ASMSU Student Board President Dan Jones resigned Tuesday night after a four-hour debate surrounding a bill to impeach him.

Jones is the first Student Board president to resign since the office has been a popularly-elected one.

After the Student Board voted in a secret ballot on the impeachment proposal, Jones announced his resignation.

The secret ballot vote by the board stood at six supporting the impeachment, nine rejecting the proposal and no abstentions.

The bill to impeach Jones, introduced at the last meeting by College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative Dan Stouffer, accused Jones of impropriety and displays of negligible leadership.

During the debate, College of Arts and Letters representative Julie Maki spoke in support of Jones, charging that most of the allegations were vague.

"Unless we can get some specific charges, you have nothing to hold him (Jones) to," she said.

Steve Politowicz, Programming Board chairperson, said he felt the president's job is so "broadly drawn" that it cannot be efficiently done.

Stouffer charged at Tuesday's meeting that Jones has not communicated with the board and had not ignited or inspired projects.

"Dan has not been an effective leader. He didn't know what he was getting into and hasn't fulfilled his leadership role," Stouffer told the board and an audience of about 40 people in Brody Hall.

In his resignation speech, Jones expressed disgust at what he called the board's lack of action regarding his proposed workshops designed to get the representatives to work more effectively.

"The Student Board has taken a distrustful and counterproductive position to most of my initiatives and projects," Jones said in his brief resignation speech.

He said he will retain his position on the Lecture Concert series advisory committee and will remain active in Lesbian/Gay Council.

Jones also said that he is willing to work on the student board revamping committee, which he initiated.

He said his ultimate goal will be to abolish the Student Board.

"There is no need for it," he said.

Before the secret ballot vote to remove Jones was cast and he announced his resignation, Jones answered the charges brought against him by Stouffer.

The bill to impeach Jones listed 13 specific violations Jones is accused of committing.

In an introductory statement, Jones said the charges were weak, so he could only defend himself generally.

"It would have been nice to know them (the charges) before now," Jones said.

Stouffer's bill claimed Jones has displayed a "negligible leadership role on the Student Board during his term of office."

Jones answered Stouffer's charge of "negligible leadership" with examples of how the board killed three attempts by Jones to hold workshops "to get the board working more effectively."

Jones also said the board killed a plan to improve safety in the Student Services Building, a project which was approved by the State News and the Council of Graduate students, which also share the third floor of the building.

"The point is I have taken a leadership role," Jones said. "All too often you do not pass or even act on the proposals I bring before you."

Stouffer's bill also included charges that Jones violated the ASMSU code by setting up an advisory committee without seeking approval of the project.

That action was in direct violation of ASMSU's Code of Operations, the bill stated.

Jones replied that he announced his plan to the board at the Nov. 7 meeting and asked the board for suggestions and had asked Stouffer if he wanted to be on the committee.

When Stouffer asked Jones why he did not utilize cabinet members and "other resources" for his advisory committee, Jones pointed out that three ASMSU board directors were members of it.

Stouffer's bill also charged Jones with failing to implement bills passed by the board.

Among those bills was a decision to oppose construction of the Dayton-Hudson mall and the Tisch, Headlee and Voucher tax proposals.

Jones responded to the charges by saying he had acted on or referred the matters to various committees.

He accused Stouffer of "negligible leadership" for not voting to support his own bill to oppose the Dayton-Hudson mall. Jones had to vote to break a tie to pass the bill.

Jones was also accused of intimidating the Student Board into voting his way. During the selection of acting president last June, Jones threatened to resign if the board did not select his proposed candidates.

Jones said he was upset at the time over the conflict with the board, but had soon after apologized for his behavior and said he had learned a lesson from it.

Jones told Stouffer that he had thought that the argument was "behind them" and that Stouffer would "hold no grudge" against him.

Earlier in the meeting, several students addressed the board during the members' privilege portion and urged the board not to remove Jones from office.

Though some speakers admitted that Jones may not be an effective leader, they also criticized the board for "playing" politics.

The audience, including many wearing clown-like costumes, masks and painted faces cheered when one student told the board the move to remove Jones "really sucks."

Council backs JMC, 'U' college proposal

By KY OWEN
State News Staff Writer

Proposals to dissolve University College and Justin Morrill College received a boost Tuesday as Academic Council expressed support of the plan.

Ralph Taggart, associate professor of botany and plant biology, introduced the motion recommending that the MSU Board of Trustees approve the proposed reorganizations. The motion was authored by Lester Manderscheid, professor of agricultural economics.

"In the end, we're facing the reality of reorganization," Taggart said. "We must assure that the excellence of general education continue to be fostered."

Henry Silverman, professor of American Thought and Language, said the quality of general education must not be degraded, adding that he "accepts the reality" of the reorganization.

"We (University College faculty) had no control over the reorganization," Silverman said. "We're trying to get some input."

Provost Clarence L. Winder said he will send the council's resolution to the Board of Trustees with his plan as background material when the trustees meet Dec. 8.

Winder's plan calls for the University College departments to be divided among existing colleges. Justin Morrill College will become a department jointly administered by the Colleges of Natural Science, Social Science and Arts and Letters.

Under Winder's plan, the American Thought and Language and Humanities departments would be transferred to the College of Arts and Letters, the Department of Natural Science would go to the College of Natural Science and the Department of social science would join with the College of Social Science.

The plan also recommends a "lower division" be formed to absorb academic advising for non-preference students, the no-preference major and the Learning Resources Center.

"I favor a lower division vehicle for accepting students with 85 credits or less," Winder said at Tuesday's meeting.

The resolution also calls for a lower division to be formed and recommends that a standing committee on general education be organized.

Zoltan Ferency, professor of criminal justice, said "a lot of people are afraid to discuss the central issue."

"I want to find out if board action on abolition of two esteemed colleges can be taken without consulting the rest of the academic community," Ferency said.

The council needed to consider the timing and manner of the reorganizing procedures, Ferency said.

Paul Hurrell, a professor in Justin Morrill College, said he had serious procedural reservations.

Moscone killing suspect charged

By LINDA DEUTSCH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Supervisor Dan White was charged Tuesday with the murders of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk under a law that provides for the death penalty.

District Attorney Joseph Freitas said at a news conference that the two-count complaint, filed in Municipal Court, specifies that the killings were "in retaliation for and to prevent the performance of the official duties" of the two officials.

Under a section of the California penal code that was approved Election Day as Proposition 7, the death penalty is permitted for the assassination of elected officials and for certain multiple murders.

Freitas said White, 32, would be arraigned Wednesday.

Moscone and Milk, the city's first avowed homosexual supervisor, were shot to death before noon Monday — Moscone in a conference of his office, Milk in White's old office. White surrendered to police 45 minutes later.

In addition to the two counts of murder, White was charged with possessing and using a firearm, a .38-caliber revolver, during the assassinations.

A colleague who visited White in prison said Tuesday that White was "a casualty of pressure" brought on by work, money problems and the birth of a baby.

The bodies of Moscone and Milk will lie in state Wednesday at City Hall. Moscone will be buried Thursday, and Milk is to be cremated Friday night.

The assassinations occurred a half-hour before Moscone was to name a successor to White on the Board of Supervisors.

White had resigned from the board on Nov. 10, saying he could not support his wife, Mary Ann, and his 4-month-old son, Andrew, on the $9,600 supervisor's salary plus the money he made from a fried potato concession on Fisherman's Wharf. He had earned $19,000 as a firefighter, a job he quit to serve on the board.

But after securing a $10,000 loan from his 18 brothers and sisters, White asked

Committee assignment may affect state bill enforcing alcohol law

A bill to enforce Michigan's 21-year-old drinking age law, slated for committee assignment Tuesday in the House is expected to be assigned during today's session.

The bill, which would implement a state referendum approved by Michigan voters Nov. 7 raising the legal drinking age to 21, provides mild penalties for young offenders caught consuming or purchasing liquor.

The bill's sponsor, state Rep. Perry Bullard said he introduced legislation Tuesday and filed it with the House clerk's office.

Assignment of the bill to a House committee—decision made by House Creek; and Civil Rights, chaired by Bullard. Bullard said he approached Crim about assigning the bill to the Civil Rights Committee.

Penalties the bill imposes on 18 through 20-year-old offenders start at a $25 fine for a first offense, $50 for a second, and $100 for a third. Second-time offenders also are placed in an alcohol treatment program.

The drinking age hike, approved by voters in the Nov. 7 election, goes into effect Dec. 22. No penalties for the law are on the books. The 19-year-old drinking age law, passed by the Legislature last year, will go into effect Sunday.

The Legislature is expected to adjourn until January within the next three weeks.

E.L. alcohol penalties to be milder than state's?

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

A bill to implement the 21-year-old drinking age won't prevent East Lansing from establishing milder penalties, an aide to state Rep. Perry Bullard said Tuesday.

Dan Sharp, an aide to the Ann Arbor Democrat, said the bill won't affect an ordinance being considered by the City Council.

Michigan voters approved a constitutional amendment Nov. 7 which raises the state's legal drinking age to 21, effective Dec. 22.

Under a proposed ordinance before the City Council, offenders would be issued appearance tickets and fined not more than $5 for a first offense, not more than $10 for a second, and not more than $100 for subsequent violations.

The city ordinance to decriminalize possession of alcohol was proposed by Councilmember Alan Fox the day after Michigan residents voted in favor of raising the legal drinking age to 21.

Fox said the penalties proposed in the state bill are too stiff. By insisting on milder penalties, the city may be able to influence the state or what legislation it finally enacts, he said.

Local governments would not be prevented from setting either harsher or lighter penalties unless such language is specifically written into a state bill. Sharp said. Language denying that option to local governments is not included in the state bill as currently written, he said.

The proposed city ordinance deals only with "possession" of alcohol, while the state bill focuses on "purchasing" and "consumption" as well.

"Consumption" was not addressed in the city ordinance because public drunkenness is already decriminalized on the state level and is considered a medical problem, Fox said.

However, Sharp said if a local ordinance doesn't include "consumption," persons consuming alcohol could come under a state statute.

Public drunkenness statutes and the state bill are not in conflict because the proposed legislation pertains only to people of a certain age group who drink rather than to everyone who drinks, he said.

A public hearing on East Lansing's proposed decriminalization ordinance has been set for 7:30 p.m. Dec. 5 in the East Lansing Public Library, 950 Abbott Road.

REPORT DOCUMENTS NICARAGUAN SALES

U.S. faces Cuban arms issue

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Tuesday it has taken up with the Cuban government a secret U.S. intelligence report that Cuba has been supplying arms and ammunition to leftist guerrillas in Nicaragua.

The report, a copy of which was made available to The Associated Press, was based on "generally reliable" informants in Panama and said the Cuban weapons shipments included .50-caliber machine guns.

Panama was described in the document as the conduit for shipments to the Sandinist guerrillas from Cuba as well as from Venezuela and Panama itself.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the arms shipments reports could not be confirmed but that the United States has raised the issue with Cuba and other countries believed to be weapons suppliers to the contending factions in Nicaragua. He did not name the other countries.

The intelligence document was based, in part, on reporting by an unidentified former Panamanian government official. He attributed his information to statements by Moises Torrijos, brother of the forceful Omar Torrijos, and by Abraham Saied, director of Panamanian social security.

At one point in the document, Omar Torrijos was reported to have met with a group of Sandinist guerrillas and "promised to back them in their fight."

The document also made reference to an "accounting" of arms in Panama which already had been or were to be provided to the Sandinists.

"The accounting listed arms under the heading of three countries: Panama, Venezuela and country 'C,'" the document said. "C" was generally assumed, but not known by those who worked on the accounting, to stand for Cuba. Among the arms listed under country 'C' were 'several' .50-caliber machine guns.

Direct Cuban involvement in Nicaragua could add a new ideological dimension to a dispute which erupted in civil war last September and has claimed an estimated 1,500 lives. The United States is trying to help negotiate a peace settlement.

Israel has been sending light arms to the Nicaraguan national guard but Somoza said recently the shipments were halted in August. Spokesperson Carter said Somoza's statement was supported by U.S. information.

The reports of Cuban involvement are almost certain to reinforce fears among some conservative members of Congress that the Sandinistas are attempting to convert Nicaragua into "another Cuba."

One informant, who requested anonymity, described the report of Cuban arms shipments as "terribly significant." He said it demonstrates a Cuban willingness to aid revolutionary movements at critical stages — a message, he said, which "certainly would not go unnoticed" by guerrilla groups elsewhere in Latin America.

Algerian president dying from rare disease

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A leading Swedish scientist has returned home after advising Algerian leaders that President Houari Boumedienne is dying of a rare disease the scientist discovered and nothing can be done to save him, diplomatic sources reported Tuesday.

The diplomats said Prof. Jan Waldenström told the Algerians if the 53-year-old president survives the next few days, his system will gradually deteriorate.

Boumedienne, who has dominated Algeria since his military coup 13 years ago, is suffering from Waldenström's disease, a malignancy of the lymph glands that results in disintegration of bone marrow, kidney failure and disintegration of the circulatory and digestive systems.

Although several members of the council are considered potential successors, there is no heir apparent. The front runners include Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika, 41, and Mohamed Salah Yahiaoui, 46, the administrator of the National Liberation Front, the only legal party.

Separatists kidnap Spanish official

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — As sailors saying they were Basque separatists kidnapped a government official here Tuesday in a new outbreak of terrorism in Spain's troubled Basque region.

After holding education ministry representative Jose Javier Crespo, 41, and his family prisoners in their home overnight, two masked men forced Crespo to leave with them in his own car just before daylight, a brother said.

A third kidnapper remained behind with Crespo's wife and three young children for more than five hours so they could not call police, then escaped himself, the brother, Pedro Crespo, said. At one point they told the family they were members of the Basque separatist organization ETA terrorizing Spain's Basque provinces, he said.

Police spread a hunt along the Spanish-French border but kept silent on details of the abduction, the latest separatist attack in a campaign to discourage voters from a national referendum Dec. 6 on a new Spanish constitution.

Two populated Filipino villages bombed

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Air Force planes tracking Moslem rebels dropped 14 bombs on two populated villages in the southern Philippines, killing 17 civilians and wounding 23 others, religious leaders reported Tuesday.

A Defense Department spokesperson said he had no information on the incident, which was first reported by a popular Filipino columnist in a pro-government daily.

The religious leaders said the bombings took place Nov. 14.

The two villages bombed were Malingao and Damatog in Midsayap town of North Cotabato province located 600 miles southeast of Manila on Mindanao island.

The island has been the scene of a six-year-old Moslem separatist rebellion waged by the Moro National Liberation Front.

American space probes near Venus

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fleet of six American space probes, with two Soviet craft close behind, is nearing Venus for the most ambitious study ever of the cloud-encapsulated planet.

