Carter on oil: pay more and use less

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter told the American people Thursday night "each one of you will have to use less oil and pay more for it" as he announced plans to gradually lift ceilings on U.S. produced crude oil by 1981.

In his text for a television-radio address from the Oval Office, Carter said he is asking Congress to impose a "windfall profits tax" that would sop up half the extra revenues that oil companies would get from higher prices under decontrol or from price increases dictated by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Although Carter may legally lift controls without congressional approval, the House and Senate must approve the tax, which faces an uncertain fate on Capitol Hill.

Emphasizing that revenues from the tax would go to poor families, mass transit projects and efforts to develop new energy sources, Carter sought to put lawmakers on the spot by declaring:

"Every vote against it will be a vote for excessive oil company profits and for reliance on the whims of the foreign oil cartel."

Carter argued that these and other measure he is taking or proposing will combine to cut U.S. demand for imported oil while increasing domestic energy resources.

"Even with the windfall profits tax in place, our oil producers will get substantial new income — enough to provide plenty of incentive for increased domestic production," the president argued.

Carter said he will demand that the oil industry use the extra income for energy development "and not to buy department stores and hotels as some have done in the past."

Administration officials, briefing reporters on condition that they not be identified publicly, asserted that the gradual oil decontrol proposal will add 4 to 5 cents per gallon to the price of gasoline and home heating oil by September 1981.

Some other estimates have ranged as high as 15 cents a gallon.

The implementation of oil price decontrol will be designed to lessen the inflationary impact in 1979, when living costs are rising at an annual rate in excess of 10 percent. The administration officials estimated that decontrol would increase living costs by just one-tenth of 1 percent this year.

In 1980 and 1981, they said, the increases would amount to two-tenths to three-tenths of 1 percent each of the two years.

Prosecution asserts Young's death proved

By PAUL COX
State News Staff Writer

An Ingham county prosecutor said Thursday that the death of Martha Sue Young has been established and that the groundwork for proving she was murdered has been laid by testimony in District Court.

Assistant Prosecutor Lee Atkinson called four witnesses in 54B District Court in the first day of Donald Gene Miller's preliminary hearing on second-degree murder charge in Young's disappearance.

Young, a 19-year-old MSU student, vanished on New Year's Day 1977 after a date with Miller, a 24-year-old MSU criminal justice graduate. Although her clothes were found in a Bath Township field in October 1977 by hunters, no body has been recovered.

The missing woman's mother, Margaret Sue Young, testified that in November her 1977 daughter had become engaged to be married to Miller and had broken off the engagement the night of Dec. 30 — 36 hours before the former student disappeared.

Young described the clothing her daughter was wearing the last time she saw her the night of Dec. 31. She also identified the clothes, a purse and a blood-type card found in Bath Township as being her daughter's. Young testified that she had not heard from her daughter since that night.

The missing woman's bank account, credit card and health insurance have not been used since, Young said.

Miller's attorney, Thomas Bengtson, objected to the portion of Young's testimony in which she was relating what she knew of conversations between Miller and her daughter. Young repeating statements her daughter told her Miller had said violates the defendant's Sixth Amendment rights to confront his accuser, Bengtson said.

Despite the fact the woman has been missing for more than two years, and someone has been indicted for her murder, Bengtson said, the state law permitting some third-party accounts in court violates Miller's constitutional rights.

District Judge Daniel L. Tschirhart overruled Bengtson's objection.

Atkinson said Young's testimony was introduced to establish that her daughter was a responsible, healthy person prior to her disappearance and not to establish as fact, conversations between the missing woman and Miller.

"The exception (in the Michigan rules of evidence that allows Margaret Young's testimony) was fashioned in these kind of cases," Atkinson said.

Atkinson said the first day's testimony established the former student's death and traced her movements prior to her disappearance. He indicated that the prosecution would call witnesses today to try to establish a murder and link it to Miller, but ruled out a surprise witness.

"We do not have an eyewitness to an assault on Martha Sue Young," Atkinson said. In addition to Young, Miller's sister, Katherine Jean Miller, 19, his mother, Elaine L. Miller, both of 530 Gainsborough Drive, and William E. McCracken, 429 Centerlawn St., also testified.

The three reconstructed the movements of Young and Miller prior to the morning of the former MSU student's disappearance.

According to testimony of the three witnesses, Miller and the missing woman babysat for the McCrackens from 7 to 8:45 p.m. Dec. 31. They then drove to Miller's home at 530 Gainsborough Drive and stayed there until 11:30 p.m., the witnesses told the court.

Miller's mother testified that her son and the missing woman left at 11:30 to pick up Katherine Miller at an area church. Katherine Miller earlier testified she never went to the church, but went to a New Year's eve party in Okemos.

Elaine Miller testified she waited up and that her son returned home alone at 2 a.m. and went to bed.

