Two MSU presidential choices uncovered

The names of two of the final candidates in the running for the post of MSU president have been learned by the State News.
Among the few persons on the final list which will be submitted for consideration to the Board of Trustees are James A. Norton, visiting chancellor of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, and George C. Christensen, vice president for academic affairs at Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa.
Norton, 56, said in a telephone interview Monday that he met with members of the MSU search and selection committee in October.
Norton said "it was good to hear" his name was on the final list of presidential candidates.
"I'm very encouraged by this talk," Norton said.

Norton said he had no plans of resigning from his post of visiting chancellor at Case Western Reserve University.
"Things are not that far along that I can really comment about this," he said.
Christensen, who was in St. Louis, Mo. for the annual meeting of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, was also reached by telephone Monday. He said he was honored that his name was under consideration by the selection committee.
MSU President Edgar L. Harden is also attending the meeting in St. Louis.
Christensen said he would prefer not to comment on his interview with the selection committee.
Before taking the position of visiting chancellor at Case Western Reserve, Norton was the chancellor for the Ohio Board of Regents — the planning and coordinating body for all public and private institutions of higher learning in that state.
As chancellor to the board Norton was the regents' adviser and chief administrator.

Two spokesmen in Case Western Reserve's Office of University Communication said Norton works with trustees, faculty and administrators to set objectives for the 1980s and is experienced in public and private fundraising.
Norton earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in speech and government from Louisiana State University in the 1940s. He received his doctorate from Harvard University in 1950.
Norton also serves as an ex-officio member on commissions and councils, such as the Ohio Educational Television Network and the Higher Education Facilities Commission.
He has taught at the University of Texas, Florida State University, Harvard and Case Western Reserve.
Norton has received honors from the Cleveland Bar Association, Kent State University, the Urban League of Cleveland and the National Municipal League.

Christensen, 54, attended Cornell University in the 1940s and 1950s where he earned his doctorate in veterinary medicine. He also taught veterinary anatomy at Cornell and Purdue Universities.
From 1963 to 1965 he was the dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine at Iowa State University. He became the vice president for academic affairs at Iowa State in 1965.
Conflicting reports on the selection committee's list have placed the number of final names from two and four to six.

Robert Barker, chairperson of the presidential selection committee, said the committee was "getting close to the end" of the search for a list of candidates, but refused to comment on the status of Norton and Christensen.
Barker said he could not say whether the trustees knew the names of the finalists, but he expected they would become familiar with them soon.

Six of the trustees and the two trustees-elect met with selection committee members at MSU Sunday.
Trustee Michael Smydra, D-East Lansing, would not comment on the two candidates.
He said the Sunday meeting of the trustees and selection committee was not in violation of the state open meetings act because it was not an announced formal session with a quorum.

New regulation may ban alcohol at student events

By JENNIFER DIXON
State News Staff Writer
Alcohol regulations for student organizations will be changed if the groups accept an administrative recommendation to be presented to them this week, Louis Hekhuis, dean of students, said.
The University alcohol regulations are being revised because of the passage last week of Proposal D, which returned the legal Michigan drinking age to 21.
The recommendation will probably say "that student organizations cannot serve alcohol at student-sponsored events," Hekhuis, one of the four authors of the proposal, said Monday.
The leaders of registered student organizations, governing groups and residence halls will enforce the new policy if it is approved by the governing groups and endorsed by ASMSU, Hekhuis said.
MSU governing groups are the Interfraternity Council, Intercooperative Council, the Panhellenic Council, Residence Halls Association, National Panhellenic Council and University Apartments Residence Council. The Council of Graduate Students will also be asked to approve the policy.

Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president of student affairs, said at a meeting of student organization leaders and the MSU executive committees Friday that alcohol would be illegal in dormitory rooms and suites, sororities, fraternities and co-ops.
No alcohol will be allowed at social functions sponsored by student groups, unless the function is sponsored by graduates, Nonnamaker said.
It will be difficult to enforce the new policy because of the sheer number of potential violators, Ralph Turner, professor of criminal justice, predicted.
People charged with enforcement have mixed feelings about enforcing Proposal D, Turner said.
"The law deals with the sale of alcoholic beverages to those under 21," Turner said. "This means the target of enforcement will be stores and bars."

Minors in possession of alcohol will also be a target of enforcement, Turner said.
The Department of Public Safety will not hire additional personnel to enforce the new state law, Maj. Adam J. Zutaut of DPS said.
Zutaut also said Proposal D did not provide for a system of punishment for violation of the law, which adds to the problem of enforcing the new drinking age.
The problem is an awkward one, Gary North, the director of University housing said, because people who once had the right to drink have had that right taken away.
"There is the institutional posture at one end and students and student interests at the other," said North, who was also on the committee to revise the University alcohol policy.
MSU is a state institution and because it is on government land, the Board of Trustees has a legal responsibility to adopt an alcohol policy in addition to the new law, North said.
North predicted greater numbers of people would be drinking in the residence halls, private locations and cars.
"There will be a greater increase of alcohol-related accidents on the highways," North said.
About ninety percent of all residence hall occupants will lose their right to drink after Dec. 22, North said.
A problem with Proposal D lies with the attitude of the state Legislature, said Lee Atkinson, chief of the Criminal Division of Ingham County Prosecuting Attorney's Office.
In 1978, public drunkenness was declared no longer illegal. Instead those who are intoxicated are now sent to detoxication centers.
If people between 18 and 21 are found publicly drunk they are not likely to be arrested, though they were drinking illegally, Atkinson said.
"The only possible charge is for minors in possession of alcohol and the sale and provision of alcohol to minors," Atkinson said.

Israel, Egypt ponder U.S. negotiating plan

By BARRY SCHWEID
WASHINGTON (AP) — Egypt and Israel are actively considering an American proposal to break the deadlock in Mideast peace talks over the Palestinian issue, U.S. officials said Monday.
"We urge flexibility by both governments in handling the issue," State Department spokesman George Sherman told reporters amid indications the negotiations for a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel had slowed down.

The American proposal has not been disclosed. But it is understood to involve both a provision in the draft treaty's preamble and an exchange of letters between Egypt and Israel regarding future negotiations over the status of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.
Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance conferred late Sunday in New York with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who then flew home for consultations with his Cabinet. Begin told reporters before leaving that "problems" remained.
No top-level sessions were scheduled here, although ambassador Alfred L. Atherton Jr., the ranking State Department expert on Arab-Israeli affairs, had an afternoon meeting with the Egyptian delegation.
"They assured us that no decision has been taken to suspend the talks," Sherman said.

On the Israeli side, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman remained here, but diplomatic sources said they probably would return to Jerusalem in midweek to participate in the Cabinet discussions.
Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, said "it remains to be seen" whether President Carter's personal telephone calls over the weekend to Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat were effective.

Arson may have caused campus fire

The second fire in six days at the Central Services Building has inspectors wondering about the possibility of arson.
Police said that two cigarettes and a book of matches were found in the debris from 10 cartons of 4-H bulletins that caught fire Monday morning. There were no reported injuries.
Employees in the building quickly put the fire out with a two and one-half gallon water fire extinguisher after they smelled smoke in the hallways, a campus fire inspector said.
Cigarettes were suspected as the cause of another fire in the building Nov. 8 when an old couch caught fire. Fire marshal Carl Eigenhauer said there is no direct evidence that the fire was set deliberately, but added he cannot rule out arson as a possibility.
Eigenhauer also indicated he will be investigating for suspects.
"We will not question every employee in the building, but we will ask people if they noticed anyone suspicious," he said.
"Anybody could have gotten inside and set the fire," he added.
He estimated the damage from the Monday fire at about $640. The blaze last week caused about $1,000 worth of smoke and water damage, he said.

