever happened, if anything, occurred" and would not tolerate any discrimination.

"I am not trying to keep the blacks out," he said. "I like black people. There are some good blacks and there are some good whites and vice versa and I will not tolerate any discrimination in anything I am affiliated with."

However, Clinton Canady, a 30-year-old lawyer who was refused admittance to the disco, said he will file a formal complaint and leave it to the courts to decide if there was any discriminatory practices at the Bus Stop.

"When they got on the news and said that the discriminatory allegations were a joke I decided I would go to court and let the courts decide," Canady said.

He also said he would proceed to take action before the end of the week.

Jack Pitts, director of student affairs in the MSU College of Urban Development, said he would be willing to assist in any formal complaints against the Bus Stop.

Pitts, 30, was also refused admittance to the Bus Stop for lack of ID.

"I have told the commission that I would rather have had a formal complaint," Pitts said, "because I could see them (the Bus Stop) making their service so poor to blacks although they are allowing them in, that blacks would not want to return."

A spokesperson for the NAACP said they were meeting Sunday and would discuss any measures it would take against the discrimination complaint.

Council may be dropped

The Off-Campus Council may be dropped from ASMSU Student Board through lack of student interest if it does not submit a revised constitution to the board before December.

The council would represent students residing off campus, but not in fraternities, sororities, cooperatives, or University apartment residences.

All students except the off-campus residents are currently represented twice on the student board, by their college and place of residence.

The Off-Campus Council was approved by students through winter term 1978, but has floundered through lack of interest, said Dan Stouffer, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative.

Stouffer said the six-member group is trying to revise its constitution before the deadline.

If the Student Board does not receive it before December, he said, the board policy committee will recommend that the council be taken out of the Student Board Constitution.

All students must vote to disband the council, since it is written in the ASMSU constitution.

Stouffer said a campuswide referendum would probably be taken to students during winter term registration concerning the council's elimination.

If a new constitution is submitted, board members must approve it before it is voted on by off-campus students.

Halfway house plan killed

By SHEILA BEACHUM
State News Staff Writer

Plans for a new halfway house were shot down by the Lansing City Council Monday.

Council members unanimously voted down a special use permit request for a halfway house at the Spartan Motel, 501 E. Kalamazoo St.

The council's veto action prohibits New Way In, Inc., a non-profit organization, from establishing a rehabilitation center for former criminal offenders at the downtown motel.

Even though "the council has long supported halfway houses in Lansing," councilmember-at-large Richard Baker said the request from New Way In for a special use permit should be denied.

Baker said it was "unfortunate" that the request would permit such a large number of people concentrated in one area, and for this reason he said it should be denied.

New Way In spokespersons said originally that 70 inmates would be housed in the proposed facility.

The Rev. Raymond Kacirk, coordinator of New Way In, told the council in a compromise effort at last week's meeting that New Way In would cut this figure to 35.

"I feel that the mood generated by this request for a special use permit reflects poorly on the city council as city government," Baker said.

Baker criticized the city for its "failure to do something" to alleviate fears of motel-area residents about their neighborhood.

Mall issue debated as election nears

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

Community discussion of whether a regional mall should be built is a sign that the United States is at a turning point in urban development, a Dayton Hudson mall opponent said Monday.

The era of cheap energy and massive highway systems which led to dispersed development is coming to an end, said James Anderson, coordinator for Citizens for a Livable Community, an anti-mall group.

"The public and private investment in our core city areas has to be utilized to a greater extent," Anderson said at an Akers Hall debate.

Peter Hutchinson of Dayton Hudson Properties said his company recognizes that marketplaces for huge shopping centers such as the 1.7 million square foot Northland Mall in Southfield don't exist anymore.

The regional mall Dayton Hudson is proposing to build at Lake Lansing Road and U.S. 127 is about the size of only the Hudson's store at Northland, he said. Northland's Hudson's is 512,000 square feet and the proposed mall will be 510,000 square feet in Phase 1.

The shopping centers built by Dayton Hudson are also more than retail machines, he said. The company gives 5 percent of its before taxes profits to community services and organizations and management is expected to become involved in the community, he said.

Anderson said there are ways to locate a Hudson's in the Lansing area short of creating a whole new strip development on Lake Lansing Road.

More potential exists for locating a

Proposed arts building gets 'paper' name

By KIM CRAWFORD
State News Staff Writer

Most buildings on campus are named for governors, legislators, researchers or people who have somehow left their historical mark on the University.

Persons like Hezekiah G. Wells, a Kalamazoo county judge who helped found the Agricultural College or Clarence "Biggie" Munn, head coach when Michigan State College won the 1952 national football championship.

But Somnath Chatterjee, director of the Instructional Media Center, will forever have his name "on" an MSU building — at least on paper.

The building that will "bear" his name is the proposed Communication Arts and Sciences Building.

The building's "name" cannot really be determined by the state, but as one Michigan legislator put it "the name of the building will be eternally recorded in the laws of Michigan as the Chatterjee building."

Earlier this month Gov. William G.

Milliken approved the 1978-79 capital outlays bill that gave MSU $1 million to start the construction of the $21.5 million Communications Arts and Sciences Building.

Members of the joint legislative capital outlays committee wrote Chatterjee's name into the bill as the name of the proposed building, because of his extensive lobbying efforts.

"The project is known as the Chatterjee Building at the capital, really," said Rep. Russell Hellman, D-Dollar Bay, committee chairperson.

"If you said 'Communication Arts and Sciences Building' down there no one would know what the hell you were talking about," he added.

Hellman said Chatterjee has been pushing for the building for several years. The Legislature originally approved the project in the early 1960s.

"Initially, they (legislators) were kidding me for pushing it all the time," Chatterjee said.

Emergency phone installation begins next week

By RUSS HUMPHREY
State News Staff Writer

Installation of the MSU emergency phone network begins next week with trenching for cable lines for 22 telephones.

David A. Sonnega, a design engineer with the Physical Plant, said portions of the telephone system will be operational Dec. 15.

The work begins after MSU's Board of Trustees awarded Friday a contract for $25,608 to Quality Electric, Inc. of Lansing. The contract includes 22 emergency phones, trenching for cable lines and modifications to the Department of Public Safety central dispatch panel.

The total budget for Phase 1 of the project will be about $40,000. This includes engineering, site restoration and other installation charges by Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

Phase 2 of the project, which has an additional 18 telephones, is expected to cost

Portions of system operational soon; total system by summer

the same and should be completed before summer term 1979, Sonnega said.

The network will make it possible to signal DPS from telephones located in strategic spots around campus. Each emergency telephone will be identified with a "highly visible" green light and will be directly connected with DPS headquarters, 87 Red Cedar Road.

A dispatch board, fashioned like a campus map, will have lights on it to represent each location of the telephones. These lights will notify officers where to dispatch patrol cars.

The lighted locations on the panel, which will indicate possible criminal activity, can only be turned off from headquarters.

Although persons involved with the project expect pranksters to take the phones off the hook, they hope these people will not continue to do so since the network is developed and used for emergencies.

Designed to be used in any emergency, the telephone has no dialing apparatus and can be activated by removing the receiver from its hook.

Wayne State University has a similar emergency telephone network, which MSU officials studied. MSU and WSU are the only colleges with such a network in Michigan, according to those involved with the project.

Campus departments and student groups worked with the ASMSU Committee on Public Safety, which presented the proposal Winter term 1978 to the Board of Trustees after gathering information throughout 1977.

But an emergency phone system is not new to the University. All campus telephones in parking lots, ramps and lobbies are hooked to a 1-2-3 dialing system.

All parties involved with the new system agree, however, the new telephone network will be an effective way to aid victims in emergency situations.

24th Owen Receives our support for his issue stances

Owen Sederburg

The 24th District state Senate race is one of the closer races in this election. On issue by issue we find ourselves basically in agreement with the stands taken by Democrat Larry Owen, yet we have some reservations with his candidacy. Nevertheless, we support Larry Owen for State Senate over his Republican opponent, William Sederburg.

On the issue of Medicaid abortions, Owen contends abortions should not be a privilege only for women who can afford to pay. We strongly agree. Sederburg argues that it is more important to increase birth control availability, with which we also agree, but he fails to see the need for Medicaid abortions.

On taxes, Owen has seen through all three tax proposals and refuses to support any of them. Sederburg opposes two of the proposals, Tisch and the voucher, but throws his full support to the Headlee amendment. He says it is more reasonable than tax revolt, which it is, but it is not in the best interest of the people of this state.

Neither candidate supports the proposal to raise the drinking age to 21, but both are satisfied with the move to raise the age to 19.

On the crime proposals, Owen favors good time parole, which Proposal B would prevent, but doesn't think repeat offenders should be granted bail, which is in agreement with Proposal K. Sederburg supports both proposals; we oppose both.

Owen generally takes what we consider the proper stand on most issues, especially the important one. But our reservations are based upon Owen's inexperience. Granted, Sederburg's experiences are just as insufficient as Owen's — for a state Senator.