INVESTMENT FIRM SNAG RESOLVED

Divestiture outline ready soon

The MSU Board of Trustees has cleared up technical problems with its investment firm and expects an outline for divesting its stocks at the April 26 board meeting, the vice president for business and finance said. The board passed a resolution in March 1978 to withdraw stocks from corporations doing business in South Africa.

The board has had problems with the clarity of wording in some letters sent by its investment firm Scudder, Stevens and Clark.

At the March 22 meeting the board decided to send a letter to SS and C regarding whether the wording in one letter meant the same as the wording in a previous letter.

Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, said the letter had probably been received by SS and C within the past two days, so he expects the divestiture process to start at any time.

"We expect them to present the board with an outline of their approach at the April meeting," Wilkinson said.

He added SS and C have "discretionary authority" to go ahead with the divestiture of stocks without board approval.

Tom Crane and Doug McPeck, SS and C representatives handling the MSU account, were not available to discuss what progress had been made.

Wind downs power lines

A scattered blackout caused by high winds knocking down power lines left parts of Ingham County without electricity late Thursday night, police spokespeople said.

Power was out in the western portion of East Lansing, police said. East Lansing firefighters were dispatched to Highland Street near Michigan Avenue to attend to a broken line, police said. Power was also out in the eastern portion of the city.

Reports of the blackout first came in at 8:45 p.m., police said.

Lansing police reported that most of the city was without power with many lines down from falling trees and high winds. A police spokesperson said every available officer was out and firefighting units were dispatched to areas with downed power lines.

Ingham County sheriff's deputies reported blackouts in Meridian Township and several out-county areas.

Spokespersons for the Lansing Board of Water and Light and Consumers Power Co. were unavailable.

No further details were available.

One of two persons arrested Thursday while wreckers tried to tow cars from Case Hall parking lot is led by DPS from a crowd of approximately 200 people.

TOWING TICKS CASE CROWD

Demonstrators arrested

By DENNIS PETROSKEY
and R. W. ROBINSON
State News Staff Writers

Two men were arrested at Case Hall Thursday during a demonstration involving about 200 people — some carrying baseball bats — which forced wrecker crews to sit idle in their trucks.

The incident marks the third time in recent weeks a group outside the residence hall has attempted to prevent wreckers from towing cars, thereby provoking a confrontation with Department of Public Safety authorities.

One man was arrested after kicking a tow truck that was moving into the crowd of people who refused to leave the parking lot.

The other man was arrested after apparently letting the air out of the tire of a DPS squad car.

DPS officials and authorities at the Ingham County jail in Mason — where the two men are lodged — refused to release the names of the men or what they were arrested for, though such information is a matter of public record and subject to the state's Freedom of Information Act.

The incident started about five minutes following the arrival of tow trucks in front of the hall after students began to blow whistles inside the building to alert others that wreckers were removing cars.

Students ran out from all sides of the building, some without coats in the intermittent rain, and formed a line which blocked the driveway so the wreckers could not leave the area.

Cmen, a floor name for the male students who live on 1 North Case Hall, said last week they have developed a whistle system to alert students whenever tow trucks are in the area.

"I blew one for the third floor where I live to get people together," said Paul Weiday, 20, of 310 N. Case Hall. "As soon as I saw them (wreckers) coming, I got the people together."

The unique aspect of the demonstration, Weiday said, is that he noticed residents from Wilson Hall were also there.

"With the whistle system, we're trying to motivate people and make the DPS think twice before towing cars," he said.

As more students began to rush out of the building, more DPS officers were brought in. About 13 police officers were on the scene.

Black Student Coalition to hold march against student newspaper

By THERESA D. MCLELLAN and CARRIE A. THORN
State News Staff Writers

The Black Student Coalition is organizing a march to the business office of the State News today where the marchers will receive their $1 refund for this term.

In turn, the students will take their refund and deposit it into the People's Choice newspaper account.

Organizers of the march have distributed leaflets explaining "now is the time to show the force of unity."

"This march against the State News is not just against their coverage of minorities but it is also a protest against getting screwed," explained Alta Perry, co-chairperson of the Black Student coalition.

She cited incidents involving residence hall governments and the ASMSU Student Media Appropriations Board as examples of how blacks "get screwed" by the system.

"This march is an example of how blacks can get organized and will support their black paper, since SMAB is not," she said.

People's Choice, an alternative newspaper for blacks at MSU, requested an allocation of $6,175 at the beginning of fall term from SMAB to cover printing costs for the year.

People's Choice received $1,755 of the $6,175 requested.

Protesters will meet in front of Bessey Hall today at noon and will march to the State News after the end of a scheduled performance by a black sorority.

They will then continue their march to the Administration Building to deposit their dollars into the People's Choice University account, according to the leaflet.

"I want this to be as organized as possible," Perry said.

Protesters wishing a State News refund must bring their fee cards to the office and prove they are carrying at least 10 credits.

The Black Student Coalition met Wednesday night and suggestions were made to have an organized movement to transfer the $1 refund from the State News into the People's Choice fund.

Perry said not only will students participate in the march, they also hope to have a list of definite gripes against the State News by midnight tonight.