Scientists and space agency officials said Tuesday that the spacecraft are less than five million miles out from Venus and working well, except for one experiment on one probe.

Studies of Venus may help humanity better understand the Earth's more complicated atmosphere, scientists say, and also tell if this planet has a chance of becoming as desolate as Venus appears to be.

The $225 million Pioneer Venus mission marks the first time American instruments will descend to the hostile Venusian surface, although three previous U.S. spacecraft flew by the planet. The Soviets have sent 10 unmanned crafts to Venus in the past, including eight that dropped landers.

Women fired 'improperly,' judge rules

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that the city of Boise improperly fired six female police employees last year after what he called an "abysmal" investigation into alleged lesbian activity.

The women, who have not denied they are lesbians, sued the city for $10 million, claiming that their constitutional rights of due process were violated and that the city broke its own civil service rules by denying them hearings.

U.S. District Court Judge Ray McNichols, in a partial judgment issued Monday, said he could not understand "a city the size of this (about 100,000 people) with the help it has available to it going through such an operation in 1977."

He did not order the women reinstated, but he ordered attorneys for both sides to prepare memoranda on damages and indicated arguments may be held next spring on the women's request for $10 million plus legal costs.

Large tanker leaks oil after hitting island

NEW YORK (UPI) — One of the largest tankers on the East Coast ran aground on a small rocky island in the East River Tuesday and began leaking thousands of gallons of light heating oil into the waters off the mayor's mansion, the Coast Guard reported.

James Fleishell, the Coast Guard's captain of the port, said the Cibra Philadelphia, carrying 160,000 barrels of No. 2 oil, hit Mill Rock, a small island, just before 1:30 a.m., tearing a hole in the tanker's No. 4 hold.

He said the accident occurred just south of Hell's Gate, where the East and Harlem Rivers converge, "one of the most dangerous points on the East Coast."

Fleishell estimated the tanker had leaked about 1,000 barrels, or about 40,000 gallons of oil, but a full determination of the leak could not be made because of darkness.

SOVIET BLOC NATIONS PULL OUT

Ambassadors Leave Romania

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Reports said the envoys of six Soviet Bloc nations were pulled out of Romania on Tuesday, but Yugoslav sources said the ambassadors of three — East Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia — went to a reception that evening in Bucharest.

Diplomatic sources said by telephone from the Romanian capital and in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, that ambassadors from the Soviet Union, Poland, Hungary, Bulgaria, East Germany and Czechoslovakia departed Bucharest by special planes Tuesday "for consultations."

The sources said the nations acted because of maverick Romanian leader Nicolae Ceausescu's opposition to increasing Warsaw Pact defense spending.

A government source in Warsaw denied the Polish ambassador had been recalled. The source said he went to Warsaw on Monday for a private visit and returned Tuesday.

Yugoslav Embassy sources in Bucharest said late Tuesday the three ambassadors attended a celebration of Yugoslavia's national day at the Athene Palace Hotel.

The Soviet envoy reportedly was attending a special Central Committee meeting in Moscow, and there were reports the Hungarian ambassador was in Budapest for a meeting of a Hungarian-Romanian trade commission. The Bulgarian ambassador was reported attending a government meeting in Sofia.

None of the reports could be confirmed in the official news media or through the foreign ministries of the countries. Government sources in the Romanian capital said the Soviet and Hungarian ambassadors had been away for several days.

Communist Party chief Ceausescu, 60, has angered Moscow before for his independent-minded foreign policy, but he runs a rigid Communist society at home.

Sources here saw the reported action as a response to Ceausescu's reported statement Monday that he rejected outside interference in his army and refused to raise the Warsaw Pact defense budget at a recent pact summit in Moscow.

The Belgrade sources said they believed the recall had been planned during the Moscow summit.

The Romanian news agency Agerpres quoted Ceausescu as telling applauding military and government leaders in the speech that the Warsaw Pact and NATO nations already had the means "to destroy the whole of mankind several times."

While withdrawal of an ambassador is a fairly normal procedure in the West, observers here said it was highly unusual in communist Eastern Europe. They added it was too early to assess the implications of the moves, but they said it undoubtedly indicated a new low in Soviet-Romanian relations.

Western diplomats speculated the recent Moscow summit had been designed to line up the seven Warsaw Pact countries for a possible confrontation with communist China.

Aged fall victim to sales tactics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's senior citizens are falling prey to unscrupulous insurance agents and buying millions of dollars worth of unneeded or worthless health insurance policies a year, a House committee was told Tuesday.

In some instances, the House Select Committee on Aging was told, companies give their salespeople tips in the art of scaring senior citizens into buying policies they don't need or that duplicate coverage they already have.

In one case described to the panel, a 76-year-old Illinois widow bought 71 policies for health, life and accident coverage in a nine-year period ending this year.

The woman's children, identified only as Wayne and Charlene, said their mother once bought five policies in a single day. The woman, with an annual income of $9,400, has bought 21 separate policies over the years from a single agent, they said.

As a result of her purchases, the woman, who has enjoyed good health all her life, was forced to remortgage the family farm that once was nearly debt-free.

The disclosures came as the committee held a hearing to reveal the results of a six-month investigation into how the nation's senior citizens fare at the hands of the health insurance industry.

The Health Insurance Association of America, an organization of more than 300 insurance firms, issued a statement saying that it condemns overselling of supplementary Medicare policies.

Association President Robert F. Froehke said there also have been "some instances of reverse rip-off against the insurance business because some people deliberately buy more policies than they need — some because they want to make money on them."

Cult involvement varies by status

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lower-class teenagers are less likely than their more affluent peers to get mixed up with religious or racial cults because these youths "can recognize a street hustle," a California psychiatrist says.

"Very few of the cults are able to recruit lower-class young adults, either black or white," concluded Margaret T. Singer, a professor of psychiatry at the University of California in San Francisco.

In an article in a recent edition of "Journal," published by the National Association of Private Psychiatric Hospitals, Singer asserted: "Lower-class youths in the United States, primarily, know there are no free dinners and no free meals. They can recognize a street hustle."

The report was written before the ritualistic mass suicide earlier this month involving more than 900 members of the People's Temple church commune at Jonestown, Guyana.

Singer said there are some 250 different cults and that the larger and more prominent ones use extremely sophisticated recruitment methods which are taught to their followers.

These methods include getting close enough to gaze into a person's eye to determine if the person is a warm, loving person who would be easy to recruit or one who would be hard to get.

"They begin their love-bombing of the new recruit from that point onward," she wrote. "Middle- and upper-class young adults have not had enough experience with street hustlers in growing up to know how artful deceivers on the street can operate."

The psychiatrist said she based her research on interviews with 250 young people with cult experience.

Panel hears testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark said Tuesday the Justice Department did not take control of the investigation of Martin Luther King's assassination because it would have worsened relations between him and J. Edgar Hoover.

He said that although there was a "quality of racism" in the late FBI director's attitude toward the civil rights leader, the FBI investigation of the killing was vigorous and thorough.

"The FBI's reputation was on the line," Clark said. "Failure to perform would have had profound impact on public confidence in the FBI."

Clark acknowledged that except for making suggestions and keeping himself informed, he gave the FBI a free hand in setting the direction of the investigation.

He testified before the House Assassinations Committee, which has criticized both the FBI and Justice Department, saying they failed to investigate adequately the possibility of a conspiracy in the April 4, 1968, assassination of King.

A committee report also has concluded there was inadequate Justice Department supervision of the investigation.

Committee investigators say they have turned up indications that the brothers of James Earl Ray may have played a part in the assassination.

Clark said that although the FBI investigated various conspiracy theories while he was in the Justice Department, "I don't recall any presentation of evidence that ever implied the direct involvement of another person."

Clark said while he had frequent disagreements with Hoover over various law enforcement issues, including the use of wiretaps, he does not believe the King investigation should have been handled any differently.

Project Find seeks to help young handicappers

By ANNE MARIE BIONDO
State News Staff Writer

Editors Note: This is the first in a three-part series examining the state's efforts to find handicapper children and provide services mandated by a federal law.

"The worst thing that can happen to a handicapped child is nothing."

With this in mind, about 125 dedicated special education experts across the state are looking for children with physical, mental or psychological handicaps to ensure that something does happen to them through an organized effort called Project Find.

Project Find was created in 1976 as a result of a federal law and is active in 58 intermediate school districts in Michigan.

In 1975 the federal government required that every state provide a "free and appropriate public education" to all handicapper individuals from 3 to 21 years old.

Overlapping the federal mandate is a Michigan law requiring local and intermediate school districts to make programs and services available in special education to all handicappers from birth to age 25.

Project Find is a component of the state Department of Education and is funded by the federal government through Title VI of Public Law 94-142.

Title VI is the branch of the public law that allows for funding of the project, explained Ruth Hayes, Title VI coordinator for Michigan.

Since the project began two years ago, Michigan received an average of $75,000 a year from the federal government, Hayes said, and expects some $100,000 this year for the project.

"Our purpose is to locate children with a handicap so evaluation can be done through the school district," explained Jennell Dennis, the state coordinator of Project Find.

Every state has a project actively looking for handicapper children who need special education and services, Dennis said.

Jan Wilson, director of the Macomb Intermediate School District for Project Find, said she believes that parents as well as children will benefit from the services.

"It's not only the baby who needs help," Wilson said, "but momma — before she leaves the hospital."

It is very common for parents of handicapper children to organize within their community, Wilson added.

"Parents begin social organizations in which they become advocates for their kids," she said.

Nels Bolluck, coordinator of Project Find efforts in the Ingham Intermediate School district, works with Edward W. Sparrow Hospital in Lansing to find handicapper infants.

Sparrow has one of 18 neonatal (early infancy) intensive care units in the state which closely monitors premature or low-weight infants.

Bullock belongs to a team of eight specialists who administer developmental and health examinations on the infants placed in the (continued on page 16)

Lansing may fund repair

Renovation of the Baptist Convention Home designated for use as a domestic abuse shelter may receive a contribution from Lansing in the near future.

Mayor Gerald W. Graves called for a resolution at Monday's City Council meeting accepting a $50,000 contribution General Motors Oldsmobile Division has offered the Council Against Domestic Abuse for the renovation project.

Graves proposed that the resolution earmark the $50,000 Oldsmobile contribution to a special fund for the renovation project.

The mayor's proposal is not necessary, First Ward Councilmember Robert Hull said, because the Ways and Means Committee is drafting a "comprehensive resolution" dealing with the financing of the renovation project.

Subsequently, Graves dropped his proposed resolution. He said committee members could then assume the responsibility of contacting officials from Oldsmobile.

The proposed resolution the committee is working on, Hull said, will put the $50,000 promised by Oldsmobile and the funds donated by the city — the exact amount is still undetermined — into one pot.

Putting the money in one pot will "accomplish renovation in one steady stream," Hull said.

The resolution will also provide for a five-year lease to CADA for the city-owned Baptist Convention Home.

For the first three years of the lease, Hull said, CADA will pay $15,000 a year in rent. The last two years of the lease, Hull said, CADA will reimburse the city for $1 a year.

Plans for refurbishing the building were stalled after disagreement between City Council and the Office of the Mayor over the zoning designation of the convention home.

The multiple dwelling rezoning of the convention home has since been completed. The way now seems to be clear for the city to negotiate final funding allocations for the renovation project.

Committee hears of housing needs

By MARCIA BRADFORD
State News Staff Writer

Projected student enrollments at MSU do not show a need for more student housing in East Lansing, a private developer said Monday night.

James Dunn, a private land developer, told the East Lansing Housing Advisory Committee that the need for student housing has reached a peak and will decrease in the next 10 years.

The committee is gathering information on housing problems and needs in order to advise the Planning Commission, which is in the process of revising the city's Comprehensive Plan.

Nathan Hammond, a landlord with Navco Management, Inc., agreed it would be economically unwise to build more student housing in East Lansing.

He said demographic studies show that student enrollment at MSU is expected to remain the same but more students will commute and attend classes part time.

This will result in a decrease in the need for on-campus housing and student housing in the five-block radius of MSU, Hammond said.

Lansing man dies in crash

A two-car collision on Saginaw Street in East Lansing Monday night left one man dead and seven others injured.

Richard G. Albers, 21, of Lansing, was pronounced dead on arrival at Edward G. Sparrow Hospital at 11:21 p.m.

East Lansing police said Carlos Trevino, 27, of Lansing, was driving westbound on Saginaw Street when he struck a street curb and lost control of the car.

The Trevino vehicle spun into the opposite lane, police said, and was struck full force on the passenger side by a car driven by Royce Stephens, 25, of Saginaw. Albers was riding in the front seat on the passenger side of the Trevino car, police said.

Stephens and four passengers were treated and released from the hospital, police said. Trevino and one of his passengers were also treated and released from the hospital.

Police are investigating the accident.

Peace rally

An Arab-Israeli peace rally will be held today at noon in the Tower Room of the Union Building.

A mock Nobel Peace Prize ceremony will be held during the rally.

Dov Shefi, head of the public law division for the state of Israel, will also speak at 8 p.m. in 109 S. Kedzie Hall on Arab-Israeli cooperation in the West Bank and Gaza areas.

A peace party will follow the speech at 9:30 p.m. in 338 Union Building. Refreshments will be served.

He also predicted the University will convert some residence halls to offices in the next 10 years.

Hammond said housing in the center of East Lansing is already being used in the best way.

"There is a small group of people that seeks out the small, overloaded house," he said. "These are already rented (for fall) by the first of April and they should not be eliminated, but do need to be cleaned up."

Frances Mercer of First State Savings Association, East Lansing, said banks and savings and loans associations preferred to make loans to families and said any student housing built now would be determined a high risk.

He said rental properties deteriorate faster than single family dwellings and banks prefer to lend to permanent residents.

Both Dunn and Hammond suggested that a new zoning code allow for more flexibility to provide for different kinds of housing in the future.

Underground parking and additional ramps in East Lansing were mentioned as possible solutions to city parking problems.

Hammond said parking ramps were expensive to maintain because they become structurally unsound rapidly. He said surface parking was still the more practical method, and was preferable because the land is still convertible.

Cathy Gibson, president of the Student Housing Corporation, the umbrella organization for nine area cooperatives, said the parking requirements for co-ops should be changed.

She said three spaces are required for every four persons living in cooperatives, and this amount is not needed in the co-ops close to campus.

She said the corporation is looking into buying some larger houses and apartment buildings in East Lansing. The possibility of cooperatives on campus was also discussed.

Gibson said the co-ops are working to meet the increasing demand for single occupancy rooms.

Bill introduced for fee refund

LANSING (UPI) — Legislation was introduced in the state Senate Tuesday to refund increased license plate fees if a petition drive to put the issue before state voters is successful.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. Patrick McCollough, D-Deerborn, would return to early license plate buyers the amount of the increase, which averages 30 percent.