Both have what we consider to be flaws in their past histories. Sederburg is a major proponent of ethics codes. He is campaigning on instituting one in the Senate and tried and failed to get one for the Ingham County Board of Commissioners. Interestingly enough though, Sederburg had one of the poorest attendance records of any county board member.

Owen has an admirable history on the East Lansing City Council and was instrumental in changing the attitude of the city from anti-student to pro-student. He can probably be counted on to carry that attitude to the state Senate. However, Owen helped draft the state's no-fault insurance laws, which we consider to be a boon to insurance companies at the expense of old-model car drivers — low-income people.

Despite our reservations, we are convinced that, of the two, Owen would be a more effective senator.

58th Stabenow Despite conservatism is the best qualified

Stabenow Dewey

In the race for the 58th District State House seat, we support Democrat Debbie Stabenow over Republican Bill Dewey, although not without reservations.

The only issue we are in complete agreement with Stabenow is her stance on Medicaid abortions. She correctly assesses that the issue is one of discrimination. Dewey said he would turn to the district to see how to stand, but that he is personally opposed to abortion.

On the rest of the issues, Stabenow and Dewey are quite similar, and also both quite different than how we feel. Both support the Headlee amendment, which we find to be a wrong approach. And both support the two hard-line crime proposals, which we oppose.

Both oppose the move to raise the drinking age to 21, as do we. And both think the Lobby Bill should have been stronger than it was, although both said they would have probably voted for the bill.

We are extremely concerned with Stabenow's support of the Headlee amendment, as we were when we supported her in August's primary election, but her experience with the Ingham County Board of Commissioners as its chairperson makes her a more qualified candidate for the state House.

Abortion, then, is about the only issue the candidates differ on, which says something about Stabenow's latent conservatism. But we are very pleased with the compassion she has shown for county juveniles and senior citizens.

59th Jondahl Takes good positions on crime proposals

Jondahl Pocock

In the 59th District House race we support the Democratic incumbent, Lynn Jondahl. Jondahl differs from his Republican opponent, James Pocock, in the tax issue.

Pocock opposes the Tisch (Proposal J) and Voucher (Proposal H) amendments but supports the Headlee amendment (Proposal E). Jondahl opposes all three, saying Proposal E would put great demands on the state budget. Proposal J would cause a reconstruction of local and state finance systems, according to Jondahl.

Both Jondahl and Pocock support Medicaid abortion funding, citing the double standard created when the poor cannot afford abortions.

The crime issue shows a great difference between the candidates. Pocock supports Proposal B, saying it's time for the state to be tougher on criminals. He also supports Proposal K, believing we should not emphasize the rights of criminals at the expense of the rights of victims and society.

Jondahl opposes both ballot proposals dealing with the criminal justice system. Denial of bail (Proposal B), says Jondahl, is contrary to the principle of innocence until proven guilty. He believes mandatory penalties (Proposal K) might restrict corrections authorities' ability to control offenders.

The proposed hike in the legal drinking age is an area of concurrence between the candidates. Jondahl opposes raising the limit because he believes the move will not solve the problem of alcohol abuse. Pocock opposes the age hike, saying citizens can be asked to serve in the armed forces, so they deserve the right to vote and all the rights and privileges that go with it.

57th Hollister Should be re-elected to state House seat

Hollister Covert

In the race for the 57th District State House seat, we strongly support incumbent David Hollister. Hollister, a Democrat, supports Medicaid-funded abortions. As a representative, he voted against the $1 limit of funding.

Hollister's Republican opponent, Richard L. Covert, opposes both abortion and Medicaid funding. He would like to see the 1972 U.S. Supreme Court ruling which made abortions legal reversed.

In an area of student concern, Hollister opposes the attempt to raise the drinking age to 21. He believes education and advertising are the solutions to the alcohol-abuse problem. Covert favors raising the age to 21.

Covert also supports proposals B and K, supporting elimination of "good time" parole and allowing the courts to deny bail in some cases. Hollister opposes both proposals, saying passage would not reinforce an inmate's good behavior.

Hollister opposes the three tax proposals, saying the people who will really lose out are the seniors, the poor, and the unorganized.

Covert opposes the Tisch and Voucher plans, but supports the Headlee amendment, saying it will force the state to cut out waste.

VIEWPOINT: ASMSU VOTING Vote YES today

By DAN JONES

Take two minutes after class today and vote in the ASMSU Referendum. If you are in the College of Business, you can vote for a representative to the ASMSU Student Board. All undergraduates should vote on the constitutional amendment to raise each term's $2.50 refundable tax to $3. You can vote between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. in Bessey, Berkey, Wells, and Eppley Center.

The 50-cent tax increase will exclusively benefit the Programming Board, raising their share of the tax from 90 cents to $1.40. The remainder of your tax dollars is distributed as follows: 40 cents to Student Media Appropriations Board (SMAB) and $1.20 to the Student Board — 50 cents of which automatically goes to the Student Legal Services Program.

Last spring, a similar referendum asking for $1, as opposed to the 50 cents was voted down by 29 votes. It is unfortunate that Pop Entertainment (a major division of the Programming Board) had recently been struggling with a $20,000 deficit. Many students felt that the $1 tax increase would have been used to pay off the deficit. That was not true then, and it is not true today. Pop Entertainment has made a good start at paying off the deficit and should balance their books by March of the coming year — doing so with concert profits only.

What will the 50-cent increase provide? Copyright laws for all entertainment programming have been changed, such that there are many increases in the cost of bringing entertainers to campus. There are also the expected cost increases in all areas due to inflation. There will be enough additional revenue to provide you with two important benefits. The Programming Board will expand its activity departments and also expand the amount of programming within the current departments. Groups, such as Pop Entertainment, Mariah, Showcase Jazz, and The Company, will be able to offer more variety and more concerts. Other groups benefiting are: Video Waves, The Answer Place (TAP), College Bowl, Black Notes, Classic Films, Homecoming, Student Foundation, Ten Pound Fiddle, Great Issues and Ebony.

Another reason to consider a "YES" vote on this proposal — if Proposal D passes, many of you will be restricted from the entertainment that local bars provide. So, think ahead and guarantee yourselves an alternative just in case we lose the fight.

Those who doubt divestiture policy are guilty of hypocrisy

Students have begun voicing their opinions about the Board of Trustees decision to divest the University's investment portfolio of firms doing business in South Africa.

Some companies have threatened MSU with varying degrees of non-support, including cutting off placement and grant support. Many students have supported the corporations, saying that although MSU is right for opposing South Africa's apartheid, MSU is wrong to do anything about it.

One engineering student in a letter to the State News, asked "Does the board of Trustees truly believe that one tactless letter from a University which holds a mere fraction of its existing stock would sway corporate policy?" She goes on to point out how companies could terminate their support of MSU.

The companies are concerned, though, about MSU's stock holdings. They realize that if a major university like MSU goes through with its divestiture plan, many could soon follow. Knowing this, the companies have set out to block our move by threatening to terminate grants and placement interviews. A letter from a university does sway a corporation — their dissent is proof.

For the same reason, we can sway corporate policy to move out of South Africa. Like any single business in South Africa, one university has little power of its own. But collectively, all universities can effect a change in corporate policy. And collectively, all corporations can effect a change in South African policy.

The corporations defend their position by stating they follow the "Sullivan Principles," which are intended to guarantee fair treatment of blacks in South Africa. What they fail to mention is that those principles cannot be carried out to their fullest because they would establish racial equality, a principle outlawed by the South African government. It is extremely easy for a company to support what is presently an impossibility. The corporations have made gains considered significant in terms of the South African culture. However, they have reached the end of the line under current law.

A psychology student wrote to the State News, also claiming to oppose apartheid but also opposing the divestiture plan on "constitutional" grounds. "The constitution of the United States also states that companies can invest where ever they want to," he says. The constitution contains no such guarantee.

Groups of students and faculty have gone whispering to the trustees, asking them to reconsider their position because otherwise MSU might lose corporate grants and the companies may not hire our grads.

The students have such doubts about their abilities that they feel they must brown-nose to get a job. Only by having a polite University, they feel, can they be guaranteed the companies will come to their doorsteps and invite them into employment.

I am a business student. Like many who support the corporate view, I have also studied business. I know where they're coming from. I see, in business, only a peripheral concern for humanity. In converting business from an art to a science, we have devised a system of expressing all factors in decision-making in terms of a common denominator. That common denominator is always based on cost reduction or profit maximization — money. The only time most businesses decide to recognize the environment or people is when the government requires it. Even then, they spend a good deal of time searching for loopholes.

I can't stand back and watch injustice being dealt by money-hungry corporations. Many students speak of a social conscience like it is a social disease. Many others are hypocrites, admitting the South African system of apartheid is wrong, yet refusing to support real opposition to those ways.

I have not foreclosed the possibility of working in business. I have, however, decided not to work for companies that have no conception of right or wrong. I am confident I will find employment as an individual, and that my views toward morality will facilitate, rather than block, my employment with the "right" company. This way I will not feel alienated or guilty about what I do and who I do it for.