Leaflets are being distributed and posted in various residence halls and buildings around campus.

The State News was picketed once before for "racist reporting" and poor coverage of minorities in 1976 when an article was written about a Ku Klux Klan march in South Complex.

The charges ranged from incomplete coverage of minority issues to advance racist views with the coverage of the event. As a result, a referendum was put to the students in 1976 asking them whether they wanted to continue paying the $1 per term for the State News.

Students voted to continue paying the subscription fee.

The University will continue to collect the $1 per term only if a student can obtain a refund within 10 class days from the beginning of the term.

MSU presidential candidate lifts name from trustee consideration

Henry Koffler, vice president for academic affairs at the University of Minnesota, has withdrawn his name from a list of candidates under consideration for the MSU presidency, an MSU trustee said Thursday.

John Bruff, chairperson of the MSU Board of Trustees, received a letter dated March 12 from the candidate, which said Koffler wished to have his name withdrawn from the list "because of the length of time involved" in the MSU selection process, Bruff said.

Koffler, whose name was released as a presidential candidate in November, will still be considered for the position by the board, Bruff said.

Koffler could not be reached for comment Thursday.

The Board of Trustees has been looking for a president to replace current MSU President Edgar L. Harden for almost 16 months.

Harden has said he would like to leave MSU in June.

Evans' life prolonged by judge's stay

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — John Louis Evans III was spared from death in the electric chair Thursday night when U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist stayed the sentence for one week on an appeal by Evans' mother.

Evans burst into tears when he heard Rehnquist's decision and appeared ready to fight for his life, said the Rev. Kevin Duigan, a local Catholic priest.

Duigan, who was with Evans when he heard that the electrocution was postponed, said he feels Evans will take the stay as "a message from God" and will cooperate fully in appealing his death sentence for the murder of a Mobile, Ala. pawn shop owner.

Young nationalist to hang despite appeals

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A young black nationalist convicted of murder and said to be "very afraid of dying" prayed in his death row cell Thursday as the hour neared for his hanging. Appeals from President Carter and other world leaders apparently could not stay the execution.

Solomon Mahlangu, 23, was scheduled to hang before dawn today in Pretoria central prison for his role in the 1977 submachine-gun killing of two white men in a department store warehouse, an apparently random terror attack.

His defenders argued that since Mahlangu had not fired the actual shots that killed the two workers he should not hang. But the court found him "equally liable and guilty."

The South African Broadcasting Corp. said one of numerous appeals for clemency for Mahlangu came from Carter. South African Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha responded by saying he could not "interrupt the normal progress of the law," SABC said.

Terrorists continue anti-peace treaty war

(AP) — Terrorists waging an underground war against the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty bombed a bus stop in Arab Jerusalem and struck Israeli and Egyptian targets in Cyprus on Thursday.

In Cairo, President Anwar Sadat told the Palestinians "a bomb here and there" will not build a homeland and appealed to them to join in the peace process. He also warned of stern retribution for attacks against Egypt.

Meanwhile, Egypt and Israel continued moving toward normal relations.

In the Sinai Peninsula, Egyptian civilians were allowed for the first time since the 1967 Middle East War to come and go as they pleased, without military passes, along the main roads and in the villages of Egyptian-held areas.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin traveled to the Israeli settlement of Yamit in the occupied Sinai, scheduled to be abandoned in the Israeli withdrawal from the peninsula, and appealed to residents to "accept the situation" for "the sake of peace, for the sake of your children."

Pakistani demonstrators turn violent

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — Police fired tear gas, ducked barrages of rocks and bricks and arrested hundreds of demonstrators Thursday as prayer meetings for executed former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto turned violent.

Demonstrators put up rock and barbed-wire barricades on the street between Rawalpindi, where Bhutto was hanged Wednesday, and the adjacent capital of Islamabad to try to block police reinforcements.

Pakistani newspapers said Bhutto, 51, normally a picture of self-control, broke down minutes before his hanging, was forced from his cell and carried to the gallows on a stretcher.

More than 5,000 demonstrators in Rawalpindi poured into the streets after a prayer meeting in a park and threw rocks and bricks at police who tried to break up the gathering. Police hurled back the rocks and bricks and fired tear gas.

Trucking lockout 'devastating,' says Fraser

WIRE SERVICES — The Teamsters union and trucking industry returned to the bargaining table Thursday in search of an agreement to end a five-day shutdown that threatens to paralyze the auto industry.

As a lockout of striking Teamsters by major trucking firms triggered new production cutbacks for automakers in Detroit, the rest of the economy remained relatively untouched by the dispute over a new three-year contract for 300,000 drivers and warehouse operators.

But the Carter administration says the longest trucking shutdown in U.S. history could produce shortages of food and other products by the end of next week. As a result, government officials said they remained poised to seek a court-ordered end to the labor dispute should the shutdown begin to strangle the economy.

