

Miller will stand trial for murder

By PAUL COX
State News Staff Writer

Donald Gene Miller, a 24-year-old MSU criminal justice graduate, was bound over to Circuit Court Wednesday on a second-degree murder charge in the slaying of Kristine Rose Stuart.

District Judge Daniel L. Tschirhart sent the case to Circuit Court, saying the 30-year-old East Lansing woman was murdered and there is probable cause to believe Miller was the slayer.

Bond was set at $100,000 in 54B District Court by Tschirhart and Miller will be arraigned in Ingham County Circuit Court April 12.

Miller's attorney, Thomas Bengtson, said he will request that the trial be held in another part of the state.

Bengtson said he probably would not ask to have the trial moved to Berrien County because of possible adverse publicity from Miller's trial there on charges of raping a 14-year-old Delta Township girl and attempting to murder her and her younger brother.

The charges stem from an incident in Eaton County last August, and the trial was moved to Berrien County because of publicity surrounding the case.

Bengtson would not speculate on other potential sites for the trial on the Stuart murder charge.

After the completion of testimony in the preliminary hearing, Bengtson said he did not believe the prosecution had proved that a murder had been committed.

Calling it the "pivotal issue," Bengtson reaffirmed his objection to the testimony of prosecution witness Nancy Daniels, 47, 1203 Wolf Court, because of the forensic hypnotic interview she underwent to refresh her memory about an incident she said she saw the day Stuart disappeared.

Exhibit 2 in Donald Gene Miller's preliminary hearing was this police sketch of a man—a key witness testified she saw stab a woman Aug. 14 at Coolidge Road and Fair Oaks Court.

Although Tschirhart accepted the testimony of Daniels, Bengtson said her story showed an assault occurred, at most. Bengtson asked Tschirhart to bind Miller over for trial on lesser charges of either assault with the intent to do great bodily harm or assault with intent to commit murder.

Miller's preliminary hearing on a second degree murder charge in the disappearance of his 19-year-old ex-girlfriend Martha Sue Young will begin at 9:15 this morning. Young vanished New Year's Day 1977 after a date with Miller.

Ingham County Assistant Prosecutor Lee Atkinson said he will call more than 10 witnesses in the Young hearing and is confident Miller will be bound over for trial in this case as well.

"The Grand Jury heard testimony in both cases and issued indictments in both cases," Atkinson said.

Mike Woodworth, a prosecutor who assisted Atkinson, told the court Miller did kill Stuart, based on the evidence presented.

Despite the fact that no body has been found, both circumstantial and direct evidence presented confirmed a crime happened, Woodworth said.

He repeated Daniels' testimony that she saw Miller push Stuart into a car and stab her three times in the late morning Aug. 14.

He also reiterated testimony that Stuart was a "woman of habit" who would never voluntarily disappear.

Woodworth repeated the testimony earlier Wednesday of Stuart's husband, Ernest A. Stuart, 30, who said his wife had never spent a night away from her husband in eight years of marriage.

Stuart's husband had testified that "no reason short of death would keep her from contacting someone."

RADIATION DROPS; SHUTDOWN CONSIDERED

Three Mile Island plant 'stable'

By The Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Radiation levels dwindled to near normal around the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant Wednesday, and federal officials said they were considering a proposal to take the disabled reactor into cold shutdown.

And while officials are concerned about the durability of vital instruments inside the reactor, conditions at the plant remain "stable," Harold Denton, of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said at a briefing.

He confirmed that human error had contributed to the reactor accident. In Washington, NRC officials described three separate human errors that contributed to the crisis.

The first error came when valves on an emergency pumping system — part of the reactor's coolant system — were closed, although they should have been open. Later, an operator turned off the plant's main emergency core cooling system at the wrong time. Finally, four standby water pumps were disengaged when there was no apparent reason for them not to be working.

Denton said having the standby pumps disengaged was a violation of NRC regulations.

Denton said engineers would maintain the plant in its current status for several days.

Darrell Eisenhut, an NRC engineer, said mechanical and design problems were major contributors to the accident.

Eisenhut, in Washington, said the valves on the emergency pumping system apparently were closed during routine maintenance two weeks before the accident.

Eisenhut, briefing the five NRC commissioners, said the operator on duty at the time of the accident may have received an incorrect reading on a pressure level gauge, prompting him to turn off the emergency pumping system after it had kicked on automatically.

At the atomic site, 10 miles from Harrisburg, engineers were examining pipes and sensors that are critical in efforts to bring the disabled reactor to cold shutdown.

Denton said that another piece of equipment had failed due to damage from intense radiation.

In Washington, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano Jr. told a Senate subcommittee that persons within five miles of the nuclear plant have received as much as 80 millirems since last Wednesday. The average Pennsylvania receives about 100 millirems per year from the sun and X-rays.

Replacing the damaged fuel core and decontaminating the reactor building could cost at least $150 million, said Robert Benero, an NRC official. He said other nuclear specialists feel it would be easier to fill the reactor with cement and scrap it.

Michigan bottle law blamed for cutbacks

By JAMES KATES
State News Staff Writer

Owen-Illinois Corp. Wednesday, announced 160 employee layoffs at its Charlotte glass container plant, blaming the cutbacks on a loss in business resulting from Michigan's law banning throwaway beverage containers.

An "undetermined number" of salaried employees will be transferred to other plants, a company spokesperson said.

Joseph H. Limieux, Owens-Illinois vice president and glass container division general manager, said the drop in demand forced cutbacks at the Charlotte facility, Michigan's only glass container plant. Charlotte is a small community about 20 miles southwest of Lansing.

"This loss of business is directly related to Michigan's mandatory deposit law," Limieux said.

Michigan's "bottle bill," which passed in a statewide referendum in 1976 and became effective in December, outlawed throw-away beverage containers and reduced the demand for glass bottles.

Judy Huggins, a spokesperson at the firm's headquarters in Toledo, Ohio, said the Charlotte plant would extend layoffs of 127 workers already made idle by reconstruction of a glass-melting furnace and lay off 33 others, effective April 15.

When operating at full capacity, the plant had employed 840 hourly and 90 salaried workers, she said.

The layoffs, she said, are a direct result of the reduction in demand for soft drink bottles.

"In 1978," said Harold Crowson, manager of the Charlotte plant, "production of soft drink bottles represented about one-third of the plant's total production — the equivalent of four forming machines operating 24 hours a day, all year. In 1979, we have operated the equivalent of one machine for less than 14 days making soft drink bottles."

Huggins said production of beer bottles at the plant has remained steady because several of the firm's customers ship beer out of state and the firm is also manufacturing Michigan-certified beer bottles.

Cheryl Bartz, of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, said layoffs at the plant may have resulted from factors other than the decrease in demand for glass containers.

The layoff date corresponds closely to the expiration of a $216,000 federal job-training contract that allowed the plant to hire 150 workers in 1977, she said.

Bartz said layoffs could also be attributed to a shift in demand from glass to plastic bottles.

The MUCC was instrumental in passage of the bottle bill in 1976.

Huggins said that the 1977 contract had given Owens-Illinois the option of hiring 150 workers for a 14-week training period, 50

Ad brochures in 'U' housing violate code

By R.W. ROBINSON
State News Staff Writer

"Junk mail" being distributed in University housing is in violation of student rights and an MSU ordinance, according to the Student Handbook.

Wheeler Dealer, a classified advertising tabloid distributed in the Lansing-East Lansing area, and other local advertising brochures have been found on door knobs and in doorways of Spartan Village apartments, which are under University control.

Brochures are in violation of University housing stipulations when they do not carry a U.S. stamp and the student's name, said

Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president of student affairs.

A University ordinance states that material may be placed in University residence hall mailboxes provided it qualifies as one of the following:

- U.S. mail;
- campus mail with student's name and room number;
- material from head resident advisers, residence halls programs, management, area managers, hall government or the Residence Hall Association;
- registered student organizations, living unit organizations, major governing groups and ASMSU, if the material carries the student's name and room number; or

• material presented to the desk receptionist if the material has the student's name and room number.

Nonnamaker added the policy refers specifically to the residence halls, not University apartments. "We have viewed University apartments over the years as just apartments," he said.

However, he added, "Everything within the University has to follow the guidelines made."

Peter Brown, program director of University apartments, said, "There is no variance in the ordinances for the residence halls and the University apartments."

He pointed out residence halls and apartments only differ in terms of personnel available in the buildings.

In the residence halls, Residence Assistants are available along with graduate and head resident advisers. University housing has no such employees.

Sue Johnson, Wheeler Dealer delivery manager, said, "We have been delivering on campus and in Spartan Village for the last five years with no problems."

She said the advertisements are delivered once a month and no one in University housing has ever complained to Wheeler Dealer about the presence of the material. Brown said he has written firm officials several letters asking them to stop delivering to the University apartments. He added the Department of Public Safety has been informed of continued delivery despite repeated requests to stop.

"We have done everything already but take them to court," Brown said.

He pointed out no drastic action has been taken against Wheeler Dealer because "it's not in violation of anyone's rights."

Brown said another reason for no strong action against the firm is residents of the housing facility have not complained about the brochures.

He added that further action will probably not be taken because "it's not a capital crime."

Brown said he sends letters to the company only when the University ground crew reports "an increase of brochures in the area," he said.

Johnson, said the owner of the firm has conferred with Brown. The owner, Pat Karslac, was not available for comment.

Anti-ELF bill might provoke power struggle between senate committees

By SANDY HOLT
State News Staff Writer

A battle over which committee should handle legislation opposing construction of the ELF communications grid in the Upper Peninsula may erupt today, Sen. William Sederberg said Wednesday.

The anti-ELF bill was voted out of the Senate State and Veterans Affairs Committee to the floor Wednesday, with recommendations that it be sent to the Committee on Upper Peninsula Economic and Industrial Affairs.

The Senate will decide today whether the bill will be sent to the U.P. committee.

Sederberg, an East Lansing Republican, voiced concern that the bill may be killed if it is sent to the new committee, chaired by Sen. Joseph Mack.

Political observers have charged the Iron Mountain Democrat with stalling environmental legislation when he chaired the Senate Conservation Committee.

He has not formally opposed the controversial communications system, though many U.P. residents are objecting to ELF, formerly known as Seafarer.

Sederberg said if he could get assurances Mack will not stall the bill and will hold impartial public hearings on the proposal, he would not oppose the move.

"There is no bill more specifically relating to the Upper Peninsula," he said.

ELF, which stands for extremely low frequency radio waves, is the third name for an underground communications system first proposed by the Navy during the 1960s.

The Navy has said ELF would provide worldwide surface-to-submarine communications. Opponents have claimed it would become a first-strike weapon since the system would only transmit to, and not receive signals from, submarines.

ELF is a scaled-down version of the original project and would consist of a 130-mile network of two-inch cables buried three to six feet underground.

Environmentalists have also claimed the low frequency radio

Drug operation nets 21 persons

By MELINDA WILSON
State News Staff Writer

Twenty-one persons were arrested in drug raids at numerous locations early Wednesday morning by the Tri-County Metro Squad and Tri-County police.

Police had warrants for 31 persons in Ingham, Eaton and Clinton counties. Ten suspects are still at large.

The arrests follow five-month undercover investigation labeled "The Muppet Show" by Metro Squad officers.

During that time, agents purchased heroin, cocaine and LSD from most of those named in the warrants, said Metro Squad Lt. Gene Wigglesworth, who directed the investigation.

"The people that were arrested were middle-men and street-level dealers," Wigglesworth said. "The middle-man handles ounces or more (of drugs) and the street-level people sell grams."

Police from the three counties gathered at the Marshall Street Armory in Lansing at 5:30 a.m. Wednesday, received warrants for the suspects in their area and were sent to awaken them.

Metro Squad Lt. Jack Balis said the arrests were made early in the morning before the suspects "were out and about."

"It saves everybody a lot of embarrassment and hassle if we get these people before they go to their jobs or get away from home," Balis said.

Nineteen of the suspects were arrested by mid-morning and brought to the armory, where they were questioned, fingerprinted and photographed. They were then taken to District Court for arraignment.

There were 23 counts of delivery of heroin, 20 for delivery of cocaine, three for the delivery of LSD and one for felonious assault among the 47 charges brought against the suspects. One of the suspects is a 16-year-old woman.

Police said bond for the suspects began at $2,000. A Lansing District Court spokesperson could not say which suspects had been released.

Among those persons picked up Wednesday on arrest warrants were several East Lansing residents: Peter Brodbeck, 1232 Haslett Road, charged with three counts of delivery of LSD; Christopher Lockwood, address unknown, charged with two counts of delivery of cocaine, and James Meek, of 104 E. Oak St., charged with two counts of delivery of cocaine.

Other arrests and charges included: James Fernandez, 109 E. Hazel St., Lansing, possession with intent to deliver and possession of heroin; James Hankerson, 6128 Balfour Drive, Lansing, delivery of heroin and Maria Hernandez, 1138 N. Pennsylvania Ave., delivery of cocaine.

Also arrested and charged were: Willard Hughes, 3601 Simkin Drive, delivery of heroin; Curly Lewis, 1630 N. Logan St., delivery of heroin; Michael Scott, 319 S. Eighth St., two counts of delivery of heroin; and Barbara Southwell, address unknown one count of delivery of heroin; Willis Vaughn, address unknown, delivery of cocaine; Stephen Riggs, address unknown, delivery of cocaine; and Donald Burrell, 24, of 2113 E. Kalamazoo St., Lansing, delivery of cocaine.