Mayor of E.L. upset by allegations

By GEORGE L. GRIFFITHS

A large ad appeared in the State News edition of Oct. 26 from the Committee for Balanced Development. I found this ad to be most distressing. The headline of the ad suggests some form of collusion between Dayton Hudson and East Lansing city government which does not exist. The city manager and his staff prepared a report which was a financial analysis of the impact on city finances of the proposed mall if it should be built. The release of this analysis was in such a manner that raised suspicions from CBD that have no basis.

This report was prepared at my request because I wanted the citizens of East Lansing to have information from an impartial third party on economic factors of city budget effects from the possible mall construction.

- It was not prepared at the request of the mall developers.
- It was not done for the purpose of supporting the mall developers.
- It was not done "based on information supplied solely by the developer."

If the city manager's report should turn out to be inaccurate, or if its contents can be shown to be in error by rational argument, then it would be appropriate to question the quality of the city's staff work. However, the ad from CBD questions our integrity. I regret that CBD has published this ad which from my personal knowledge contains assumptions and statements which are not true.

I personally oppose the development of the mall. I gave all of my reasons for opposing it when I cast my negative vote. I was on the minority side.

I favored the referendum. I am quite willing to take a question to a public vote when enough people request that they have an opportunity to vote. The quality of the decision is enhanced by the quality and quantity of information made public.

I am not aware of everything that has been published on the subject by both sides of the dispute, but I had hoped to add to that quantity of information for an informed electorate. I am sorry that CBD believed that they had to react to that information in such a manner as they did.

Lawrence as an Arabian

A Prince of Our Disorder: The Life of T.E. Lawrence
By John E. Mack
Little, Brown and Company

Reviewed by GIL CHESBRO
Several years ago, during a lively discussion of the Middle East, I mentioned the name Lawrence of Arabia. I was thereupon asked to explain what relation a Hollywood myth had to the very real politics of the Mideast. I found it took a great deal of explaining, especially to one incredulous bystander who insisted that Lawrence never existed.

Thomas Edward Lawrence indeed existed. He was the second of five illegitimate sons born to Thomas Chapman and Sarah Junner. Chapman had abandoned his family manor in Ireland, four daughters, and a shrewish wife, to run off with Junner, his children's governess. In 1896, when Lawrence was eight years old, Chapman moved his second family to Oxford. By that time they had adopted the surname Lawrence for the sake of decorum. (Chapman never married his governess; his wife would not grant a divorce.)

As a schoolboy, Lawrence kept to himself and read voraciously. After graduating from the City of Oxford High School, he entered Jesus College, Oxford, in 1907. Two years later he journeyed to Palestine to gather material for a thesis. While there he learned Arabic and studied the native culture.

With the outbreak of WWI, Lawrence was commissioned as a second lieutenant and sent to Cairo. There he was charged with the task of setting up an intelligence department. At that time most of the Mideast was under Turkish control. When Lawrence arrived, an Arab revolt against the Turks had already begun. The British sought to improve their position in the Middle East against the Turks, who had aligned themselves with Germany. The Arabs sought independence.

Lawrence was sent into the Sinai to organize Arab guerrillas. Under Lawrence's tutelage the Arabs first succeeded in taking Aqaba, a Turkish stronghold, and then set about disrupting Turkish troop movements. During this time with them, Lawrence won the Arab's respect by his bravery, endurance, and his willingness to adopt their dress and customs.

On Oct. 1, 1918, Lawrence and the Arabs rode triumphantly into Damascus; the war in the Mideast was over.

Shortly thereafter, the Allies carved up the Mideast for themselves. The French secured a mandate over Syria and Lebanon; the British, a mandate over Palestine and Transjordan.

Lawrence felt that the Allies had betrayed the Arabs, and that he had unwittingly played a key role in that betrayal. Full of anger and guilt, he returned to England. But throughout England and America he was proclaimed a hero. Lowell Thomas, a young reporter who had followed the Arab campaign, began a series of lectures about Lawrence's adventures in Arabia. American and British audiences, weary of the ghastly trench warfare in Europe, turned to the 'glamorous' war in the desert. The story of "Lawrence of Arabia" soon attained mythic proportions.

For the rest of his life Lawrence tried to escape from his own legend — a legend he both courted and shunned. He wrote two books about his life, The Mint and the epic Seven Pillars of Wisdom. Shortly after the private publication of Seven Pillars, he changed his name to Shaw and surreptitiously enlisted in the RAF as a private. On May 13, 1935, he lost control of his motorcycle and crashed into a tree. He died six days later.

A Prince of Our Disorder is an excellent biography. In 1976, the year of its publication, it won the Pulitzer Prize for biography. It has now established itself as the definitive biography of Lawrence. Dr. Mack, a professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, reveals much about the motives that drove Lawrence through out his life.

Lawrence's personality is fascinating and very complex. For example, his attitude toward women and sexuality was, at best, unusual. He professed and even defended his ignorance of sex. "For myself," he once wrote to a friend, "I haven't tried it, and hope not to."

To date, there have been over 10 biographies of Lawrence; there will probably be several more. His appeal to the imagination is not hard to explain. He entered the desert unknown and emerged a hero. Such is the stuff that myths are made of.

Now that Halloween is over with, kids, it's suddenly cool to wear masks, right? Especially if they're really weird and stupid! Get drunk and make an idiot outta yourself, yuk yuk yuk! — Hmmm.

Ya got $2.95 to blow? For that much you can grab one of Rick Meyerowitz's two brand new books of Nose Masks!

What is a Nose Mask? It's a mask ya wear on yer nose, stupid, what did ya think? The subtitle of the books call them "Nasal Disguises," but you'll never disguise your identity with one of these things. They don't even cover you whole face! — Just the couple inches of space around your nose, if you have one, and let's hope you do.

If you've been hanging around the local commercial bookstores lately you've probably seen these tomes already. If so, you've probably thought, as the reporter once did, that these Nose Masks were probably the stupidest thing any publishing company has ever had the guts to put a price tag on. And that may well be true. But Nose Masks are the type of thing that until you actually put one on or see someone put one on or see someone you know wearing one, there's no way you can appreciate their real value (or lack thereof).

The reporter, it should be established, got his grubby paws on these books for free (review-copy) and promptly started wearing the masks in various test situations. Results: the people he lived with laughed and laughed, as did the folks at work, and he also got some Why couldn't they have marketed these in groups of like 10 or 12 at far lower prices? Or maybe sell them with bubble gum? Kids would really go for these, but now many kids who know got $2.95 to spend on anything.

Good questions, eh?

NEW JAZZ LP'S GETTING BIG PUSH

The benefit of the corporate dollar

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer
Jazz lives. And apparently quite well.

When major companies like CBS pick up jazz artists from relatively obscure jazz labels and put a massive promotional push behind them, something's got to be happening. In this case, something is: money. Whether it's a direct result of the commercial success of fusion jazz or a simple enlightening on behalf of American record buyers, the facts are simple — jazz, fusion and non-fusion, is selling better than it ever has before.

The end result is that artists like Dexter Gordon and Woody Shaw are finally selling records at a rate that for once is commensurate with their respective talent. And while musicians like George Benson or Chick Corea still overpower them by a large margin sales-wise, it's at least nice to know that Shaw, Gordon and others are getting the benefit of CBS's huge promotional machine.

Checking out some of these artists' new releases, it's obvious that the companies aren't stuck promoting half-assed efforts by the musicians in question:

DEXTER GORDON QUARTET — MANHATTAN SYMPHONIE (Columbia JC 35608): Gordon's return to the U.S. has certainly been well-documented in the press; thankfully it's also being well-documented by several recordings like this one. Heard here with a superb back-up group consisting of pianist George Cables, drummer Eddie Gladden and bassist Rufus Reid, Gordon has put together a set of smooth numbers that sound best played late at night, during relaxing moments, which is always a good sign. Interestingly, there's a new version of Donald Byrd's "Tanya" from Gordon's One Flight Up LP on Blue Note, and also a version of Coltrane's "Moment's Notice" from his classic Blue Trane LP.

Cables really seems to be coming into his own these days, and he especially shines here, particularly in his comping behind Gordon. The quartet is a tight one — it's been together as a unit for almost two years now — and the LP's ultimate highlight is the no-frills, just-playing approach that sets this album apart from Gordon's two other CBS efforts. Highly recommended.

WOODY SHAW — STEPPING STONES/LIVE AT THE VILLAGE VANGUARD (Columbia JC 35560): The similarities between trumpeter Shaw and Dexter Gordon are numerous, at least in terms of their CBS associations. Shaw's band was behind Gordon on his Homecoming LP. Shaw himself was signed to the company at the same time Gordon was, and both Shaw and Gordon haven't commercialized their music in the slightest since joining the big leagues. Shaw's quintet is consistently excellent throughout this live recording. Consisting of saxophonist Carter Jefferson, pianist Onaje Allan Gumbs, bassist Clint Houston and drummer Victor Lewis, the group plays with the same almost-telepathic tightness that characterized Miles Davis' mid-60s quintet. Ironically, the LP's liner notes draw the same comparison: whether such a comparison is valid is something that time alone will decide, no doubt. But with support like this LP and Shaw's previous Rosewood in evidence, there doesn't seem to be much room for doubt.