United Auto Workers President Douglas A. Fraser said a lockout by the nation's truck lines is having "a devastating impact" on thousands of auto workers, but warned against government interference in the dispute.

More than 54,000 auto workers were idled and another 70,000 were working short shifts this week because of parts shortages at auto plants.

Wholesale prices hit quarterly high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose another 1 percent in March to produce the largest quarterly increase in four years, although there was some indication last month that food prices might be leveling off, the government said Thursday.

The March rise followed increases of 1 percent in February and 1.3 percent in January, the Labor Department said.

Taken together, they show wholesale prices rising at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 14.1 percent — the largest since 16.4 percent recorded in the final quarter of 1974, said department economist W.D. Thomas.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the figures "certainly were not welcome news." He also said the report indicates the Carter administration still faces a long road in its fight to control inflation.

But Powell said families concerned about their food budgets could take some comfort. He noted that "pork, chicken and vegetable prices actually went down."

Nuke accident threatens electrical bill hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nuclear accident that nearly forced a mass evacuation of central Pennsylvanians now threatens to hike their electric bills by 20 percent or more, federal and power company officials said Thursday.

Meanwhile, senior members of the Senate Environment Committee urged President Carter to hold off sending Congress his legislative proposals to speed up the licensing of nuclear power plants.

They wrote the president that it would be "ill advised" until major safety issues raised by the Three Mile accident are resolved. The committee has jurisdiction over nuclear energy issues.

Hazel Rollins, deputy economic administrator for the Energy Department, said consumers served by the damaged plant near Harrisburg, who now pay an average electric bill of $35 to $40 a month can expect to pay at least $7.50 more — about a 20 percent boost.

She said the added costs will pay for fuel that must be purchased to generate electricity lost from the crippled power plant.

"MIRACLE THAT IT HELD TOGETHER"

Plane survives 360-degree roll

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — A TWA airliner carrying 87 persons survived a harrowing barrel roll and apparently exceeded the speed of sound in a nose dive before being brought under control by a freak maneuver, federal inspectors said Thursday.

They called it a "miracle" that the plane survived and no one was killed.

"I can't think of any other incident where a commercial, passenger-carrying plane has done a complete 360-degree rollover and survived," said Langhorne Bond, head of the Federal Aviation Administration.

"The miracle is that it held together under such extraordinary speed and circumstances."

Bond spoke with reporters at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, where the TWA Boeing 727 landed at 10 p.m. Wednesday night. It had been on a flight from New York to Minneapolis with 80 passengers and a crew of seven.

Bond said three persons were injured, none seriously, although the airline earlier put the number at four. Two were treated at a hospital.

Reporters were permitted to inspect the plane. The flaps on the right wing were torn off. Pieces of metal hung from that wing and from the fuselage around the landing gear doors on both sides.

Inside, newspapers and magazines were scattered everywhere. A large sack of used airsickness bags stood in the aisle.

Three rows of oxygen masks hung from the overhead baggage racks, but Bond said the cabin had not lost air pressure at any time. He said the masks had been flung out of their compartments.

Though FAA investigators had not finished their work, Bond said it appeared that the plane was flying at 39,000 feet over Flint, Mich., "very routine in clear weather," when — for reasons so far unknown — it began to vibrate, yawed to the right, did a barrel roll and went into a nose dive.

Amin reported at capital; says exiles surrounded

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin reportedly slipped into his capital of Kampala on Thursday and claimed his forces surrounded the Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles besieging the city. Several of his top aides fled to Kenya, however.

Military observers generally discounted Amin's claim as another of the dramatic concoctions for which he is famous, and a Tanzanian government spokesperson in Dar Es Salaam said, "The push to Kampala is going steadily as planned."

There was no independent confirmation of either claim, although by most accounts Amin's eight-year-old regime was on its last legs.

Radio Uganda quoted a military spokesperson — usually a reference to Amin — as saying: "The enemy must know, although they are now bombing Kampala and Entebbe and have dropped more than 200 bombs so far, that they have been cut off to the rear, left and right, and we are just watching what is going on."

Earlier in the day he had told his remaining soldiers in Kampala, "I am still going strong and am physically fit," the radio said.

Amin's appearance in Kampala proved at least that the president-for-life — who once had himself borne at a public function by four white business executives — has not lost his flair for the spectacular gesture despite five months of battlefield defeats since he invaded Tanzania.

Meanwhile, there was a lull in the fighting, sources said, possibly because the invaders wanted to give Amin's forces, including his Libyan cadre, time to flee and avoid a major battle.

VALUABLE IN CANCER TREATMENT

Pot lauded as medicine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The president of the American Cancer Society says doctors should be able to use marijuana as a last resort to relieve the harsh side-effects of some cancer therapies.

"The physician who is treating patients with cancer... should have everything at his disposal and be able to use it if it will help," Dr. LaSalle D. Lefall Jr. said in an interview this week.

"The evidence does support the fact that it (marijuana) can help the patient."

That conclusion is supported by a growing body of scientific research and a long history of informal, and illegal, use of the drug by many cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy.