Persons arrested and charged prior to Wednesday in connection with the "Muppet" investigation are:

Mark Johnson, 818 Woodbine Ave., conspiracy to deliver heroin and delivery of heroin, his brother, Thomas Johnson, of Freeland, Mich. delivery of heroin and conspiracy to deliver heroin; Howard Chaplin, address unknown, delivery of cocaine; James Leggins, address unknown two counts of delivery of cocaine, and Donny Mask, address unknown, felonious assault.

Wigglesworth said two MSU Department of Public Safety officers assisted with the "Muppet" arrests, along with officers from Lansing, East Lansing, Ingham, Eaton and Clinton County Sheriff's departments and state troopers.

The operation was tagged "the Muppet Show" because one of the undercover agents in the investigation was called "Gonzo," the name of a "muppet" on the syndicated television series Wigglesworth said.

Egyptian Cabinet favors peace referendum

(AP) — Egyptian Cabinet favors a national referendum to show Arab critics that Egyptians support the peace with Israel but President Anwar Sadat must make the final decision, Cabinet sources said Wednesday.

They said Sadat, who declared that Mideast peace moves had gained momentum through Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's visit to Egypt, might reveal his decision Thursday in an address to Parliament.

Begin — who had been euphoric Tuesday at the end of his trip to Egypt — said Wednesday Israel faces "very serious problems" in upcoming talks on Palestinian autonomy.

The two leaders, who signed a peace treaty in Washington 10 days ago that officially ended a 30-year state of war, have agreed to meet again May 27 in the Sinai Desert capital of El Arish to open the border between their countries.

The Egyptian Cabinet met for two hours Wednesday, reaffirming its approval of the treaty and approving for the first time the interpretive memoranda accompanying the document.

Begin also said a telephone "hot line" was being set up so he and Sadat could reach each other easily.

Protests erupt over Bhutto hanging

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — Rioting and demonstrations erupted here and in the neighboring Indian state of Kashmir Wednesday protesting the hanging of former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, World leaders, who had tried to save him from the gallows, expressed regret and anger at the execution.

Three persons were reported killed in the Kashmir riots. Most of Pakistan was calm, but some observers said violence could come later.

In Washington, the State Department expressed regret over the execution.

Spokesperson Hadding Carter noted that President Carter had asked for mercy for Bhutto on humanitarian grounds. A department official said privately that the president's plea was based in part on fears of political violence after the hanging.

The white-shrouded body of the 51-year-old Bhutto, who led Pakistan from 1971 until he was ousted in 1977 by the man who refused to commute his sentence, was flown by military helicopter to his birthplace. It was buried in the family graveyard eight hours after the hanging.

Committee accuses Diggs of 18 violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee Wednesday accused Rep. Charles Diggs, who already has been convicted of federal crimes, with 18 counts of violating House rules.

The allegations filed by the committee parallel in scope the federal charges upon which Diggs was convicted in a November jury trial.

The committee charged that the Michigan Democrat inflated the salaries of selected employees on his congressional payroll in order to get kickbacks to help him pay his private debts or congressional expenses. The committee also alleged that Diggs placed employees on his congressional payroll without assigning them any duties.

Another committee count alleges Diggs placed a woman on his congressional payroll "with knowledge that the majority of her duties would be and were for the benefit of the respondent's business, the House of Diggs Funeral Home in Detroit, Mich."

Nine of the counts claim Diggs' actions were a misuse of his congressional payroll allowance. The remaining nine allege that his actions "did not reflect creditably on the House of Representatives."

Mother continues fight to spare son's life

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — A lawyer for the mother of condemned murderer John Lewis Evans III says he will file an emergency appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court Thursday morning to try to delay Evans' execution, now scheduled for 12:01 a.m. Friday.

Attorney John Carroll of the Southern Poverty Law Center announced his decision Wednesday, moments after the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans rejected a petition by Betty Evans to stay her son's death in the electric chair.

The Rev. Kevin Duignan, a Catholic priest who visits Evans at Holman Prison daily, said Wednesday that Evans, who has fought efforts to spare his life, now feels a postponement would be "a message from God."

Evans asked that his electrocution — scheduled at 12:01 a.m. Friday — be videotaped. He said he wants the tape used to "demonstrate the barbarity of capital punishment and as a lesson to the young criminal."

Health studies planned for nuke plant workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The health of plant workers and people who live near the stricken Three Mile Island nuclear reactor will be monitored for years to come even though no increase in cancer is expected in the area, HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said Wednesday.

But, Califano and other health officials acknowledged at a Senate hearing that they do not know enough about the hazard of exposure to low level radiation such as that released during the past week from the plant near Harrisburg, Pa.

The secretary of health, education and welfare said federal officials plan long-range health studies of employees at the plant as well as residents of the area who were exposed to higher than normal radiation levels.

"We will have to follow those individuals we choose for many years," said Califano. He promised to make public the results of the continuing monitoring.

Carter to announce new energy plans tonight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will address the nation tonight on his new energy proposals, which will include ending controls on crude oil prices and seeking new taxes on any excessive oil company profits.

After several weeks of speculation and postponements in announcing a decision, Carter will deliver a 9 p.m. EST radio and television speech from the Oval office on his overall energy strategy.

Sources said Carter has decided to remove all controls on domestic oil prices by Sept. 30, 1981, the date existing congressional authorization expires. He will start lifting them controls June 1 this year.

In a politically risky move, Carter then will seek congressional approval for increasing oil taxes, a similar levy that was sought last year but never approved.

The White House is hopeful that added public pressure, aroused by hefty oil profits, would be a deciding factor this time around.

AMIN'S TROOPS FLEE TO COUNTRYSIDE

Ugandan exiles occupy capital

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tanzanian and Uganda-exile infantry swept into the downtown area of the Ugandan capital of Kampala on Wednesday night, sending President Idi Amin's cadre of Libyan soldiers fleeing into the countryside, residents reported.

Exile sources said Amin, who has been accused of murdering tens of thousands of his country members, could fall in a few days or a few hours.

Amin's regular army had already disintegrated, the exile sources said, claiming the troops sent by Libyan leader

Col. Moammar Khaddafi to aid Amin, a fellow Moslem, were the only force preserving Amin's eight-year reign.

Amin's whereabouts were not publicly known. On Tuesday, he visited towns in areas he still controls in eastern Uganda, jovially greeting soldiers and civilians in an apparent morale-building tour.

The Tanzanian-Ugandan war began last October when Amin — who seized power in 1971 in a coup against President Milton Obote — sent troops into Tanzania to annex land he said rightfully belonged to Uganda.

A Kampala resident reached by telephone Wednesday night said he saw the invaders running at dusk to positions around Kampala's clock tower, a landmark at a road junction a quarter mile from the city center.

It appeared to eyewitnesses that Amin had lost control of the capital on the same day his enemies launched what they said would be a final assault on Kampala.

Witnesses and sources in Dar Es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, reported only limited resistance from the few Amin units still holding out.

Observers said the Tanzanian plan appeared to be to drive the forces still loyal to Amin into eastern Uganda, where they would have no way out except to cross into neutral Kenya.

Socialist party members celebrated Wednesday as returns were announced in Spain's first democratic municipal elections in 48 years. Voters elected a Socialist city council in Barcelona and swept other municipal elections in sharp rebuff to Centrist Premier Adolfo Suarez.

Olin rape counselor proposal bogs down

By ANNA BROWNE
State News Staff Writer

A February proposal to establish a rape counseling center at Olin Health Center has been stalled indefinitely as it is caught in a bureaucratic tangle.

The proposal, submitted by Jan Leland, a masters candidate in social work who has practiced and researched rape counseling, supports a full-time on-campus program staffed by trained counselors.

Kay White, assistant vice president for student affairs, is in charge of looking into the feasibility of such a program in connection with Olin.

White said a committee is currently reviewing the services at Olin and it will examine the proposal. She also said the committee will seek student input as to the need for such a service, but no survey has yet been conducted.

White cited money as a problem in establishing such a program, but also said she felt the counseling services off campus could take the place of one not offered at Olin.

She listed DEC, Inc. and the Listening Ear as counseling services adequately equipped to take care of rape victims.

"I have reviewed the sexual assault procedures used at Olin Health Center and both the Listening Ear and DEC are listed as referral sources for providing rape counselors for victims of sexual assaults," White said.

"However, representatives from the organizations White listed said they either have no such service or have received no referrals from Olin.

"We have no program specifically set up to deal with rape counseling," said Craig Fowler, a member of DEC.

"We have never received a direct referral from Olin," said Don Ayers, sexual assault coordinator for the Listening Ear. "We sent them a brochure but have not been asked to send a counselor over there."

Ayers said there is somebody always at the Listening Ear between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. and since February there are some counselors on call 24 hours for emergencies.

In spite of the service, the organization has received few on-campus calls requesting rape counseling services.

"A lot of students might not know we exist," he said. "A lot of people don't trust DPS or Olin and they don't have anywhere to go."

In 1975, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare found MSU to have the highest per capita rape rate of any state university in the country with an independent police force.

"What we really have here is an epidemic," Leland said. "and there's just nothing on campus. We have to rely on community groups to patch up our victims, but they can't possibly meet the needs of the MSU campus."

"There is no specific attention being given to this issue," she said.

White admitted things were "kind of in limbo," but refused further comment.

Dr. Lawrence Jarrett, director of Olin Health Center, also refused comment.

Leland said the stark reality of rape hits the victim after her attack.

DPS Lt. Donald Cleaves said the department went out of its way to help any rape victim that officers are called on to assist. He said they had a woman officer to help counsel any victims.

"We are concerned with counseling," he said, "but our job is to find out what happened."

An FBI uniform crime report stated only about one-tenth of all sexual assaults are reported. To get a true picture of campus assaults, every reported assault must be multiplied by 10.

For example, the FBI reported 25 incidents of sexual assault in the East Lansing and MSU area. Therefore, at least 250 occurred — almost one a day for the school year.

Energy squeeze bill introduced

A bill allowing the governor to declare an energy emergency and temporarily place restrictions on energy use in the state was introduced by Sen. William Sederberg Wednesday.

The East Lansing Republican said the senate bill would grant the governor "wide power" to make decisions regarding supply, distribution and conservation efforts in Michigan if a federal energy emergency was declared.

"To be exempt from the federal emergency plan (Michigan) must have an alternative plan," Sederberg said. "This bill would give the governor the authority to implement that plan quickly."

He said the Michigan Energy Administration is now outlining an energy emergency plan. Sederberg said the bill would give the governor the authority to implement that plan.

The Federal Emergency Act allows states to adopt alternative energy plans which may override federal emergency actions, he said.

An example of this would be, if the president closed gas stations on weekends, Michigan could counter the action by saying it can conserve the same amount of gas with its own alternative plan, Sederberg said.

The bill would allow the governor to restrict the private use of automobiles, totally shut down mass transportation, restrict the hours and days fuel would be sold and restrict lighting and temperatures in public, industrial, commercial and school buildings.

It would also allow the governor to direct energy resources to essential services such as hospitals, food distributors, police and firefighters.

Sederberg said the Energy Administration is drawing up specific plans depending on the nature of the emergency, whether it is a coal strike, oil shortage or shortage of electricity or natural gas.

He said he did not know when the plans will be complete.

Sharp rise in students seeking ASMSU tax refund may force board to 'tighten up'

By KY OWEN
State News Staff Writer

Over 100 students had received ASMSU tax refunds by Wednesday — more than a 300 percent increase over last term.

All students pay a $3 ASMSU tax at registration, which is refundable. Refunds are available during the first 10 class days of each term in the ASMSU Business Office, Student Services Bldg.

The deadline for refunds this term is Tuesday.

Students receiving refunds have their I.D. cards punched, are no longer members of ASMSU, and may not serve on the Student Board.

Laura Christner, was College of Engineering representative, until she received a refund Wednesday. The College of Engineering will have no board representative until April 17 when the new representatives take office, since Christner is no longer a member of ASMSU.

A number of notices on campus urging students to request refunds have incorrectly stated the deadline is Friday and the refund is $3.50.

Wednesday, 115 students had received refunds, said Dan Stouffer, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative.

Stouffer said only about 24 students received refunds winter term.

Stouffer said he had "no idea" why so many students wanted refunds, but said a letter to the editor in Wednesday's State News may be partly responsible.

The letter encouraged students to get tax refunds and said ASMSU has failed to advertise the fact that refunds are available.

Stouffer said ASMSU should not have to use its tax money to advertise tax refunds.

Karen Passiak, board chairperson and College of Human Ecology representative, said about 70 students came in for refunds Wednesday.

"Some were mad because they didn't know they could get refunds," Passiak said.

Students said ASMSU was being "sneaky" and "underhanded" by not advertising.

"Students don't know what it's all about and don't take the time to find out,"

It was incorrectly reported in Wednesday's State News that the PIRGIM meeting for new volunteers would be at 10 p.m. Thursday in Erickson Kiva.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. Thursday in Erickson Kiva.

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's State News that Patra Brown is president of Holden Hall's Black Consciousness. Brown is a member of the organization, but Janice Henry is the current president.

Open meeting on board pay

The ASMSU Student Board is holding an open meeting on the proposed financial compensation policy of board members today at 9 a.m. in 110 Bessey Hall.

Students will be able to voice their opinions to the board on the plan to compensate board members and ASMSU personnel.