HANK JONES/ROD CARTER/TONY WILLIAMS — THE GREAT JAZZ TRIO AT THE VILLAGE VANGUARD (Inner City JC 6013): Well, here it is, the first fruit of Inner City's East Wind distribution deal, and as has been par for the course for East Wind, the LP is beautifully recorded and is uniformly excellent. Pianist Jones, brother of Thad and Elvin, is one of those figures who went tragically under-recorded as a soloist during the '60s; now, 10 years later, he appears to be making up for it. Always the elegant player, Jones couldn't ask for a better rhythm section — bassist Rod Carter and Drummer Tony Williams are about the best there are — and the selections, including Charlie Parker's "Moose the Mooche" and Coltrane's "Naima", are intelligently chosen and even more intelligently performed. Offhand I'd say this is the best showcase for Jones I've heard in some time. If American enthusiasm for the pianist matches that already existing in Japan, perhaps East Wind Inner City can give us a little more of what they've already got in the can by Jones. Thankfully, the liner notes point out that this is the first set of two intended volumes, which is great news by any standard.

NEIL LARSEN — JUNGLE FEVER (Horizon SP 733): Here's Larsen, the great white hope, on the newly revamped Horizon label. Still affiliated with A&M Records, the label has lost with producer John Snyder its major artists, and now is concentrating on establishing or re-establishing a few new ones, including Larsen, Mark Almond and Dr. John. Larsen's greatest claim to fame is his appearance on the new Dan Fogelberg/Tim Weisberg collaboration; thus it's logical that fans of that LP will enjoy this one, though it's totally instrumental. Larsen's got a typical I.A. crew with him, including Michael Brecker, Willie Weeks, Andy Newman and Buzzy Feiten. While some of Jungle Fever borders on schlock, it's at least consistently tasteful and, best of all, non-funky. Larsen's version of Gato Barbieri's "Last Tango in Paris" seems very well suited for massive air play, and with some promotional skill and a little bit of luck, the LP stands an excellent chance of becoming a huge commercial success. Good luck, Horizon.

BILL HOLDSHIP

'Yes' on student tax increase

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column originally appeared in the June 2, 1978 State News. Since the ASMSU referendum vote will be repeated today, the column is being reprinted with the appropriate updating.

It almost seems pointless to harp on an issue that can't be resolved until next September. Still, something which will drastically affect next year's students happened at MSU last week: a proposed 50 cents per term ASMSU student tax increase was defeated in a campus wide referendum. Now, granted, the proposed increase did have those nasty ASMSU initials in front of it, but the tax was entirely intended for the financially burdened Programming Board.

The Programming Board funds 18 different student-controlled organizations. Some of these are Pop Entertainment, Mariah, Showcase Jazz, Ten Pound Fiddle, Classic Film Series, ASMSU Travel, Great Issues, Video Workshop, Black Notes, Homecoming Committee, The Company, TAP (The Answer Place) and Student Union Programming. In this last year alone, PB has helped make possible Jackson Browne, Rufus, Steve Goodman, Anthony Braxton, discount trips to Hawaii, Women's Week, Felicia Langer, classic motion pictures, Sweet Bird of Youth, and the Union closed circuit TV specials.

According to Jim Peterson, chairperson of the PB's budgeting committee, the tax defeat means that all organization budget requests for next year will have to be cut by 80 percent. Almost every group will receive a considerable amount less than what they received this year.

Peterson said that no organization will be eliminated due to lack of funds, but other spokespersons tended to disagree. (None have to date.) Regardless, there's no question that many events will have to be eliminated. When one considers the PB's deficit compounded by inflation and the new ASCAP BMI copyright laws, one can see the serious future problems — fewer concerts, public speakers, films, etc.

The defeat may have resulted from the recently published Pop Entertainment deficit, but Peterson stressed that the tax was not needed primarily for Pop Entertainment.

"Pop and Ebony caught us with a hell of a deficit this year," he said. "Mariah, Showcase and the others went under — but this didn't affect the groups for next year. All the remaining money in other group accounts will help cover for it."

Besides, until now, Pop Entertainment has been running with only minimal allocations for PB. It survived on reserve funds from the old student board (which once funded the group) in addition to profits generated by the organization's mainstream concerts. (With the Springsteen, Denver, Hall & Oates, and Moll concerts, the group seems to be off to an excellent start this year.) Unfortunately, it is the smaller alternative music groups like Mariah and Showcase Jazz — groups that have always tried to only break even — which will eventually suffer. This already seems evident when comparing next year's arts budget to last year's.

Student apathy may be involved as less than 500 undergraduates voted on the referendum. This is only a little more than 1 percent of the student population. What makes matters worse is the tax failed by only 29 votes.

I suggest that people reconsider, and strive for a new referendum this fall. This is what pretty much decides our entertainment and pop culture on campus, and it's only 50 cents. Hell, it probably won't be long before that's equivalent to a piece of bubblegum.

'Diff'rent Strokes' to replace Namath series

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first series to bear the Fred Silverman stamp debuts on NBC this week and it could go either way — a big hit or a terminal case of the cutes.

The show is Diff'rent Strokes, replacing Joe Namath's Waverly Wonders starting Nov. 3, 8-8:30 p.m., Eastern time. Silverman has taken a pair of pros — Conrad Bain (Arthur on Mauel) and Charlotte Rae, a wonderful comedian — and made them second bananas to a couple of cute black kids.

Bain plays a millionaire who lives in a New York City penthouse decorated in middle period bordello. He is adopting the Harlem street-wise orphaned children of his late housekeeper, much to the dismay of his present housekeeper, Miss Rae.

What has she got against boys? "They bite."

Todd Bridges as 12-year-old Willis and Gary Coleman as 8-year-old Arnold arrive and you realize everything is window dressing for little Arnold — in real life 10 years old and tiny for his age because of the growth dampening effects of kidney transplant.

He is devastatingly adorable and when he's on-screen, it's all a setup for Arnold. Whether Arnold can charm the audience away from Wonder Woman on CBS and Donny and Marie on ABC remains to be seen.

The writings, at least on the opening show, offers some good lines, including reverse racism (Willis to Arnold: "No wonder they can't play basketball").

A comment with some depth about poverty and television comes when Arnold surveys the room that has been lavishly decorated for him and his brother and says, "This is better than anything I ever saw on The Brady Bunch."

Arnold has the charm of childish honesty. When Willis insists they go back where they belong and talks about missing Harlem, his little brother says, "Good, and I want to miss Harlem the rest of my natural life."

'Arts Lansing Live' to present local talent

By ROSANNE SINGER
State News Staff Writer

Local television audiences can now get a behind the scenes glimpse of area artists, actors, dancers and musicians when Arts Lansing Live premieres tonight at 8:30. It will appear on Cable Channel 11 in East Lansing and Channel 36 in Lansing and Delta, Delhi and Lansing townships.

This monthly half-hour program, coordinated by Claire Crandell, is about and by local talent. The pilot show will feature in-studio presentations by the Arts Encounter Theater Co. and an interview with their new director, David Stern; two studio numbers performed by the Ballet Folklorico Lopez; guitar music by Larry Poller; a profile of artist Irene Jungwirth; and an interview with Jesse Gonzalez, who was involved in the recent Raza Arts Festival.

Continental Cablevision in Lansing is making studio space and equipment available for the program and a local media group, Synchronic Media, is doing the direction and technical work. Local wood craftsman John Blunt is loaning some of his furniture for the set and artist Doug Deland is loaning sculpture and paintings. Pat Sammons, MSU graduate student in communications, will host the show.

Crandell said the program does not consist of dry interviews but is entertaining and informal. There is much artistic freedom she said, adding, "We are having an exciting time."

Crandell said when the show was announced to local arts groups during the summer the response was good.

"We hope to get video vignettes on WKAR and WJIM," she said.

Crandell said she would like to put tapes of the shows into a video bank that would be available for leasing by school groups.

Because of funding problems Arts Lansing Live will only appear monthly. However, Crandell said they have written for grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Michigan Council for the Arts.

Hans finally achieves his dream; scores first touchdown at home

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

When Mike Hans scored MSU's first touchdown in last Saturday's 55-2 win over Wisconsin, it was a dream come true for him. But that dream turned into a nightmare when a clipping call nullified his catch and run.

Finally, though, Hans did get a touchdown, his first ever in Spartan Stadium in three seasons with MSU, on a 53 yard pass from former high school teammate Eddie Smith in the fourth quarter.

"I always wanted to score a touchdown with a lot of people watching," Hans said. "The touchdown (against Southern California for his only other touchdown as a Spartan earlier this season) didn't mean as much as it did here. The last four years I've dreamed of scoring a touchdown in Spartan Stadium."