On the Israeli side, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman remained here, but diplomatic sources said they probably would return to Jerusalem in midweek to participate in the Cabinet discussions.

AHWAZ, Iran (AP) — Scores of Americans working here in the southern oilfields of Iran have been the targets of anonymous threats that they will be killed unless they leave Iran before Dec. 1.

Since the threats began two weeks ago, about 250 U.S. nationals, mainly women and children, have fled this dusty desert town on the northern edge of the Persian Gulf.
But most Americans randomly interviewed said they plan to ignore the threats, which have come on the coattails of bloody East Lansing Fire Department extinguished a fire at the home of Carl Thompson of 550 Collingwood Drive at 12:30 Monday. The fire destroyed the kitchen and caused extensive smoke damage.

Blaze damages prof's home

The East Lansing home of the former chairperson of the MSU Humanities Department caught fire Monday when something was accidentally left on the kitchen stove, firefighters said.
East Lansing Fire Chief Phil Patriarche said the house at 550 Collingwood Drive belongs to Karl F. Thompson, professor of humanities.
No one was home at the time of the fire and there were no injuries, Patriarche said.
Firefighters were called to the scene by a postal worker who noticed smoke pouring out of a mail slot when he lifted the lid to deliver mail at the Thompson's home at noon Monday.
The fire was under control at 12:27 p.m. and extinguished by 12:36 p.m., the fire chief said.
Though the fire was contained in one room, Patriarche estimated that the fire caused $12,000 worth of smoke, heat and water damage to the home.

Americans in Iran receive death threats anti-government rioting and political turmoil that has swept Iran for the last 10 months and taken an estimated 1,100 Iranian lives.

Some said they were nervous, and few of those interviewed would allow their names to be used.

Over the weekend, the bloodiest demonstrations occurred since the shah appointed a military government last Monday. The Pars news agency reported that about 20 persons were killed and many injured.

No one has claimed responsibility for the death threats, distributed on photocopies of hand-printed leaflets that read, "Warning — don't get killed (sic). Leave this country before the first of December."

Several Americans said the leaflets were handed out by Iranian children in the streets, stuck on their cars or stuffed into their shopping bags in stores.

December is a Moslem holy month when religious fervor runs high. Some Americans here speculate that the threats may have been made by Moslems who oppose Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi because he encouraged reforms that they believe are contrary to Islamic teachings.

"We're not taking them seriously," said a senior U.S. executive with the Oil Service Co. of Iran, which operates the oilfields and refineries for the state-run National Iranian Oil Co.

"Most of the folks I know plan to bring their kids over from the states for Christmas," said one Texan. "We've got plenty of protection from the military and we certainly don't feel threatened."

There are about 2,000 Americans in Ahwaz, and 45,000 throughout the country. There are about 50,000 Europeans in Iran, and overall, some 700,000 foreigners.

The threats were made after the 37,000 Iranian oil workers launched a nationwide anti-government strike on Oct. 31, an unprecedented walkout that slashed the country's daily oil production to one-sixth of its 6 million barrels and cost the country $60 million a day in revenues.

This vast oil belt is the key to the economy of Iran, the world's second largest oil exporting nation. Americans and other foreigners have prevented the collapse of the industry and boosted output to 2.1 million barrels a day over the weekend.

This antagonized the shah's foes, including political opponents who seek broad democratic reforms in his 37-year authoritarian rule. They particularly criticize the United States and Britain, because of the military hardware the two nations have given the shah.

"The ones who left got panicky," said a 55-year-old American worker. "Most of them had never been abroad before or been in this kind of situation."

The American, who said he was evacuated from Libya during the military coup and anti-Western riots there in 1969, said he witnessed mass killings in Tripoli. "But there's been nothing like that here and the anti-Western feeling in Iran is not nearly so high as it was in Libya."

The only known attack on Westerners occurred several days ago when a busload of American and British tourists was stoned near Ahwaz, slightly injuring several of them.

On Monday, police had to escort 200 American technicians working for Bell Laboratories International in Tehran away from a crowd of demonstrators, who were angered that the Americans continued to work.

Former prison official shot 11 times in legs

ROME (UPI) — Terrorists Monday shot a former prison official 11 times in the legs, despite claims by police sources that they were close to cracking the Red Brigades gang that killed former Premier Aldo Moro.

A group calling itself The Communist Attack Squads claimed responsibility for the Milan knee-cap shooting of Dr. Mario Marchetti, 65, retired health director of Milan's San Vittore prison.

Among those currently held in the prison are several captured members of the Red Brigades suspected in the killing of Moro last spring. Marchetti left the prison Oct. 5. He was shot three times in the right leg and eight in the left.

Marchetti was reported in shock but was expected to recover in two months.

Used cars may wear 'OK,' 'Not OK' signs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government report, saying the sale of "lemons" by used car dealers is a major consumer abuse, called Monday for a requirement that prospective buyers be told what's likely to fall apart first.

The Federal Trade Commission staff, in a 564-page report concluding five years of investigation and hearings, said sales of defective used cars affect "the basic safety or utility of the most expensive item many consumers will ever buy."

The staff proposed that vehicles on used-car lots be required to carry a notice revealing any defects. The proposal will have to be adopted by the five-member commission before it becomes law. After that, legal challenges by the industry are likely.

The proposed requirement would make used car dealers put the notices on windows of the 10.5 million vehicles sold annually. The notices would say "OK" or "Not OK" for such major systems on the car as brakes, steering, engine and transmission. Any item marked "Not OK" would be accompanied by a cost estimate for repairs.

United Farm Workers ready for expansion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cesar Chavez, whose United Farm Workers fought for more than a decade to unionize California's lush fields, says the union is ready to move into other states and other fields.

"We still feel we are a movement, not just a union," said the UFW leader. "But we're reevaluating... changing our priorities. We can't live in the late '70s with concepts from the mid-60s."

In the nine and one-half months since ending a worldwide boycott of California lettuce, table grapes and wines, the union has grown to an estimated 100,000 members, computerized its headquarters, founded a school to train its staff and made major gains in establishing centralized health and pension plans — a breakthrough for migrants who seldom have the same employer for more than a few months.

More Skid Row stabbing victims found

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bodies of the seventh and eighth Skid Row stabbing victims within three weeks were found Monday, and police circulated a drawing of a pigeon-toed man they said was wanted for questioning.

It is the second time in four years that the Skid Row area has been stalked by a killer. In the winter of 1974-75 nine men were killed in the "Skid Row Slasher" murders.

Orrin Vaughn Greenwood was convicted in 1977 of eight of the "Slasher" killings and is serving a life prison sentence.

In the latest two stabbings, Police Lt. Dan Cooke said the body of Augustine E. Luna, 49, was found in an alley, and the body of Frank F. Reed, 36, was found in the rear parking lot of a bar.

The latest two, like the previous six victims, were inhabitants of the downtown Skid Row area, many of whom sleep outdoors in alleys or on the sidewalks.

Cooke said no motive was known for any of the attacks, in which all the victims have been stabbed in the upper torso. In the "Slasher" slayings, the victims' throats were cut ear-to-ear straight through to the spinal cord.

Tougher exposure levels set for lead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Labor Department Monday announced tough new rules to protect workers from lead poisoning that can cause diseases of the kidneys and central nervous systems.

Assistant Labor Secretary Eula Bingham said the standards, to be phased in over a 10-year period, will reduce permissible exposure levels from 200 to 50 micrograms of lead per cubic meter of air.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration estimated 835,000 workers will be covered by the standards, with nearly 100,000 estimated to be currently exposed to lead above the 50 microgram level.