The bill would prevent those early buyers from being penalized should a petition drive gather enough signatures to put the increase up for a public vote.

The hike in license plate fees was included in the tax plan for Michigan's proposed statewide transportation plan.

Also included in that package was a 2-cent-per-gallon hike in the gas tax. That, too, would be halted if the petition drive is successful in gathering the needed signatures for a public referendum in 1980.

Media groups' budget approved by SMAB

By SANDY HOLT
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU's Student Media Appropriations Board allocated $42,000 for alternative media groups on campus when the 1979 budget was approved at its meeting Monday.

SMAB funds alternative printed media for undergraduate groups and acts as a Programming Board for graduate groups by funding general media functions.

Registered student organizations or units of ASMSU and COGS may request funds from SMAB.

The Council of Graduate Students received only $1,750 of the requested $4,602 for publication of an updated graduate student handbook.

COGS treasurer Linda Smith had expressed doubt that SMAB would fund enough money for the handbook, even though she said COGS expects to collect about $14,000 for SMAB with a refundable 50-cent student tax at registration.

Minutes from the SMAB meeting said funds for the handbook were rejected because the "cost of publication almost quadrupled in one year and distribution costs are believed to be too high."

Resident Hall Association received no funds, after requesting $10,500 for publication of Rhapport, the association's newspaper.

Rhapport received $11,800 from SMAB during the 1977-8 fiscal year.

SMAB chairperson Joe Murphy said since RHA is not funding Rhapport, which is designed to be a newsletter specifically reporting on RHA, the request was turned down. Rhapport was also said to duplicate information found in residence hall newsletters and the State News.

ASMSU Media Relations received none of its $2,000 request. Its planned "Calendar of Services" was said to be a duplication of services available through the Lansing Star Handbook.

A Hospitality Press Magazine, providing academic and career information for Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Management students, and Agriculture Communication of Tomorrow, received the total amount of their request, $1,500 and $2,100 respectively.

To qualify for SMAB funds, groups must offer an alternative media function to a certain number of students that is being neglected by existing groups or sources and has plans for self-sufficiency if possible.

Carter opted for guns over butter

Guns or butter? That question has plagued political leaders for decades. Should America spend its money on weaponry or for social programs?

Traditionally, the "conservatives" have opted for guns; the "liberals", Lyndon Johnson, thinking he could have both, escalated American involvement in Vietnam while stepping up social programs on the home front. He failed in both, leading leaders to believe there must be a tradeoff.

Jimmy Carter has acquired the same problem, guns or butter. But for him, there is no tradeoff. He has no choice.

Carter has promised to check the national debt. To do this, he must cut back on federal programs. Ordinarily, there would be a tradeoff between the military and the social services. But for Jimmy Carter, there can be no tradeoff.

Carter, in his quest to be leader of the supreme military power, locked himself into an agreement with the NATO nations that if they increased their NATO military spending, the United States would also increase its allotment to the NATO forces. The NATO countries are increasing their spending because they are near the world's hot spots, and they believe a strong defense is necessary to their survival.

But the United States, thousand of miles away, must continue pumping money overseas to protect "democracy," and by some twisted logic, America. To let just one country fall, Carter believes, would spell the end of the United States. He fears we would be blown off the face of the earth by nuclear weapons.

So military spending, the basic "conservative" response, continues under the "liberal" Jimmy Carter.

How does it all fit into the larger scheme of things? It means Carter must cut back on domestic spending, such as welfare and employment programs. While some Carter administration officials claim they can cut the fat off and leave the basic services intact, they have already shown their inability to do that. They have been unable to trim the fat off military spending. They have been only marginally successful in trimming the General Services Administration, while waste continues to occur. Rather than eliminating the waste in the Commerce Department, they are proposing its structural elimination. They will blend its duties into other departments, where the same waste exists.

The pattern is clear. Carter will not cut waste and abuses in social programs. He will cut programs. This will affect the public, but it will not affect Carter's overall program.

Carter has already made inflation his priority problem; this is usually the "conservative" priority. While inflation is reaching extremely high levels, unemployment is still too high. "Liberals" would usually pursue the employment problem, even through government spending if necessary. But Carter, by having to cut domestic spending, cannot give those employment programs a chance to work. He is displaying conservative tendencies never expected of a Democrat.

Either Carter has his priorities mixed up, or the voters were deceived when Carter ran on the Democratic ticket. But either way, we are rapidly discovering that military spending will increase at the expense of domestic programs, regardless of what was said in 1976.

Not if, but when?

It is hard to believe that a news event to rival the shocking suicide-murders of Jonestown, Guyana could come so quickly, but indeed it has. The murders Monday of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and City Supervisor Harvey Milk pale compared to the sheer volume of lives lost in Guyana, but the impact and shock is certainly as great.

Political assassinations are not new in America, especially to the generation of students attending MSU, but the senselessness and shock of them does not diminish. Each one is simply an added reminder of the inherent violence prevalent in this country.

While it is still too early to speculate on why the murders occurred, there can be little doubt that hatred must have had at least a partial hand in the most recent killings. It was hatred that brought down President John F. Kennedy, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Robert F. Kennedy and U.S. Rep. Leo J. Ryan, among others.

Foreign countries have recently commented on the Guyana tragedy, saying that it is only a further indication of the decaying American society. Former President Richard M. Nixon said in Paris only a few days ago that foreign nations were wrong in drawing conclusions about Americans based on the Jonestown events. What will he tell them today?

Maybe the foreign assessments are better than our own. After all, they are on the outside looking in. As a country we keep saying these are isolated events committed by demented individuals. But who really knows anymore?

It is trite and hopeless to point out that hatred has no place in our society. For in fact, hate is dominating our society. And America, as the foreign nations have pointed out, is in an advanced state of moral decay.

So actually, it is relatively unimportant why one person took the lives of Moscone and Milk. The unalterable fact is the two are forever gone. And it is not a question of whether there will be another violent tragedy such as those in recent weeks, but when?

So while we all struggle through finals, grades and graduation wondering where we will eventually fit into our society, will anyone stop to consider that very soon there may be no society worth fitting into? That, indeed, is the biggest tragedy of all.

BRUCE GUTHRIE

Advertising keeps us reeling

They lurk wherever I look; advertisements.

A K-Mart ad is headlined with the word "bombshells" and the letter "b" is exploding. Creative. The Red Cross blood drive ad features Count Dracula who "sez," "Take my advice and donate blood. I did." Inspiring. Insulting, isn't it? But advertising sells. And that's the purpose, isn't it? To sell.

Ask advertisers whether their trade manipulates demand and listen for the answer. Advertisers don't like the word "manipulate." They say lawyers manipulate, advertisers "communicate." "Manipulation" implies deceit and no self-respecting advertiser admits deception exists in their trade.

Yet advertising is both manipulative and deceptive and no advertiser would be paid if it wasn't.

A woman prepares a cook-out. Her man told her to prepare enough food for dozens of people but the man and the woman are alone in the forest. The woman whines (of course). The man soothes her (of course), opens a can of beer, and hordes of people appear out of nowhere.

Lonely? Open a can of beer.

A teacher — female — tells us that her class never got along with her because she didn't smile enough. She was afraid to show her "dingy" teeth. Then she discovered a brand of toothpaste which white-washes her teeth and makes her smile. Her students now love her and say "good morning."

A bad teacher? Try a new toothpaste.

A foreign stud tells you why he bought his sports car. While he speaks in another language, you know that he likes the comfort, handling, the gasoline efficiency, the speed. Is that all that he likes about it? He laughs as he climbs in his silver phallic symbol with a luscious female who, not knowing the man from Adam, just decided to climb into the car.

Need an exciting sex life? Buy a car.

Think you're doing OK in life? Oh, come on! Surely you don't mean to tell me that your sex life is perfect, that your body smells clean (or, if already clean, "manly" or "feminine"), that your skin is clear and soft, that your dishes shine, that you have enough friends, that your dog is happy, that they stare and admire you on the street? Of course something's wrong with you, buddy. You ain't god.

Having problems? They're not character flaws, kid, you just haven't bought the right thing for them yet.

Advertising tells us that we're deficient in a million (now) important ways. It makes us feel as secure as turkeys at Thanksgiving time. And, after this message sinks in, advertising tells us that a specific product can make us perfect again. For awhile.

Deception. Telling us that things are important when they aren't. Telling us that we're lonely is we don't have a million Dr. Pepper people singing beside us. Telling women that they have special smells which are offensive. Telling us that there's a difference between brands of bleach. Telling us that our romance is losing its flame if we don't eat out enough.

Manipulation. Telling us that all our problems will make us lonely or poor unless we buy the specified cure. Toothpaste, a car, lipstick, sunglasses, a stereo, McDonald's.

Why would anyone be a part of advertising? It pays well. And money always compensates for slightly shaky actions.

The government knows this deception and manipulation goes on. When told that cigarette advertising deceives people into thinking that by not smoking they aren't as good as they could be, and thus manipulates the demand for cigarettes upward, the government believes it and bans cigarette advertising in certain media.

Yet they don't ban it all. They can't. For one thing, elected members of government won their seats through a hefty advertising ("campaign") budget and they know outlying ads would cost them their jobs. For another thing, the government knows that advertising keeps the economic system flourishing and maintains stability in society.

By manipulating demand, people have to buy more products to feel secure in themselves. And for this they need more money, which means they need to work more, filling those obnoxious jobs that no self-respecting person would take otherwise. And the capitalists who buy the ads increase both sales and production.

By deceiving people, advertising takes people's minds off the real causes of their problems. Workers are alienated from themselves and others because they've lost any value in their lives by working for someone else instead of themselves. But they're told they're upset for another reason: they haven't bought the right product to make them feel better. The woman is going to feel she isn't being respected, not because she exists in an insecure society where men oppress women in order to feel secure, but because she's not shaving her legs or buying the right tampons and cosmetics. And deceived, they do nothing to relieve the real sources of their problems.

Our capitalist world continues to turn. And the advertising departments at the universities leak another batch of graduates into our lives.

And we pay them.
And buy another brand of toothpaste.

VIEWPOINT: MIDEAST PEACE

Class divisions will be accentuated

By the ORGANIZATION of ARAB STUDENTS

Advocates of peace, Camp David-style, have long argued that the worsening economic conditions in Egypt are to be blamed on national commitments to liberate occupied Arab lands. They assert that reduced military spending and foreign capital investment, as well as technology transfer, will provide the miraculous cure for Egypt's economic ills. Whether such predictions are true or are designed to deceive the suffering masses provides an important basis to judge the quality of peace promoted by the Carter-Sadat-Begin agreements. Sadat's open door economic policies which have been in effect since the end of the October war provide the real indication for the kind of prosperity such policies can produce.

Despite the vast sums of money flowing into Egypt in the form of subsidies from Saudi Arabia and other Arab oil producing states, as well as U.S. aid, the country is mired in a desperate economic situation. "Opening the door" has only resulted in a sharp increase in the gap between the impoverished masses and a growing elite referred to as the "fat cats." While Sadat has raised the slogan of tightening the belts, his regime extended financial benefits and nourished a new parasitic class which thrived at the expense of the working people. At a time when it refused to give workers 25 percent of the profits and to raise the minimum wages, the regime reduced taxes on consumer luxury items and embarked on projects such as the introduction of color television. The government raised rents on agricultural lands and reversed several laws that were designed to protect the most productive element of the Egyptian economy, the peasants. Foreign and Arab investments were channeled mainly into the service sector with emphasis on tourism, banking, export-import business, etc. This led to an unbearable rate of inflation. The government, in its attempts to satisfy some of the conditions imposed by foreign investors and stated by former American Secretary of the Treasury, Simons, decided to reduce its subsidies to essential food items. It is this decision that sparked the 1977 food uprisings. The true face of Sadat's regime was unveiled in January of that year when hundreds of Egyptians were arrested or fell to the guns of Sadat's police. The Egyptian treasury moves closer to bankruptcy day by day. At the beginning of 1977 Egyptian debts totalled a record $12.2 billion. The current account trade deficit stands at $7.1 billion, an increase from the $241 million deficit in 1964.

Even if Sadat receives what he referred to as a "transfusion" to the Egyptian economy from large-scale investments, the Egyptian economy will certainly not be revived. Such policies will allow international capital, including Israeli capital, to control Egyptian resources and impose its conditions on the Egyptian economy in favor of a few and at the expense of the majority. The Egyptian people, including the middle class, should expect continued rise in prices, shortage of housing, unemployment, increased political repression, and social turmoil.

In judging the potential of economic development through foreign aid, it is important to give a few examples of the quality of foreign aid to Egypt. Newsweek recently reported on the dumping of high tar cigarettes by the American tobacco industry, which is capitalizing on a lucrative market in Egypt without any regard to health hazard guidelines enforced in the U.S. The U.S. government's payment for the shipment of hundreds of tons of pesticides, so poisonous that they are banned in the U.S., provides an example of the blatant disregard for the health of the Egyptian peasants. These pesticides included leptophos, which attacks the nervous system and which has caused Egyptian villagers to suffer from convulsions, speech impairment, loss of bladder control, and mental defects. High pollutant buses and other health hazard products, all unacceptable by U.S. standards, have been shipped to Egypt as "gifts to the Egyptian people." High-level Egyptian officials who receive large kickbacks from U.S. corporations (e.g. Westinghouse and Boeing) are the true beneficiaries of foreign aid.

The ramifications of Sadat's economic policies for the isolation of the Egyptian people from the inseparable struggle of the rest of the Arab masses is also evident. Commenting on Sadat's economic policies in a New York Times interview, David Rockefeller claimed that socialism and Arab nationalism have not helped the Egyptian people and that Sadat has to look to private enterprise. He stated that Israeli leaders agree with him on this point. It is not surprising that the corporate and Zionist interests identify socialism and Arab nationalism as negative elements. Nor is it surprising that Arab reactionary leaders, including Sadat, support this judgment.

The Egyptian people, who shattered the myth of Israel's invincibility in the October War, will continue their struggle to defeat the Zionist-imperialist-Arab reactionary strategy to continue their control of their resources and to exploit them. Sadat and his opportunistic Egyptian supporters will soon face the wrath of the Egyptian people who will continue their struggle against his corrupt, undemocratic rule. They will never accept Sadat's sellout of the Arab cause. Like the Iranian people who were robbed of their immense wealth under the guise of the shah's "liberalizations," the Egyptians are not deceived by false promises of prosperity of Sadat's open door economic policies or by capitulation policies disguised in the garb of peace.

Yesterday's and today's mid-east viewpoints were written by the OAS in conjunction with the Egyptian Supporters of the Democratic Egyptian Movement

How did you vote on these?

no more than 50 tacks on carpeting. Naturally, this law is expected to be "attacked" in the courts. (one good point of this law is that people may now legally tear off the "Do Not Remove This Tag" tag from their mattresses.)