Both Hans and Smith graduated in 1974 from Catholic Central High School in Pittsburgh, Pa., but it wasn't until the 1976 season that the two got to play together as Spartans. Hans played his freshman season at Grand Rapids Junior College and came to MSU the next season but had to sit out for a year.

Smith played his freshman year but was red-shirted his second. The two are now preparing to play their last four games together at MSU.

"We've lived together for four years," Hans said. "I really know him on the field, I know who he's going to do because I've been around him so long."

The problem, though, is that Hans and Smith don't play together that often. Hans has never started a game at MSU at his regular fullback position. This year he plays behind Lonnie Middleton and Andy Schramm.

"We're pretty close friends," Hans said. "I room with Andy on the road and I'm good friends with Lonnie. We help each other out."

"In practice, I run with the first string every third play. I don't consider myself third string. The others do things better than I do but then I do certain things well."

Hans only ran the ball twice against the Badgers for 11 yards, but he also caught two passes for 56 yards and the touchdown. Where he really shined Saturday, and where he has always played well at MSU, is on the specialty teams.

"It doesn't seem that rough to me (playing on the specialty teams)," Hans said. "I've really enjoyed it, I've done it for three years. Hitting someone inside the 20 yard line on a kickoff is what makes me happy."

"It's almost as exciting as scoring a touchdown."

The specialty teams are something that coach Darryl Rogers doesn't take lightly. He always sets aside time in practice for these teams.

"We work a lot during the summer," Hans said. "Before practice we worked 10 minutes, during 10 minutes, and after we worked 10 minutes. During the fall, we always practice once during practice."

Hans said he was surprised when he came to MSU that hardly anyone, especially the media, took an interest in the specialty teams.

"It's something funny here," he said. "I'm from Pittsburgh and they really build up the specialty teams there. When I was at home, I always knew who the big specialty man was at Pittsburgh or Penn State."

Looking back on his career at MSU, Hans said he would like to have played more. "But everyone likes to play more" and he would have liked to play in a bowl game. There is only one ambition he has left at MSU, and that is to play on a Big Ten Championship team.

"It makes practicing easier (playing on a Big Ten contender)," Hans said. "It gives you something to play for, to strive for. It makes every day want you to get closer and closer and work together to win the Big Ten."

Hans said he has had fun playing for MSU, and with only four games left, he is starting to realize that like all good things, his football career is coming to an end.

"I know I'll miss it," Hans said. "Sometimes I get tired of practicing but when it's over I know I'll miss it — everyone does."

Free Press & Leach: promotion to the max

The Michigan sports media — most notably those in Detroit — were all up in arms a couple years back when U-M football coach Bo Schembechler had the audacity to suggest that sports writers should be fans of the teams they cover.

It really shouldn't have bothered these people so much... many of them already were on the Wolverines' bandwagon. The situation hasn't changed.

A case in point is the "relationship" between the Detroit Free Press and its "media darling," Rick Leach.

First it was columnist Joe Falls, before he moved to the Detroit News. He wrote a column on how to promote Leach for the Heisman Trophy. He said Leach could "own the Heisman" with a little help from Bo. He went on to say that the human interest aspects of Leach should be promoted... and then wrote a column about one of Leach's relatives.

Next we have the columns of George Puskas, the Free Press' main columnist since Falls' departure.

Here's an excerpt from his column after MSU defeated U-M: "Leach's passing ability always has been suspect, but what he delivered against the Spartans was probably ruin to his own chances for the Heisman Trophy."

And, in a complete about-face, here's an excerpt from his Sunday column after U-M's win over Minnesota: "Stop the election. Shut off the balloting and close the polls... we must reconsider the candidacy of Rick Leach in the campaign for the grail of college football known as the Heisman Trophy... So toss out that Michigan State horror of a couple weeks ago..."

I mean, what the heck. If we're going to toss out Leach's worst game of the season, then why not toss out the Minnesota game — his best outing. It's only fair.

I guess what bothers me is that they are promoting a player for the Heisman Trophy who is only the second- or possibly third-best player in his conference at this position. Eddie Smith and probably Mark Herrmann are superior. It's debatable, but I think it's true.

The guy is a winner (if you don't include bowl games). You've got to give him that. He's a leader, too.

But he is certainly no Heisman Trophy winner. He shouldn't even be a candidate. They're talking about how Saturday may have been his best game. He had 143 yards passing and 62 rushing. Just over 200 yards total offense.

Well, there's more to him than just stats. But, you've got to admit, stats don't hurt your chances for the Heisman. The fact remains, though, nobody wins the Heisman just on the field... it's won through the media.

Tuesday morning, the Free Press was at it again. This feature article talked about how Leach has a much stronger voice than you would expect from someone with "boyish good looks."

Tom Henderson, the writer of the article, said that during the Notre Dame game, New York and Chicago writers delighted when Leach did something wrong. He said Leach had a right to (continued on page 9)

Spartans 18th in AP poll

MSU has been ranked 18th in the nation in this week's Associated Press national rankings released Tuesday.

The last time the Spartans cracked the Top 20 in either the AP or UPI poll was in 1974. The Spartans finished 12th in AP and 18th in UPI.

Other Big Ten teams rated are: Michigan, ninth, and Purdue, 14th. Ohio State is not in the Top 20.

Stickers fall to U-M; will host Albion

By CHERYL FISH
State News Sports Writer

For the first time in five years, the MSU field hockey team lost to Michigan on Monday, by a score of 2-1, for their second loss of the season.

U-M scored the first two goals, and Nancy Lyons put one in for the Spartans, but they still came up short. The second half was a scoreless defensive battle.

"We were not ready for this game," coach Sam Kajornsin said. Sue Campbell, the left fullback, could not play because of an eye injury that has kept her out of play since the Purdue game. Barbara Shannon had an abscessed stomach and did not play in the contest.

"The team's defense missed them," Kajornsin said. He also said that the players had their mind on the upcoming state championship instead of the U-M game. MSU is seeded number two in the tournament.

Kajornsin credits the U-M team for a good game. "They played hard," he said. "They knew we were a tough team and really worked hard to beat us. We took it for granted that we would win," he added.

However, the team realizes that every game must be taken seriously. "This is a lesson to them not to be careless."

He is stressing defensive play this week in practice.

Campbell and Shannon will be ready to play in today's game against Albion at 3 p.m. on Old College Field.

"Albion is good for a small team," Kajornsin said. "We will be ready for them, though."

He realizes that the team cannot be careless. "The ball is small, and can roll either way, so we must be prepared."

Despite the loss which makes their record 8-2-3, the Spartans are very optimistic about the SMAIAW championships. They will face either Northern Michigan or Alma College at 3:15 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 4 on Western Michigan's Kanley Field.

Skill and style will be present in karate meet

By CHERYL FISH
State News Sports Writer

A great variety of skills and styles will be demonstrated at MSU in one of the largest Midwestern karate tournaments at noon Sunday, Nov. 5, in the sports arena of the Men's IM.

The tournament is one of two annually sponsored by the MSU Karate Club, drawing competitors from all over the Great Lakes Region.

It is an open tournament, which means anyone can compete. "We allow all styles of karate," said MSU Karate Club instructor Bruce Henderson. "We have a reputation for fairness in fighting and ours is known for its competitive nature."

The tournament is broken down into different ranks and divisions. The divisions go by skills, which are categorized according to belt color — white, green, brown and black. The higher ranks are allowed more contact in their sparring. In addition, the competitors will be classified by age, sex, and weight. Besides the open division, there will be a pee wee, junior and senior class. Women may enter in the open division or participate in the all women's division.

The first form to be demonstrated will be kata, which is similar to gymnastic routines.

A preset series of offensive and defensive moves, they are done against an imaginary opponent.

A weapons competition will be held, using sais (short swords) and bos (a staff), again against an imaginary opponent.

Thirty or 40 members of the MSU Karate Club will be participating, emphasizing their Korean style of karate. "Our style has more kicks than punches — it is not tradition-bound," Henderson said. "It's full of action."

Actually, karate has more action than boxing, and the tournament should appeal to those who like to watch boxing. Dan Wardlow, Jr., instructor of the MSU Karate Club, said "We go for the points, which are theoretical killing blows."

It also provides an outlet for aggression. "You learn how to control your aggression and be comfortable with it," Wardlow said. "Karate is non-destructive and you learn to channel aggression to control your mind."

Debbie Ravens, an MSU sophomore, is called "one of the best women fighters in the Midwest" by both Henderson and Wardlow. She will be participating in both the open and women's divisions.

Ravens, who has only been practicing karate for a year and a half, likes to fight with men because "they fight hard." However, she often finds men who resent her and try to prove they can beat her, while others don't want to go as hard on her. "I don't think about it," Ravens said. "I just fight. I'm confident that I can handle myself."

Henderson said most clubs don't fight women as hard as men, but "we do, and no one minds."