Bingham said evidence collected by the department during hearings clearly demonstrates that the toxic effects of lead exposure are much more extensive than previously recognized.

Although the rule calls for an eventual 50 microgram level, industries are given from one to three years to reach an interim 100 microgram level and up to 10 years to get to the level of 50 micrograms.

White House ready for oil price increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is braced for an increase in world oil prices of at least 5 percent, and maybe 10 percent, which would raise the price of gasoline and home heating oil.

Van Doorn Cools, an assistant director of the Office of Management and Budget, said Monday the administration has assumed in its budget and economic forecasts for next year that there will be an increase of at least 5 percent.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal will travel to the Middle East later this week to confer with leaders of the major oil-producing nations of Saudi Arabia, Iran, Kuwait and Abu Dhabi.

Blumenthal's trip comes just a few weeks before members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meet in Abu Dhabi in mid-December to set oil prices for next year. He will try to exert U.S. influence to keep the increase as low as possible.

The oil minister of Kuwait has said he favors an increase of at least 10 percent. Oil prices were frozen for 1978, as OPEC gave the rest of the world a welcome respite from the steady increase in prices that started in 1973.

EVACUATION PLAN APPROVED

Nuclear war deaths estimated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration said Monday that more than half of all Americans would die in a nuclear war, many because of outdated fallout shelters, and it approved a plan to save up to 146 million people by large-scale evacuation of urban centers.

The shelters currently available in American cities are not sufficient to meet the modern nuclear threat posed by the Soviet Union, said Baryl Tiran, U.S. civil defense director.

And, Tiran said, the Soviets are better prepared to protect their citizens in the event of nuclear war. He confirmed that President Carter gave his approval to the new evacuation plans on Sept. 29.

Civil defense officials estimate that 90 million of the current U.S. population of 220 million would survive a nuclear attack. The aim of the new program is to increase the number of survivors to as many as 146 million.

Millions who live in cities would have to rely on makeshift shelters in subways or the basements of public buildings.

In the future, those shelters are seen as becoming less adequate.

"Times have changed and the needs have changed," Tiran said in a telephone interview. "A shelter is valuable against fallout. But unless you have a very expensive blast shelter, which we don't have, there's little protection in the area of a strike."

He said future Russian weapons will be more numerous and more accurate than those that threatened when U.S.

officials began designating public fallout shelters in the early 1960s. Those shelters could hold 118 million Americans, officials said.

Tiran said the new approach to U.S. civil defense is in the formative stages and would not give firm information about it.

He said planners have yet to decide how many millions of Americans could be transported from their communities or where they would stay in the countryside. He also could not say how much such a program would cost.

White House spokesperson Jody Powell said the new civil defense effort will be "no new crash program" and that spending increases will be moderate. He said the cost has not been determined.

Tiran said no massive shelter construction is contemplated in rural areas. As for means of transporting people from prime targets in urban areas, he said all types of transportation likely would be used for evacuation, but was not specific.

"Your means of doing it in Biloxi, Miss., will be far different than in New York or Los Angeles," Tiran said. "The trick is to use all available resources and to make use of existing resources without spending a lot of money."

The United States currently spends $90 million a year on civil defense. Tiran said a recent CIA report estimated it would cost $2 billion annually to duplicate the current Russian plans for evacuation.

Coffin may hold John the Baptist

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Workers renovating an ancient Christian monastery in the desert north of Cairo discovered a coffin that church officials say may contain the remains of John the Baptist, the holy man who according to Christian belief baptized Jesus Christ.

"There are lots of bodies buried out there and we have to be sure," said Bishop Samuel, an official of the Coptic Christian Church who is organizing an investigation of the discovery. "What leads the priests to think it is John the Baptist is a reference in church manuscripts which says he was buried 18 feet from the altar."

The wooden coffin was found under the walls of St. Makarios monastery, 60 miles north of Cairo. Officials of the Coptic Church, the native Christian church of Egypt and Ethiopia, have set up a committee of archeologists, architects and church scholars to examine the find and report to the church.

"The priests couldn't move the walls before for fear the building would collapse," Samuel said Monday.

The bishop is an assistant to Pope Shenouda II, spiritual leader of Egypt's six million Coptic Christians. The Copts are doctrinally related to the Eastern Orthodox Church.

A spokesperson at the Vatican said he was unaware of the discovery. The Rev. Romeo Panciroli said the report would have to be studied before the church makes any comment.

The monastery was founded about the fourth century during a period of Christian expansion in Egypt. According to the monastery's manuscripts, the remains of John the Baptist were spirited out of Palestine in the fourth century by Christians fleeing the oppression of Roman authorities. They brought the body to Alexandria on the Mediterranean coast. The remains were moved to the monastery in the early 11th century.

The Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram quoted the text of the manuscripts as saying:

"The altar of John the Baptist. It was named thus because the body of John the Baptist which was borne from Palestine in the days of Pope Theophilus XXIII was buried in Alexandria and then he was transferred from it and buried in the monastery of St. Makarios during the days of the oppression."

Iranian capital quiet; shah appears secure

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi appeared Monday to have weathered the threat to his 37-year reign caused by weeks of anti-government demonstrations and a crippling strike aimed at cutting Iran's lifeblood, its flow of oil.

Tehran remained calm Monday under the watch of heavily armed troops in key districts of the city and a strictly enforced dusk-to-dawn curfew.

Most shops and businesses were open and government agencies and public utilities operated normally.

Foreign workers and army personnel have taken over the oil fields under the watch of several thousand troops armed with tanks and machine guns. Production has been brought up from a low of 950,000 barrels a day to 2.7 million, state oil industry officials said.

Normal production before the 37,000 Iranian oil workers walked off the job Oct. 31 to demand higher pay and to join the anti-government movement was 6 million barrels a day.

The position of the military government also was bolstered by the failure of a one-day general strike called in Tehran by the popular Moslem leader, Ayatollah Khomeini, in exile in Paris.

In Washington, a State Department spokesperson refrained from criticizing the shah for the weekend arrest of his opposition political leader, Karim Sanjaby, saying the "emergency situation" in Iran is "fully apparent."

In the provinces, however, the official Paris news agency reported 20 persons killed in anti-government clashes with troops over the weekend. It was the bloodiest string of demonstrations since the shah decreed a military government was in power a week ago.

In the southern oilfields, most of the workers who struck continued to defy a government order to return to work in spite of the warning that they would be arrested or fired.

But the state-run National Iranian Oil Co. said Monday that some workers had returned to their jobs at the Abadan refinery, the world's largest refinery complex.

CATA questions multi-transport site

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

CATA board members met with Lansing's planning director Monday to discuss the site of a proposed downtown multi-transportation center.

The center would house a variety of transportation forms including a Capital Area Transportation Authority bus transfer point, state-wide bus service, cabs and transportation to the airport and railroad center by 1981, said Alan Tubbs, Lansing planning director.

A site at Kalamazoo, Grand and Washington avenues is being considered by the city, Tubbs said.

CATA board members were concerned that the suggested site would be an inconvenience to Lansing Community College students and workers at the state government complexes behind the capital. The site is four blocks south of CATA's current Lansing transfer point at Michigan and Grand Avenues.

By moving the present site, LCC student's walking distance is increased by three-quarters of a mile, board member Direck Twilliger said.

CATA members agreed that the present site presents a hazard to pedestrians.

The city expects traffic problems in that area to increase by 1982 with the building of a proposed convention-related structure housing a hotel and office buildings.