The federal government, however, still classifies marijuana, along with heroin, LSD and other drugs, as a Schedule I substance: No medical value and high potential for abuse.

The Cancer Society's official position, adopted last year, says only that marijuana has promise and warrants more "controlled clinical trials," a spokesperson said.

Since 1978, at least a half-dozen legislatures have passed state laws allowing doctors to prescribe marijuana for some chemotherapy patients. Such programs usually are described officially as research and require case-by-case review by a medical board. Similar measures are generating controversy in other states, including California.

Marijuana is not being discussed as a treatment of cancer, but as a way to relieve the sometimes-devastating side effects of potent anticancer drugs.

Board rep pay hits referendum

By KY OWEN
State News Staff Writer

Once again the question of compensation for the ASMSU Student Board members will be decided by a student referendum, since only four students attended hearings on the proposed policy.

While few students attended the hearings, over 300 students have received ASMSU tax refunds.

At registration, students pay a $3 tax to ASMSU which is refundable. Refunds are given for the first 10 class days of each term.

Tuesday is the deadline for receiving refunds.

Over 200 students received refunds Thursday, bringing the total so far to 342.

Dan Stouffer, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative, said since there was so little student input about the compensation issue, a referendum will probably be held in May to decide if Student Board representatives should be paid for their work.

Last spring term a referendum to pay board representatives was defeated, but the referendum is no longer binding, Stouffer said.

At the end of winter term and this week, 12 hearings on the proposed policy were held to get student input, but only a total of four students attended all the hearings, Stouffer said.

"We will have to start going out to students," Stouffer said. "But it's a lot cheaper if they come to us."

Stouffer said students who have come said they felt the question should be decided by students in a referendum.

Henry Sosa, College of Arts and Letters representative, said "students just aren't that interested."

Sosa said ASMSU personnel should be paid, and the board should vote to pay them, but students should decide if representatives receive compensation.

The compensation policy contains two parts: one would provide for payment of representatives and one would pay other ASMSU personnel.

Stouffer said the board will probably approve the plan for compensating personnel, but will hold a referendum to decide on compensation of Student Board members.

The referendum will probably be held during the second week in May along with a referendum to ratify the Off-Campus Council constitution.

Two proposed pay scales, are being considered: one would cost about $7,300 per term and another would cost about $4,800.

Both plans also call for a cost-of-living increase to be determined by higher tuition.

Under the first plan, the executive director and comptroller would receive $600 per term; the Legal Services directors would receive $350 per term; committee chairpersons would receive $300 per term; and representatives would receive $150 per term.

Under the second plan, the executive director and comptroller would receive $400 per term; the Legal Services directors would receive $260 per term; committee chairpersons would receive $200 per term;

HOTEL, OFFICE, HALL AWAIT FUNDING

Lansing renewal plan unveiled

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

An area of downtown Lansing will be rejuvenated to the tune of $61 million if public and private funding sources back the construction venture.

The 100 block of North Washington Square and adjacent area could be the site for a 330-room hotel, an office building, a convention hall and two parking ramps, Mayor Gerald W. Graves said at a press conference Thursday.

A list of the city's proposed funding sources and plan of development was revealed for the first time at the conference.

The city hopes to find private investors to back a $12.5 million hotel, a $10 million office building and a $10 million retail center.

The city plans to kick in $1.2 million for a convention facility containing 24,000 square feet of meeting rooms as part of the hotel complex.

Federal money and bonds totaling $10.8 million are proposed for the parking ramps. The Economic Development Corp. are expected to issue $8.1 million in bonds for the two parking structures. The remaining $2.7 million may be obtained from the Urban Development Action Grant program of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

In a recent trip to Washington D.C., Graves said he received a pledge of assistance from HUD officials. They red-tagged $7.5 million for the project and are awaiting review of the grant application, he said.

Approval of a $4 million UDAG grant would provide the city with a 100,000-squarefoot exhibition and convention facility east of the proposed hotel, across Grand Avenue.

An additional $300,000 of the UDAG grant is slated for two pedestrian walkways.

Included in the redevelopment plans is proposed transportation terminal with a $3.1 million price tag for the state. The terminal will house city and intercity buses, taxis and limousine service.

Graves said his office was notified by HUD Wednesday that the UDAG grant request has been approved and written notification is on the way. The full application is expected to be submitted by April 30.

About $7.5 million of the total $61 million project will be UDAG money, Graves said.

Graves said if funds are granted it will "transform downtown Lansing into a center for conventions, commerce and business in a four-year time frame."

House OKs bill on tax amendment

By CHRIS PARKS
United Press International

Legislation some Republicans charge will open a gaping loophole in the voter-approved Headlee Tax Limitation Amendment slipped quietly through the state House Thursday.

The quick, 66-36 vote on the measure was in sharp contrast to the extended wrangling earlier over the bill which provides for temporary property tax restrictions rather than permanent ones.