SOME LANSING DEPARTMENTS FELL SHORT IN '78

Official says minority hiring low

Some departments in the city of Lansing fell short in hiring minorities and women in 1978, the city affirmative action officer said Wednesday.

"This city has many offices that don't have women in places of supervision," said Richard D. Letts, human relations director. He added that Lansing "overall" does not have an adequate amount of minorities and women in its city government.

In the city's 1978 employment survey, "a continuing pattern of employing minorities and females in conventional and stereotype job categories" is shown in the figures.

Five departments in the city government in 1978 did not hire any minorities or women other than in the clerical or office worker category. They are: assessor, building, district court, income tax and internal audit departments.

"People and artificial barriers are far stronger than the program itself," Letts said, adding that department heads do not usually recruit outside the city government for minorities or women.

He said the old adage of "it's not what you know but who you know" applies. And this is unfortunately hindering the full implementation of the program, he said. The program is as good as the people who implement it," he said. "Some people only talk and are not doers."

He said a new age is coming for Lansing's affirmative action program because Mayor Gerald W. Graves will take a stand on the issue April 11.

Graves is scheduled to express his views of the city's programs in a morning work session at the Civic Center.

Equal opportunity directors on both the state and federal levels will speak on the effects violations may have on city grants.

Also, Lansing officials are meeting with state and federal representatives to discuss problems and programs about affirmative action 7:30 tonight in MSU's Kellogg Center.

It is hoped, Letts said, that Lansing will begin to improve on its past record in hiring minorities.

MSU woman assaulted by knife-wielder

A 19-year-old Rather Hall woman was assaulted Monday evening on Whittier Street in East Lansing by a man who said he was carrying a knife.

The woman told East Lansing police she was out for an evening walk when the man approached her and grabbed her by the wrist.

"I'm going to rape you," the woman said the man told her "I have a knife in my pocket."

The woman fended off the attacker by hitting him in the face, police said, adding that the man fled afterward.

The suspect is described as being a thin white male, about six feet tall with curly brown hair. He was wearing blue jeans and a blue jean jacket, the woman told police.

South Africa refuses passage of banned books to Namibia

By JENNIFER DIXON
State News Staff Writer

A ship carrying books requested by the liberation groups in Namibia (South West Africa) a territory militarily occupied by South Africa, has been denied entrance to Walvis Bay, the country's only deep water seaport.

The vessel FRI, Australian for peace, arrived in Namibian waters March 29 after a two year journey. The books collected en route from Hong Kong are banned by strict South African censorship laws.

Rita Laker-Ojok, an MSU graduate student in agricultural economics, is a member of Operation Namibia — a peace mission involving two ships which started in different locations and stopped en route to Namibia contracting anti-apartheid groups and collecting the requested books.

FRI has stopped in Mozambique and India for support.

The international crew is waiting to decide whether to enter the port alone in defiance of South African laws, or wait until its sister ship, Golden Harvest en route from England arrives from Libreville, Gabon, Laker-Ojok said.

Laker-Ojok added the ship's fate is unclear and the crew members do not know what will happen, but anticipate they will be arrested when they enter the port.

The ships are carrying books by Martin Luther King Jr. and other black and African authors as well as books dealing with the revolutions in China and Cuba. Agricultural texts are also part of the ships' cargo, Laker-Ojok said.

"The books are banned because anything that claims blacks and whites are equal runs counter to South Africa's whole world view," Laker-Ojok said.

Laker-Ojok said the project is mainly an educational process to provide material and is also a non-violent means of creating a dilemma for South Africa.

"If South Africa lets the books in they set a precedent as far as censorship laws go. But if they don't let the books in it shows how much control South Africa still holds," Laker-Ojok said.

South Africa has administered Namibia since a League of Nations Mandate in 1919. It refused to give up the territory when the United Nations revoked the mandate in 1967.

General elections to establish a transition government were held in December but the two participating political parties were both backed by South Africa, Laker-Ojok said.

The South West Africa Political Organization, SWAPO, was not allowed to participate in the elections which were not supervised by the United Nations, as mandated, Laker-Ojok said.

Laker-Ojok said Namibians must abide by South African laws and 50,000 South African troops are stationed in Namibia.

If you have a problem you can't solve, or a question you can't answer, write Trouble Shooter, 343 Student Services Bldg., MSU, East Lansing, 48824, or call 355-8252, between 10:00 a.m. and 1 p.m. Ask for Trouble Shooter, the State News service which guns down problems, sticks up for your rights and shoots for answers.

I lost two bags of luggage on my return flight from West Virginia to Lansing. I mailed my claim for $950 to North Central's main office in Minneapolis, Minn. on Jan. 22, but have not received any type of acknowledgement. Can you find out what is taking so long and whether my claim will be honored?

L.J.
Human Ecology

A check for $650 is already in your hands after a call from Trouble Shooter to North Central Airlines. William Byran, baggage supervisor, said the original letter, acknowledging your claim, was accidentally sent to your parents in Kentucky. Marleen Krogstad, manager of customer relations, said the airline waits 60 days before honoring a claim in hope that your lost baggage may turn up. She said that your baggage claim numbers are traced through a worldwide lost-and-found computer. When your claim is honored, your baggage numbers are removed from the computer and recovery of the luggage becomes impossible. "It's in the passenger's best interest to wait the 60 days while we pursue every possible avenue before taking the claim out of the computer," Krogstad said. After your 60-day claim search expired, North Central refunded you $650 the maximum amount allowed.

I purchased two tickets for the March 5 Al Jarreau concert, but didn't attend because I heard it was postponed. I found out later that the concert went on as scheduled. The only problem is I'm still holding the tickets. Is there any way I can get my money back?

Gary Patton
300 Western Ave.

Yep. David Brown, director of Ebony Productions, said anyone who bought tickets but did not attend the concert because of the mix-up could receive a refund. The procedure is to write a letter explaining why you did not attend the concert and submit it along with the tickets to Ebony Productions in care of David Brown, 311A Student Services Bldg. You can mail it in or present it in person. Be sure to write your name and address clearly on the letter. Brown will then fill out forms and submit them to the ASMSU Business Office. If your letter is approved and has the signature of David Brown and his adviser Ron Stump, who is in the Office of Student Activities, you will receive a refund within two weeks.

In November, I had my senior pictures taken in the Union by Delma Studios. After two sittings I chose a proof and sent a check to the studio for $52.86. When I received the pictures, I noticed there were several processing flaws in a number of the smaller prints. In addition, the two 8-by-7-inch prints were out of focus. I sent the pictures back asking for a refund for all of the prints, or a combination refund and pictures. When I returned from spring break I found virtually the same order had been sent back, minus one 5-by-7-inch print. I had to pay postage to return the order, plus wait six weeks for another set of bad prints to come back. I think it's time I have either good prints or a refund. Can Trouble Shooter help?

Business

Swift action is coming after call from Trouble Shooter to Delma Studios in New York. Patricia Nagourney, customer service spokesperson, said United Parcel Service will pick up your order in a few days — eliminating postage charge. Your order, accompanied with a note explaining what you want, will be acted upon immediately, she said, and once again you have a choice of prints or a full refund. Nagourney told Trouble Shooter she is sorry for the mix-up, and blamed it on the rush of orders in the past few months. Trouble Shooter was assured your order will be returned within two weeks of the UPS pick-up.

Surprise! No invalidations

Wonder of wonders! ASMSU had a Student Board election and no one was invalidated. It is the first time, in at least the past five years. The only seeming explanation is that there was no presidential race. And though there were a few individual college races, they can safely be termed mockeries at best — only 3,000 total votes were cast. At worst they can be termed a shameful waste of $3,000 worth of undergraduate tax monies. So be it.

But apparently there are a few students out there who have decided enough is enough and are requesting a return of their refundable $3 tax. As of 5 p.m. Wednesday, well over 100 students had demanded their money. Spokespersons from ASMSU partially blame a letter than ran in the State News Wednesday as being the cause of the refund rush. These spokespersons have even had the audacity to act indignant, but there can be little doubt that if an ASMSU representative had written a similar letter, which spelled out when and where refunds could be picked up, instead of leaving the job to an irate taxpayer, the same situation would have occurred. The reason there has never been a run on the refunds before is quite clear: the ASMSU announcement has always been buried in the seldom-read State News classified ads. Not necessarily "sneaky" or "underhanded," but definitely not well publicized.

We must admit a certain sympathy for these actions, but we feel compelled to remind undergraduates that there is much more to ASMSU than the shenanigans that often occur at Tuesday night Student Board meetings. Rest assured that ASMSU's efficient comptroller, James Peterson, knows who you disgruntled people are and has got your names on his blacklist. It may seem an empty threat, but it will definitely deprive you of the few valuable services that ASMSU has to offer.

These include: access to $35 loans that are interest-free and don't have to be repaid for three weeks (many people can attest to their lifesaving qualities); the opportunity to purchase tickets for any concert sponsored by Pop

Entertainment, Showcase Jazz, Mariah or any other concert promoters under the Programming Board umbrella; and if you happen to get in a legal bind, don't bother approaching the lawyers in Legal Services — they've got your number too.

Every student should assess just how much they benefit from ASMSU. If you don't attend concerts, never get broke and are safe from legal hassles, then by all means don't let your money go to waste in the ASMSU coffers. If, however, you have used these services in the past, think twice about what you'll be sacrificing.

Meanwhile, back at the Student Board, life goes on as usual. At the first board meeting of the term, minority councils were almost denied the opportunity to address the board because they had failed to file as "activities departments" with their new parent organization, the Programming Board. This minor oversight on the part of the councils (activities departments) was pointed out by Interfraternity Council President Dan Kelley who, ironically enough, was one of the most vocal proponents of moving the council's budgets from the Student Board to the Programming Board. His convincing argument? Councils will not lose their voice on the Student Board when the move is made. (IFC is not a council, it is a Major Governing Group with voting status.) Granted the councils were finally able to speak, and the situation should be rectified by the next board meeting, but was all the confusion really necessary?

And more than likely the confusion is not close to abating, since a whole new crop of fresh "activists" are soon to be seated for the 15th session of the Student Board.

A good case for activism

Their fists clenched in defiant resistance to the mighty machine, students pour out of their home-away-from-home dangling whistles from their necks and flashing ear-to-ear grins.

Within seconds they have swarmed the mighty machine and its operator, demanding the hook be disconnected from a defenseless car which, by the rules of the machine's supporters, has been parked "illegally." The civilian authorities arrive to save the operator's endangered neck.

The students, their attitude spreading to laughing bystanders, distract the attention of the police away from the patrol vehicles, while other members of the group allow the air molecules in the police car tires their long-awaited freedom.

A scene from a Mel Brooks flick? War games on the streets of Los Angeles? Student riots in the '60s? No. Case Hall, on the MSU campus, today.

For years the tow trucks have had free run of the campus, towing when they needed the money. They have, in conjunction with MSU's Department of Public Safety, violated a basic principle that the wrecker should be used only to free up an occupied potential emergency site. On campus, though, DPS uses tow trucks to further penalize drivers before they have had the basic due process of law.

It seems everything here is a crime worth towing for and students already hard-pressed for tuition money are forced to pay upwards of $25 to free their car before they are even entitled to go to court to contest the $5 ticket.

It's hard to believe DPS chooses to rest its community relations on police-state tactics. After all, its officers are highly educated. They have an ultra-modern station, new police cars and a team of near-cops writing tickets.

DPS has no public relations plan. They're not out to make things smooth for students and they'll readily admit that they enforce laws as strictly as possible to avoid being called "unfair" to one group. Their big plan is to be unfair to everyone.

But finally someone decided to fight back. The solidarity expressed at Case Hall, where students have banded together to help each other unselfishly, is a welcome relief from the usual disinterested tolerance of whatever the University hands out. An escalation of this social activism would be a blessing for legal rights and student interests.

MSU proves bigger is not always better

Over the term break I had the pleasure of viewing the movie "Once in a Lifetime," a film produced by Robert Perrin's office for University and Federal Relations with the help of WKAR-TV's crew and facilities.

It was a lot better than the 20-year-old flick promoting Michigan State College that made the rounds at midnight movie orgies — you know, the one where some clean-cut student writes a letter to his younger brother, spewing forth the joys of academic achievement, canoeing the Red Cedar, and sipping Cokes at the Union Grill with his co-ed companion.

But in a way the more recent movie is the same old story. Its well-intended propaganda falsely depicts life at the Big U to be peachy-keen, where study is hard but the final achievement makes it all worthwhile. The film concludes with a woman telling MSU "I love you."

It's undoubtedly true some people enjoy their years here. It is also probably true there are some who really end up "loving" this school and cry at graduation. But there is also a great bulk who feel alienated, frustrated, and mad that they were talked into attending this school.

University officials never fail to point out the areas where MSU is "best." They like talking about the cyclotron, the basketball team, the number of on-campus residents, and the efficient placement center. But do they level with us about the negative aspects?

They told us things would be competitive at a big school; they even told us to expect large classrooms. But they also assured us they never lost track of the individuals this University is made of. Bigger, they told us, is better.

They didn't tell us about impending accreditation problems in the colleges of Business and Engineering.

They also didn't tell incoming freshmen that they may not be able to take all the classes they wanted because of enrollment problems. They didn't tell incoming business majors that when they reached their junior years they wouldn't be able to take 400 level classes. In fact, juniors would be ineligible to take some 300 level required classes because the College of Business still had to fit seniors in due to last year's problems.