Along with plans to develop the downtown area into a major convention center, the city has proposed a new court and police building, an enclosed bi-level shopping mall at South Washington Square and a new activities arena.

Other sites were ruled unsuitable by the city, Tubbs said, because they were either too small, too expensive or unavailable.

"Now the disadvantages (of the proposed site) are out-weighing the advantages," CATA Board Chairperson Duane Servens said.

The CATA board will discuss the multi-transportation center at its next regular meeting, Servens said.

Tubbs was concerned over CATA's involvement because he said the center might not be built without its participation.

Funded by $2.5 million of state funds to be obtained from the state's increased plate fees, the center faces a setback with a recent petition drive to prevent the fee increase, Tubbs said.

If successful, the petition would postpone increases in fees from Nov. 15, 1978 to the 1980 elections when voters would decide in a referendum if the fees should be increased.

New safety precautions planned for 'U' building

By SANDY HOLT
State News Staff Writer

A new safety plan for the Student Services Building is being planned and implemented, said Dan Jones, president of the ASMSU Student Board.

The plan calls for a work-study student to monitor the building during evenings and on weekends and report any occurrences to the Department of Public Safety, Jones said.

"The plan has been worked through with experts from the DPS," he said, adding that DPS will offer basic training to the monitor to help watch the building.

Other safety measures being implemented are: lights that cannot be shut off in stairwells, hallways and the women's bathrooms, leaving only the east door open on weekends and setting up different open hours for the building.

An original plan was submitted to Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president of student affairs, several weeks ago, but it was rejected by staff members of his office, Jones said.

He said the original plan was rejected by staff members from offices in the building, which are directed by Nonnamaker, because it called for a work-study student to monitor all persons entering the building between 6 p.m. and midnight.

The new safety plan substitutes a roving monitor to roam the building between 6 p.m. and midnight Monday through Friday and from 7 a.m. to midnight on weekends.

The building will be completely locked from midnight to 6 a.m. every day and partially locked from 7 a.m. to midnight on weekends. Persons may work in the building during those hours if they choose.

On weekends only the east door, which faces Mason-Abbott halls, will be open.

Jones said the east door was chosen because it is accessible to handicappeds and it opens to an unenclosed, well-lit area. He added that one drawback is the door is farther away from the parking lot.

An emergency phone in the lobby is being considered by DPS and the Physical Plant, Jones said.

The safety plan was initiated because of incidents reported on the third floor of the Student Services Building.

Incidents including a threatening note and phone calls, an attack on the Lesbian/Gay Council with fire extinguishers and recently, tampered door locks and several thefts were reported.

Representatives from ASMSU, the Council of Graduate Students and the State News, all of whom have offices on the third floor, have been working with Nonnamaker and DPS to formulate a plan.

Physical changes to the building will be paid for by the Office of Student Affairs, Jones said, but funds for the work-study student will be submitted from four sources, including COGS and the State News. ASMSU will vote on the funding this week.

Jones said the fourth source for funding is still unknown.

WMSN radio station, located in the basement of the building, decided against providing funds for the work-study student because one unarmed guard could not maintain security, said Lynda Loomis, ASMSU representative to WMSN radio board.

In a letter to Dan Jones, WMSN said any plan should exist as a component of a campus wide security plan, since incidents in the building reflect safety problems across the campus.

Orpheus choir spreads 'word'

By THERESA D. McCLELLAN
State News Staff Writer

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God," John 1:1.

The Black Orpheus Gospel Choir spread the Word Sunday night in harmonic voices and stunning solos that brought members of the audience to their feet.

"Some of you came in expecting a concert, to be entertained, and that's good because we got you in here," said Stanley Parker, choir president. "But this is not a concert. Just think of this as God's gas station where you will come and get filled up with the Word."

The presentation was given to introduce more people to the choir, Choir Director Jackie Davis said.

"We are not going to push anything on you, we are just going to plant a seed," Davis told the audience.

Soloist Daryll Hibbert, an MSU student, brought members of the audience to tears with his rendition of "My Faith Looks Up To Thee."

Others in the audience jumped out of their seats and shouted "Thank You Jesus, while many simply nodded their heads with appreciative grins on their faces as Hibbert concluded the song.

Vanessa Bell Armstrong from Detroit had the majority of the audience on its feet with her rendition of "You've Got a Friend."

"You know you've got a friend closer to you than your brother when your friend is Jesus," she said.

At the end of the concert, co-chaplain Donna Guy invited the audience to come to the stage and "know Jesus."

"I know this is not a church," she said. "But if you feel that you want to know the Lord now is your chance."

When people are asked to "know Jesus" they confess that they are sinners, ask forgiveness and tell the minister present they believe in the Lord.

The Black Orpheus Choir began in 1970 when three students began singing together. After 1973, the group expanded and became "totally committed to singing for the Lord," Davis said.

The group is named after Orpheus — an angel of music. Orpheus' songs moved the rocks and mountains and everyone realized the angel was truly blessed just as the Orpheus choir is blessed today to move people closer to the Lord, she explained.

The choir meets in North Case Hall at 6 p.m. each Monday and Thursday and is open to everyone, Davis explained. The members are from many religious backgrounds but they all share the love of God.

Kathy Williams, soprano member of the Black Orpheus Choir, sings the praises of God with the members of the choir.

Academic Council to discuss 'U' College

Proposed plans to dissolve University College will be discussed by Academic Council next Tuesday and during a special meeting Nov. 28.

At its meeting Monday, the Academic Council Steering Committee decided to cancel Student and Faculty councils meetings scheduled for Nov. 28 so Academic Council can discuss a proposal by Provost Clarence L. Winder concerning the reorganization of University College.

Winder plans to take his proposal to the Board of Trustees' December meeting.

Academic Council may also discuss Winder's proposals at the council's last fall term meeting, Dec. 5.

In other action Monday, the Steering Committee cancelled the Nov. 22 Academic Senate meeting for lack of business.

Fund views sought

East Lansing residents will be able to suggest programs on how to spend federal grant funds 7:30 tonight at Bailey School, 300 Bailey St.

The meeting will be held to gather citizen comments to help determine ways to spend federal monies East Lansing will receive from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The meeting is sponsored by the Housing and Community Development Commission.

Objectives of the federal community development program are primarily to help low- to moderate-income families and eliminate slums and prevent blight.

Citizen's suggestions will be used to help determine the types of projects and activities undertaken by the city.

WOMEN'S LOUNGE DECISION

Opinion may be withheld

An opinion revealing reasons why the Women's Lounge will remain segregated may not be released by the Anti-Discrimination Judicial Board, said the board's secretary.

Sallie Bright said Monday that while a written opinion has not been formulated yet, the board is under no legal commitment to release one.

Under University regulations, the board must only release an opinion if it goes against the initial decision of its Fact-Finding Committee.

The committee ruled against Bruce Guthrie, a senior majoring in history and economics, in the case. Guthrie claimed men who are denied entrance to the lounge in the Union Building are victims of sexual discrimination. The judiciary upheld this decision.

Bright said one reason why an opinion may not be released is because the board's sentiments echo those of the Fact-Finding Committee in its decision.

The committee said in an opinion released in August that exclusive use of the Women's Lounge by women is "not sexually discriminatory within the spirit of the Law."

"It remains a fact that for off-campus females and for women generally after dark, the 'Women's Lounge' represents the only safe refuge in the area for awaiting rides and studying or resting between classes," the written opinion said.

Guthrie said he thought the board should release an explanation of its decision.