The turnout for the tournament was high with 160 entrants last year, and is expected to surpass that this year. The finals of each division will be beginning at approximately 5 p.m., and that is a good time for spectators to come watch if they want to see some excellent sparring techniques.

Admission is $1 for students and $3 for non students.

The tournament is a fine opportunity for both the participants and the spectators to get into something new. Entrant Rick DeBroux is excited about the open tournament because, "you don't know who you're facing, or what he'll do next. It will be a good experience."

Wardlow said "anybody who likes combat sports would find it interesting and exciting to watch."

HOPE TO REBOUND AFTER AKRON LOSS

MSU booters travel to Michigan

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

After losing its first of four consecutive road games at Akron, 2-0, Saturday, MSU's soccer team will try to get back on the winning track tonight at 8 p.m. at the University of Michigan.

"Although we lost to Akron, the game was a moral victory for us since the 2-0 margin was better than the past when they outscored us by a combined score of 15-1," coach Joe Baum said. "Now I think the team is still in good spirits in ending the season well."

Baum feels the contest against the Wolverines will be crucial because a Spartan loss will put their 5-4-2 record back to the .500 mark and also because of the rivalry between the two schools.

"We don't want to fall back to .500 because we know we're a better team than that," Baum said. "We're also aware of the rivalry. We don't want Michigan to beat MSU in any sport."

As the two teams meet for the 19th time, Baum feels U-M will be keyed for the Spartans.

"They are always fired up for us," Baum said of the Wolverines, who lost to MSU last year, 4-3, in overtime. "Last year, they came to play with intensity. They present Michigan well. When we play them, it's always a good match regardless of the team's records."

Michigan is currently 8-4-2, but its schedule hasn't been as difficult as the Spartans.

"Their schedule is a lot like Central Michigan's (which MSU defeated 2-0 before the Akron game)," Baum said. "They have played a lot of weak teams."

"Oakland beat them 2-0, and Oakland's coach Wayne Pirmann told me the Wolverines are much improved than the past few years," Baum added.

MSU will also play only its third game of the season on synthetic turf. The Spartans didn't fare too well in their previous two games on the synthetic surface this year. They tied Wisconsin 2-2 and lost to Ohio State 5-2 in taking last place in the Big Ten Classic.

"We've been practicing on the astro-turf in Spartan Stadium for the past two days," Baum said. "I'm more optimistic for this game than the Big Ten's because now we do have some experience on the astro turf. It will take the first 15 minutes for us to get the feel of it. After that, the astro turf should be a neutral factor."

Fullback Ohi Nwabara will be a questionable starter for tonight's contest after he hurt his knee late in the first half against Akron. If he doesn't start, Dave Harris will take his place. Dick Huff, who would normally take Nwabara's place, broke his shoulder and will be out for the rest of the season.

Playing the final four games of the season on the road is a disadvantage for the Spartans. But Baum feels the short distance for two of the final three road games does help.

"Michigan and Albion are only an hour drive away," Baum said. "So with these games, you hardly notice the trip. If we had four-hour drives for all four of our final road games, then it would be rough."

Free Press promotes Leach

complain and that the writers' "delight" was sick and biased.

Time out, now. The New York and Chicago writers can't be biased, but the Free Press can? Ok, I understand. The old double standard, right?

The article goes on to say that Leach could be every bit as good a passer as the drop back quarterbacks (a la Eddie Smith, Henderson writes), but Leach takes quite a beating running the option. Your shoulder gets sore and bruised, Leach was quoted as saying.

Does anyone have a violin?

What a crock. Hasn't Michigan had the "All-American" offensive line the past few years? Didn't they have the offensive line that you could build a pro franchise around? I'm sure there are plenty of quarterbacks around the country that have taken more of a beating in their careers than Leach has. In Will Perry, U-M has a very capable, talented gentleman as sports publicist. There's no need for the Free Press to try and take over his job. Because, in essence, that's what the paper is doing — a sports publicity job for the university.

In an unrelated matter, the U-M Marching Band has challenged the Spartan Marching Band to a football game in Ann Arbor. All we at the State News can say is be prepared.

Not to blow our own horn, but the State News defeated the Michigan Daily, U-M's paper, in a game several weeks ago, 18-13. The Daily staff members claimed that the score of the game would be announced at the MSU-Michigan game... but only if the Daily won.

And according to one of the Daily's political writers, the Daily Libels, as they call themselves, claim that the State News never showed up.

Engineering boosted by computer-aided design

By RANDY HALEY
State News Staff Writer

MSU's recent acquisition of a new computer for the Department of Engineering gives the University national respectability in the computer-aided design field, said the director of the new Case Center for Computer-Aided Design.

"It seems as though students are as excited about the computer as I am, Director James E. Bernard said.

The computer, acquired last June and located in 242 Engineering Bldg., will aid in designing bridges, cars, planes, houses and industrial plants.

Cussing is OK

CHICAGO (AP) — Swearing at a taxpayer is not grounds to fire a state employee, the Illinois Appellate Court says.

On Monday, the court upheld a Circuit Court ruling that the reasons Pearl K. Fox, 52, was dismissed were "trivial."

She was fired in December 1975 and her firing was upheld by the state Civil Service Commission but overturned by a circuit court judge, after she allegedly swore at officers of a vending company while trying to determine if they were operating illegally.

She said they swore at her first.

Violin maker enjoys fiddlin'

REESE (UPI) — Rudy Gottschall's motto of life might be "Those who can, play, and those who can't, build."

In his case, the retired barber's passions is violins and fiddles and the painstaking construction of the instruments that he loves but can barely play.

Gottschall, 76, was 18 when his German immigrant parents took him to see a concert violinist in Cleveland. He immediately craved a chance to learn the instrument.

"I was too old," he lamented during a break in his cluttered workshop in Michigan's Thumb region. "You have to start playing when you are a child."

So he decided the barber profession was his calling and spent the next four decades working in Saginaw shops. But his true avocation blossomed at nights, laboring over the construction of everything from $15 fiddles to $300 concert-quality violins.

"I caught the music bug when I started making them," he said. "I read a couple of books about it when I first started, but you don't learn anything from books. You have to do it yourself."

His craft, which involves repairing instruments for other violinists as well, taught him that the key to quality is the texture, composition and origin of the wood.

The most expensive Gottschall violins consist of hard, dry maple from eastern Europe for the backs and imported spruce for the front piece. Less expensive wood is used for bluegrass-style fiddles.

Gottschall said he can spend up to 200 hours on a fine violin, carefully hand-working the wood to various shapes and thicknesses to guarantee a perfect, rich tone. Fiddles, however, take only about 75 hours. He leaves the creation of bows to others, calling that "a different art."

"My theory has always been that you need to know the tone of every element of the violin before you can make it a good one that sounds whole," he said.

His thorough testing of finished instruments involves homemade sensing units and even playing a few tunes he picked up from gypsies, the group he envies most for their playing skill. "They play from their hearts, you know," he said. "Nobody can teach them to play better than they do."

Prime 400, is being used for instructional purposes by undergraduates and graduates taking elective courses.

Bernard pointed out that an important aspect of the computer is that students do not have to leave their computerized information in the Engineering Building.

"The unit also uses floppy discs as a means of storing computer information in addition to the older methods of discs and magnetic tape," he said.

"Floppy discs are made of a paper-like material that can be put in a purse or bookbag and be taken home," Bernard explained. "They only cost about $4 at the bookstore."

Bernard said the goal of the new engineering center is to expand the computer operations.

"Buying a computer isn't like buying a new car because with the computer you can constantly add new units, like a stereo," Bernard said.

"We plan to eventually tie our system into the main one at the Computer Center," he said. "We would also like to, someday, increase the number of graphics terminals, but that costs money."

Financial support for the new engineering center came from the estate of Albert H. Case, a 1902 MSU mining engineering graduate, and Sarah Case, for which the Case residence hall is named.

The computer, a $175,000

The Prime 400 computer was bought in June through funds from the Albert Case foundation. It is used to design cars, bridges, planes and tractors. The computer is located in the computer center.

Council adds to proposal

By KY OWEN
State News Staff Writer

The option of a closed hearing and a clause calling for faculty grievances to be defined were added to the proposed faculty grievance procedure at Tuesday's Faculty Council meeting.

The council continued Tuesday to work on approving the proposed document, which is to replace the Interim Faculty Grievance Procedure adopted in 1972.

Since last February the council has been working on amending the document before approving it and sending it to Provost Clarence L. Winder.

The council approved an amendment which allows either party involved in a grievance to call for a closed hearing, instead of just giving the hearing board the power to close proceedings.

Jack Stieber, professor of labor and industrial relations, introduced the motion because

"a grievance procedure is different from the court system. It's not a forum for public relations and propaganda."

The council also approved an amendment which calls for the parties in a grievance and the hearing board to develop a "clear statement of the issues to be resolved."

C. Patric "Lash" Larowe, professor of economics and Faculty Grievance Official, said in many cases the parties do not agree on what the grievance is and should be "committed" to what is being grieved.