The College of Business didn't tell incoming students they were in for a runaround. Many graduating seniors are unable to secure the classes they need for graduation because the college has inadequately planned its class enrollments.

Seniors in business administration may be required to fit either a finance course or a marketing course in their schedule to complete an elective requirement. The Finance department will tell that student to take the marketing course because Finance has enough trouble placing its own students in classes.

From Marketing, the same argument emerges. They tell the student they have obligations only to Marketing majors. And the Undergraduate Advisement Center says it cannot help because department heads have the final say in such matters.

The only way out of the mess is to quit playing by the rules and ask for a change in graduation requirements, which creates doubts about the whole idea of graduation requirements (why is Finance so important if Economics can be used as a replacement?).

I was fortunate when I was attacked by the red tapeworms in the College of Business; I got a helpful professor to intervene and plead my case to the head of my department, who agreed the situation seemed hopeless and allowed the requirement change. But how many students are perpetually stuck in the system, playing by unfair rules, waiting for fate to allow an opening?

And how many students finish up during summer or fall term because they couldn't fit a required class into their spring schedule? I am convinced the College of Business is aware of this, but shrugs it off saying "it's the best we can do; someone has to suffer." If it's all needless, does anyone really have to suffer?

Well, there are many of us who do the suffering and are able to say "yeah, the basketball and football teams were great that year, but the education was a big pain."

Several University officials have stressed that the student has a contract with the school and has reasonable expectations about what he or she will receive. But when it comes to relying on that "contract," the students find they must live up to their end — paying tuition on time — but the University balks at its obligation.

Most students find this out too late. Years and dollars have been wasted by the time most students have second thoughts about remaining in school; their investment, and not their devotion to MSU, keeps them here until graduation.

When people like me get letters from the University saying "we need money," we'll be the alumni who remember what MSU really meant to us and write back "I don't love you."

VIEWPOINT: DORM GOVERNMENT

Our 'power' doesn't exist, management calls shots

By CLYDE KESLING

On April 3, a column written by Bruce Guthrie appeared in The State News. In this article, Guthrie claimed that both the RHA and dorm government exist to inform the students of the management's decisions. As an active member of the Akers Hall General Council, I would like to strongly disagree with this assessment.

Unfortunately, I can't. You see, it's true. It's also very frustrating. Sure, our council has other functions. Eric Slone, our activities chairperson, does a great job coordinating in-hall activities. Etc. etc. But on the issues that really influence dorm life, the government is impotent; even worse, it is used by the management and RHPO to help justify some of their decisions.

For example, at the beginning of this school year, the head advisers brought the new alcohol policy before the government of Akers for approval. (This policy banned keggars.) Well, we didn't really approve. That doesn't matter, the advisers informed us sternly, this policy has been decided upon by Those Higher Up. Your approval, they continued, is just a formality. You really have no choice.

There are other examples, but I won't bore you with them.

One wonders why the management and advisory staffs even bother to seek government approval. The explanation is simple. If a student complains (rightfully so) that she

True fan will leave Earvin alone

The full-page advertisement (back page) in Tuesday's State News was a tactless farce. We are dedicated Spartan fans and believe that the University needs a new sports arena, but to put the pressure on Earvin is unjust. Let Earvin make up his own mind. The true fan will support MSU and Earvin, whether he stays or goes.

The letter mentions Earvin's unselfish attitude, but where is the author's unselfish attitude. Their concern seems to be centered on the revenue that Earvin could bring to their alma mater, not on his personal well-being. We consider this a very selfish act.

The State News' pot bubbles over with dumb logic

If the pot can call the kettle black, then your March 30 editorial, "Liberal when convenient," must win some sort of prize for unintended irony (call it hypocrisy), smugness, and just plain dumb reasoning. With what moral authority do you condemn the trustees for (in your words) "fallibility of their characters" because they attended the NCAA basketball game in non-ERA Utah when you, in the same editorial, admit that the State News "sent reporters and photographers to cover the historic event"? Are you expecting the trustees to boycott the game out of high principle when you so obviously do not hold yourselves to the same standard? The trustees' earlier resolution to discourage travel to non-ERA states may now be a source of some embarrassment for them, but alleging to them "the moral convictions of Benedict Arnolds" overstates the case so crassly and so intemperately (and, one must add, so unhistorically) as to raise earnest doubts about your standards of judgment and ultimately thereby to undermine your entire credibility.

If you are really so fervent about the issue, why did you not crusade to have the MSU basketball team boycott the tournament entirely, or failing that, refuse any coverage of the Utah games? Not that I am advocating either of these positions, but surely you must see the point.

If you sometimes wonder why the faculty does not take the State News seriously, then take another look at your editorial.

We need nuclear power

I was appalled and very dismayed at the incompetence and shortsightedness of the State News editorial entitled "The time for a nationwide nuclear moratorium is now." I would like to try to set the record straight about nuclear power. Nuclear power represents over 12 percent of the total power generated in the U.S. If we were to shut down these generators power companies would have to implement periodic brownouts of utility service. There are also long-term issues that have to be considered. Without more nuclear power, oil imports would have to increase and the U.S. strategic position in the world would suffer. Also we will have to have nuclear power to meet future energy needs. An unpublished Energy Department study of future power needs, done at the request of a Senate subcommittee, concluded that the U.S. must substantially increase nuclear-generating capacity by the end of the century to sustain growth. So if we implement a nationwide nuclear moratorium as the profound State News suggests we will not only be sitting in the dark but our children and maybe ourselves will have no jobs because there is no power to run our plants. This is not as ridiculous as it sounds. World oil production is expected to peak by energy department estimates somewhere around 1985. This means even if the U.S. wanted to buy more oil to generate electricity it couldn't! Much was said in the State News editorial about the accident at the Three Mile Island plant. They classified it as "The worst nuclear accident in history." I take this as a compliment to the nuclear industry because even though all the safety mechanisms failed, combined with a possible human error, not one person died or was overexposed to radiation. We as Americans must look to the future and the future as it stands right now must include nuclear power!

Basketball killed ASMSU

The ASMSU election returns give the term "low voter turnout" new depth of meaning. They are nothing short of an absolute farce. Running unopposed for the Arts and Letters seat, I did not expect excitement to draw students to the polls in droves. But the other college races were little better if not worse.

Bob Carr had the highest vote total, 252 out of some 6,500 students in the College of Business. I've gotten more votes in high school — and I'm from a rural high school!

Make no mistake, this disaster was not the fault of the candidates or the people who actually voted. This was the doing of those BB-brained aborigines, who go out on a rampage after a basketball game (which afterward is entertainment and not of earth shattering importance in the real world). It was the thousands of non-voting students who shafted the people trying to get better health care from Olin, no more tuition increases, the repeal of the 21-year-old drinking age, passage of ERA, a more responsible DPS, etc. etc.

In fact, I'll be specific about exactly who got shafted by this abysmal election turnout — look in a mirror the person I am referring to should be looking back.

Bentz letter appreciated

May I take this opportunity to compliment Jane Bentz for the excellent letter to the editor, State News, March 29, regarding litter thrown on campus.

She mentioned, so well, the thoughtlessness of certain people who foul their own environment and how this visual pollution is contamination due to careless and disrespectful attitudes.

Last year alone $70,000 was spent by the Grounds Department on litter cleanup in both the academic and the housing areas. If only the conscience of everyone could be raised to desist littering we in truth would enjoy this beautiful campus even more.

Thanks for writing the splendid letter to the editor.

Magic has his own mind

Inevitably, amidst all the celebration of the Spartans' triumphant escapades on the hardwood, there are a few selfish individuals who must display their truly greedy nature and ruin the festivities for the rest of us.

Although the MSU fans have earned the prestigious reputation as some of the most devout in the land, I seriously question their loyalty to their 'heroes' and in particular the Magic Man.

Admittedly it feels good to win and Spartan fans, like fans everywhere, would tremendously enjoy a chance at repeating as Big Ten or even National champs. Many seem to view this possibility in realistic terms providing Earvin decides to extend his college career a year or two. They seem to overlook the fact that we employ one of the finest coaches in the land with or without Magic, have a fine nucleus of returning stars to complement the successful recruiting year we're all anticipating.

Considering the situation, I can only become extremely irritated when I'm forced to listen to chants of "Two More Years!" everytime Earvin attempts to accept the accolades he so richly deserves, or I open the State News and read a full-page advertisement outlining the facts that 'should' be contributing to Earvin's upcoming decision. I'm appalled to see a young man who's given so much energy and spirit to this school and to this community pressured and harassed at every conceivable opportunity.

I'm sure Magic is keenly aware of the multitude of factors that will be involved in his decision whether or not to turn pro. Give him some credit, folks, he certainly seems to be a very perceptive and intelligent young man.

Meanwhile, after all the sweat and pain that he's endured working toward and achieving the most coveted goal in all of college basketball, let's give him a chance to revel in the sweetness of it all. When April 25 rolls around, we'll hear from Earvin Johnson, and whatever he has to say, the TRUE Spartan fans will be supporting him 100 percent!

Akers boycott is too little too late

The Akers Hall cafeteria boycott, April 3, was held for many reasons. However, I feel that the main point has not been emphasized. Many hours of time and effort went into the preparation, and informing of the Akers residents that a boycott was to take place, but how many of the residents really knew why this action was taken.

The boycott was a student response to the dismissal of the student personnel manager of the cafeteria, Darryl Yott. The reason for his removal is not known. However, the Akers Hall administration was attacked because Yott was the only manager in Akers that made himself visible to the students, while listening to concerns, wants and needs in relation to the cafeteria and the services that are offered through this area of the residence hall. The boycott, however, will not get his job back. The point should be stressed and attention given to this action that the students of Akers Hall are unhappy with management.

Many of the residents are not aware of the other problems that have risen this year involving conflicts with the management. This one incident, concerning Darryl Yott, is one of the many problems in Akers, but only this one issue is being stressed. How many Akers residents are aware of the other problems? For example, I doubt very few people were aware of the conflicts that developed full term between student supervisors in the cafeteria and the management or the incident winter term involving the student cooks which caused a few uneasy days for all of the cafeteria employees. My question is, where was all of the student concern then?

There have been too many problems this year and it is about time the residents give them some attention. This is one incident of many and the problem stems from too much authority in the hands of a few people in Akers Hall.

The boycott will have proved to be an effective measure if it is followed by more interest and concern about the activities of the management in Akers Hall. The removal of the student personnel manager should not be over-emphasized, the residents need to take a closer look at the other problems that developed this year which are also important and need to be considered. It is about time that Akers residents wake up and take interest on policies and issues that affect our living environment.

VIEWPOINT: HOLDEN HALL BUDGET

Black caucus urges action

By
The Holden Hall Black Caucus

While the black students of Holden Hall's Black Consciousness were viewing the Roots series of Feb. 19, painfully reminding past acts of cruelty and discrimination, the General Council of Holden Hall was in the process of rescinding $100 of our already-cut budget. The justification for this action was . . . NONE!

We ask, "Why Caucus?" the answer, unjustifiable. We ask, "Why $100 from Caucus budget and no funds from any other outstanding group?" the answer, unjustifiable. We ask, "What is this money going to be used for?" the answer to this question was, "The money is for coffee for finals week." When we checked through previous General Council meeting minutes we found that money had already been allocated from the budget for this coffee. There seems to be foul play, something out of place, correct?

We are disgusted at this blatant show of discrimination! This money was allocated through a democratic vote of floor representatives and alternates. Immediately after the budget was passed and all standing committees were down to their bare minimum, one or two racist residents of Holden Hall began circulating a petition in the living areas against Caucus funding. We found it very peculiar that out of the 105 black residents in the dorm not one was exposed to this petition during its circulation. (Is this the type of dirty politics that dorm government responds to? It was brought to our attention that the General Council's past president of Holden Hall was instrumental in the petition circulation and creation. It's called institutional racism, and it is alive and well in Holden Hall's General Council.)

The timing was perfect for the circulation of this petition. Roots was being run, midterms were upon us and finals were rapidly approaching. The black alternate floor representatives were engrossed in one of these three which left the dorm council meeting at the mercy of the racists within its ranks. This has happened here in Holden Hall and the Black Consciousness is appalled that blatant discrimination has been unlooked in dorm government.

Here in Holden Hall and all over campus it exists. It is time to stop paying lip service to unjustifiable acts against Caucus and start doing something about them. We most definitely are!

Fine pair of new LPs out

By DAVE DI MARTINO
State News Reviewer

I wrote about Cafe Jacques sometime last year. The group's first album, Round the Back, was one of those memorable discs that seemed to get better with each playing; a year later, it still sounds as good as it did initially.

I hope that's the case with International (Columbia JC 35697), Cafe Jacques' newest LP. One of the albums I spent a great deal of time listening to over spring break, the LP shows a surprising amount of maturity and versatility that hopefully will result in a respectable amount of airplay for the band. The group, to my mind, is one of those that needs just a minimum of airplay to make it big — they're simply that good.

Trying to put a label on the kind of music Cafe Jacques plays isn't an easy task. I hear a little Genesis, 10cc and Heads, Heads & Feet — but the group's sound is hardly as derivative as such a comparison might imply. One particularly fine track on the LP, "Man in the Meadow," strikes me as a kind of merging of the Yardbirds' "Still I'm Sad" — Far Eastern sound, a little early Pink Floyd and someone else I can't quite put my finger on.