Union Manager Michael Dmochowski, who argued the lounge should be kept segregated at the board hearing, said the board should decide if an opinion should be released.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Monday's State News that Lansing promised the Council Against Domestic Abuse $70,000 for the renovation of the Baptist Convention Home to be used for a domestic abuse shelter.

Lansing is still working out an agreement with CADA for completion of the renovation project and has not yet officially committed any money to the renovation project, Marcia Macomber, executive director of CADA, said.

The $70,000 figure reported by the State News was an estimated amount that the city may contribute for the renovation project.

Iran nears its bottom line

Former President Richard M. Nixon told a cheering crowd of partisan Gulf Coast Mississippians that "if the present Iranian government falls, the new regime will be friendly to the Soviet Union and unfriendly to the United States and the Western nations." Thankfully, that area of the United States is one of the few places in the country where the former president can get away with such a gross distortion of reality.

Mississippi's Gulf Coast is a bastion of conservatism and rising Republicanism, which partly explains Nixon's popularity. Even more telling, however, is the thousands of military personnel who have retired in that sunny strip. But the clincher is that less than 20 miles from where Nixon spoke is one of the largest naval shipyards in the country.

The Ingalls shipyard, Mississippi's largest single employer with over 20,000 workers, currently has a contract with the Shah to build five top-secret nuclear destroyers. This 500-foot ship is one of the most, if not the most, sophisticated vessel in the water. It is what is supposed to put our Navy on equal footing with the Russians. There are only 35 in the entire world — the U.S. has 30, the Shah has five. That is why Mississippians are receptive to pro-Shah sentiments.

Nixon called his statement the "bottom line" of the Iranian situation. But the bottom line of his statement is that Americans ought to prepare themselves for direct involvement in Iran. Even possibly to the extent of armed U.S. personnel protecting the Shah and his oilfields. It is conceivable that Iran could be a major issue in 1980's presidential race, as in "who has the guts (Democrats or Republicans) to go over and protect 40 years of American vested interest from communist takeover."

An argument based on a premise such as that is more than appalling, it is frightening. It assumes the next government will definitely be more friendly to Soviets. But if Islamic leaders find capitalism disgusting, they find a system of government that outlaws religious freedom even more intolerable. The Soviet connection is clearly out, if what the people of Iran are demanding — Islamic rule — should occur.

What will probably occur when the Shah is toppled is that oil will go to the highest bidder rather than to whom a favor is owed. Chances are that Iranian oil will still go where it is presently going — the nine most powerful Western nations — but top dollar will be charged. Even more importantly, however, the oil revenues will be distributed in a more equitable manner.

Per capita income figures show Iranians have over 500 percent more money than they did eight years ago. What those figures don't show, however, is that people who had money in 1970 still have it except more. People who didn't have any in 1970 still don't have any. That ever-widening income gap is probably the prime reason for riots and rebellion, not women without veils, as the Shah has been trying to prove.

The bottom line for long-term relations with Iran and a guarantee of future oil is not riot control equipment, but an understanding of the rioters' motives.

That understanding would mean a profound change in U.S. policy, possibly even a reversal. But it is not too late. For the sake of the Mideast's future and for the sake of future Western interests, the United States must begin cultivating relationships with Iranian opposition leaders.

Public has right to know

The State News decision to release two of the final names under consideration for the MSU presidency will most certainly be subjected to intense conjecture and disagreement.

For us, the decision was a simple one. Do the students and faculty at MSU have a right to know exactly who the choices are and do they have a right to comment on them? We firmly believe they do.

We lament the fact we are only able to provide part of the picture since other names — the number varies from two to four — have simply not been made available. With the release of these two names we call upon the selection committee and the Board of Trustees to fill in the missing puzzle pieces and release the balance of the names for public scrutiny.

The oft-used argument against providing the names for publication is that persons identified as looking for a new position here at MSU will be unceremoniously fired from the positions they now hold. If a candidate's position is so insecure that public knowledge of that person seeking a job as prestigious as the one offered would cause their termination, then perhaps MSU would be better off without them.

We are not insensitive to the problems often created by such a public disclosure, but we are not talking about appointing an associate professor. Had the process been open from the start, as we and others consistently urged, the committee, the trustees and the candidates would not be in the awkward position they will now find themselves in.

Discussions of the selection have centered around a select group of people, who have accomplished their purpose of coming up with a final list of names. It is now time for a full and open campus-wide discussion of their labors.

KEN PARKER—SPACE CADET

Space policy is vague

President Carter has announced a policy which the White House says "will set the direction of U.S. efforts in space over the next decade."

Although the document is vague enough to prompt Science News magazine to headline its Oct. 28 report "Carter space policy: Room to maneuver," it does renounce any "high challenge space engineering initiative comparable to Apollo," ruling out solar power satellite or space manufacturing development for the 1980s.

The statement goes hand-in-hand with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's fiscal 1979 budget, which provides for maintenance of current projects with a few new starts and several cutbacks to offset them. Only four of the original five space shuttles will be built; a polar orbiting lunar satellite has been dropped; there is no return to Mars in the works; and the proposed rendezvous with Haley's Comet will have to await that body's next earthly visitation in 2062.

The Carter policy also:

- assigns space shuttle planning details to the Space Policy Review Committee established last May. Some already proposed missions would require design modifications;
- creates a group to plan a unified national "remote-sensing" (satellite) system, and to encourage private investment and participation;
- commissions a study on consolidation of military and civilian weather satellites; and

- sets up studies of technology transfer for more widespread use of communications satellites.

The White House now says "The United States' priorities at any given time will depend on the promise of the science, the availability of the particular technology, and the budgetary situation."

In 1976, candidate Jimmy Carter said, "One clear priority will be to maintain our pre-eminence as the undisputed leader in aerospace technology... the core of the profession must be held intact." As 1979 nears, our leadership is not "undisputed" by any means, and the space program has been reduced to its core.

Carter had also named as "promising" areas "space medicine and manufacturing and space-generated solar power." The White House now says "it is too early to make a commitment" in these areas. We can only hope the president has not mentally filed them under "Bad Ideas politically unpopular," hoping they'll just go away, and that they remain goals, if not for the '80s, then certainly for the 1990s.

Carter's recent statement is purposely vague, merely articulating what has long been obvious — the ties between the economy and space efforts. If it has not set goals, it at least indicates a continued interest in space and points in the direction of consolidating and exploiting the gains of the past 20 years.

VIEWPOINT: SOUTH AFRICA

Divestiture not in best interests of the students

By DIANNA DICKIE

Throughout fall term the State News has been peppered with articles urging divestment of stock in companies with holdings in South Africa. These arguments have been made again and again, but rarely has the viewpoint against divestiture been included in the paper. Very few students realize how much this action will affect them directly.

The most recent column by James McNally replied in part to a letter opposing divestiture submitted by me two weeks ago. (Needless to say, the entire letter was not printed, only one sentence was pulled out for comment.) McNally is of the opinion that if MSU divests, other smaller universities will follow our example and divest as well. This domino effect would put increasing pressure on these corporations. Although it would be nice to see MSU play a "Pied Piper" role, this attitude neglects the universities which have already considered divestiture and decided against it. Indeed, there is no national cooperative effort to organize universities and apply pressure to these companies as a group. The only guaranteed result of divestiture is the decrease in support MSU will encounter.

But McNally also contends that this support may not be diminished at all. He feels the companies will recognize that the need is still great, and is just using idle threats to keep MSU in line. He is (or was) totally unaware of the withdrawal of support that has already (yes, already) been experienced. The Engineering College, for example, has some corporate-funded programs which were moving ahead full tilt six months ago, but are now at a standstill due to a sudden (although not mysterious) lack of response. These companies have already begun to pull out of MSU. In the meantime, our colleges falter, and the "ability" of our graduates is damaged, contrary to McNally's contentions.