The bill now must pass the Senate, which is expected to consider a compromise proposal.

The Legislature is under pressure to act soon to implement the Headlee Amendment's provisions aimed at preventing property taxes from rising faster than the cost of living.

The Headlee Amendment requires communities to roll back their property tax rate when property assessments rise faster than the general inflation rate.

The House bill requires the rollbacks when assessments outstrip inflation, but allows local governments to return taxes to their old levels in subsequent years.

Headlee Amendment purists have denounced the bill as a fraud.

They said the Headlee Amendment calls for permanent reductions — not temporary ones — and requires voter approval for any tax increase.

The House bill's defenders, on the other hand, said the Headlee Amendment's controls apply only when specific conditions exist — assessments rising faster than inflation.

In other years, local voter-approved charters control tax rates, they said.

House Republicans suffered a narrow defeat Wednesday on an amendment which would have required a vote of local residents to return taxes to their old rate following a rollback.

They were virtually mute Thursday, however.

The Legislature is running out of time in which to implement the Headlee measure and minority Republicans realized "you may not be happy but that's all you're going to get," one veteran Democrat said.

Proposed but later withdrawn was a compromise amendment restricting a community's ability to hike taxes following a rollback.

Such increases would have been limited to the amount needed to keep pace with inflation.

Further consideration of this plan is expected in the Senate.

The other controversial portion of the House bill is that it applies the rollback to the maximum tax rate authorized in a community's charter. Communities which actually levy less than the maximum rate allowed would not therefore immediately be effected.

In other action, the House approved and sent to the Senate a measure fixing a technical legal problem which has allowed some drunk driving defendants to escape prosecution.

The measure will prevent the discrepancies which occasionally occur between the state's Motor Vehicle Code and the uniform traffic code used by local governments.

MSU not considered for PBB incineration

By SANDY HOLT
State News Staff Writer

MSU is not being considered as an incineration site for PBB-contaminated cattle, the director of MSU's Animal Diagnostic Laboratory said.

Ken Keahey, director of the laboratory, said a Department of Natural Resources official had "only referred to MSU as the best facility in the state."

"There have been no negotiations between the DNR and MSU," he said.

He said he believed the DNR would not want to incinerate the cattle in a densely populated area like the campus because of possible air emissions.

DNR officials said Monday they might support a switch from burying to incineration of the remaining PBB contaminated cattle if legislators will find a site for the operation.

Legislation recently introduced by Rep. Thomas Alley would amend Michigan's 1977 PBB act to require the state to incinerate contaminated cattle rather than allowing them to be buried or otherwise disposed of.

The tainted animals are being buried in special burial pits near Mio, as specified in the 1977 PBB act. Mio is included in the district represented by Alley, a West Branch Democrat.

PBB was accidentally mixed with Michigan livestock feed in 1973.

The House Agriculture Committee is considering incinerating the remaining 670 cattle and 1,700 barrels of dead animal matter exposed to PBB that the state must still destroy.

Senate sends anti-ELF bill to committee on U.P.

Anti-ELF legislation was referred Thursday to the Committee on Upper Peninsula Industrial and Economic Affairs in the Michigan Senate even though the bill's sponsors had protested the move.

Sens. Mitch Irwin and John Kelly co-sponsored the bill, which would prohibit the use of Michigan land for the "Extremely Low Frequency" communications grid proposed by the Navy.

The bill was referred to the U.P. committee on recommendation of Senate Majority Leader William Faust.

Faust, a Westland Democrat, had suggested the transfer because the bill will primarily affect U.P. residents.

The U.P. committee is chaired by Sen. Joseph Mack, and Iron Mountain Democrat. Political observers have charged Mack with stalling environmental legislation when he chaired the Senate Conservation Committee.

Irwin's legislative aide, Pam Dunham, said the senator was "pleased with the move" only because Faust and Mack promised to hold hearings on the ELF issue immediately.

Dunham said no senators raised objections to the transfer, though the State and Veterans Affairs Committee usually handles bills related to land matters.

Kelly, a Detroit Democrat, had said the bill affects the entire state and not only residents of the Upper Peninsula.

He said he did not raise any objections to the transfer Thursday because "it was Irwin's bill" and because of the assurances by Faust and Mack.

how they voted

Here's how MSU area lawmakers voted on legislation this week. The legislators are Reps. David Hollister, Lansing Democrat from the 57th District, Debbie Stabenow, Lansing Democrat from the 58th District, H. Lynn Jondahl, East Lansing Democrat from the 59th District and Sen. William Sederberg, East Lansing Republican from the 24th District.

House of Representatives

House Bill 4137 — a bill amending the Worker's Disability Compensation Act to include workers who have been exposed to PBB within the "vocationally handicapped" definition. The bill limits a future employer's liability for PBB-caused illness. Hollister, Stabenow, Jondahl, yes. Passed 100 to 1.

House Resolution 62 — creating a joint committee on science, technology and the legislative process to act on scientific and technological matters before the Legislature. Hollister, no vote; Stabenow, yes; Jondahl, yes. Passed 87 to 12.