But more than anyone else, Cafe Jacques are starting to sound like themselves. The band — just a trio comprised of Chris Thompson, Michael Ogle-tree and Peter Veitch — has developed into a very cohesive, very sophisticated unit that could easily be selling records at the same rate as Supertramp or Genesis. In fact, the band is considerably better than that latter group, as there isn't a note of excess to be heard anywhere at all on their new record.

Three cuts especially stand out on International. Aside from "Man in the Meadow," opening track "The Boulevard of Broken Dreams," and "Chanting and Raving" both show highly imaginative arranging and some incredible production work by Rupert Hine, who's produced both this disc and the group's first one. Along with highly imaginative songwriting and arranging, Cafe Jacques excel at putting together very memorable melodies in the tastiest of contexts. Former Caravan members John G. Perry and Geoff Richardson help out on their respective instruments throughout, and Genesis vocalist Phil Collins — who wrote a blurb praising the group's first LP on its American cover — helps out on percussion. A highly recommended effort. International by all rights should be the album to break Cafe Jacques wide open in this country.

The Wild Places (Sire SRK 6065), Duncan Browne's latest record, is packaged somewhat deceptively. I've already seen it filed in the disco sections of two different record stores, no doubt due to the hot-to-trot, leopard-skin-clad young woman working away on ol' Duncan on the album's cover. Yet the album seems the total antithesis of modern disco — people on the edge, afraid of losing their autonomy, sing this on the LP's title track: "I don't want to feel like a machine/I'm not the only one who wants to feel the in-between/That's why I'm deep into this fatal fascination/That's why I've lost the art of conversation, and/Ohh... take me to the wild places/If you want to see what's really in my soul..."

Browne's transition from an acoustic folkie during the mid-60s — his LP Give Me, Take You on the Immediate label was something of an underground classic — to the futuristic sounds of Metro, his most recent band, was an amazing leap. Metro was one of last year's undiscovered gems, an LP sounding at times like David Bowie and about six other groups that would be futile to list here. The important thing is that Browne hasn't disregarded Metro's unique musical approach on Wild Places, and has actually taken it considerably further.

Browne's new album boasts four superb tracks and one very impressive instrumental. The tracks — "Wild Places," "Roman Veu," "Kisarazu" and "The Crash" — are whispered, delicate and obviously folk-based, but Browne's prowess as a guitarist makes them very much more than folk music set to a rock context. Assistance by the superb drummer Simon Phillips, not to mention bassist John Giblin and keyboardist Tony Hymas, helps make Wild Places a superb collection of well-played, sophisticated rock. "Camino Real," the eight-minute instrumental that closes side one, shows Browne and the musicians involved here to be fully capable of performing music on par with Genesis without the huffy over-extensions Genesis seems to feel necessary.

The Wild Places is a very urban-sounding album. The themes generally deal with emotions, but the setting and the arrangements bring to mind the decadence and emotionlessness of the city. The dense production, by Browne himself, is predominated by a combination of acoustic guitar and electronics that gives the album a mood quite unlike any other I've heard.

All told, Duncan Browne appears to be a fairly major talent. If performers like Al Stewart, himself an ex-folkie, can manage to score heavily commercially, it would be unfortunate if someone much more talented like Browne remains in relative obscurity. On a scale of one to 10, I'd give The Wild Places a nine — and if you get a chance to hear it, you probably will, too. Top-knotch stuff.

'Steambath' opens tonight

By ROSANNE SINGER
State News Staff Writer

When the BoarsHead Theater's production of Steambath opens tonight, spectators will see a unique vision of God and the afterlife. Bruce Jay Friedman's 1970 black comedy depicts God as a Puerto Rican steambath attendant, and a steambath as a type of limbo or waiting room between this world and the next.

When the play opened off-Broadway, the New York Times review read: "Like all good plays about the afterlife, Steambath is really about this life; and like all good fantasies, it is really an attempt to convey a set of feelings about reality." Playwright Friedman also wrote the plays Scuba Duba and a new one, A Foot in the Door, and is the author of such books as A Mother's Kisses and The Lonely Guy's Book of Life.

Herbert Ferrer, who plays the part of Morty, the attendant, made his debut with the BoarsHead Theater in Uncle Vanya as Dr. Astrov. He is co-founder and director of finance and educational development of the Attic Theater in Detroit.

In his BoarsHead debut, John Ammerman plays the part of Tandy, the nonbelieving newcomer at the steambath. A graduate of Central Michigan University, Ammerman is currently completing his master's degree in acting at the University of Georgia where he has appeared in productions of Tartuffe and Who's Happy Now. A specialist in mime, he is conducting mime workshops and giving performances in the Lansing area.

Other Steambath cast members include Kerry Shanklin, Doug Schirmer, Richard Thomson and David Montee. John Peakes is directing the production and recommends it for mature audiences only.

Steambath runs through April 22 at the Center for Arts on Grand Avenue. Performances Thursday, Friday and Sunday are at 8 p.m. Showtimes Oogie-Boogie: A discoid at last!!

Geez! What's a poor boy to do? Play in a rock 'n' roll band? Nope. Not anymore! It's time to ah, uh, get downunh, ah, boogie!!

"DISCO TAKES OVER!" proclaimed last week's Newsweek, and the new issue of Rolling Stone — supposedly the last mecca of '60s rock 'n' roll, memories of the Haight, and all that other groovy stuff — features a 35-page "Disco Report," not to mention the Village People on its cover. And then, worst of all, my own trusted editor Dave DiMartino pulls the greatest betrayal since Judas Iscariot by actually reviewing the latest disco hits on this very page!

OK, I recently made a vow not to write about disco anymore. After all, I've said almost everything there is to be said about it in the past. But listen, discoids, I finally conceded: DISCO IS WHERE IT'S AT!! (Oh, God! I feel Beautiful already!) I mean, hey, I wanna be a cool guy. (Now, da ya think I'm sexy? Gee, I hope so! Send me your money!) Besides, I'm sick and tired of being put down as someone not on top of things. (Kevin Twining, can you ever forgive me?)

Listen, I've faced the music,

I've faced the facts. We're not going to save the world. Even though I've received a lot of letters from people who think the way I used to, it's pretty futile. Hell, the rock 'n' roll world is so fragmented right now that disco seems to be the only answer. (I got a letter the other day from a woman who informed me that Elvis Costello isn't a rock 'n' roll artist! I'm sorry, dear, but anyone who believes that doesn't have any idea of what rock 'n' roll is all about!) So what's the use?

It's gotten so bad that our next shipment of Hershey bars from Pennsylvania will probably have nuclear radiation in them. But I don't care. Lemme dance!! So who cares about Karen Silkwood? Who cares about the sexism inherent in disco's lyrics? Not me, that's for sure! I don't wanna think anymore. Give me my amyl nitrate 'cause I wanna dance. No more slogans like "Disco Sucks" or "No Nukes" or "Save the seals" or "peace, love and understanding" for me. From now on, it's gonna be "Oogie boogie boogie boogie!" Don't you step on my Gucci boots or my disco shoes!!

Who cares that Neil Bogart, the man who gave us Donna Summer and the Village People, predicts that World War III is imminent, and that disco is a good form of "fantasy" escape? Who cares that John Paulk of Joint Communication Corp., a Toronto firm that love disco. That's great 'cause it makes everything so cut and dried that we can also presuppose that all blacks love watermelons, all Chicanos carry switchblades, and all Polish band is a rock 'n' roll unit, and that "Heart of Glass" is just a

But listen, discoids, I finally conceded: DISCO IS WHERE IT'S AT!! (Oh, God! I feel Beautiful already!) I mean, hey, I wanna be a cool guy. (Now, da ya think I'm sexy? Gee, I hope so! Send me your money!) Besides, I'm sick and tired of being put down as someone not on top of things.

studies cultural trends, calls disco "The music that fiddles while Rome burns?" Who cares that Rolling Stone describes disco as "fanfare for the apocalypse." Not me! I will survive 'cause that's the way, uh huh, uh huh, I like it!

Ya know, I was all prepared to refute the Newsweek and Rolling Stone articles before my transformation into a Beautiful Person. But now I basically agree. It's true that "Boogie oogie oogie" is no more ridiculous than "Tutti Frutti" — A wop bop a loopa a wop bam boom!! Of course, it's also true that you didn't need a computer to produce the latter — all you needed were a few emotional kids standing on a streetcorner — and we have progressed a lot in the 25 years since Little Richard. But what the hell, the '70s has been the decade of regression, after all.

I mean, it's really neat that disco allows us to regress to stereotypes that the '60s supposedly did away with. I've often been accused of being homophobic 'cause I used to hate disco. It didn't matter that I've always been a strong proponent of human rights and many of my friends are gay. It seemed that 'cause I hated disco, I also hated gays. (It doesn't even matter that disco sells the most to upper-middle class kids who spend their parents' money on vinyl they'll be using as frisbees within 10 years.) Nope, I agree. All gays flash in the pan. Besides, all these performers have incorporated melody into their disco hits, and that means that it can't really be disco, can it?

But you know, it was a rock 'n' roll band that made me transform in the first place. I entered a record shop last Friday, and everyone in the place was clapping and shaking their booties to "Shake Your Groove Thing." I realized there and then that I was tired of being a cultural outcast, especially when I saw a 12-inch disco single by one of my all-time favorite bands, the Kinks. I picked it up immediately, and the clerk said, "Hmmm, I bet this is the first disco single you ever bought." To which I replied: "Shake yo' thang! Unh, huh, get it on!!" (Ya see, I'm learning!)

Was I disappointed when I got home? This record — "I Wish I Could Fly Like a Superman" — is a put-on: satirizing disco's "macho" image and the escapism of it all. Besides, it's great rock 'n' roll with an accented beat. I should have known better since I'd read that Ray Davies was very upset by the cover disco version of "You Really Got Me" released last summer. And — geez — is people are stupid. It must also mean that one of my favorite rock heroes, Lou Reed (a man who has been "out of the closet" longer than almost anyone I can think of), will probably be performing disco on his next album, right?

But that only follows because Newsweek and Rolling Stone informed me that many "great" rock 'n' rollers are going disco. Hey, look at the Stones' "Miss You." It doesn't matter that the song was "discofied" without the band's knowledge, or that it was about super-disco Bianca Jagger, or that Keith Richard recently said he "despised" disco music. Who cares about wasted junkies anyway? Rod Stewart is an egotistical jerk who doesn't deserve to be associated with rock 'n' roll. Paul McCartney is a musical prostitute who should have retired in 1970 if he really wanted history to treat him kindly. Poor Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys doesn't know where he is half the time, and Mike Love has been apologizing before the ban performs its new disco hit in concert. Debbie Harry of Blondie has made it emphatic in concert that her he ever being sarcastic on the lyrics: "I switched on the radio/And nearly dropped dead/The news is so bad/I fell out of bed... I'm such a wreck, but I'm 'Stayin' Alive!'" Davies, often called the Alexander Pope of rock, has always been one of the genre's greatest and wittiest social critics. He thinks too much, and, God know, there's no room for thought in the world today!

Because, just as it was a Beatles' world in the '60s, it's a disco world today. Hell, you can even have a disco wedding or order Disco Polka from TV ads. (Can you imagine: "I don't want her, you can have her, she's too fat for me" done with a THUMP... THUMP... THUMP... I love it!) And RCA is reportedly going to re-release Elvis Presley's early rock hits with a disco mix. Which just goes to show that nothing is sacred in our disco world, with the exception of the Village People. The Village People are so neat! Given to us by the same man who gave us Kiss, they are disco's answer to Kiss — a manufactured product. There's no room for art in a disco world. But the People are great — so patriotic, and as Lester Bangs points out in Rolling Stone, they should "tackle a different patriotic project each week: painting Harlem Day-Glo, teaching terminal cancer patients the Latin Hustle and joining the Peace Corps to erect the first disco in Biafra." But what's best is that the People's irreverent, tongue-in-cheek image means absolutely nothing at all. And this is why they are disco's greatest act.

Who cares? Disco has put so many musicians out of work that they have formed an organization called Musicians Against Disco. Who ever heard of organization for gain in a disco world? Who cares that disco is mindless... mindless... mindless... Jess mind. If we can't think and if we're anesthetized to the point that we can't feel, what's it going to matter when it all comes down? BOOGIE DOWN! And Devo is right!

Edgar Buchanan dies after long illness

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Character actor Edgar Buchanan, who appeared in dozens of westerns and played the cantankerous Uncle Joe on television's Petticoat Junction, died Wednesday at Eisenhower Memorial Hospital. He was 76 and had recently undergone brain surgery.

The gravely voiced performer had been comatose for six weeks and died at 5:50 a.m. as a result of the prolonged coma, complicated by pneumonia and a stroke, said hospital spokesperson John Millrany.

Buchanan, who gave up dentistry at age 38 and became one of Hollywood's most successful supporting actors, underwent surgery Jan. 29 to remove a tube that was put in his brain four years ago to help circulation of spinal fluids, Millrany said.

"Surgeons discovered an inflammation of the brain when the tube was removed, and the aging actor's condition deteriorated further when he contracted meningitis and 'a very serious case of pneumonia,'" hospital officials said. A stroke last week was a contributing factor to the death, Millrany said.

The heavy-set actor, usually cast as a likeable rogue, appeared in more than 80 movies, including many westerns, and in 150 television dramas before landing the role of Uncle Joe in the Petticoat Junction series on CBS-TV in the 1960s.

Born March 20, 1903, in Humansville, Mo., the son of a dentist, Buchanan enrolled at the University of Oregon in Eugene and took both pre-med and drama courses.