It should also be against our social conscience to accept support from these companies for other worthwhile projects at MSU. But then, what happens to the plans for the Performing Arts Theatre, for instance? It, too, is heavily funded by Ford, GM, etc. Isn't it also "morally wrong" to take this money for MSU's sake, only to whirl around and call these corporations "dehumanistic"?

McNally labels those opposed to divestiture hypocrites. He also happens to own a Dodge. Isn't he just as hypocritical by condemning these companies, but continuing to support them by owning their products? Those who sincerely believe in divestiture should also be demanding massive boycotts of these manufactured products, but this call to action has not been voiced. Is this because they can't give up their Cokes, Pepsis, Xerox machines, Kodak cameras and sell their Fords? But they can find those opposed to divestiture guilty of hypocrisy. Hmmm...

The issue of divestiture is an extremely complex one, but reckless name-calling certainly will not help clear the fog from the facts. There is no easy answer. I do hope to see a change in the "discretion" of the editors of the State News; preferably an objective policy which illuminates more than just their personal viewpoint. I also urge the Board of Trustees to consider all options carefully, and make a responsible decision in the best interests of MSU.

Senior gown costs an insult

As a graduating senior this term, I had been contemplating, among other things, the wonderful prospect of having no more tuition, fees, and other such money grabbers being "socked to me." After all, I have sweated, slaved, and borrowed (and borrowed and borrowed!) to scrape up the money to pay for these University-imposed fees. Gleefully anticipating the date of graduation, I went to the Union to fill out a form for a graduation gown. As I approached the Union store and inquired, the man behind the desk calmly said, "oh, by the way, I'll need $12 for your gown." "TWELVE DOLLARS!!!!!!" I exclaimed. After all the money I've poured into school they still want to squeeze the last drop of cash they can out of me before I flee the University financially with my tail between my legs. The point of this is that of the thousands of dollars we students pour into MSU, the University should find it within their hearts (or more appropriately their pockets) to provide graduating seniors with gowns, free of charge. They should feel privileged to absorb the cost of the gowns as a well-deserved gift to the graduating seniors.

Boycott the SN for local stories?

In response to the letter of Randall Bass, "Cancel the Free Press Subscription" appearing in the Nov. 2 State News, I have decided to boycott The State News because they do not give equal coverage to University of Michigan football games. They consistently put MSU football articles all over the sports page with but scant reference to great U-M stories.

In his letter, Bass complained that the Detroit Free Press was playing down MSU football while giving preferential news coverage to U-M football. My point is this: The Detroit Free Press is written in Detroit for the people in and around Detroit. Being that Ann Arbor is practically a suburb of Detroit, I think the Free Press is justified in assuming most of its readers would rather read about their team, U-M, rather than of some team out in the boonies of central Michigan. If you want comprehensive coverage of your region, read a paper published in your region — The State Journal might be a good choice for the Lansing area.

I do not know about the other 43,000 MSU students, but I for one am cancelling my subscription to The London Times until they print comprehensive articles on the sports scene in Walla Walla, Wash.

Wolf cries bring second thoughts

Having lived through another season of Rush and uncounted parties, I would like to mention something that I think is of some importance. It has to do with all the screaming that happens on the street that I live on. Though it is true that I find it hard to study or read when all this noise is being made, it is not something that I can't handle. Likewise, I go to sleep at three or four in the morning, so it doesn't really upset me when the sororities on my street are raided and all hell breaks loose. I don't even pay attention to it anymore, and that I feel is the problem.

Last spring there were five women raped on my street, and if they screamed, I probably heard them. Unfortunately, seeing as all screams sound alike to me, and wolf had been cried so many times, I didn't do a thing. I had already run out into the night too many times to let myself get laughed at again while trying to help.

Enough said?

Extend the peace to MSU campus

For over 30 years, a great wall of hate has existed between Arabs and Jews. During the past few months, we have watched that wall shake and tumble down. Today, peace is truly at hand. Begin and Sadat are expected to sign a final treaty in a matter of weeks.

Can the Arabs and Jews at MSU follow the example of these two great statesmen? Is it possible for us to start an on-campus dialogue for the common goal of true peace and friendship?

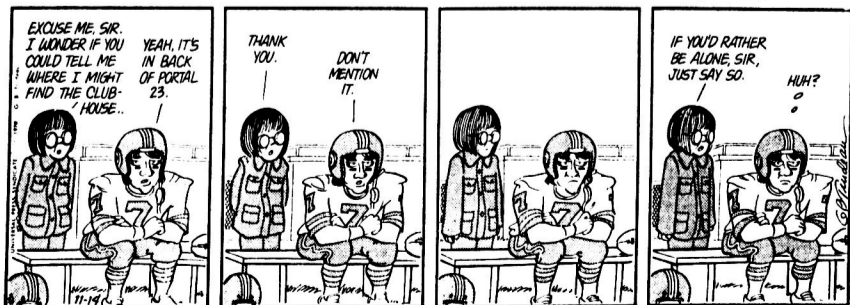

Many Jewish students at MSU say "Yes!" Toward this purpose, we are designating Wednesday, Nov. 29, as "Peace in the Middle East Day at MSU." A full day of programs is being planned at this time and all students and faculty are invited. At noon, a major "Peace Rally" is being planned.

As a representative of the Israel Awareness Committee and Hillel at MSU, I am extending an open invitation to all Arab students at this great University. Please join us in organizing and celebrating our "Peace Day." Let us celebrate the upcoming treaty between Egypt and Israel. Now is the time to show the world that we can live together in brotherhood. Begin and Sadat have won the Nobel Prize for peace. We now challenge the Arab students at MSU to join us down that great road.

MSU hosts Russians in season debut

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

When the Russian National basketball team invades Jenison Fieldhouse tonight in an 8:05 p.m. battle with MSU, the Spartans will find out right away what it is like to play a good, big basketball team.

The Russians are good. They have won five out of six games so far on their American tour, and in what may be the understatement of the year, they are big.

One player for the Russians, guard Stanislav Eremin, stands an even 6-foot, but from there, 6-foot-5 is as small as they come. Vladimir Tkachenko, who doesn't even start, is listed at 7-foot-4 while the starting center, Alexandr Belostennyi, stands 7-foot-2. Four others are listed at 6-foot-10.

The Russians have beat some very good teams this year, including recent wins over Notre Dame by 15 points and Indiana by 13. They had a game scheduled Monday night at Purdue and Spartan coach Jud Heathcote feels the team might be tired when it plays tonight, which is good news for the Spartans.

"We just hope we can give them a good game," Heathcote said. "We go into every game hoping we can win, but we know we just don't stack up.

"When I scheduled the game, I didn't think that we'd win. Now, looking at their itinerary, I think we have a chance. At first we wanted to run them to the ground but now we want to play our normal game still fast breaking when we have the chance.

"They have enough bench strength that a running game might run us down and not them."

The game tonight, which does not count as far as the NCAA is concerned, will give the Spartans an early jump on their season and will be their seventh straight International game. MSU toured Brazil in mid-September and won five of six games, capturing first place in the Governor's Cup Tournament.

The International rules are slightly different from NCAA rules. There is a 30-second clock which should speed up the action, as the ball is taken out on the side for all infractions except fouls. Unless a foul is called, the referee doesn't have to touch the ball before it is taken out.