Proposal VD — this new state law, already passed in many other states, says that all residents are now legally required to "flush with their foot" in public restrooms to prevent the spread of communicable diseases.

DOA Amendment — this new amendment repeals the old state law that required all motorcycle drivers to wear helmets. It does, however, require that all motorcycles now carry portable coffins because of the repeal of the old law.

AA Amendment — sponsored by local Congressman Jack Daniels, this law changes the amount of alcohol registered in a driver's bloodstream to be considered "drunk" at .5 percent you're considered "intoxicated" and can be charged with "impaired driving;" at 1.0 percent you're legally "drunk;" and at 26.4 percent you're legally "embalmed."

UM Amendment — this law was enacted due to the celebrated case of Bronco "Meatgrinder" Shapinski. Bronco, a guard on the U-M football team, was penalized 15 yards for holding against Illinois. Being a pre-law student, Bronco took the case all the way to the Supreme Court and won because the referee had glaucoma at the time. "Holding" is now legal pending an appeal by the NCAA.

Proposal PM — in order to help alleviate the energy crisis, this law passed overwhelmingly by Michigan voters will allow the Detroit Tigers to play the second game of their doubleheaders first, thus eliminating the need to use the stadium lights at dusk.

Proposal RO — an East Lansing ordinance, this law raises the fines for parking tickets on the MSU campus from $5 to $10 because several DPS officers' daughters need braces and the chief needs a new engine on his motorboat.

Commandments 1-10 — rejected overwhelmingly by Michigan voters as being "impossible to enforce" and "no fun at all." A higher Authority may overturn this one, however.

Proposition 13 — by definition, this is when a "Lady of the Evening" should call it quits.

The other side of Crawford

MOMMIE DEAREST
By Christina Crawford
Morrow and Company, Inc.
$9.95

Reviewed By
BILL HOLDSHIP

In her 1955 film Queen Bee, Joan Crawford portrayed a character described in a New York Times review as "... the height of malicious meanness and frank insincerity. When she is killed at the end, as she should be, it is a genuine pleasure and relief." Christina, the eldest of Crawford's four adopted children, writes in Mommie Dearest that the role "wasn't any acting job on Mother's part. It was exactly the way I knew her at home when she'd been drinking and was at her very worst. The woman on the screen was really my mother."

Christina's biography may also remind readers of the memorable telephone scene from one of Crawford's last great films, Whatever Happened to Baby Jane? In this particular scene, the drunken, malicious Jane (Bette Davis) perfectly impersonates her sweet, glamorous, movie idol sister, Blanche (Crawford), who is really upstairs, bound and gagged in her bed. The scene is an ironic metaphor for the Joan Crawford split-personality Christina depicts. One side was the sweet, glamorous movie queen worshipped by millions. The other was a drunken, malicious monster/mother who actually bound her children to their beds ("so they wouldn't get up without permission") and tied them to the shower for punishment.

The author draws a portrait of a person so obsessed with her own stardom that virtually everything is done with her public image in mind. Christina hints that, aside from being alone following her divorce from Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Crawford's main motive behind adopting children was slick media manipulation. At the time, columnists everywhere were exclaiming, "What a wonderful woman to take four orphans into her home!" She elaborates on the numerous mother-daughter fan magazine photo sessions and the fantasy-like radio interviews, both of which stand in bitter contrast to the regular vodka-intoxicated "night raids" or the brutal beatings that often left the children bruised and battered. During one such instance, Christina claims her mother would have strangled her if a secretary hadn't intervened. The sad part is the punishments she received generally resulted from what is considered normal in most childhoods. Mommie Dearest reveals some of the little-known, seamer aspects of the star's life, including her alcoholism, her lesbian tendencies, her Howard Hughes-like obsession with cleanliness, and the conflicts with her numerous lovers. (There was often a new lover every other week, and the children were required to call each of them "Uncle.") The reader is offered glimpses of Crawford's unfulfilled relationship with her own mother which helps explain some of her abuses as a parent. (Crawford refuses to go to her mother's death bed, even when she learns that it's the woman's last request.) But what is portrayed most vividly in the book is a mother who uses her children as prisoner-like scapegoats to cope with the pressure and strain of her stardom and love life.

The abuse continued on an emotional level until the end of Crawford's life. In later years, she became jealous of her daughter's youth and budding acting career to the point of paranoia. In one example, when a teenaged Christina gives a "goodbye" kiss to Alfred Steele — Crawford's fourth and final husband and the closest person to a father the children ever knew — she is slapped by her intoxicated mother who exclaims: "I got my man and you damn well go out and get your own!"

Mommie Dearest isn't quite as decadent as Kenneth Anger's brilliant Hollywood Babylon, nor does Christina Crawford display the flair for writing that Brooke Hayward revealed in Haywire. Nonetheless, it is fascinating reading for those interested in the reality behind Hollywood's fantasy machine. Christina has recently been accused of writing the book for "revenge," as she was excluded from her mother's will. (With the movie rights recently sold and Anne Bancroft cast in the Crawford role, she has little to worry about financially.) Still, despite her bitterness, she is often fair, revealing several touching moments and a belief that her mother loved her in her own sick way. Even after the horror, the reader feels sympathy at the book's conclusion — not only for the daughter, but also for a woman driven insane by her own fairy tale visions of stardom.

King's 'Stand' a lengthy one

THE STAND
By Stephen King
Doubleday
$12.95

Reviewed by DANIEL HILBERT

With the publication of three bestsellers in a row, Carrie, Salem's Lot and The Shining, Stephen King has become the occult king of the book stand, the Mario Puzo of books that go bump in the night.

Carrie was of course made into a very successful film, though the book, as it stands, is far from fantastic. The pseudo-journalistic style that King used to narrate that tale produced a few shivers, but they were detached and isolated, and the time between them seemed endless.

Salem's Lot is King's best book to date. This modern-day vampire tale dispensed with most of the technical problems that haunted Carrie, and just told a good, concise, frightening story.

The Shining, King's last novel, is much more verbose than either of his first two. The longest of the three it perhaps should have been the shortest. It also has its moments, and the concluding hundred pages can't be beat.

Which leads us to King's new book, The Stand, which at 823 pages seems very much the story Stephen just dug out of his desk drawer after 10 years of hibernation. After the success of his previous three novels, he dusts this one off, throws in a few popular rock lyrics as epigrams and has it published. Instant bestseller. Unfortunately, somewhere along the way someone forgot to edit this book — and that stands as its major problem.

The first 300 pages of this book chronicle the many journeys being made by the survivors of a holocaust that rips the nation. It is fragmented in a way that only the international/spy story can be and succeed, i.e., the books of Robert Ludlum. A book dealing in King's genre cannot easily alternate chapters on many different characters and successfully pull it off. This is a perfect example of such an attempt at that and, unfortunately, a failure.

Those first few hundred pages are incredibly hard to read, primarily because it takes an absolute unshakable faith in King and his writing ability to even plow through them. The reader has to keep thinking, "This is all going to come together eventually." The problem is: the man you are depending on to lead you through this mess is also the man who inflicted it on you in the first place. Definitely a problem.

Suffice to say, had the first 300 pages been edited down to a 30-page introduction, putting the basic story of The Stand in context, the book would have made much more sense and been much more interesting reading. Perhaps it would have been a joy rather than a chore — once the lengthy prologue is dispensed with, if the reader can make it that far, the story gets interesting. When King gets back to the familiar ground that he has dealt with before, his true abilities show through. The forces of good and evil and the supernatural finally come into play and for a few hundred pages the book really works. The chills come in close proximity and the characters become interesting. But then, before you've had time to savor the good part, the conclusion comes.

It is a traditional taboo never to reveal the ending of a novel, especially the ending of a book like this. For supposedly the ending should bring everything together in one whirlwind of horror. If ever a book deserved to have its ending revealed it is this one, but alas... King, at the end of this book, seems to have exhausted himself by typing all of those pages and simply seems to quit writing and wallow in the cliché. Again, a definite problem.

This book is set in the future, 1980, but all of the popular references are to items or people that exist now, i.e., Neil Diamond, The Hulk, Kojak, which is very disconcerting. It creates time problems and makes it hard to accept this as a tale of the future, while knowing it isn't a tale of the present.

The book is interesting, but should be packaged with a later asking the buyer to only read the middle section of the novel. Unfortunately it won't be; perhaps it's about time we readers took a stand.

Record prices zooming up again

JOHN NEILSON
State News Staff Writer

In what has almost become a new Christmas tradition, the price we are being asked to pay for new record albums has gone up — again. Several major record manufacturers have raised the list price for selected new LPs to $8.98 — signalling a forthcoming across-the-board rise in album prices — and as usual, nobody seems to have noticed.

"People don't look at the price — they look at the product." And the product — Steve Martin, Billy Joel, the Doors, Chicago, Wings, Santana, Boston, and Earth, Wind & Fire, for example — consists of superstars that people will probably support regardless of price.

At least that's the opinion of several East Lansing record retailers, who have been forced to pass along increased wholesale costs to the record-buying public. Even at the Disc Shop, where they are recommending that customers avoid the new discs, people are reportedly buying the more expensive albums without comment.

"They don't notice right away," remarked employee Bill Warren, noting that the $8.98 records are being sold there for $5.49 retail. "We've got notes on most of them urging people to think before they buy them," he said adding that the new price is an experiment of sorts by the record companies to see if anyone will complain.

So far, he said, there have been relatively few complaints, and at State Discount, where the retail price is $4.99, the situation is the same.

"I've noticed it," echoed Dane [Name], where the retail price has jumped from $5.99 to $6.99 with the list price increase. So far, though, they have not had to face the problem too much, he said, because they had ample stock of $7.98 list LPs to sell before putting the newer stock in the racks. "The new Heart album isn't selling as well since we put out the more expensive stock," he said, but pointed out at the same time that the new $8.98 Barbra Streisand LP was "going like hotcakes."

"It's still a helluva deal," explained Rick Campbell of Where House Records when asked about the low number of customer complaints.

He then went on to say that records, even with the price hike, still make more sense than spending $10-12 for a two-hour concert.

"Besides, unless you shop in Nowhereville, Michigan, you're not going to actually pay that much," Campbell pointed out. East Lansing is a highly competitive album market, he continued, adding that Where House Records has not yet established a standard price for the $8.98 list albums.

"Anyway, people don't look at the price," he said, "they look at the product." And the product — Steve Martin, Billy Joel, the Doors, Chicago, Wings, Santana, Boston, and Earth, Wind & Fire, for example — consists of superstars that people will probably support regardless of price. Or, as the Disc Shop's Bill Warren put it, "They always seem to inflate the blockbusters first."

Why are the prices going up? According to Campbell, much of the blame goes to that old demon, inflation.

"People who buy records don't realize what goes into them," he said, noting that the actual vinyl and cardboard you hold in your hand probably costs less than $1. Between the artist and the customer, he pointed out, are countless intermediaries — in promotions, advertising, manufacturing, executive jobs, and the like — whose salaries come from record sales. And salaries in the record industry, as in every other industry, are constantly going up.

On the other hand, however, so are the rewards. The recording industry is currently reaping record profits, and there seems to be no end in sight. Album buyers are a captive audience — can you imagine NOT buying the next LP your favorite artist puts out? — and it's an audience that has been steadily growing with each passing year. When one of the major record companies reports in the trade magazines that its profits have gone up again, these are the people whose pockets the money came from.

Perhaps Dave Marsh is right when he states in the most recent Rolling Stone that "record prices increase because the manufacturers have not yet found the price at which the market will rebel."

In East Lansing, at least, the market still seems to be happy.

If Jim Morrison knew that one day his records would sell for $8.98, who knows what he'd be doing now?

Spurious photographs at Kresge

By DAVID COURTNEY
State News Reviewer

Hanging in the Kresge Art Gallery are the photographs of Peter Glendinning. His work will be up for the remainder of fall term.

His color photographs can be divided into three distinct groups.

The first, as you enter the door of the gallery, are pictures which are taken with the camera askew. It is a common practice in photography to coax the viewer into seeing the world in a different way — the way perhaps an artist sees it. The notion is to take what is upright and "normal" and put it askew to reveal an arrangement of exciting forms and shapes of color. This group of Glendinning's photographs are merely askew. No new and significant forms emerge.

The second group of photographs are places which have unusual juxtapositions of color. An example is his red and white hangers with green laundromat appliances as a background. These pictures make no important artistic statement. As a matter of fact, they seem to more closely resemble an assignment to beginning photography students in which they might have been instructed, "Go out and shoot unusual combinations of color." Photographs of unusual combinations of color are not in themselves meritorious art, for their expressive content may only be negligible; such are Glendinning's combinations.

The third group consists of Glendinning's commentary on kitsch interiors, kitsch place settings, and the like. This is the major part of the work shown. Glendinning shows us the tastelessness of the American public. There are pictures of vivid, floral design wallpaper complemented by an equally hideous floral design couch. And there are plastic flowers which have no comparable color in nature which are placed next to walls of similar color. There are pictures of the throw-away stuff for special occasions, like stuffed saint hearts for Valentine's day.

It all adds up to a deluge of Glendinning's diatribe about the peculiar American ignorance of taste. But Glendinning keeps making the same point too often; instead of being sick of Americans' tastelessness, one ends up sick of Glendinning's photographs.

His work is a logical continuation of pop-art but without the subtlety of a Warhol. There is no allowance for rumination about the many possible meanings. He presents us with only one, debilitatingly limited interpretation for each picture.

To hang a Glendinning picture on your wall might be as bad as hanging the kitsch he pictures.

I might add that the McKesson/Stuart photography show I reviewed earlier had far greater artistic value than that of Glendinning's.

Galumphing Gourmet

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Staff Writer

The Gourmet is a strong believer of the "excess equals success" philosophy, and it shows.

Beer! Give him one, he wants five more. Cigarettes! If he smokes at all, it's gotta be at least two packs a day. Junk Food! Once he's on a Zingers binge, it's three weeks of Zingdom till his stomach sez no more.

And, as a rule, this viewpoint has yet to let him down. Live life to the fullest, there is no middle ground, all or nothing. That's what life's all about, and the Gourmet knows it.

Here follows a very sad tale of excess, a pitfall the Gourmet's met that worries him considerably. Let him tell you about it:

Hey, gourmets gotta do their job, don't they? So I eat! You gonna get mad at me just because I'm doin' my job?

I gotta eat dinner just like you, but when I'm workin' here home's too far away to make my own dinner. So I go out. And sometimes I get sick of Moon's executive burgers or Olga's Olga-dogs or Arby super-specials. So then I go for more exotic stuff, like El Aztec, your favorite Mexican Restaurant and mine.