Senate

House Bill 4048 — a bill repealing the bounty on coyotes. The bill was opposed by legislators from the Upper Peninsula where most of Michigan's coyotes live. Sederberg, yes. Passed 28 to 6.

Lansing man arraigned in Metro Squad 'Muppet' bust

A 28-year-old Lansing man was arraigned Thursday in East Lansing in connection with a series of Tri-County drug arrests dubbed "The Muppet Show."

Jimmy Dale Wolbertson, 2102 Worden Ave., was charged in 54-B District Court with one count of delivery of cocaine to an undercover agent on Jan. 24. He was released on $2,000 personal recognizance bond.

If convicted, Wolbertson could face a maximum penalty of 20 years in jail and/or a $25,000 fine.

Twenty-four persons have been arrested since early Wednesday morning. The arrests were made by Tri-County police agencies and the Tri-County Metro Narcotics Squad.

Scandal in South Africa hits home

It comes as no surprise to learn that the South African government under Prime Minister John Vorster probably funneled millions of dollars to "opinion formers" throughout the world — specifically the United States. The surprise would have been that they had not.

The term "opinion formers" is an interesting one for Eschel Rhodie to use. Rhodie is responsible for blowing the whistle on South Africa and starting the scandal. It is interesting because American media immediately assumed political figures were being bought off. But Rhodie, once South Africa's hottest propagandist, knows the ability of American political figures to form public opinion is marginal at best. The opinion formers in a democratic country, as South Africa knows all too well, are the "objective" media.

The idea of objectivity in international media is a farce. The best example of this charade is epitomized by one of MSU's own graduates, publisher John McGoff. McGoff's corporation, Panax, which is located in nearby Williamston, owns a string of daily and weekly newspapers throughout Michigan and the Midwest. Panax also has a major interest in United Press International Television News, a London-based firm owned jointly by UPI and Britain's ITV network. UPI/ITN sends video news films to 80 countries around the world. For many of those 80 it is the only international video news that is used.

The appalling fact about McGoff is that he actually considers and calls himself a journalist — which theoretically presumes some measure of objectivity. But McGoff was quoted in 1976 as saying: "South Africa needs to tell its story, and through something like UPI/ITN we can do it." Hardly an appropriate quote for an "objective" journalist.

Even more appalling is the cozy relationship McGoff has with MSU, specifically the MSU School of Journalism. During winter term of 1977, McGoff was the featured speaker at a Michigan Press Association banquet held at the Kellogg Center. The topic of the banquet that year was, ironically, how the business community and the press could overcome their inherent adversities and learn to understand one another. Things went smoothly until a State News reporter began to question McGoff, as a businessperson, about his financial holdings in South Africa — specifically his interests in South African publishing firms. McGoff appeared agitated, to say the least, but was able to change the line of questioning to a more neutral subject. So much for overcoming inherent obstacles.

A few weeks later in 1977, McGoff was again invited to make an address on campus. This time he had been invited by the journalism department and spoke at Fairchild Theatre. All journalism classes were excused to attend the lecture and it was made known that journalism students were expected to attend.

It was something else. McGoff proceeded to give the assembled group a blow-by-blow account of, "the day in the life of the head of a multi-national corporation." During the questions and answers that followed his self-serving pat on the back, McGoff was again questioned on his ties with South Africa.

McGoff became exasperated, but he did talk. He implored the young scribes to try and see it from his point of view. That view being: as a capitalist entrepreneur it would be stupid to pass up the attractive return on capital that can be realized on South African investments. When further questioned on his relationship with then-South African Prime Minister John Vorster, McGoff said he was a personal acquaintance of Vorster and knew of no finer Christian man. He went on to assure his audience that Vorster's interests were in all the people of South Africa, be they white, black or colored. So much for objectivity.

What was this corporate president who unashamedly passes himself off as a journalist doing making a speech to the impressionable young minds of genuine budding journalists? Well, John McGoff is one of this University's most loyal alumni when it comes to coughing up the big bucks. And as South Africa knows, money talks.

Death or medal?

Hiding skeletons in the closet always leaves one vulnerable to the possibility of the skeleton falling out. The United States is no exception.

In the next few weeks, the Marine Corps will be faced with the task of dealing with an American soldier whose recent appearance on American soil has prompted the United States to open up a period of the past that most citizens and soldiers would rather forget.

Pfc. Robert Garwood, 33, a native of Greengrove, Ind., is being accused by the Marine Corps of treason and collaboration with the Viet Cong while he was held captive in a Vietnamese prison. Garwood said he was taken prisoner in Da Nang in 1965 and Army records show Garwood failed to turn up during the 1973 massive airlift of American soldiers out of Vietnam.

A number of stories have recently surfaced explaining Garwood's relationship with the enemy during his 14-year absence. American soldiers imprisoned with Garwood claim his role with the Vietnamese was too ambiguous to determine whether Garwood's role was communist or opportunist. Garwood claims he defected to avoid the brutal treatment prisoners frequently received from his captors, yet he opted to remain with the Viet Cong during the airlift.