Once the ball hits the rim, it can either be knocked out of the cylinder or knocked back in. There is no such thing as goaltending once the ball hits the rim. The "key" is bigger and on common fouls, free throws aren't shot until after the 10th foul in the half. In the NCAA, free throws are shot after the sixth foul. All fouls are two shots and shooting fouls after the bonus is in effect, three shots to make two.

"Basically, it's still basketball," Heathcote said. "You don't have to make much of an adjustment playing International basketball. In the International game, they (the referees) let a lot of things go underneath and call a lot of picky things outside."

The Spartans will go with Earvin Johnson and Terry Donnelly at guards, Gregory Kelsner and Ron Charles at forwards and Jay Vincent at center.

According to Donnelly, this game is a welcome sight for the Spartan players and he is optimistic about the way the team is playing now.

"It's good to have some type of game to break up the monotony of practice," Donnelly said. "Last year everyone was new and no one knew exactly what was going on."

Following this game, the Spartans have a 13-day break before the start of their regular season, which begins on Nov. 27, when MSU hosts Central Michigan. Last week Heathcote said the Spartans might have their toughest pre-season schedule ever, so this game tonight should be a good way to get them ready.

Swimmers fare well in relays; open season against Western

By JEFF MINAHAN

The 1978 MSU women's swimming team is working harder than any other women's swimming team before, which causes coach Jennifer Parks to think that the Spartans will field a much-improved team in the season opener against Western Michigan Thursday night.

Pointing to the bright spots, Parks said that the team will be strong in the breast stroke, the 100-yard freestyle and diving.

but will be weak in the backstroke and the distance events.

According to Parks, the team has been swimming much longer distances in practice, and has been concentrating on strength and development through weight lifting, which should contribute to greater team speed especially later in the season.

"We have no choice but to work harder," Parks said. "Everyone else is doing the same thing so we have to pick it up to keep up."

Parks had a chance to size up her team this past weekend when the Spartans participated in the State of Michigan Relays, a "dry run" for all of the colleges in the state. No team championship was awarded and the emphasis was on finding out where the team stood as far as times were concerned.

In that meet, held at the University of Michigan, MSU took three second places and three third-place finishes out a total of 12 events. Outstanding performances were turned in by Jeannie Mickle and Kathy Kolon.

Mickle placed second in the diving competition, and in two different relays Kolon clocked a 1:09, which according to Parks, equals her championship time two years ago in the 100 yard breast stroke. Kolon is expected to be one of the strong points on this year's team, filling the void left by Melinda Whitecomb, last year's standout.

Park's first goal this year is to improve on last year's seventh-place finish in the Big Ten and improve the times of each of her swimmers.

"I would like to have each individual improve on her lifetime best in her event," Parks said. "If we can do this, it will help the whole team improve and gain us at least a runner up spot in the league and maybe nip at the heels of Michigan."

The meet against Western Michigan will be held in the Men's IM pool and will begin at 8 p.m.

Spikers given bid

The MSU volleyball team has received a bid to play in the Midwest AIAW Regional championship tournament this weekend in Carbondale, Ill.

The Spartans came in second in last week's State of Michigan championship tournament held at MSU. They were leading Central Michigan in the championship match, but the Chipewas came back to take the crown and received an automatic berth in the tourney with the victory.

Whether or not the Spartans would receive an invitation was up in the air after the final match, but the selection committee did pick MSU.

Purdue tie helped Buckeyes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — The smell of roses is a lot stronger around the Ohio State football camp than it was a week ago.

Ohio State still isn't in the driver's seat for the Big Ten's Rose Bowl berth by any means, but Saturday's developments made the trip to Pasadena a lot shorter for the Buckeyes. They needed help and they got it from Wisconsin.

Ohio State rolled over Illinois as expected, 45-7, to boost its conference record to 5-1, but the big news was Wisconsin's 24-24 tie with league-leading Purdue.

Now all that needs to happen is for Michigan to knock off Purdue next week and, if Ohio State can handle Indiana, the Buckeyes and Wolverines will play for the Rose Bowl berth Nov. 25 in Ohio Stadium.

The Buckeyes got a stiff first-half challenge from Coach Gary Moeller's Fighting Illini, but a 71 yard touchdown drive, which snapped a 7-7 tie in the closing seconds of the first half, took a lot of starch out of the visitors.

Freshman quarterback Art Schlichter did a masterful job on the march, completing four of five pass attempts and then running the final seven yards for the score, the second of his three touchdown runs.

Temps tempting at Long's

By REGINALD THOMAS
State News Reviewer

The Temptations appeared Sunday night at Long's and gave one of the best shows this reviewer has seen in a long time.

The group came out and performed some of their older tunes, while introducing the audience to two new tunes from their latest album Bare Back.

They smoothly ran through a medley of old tunes including "My Girl," "Get Ready," "Beauty's Only Skin Deep" and "Cloud Nine." But the true talents of the group did not come out until they performed "An Everready Love" and "Bare Back" off their newest album.

"An Everready Love" has the same mellow qualities that have characterized the Temptations' older tunes. The song was led by new member Glenn Leonard. Singing it, Leonard showed that he might not be a Paul Williams, David Ruffin or Eddie Kendricks, but he still can be a Tempt.

Leonard's performance seemed to be the bright spot until the newest Temptation, Lewis Price, gave his rendition of "A Song For You."

On this tune, Price displayed a great deal of showmanship. So much so that it soon became evident that Price is a ham. But the thing is, Price is a natural ham. And his overacting on the stage adds to his abilities.

Something that struck this reviewer about Price was the comparison of his voice with the Dramatics' L.J. Reynolds. Price sounds a lot like Reynolds did on "Me and Mrs."

Jones" off the Dramatics' Jackpot album. Price also has the emotion of former Tempt. Paul Williams.

Williams had the ability to make an audience cry, laugh and stomp its feet with the same tune — and Price does too.

The concert was well-performed and had all the traits that could send the Temptations on the road back to superstardom. They still have the ability to capture the hearts of the ladies as was demonstrated when Price sang "A Song For You."

But if the group does not receive any material that allows for the growth of each individual's talent, the group will merely fade away — a fate that such talented men should not suffer.

The only thing that hurt the performance was the lack of total involvement by Melvin Franklin. Franklin was singing but could not dance like the other members because he was recuperating from a shooting incident. Franklin had been shot numerous times when someone tried to steal his automobile a few months ago. On stage Sunday, he could be seen gritting his teeth as he tried to hide the pain.

Considering the talent that these men possess and all they have been through, it would be a shame for them to live only in the memory of thousands.

The Temptations, minus their old superstars like David Ruffin and Eddie Kendricks, nevertheless managed to excite the crowds at Long's Banquet Center Sunday night.

A casual passerby who happened to be in the vicinity of the music auditorium last Thursday evening, might have thought some very hot rock star was in town. The auditorium was packed to overflowing, with the kind of anticipatory excitement one associates with the mass hysteria of popular culture heroes.

However, it was nothing less than another recital by MSU's piano virtuoso, Ralph Votapek, displaying his versatility in a program that included a sampling of every period of the musical literature, from an early Padre Soler, to the Baroque of J. S. Bach, through Beethoven, the French Impressionists Debussy and Ravel, and the eccentric Russian composer Scriabin.

The excitement that Votapek generates rests ultimately in that combination of high musicianship and absolute control that allows the virtuoso to plunge in and take those musical chances that make the listener feel that he's witnessing a unique performance. Or, as Votapek's daughter Katherine put it — "he takes chances like a centerfielder playing a sinking line drive."