At the urging of his father, he went on to the North Pacific Dental College in Portland, where he met and married classmate Mildred Spence. He practiced dentistry in Eugene for 10 years while also working as assistant to the local university's drama coach. But then he moved closer to Hollywood by opening an office in Altadena.

He became involved in the Pasadena Playhouse, and was in his 11th production when a Hollywood movie scout took notice. That contact launched his movie career with a role in Arizona.

But the dental work didn't end there. Buchanan was hired to play veterinarian Dr. Samuels — stepfather to outlaws Frank and Jesse James — in the movie The Great Missouri Raid. When Macdonald Carey broke a tooth in a fight scene, Buchanan contrived a temporary cap that allowed Carey to continue work.

Among Buchanan's other films were When the Daltons Rode, Escape to Glory, Texas, The Desperadoes, Buffalo Bill and Coroner Creek.

He was also a regular on Cade's County, a CBS-TV television series which aired for a year in the early 1970s, in which he played Deputy J.J. Jackson to Glenn Ford's Sheriff Sam Cade.

Buchanan is survived by his wife of 51 years, Mildred, and a son, Buck.

Funeral services were scheduled at Forest Lawn Cemetery in Hollywood, but the date was pending, a spokesperson said.

Globetrotters do their thing for Spartan fans

Jenison Fieldhouse was again packed to the rafters with 10,004 fans Tuesday night, and it wasn't to watch the NCAA champion Spartans play, either.

But those who came saw excellent and entertaining basketball, nonetheless. The capacity throng watched the fabled Harlem Globetrotters do their thing.

The big turnout may have been because of the tremendous success that the Spartans had this season. When the public address announcer told the crowd before the game that several of the NCAA champs were in attendance, the noise level reached that of when MSU played. Many fans undoubtedly wanted to see more basketball and the Globetrotters fit the bill.

More likely, though, the large draw was due to the hard work of Anne Ganakas, who works for the MSU Sports Club program, and her staff. They worked with the Globetrotters on a publicity and advertising program that was truly effective. The profits from the game went to the Sports Club, which is a just reward for their efforts.

Whatever the reason for the large draw, what the fans saw was entertaining. The Globetrotters were missing their main attraction for many years, Meadowlark Lemon, who hung up his sneakers for good. But the show must go on, and it doesn't seem like Lemon is missed very much.

Geese Ausbie plays the clown for Lemon now. In fact, he plays a little bit too much clown. Ausbie accidentally pulled down the pants of a child he had pulled out of the crowd, leaving the youngster exposed to the entire audience. Still, even without their old star, the Globetrotters are clearly better than before. Evidently, the Trotters will be around and entertaining fans for a long time.

It is refreshing to see a professional athlete that plays the sport not just for money, but for fun. In these days of Pete Rose, who consider $400,000 a year to play baseball an insulting offer, these athletes are few and far between.

So when Curly Neal talks, people listen, or at least they should to the Globetrotter who has been around for 16 years. Neal went to Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, N.C. and received questionnaires from three National Basketball Association Teams — the New York Knicks, the Detroit Pistons and the Baltimore Bullets.

But his family needed more money at the time, and the offer from the Globetrotters was the best. And Neal isn't sorry about his decision.

"I know I could have made it in the NBA, there is no doubt," he said at halftime of Tuesday's game, with his teammates watching television and playing backgammon behind him. "But the years with the Globetrotters have been great."

Over his 16 years with the club, Neal has seen many things — TV appearances, commercials, players coming and going — and he thinks the future of the Harlem Globetrotters will improve.

"The future of the Globetrotters is going to get better with or without me," he said. Neal went on to say that he was grooming Eddie Fields, a guard from the University of Oklahoma, to be the ball-handler that he has been all these years.

As for his own future, Neal just said that he wanted to play for the Globetrotters "as long as I can. Even if I'm not playing anymore, I'd like to be part of the organization with the Globetrotters."

Led by Neal, the Globetrotters left everyone in the attendance amazed with what they can do with the basketball. People are well aware of just what they are capable of doing when the fans pay their way into the arena. Still when the show is over, the Trotters live up to their nickname of the "Magicians of Basketball." Excuse me, Earvin.

Tigers snowed

DETROIT (UPI) — Postponement of the Detroit Tigers' season opener today against the Texas Rangers has forced cancellation of plans to show the first home game on television.

Had the game been shown as originally planned, club officials said they believed it would have been only the second home-opener in the club's history to be seen on TV.

Jim Campbell, president and general manager of the Tigers, originally had announced the sold-out opening day game against the Rangers would be carried by the station originating telecasts (WDIV-TV) for Detroit baseball games and also offered to other stations in the club's network.

But the weather delay of the opener to Friday caused a conflict. The station's equipment was already committed to the taping of its weekly bowling show and could not be used for baseball.

Campbell had said the game was being offered as a public service because all tickets were sold a week in advance and Tiger Stadium seating has been reduced to 49,000 due to renovation. He cautioned the lifting of the blackout should not be regarded as precedent-setting since the club was not legally required to televise the game.

Spartans open season — again

By DAVE JANSSEN
State News Sports Writer

If the weather and the opposing team cooperate, the MSU women's softball team will finally get its regular season underway this afternoon.

MSU has learned to accept being fouled up by the Michigan weather but might not be able to figure out a team like Delta College, which found a way to waste a perfect day for softball.

In what MSU coach Dianne Ulibarri called a case of "miscommunication," Delta failed to show up for the Spartans' home opener at the softball field behind Jenison Fieldhouse Tuesday afternoon. Ulibarri was to call Delta Tuesday morning to confirm that field conditions were satisfactory and that the doubleheader was still on. The Spartan coach did just that but the opposing school somehow muffed the message and subsequently the games against MSU.

MSU now hopes that the snow and rain will hold so it can play its new home opener, a doubleheader with Western Michigan University, at 3 this afternoon. Scheduled to start for MSU are: Michele Van Howe, third base; Carol Hutchins, shortstop; Jennie Klepinger, second base; Nancy "Izzy" Forester, first base; Carmen King, leftfield; Connie Seymour, centerfield; and Linda Ascutto, rightfield. Ulibarri has not yet decided who will open at the pitcher and catcher positions today. Laurel Hills and Wendy Greenwood had been scheduled to pitch for the Spartans on Tuesday.

The games with WMU will be big for the Spartans in more ways than one. Not only is WMU the regular season opener for MSU, but also the team that beat the Spartans for the state title last year.

"It's a big game, considering the rivalry between us," said MSU catcher Pam Berlinski, "and though the game doesn't mean as much at this point in the season, we'll be out to beat them and hopefully the weather will cooperate."

Berlinski explained that MSU was undefeated going into the state finals last season when WMU defeated them twice to take the title away.

Coach Ulibarri admits that WMU will be as tough as they were last year, but as always, remains optimistic about her own team, which is hitting well and playing strong defense.

"They're (WMU) good," Ulibarri said, "but I still think we're better."

MSU faces season with different look

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

With MSU's baseball team's opening game of the season, at Eastern Michigan University, being just two days away, the coaching staff has discovered, through practices and Spring training, that they will have a slightly different look than from last year.

Last season, MSU, on its way to the runner-up spot in the Big Ten and NCAA appearance, had an offensive-minded team that displayed power and speed.

But this year, the Spartans, so far, have shown that pitching and defense are their strengths.

"Overall, the defense has improved," coach Dan Litwhiler said. "Our hitting hasn't improved, but we think it will." By now the coaches know what they'll be throwing at their opponents for the 1979 season. So it's time to give a breakdown on the team.

Outfield: Litwhiler is pleased with the way the outfield has played defensively during Spring training, but he feels their hitting will have to pick up. "On thing about baseball is that the outfield has to hit if you're going to win," Litwhiler said. "They've had a lot of tough luck so far, and I know they can hit better than they have."

MSU lost one outfielder from last year's squad an All-American centerfielder Kirk Gibson. Returning starters will be Ken Robinson, who started the Spring trip with an 0-11 slump before hitting .350 overall, and centerfielder Tom Schultz, who played rightfield last year while hitting .322. Joe Lopez, who was mostly a designated hitter last year, will start in rightfield.

The top outfielder off the bench will be Ken Mehall, who hit .333 in Texas after a slow start.

Infield: MSU lost two starters at the corners through graduation in third baseman Tony Spada and first baseman Jerry Weller. Freshman Chris Dorr will take Weller's place at first base. He displayed some power down South and led the regulars in hitting with a .381 average.

"Dorr hit well the whole Spring until he was hurt and missed the last three or four games," Litwhiler said.

Litwhiler feels Dorr's back-up, Kirk Haines, can hit better than his .174 average in Texas. At third base, MSU, in the beginning started Al Dankovich on the Spring trip, but then he was injured, and Brad Gebben ended up taking the job away from him.

"It was one of those things where one player's hard luck is another player's good luck," Litwhiler said. "Brad showed good promise and we'll stay with him. It'll now be hard for Dankovich to get back in."

The Spartans will have experience up the middle with returning starters Rodger Bastien at shortstop and Randy Hop at second base. Bastien was an All-Big Ten selection last year, hitting .353. Hop hit only .183 last year after a sparkling Spring training trip. But he came back and had another impressive Spring trip this year batting at a .333 clip. "Hop had a real good game Spring offensively and defensively," Litwhiler said.

Pitching: "This was the biggest plus we had down in Texas," Litwhiler said. "We have a lot of good depth, and all of them did a real good job at one time or another. What's been important is that their control has been a real plus."

MSU will have mostly a right-handed staff with Brian Wolcott, Mark Pomorski, Jim Cotter and Jay Strother leading the way. Other starters and bullpen workers are Steve Kruse, Eric Rosekrans, Phil Magsig, Greg Butzirus, Gary Tyler and Mark Sutherland.

Catching: This duty, like last year, will be shared by Mark Russ and Jerry Pollard, who each played 27 games last season. Larry Hols will be the back-up.

Bench: Jim Buterakos, who "filled in adequately in Texas" according to Litwhiler, can play both positions on the left side of the infield and second base. Other key players off the bench will be Steve Kinney and Tim Kearly.

Softball tryouts

The Mason Majors, a women's slow-pitch softball team, is holding tryouts Saturday at 3 p.m. for anyone interested in playing on the team. For more information, anyone interested should call the coach, Jerry Willis, at 676-2981.

Fossum takes young squad to opener

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Sports Writer

A young but talented group of golfers will make up the 1979 edition of the MSU golf team which will travel to Champagne, Ill. this weekend for the Illinois Intercollegiate Tournament. The tourney represents the first authentic competition of the season for the golfers. The team took a Spring trip, but played only local competition and worked on their individual games, according to head coach Bruce Fossum.

"We had an opportunity to train and work on our own games," he said. "We also had some intrasquad competition."

Fossum said that this team could be the best he has had in the last five years, and maybe even the best he has ever had.

The team has not yet been able to practice on their Forest Akers course, and as a result has been playing on area courses.

Fossum said that the team probably will not play as well this early in the season as they will two or three weeks from now. He added that he hopes the team is playing well enough at the end of the season to attain their season-long goal, a spot in the NCAA tournament.

Fossum announced the six players he will be taking to the Illinois tournament based on the results of the spring trip.

The Spartans will be led by junior Tom Mase, a transfer from Texas in Fossum's words, "a whale of a golf player."

Returning from last year will be Eric Gersonde and Rick Grover, the top golfer on last year's team, along with Hill Herrick, who has shot a 66 already this year. Steve Lubbers and David Belen.

Fossum said that to qualify for the NCAA tournament, the Spartans will have to place at least second in the talented Big Ten conference.

Once again, Ohio State will be the team to beat this season. In the past two years the Buckeyes have claimed the conference title, and Fossum says this year could be yet another repeat.

Nearly all of the golfers from last year's championship Buckeye team will be returning, including John Cook, the national amateur champion.

Fossum says that teams like Purdue, Michigan and Indiana are always good for a challenge, but that the Spartans are definitely capable of finishing at least second in the conference.

This weekend's tournament will take place at the Savoy Championship Golf Course and will consist of two rounds of 18 holes.

Men open up with four road matches

The MSU men's tennis team will open its season this weekend on the road against Purdue and Illinois, but the Spartans will go without coach Stan Drobac who will not travel with them due to illness.

Senior Steve Klemm will be in charge of the team. He does not foresee any problems, but said that for some of the freshmen on the team the coach's presence could have been helpful.

"I'll be on the court," Klemm said. So the freshmen will basically be on their own.

The order of the singles and the pairing of doubles teams was more or less decided on after the Spring trip. Klemm is the number one singles player, Matt Sandler, two, Frank Willard, three, Scott King, four, Mike Stone, five and Jeff Wickman, six.

The doubles teams are Klemm and Sandler, King and Stone, Willard and Wickman.

Klemm said that little is known about the Illinois team, except that they are young. MSU beat Purdue last year, 7-2.

All that Klemm hopes for is that the players get into their matches and produce some good results. Klemm is recovering from a bad cold that kept him out of practice for a few days.

These matches will be the first since the team returned from their Spring trip to Tennessee. The Spartans do not have a home match until April 17, against Michigan. "It's too bad, especially for our freshmen, that our first four matches are on the road," Drobac said.

'DINKY TECHNICALITY' OVER CLASSIFICATIONCouncil reports to board delayed

By KY OWEN
State News Staff Writer

Due to a minor technicality, the ASMSU Student Board minority councils had to wait for a board member to yield the floor at Tuesday night's meeting before they were allowed to give their weekly reports.