Trouble is, I just can't get enough of their funky stuff, like the sayin' goes, and that's the whole problem. It started out simple enough — I had nothin' to do for two hours, so I went down El Aztec's stairs, happy 'cause I remembered they'd just got their beer and wine license. Not exactly an expert on Mexican cuisine (first big deal meal was at Pontiac's Trini & Carmen's about a week before they closed down for botulism, honest) I ordered a pitcher of beer and an order of nachos, something they offer at a special rate of $4 — truly a great deal. 'Specially 'cause you can get Lowenbrau for the same price as the cheap stuff.

Anyway, bein' used to Taco Bell's tomato-soup hot sauce, I piled a bunch of it on my nachos. WHAT A DOPE! Eyes water, stomach lurches, I'm grabbin' for my water glass and no one near me can tell that I'm BURNIN' UP!

Well, lemme tell ya, I learned my lesson. From that point on, moderation was the key. Not too much, not too little, just enough hot sauce to give me the Mexican food buzz I needed along with my beer.

And it was funny — pretty soon I found myself goin' back there more and more. I'd keep orderin' nachos and beer till finally I got sick of 'em — after all, nachos ain't got no meat, and I ain't no Veggie Gourmet — so I moved on to somethin' more substantial. Namely: BOTANA! yeah, these things are unqualifiably GREAT, true good deals featuring some lettuce, tostada chips (Doritos, ya dummies) and a mixture of frijoles (pinto beans like at T.B.) and my number one fave rave, wonderful, glorious GUACAMOLE!

Lemme tell you, Guacamole is TOPS, absolutely the best, so while I switched off between Botana and the even-better Topopo salad (same thing but w/ extra added stuff) I got in kind of a compromising position. I was eatin' there EVERY NIGHT, orderin' one thing or the other — always with mucho beer, in the lingo — and slowly, but surely, I was buildin' up an immunity to the place's hot sauce. Where once even a spoonful would send me to hotty-totty land, I'd take a whole bowlful of the stuff and still want more. Somethin was happenin', that's for sure, but HOW COULD I HAVE KNOWN WHAT?

Pretty soon, people here at the paper were tellin' me strange things. Waitresses there would tell 'em while they were eatin' "Hey, people from your paper eat here a lot, especially Mr. Gourmet." The people would laugh and then the waitress would say, "He eats here EVERY NIGHT!"

Already a laughin' stock for my new Mexican food lust, I couldn't care less — I knew what I wanted, and more often than not, I'd eat it. More and more hot sauce, more and more food, more and more beer. Whatta life.

But then came the side effects. My personal life was goin' down the tubes. "Get lost Gourmet, ya smell like a taco!" "Hey El Aztec, botana much lately?" All this and more from buddies who once liked the place as much as I did. But did I let that stop me? Nah — life's too short, and I knew it. Oink-oink, slurp-slurp.

THE END OF A ROMANCE: After a particularly dry week, the Gourmet picked up his paycheck and decided to eat some lunch. A few friends were meeting at El Aztec; he thought he'd go there, too.

He ordered a tostada and a beer. His heart really wasn't really in it all, but he ate anyway. Halfway through his beer, he noticed he'd used an entire dish of hot sauce on the one dinky little tostada.

Not satisfied, he ordered another tostada, another beer. Reading an interview in some magazine, he paid no attention at all to what he was doing, and sure enough, there went another dish of hot sauce. On just another dinky little tostada.

The Gourmet noticed his excess and got a little nervous. It had never been this bad before. Plagued by self-doubt, he paid his check and left.

Hours later, the Gourmet quietly vomited his guts out, crouched headfirst over a toilet.

Quite naturally, he hasn't been back to El Aztec since. Not because of the food — the food was and is great — and not because of the hot sauce — that's great too — but because of himself.

These days the Gourmet just eats cold sandwiches a lot and looks at the clock. Mexican food, yeah yeah; beer, yeah, yeah. He doesn't even like Doritos anymore.

Comedian Kirby gets 20-year jail sentence

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Comedian George Kirby, who said he got into selling narcotics to "catch up on my bills," was sentenced Tuesday to 20 years in state prison on his guilty plea to charges of trafficking in cocaine and heroin.

"I'm embarrassed and ashamed," the 52-year-old standup comedian told the judge. "A friend got me into it. It was an opportunity to get some money to catch up on my bills. I am no trafficker in drugs."

Kirby, who also faces a 10-year federal sentence on his conviction earlier this year for selling heroin and possessing heroin for sale, was taken into custody after the sentencing.

District Judge Carl Christensen had denied a defense request to set bail at $50,000 for Kirby until his appeal of the federal conviction is decided. He had been free on his own recognizance on the state charges.

Christensen, in imposing the sentence, said, "I have appreciated and enjoyed very much the great talent Mr. Kirby has. It could be he has more intelligence and talent than anyone else in this courtroom."

"It was the best of bad news," Kirby's attorney, Robert Archie, said of the sentence. "It wasn't as bad as it could have been but it wasn't as good as I'd hoped for."

Archie said he had asked Christensen to suspend the sentences and place Kirby on probation for 10 years. The plan also would have had Kirby serve the federal sentence, and thus be eligible for parole in a little over three years. Under the state sentencing system, Kirby will not be eligible for parole for five years.

Kirby was arrested at his home here in April 1977 by federal narcotics agents after he sold an undercover agent 363 grams of cocaine.

Kirby, who describes himself as "the first black standup comedian," is a noted impersonator with a repertoire of more than 100 impersonations, including Humphrey Bogart, James Cagney, Harry Belafonte, Edith Bunker and Katherine Hepburn.

"A mimic is born, not made," he has said. "It's a God-given gift and all the teaching in the world won't do a bit of good if you aren't born with it."

He appeared frequently on the old Toast of The Town television show hosted by the late Ed Sullivan and has played many of the major hotels in Las Vegas, Chicago, New York and Houston.

In February 1957 he was given a two-year suspended sentence in Miami for possession of marijuana and placed on three year's probation, Archie said. But the attorney said Kirby was a heroin addict and probation was revoked after he "kept getting into trouble" due to the drug addiction.

He was sent up to a federal hospital at Lexington, Ky., where "he cleaned himself up," Archie said.

Rock around the Xmas tree

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

'Tis the season to be jolly and music is still the best method for capturing that good old Christmas spirit. This year one can either get out the old Bing Crosby and Mormon Tabernacle Choir records, or pick up on two classics that are annually reissued and make for special rockin' Christmas treats.

ELVIS' CHRISTMAS ALBUM (RCA Camden CAL-2428)

This is vintage 1957 Elvis Presley when he was indisputably the King of rock 'n' roll and not the Santa of Las Vegas. The King was brazen and MEAN back then, and several of the numbers on this LP recall nothing so much as the famed curled lip, black leather, and (gasp!) primal lust.

The album includes the typical Christmas standards as only the young Elvis could perform them, including very sexy versions of "Here Comes Santa Claus" and "White Christmas," the latter of which probably had Irving Berlin red with rage when first released. In addition, there is the funky legendary classic "Blue Christmas" and the R&B inspired "Santa, Bring My Baby Back To Me" by C. Demetrius, who wrote "Mean Woman Blues." All are superb.

However, the greatest number is "Santa Claus Is Back In Town," a dynamic blues rocker by Lieber & Stoller of "Jailhouse Rock" fame. The tune is perhaps one of Elvis' greatest rock 'n' roll performances, and he doesn't sing so much as he snarls with a lusty vengeance. Chestnuts roasting on an open fire isn't the only thing the King has on his mind when he growls: "Hang up your pretty stockings/Turn out the light/Santa Claus is coming down your chimney tonight!" The song also boasts the immortal Elvis lines: "Got no sleigh with reindeer/No sack on my back/You gonna see me comin' in a big, black Cadillac."

This LP shouldn't be confused with Elvis Sings The Wonderful World Of Christmas (RCA LSP-4579) released in 1971. This LP is much slicker and more traditional. However, the record is worthwhile for one number — a terrific version of Charles Brown's bluesy "Merry Christmas, Baby," also recorded by Chuck Berry early in his career. The blues clock in at nearly six minutes, with a scorching solo by guitar master James Burton, during which Elvis shouts: "Dig in, James! Dig in!" This tune alone makes the LP a valuable rock item.

Elvis' Christmas Album is a deal at any price, but RCA has reissued the record on their budget label, Camden. This means one can generally buy it for under $3. RCA has also recently compiled both albums into one set, added several "inspirational" tunes, and is selling it through the TV circuit. Unlike most television offers, the album is really worthwhile. Don't let the ads fool you since they only play the "inspirational" numbers to appeal to the grandmothers who thought Elvis was a nice boy. Seriously, folks, I've been known to put "Santa Claus Is Back In Town" on my turntable during the middle of July!

PHIL SPECTOR'S CHRISTMAS ALBUM (Warner Bros. SP-9103)

Originally released in 1963, this album generally makes every list of rock greats. Until it was reissued in 1976, it was generally available only at "oldies" stores, getting as much as $60 for mint-condition copies.

Many critics believe that this is Spector's greatest achievement, and when Spector's angelic rock is combined with the angelic qualities of Christmas, it's difficult to argue the fact. The album was a "labor of love," taking over a year to produce, but it originally failed commercially due to circumstances beyond Spector's control. The record was released on Nov. 23, 1963 — the day John F. Kennedy was assassinated — and few Americans felt inclined to pick up Spector's jolly Christmas package. Nonetheless, the record has been perpetually popular overseas.

The LP includes rock versions of Christmas standards and one original, all with Spector's inimitable lavish production. In addition to Bob B. Sox & the Blue Jeans, all of Spector's "girls" are here, including Darlene Love, the Crystals, and the Ronettes featuring Ronnie Spector. Spector's "wall of sound" orchestra includes, among others, Leon Russell, Sonny Bono, Gene Pitney, Nino Tempo and Herb Albert. The LP's musical arranger is Jack Nitzsche, who went on to arrange and play piano on several of the Rolling Stones' LPs, in addition to playing with Neil Young & Crazy Horse.

The Crystals' version of "Santa Claus Is Coming To Town" included on the LP is the same version Bruce Springsteen often performs in his Christmas season concerts. Springsteen, who admittedly owes a great deal to Spector, released an authorized bootleg single of the tune several years ago.

And then there's always the classic Christmas singles — the Royal Guardsmen's "Snoopy's Christmas," the Beach Boys' "Little Saint Nick," John & Yoko's "Happy Christmas (War Is Over)," Brenda Lee's "Rockin' Around The Christmas Tree," etc. — the extent of which could fill another entire column. Nonetheless, all are valuable finds. Gabba gabba hosanna!

What Mark Ware told us about his college ring.

MARK WARE

"My ring makes me proud that I made it through school. It also is a lifetime symbol of my degree in engineering."

In the past year, we talked to hundreds of students to find out more about your ideas on college rings. Above is just one of the many responses in our continuing series from students who bought an ArtCarved ring.

The ArtCarved collection reflects the many different kinds of tastes and preferences students like you described. So, when it comes time to select the ring you'll wear for a lifetime—you'll have one of the largest and most distinctive collections from which to choose.

Three rings from our collection of over 20 traditional, contemporary, and fashion styles. Priced from $70 to $125.

Billy Sims of Oklahoma won the 1978 Heisman Trophy. The results were released Tuesday.

FUSINA SECOND, LEACH THIRD

Oklahoma's Billy Sims wins Heisman

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oklahoma running back Billy Sims, although only a junior, won the Heisman Trophy as college football's best player in the voting released Tuesday.

Chuck Fusina of Penn State finished second and Rick Leach of Michigan was third in the voting of more than 900 sports writers and sportscasters from across the nation.

Fusina received more first-place votes than Sims, but the Oklahoma junior totaled 827 points to 750 for the Penn State senior.

Sims joins Doc Blanchard of Army (1945), Doak Walker of SMU (1948), Vic Janowicz of Ohio State (1950), Roger Staubach of Navy (1963) and Archie Griffin of Ohio State (1974) as the only juniors to win the Heisman Trophy.

Sims said he was surprised at his selection.

"I really didn't expect it," he said in a phone hookup from Norman, Okla. "I thought I'd be in the race, but I thought Leach would win it."

"I thought that being a junior would work against me. I figured a senior would get it, but I thought if they went strictly on statistics, I'd have a good chance to get it."

Griffin was the only two-time Heisman winner, but Sims was reluctant to talk about repeating next year.

"It's possible, but there are a lot of things to consider," he said. "I have to stay healthy all year. We have good people coming back and if we play well then maybe I'll have a chance next year."

Fusina did not have as impressive individual statistics as some of the other candidates, but his leadership was unquestioned. In his two seasons as the starting quarterback for Penn State, the Nittany Lions won 22 of 23 games and this year attained the No. 1 ranking. Fusina holds 16 Penn State passing records and is considered one of the best long passers in college football.

Fusina completed more than 56 percent of his passes this season and connected for 11 touchdowns.

Sims is the third Oklahoma player to win the Heisman Trophy. Billy Vessels and Steve Owens were previous sooner selections. Leach had 435 points.

Charles White of Southern California, also a junior, finished fourth with 354 points and Charles Alexander of LSU was fifth with 282.

Rounding out the top 10 were Ted Brown of North Carolina State, Steve Fuller of Clemson, Eddie Ivey of Georgia Tech, Jack Thompson of Washington State and Jerry Robinson of UCLA. Robinson, a linebacker, was the only non-backfield player included in the top 10.

Fusina was the leading votegetter in three of the six regions, but he did not fare that well in the Midwest and Far West. Sims was the top vote getter in the Southwest and Far West and finished second in the Northeast, mid-Atlantic and Midwest areas.

Sims, the Big Eight Conference's single season rushing record holder, gained 1,762 yards on 231 carries this season for a phenomenal 7.6 yards average per carry.

"I really didn't expect it," Sims said in a phone hookup from Norman, Okla. "I thought I'd be in the race, but I thought Leach would win it."

"I thought that being a junior would work against me . . ."

In addition to leading the nation in rushing with a 160.1 average, Sims also was the leader in scoring with 20 touchdowns. Sims also was the first player in Big Eight history to rush for more than 200 yards in three straight games. He surpassed the 200 yard total four times in all during the season.

Schneider ranked 10th in world; powerlifting a long, slow process

By CHERYL FISH
State News Sports Writer

It takes years for the arms, shoulder and chest muscles to develop, to build up the strength in the legs to lift 710 pounds. It takes body-straining determination and strict discipline of the mind to be a competing powerlifter.

At 250 pounds Paul Schneider, an MSU senior, is ranked 10th overall in the world in powerlifting. The world ratings were released in October, putting Schneider 18th in the squat for lifting 665 pounds; ninth in the bench press, lifting 505 pounds; seventh in the dead lift, for lifting 710 pounds.

He is ranked first in college

"I'm an average person, but people don't think I am. I'm not violent, it's just the myth of the muscle man."

—Paul Schneider, MSU Senior

ate competition. Schneider, who competes in the 242-pound class, drops eight pounds before each competition.