The wonder is, he always brings it off, as in the Two Sonatas of Padre Soler, in which Votapek not only transported the audience to the teeming rhythms and pulses of a Spanish street fair, but safely maneuvered the incredible left-over-right hand crossings which he himself described as "athletic" in their technical demands. It was almost like a high-wire act in which one misstep would be fatal, yet Votapek traversed the fine line with ease and grace.

However, virtuosity and daring were not most characteristic of Thursday evening's performance. Instead, it was the sense that the performer knew at all times just where he was going musically, and drew the listener into that pathway with him. The perfect clarity and articulation of notes always flowed into the greater musical line, while every phrase was directed toward the overall musical sense of the piece.

This quality shone through-out J. S. Bach's English Suite in G Minor. It was beautiful in its voicings, with Votapek maintaining a lovely singing tone in the right hand, while the secondary voices were perfectly balanced to provide just the proper contrast and counterpoint. The exuberant quality of his playing, and the lilting rhythms of this series of dance pieces on the keyboard, had the audience swaying and rocking in response.

In Beethoven's Sonata in E Flat Major, The Les Adieux, Votapek once again drew the listener into the message of this unique work, perhaps the only "programmatic" sonata in the literature. It tells the story of a dear friend who departs on a journey (Les Adieux), of his absence (L'absence), and of his joy upon his return (Le Retour). The lovely chameleon-like changes of mood and tonal color were evoked with sensitive understanding. Quiet passages were like a whisper of sorrow and longing, while the passionate passages burst with brilliance, suggesting the spark of horses' hooves on cobblestone.

The same kind of dramatic sensitivity handled contrasts enhanced Scriabin's Sonata #10 Op. 70, nicknamed the "Sonata of Trills". Votapek's magical trills are, of course, a trademark of his style. However, in this work, they became the essence of the piece rather than an ornamentation, creating the tension and release that characterized the work as much as the ever-recurring series of romantic climaxes of sound and harmony.

The concluding pieces, Debussy's L'Isle Joyeuse from Masques, and Ravel's La Valse, and the encore, Liz's Valse Oublie, maintained the quality of voicing, contrast, and singing melodic line of the rest; however, it is always in the brilliant endings that a Votapek audience is stirred to frenzy, and this was no exception. In fact La Valse was so vibrant in its swaying rhythms and rich, song-like melody, that the audience burst into applause between movements, then settled down to wait for the final conclusion, and an outburst of applause, hoots, whistles and cheers.

Perhaps MSU has produced a new popular culture hero after all.

MSU's hiring policy stresses affirmative action

By KYOWEN
State News Staff Writer

The new MSU faculty hiring policy stressing affirmative action is not causing separate University departments any real problems since many have already been working to meet affirmative action goals.

With the policy, which was implemented fall term, hiring units must establish affirmative action goals and college deans will be responsible for meeting those goals.

College deans recommend to the provost's office who will be aided after receiving input from departmental search and selection committees. Each separate college or unit hires its own faculty.

Instead of using just the single objective of excellence, deans should look for candidates who will help meet affirmative action goals. Jack Kinsinger, associate provost, said explaining the policy as "double objective."

The policy applies to tenure stream faculty, job security specialists, and librarians.

"We won't make any changes in the (hiring) procedure," Richard E. Sullivan, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, said. "It's not much different from what we've been doing."

Dean Richard U. Byerum said the College of Natural Science has had an affirmative action program for a number of years.

Erwin P. Bettinghaus, dean of the College of Communication Arts and Sciences, said "The only difference is that the new procedures are clearer and delineate who will have accountability. It will be easier to work with."

Robert F. Banks, dean of James Madison College, said, "Ninety percent of the policy has been operative for seven or eight years. It's not anything new."

Accountability of the dean is not a "formal change," Banks said, "but it's good to do it. I've always thought I've been accountable."

"I don't see much change in my mode of operation," he added. Richard J. Lewis, dean of the College of Business, said, "Affirmative action responsibility must lie with deans and departments. You can't do it from the top."

Having accountability lie close to where the hiring decisions are made is "very favorable," Lewis said.

Most deans agree that a problem in meeting affirmative action goals is the limited number of minority candidates for faculty positions.

One reason for the limited number of minority candidates, or low pools of candidates, is that there are not enough students in graduate programs and many departments have been trying to enroll more minorities into graduate school.

Lawrence Von Tersch, dean of the College of Engineering, said the pool of minority candidates is a "very serious problem."

"We subscribe to the principles of affirmative action, but there's not that kind of pool," Von Tersch said.

"We're working very hard at a solution," he said, "There are some real significant things we are doing."

Von Tersch said the College of Engineering is trying to increase the number of minority undergraduates to eventually have more graduate students.

"We will certainly make it (the pool) increase by extra efforts which will pay off in the future," Von Tersch said.

James Madison College has a different problem, Banks said, because the number of minority candidates varies between the 12 disciplinary areas in that college.

In history and writing there are a large number of minorities, but in political science, James Madison's largest area, there are very few, Banks said.

We can't do anything in that we are a wholly undergraduate program," Banks said. He added that increasing the number of graduate students is "not something we can deal with."

Banks said the college tries to attract minority candidates and advertises positions widely, but "can't do much."

The pool of minority candidates also varies in the College of Business, Lewis said.

The worst pool is in Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Management, Lewis said, because it is "such a specialized area; there are so few people anywhere."

In HRI, it is hard to find "just plain people," Lewis said.

Accounting and production management are other limited areas, Lewis said, because they are specialized areas with few people.

Lewis said the College of Business has done "pretty well" on meeting affirmative action goals in recent years.

When he became dean in 1974, Lewis said, there were no black faculty in the college. Since that time he has hired four blacks.

Lewis said his college looks to black universities in the South and urban areas for qualified minorities that might be interested in entering graduate school.

"We have got to increase the pool," Lewis said. "We can't just bid for a fixed number (of minorities)," he said. "We need to increase the supply side."

Keith Goldhammer, dean of the College of Education, said the pool is limited and "sometimes we don't have the basis for competing with other institutions for minority candidates."

"The problem is not easy, but the goal is important," he said. "We have to make adaptations to meet the goals."

Goldhammer said the College of Education is seeking minority candidates from places where there are larger pools to step up minority hiring.

Sullivan said there are not as many minority candidates in the College of Arts and Letters as "we would like."

"We're just pushing our efforts and circulating the word," Sullivan said.

"We've made some progress in hiring women," he said, "but we haven't done as well in minorities."

Bettinghaus said the College of Communication Arts and Sciences has done well in meeting minority hiring goals, but is not producing enough graduate students.

"Minorities are a fact of life," Bettinghaus said, "and it's more and more important to keep women and minorities."

'U' presidential choices uncovered

Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R-East Lansing, said he attended Sunday's meeting and received a list of all candidates considered to date, but would not comment on Norton and Christensen.

Radcliffe said he may have "heard the names" but did not know whether they were on the final list.

Trustee John Bruff, D-Fraser, who is also a member of the selection committee, said a final list has not yet been submitted to the board, but candidate interviews with the selection committee have ended.

Bruff said the committee was considering nominees Sunday.

Trustees elect Barbara Sawyer, D-Menominee, and Carol Lick, D-Portage, said they were sworn to secrecy at the meeting because the selection process is a personnel matter and "to protect the current positions of the candidates."

Bruff said trustees Raymond Krolikowski, D-Birmingham, and Donald Stevens, D-Bloomfield Hills, were the only board members not present Sunday.

Trustees Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing, Patricia Carrigan-Strickland, D-Farmington Hills, and Jack Stack, R-Alma, could not be reached for comment on Monday.

All members of the search and selection committee contacted Monday refused to comment on the candidacies of Norton and Christensen.