Council representatives give reports to the board at each meeting and were placed on Tuesday's agenda, but since they were transferred to Programming Board last term they are no longer called councils, but activity departments.

After a report from the Gay/Lesbian Council, Dan Kelly, Interfraternity Council representative, pointed out to the board the Code of Operations specifies activity departments, not councils.

Karen Passiak, board chairperson and College of Human Ecology representative, then skipped the other councils and moved to governing group reports.

Chris Hoffman, Residence Halls Association president, yielded the floor to representatives from the councils who then gave their reports.

"I'm unimpressed," said Hoffman.

She did not want to suppress the councils because of the transfer.

Dan Stouffer, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative, said the councils must apply to the Programming Board to become activity departments.

"It's a dinky technicality," he said. "There's not one member that won't yield the floor (to the councils)."

Dan Hendon, All-University Elections Commission chairperson, told the board only 2,907 students voted in the election at spring term registration which is less than 5 percent of the student body.

Hendon said all candidates have been validated and told the board the election cost $3,000.

The new representatives will take office at the April 17 board meeting.

Henry Sosa, College of Arts and Letters representative, pointed out the cost of the election was more than $1 per person and called the results "abominable."

"I'm really shocked," Sosa said adding he received more votes in his high school election.

Hendon said the absence of a president and a lack of issues or "amazing" candidates were partly responsible for the low turnout.

"There was no drawing element," he said. "You got lucky your referendums passed."

In other action:
• The board approved a motion to hold an election in May to ratify the constitution of the Off-Campus Council.

If the constitution is ratified, the council will be able to send a representative to the Student board.

At the present time, all students are represented twice on the board, by college and by a governing group, except for students living off campus and not in a fraternity, sorority, or cooperative.

• The board tabled a motion to oppose plans for a downtown arena until a survey being done by the Student Board's executive office concerning how students feel about the arena.

Group to delineate funding, problems and goals for proposed multi-use facility

The Human Services Facility Study Group will discuss the problems, the goals and the methods of funding for the proposed center or centers 2 p.m. Friday at the University Apartments office conference room, 1205 S. Harrison Road.

The group, composed of University administrators and city and county representatives, will attempt to determine the framework for the facility, said project manager Brad Pryce.

The project is proposed to serve University Village, Spartan Village, Cherry Lane Apartments and the Red Cedar areas of East Lansing. Pryce said. Pryce is group manager of the East Lansing Planning, Housing and Community Development Department.

Using information from questionnaires, a two-day "brainstorming session" with community members and an intensive city funded feasibility study, the group will decide what services are necessary, who will provide them and how the project will be funded, Pryce said.

Most members agree that the main priority of the facility is the establishment of a day care center, he said.

Whether the facility will consist of one unit or smaller satellite units in the area has not been determined, Pryce said.

Before funding sources can be found, he said, the committee must first outline the scope of the project.

If goals are established within the next few weeks, construction could begin by 1980, he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's most extensive trucking shutdown already hurting the auto industry, is likely to stretch at least into next week and raise the prospect of widespread economic disruptions, government officials said Wednesday.

The government had no immediate plans to seek a court-ordered end to the contract dispute.

Negotiators for the Teamsters and a group representing 500 of the largest trucking firms planned to resume talks with federal mediators Thursday for the first time since negotiations broke off last weekend. Sources close to the talks who asked not to be identified saw no likelihood of swift progress.

City to probe alleged housing code violations at apartments

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

An investigation into alleged code violations at the Hillcrest Village apartment complex was ordered by East Lansing City Council Tuesday night.

The directive to city staff to probe the alleged violations came after charges of tax inspection practices.

Kenneth W. Goodrich, president of the Hillcrest Tenants Association, charged that East Lansing housing inspectors have been ineffective in recording maintenance violations at the complex, located on Grand River Avenue near the Frandor shopping center.

City Council was presented with the accusations and a slide presentation of alleged code violations at the council meeting Tuesday night.

Goodrich maintained that each of the 17 slides presented to council represented a code violation that the housing inspector was aware of, but were not included in a November 1978 inspection report.

Councilmembers did not comment on Goodrich's presentation.

But City Manager Jerry Coffman said Wednesday that some of the slides did not show violations of city code.

Bradford Pryce, group manager for the city Planning, Housing and Community Development Department, will conduct the investigation and present his findings at the council meeting in two weeks.

"I can't tell from the slides whether they were code violations," Pryce said. "I'll inspect the areas myself."

Goodrich charged that the trash bins behind Hillcrest have been in double code violation for more than three years because they are not covered or screened from public view.

John Price, 517 Highland Ave., said the Hillcrest trash bins, which border his property, overflow and smell terrible in the summer. He asked the council why no action has been taken in the last three years.

The Walter Neller Co., which manages the Hillcrest property for its absentee owner, said it has ordered new trash bins.

The new bins should be in place today or by the end of the week, said Paul Gentilozzi, manager of the Hillcrest property.

The new bins will comply with city code, Gentilozzi said, and cost $577 each.

Jerry Nash, an East Lansing housing inspector examined Hillcrest in October 1978 and found more than 200 code violations. To date, at least 150 of the violations have been brought up to code, Pryce said.

CITIZENS SWAP ANECDOTES

Humor in Harrisburg

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. — As

atomic engineers and nuclear physicists debated the fate of the Three Mile Island reactor, a hand-scrawled sign greeted workers in the state capitol cafeteria Wednesday. The message needed no explanation. It said simply: "Junk It." With the good news that the nuclear crisis had apparently eased, the atmosphere in the Harrisburg area brightened. Talk of meltdowns and bubble explosions gave way to atomic anecdotes and nuclear humor.

Authorities say that between 50,000 and 200,000 persons went into self-imposed exile in the past week, and it provided a boom to the suitcase industry. Luggage sales soared. The best seller was the 29-inch size, the largest one sold in local stores.

"The newest T-shirts in town say: 'I'm from Harrisburg. I Glow in the Dark' and 'I didn't Die at TMI.'"

"The hottest items in the Dauphin County library system are not books on dieting, jogging, sex or positive thinking. Librarians report that this week there's been a run on nuclear power books."

"At the Middletown Elks Club, two popular dishes have been renamed. A cheeseburger is now called 'The Meltdown,' and if you want to order chili, the call of the beans is 'Give me a bowl of the Bubble Buster.'"

"At 9:40 p.m. Tuesday, Gov. Dick Thornburgh announced a 24-hour civilian information hot line. Local radio and TV carried his remarks live. 'Within two minutes the whole panel lit up,' said one of the operators."

"I had some lady who asked whether it was safe to have sex within 25 miles of the plant," Kevin Caddens said. He replied that his instructions only pertained to pregnant women and pre-school children.

"A motorist pulled up to a gas station during Monday night's driving rain. The attendant came out and began wiping off the windshield. 'That's really not necessary,' the driver said. 'Oh yes it is,' the dedicated gas jockey came back. 'I've got to clean off the radiation.'"

"Even though the danger seemed to be gone, there was at least one man still calling for an evacuation. Cumberland County Commissioner Jacob A. Myers wrote Metropolitan Edison president Walter Creitz: 'Your company's actions make me feel as a public official that your presence in this area is no longer desired and you should think about evacuating.'"

Students want ASMSU tax refunds

Stouffer said. "It's not underhanded."

Nursing talk topic: future

"Encounter the Future: Grow Now," will be the theme at the annual convention of the Michigan Student Nurses' Association on April 6 and 7.

An estimated 300 nursing students from all over Michigan are expected to attend the convention at Long's Banquet and Convention Center, 6810 S. Cedar St. in Lansing.

Speakers and workshops dealing with assertiveness training, communication skills, care of the burn patient and the new birthing centers will be offered.

Issues to be discussed include: the new public health code, competency for relicensure and entry level into practice.

Exhibitors and hospital recruiters will also be available for student information.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. on both days and is open to all interested.

Commission has vacancy

The Eaton-Ingham Substance Abuse Commission has announced a vacancy and is seeking applicants to fill the position.

The commission, which serves as an advisory board to the county commissioners, coordinates and oversees the delivery of substance abuse services in Eaton and Ingham counties.

Other responsibilities include the development of comprehensive plans for substance abuse treatment, rehabilitation and prevention services.

Those interested in appointment must submit completed application forms to the Board of Commissioners Office, county courthouse, Mason, by 5 p.m., Friday.

Applications are available at the commissioners office in Mason or the Ingham County Clerk's Office in Lansing City Hall.

Although more students are receiving refunds this term, ASMSU will not be in any financial trouble, Stouffer said.

"It won't even affect us," he said. "If 10,000 people got a refund it would hurt, but we'd get along."

A $500 cushion is built into the budget to handle refunds, Stouffer said, and the total amount paid in refunds by Wednesday was $350.

At Tuesday night's board meeting, ASMSU Comptroller James Peterson, told the Student Board it should consider allowing only students who have not received a refund to attend ASMSU-sponsored events.

Stouffer said the board "will have to tighten up on everything."

Here's how to eliminate 18 hours of study time each week.

If your study technique is typical, you spend 26 hours each week buried in your books. 66-2/3% of this study time is wasted on an antiquated set of procedures. Procedures that have remained unchanged for over a hundred years.

What's worse, you presume there is nothing you can do to improve. The prevailing attitude on campus is "You either have it or you don't!"

What nonsense!

Any student with average intelligence can improve his reading and study skills at least 3 times with a) better techniques, b) expert coaching, and c) controlled practice. And he can do it quickly—in time to dramatically increase his grades in the current semester.

For this is precisely what the Evelyn Wood course offers, and backs it up with an iron-clad, no-nonsense, written guarantee.

THE GUARANTEE

Any student who attends every Evelyn Wood class, completes the required practice, yet does not improve reading and study skills at least 3 times will be eligible to receive a full tuition refund.

Over 1,000,000 Graduates Over 95% SUCCESS!

Since 1959, three Presidents have invited Evelyn Wood instructors to teach their staffs how to read better. All in all, the list of famous graduates reads like Who's Who.

Birch Bayh, U.S. Congress	Daniel K. Inouye, U.S. Congress	Julie Newmar, Actress
Madame Gandhi, India	Marshall McLuhan, Writer	Al Ulman, U.S. Congress
John Glenn, U.S. Congress	Joseph M. Montoya, U.S. Congress	J. Irving Whalley, U.S. Congress

Why Do So Many Students Enroll?

This question was posed to several thousand college freshmen who had just enrolled in the Evelyn Wood course. The answers were varied, but mostly on the same wave length: 1) They wanted to reduce their study time; 2) They wanted to feel more confident in class, more in control; and 3) They wanted to learn more, to achieve better grades.

At the end of the course, each student was asked if his goals were met. Over 95% said yes. The other 5% received their tuition back.

Why Do Most Students Read Slowly?

Most students have no idea what their reading ability is. If they are typical, they read about 300 words per minute (or one page of a novel). Why is it that students read at virtually the same speed, considering how very different they all are?

The cause can be traced back to the First Grade. When we were taught to read, we were asked to read out loud, word-by-word. Later, in the Second Grade, we were asked to stop saying each word out loud. But we never really did. Fact is, you're saying these words right now—not out loud, but to yourself, one word at a time!

This means you read only as fast as you talk—about 250 to 300 words per minute. (As if to prove the point, Guinness's Book of World Records lists John F. Kennedy as delivering the fastest speech ever at 327 words per minute.)

How Do You Learn To Read Faster? With The Same Comprehension?

At the Mini-Lesson you will find out how the Evelyn Wood course eliminates the habit of reading only one word at a time. How you can learn to read 3 or 4 words instead of only one. To see how natural this is, look at the dot in the middle of this phrase:

the grass is green

Try as you may, you can't help but see the other words. With training, you learn to use this natural, but unused potential. You learn to see groups of words simultaneously. This will double, triple, possibly quadruple your present ability.

This concept is diametrically opposed to the old-fashioned speed reading technique of picking out key phrases. In the Evelyn Wood course, skimming is a dirty word!

The PRICE BOILS DOWN TO $2 AN HOUR.

Read what the University of Illinois student paper said (Ed Sejud): "If a student avails himself of all the facilities by the (Evelyn Wood) Institute and attends all the class sessions, the price boils down to only about $2 an hour, cheaper than any private tutoring you'll ever find. Spread over four years, the course can save thousands of study hours and can probably affect a boost in a student's grade-point average. Assignments which once took days can be accomplished in a matter of hours, leaving much more time for other pursuits. The Institute estimates that it can save average students 350 hours of study time each semester—probably an understatement."

Don't take anybody's word for it—not ours, not anybody's. We developed the Mini-Lesson so you could make up your own mind about the course. The Mini-Lesson lasts only 1 hour. During that short time, you have a chance to try your hand at it—to find out if it really can do the job for you. In 60 minutes over 80% of the audience increases reading speed. Just a little, but enough to know what it's like. At the Mini-Lesson you will find out how the Evelyn Wood technique handles difficult textbook material. How it improves memory and concentration. How it makes reading a pleasure instead of a chore. Let's face it, if the Evelyn Wood course is for real, you ought to know about it.

East Lansing site rezoned to permit construction; street controversial

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

The controversial Apple Knolls condominium development project was granted site approval and a residential area was rezoned by the East Lansing City Council Tuesday night.

Council voted not to extend Brandywine Drive, which would connect the Apple Knolls development with the Tamarisk subdivision. Citizens have rallied against the connection and the Planning Commission favored it.