Since he started competing five years ago, Schneider has worked seriously on improving his form.

"It takes a long time for improvement to show," he said, "and a lot of people quit after a few months." It took years before Schneider noticed any drastic improvements in his skills.

There are limits as to what the body can take which cause the development to come slowly.

"All my body can take is three hours a day, three times a week," Schneider said. Therefore, it is a time-consuming process that demands interest.

Schneider takes pride in the bench press, where the lifter reclines and pulls up the weight. "That's the most prestigious event as far as training goes," Schneider said, "people can relate to it."

Schneider, a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., began lifting weights without any thought of competition. He, like many others, wanted to develop muscles. Now, he said, he gives the appearance of being a bully.

"I'm an average person, but people don't think I am," he said. "I'm not violent, it's just the myth of the muscle man." However, Schneider has worked as a bouncer at Doolley's and Rainbow Ranch.

Schneider admits that Arnold Schwarzenegger was his idol when he began to lift weights.

In addition to his powerlifting skills, Schneider throws the shotput for the MSU track team. He has taken second place for the past two years in the Big Ten meet, and vows to win it this year.

Schneider said he can't compete with the players who have been throwing the shotput for many years.

"I lack the experience," he said, "I regret there was no one to push me in high school."

Figuring to compete only one or two more years, Schneider is pursuing a career in strength and conditioning coaching. A physical education major, he hopes to help athletes to learn the techniques of weightlifting.

"From my experience and education, I understand and can discuss the muscles that are working in different situations," Schneider said.

He doesn't ever plan to quit lifting, as it is a lifetime hobby. "I won't be lifting with such intensity," he said as he went into the weight room to put in three hours of pumping iron.

For $75000 Tony bought a fantastic stereo. For $2500 more he could have gotten it back.

Tony's stereo rocked lots of midnight parties, created several romantic evenings and debuted too many musical sounds to list - it was the pride and joy of the whole dorm floor. But the last before-game celebration never happened because something else did. Theft.

$25.00 won't prevent theft, or burglary, vandalism, fire, smoke damage, explosion and riot; it'll just ease the pain when it does happen and buy back what was ripped off or destroyed.

Trust The Cooper Group to protect special possessions: it's what we've been doing for seven years. With $25.00, buy $1500 coverage ($25.00 deductible) on your personal property inside the dorm room, apartment or fraternity.

For full coverage of cameras and calculators worth more than $100 as well as stereo components valued at more than $200, simply list make, model and serial number on a separate sheet of paper and enclose with your application. The total of all such equipment can not exceed 50% of the policy's face amount. Additional units of $500 can be added for $6.50 up to a total coverage amount of $5000. Michigan's Mark Churella, the two-time defending NCAA wrestling champion, has MSU's Ron Sobel under control during Monday's dual meet. The rest of the Wolverine team wasn't as lucky as the Spartans, who took a 24-13 win. The two will lock horns in another dual meet later in the season.

PENINGER PLEASED WITH VICTORY

Wrestlers defeat Wolverines

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

MSU's wrestling team continued their winning ways Monday night with a big 23-14 victory over rival University of Michigan in their first dual match of the season.

The level of intensity was high for the match, but this is not unusual for a Michigan-MSU contest.

"We both wanted it as bad as the national championship," MSU head coach Grady Peninger said. "Anytime you beat Michigan, it's a damn good day and they feel the same way about us," he continued.

MSU won three close bouts that provided the margin of victory. In the 150-pound weight class, Spartan Fred Worthem decisively beat Nemir Nadhir, 3-1, for the first cliffhanger victory.

Both Worthem and Nadhir are old foes dating back to the high school days. They were each two-time state champions in different weight classes in their prep days and have been at it since they've been in college.

Jim Ellis, last year's Big Ten runner-up in the 177-pound class, stopped U-M's Bill Petoskey 12-9 in the second close match. Ellis was one of four MSU winners in the MSU Invitational two weeks ago.

In the final match of the night, Spartan heavyweight Shawn Whitcomb clipped Eric Klasson, 5-4. Whitcomb sat out the 1977-8 season with an injury, but Peninger feels he will return to top form. Two weeks ago, Whitcomb was another Spartan to grab a crown.

Mark Churella, the national two-time defending champion in the 158-pound class for the Wolverines, got the only fall of the match when he pinned Ron Sobel of MSU. Peninger was tremendously impressed with Churella.

"I don't see anyone standing in his (Churella's) way of a third straight championship," the coach remarked.

Peninger said that the Spartans in the top four weight classes all gave "sterling performances, even though one of them lost." MSU's Steve Foley decisively beat Bill Konovsky, 6-2, in the 167-pound class and both Ellis and Whitcomb won. Charles Shoen dropped a 14-5 decision to Steve Fraser of U-M, but Fraser finished sixth nationally last year.

In the other weight classes, Spartans Jeff Therrian, Mike Walsh and Jeff Thomas all took easy wins. Jim Mathias of U-M beat Harrell Milhouse, 17-8, in the 118-pound class.

"It was a good win. Some of the matches went down to the wire," Peninger said. The two teams will hook up one more time this season, in Ann Arbor on Feb. 8.

JOE CENTERS

Fans share in success

It was a great day for MSU last Saturday when the Spartans defeated Iowa, 42-7, to win a share of the Big Ten title. It was a tribute to the coaches, the players, and maybe most of all, it was a tribute to all of the fans who stuck with the team.

It has been a long time since the Spartans have been a powerhouse in the Big Ten. A lot of people don't remember all the dominating teams MSU had in the 1950s and '60s. Many people don't realize that Bubba Smith, the football player who likes Lite Beer because of the easy opening cans, played football for the Spartans in the mid-60s and that he used to rip apart the opposition's backfield like he rips apart beer cans.

That was all before U-M and Ohio State started dominating the Big Ten. That was before the Big Ten was turned into the "Big Two-Little Eight." Those days have come to an end, though, and as much as anyone, it is the loyal fans who should be commended.

Many don't realize how much college football means to some people. There hasn't been much to cheer about in Spartan Stadium for a long time, and it has made for some pretty dull football Saturdays in East Lansing.

This year was a complete turn-around. MSU lost only once at home and in the other five games at Spartan Stadium, MSU outscored its opponents 228-53. All five games were laughers, and it seemed to be the fans who had the most fun.

At times the whole student section would sway and sing in unison. By the end of the fourth quarter the games got downright boring, but you wouldn't know by looking at the crowd.

They had fun at the games and they all deserved it. For nine straight years Spartan fans had to listen to nothing but crap from their friends at U-M. Not this year. Michigan's only claim to fame this season is that they won a trip to the Rose Bowl by default.

Tuesday night at Long's Banquet Center in Lansing, over 1,500 Spartan fans turned out at the annual football bust to honor this year's team.

Eddie Smith, who set every passing record in his three playing years at MSU, was voted most valuable player by his teammates and awarded the Governor of Michigan Award. He was also presented the Downtown Coaches Club offense award given to the outstanding senior offensive player, and he was also named one of the team's co-captains along with senior defensive tackle Melvin "Juice" Land.

Land also received the Downtown Coaches Club Defense Award as the outstanding senior defensive player.

The President's Award, given to the outstanding senior lineman and outstanding senior back, was awarded to flanker Kirk Gibson and tackle Jim Hinesly.

Seniors Jerome Stanton and Mike Hans were each given the Munn Award, presented to the team's most inspired player. Charles Shafer, senior tight end, was honored as the team's top senior scholar athlete and received the Ross Award, while senior manager Jeff Minahan was presented with the Cowing Award, presented annually to the outgoing senior manager.

The Outstanding Underclass Lineman Award was presented to junior tight end Mark Brammer, and the Outstanding Underclass Back Award was given to sophomore tailback Steve Smith.

The Love Award, presented to the most improved player, was awarded to junior center Matt Foster, who this year was switched from linebacker to center.

It has been a great season for the Spartans and their fans, so whenever the winter blues get the best of you, remember MSU 24, U-M 15, and see if that doesn't perk you up a little.

The ax continues to fall

Sparky Anderson is fired at Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds Tuesday fired manager Sparky Anderson, who led the team to back-to-back World Championships in 1975 and 1976, and replaced him with John McNamara, former manager of the Oakland A's and the San Diego Padres.

McNamara, a coach with the California Angels last season, was signed to a one-year contract by the Reds.

Reds President and General Manager Dick Wagner flew to California Monday and met with Anderson at his Thousand Oaks, Calif., home to inform him of the Reds' decision. Anderson will be paid for the final year of his three-year contract.

"The decision we made was not a hasty one," said Wagner. "Our club won in 1975 and 1976 and by that I mean won it all. The past two years have been good ones by the standards of most clubs, but we are determined to set a higher standard."

"It is our decision that the move we have made is in the best overall interests of making the Reds a better team," said Wagner. "Sparky Anderson served us well. I don't want to get into the specifics with regard to the move we made."

"Let's just say it's time for a change," said Wagner, "and just as in 1970 when the situation may have been the time for Anderson to take over the club, it's our feeling now the situation calls for a new approach."

Bob Commings fired as Iowa head coach

IOWA CITY, Iowa, (UPI) — Iowa football Coach Bob Commings, whose losing seasons the last two years fueled calls for his dismissal, was fired Monday by the Board in Control of Athletics.

The announcement was made following a closed-door meeting during which the board heard from university officials, players and Commings himself. The board recommended Commings be assigned other duties for the remainder of his contract or until he finds other employment. The final action will be taken by University President Willard Boyd.

Duke's McGee fired; Butters takes over

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Mike McGee, head football coach at Duke University for eight years, was fired Monday and replaced by Blue Devil Assistant Athletic Director Shirley "Red" Wilson.

McGee's resignation was requested by Athletic Director Tom Butters Saturday after his fifth losing season, 4-7, in eight years. He informed Butters that he would not quit, and the announcement of his firing and the appointment of Wilson to the job was made at a news conference late Monday.

Bo sticks up for Woody Hayes

By RICHARD L. SHOOK
UPI Sports Writer

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — Woody Hayes of Ohio State got support from an unexpected source Monday when Bo Schembechler, coach of "that school up north," said it would be a shame if the volatile coach of the Buckeyes retired or was forced to quit.

"What would he do if he didn't coach?" Schembechler said during the middle of a long discourse on the insecurity of his profession. "I can't imagine Woody spending all his time watching TV."

"People forget how much he's done for Ohio State," Schembechler said. "They forget how many games he's won, how many Big Ten championships, how many bowl games."

"They forget how unsettled it was before he got there — they had a new coach every year. And there was some talk of getting rid of him after his first season."

"I don't think there's anybody down there with enough power to fire him. At least I hope not," said Schembechler, a former Hayes aide whose U-M teams have beaten Ohio State the last three times they have met. The pupil finally has an edge over the teacher, 5-4-1.

The fiery Hayes is involved in at least one incident with the press nearly every year.

This season he got testy when a Columbus, Ohio, sports broadcaster asked him what he thought of a poll that showed a majority of respondents believing he should retire.

Hayes found his excuse to duck out of post-game questions following Saturday's 14-3 Michigan victory when a sports writer asked him if he was aware his team hadn't scored a touchdown against the Wolverines in three games.

"I don't know how much actual coaching Woody still does. I'm not in a position to know," Schembechler said. "But one thing I can tell you — he hasn't relinquished his hold on recruiting. When you come up against him in recruiting, you know you've been in a battle."

"He hasn't lost any desire or intensity when it comes to recruiting. He's willing to stay out on the road, live in hotel rooms, do whatever it takes."

The coach of Southern California's Rose Bowl opponent said Colorado fired one of the best coaches in the country when it canned Bill Mallory and said Florida would be doing the same if it got rid of Doug Dickey.

"I'm not naive enough to think I've got lifetime security here at Michigan," Schembechler said. "You'll be on me next."

"Sometime around the time he's 50," the 48-year-old Schembechler said, "a coach has got to decide if he's going to do something else or continue coaching the rest of his life."

"You cannot overlook the work, the sacrifice and his record over the years."

The MSU skydiving club will send a team of four divers to Deland, Fla., for the national skydiving championships which will be held Dec. 27 through 30.

The team is an experienced one, as the four members have accounted for over 2,000 jumps between them. Three of the divers, captain Mike Matthews, Mark Rials and Kirk Koseck are MSU students, while the fourth, Scott Harris, attends Albion college.

According to Matthews, who has over 700 jumps to his credit, the 2,000 jumps are about twice as many as any of the other approximately 25 teams in the competition will have.

The score for each is determined by the number of formations accomplished by the four divers during the sky dive.

Spartans move to 12th in AP ratings

MSU moved from 14th to 12th in this week's Associated Press football poll after taking a share of the Big Ten championship with a 42-7 win over Iowa Saturday.

Penn State remained on top after defeating Pittsburgh, 17-10.

Michigan is in fifth place in both polls with its Rose Bowl opponents, Southern California, in third place.

Again, there are four Big Ten teams rated in the Associated Press poll. Along with MSU and U-M, Purdue is rated 17th and Ohio State is in the number 20 slot.

The Spartans are ineligible to be rated in the UPI coaches poll because of the NCAA probation.

Shoplifting, bike thefts increased on campus, DPS statistics show

Thefts on campus have increased throughout the term, according to statistics released by the Department of Public Safety.

Capt. Fermin Badgely said most of the thefts were bicycles taken from racks outside residence halls. The possible cause for the rise was the pleasant autumn weather, he said.

"People have the tendency to leave bikes outside more often if the weather is nice," Badgely said.

Wormburgers?

CHICAGO (AP) — The owner of Earthworms Inc. said Thursday that he is adding "Wormburgers" to the 100 recipes he has for using protein-rich dried worms as food supplements.

A fast-food chain has denied rumors that it used ground red worms in its hamburgers. But Darrell Richards, owner of Earthworms, said it's a "question of time before dried worms will take their place on the diet."

To a large extent, he added, the thefts could be attributed to "cheap locks or cables" which are easily cut or sawed through.

He advised people to buy sturdier locks or cables in the future to deter thieves.

Although bicycles were the most common larceny during the term, many petty thefts and shoplifting incidents occurred during recent months, he said.

Shoplifting has increased steadily, accounting for 4,206 losses of property since July 1978, he said.

Statistics also show a decrease in people arrested on campus for drunken driving, he said.

The drop is not a reliable source to indicate driving while intoxicated has decreased, he said, because apprehensions of such persons are "a sometime thing."

These statistics for driving under the influence of liquor will probably decrease further when the 21-year-old drinking age goes into effect soon, he said.

Salary increase nixed by mayor

By SHEILA BEACHUM
State News Staff Writer

Salary hikes for five Lansing district court judges received a thumbs-down signal from Mayor Gerald W. Graves at Monday's City Council meeting.

Graves submitted a veto on a resolution authorizing wage increases for district court judges approved by the council last week.