A motion was also considered which would require the University to offer legal counsel to either both parties or neither party.

Zolton Ferencey, professor of criminal justice, said he does not think legal counsel is needed. "I don't see a need for legal counsel," he said. "Many able people can help and this doesn't have to be a lawyer."

Winder said he is "concerned about a provision suggesting legal counsel."

"The fundamental purpose of a faculty grievance procedure is to settle matters among academic officials," Winder said.

The council is working on the fifth of seven sections in the procedure and will consider amendments from any section once the final section is approved.

FBI could face Esmail charges

By JOANNE LANE and
MARCIA BRADFORD
State News Staff Writer

Sami Esmail said he will soon decide whether to bring charges against the FBI for their alleged role in his arrest at an Israeli airport.

Esmail, an MSU graduate student, was recently paroled from an Israeli prison after serving 10 months of his 15 month sentence. He was arrested in December while in Israel to visit his dying father.

He told a press conference Tuesday that he believes the FBI informed Israeli officials of his arrival in the country.

"I believe that the FBI transmits information about the activities of American citizens to foreign intelligence agencies," Esmail said, "which in turn utilize this information to prosecute Americans."

He also added that while in prison he was shown files of other American students who the FBI said had participated in rallies supporting the Palestinian cause.

Esmail denied he was ever a member of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. He explained that his trip to Libya in August 1976 was in no way connected with any military training.

When asked about his charges that he was tortured while in prison, Esmail said, "The Israeli officials said that I could not claim torture since I had no visible signs of physical abuse. However, the psychological and mental anguish I suffered was not noted when Israeli officials spoke of my condition," he said.

"I often thought of committing suicide while in prison, since I thought I couldn't handle what they were putting me through" he added.

Since his deportation from Israel, Esmail has spoken out against the double standard of the Zionists.

"In the name of national security, the Israelis justify the torture of political prisoners, administrative detention, expropriation of land, collective punishment of civilians, forced evictions of populations and the use of cluster bombs," Esmail said.

"Yet," he said, "when people speak out against and resist Zionist oppression, they are labeled terrorists."

Esmail has also been offered and is considering many speaking invitations around the country about his arrest and subsequent imprisonment.

Esmail will speak at a 7:30 p.m. forum Thursday in 326 Natural Science Bldg.

Thump false alarm at Houdini seance

MARSHALL (UPI) — A faint thumping sound sent a chill of excitement through the eight persons who circled a chain draped milk can, calling out to Harry Houdini in a daylight Halloween seance.

Had the master escape artist returned from the dead after 52 years to grab a lox and bagel sandwich that had been placed in the can from which he used to escape?

Twice more the eight drew close to the milk can. Again they and the 50 onlookers at the American Museum of Magic heard the mysterious thump.

They opened the can. But, alas, Houdini's favorite snack remained untouched.

The sound, it turned out, was not the master magician calling from the beyond, but a telephone construction crew working nearby.

"I was really disappointed because I didn't really expect to raise the spirit," said Bob Lund, a magic buff who organized Tuesday's seance.

Lund, who has been collecting magic memorabilia since the age of 7, thought by conducting a Houdini seance during the day he'd have a better chance of contacting the late magician.

"He always said anything mediums and spiritualists could do in the dark, he could do in broad daylight," said Lund, who opened his magic museum last April.

Lund and the others joined hands at 1:25 p.m. in one of at least two dozen seances around the world in an effort to induce Houdini to perform the ultimate escape trick.

Before the ritual began, Lund lowered a lox and bagel sandwich on a commemorative plate bearing Houdini's picture into the milk can. The can was chained shut and secured with the locks used on the trunk from which Houdini performed another trick.

Earlier in the day, Lund said he'd be surprised if they succeeded in contacting Houdini.

"If something happens, I'll probably drop dead of a heart attack. I'd probably say, 'Hello, Harry,' and 'Goodbye' and expire on the spot," Lund said.

After Tuesday's effort, Lund said he had not decided whether to perform the experiment again next year.

Houdini died on Halloween, 1926, at Grace Hospital in Detroit from a ruptured appendix.

Ballot proposals explained

Proposals on the Nov. 7 election ballot will be explained to voters in a seminar at 3 p.m. Thursday in 158 Natural Resources Bldg.

The seminar will examine "Michigan's 11 Constitutional Proposals — What Are They? What Do They Mean? What Do They Imply?"

Geared for MSU students, faculty and staff, the seminar is being sponsored by the Resource Development Department and the Department of Agricultural Economics.

Raleigh Barlow, professor of resource development, and Alvin House, professor of agricultural economics, will lead the presentations and following discussions.

Planners look at home child care

An ordinance to specifically allow child day care centers in private homes will be discussed by the East Lansing Planning Commission 7:30 tonight in conference room A of City Hall, 410 Abbott Road.

The current zoning code has never specifically provided for home child day care centers. The possibility of amending the code will be discussed.

The commission will also look at development plans for the proposed Apple Knolls condominiums.

Citizens in the area of the proposed complex, south of Tamarisk Avenue, east of Harrison Road and north of Gainsborough Drive, petitioned the city last month to build a neighborhood park on a parcel of the development.

The builder is awaiting a Planning Commission recommendation to proceed with plans or change them to include a park.

Advisory Committee reports on land use, housing, energy, recreation, and transportation for the comprehensive plan will also be presented.

Program discussion

A Women's Studies Program discussion with current and prospective faculty members will be held at 7 p.m. tonight in the Gilchrist Lounge.

The faculty will talk about the program and meet with students. All interested persons are welcome.

Tel-Med phone lines provide health problem tapes

By KAREN SHERIDAN
State News Staff Writer

"St. Lawrence Tel-Med, may I help you?"
"Yes, I'd like to hear a tape on Parquat."

"Parquat... what's that?"
"It's an insecticide they use on marijuana... it makes you sick."

"I'm checking...
"I'm not sure if we have one on that. Why don't you let me check and call back."

When the State News returned this call, Tel-Med, a St. Lawrence Hospital-sponsored service providing health information on more than 200 topics over the phone, did not have a tape on Parquat.

The Lansing hospital did, however, have a tape on marijuana, its uses and possible abuses, and its history and effects.

In a low, well-trained voice, the announcer of "Tel-Med Tape 137-Marijuana" explained that marijuana users can and do "perform simple or familiar tasks well," though they may not be able to safely drive or fly.

"Flowering tops and leaves of the cannabis plant" do not cause physical dependence, the message went on, but may induce a "psychotic" reaction in heavy users.

More than 27,000 area residents have used the Tel-Med service since it began a little more than a year ago, said Patricia Winans, special projects coordinator for the hospital.

Financed by St. Lawrence Hospital, the Ingham County Board of Commissioners and Michigan Blue Cross Blue Shield at an initial cost of $32,000 and yearly operating costs of about $5,000, the service provides tapes on health related problems from "Cancer" to "Brothers and Sisters Getting Along."

The marijuana tape has had the largest response, Winans said, with "Am I Really Pregnant" second, and tapes on acne, venereal disease and headache following close behind.

Winans said Tel-Med is a nationally franchised educational program developed by the San Bernardino Medical Association in 1972.

Out of 27,000 calls so far this year, Tel-Med has gotten only two bomb threats, two obscene calls and "a few calls from children who giggle and hang up," Winans said.

Winans said the Tel-Med library includes 218 taped messages running from three to seven minutes in length, with 30 in Spanish.

Brochures explaining how to use the program, and listing tapes offered, can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to St. Lawrence Hospital, 1210 W. Saginaw St., Lansing, 48914.

Hours for local service are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

As explained in "Tel-Med Tape 429 — What is Tel-Med", Tel-Med is free and as close as your telephone. The Tel-Med number is 372-5150.

Lansing citizen robbed in home

A Lansing man was robbed inside his home early Tuesday morning of some cash and groceries, Lansing police said.

Melvin Green, 51, 14411 E. 14th St., contacted police with two men who said they needed cash for $5.

After giving the men change, Green apparently invited them inside, police said. The men, who had been in the house for about 20 minutes, took $150 from his wallet and some groceries, police said.

Police are investigating.

U.S. waters cleaner

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six years and $74 billion later, America's waters are getting cleaner.

It was in 1972 that Congress passed the Clean Water Act, setting as a national goal making the nation's rivers, lakes and streams both "fishable and swimmable."

Passage of the act triggered an immediate assault on the silt, garbage, human and industrial wastes and assorted filth of civilization that turn clean waterways into open sewers.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that governments and industry have spent $74.3 billion on water pollution controls since 1973. Billions more will be spent in the next decade, and the toughest work remains to be done.

But now, Atlantic salmon are returning to the Connecticut River to spawn, where they haven't appeared since the mid 1800s. Major kills of rafting ducks from oil spills no longer are reported on the Detroit River, which once was considered a dead river but now supports populations of wall eyes, muskellunge and coho salmon.

The lower Tombigbee River in Alabama once was known as the "fish kill capital of Alabama." But no major fish kills have been reported recently.