Apple Knolls is a development planned to border on Harrison Road between Lake Lansing Road and Saginaw Street, south of Tamarisk.

The site plan has been bounced from the Planning Commission to City Council and back again because of citizen protest of the proposed extension of Brandywine Drive.

The city planning staff recommended extension of Brandywine in order to provide more than one entrance to the Apple Knoll site.

But the city engineering department recommended that Brandywine Drive not be extended.

Developer Vern Sayers said that construction could begin on the site within 60 days.

'High-grade' pot to be given away in Berkeley raffle

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Raffle tickets are on sale around town in support of an initiative on this month's city ballot to stymie enforcement of marijuana laws. The price: some high-grade Colombian pot.

This is the second time this avant-garde university town tried to limit arrests for marijuana smoking, but the first one ran into trouble in the courts. The move is not surprising in a city dominated by the University of California, known for student activism in the '60s. The city adopted a voluntary busing plan 10 years ago and last November voters passed a rent control initiative.

On the same ballot April 17 with the marijuana initiative is a measure that would ban the city from depositing funds with banks that deal directly or indirectly with South Africa, whose racial policies have become a target in university communities across the country.

Anti-pot campaign treasurer Steve Bloom predicts 8,000 raffle tickets will be sold. He explains the prize this way: "We are saying that marijuana should be legal, and we're acting as if it is."

More than 2,000 signatures for the marijuana initiative were collected in this city of 114,000 residents with 72,133 registered voters. When through a mixup they were filed a day late, the city council, which supports the measure, voted to place it on the ballot.

The South African issue won a ballot spot on initiative petition. The city council placed a companion measure on the same ballot to clarify the intent of the initiative.

Without the clarification, opponents claimed the city would be forced to form its own bank because no bank would qualify under vague provisions of the initiative on "indirect" links to South Africa. The clarification defines the term "indirect."

E. L. ranks city service

Rankings of facilities and services in the East Lansing area will be discussed by the Public Facilities Advisory Committee at 7:30 tonight in Conference Room A of City Hall, 410 Abbott Road.

The committee will also discuss earlier survey results of East Lansing services and facilities. Lansingine if any additional information is needed.

Facilities and services for which the committee needs no additional information and those which will have no immediate effect on East Lansing will also be discussed.

Mayor Warren Widener predicts both measures will be approved. His assessment is shared by Berkeley Citizens Action, a coalition of about 100 community groups that has been a major supporter of both measures.

There has been no organized opposition to the marijuana measure, which would ban the city from spending money to enforce state and federal laws against the substance.

A similar initiative adopted in 1973 was nullified by the courts because it directed the police not to enforce marijuana laws. Supporters believe they have overcome that legal tangle by this time merely prohibiting the spending of money.

The measure specifically orders the city council not to allow city funds to be spent on enforcing anti-marijuana laws. It also orders the council to lobby for legalizing marijuana and to "seek to ensure that the Berkeley Police Department undertakes similar lobbying."

The proposal also says that University of California police "should adhere to the marijuana policy of the city of Berkeley as established by this ordinance."

"Basically, we have such a policy already," said Mayor Widener.

"We have instructed the police to put the lowest possible priority on enforcing marijuana laws. We want them to deal with serious crimes, and not hassle someone over smoking a joint."

Miller to stand trial

Stuart's husband also identified his wife's glasses, which were found at the side of Coolidge Road after her disappearance.

At the time of her disappearance, Stuart had a check book, credit cards and a health insurance card, Woodworth said. After Aug. 14, there has never been a record of any of these being used.

Daniels testified that she had never seen a picture of Miller prior to the Aug. 24 interview at which she directed a police artist to make a composite sketch that closely resembles Miller, Woodworth said.

Daniels also picked Miller out of a police lineup at the Ingham County Jail Sept. 1.

"I am convinced she (Stuart) will never be found alive," Atkinson said following the hearing.

Earlier in testimony, East Lansing Police Lt. Dean Tucker identified three pictures of a car as one belonging to Miller. Daniels had testified the car in these pictures was the auto she had seen Stuart pushed into at the corner of Coolidge Road and Fair Oaks Court the day the woman was last seen.

Atkinson said Miller's car has been given a complete scientific search in connection with the Eaton County rape case.

The Stuart trial will begin either in June or September, Atkinson said.

Miller faces a preliminary hearing on the Eaton County rape and assault charges in St. Joseph April 30.

ELF bill may go to U.P. committee

waves would be harmful to humans and wildlife.

The new bill states that Michigan does not consent to allow construction of a communications grid by the U.S. government.

Sen. John Kelly, who co-sponsored the bill, said the legislation does not only concern Upper Peninsula residents, but affects the entire state because it involves a larger issue of state and federal relations.

"It's a question of whether we want to yield jurisdiction to the federal government," the Detroit Democrat said, adding that it is the responsibility of the entire state to speak up if the federal government attempts a "military boondoggle."

Kelly said Thursday he will object to the transfer of the bill to the Upper Peninsula Committee. He said most senators supported the move, however.

Senate majority leader William Faust, a Westland Democrat, had suggested to the State Affairs committee chairperson that the bills be sent to the new committee.

Kelly and Sen. Mitch Irwin, D-Sault Ste. Marie, who also introduced the bill, objected to the proposed transfer.

Faust said he suggested the bills be moved because they referred to the Upper Peninsula and would present an opportunity for Mack's committee to have impact on legislation affecting the area.

"Sen. Mack assured me he will hold hearings," Faust said. He added that Mack did not request the bills be sent to his committee.

State bottle law blamed for layoffs percent of which would be funded under provisions of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

The plant chose to hire only 53 CETA workers, she said. Of those, 24 stayed on after the training period.

"Twenty-two of these people have been laid off for rebuilding of our furnace and their layoffs will be extended," she said. "The other two will be laid off April 15."

Huggins said though company officials considered the throwaway ban the main cause of the plant's ills, a rise in demand for plastic bottles was "directly related" to the bottle bill.

"There has been a shift in demand away from the glass bottle to the family-size plastic bottle," she said. "This is probably because a person would rather buy a big bottle and pay one deposit rather than buy a six-pack and pay six deposits."

Carolyn Brock, an aide to state Sen. Stephen Munson, D-Grand Rapids, who is chairperson of a joint committee to study the impact of the beverage container law, said the committee would look into the short and long-term economic effects of the law.

"Certainly there are employment losses, but there are also gains involved," she said.

"There may be an overall gain in employment in the long run. But we will look at not just numbers of jobs but total economic effect — we recognize that there is a difference between the loss of a minimum-wage job and one that supports a family."

Lawmakers want group to check n-power snags

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Gov. William G. Milliken was asked by two lawmakers Wednesday to name a special commission to review potential problems resulting from the operation of nuclear power plants in Michigan.

In a letter to the governor, Sen. William Sederburg and Rep. William Bryant said it would be "unwise to rely totally on government and utility officials to review the situation."

They asked Milliken to appoint a "non-suspect" group of citizens, lawmakers, nuclear scientists and state officials to review nuclear power in Michigan.

"The task force should look beyond your emergency preparedness in the case of a nuclear power plant breakdown and should also study the broader issues of the role of nuclear power in helping to meet Michigan's future energy needs," the two legislators said.

"It's not good enough, in our view, to tell our fellow citizens that the state is ready to handle an incident similar to the one in Pennsylvania."

Mountaineering #3.

METHODOLOGY

Mountaineering, as all but the chronically misinformed know, is the skill, the science and the art of drinking Busch Beer. It begins by heading for the mountains (i.e., a quick jaunt to your favorite package emporium or wateringhole) and ends by downing the mountains (i.e., slow slaking swallows of the brew that is Busch).

¶ However, between those two points lies a vast area of personal peccadilloes sometimes called technique and sometimes called methodology (depending on your major). Hence, this ad. ¶ Sipping vs. chugging. Both have their merits, of course. But generally speaking, except for cases of extreme thirst or a leaking glass, sipping is the more prudent practice for serious, sustained mountaineering. ¶ Next, the proper position. Some swear by sitting; others by standing. Suffice it to say that the most successful mountaineers are flexible, so you'll find both sitters and standers. (Except on New Year's Eve, when it's almost impossible to find a sitter.) ¶ Which brings us to additives. Occasionally a neophyte will sprinkle salt in his Busch; others mix in tomato juice; and a few on the radical fringe will even add egg. While these manipulations can't be prohibited (this is, after all, a free country), they are frowned upon. Please be advised that purity is a virtue, and the natural refreshment of Busch is best uncompromised.

¶ Finally, there's the issue of containers. Good taste dictates a glass be used. But bad planning sometimes prevents that. If you find yourself forced to drink from the can, you should minimize this breach of etiquette. Be formal. Simply let your little finger stick out stiffly (see Fig. 4). Happy Mountaineering!

Jobless aided by program

By THERESA MCCLELLAN
State News Staff Writer

Can full employment become a reality? An assistant U.S. Secretary of Labor and former MSU student said Wednesday he is working toward that goal through increased targeting efforts by the Comprehensive Employment Training Act.

Earnest Green, a CETA administrator, said since its reauthorization and the signing of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, CETA has been targeting its efforts toward those who need help the most.

"Although it is clear that as we move ahead we must be responsive to valid public concerns about lowering taxes and reducing spending," Green said, "it is equally clear that we must not allow budget trimming to unfairly victimize the poor, the disadvantaged, and the jobless just because these groups are often the least capable of organizing to express their grievances."

Green, who received his bachelor's degree in social science from MSU in 1962 and his masters in sociology from MSU in 1964, was one of the speakers at the full employment conference held at Kellogg Center Wednesday.

Green said his MSU education assisted him in his work with the OUTREACH Program for 10 years and his present job with CETA.

Green was also the first black alumnus of the famed school in Little Rock, Ark. — Central High School — which tried to prevent the entry of blacks.

Explaining the CETA administration had inherited a "situation of runaway joblessness," he quipped his first week on the job paid back what the government spent on protecting him and his black classmates.

"Through CETA," he said, "we initiated and are making significant gains with the first comprehensive youth employment program in this nation's history."

"We have brought unemployment down from 8 percent to well below 6 percent," he added.

Green said these achievements and CETA's reauthorization earlier this year, have caused it to refocus its efforts and begin attacking structural unemployment.

"This form of unemployment throws up seemingly insurmountable job barriers in the way of youth, minorities, women, veterans and other hard-hit segments of the work force," he said.

Citing statistics Green said youth unemployment is still over 16 percent and the rate for black youths is still over 35 percent.

"CETA has tightened up its concentration on the structurally unemployed and the economically disadvantaged," he said, "so that it cannot be as it has too often been in the past — a form of back door revenue sharing."

Citing efforts it is making to create more jobs, Green said CETA's tax credit would "give employers a direct uncomplicated incentive to make more and better jobs available to the disadvantaged as well as giving the disadvantaged a strong labor market advantage."

He said increased targeting is only one direction. A second direction being sought is managing and monitoring CETA programs and the reduction of fraud and abuse.

"Although a poll showed that most Americans support an active fight against joblessness, there is still the social passivity which is reflected in proposition 13 and its clones," he said.

Green localized the social passivity by comparing the atmosphere at MSU now to when he was in college.

"It is true that apathy is greater today than when I attended," he said, "but I refuse to believe that students cannot get organized."

Officials look into lifting ban on prices in beer advertising

INTERNATIONAL

State officials are looking at the possibility of lifting the ban on beer price advertising to stimulate competition and offset price hikes caused by Michigan's bottle law.

Gov. William G. Milliken has asked the Department of Commerce to review state beer regulations, with an eye toward easing both price posting and advertising rules.

Off-premises beer price advertising currently is prohibited.

"The beer ads you see are all the macho type, with football players and athletes," said Milliken aide William Rustem.

"You never see an ad with information about the product, including the price. Lawyers, doctors, optometrists are allowed to advertise now, but we do not permit price advertising of beer outside the store."

Rustem said the Milliken administration believes that "perhaps we have overregulated the beer business to the extent of limiting competition."

Changes in beer price and advertising regulations would not have to come in the form of legislation, Rustem said. They could be made by amendments to the Liquor Control Commission's rules.

David Erlandson, a spokesman for the U.S. Brewers Association, said he would "welcome deregulation."

"We believe the market forces should be the ones operating to determine prices, competition and everything else," he said.

But, Erlandson added, he does not believe advertising would spark beer price wars or significantly reduce costs.

Milliken ordered the deregulation study in part as a response to rising beer prices, which distributors and retailers blame on increased handling costs caused by the returnable bottle law.

A survey of Michigan grocers showed premium beer prices are up by an average of 14 percent for a six-pack of cans and 11 percent for bottles. Prices of locally brewed beer were up an average of 13 percent for cans and 18 percent for bottles.

The deregulation study also will consider changes in Liquor Control Commission rules which require wholesalers to file their prices with the state,

Olin rape counsel plan

Victims of sexual assault on campuses are beginning to win cases of third-party liability suits. The victims in these suits charge that the university should be held accountable for adequate education and safety.

"We are being told by Kay White to wait while they look into Olin, but with one rape a day how long can we wait?" Leland said.

"Women don't like to feel vulnerable and discriminated against and permitted from doing things because the environment is not safe — but it isn't," she said.

Leland added, "Women who are scarred from 30 years ago are beginning to talk about it (rape)" because more information is being released about the crime.

"So we not only have to help the women who have been raped this year, but also the ones from 30 years ago," Leland said. "It's so obvious we need this facility."