The veto is justified, in light of the 7 percent wage guidelines set by President Carter earlier, Graves said.

The proposed $43,990 salary for district judges represents an 11 to 12 percent increase, which exceeds the 7 percent wage guidelines outlined by President Carter, he said.

Noting "the tremendous amount of confusion" surrounding the salary hikes, Graves said the council should "uphold the president's wage guidelines."

The mayor's veto has been referred to a council work session. Council members may decide to let the mayor's veto stand, Councilmember-at-large President Louis F. Adado said, in which case another resolution will be drawn up which will remain within the 7 percent wage guidelines set by the president.

In other action, council members made a move which may inflame the already mounting tension between the mayor's office and the City Council.

Under the revised City Charter, many responsibilities which were formerly the City Council's have now been given to the Office of the Mayor.

In recent weeks, the City Council and mayor's office have been playing tug-of-war over which of the two offices will get the most employees.

The City Council Monday transferred a Comprehensive Employment Training Act-funded employee from the mayor's office to the City Council office, effective that same day.

This action was taken by the City Council without prior notice given to the mayor, Graves pointed out.

The transfer of a secretary to the City Council office will short the mayor's office one employee, Graves said.

In addition, a second CETA position in the mayor's office will be vacated Dec. 15.

ENFORCEMENT RESUMES IN SPRING

Bicycle drivers ticketed

At least two people received tickets from campus police for improper handling of their bicycles during the period of highest accident rates.

Maj. Adam J. Zuta said a person was ticketed and fined $30 recently for riding a bicycle the wrong way in a one way zone. The person decided not to pay the fine, and instead, spent one day in jail.

The other person received a $20 fine which was paid, Zuta said.

"The tickets are just as expensive as any vehicle citation," he said.

The citations for the bicycles are used to prevent accidents, which can be just as serious as an automobile accident, he said.

During the pleasant autumn weather in September and October, it was not uncommon for the DPS to receive one bicycle accident report per day, he said.

Some bicyclists had a total disregard for safety on campus, he said.

Something had to be done to try and prevent the frequent accidents on paths, sidewalks and street intersections, he said, so tickets were given.

Accurate monthly records on the issuing of these tickets were not kept.

Zuta said a continuation of the ticketing should be expected in spring.

Bonita Neff, a bicycle specialist for 4-H Youth Programs of MSU, said recently that something more should be done with the problem of careless bicyclists.

"A person may not like it, but a national certification is coming soon," she said. This might force people to participate in training programs before they are allowed to use bicycles, she said.

"Most people don't know how to go in a straight line or return to a straight line after coming out of a swerve," Neff said.

Accidents could be prevented if more education is given to regulate bicycle usage, she said.

Energy planners meet

By ANNA BROWNE
State News Staff Writer

The increased demand for mass transportation in East Lansing is an upcoming concern in energy conservation, the Energy Advisory Committee said Monday night.

A specific problem identified by the committee was the increasing cost of energy, which would primarily hurt people on fixed incomes. They felt this rise would affect mostly the poor and elderly and force them to use mass transportation.

Committee members said one of the major problems facing them was how to get people out of their cars and into busses.

"You can never make mass transportation more convenient than individual transportation, but you can make driving a car much less convenient," said Brian Matter, chairman.

Energy planning is new to East Lansing, he said. "This committee is starting from scratch with these problems."

Some of the committee's assumptions on mass transit included that people would be less inclined to get in their cars and go places if it were more convenient to walk. They also said commuters would be more easily encouraged to use mass transit than irregular traffic.

"We want to minimize people's desire to use individual automobiles," Matter said.

Some of the suggestions the committee had for increasing mass transit use was to eliminate parking spaces, including those for restaurants and housing, and make the Capital Area Transportation Authority system more desirable to use.

This could be done by having more direct routes, lessening the number of connections people have to make to reach their destination and adding bus service directly to specific areas. Those areas would be determined by polling residents to find where service is needed.

The committee also said facilities for non-motorized transportation, such as bike paths and parking, are generally inadequate for bike riders. The Energy Advisory Committee will hold public hearings in January to gather citizen comments on what type of energy programs should be undertaken by the city.

The city is revising its Comprehensive Plan, which adopted in the 1960s. Changes in the growth of East Lansing prematurely outdated the plan.

Booklet aids car buyers

No one wants to buy someone else's lemon.

That's why the Michigan Consumers Council published a pamphlet designed to guide consumers to the best deals in the used car market.

"With careful shopping and some basic knowledge, it's possible to find a reliable car at a reasonable price," said Executive Council Director Linda Joy.

To make this easier the pamphlet includes a checklist of features to look for when shopping. The pamphlet highlights what to look for under the hood, during the test drive and in the automobile's exterior and interior.

The pamphlet also includes suggestions on budgeting, and when and where the best deals can be found.

"New car dealers offer late-model cars, good service facilities and an established reputation, but the price may be higher than other places," Joy said. "Independent used car lots offer very competitive prices, but their cars may be older, their guarantees may be minimal and their service facilities may be lacking."

The best time for a good deal may be during the winter, Joy said. New car dealers have plenty of trade-ins on new cars at that time and other used car businesses are slow due to bad weather, she said.

Free copies of the pamphlet are available by contacting the Michigan Consumers Council, 414 Holister Bldg., Lansing, 48933.

Bar owner contests '21' law

MUSKEGON (UPI) — A Fruitport Township bar owner says he will refuse to comply with the state's new drinking age laws in an effort to test the constitutionality of the regulations.

Ron Seng, operator of Shoe Lounge Inc., said Tuesday the state's Liquor Control Commission has failed to draw up rules relating to the drinking age laws and until he sees something in writing he won't even consider complying.

"I feel unless Lansing gets together and sets up some rules we should run the way we've been running," Seng said. "Even when they set up rules, we'll challenge them."

The state legislature voted last spring to up Michigan's legal drinking age to 21 as of Monday, and voters approved a measure boosting the drinking age to 21 on Dec. 22.

The voter-approved amendment, however, provides no penalties for violators and none are on the books for youths between 18 and 21.

Seng and his supporters said that though the 19-year-old law is constitutional, the amendment approved by voters Nov. 7 is not.

"There is a grandfather clause in the 19-year-old bill. It doesn't take away anybody's right, it just doesn't give the right to younger people," Seng said. "The amendment doesn't have a grandfather clause and that's why we think it's unconstitutional."

Seng said he is sponsoring a benefit Dec. 10 to raise money for a defense fund to help defray attorney and court costs that are expected to result from challenges to the drinking age law.

Michigan's legal drinking age was reduced from 21 to 18 in 1972 as part of an overall grant of majority rights to persons 18 and older. The move to boost the drinking age began two years ago.

A spokesperson for the Liquor Control Commission said emergency rules probably would be instituted providing penalties against retailers caught selling booze to those under 21.

OPPOSES N-PLANT FUNDING

PIRGIM enters hearing

PIRGIM is intervening in a Public Service Commission hearing to prevent funding of Detroit Edison's Greenwood nuclear plant.

"We are convinced that the Greenwood project represents a monumental rip-off of Edison's customers," PIRGIM Legal Director Tracy Dobson said. "We're convinced this is the most expensive, most environmentally damaging way to generate electricity."

The Greenwood plant would be located near Port Huron in St. Clair County and Edison plans to start construction in 1979.

PIRGIM has been accepted in the PSC's formal funding hearing process along with the state Attorney General's office and Edison. An administrative law judge will rule whether Edison's request for $30 million for the Greenwood plant represents a "prudent investment," PIRGIM Executive Director Steve Freedkin said.

The hearings will take place sometime in January, Freedkin said.

More than $15,000 will be spent by PIRGIM to bring in nuclear power experts and pay for staff costs, Freedkin said. Rudolph L. Bertschi, a utility engineer with the Illinois governor's Office, and Ronald L. Knecht, an energy consultant with the California State Energy Commission, will be brought in to testify for PIRGIM, he said.

"Our intervention goes beyond opposing nuclear energy to deal with costs the consumer shouldn't have to pay," Freedkin said.

MSU — a Big Ten University with a sprawling campus — can overwhelm many incoming students.

But when the student is a member of a minority from the inner city, the sprawling campus — as well as the unfamiliarity with the large white population — can be more than overwhelming.

The Black Aide Program at MSU was established in 1969 to help minority students deal with the culture shock many feel once they arrive on campus and to increase the number of black staff working in the residence halls.

Since its conception, the program has expanded and changed its name to the Minority Aide Program to include Chicanos and Native Americans.

The major commitment of the program is to assist black, Chicano, and Native American students in the planning of cultural, academic and social programs as they relate to the student's background.

"This is an integral program that has proven to be needed," explained Carl S. Taylor, director of the Minority Aide Program.

"Our goal to have more minorities as staff members of residence halls was achieved in the early '70s," he continued. "This program cultivates leaders to go higher than residence hall leaders to University-wide leaders."

Minority aides are screened for their position through a process similar to resident assistants. Once chosen they undergo training, which consists of workshops on financial aid information, special programs, job placement and other minority concerns.

The training occurs the week before classes start fall term and additional workshops are held when new concerns arise or information is needed.

Although minority aides assist other minorities, their work is not confined to minority students.

"The aides are by no means restricted to just dealing with minorities and they are encouraged to be of assistance to everyone," said Florene McGlothlin, director of Black Aide Program.

"We have 33 aides distributed throughout the complexes. The larger dorms have two while the smaller ones have one," she explained. "Holden Hall has three aides because of the greater amount of blacks."

There are five Chicano aides, one for each complex and two for East Complex, because of its larger Chicano population.

"We don't exclude off-campus people because the number of Chicanos is so small," said Adolfo Mata, director of Chicano Aide Program.

He estimated that of the 200 Chicano students attending MSU, approximately 85 reside in the residence halls.

Since the residence halls enable people from all cultural backgrounds to live together, the Minority Aide Program is a learning experience for all involved.

Minority students learn about the larger white society and the white students and staff become more aware and sensitive to a minority student's culture, according to the program's guidelines.

Volunteer reps to be on campus this week

By DARLENE DONLOE
State News Staff Writer
MSU student volunteers are motivated by career development concerns and altruistic incentives, a survey of more than 1,000 MSU volunteers showed.

The survey was taken to try to determine the reason behind students volunteering.

The Office of Volunteer Programs, which is the largest organized volunteer effort on any campus in the United States, conducted the survey. The office is designed to provide quality experiences which allow for the utilization of students' skills and experience, and an opportunity for growth and learning.

The program is primarily for the MSU student, but faculty members and community residents can also participate in the program, OVP Director Jane Smith said.

Smith said the major reasons given by students involved in the program were the desire to "gain experience in a career field and to help people."

The double motivation indicates that altruism among college students is not dead but rather has combined with the more pragmatic reasons of career and personal development as the factors that lead students to volunteers, she said.

The survey showed that more females — 72.5 percent — than males — 27.1 percent — participated in the volunteer program during the 1977-8 academic year.

The survey also showed that of the 1,013 volunteers who returned and completed survey, the largest number of them are 20-year-olds.

It also showed the greatest number of volunteers, who come from every college in the University, are juniors.

More than 92 percent of those who volunteered last year indicated they would recommend the volunteer program in which they worked to friends. About 70 percent planned to continue to volunteer in the same or different program.

Smith said the percentage of those who leave the volunteer program is low.

Some volunteer programs require more time than others, she explained. Some programs require five hours a week of participation and others require 20 hours a week.

"Some students can't work that many hours a week as a volunteer so they either leave or move to a different program that doesn't require as much time," Smith said.

The volunteer program is divided into 44 major programs involving various aspects of community life including health, government, corrections, education, recreation and the elderly.

"Since we have students from every college in the University we never have a problem with one program not receiving volunteers," Smith said.

The volunteer program is conducted in and around the tri-county area.

For the volunteers who work outside of Lansing, transportation is provided for them through 12 cars the OVP leases from the University.

Smith, who has been with the program for more than three years, said students are demanding meaningful placements, appropriate training and proper supervision in return for their commitment.

THE FACTS:

1 HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF WOMEN USE ENCORE OVAL.

Encore Oval™ was introduced to American doctors in November 1977. Almost immediately, it attracted widespread physician and patient attention.

Today, Encore Oval is being used by hundreds of thousands of women, and users surveyed report overwhelming satisfaction. Women using Encore Oval say they find it an answer to their problems with the pill, IUD's, diaphragms, and aerosol foams.

2 EFFECTIVENESS ESTABLISHED IN CLINICAL TESTS.

Encore Oval™ was subjected to one of the most rigorous tests ever conducted for a vaginal contraceptive. Results were excellent—showing that Encore Oval provides consistent and extremely high sperm-killing protection. This recent U.S. report supports earlier studies in European laboratories and clinics.

Each Encore Oval insert contains a precise, premeasured dose of the potent, sperm-killing agent nonoxonyl 9. Once properly inserted, Encore Oval melts and gently effervesces, dispersing the sperm-killing agent within the vagina.

The success of any contraceptive method depends on consistent and accurate use. Encore Oval™ is so convenient you won't be tempted to forget it. And so simple to insert, it's hard to make a mistake.

If pregnancy poses a special risk for you, your contraceptive method should be selected after consultation with your doctor.

3 NO HORMONAL SIDE EFFECTS.

Encore Oval™ is free of hormones, so it cannot create hormone-related health problems—like strokes and heart attacks—that have been linked to the pill. And, there is no hormonal disruption of your menstrual cycle.

Most people find Encore Oval completely satisfactory. In a limited number of cases, however, burning or irritation has been experienced by either or both partners. If this occurs, use should be discontinued.

4 EASIER TO INSERT THAN A TAMPON.

The Encore Oval™ is smooth and small, so it inserts quickly and easily—without an applicator. There's none of the bother of aerosol foams and diaphragms. No device inside you. No pill to remember every day. Simply use as directed when you need protection.

You can buy Encore Oval whenever you need it... it's available without a prescription. And each Encore Oval is individually wrapped to fit discreetly into your pocket or purse.

5 BECAUSE ENCORE OVAL IS INSERTED IN ADVANCE, IT WON'T INTERRUPT LOVEMAKING.

Since there's no mess or bother, Encore Oval gives you a measure of freedom many contraceptives can't match.

The hormone-free Encore Oval. Safer for your system than the pill or IUD. Neater and simpler than traditional vaginal contraceptives. So effective and easy to use that hundreds of thousands have already found it—quite simply—the preferred contraceptive.

Improvement proposed by commission

Improved street lighting and curb cuts were recommended as uses for community development funds by the East Lansing Transportation Commission Monday.

The lighting improvements were suggested for the Comprehensive Neighborhood Revitalization Area bound by Burcham Drive, Hagadorn Road, and Beech and Gungson streets. Curb cuts were recommended for any eligible area in the city.