1973 Clean Water Act beginning to take effect

says the Council on Environmental Quality.

The Potomac River near Washington is showing signs of revitalized life. Once clogged with silt, sewage and disease-causing organisms, it is now protected by a local ordinance which prohibits anyone from making "deliberate contact" with the water under threat of a $300 fine.

But the river is responding so well to clean up efforts that the chairperson of a five state commission coordinating anti-pollution efforts proposed a "swim-in" to dramatize the water's new found cleanliness. Ironically, local police blocked the swim-in, citing the old ordinance.

EPA cites a long list of other successes. Among them are Pearl Harbor, the Willamette River in Oregon, the Androscoggin River in Maine, French Broad River in North Carolina, the Houston Ship Channel in Texas, Campbell Creek in Alaska, Calumet River in Illinois, Lake Minnetonka in Minnesota.

"We have shown success — and the people want more," says Thomas C. Jorling, EPA assistant administrator for water and waste management.

But future success is likely to come more slowly, says Jorling.

Most of the initial clean-up efforts have related to sewage and the construction of municipal and industrial treatment plants that purify the wastes before they are discharged into waterways.

Treatment technology focused on withdrawing the so-called oxygen-demanding pollutants that smother stream life.

Future efforts will focus on toxic chemicals that to date have suffered from "inadequate attention," says Jorling. Although the chemicals sometimes enter the waterways only in extremely small amounts, some such as chloroform and benzene are known to cause cancer in humans and laboratory animals.

There also are the problems of pollutants entering the water from sources such as farms. Fertilizers and pesticides applied to soil are carried by rainwater into nearby waters.

Jorling also says EPA must focus on major urban industrial areas where bacteria levels often are hazardous, especially in streams where streamflows during the summer often are inadequate to dilute human or livestock wastelands.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, estimates another $174 billion will have to be spent by government and industry by 1984 to achieve the fishable and swimmable goals mandated by the Clean Water Act.

It questioned whether the expense was justified.

Jorling, however, says there is no sign the people are lessening in their support of pollution control programs.

California residents approved a $375 million water pollution bond issue at the same time they enacted the tax-restricting Proposition 13, he noted.

"We don't see any waning of the people's support in cleaning up the nation's water," he declared.

In part, he says, the support comes because "people can see actual changes in the quality of the water."

No one expects the nation to meet the goal of making all waters swimmable and fishable by 1983. But Jorling, emphasizes, "there are a lot of waters in the country that are already there."

Nobody told Phyllis Fournier to quit clownin' around when she reported for work Tuesday. Fournier and fellow word processors for Telefarm in 305 Computer center all dressed up to get into the Halloween spirit.

TV viewers treated by Halloween trick

OSCODA, Mich. (AP) — Was it a trick on viewers of General Cable Television Co. Or was it a treat.

The firm's robot camera was supposed to pan an array of thermometers, barometers and wind gauges the night before Halloween.

Instead, the cameras swept back and forth over a display of magazine pictures of women without any clothes on.

That lasted for about a half-hour before red-faced technicians, swamped by calls, got there and pulled the plug.

Police in this Lake Huron community were investigating Tuesday but they said they had only one clue, aside from the pictures.

Somebody put up a small sign in the studio reading: "The Class of '79 Presents —"

Dayton-Hudson.
Facts, not fears #3.

Energy.

We live in a world of diminishing energy. No one is more aware of this than Dayton-Hudson. That's why The Cedars has a comprehensive energy conservation program.

First. The Cedars has no heating plant. It depends on light and body heat. Because of its thick insulation and few doors, this heat is sufficient. Compared to residential development, for example, The Cedars would use 15% less energy.

Second. The Cedars would bring the real center of shopping for East Lansing back into the city from its present location seven miles away in Meridian Township. In fact, The Cedars would be located less than 2 miles from campus. Combined with the elimination of shopping trips out of town, it is estimated that 14 million vehicle miles would be saved each year by The Cedars. That's a lot of gasoline.

Third. Sewer and water service consume energy. The Cedars would use 1/3 less water than a comparable residential development.

Watches seen as bad influence

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Digital watch wearers beware. A Temple University professor says those electronic time pieces could be a bad influence.

To Dr. Miles Orvell, the digital watch is another example of unthinking technology thrust upon the American people, pushing them further down the road to becoming just another programmable chip in a plug-in, turn-on society. "The digital watch is turning people, accustomed to using these devices, into quasi-automatons rather than people who have mastery over the workings of machines," said Orvell, who, as chairperson of Temple's Department of American studies, lectures on "The Impact of Technology on American Culture."

The digital watch, by fragmentation of time into moments, robs people of the spatial relationship of time that they got from the round clock with two hands and 12 numbers, he said in an interview.

And this love affair with technology may not be leading to the most practical future, he said.

Because colleges and universities are not specifically mentioned in the definition of local government, the pressure of limitation in the years to come could mean the decline of the proportion of state revenues going toward higher education.

new method of calculating necessary cost.

This would add yet another complexity to the state tax system in that programs have differing rates of increase in costs.

If the Headlee proposal meets with voter approval, the future

Headlee tax proposal misunderstood

The amendment also states if the excess is less than 1 percent, this money will be transferred to the Budget Stabilization Fund. Foreney points out that the constitution does not provide for such a fund.

Another problem concerning the Headlee proposal is that it assumes Michigan's rate of personal income will continue to increase as it has in the past.

If, however, the state's personal income declines, as will the revenue the state receives from taxes, explained that during times of declining income, lower taxes will be collected when public services are needed the most.

The amendment also allows for program expansion and implementation of new programs at the local government level on the concept of "free-salary costs." Yet, it is not specifying what these costs would be and the Legislature or courts will have to decide what is a reasonable cost.

Also pinball, air hockey, TV tennis, table tennis.

Forestry talk slated

A forestry seminar entitled "Transitions for the Scandinavian Forestry Sector" will be held at 2 p.m. today in 225 Natural Resources Bldg.

The featured speakers will be Jorgen Randers and Lars Lonnstedt, both from the Resource Policy Group of Oslo, Norway.

Woes over $ lows expressed

LONDON (AP) — "The President has got to do something about it. Enough is enough," retired U.S. airline pilot Frank Orme said Tuesday outside the American Express office in London's Haymarket.

Orme, from Honolulu, is just one of many sour-faced American vacationers in Europe hit by the sinking U.S. dollar.

"I have lost hundreds of dollars, and although I brought $10,000 with me, I shall have to use credit cards so as not to cut my trip short," Orme said.

In Madrid, a woman tourist from Akron, Ohio, who didn't want to be named, took one look at Spanish sunde and decided it would be cheaper back in Cleveland.

"What costs $125 in Madrid I can get for $100 back home," she said.

In Amsterdam, where the dollar has been hitting new record lows against the Dutch guilder nearly every day for the past week, an American woman who works there and is paid in U.S. dollars, said:

"Since I came here less than two months ago, I've lost $35 a week on my salary. Now instead of eating out, I bring canned soup in a thermos and raisin-bread sandwiches to work. A cup of coffee here is as expensive as a glass of wine in New York."

The problem is most acute for American service personnel in West Germany, particularly enlisted men and their families.

And All Hallows' Eve fades into morn...

Each year at the end of October everyone has a chance to go crazy and, for a little while, become someone else. Halloween traditionally allows all of the ghosts, as well as coneheads, clowns, witches and other various monsters to come out of the closet.

Most students celebrated the annual event at parties all over campus and throughout East Lansing over the weekend, but there were also several events that took place Halloween night.

Masked men and women could be seen throughout campus during the day and most people indulged in some type of trick or treat goodies. Pranksters ran about campus at night armed with bars of soap and other paraphernalia to be used in attempts of sabotage against friends and foes.

Students in Holden, Holmes, McDonel and Wonders halls had a chance to participate in floor skits and compete for prizes of free pizza parties and cokes. Other activities in the resident hall cafeterias included special dinners and pumpkin carving contests — for the more artistically minded.

The Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority provided festivities for many disadvantagged children of Ingham County, giving a party in the Tower Room of the Union Building. Funding for the party came from local merchants.

Other celebrations took place at fraternity and sorority houses and many student organizations held parties. An MSU recreation class also had a party at the Pump House, 368 Orchard St.

Rodeo queen contest

The queen of the 10th Annual MSU Rodeo in February will be chosen at 4 p.m. Saturday at the Livestock Pavilion.

Though anyone can compete for the title of Rodeo Queen, they should be able to ride a horse.

Applicants must take a written test, which measures the person's knowledge of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association rules, and pass a personality test, which is decided by the judges after talking to the contestants throughout the afternoon.

The third part of the competition, which is free and open to the public, displays the contestant's horse handling ability. Contestants must bring their own horse.

Goat tying, barrel racing and a regular show patter is the final aspect of the competition, which lasts until 6 p.m.

The queen will be crowned following the competition.

Duties of the queen include overseeing the rodeo in February and serving as group spokesperson at 4-H and Future Farmers of America functions.

The deadline for applications is Thursday.