The city is in the process of preparing a three-year application for the federally funded program which must principally benefit low- or moderate-income individuals or eliminate and prevent slums or blight.

The commission will also ask City Council to update it on the status of the Grand River Avenue repair project.

Several members were concerned that planning for a long-term solution for Grand River Avenue traffic and congestion not be delayed.

The city should use the planning time gained by the recent resurfacing of the road wisely, rather than waiting for cracks and potholes to develop, the commission said.

The commission also discussed a draft of guidelines which might aid decision making when residents come to the group with problems such as traffic volumes on residential streets.

Many resident complaints which come before the commission arise from the city's failure to designate roadways as collector streets in the 1967 Comprehensive Plan, chairperson William Taylor said.

"We don't have collector streets defined in the system so people are upset about it when their street is used as a collector," he said.

The designation of streets as collectors was very controversial when the master plan was prepared, said assistant city engineer Gordon Melvin. No one wanted their street designated as a collector, he said.

San Francisco City Hall employees were delayed Tuesday morning when they had to go through a security check inside the front door. The flowers on the steps were placed there by the citizenry, commemorating the slayings of Mayor Moscone and Supervisor Milk, Monday.

Utility companies list energy saving tips

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer
Tired of paying big heating bills?

Area utility companies and a group called Urban Options offer alternatives and easy energy saving tips to conserve homeowners' heating costs.

"The basics of conservation are those we've known for years, but have not practiced," said Paul Gardner, region public affairs director for Consumers Power.

Heating bills could be significantly reduced if people followed simple energy saving tips like turning down the thermostat at night, Gardner said. He recommended that heat be turned down gradually over a few days so residents can easily adapt to colder temperatures.

"Make sure heat registers are clear and furniture is not blocking the flow of heat from registers," said Dennis Castele, public information officer for the Lansing Board of Water and Light.

The furnace is an area where a lot of heat is lost, Castele said. Air filters should be checked about once a month and cleaned or replaced.

An inspection of the furnace may cost some money, Castele said, but it is a good preventative measure. Some furnaces are old and could use a maintenance check, he said.

A common source of heat loss is open dampers in homes with fireplaces, Castele said. Glass doors covering the hearth will prevent heat escaping through the chimney while the fire's embers are just glowing.

"A lot of people have their water heaters up too high," Castele said.

Heat is lost through the water heating tank, Castele said. Thermo jackets for heaters retain more energy in the tank, he said. They are available at a number of heating and plumbing stores.

"Energy conservation should be made a family project," Castele said.

Urban Options, a non-profit organization which provides energy conservation technology for Ingham County residents, is holding "storm window" workshops Dec. 2, said Charles Ipcar, spokesperson for Urban Options.

Workshops will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Urban Options energy house, 135 Linden St. Participants will learn how to repair old storm windows, install new storm windows and install plastic "in-siders" and construct insulating shutters," Ipcar said.

Participants will be charged a $5 registration fee, which includes tools, supervised training, supplies and the house to practice on.

An Urban Options workshop on "the pros and cons" of different types of insulation will be held Dec. 9.

Mountaineering #7?

PROFICIENCY TEST

Oh sure, injured indignation. "A quiz?" you protest, feigning ignorance. Well sir, what do you think these mountaineering lessons have been all about? That's right - knowledge, and the accumulation thereof. So put your gray matter on red alert and start cracking. Here's where you move to the top of the mountain. Or get left at base camp. And, by the way, remember that the difference between the two is all in your head.

Multiple Choice

Drinking Busch beer is known as:

- (A) Sucking 'em up
- (B) Downing the mountains
- (C) Quaffing
- (D) Peeking

A mountaineer's best friend is his:

- (A) Dog
- (B) Bailbondsmen
- (C) Main squeeze
- (D) Free and flexible arm

Bennington Baxter-Bennington, the noted financier of mountaineering expeditions, was fond of saying:

- (A) "The price is right."
- (B) "Your check is in the mail."
- (C) "Keep all your assets liquid"
- (D) "Put this on my tab, fella."

The best place for a mountaineer to take a romantic R&R is:

- (A) Somewhere over the rainbow
- (B) 24 hours from Tulsa
- (C) In the craggy peaks
- (D) Deep in the heart of Texas

You can recognize a mountaineer by his:

- (A) Crampons
- (B) Sherpa guides
- (C) Pickaxe
- (D) Foamy moustache

The most common reason for mountaineering is:

- (A) Because it's there
- (B) Because it's better than nothing
- (C) Because nothing is better
- (D) All of the above

Oral Exam

Here's where you put your tongue to the test. Arrange three glasses, two ordinary beers and one Busch in front of your self. Ask a friend to blindfold you and pour each into a glass. Sip all three, taking pains to clear your palate between beers - either by eating a plain soda cracker or lightly dusting your tongue with a belt sander. After sampling each, identify the mountains. Unless you've just returned from the dentist with a mouthful of novocaine, this should be easy. Cold refreshment and natural smoothness are your two big clues to the peak.

Eye Test

This is the visual perception portion. Simply read the pertinent subject phrase and determine which picture most closely symbolizes it. Then, check the appropriate box.

(A) <input type="checkbox"/> Mountaineering	(B) <input type="checkbox"/>	(A) <input type="checkbox"/> Mountain Peak	(B) <input type="checkbox"/>

Scoring 10-13 correct: congratulations, bucky, your flag waves at the summit. 7-10 correct: not bad but there's room for improvement; run to the package store and keep mountaineering. 4-7 correct: don't mountaineer without an adult guardian. Less than 4: who read this test to you?

*Mountaineering is the science and art of drinking Busch. The term originates due to the snowy, icy peaks sported by the label outside and perpetuates due to the cold, naturally refreshing taste inside.

Moscone murder suspect charged

Moscone to reappoint him to the board.

Last Friday, however, suspecting he would not get his job back, he grimly told reporters, "The gloves are off."

"He went through a few months of very hard work, financial problems and a new baby," board president and now acting Mayor Dianne Feinstein said of White. "It had triggered a sense of hopelessness."

Besides being considered among the most conservative on the 11-member legislative board, White also was the most outspoken against gay rights issues in a city where police estimate as many as one-sixth of its 700,000 residents are homosexual.

Asked in November about his hopes for gay rights issues before the board, Milk said he was generally pleased.

"But Dan White — he's going to be trouble," Milk said.

Nonetheless, the two were pictured smiling together. Roger Boas, the city's chief administrative officer, said he had seen White "berate" two other supervisors, "but I never saw any problems between Mr. White and Mr. Milk."

"On the board, White was the greatest advocate of law and order. But it was clear that he was angry and felt he was entitled to get his seat back," Supervisor Carol Ruth Silver said.

White apparently felt double-crossed by the mayor, who at first had praised him publicly for changing his mind about resigning, then told him he would have to rally support in his blue-collar neighborhood in order to win reappointment.

Vigo Nielsen, one of two attorneys White hired to get his job back, said White told him he thought Moscone "had gone back on his word."

Suspect still in line for bravery medal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dan White, a suspect in the murders of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, will still get the medal he won for helping rescue a mother and child while he was a city firefighter, an official said.

"The man still deserves the award. We'll do it as discreetly, and as best we can," Fire Chief Andrew Casper said Monday after White surrendered to police in the double assassination in City Hall of Moscone and Milk. White was charged Tuesday with two counts of murder and was to be arraigned on Wednesday.

Lt. Lawrence Kelly of the fire department said Tuesday that White was one of "quite a few" firefighters scheduled to get medals Thursday, but that the ceremony has been postponed indefinitely because Moscone's funeral will be that day. Casper described White as a "solid-type guy, very determined type, an achiever type."

The medal was recommended for White, 32, after he helped save a woman and child trapped on the 17th floor of a burning apartment building here in August 1977.

Reorganize

"The choices are not good, we are sacrificing voice at the expense of needed movement," Hurrell said. "The question which remains unanswered is whether we are capable of achieving both voice and movement."

Frederick Horne, professor of chemistry, said he was "sorry we weren't asked before the action," but added that he did not want to "beat a dead horse."

Many faculty members have said they feel the provost should have consulted Academic Council before taking action on the reorganization plan.

Horne asked Winder to consult the faculty before organizing a lower division to handle advising responsibilities of the University College.

Willard G. Warrington, acting dean of the University College, did not vote on the issue, but urged council members to vote for the motion.

Warrington also told the council someone needs to tell the student body about the consequences of reorganizing the two colleges.

China 'poster war' attacks Mao

TOKYO (AP) — Another wall poster attacking Mao Tse-tung went up in Peking on Tuesday within 24 hours of Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's suggestion that critics should lay off the "great helmsman" who died two years ago.

Thousands of Chinese gathered Tuesday night in Tiananmen Square to demand more political and economic democracy and the rehabilitation of some leaders cashiered during Mao's Cultural Revolution of the late 1960s.

Japan's Kyodo news service said the latest anti-Mao poster, signed by restaurant workers, accused Mao of making the state his own property, like a feudal king.

The poster queried the need to fire former Chairman Liu Shao-chi during the 1966-69 Cultural Revolution simply because he disagreed with Mao over matters of policy.

Teng, 74, was himself a victim of Mao and radicals led by Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, and was disgraced and demoted in the cultural purge. Restored in 1973, he fell from grace a second time in 1976. But he has been back in power since July 1977.

The first attacks on the once sacred image of Mao came two weeks ago, followed by flurries of wall posters in the same vein.

Teng was quoted Tuesday by China's official Hsinhua news agency as saying the right to conduct the wall poster campaign is guaranteed by the constitution and describing the posters as an expression of democracy approved by the Communist Party.

Though Teng admits Mao made mistakes, which are being corrected, he paid tribute to the old revolutionary in an interview Monday with American newspaper columnist Robert Novak.

Saying there wouldn't be a Communist China without Mao, he added that China's current industrial drive must be guided by Mao's thought.

Teng was quoted as saying he was offered the premiership, which Party Chairperson Hua Kuo-feng holds concurrently, 18 months ago but turned it down and doesn't want it now.

Many of the posters suggested Teng should replace Hua as premier and questioned the role of the disgraced "Gang of Four," led by Mao's widow, may have had in naming Hua to the job. Hua was Mao's hand-picked successor and took over in 1976 when the radicals had considerable influence and Teng was in disgrace.

China's powerful Central Committee is reportedly meeting in Peking which could affect the position of high-ranking communists. But Novak quoted Teng as saying there would be no purges at the meeting.

The posters have ranged far and wide in criticisms of China's stormy political past. Liu Shao-chi, the arch-villain of the cultural purge, and former Defense Minister Peng Teh-huai, fired in 1959 for defying Mao's economic policies, have been pictured in a more favorable light.

The poster campaign reflects moves in other directions to liberalize the militant, spartan life in China.

The official party organ, Peking People's Daily, has called for new civil, penal and criminal codes, saying codes adopted in the 1950s no longer were adequate and don't protect the rights of the masses.

On a brighter note, Hsinhua reported that over 120 new designs in clothing for students will go into production shortly, including summer and winter wear for college, heavier padded overalls, sports and holiday attire "and gay dresses and skirts for girls."

Smoking ban smoked out

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A day-long series of legislative hearings on smoking bans was smoked out of its hearing room on the fourth floor of the state Capitol on Tuesday.

Participants arrived for the morning session to find a smoky hearing room. They couldn't air the chamber because the wind kept blowing smoke from a chimney back into the room.

The hearings were moved to the third floor.

Handicappers sought out

intensive care unit.

The assessment team consists of an Ingham Intermediate School psychologist, a physical therapist, a medical social worker, a physician, nurse, audiologist and receptionist.

The team finds handicaps in about 10 percent of the intensive care infants, Bullock said.

"It's a good child-find method," he added, explaining that about 4 percent of the 5,500 average yearly births in Ingham County will need intensive care.

"By surveying that 4 percent," he said, "I'll find well over half of the new handicapper kids in the Ingham Intermediate School District."

Bullock said the assessment team program, which is three years old, finds about 80 percent of the handicapper children in the district.

He has also conducted "pre-school screening clinics" where developmental testing is done on children between the ages of 10 months and four years.

"Now we're looking at an older model," Bullock said. "Those between 16 and 25 years old that may have dropped out of school."

Finding older handicappers beyond high school age is more difficult, Bullock said, and still in the planning stages.

"Between kindergarten and 12th grade, there are no unserved handicapper children," he said explaining that classroom teachers usually recognize those who need special education.

"It's the pre-school and post-school (children) that we need to find," Bullock said.

War devastates Nicaraguan city

By GORDON D. MOTT

ESTELI, Nicaragua (AP) — This once-proud city appears a skeleton of its former self in the wake of Nicaragua's civil war. Its bombed-out houses and streets are picked clean of rubble, and the few townspeople left are forced to scavenge through the ruins and seek food along with stray cats and dogs.

Once a bustling agriculture center of 43,000 about 60 miles north of Managua, Esteli suffered more damage than any other Nicaraguan town in the two-week drive by President Anastasio Somoza to put down the popular uprising against him in September.

Somoza's opposition resents his family's vast holdings in Nicaragua and seeks to replace him. Members of his family have ruled this Central American nation for nearly 40 years.

The national guard — the combined police force and army — pounded Esteli with bombs for nearly a week trying to wipe out the anti-Somoza guerrillas who used the town as a rebel stronghold and were supported by many of the local residents.

Now, the streets and stores are nearly deserted. The Red Cross in Esteli says only 5,000 to 6,000 residents remain in the devastated town, and they venture out only to get medicine and food at the Red Cross center.

Red Cross officials say nearly everyone in the city is ill, with sicknesses ranging from flu to diarrhea. Some cases of polio were reported among the children.

The Red Cross in Esteli estimates that 1,500 persons may have died in the fierce hand-to-hand combat in the city. However, national Red Cross officials in Managua said an official count shows about 1,500 persons died nationwide and discrepancies arise when local officials issue their own death estimates.

Esteli's Red Cross director Jose Francisco Rodriguez said his organization is feeding thousands of persons in the city and its surrounding countryside. Over six weeks, Francisco Rodriguez said 20,000 packages of food have been handed out.

As the Red Cross chief spoke, a wizened old man stood patiently next to him, clutching the precious food ticket that gives him a sack of rice, beans, powdered milk, corn, sugar and oil.

The ration is expected to feed a family of six for eight days, the director said. No one is allowed free food more than once every eight days, he added.

One woman clutched her food tightly in her arms as she described how she made it last an entire week for her family of 10. If she ran out, it was possible to buy food in the few stores that remained open, but meat was not available and money was scarce to buy provisions, she said.

Rodriguez said the hospital was filled with mental cases, persons suffered from their experiences in the battles.

"Everyone here is still under repression from the national guard and is afraid of being killed. They would kill me if they did not like what I was saying, but I always tell the truth," Rodriguez said.

A drive through the city found entire blocks of the city destroyed, devoid of any signs of humanity.