There were reports that Garwood assumed the role of prison guard and on at least one occasion beat an American prisoner, David Harker, who now says he bears no animosity toward Garwood and would rather "allow the wounds of war to heal." In the meantime, $146,000 in back pay owed Garwood currently sits in a special account with monthly statements sent to his parents.

Taking these stories into account, there is a reasonable cause to suspect that Garwood is guilty as charged by military standards — but so what?

Vietnam was not the first war that uncovered a minority of defectors. During the Korean War, those soldiers who defected were considered traitors mainly because they indirectly supported Indochina's budding Communist dictatorships and were subsequently branded un-American. If the Marine Corps decides to punish Garwood for treason, a charge that would call for the death penalty, they would be reaffirming the same Cold War mentality that should have been thrown out during the tail end of the Nixon administration.

Thirty-five years ago the American mentality might have needed a Private Eddie Slovic to assuage its patriotic indignation at desertion. But no such mentality exists today — as President Carter's general amnesty of 1977 proves. The U.S. Marine Corps would make a serious mistake to assume it still does.

Don't let complacency stand in the way of assertiveness

Recission appears to be the name of the game throughout the country, judging the number of recent cases that have been sent to the high-and-mighty Supreme Court concerning reverse discrimination.

Each case sent to the high court so far has, or will have, some negative effect on the strength of affirmative action and the future of blacks in the U.S.

This is not only happening on the national level, but even on the MSU campus in a little dormitory hidden in the back of South Complex.

I take my hat off to Black Consciousness, the Black Caucus of Holden Hall, for standing up and demanding an answer from the "Supreme Court" (student government) of that hall concerning the $100 recently recinded from the group.

Black Consciousness is very upset about a budget passed by Holden's General Council,

Feb. 12, which allocated the caucus $300 then a week later was lowered by $100.

The organization believes there was not clear justification for the budget cut — I strongly agree.

The Holden Hall government, as of now, has not been able to come up with a concrete answer as to why the money was recinded.

The student body's merit for the cut centers around the lack of funding they received from the Residence Hall Association. Which in all probability is a true statement.

But then one has to ask one's self: Why did they allow the budget to be approved in the first place, if they knew the general budget of the organization was limited?

In view of this question I feel exactly like the Black Consciousness organization. The Council has to come up with something better than they have so far to justify their drastic recission move.

A story recently published in this newspaper said some members of the student council did not show up for one of the board meetings so members of Black Consciousness, who resided on the same floor in the dorm as the floor representative, took the liberty to sit in for the absentee member.

This is probably the only way that the budget received the approval of the student government.

But even though such a skillful move was made by Black Consciousness which was perfectly legitimate according to the General Council constitution, this still does not justify the council reacting to the measure and rescinding a portion of it.

They were the ones who got caught being complacent by leaving the board meeting and allowing Black Consciousness members to sit in and do whatever they desired.

I would have done the same thing, had I been given the option that Black Consciousness once received from the student government. Only I would have passed a budget that appropriated the group $600 just to see what the student government had to say about it at the next meeting.

I probably would have left them very baffled.

For those of you who agree with the Black Consciousness organization, don't make the mistake of assuming the Holden Hall government was unique in doing what they did to the Black Caucus. It's a trend that is moving across the country.

America is no longer concerned about the tensions that ran throughout the country when Dr. King died.

There is no incentive for white America to continue funding minority programs and adhering to Affirmative Action programs. What America needs is another awakening. One that will shake the world and straighten things out permanently.

And that is going to happen unless blacks as a whole obtain the drive that Black Consciousness has shown with regards to doing something about the measures taken against them.

There is no time for black students to sit back and become complacent, because if you look at how the Holden Hall student government reacted to blacks who asserted themselves, you'll see how impermanent the gains can be. Would you want to be in this same predicament forever?

VIEWPOINT: PUERTO RICO

Not all facts get taught at school; try this little quiz

By the PUERTO RICAN STUDENT ASSOCIATION

OK, Spartans. You've passed your finals, enjoyed your break, and you're ready to hit the books again. You think you're pretty smart, right? But how much do you know about the relationship between the U.S. and Puerto Rico? Don't know? Well, here's a little quiz which will help you discover some facts which may surprise you. Don't be afraid, because no one is keeping score.

1. Puerto Rico is a foreign nation. True or False?

ANSWER: False. Puerto Rico is a Free Associated State and billions of U.S. tax dollars go toward maintaining that status.

2. What is a Free Associated State? Something which:

a) belongs to the U.S.
b) is a part of the U.S.
c) is not a part of the U.S.

ANSWER: a & c. The U.S. Supreme Court defines Puerto Rico as "belonging to, but not part of" the United States. In plain English, that means a possession, but Puerto Ricans do have limited U.S. citizenship which allows them to be drafted.

3. Why does the U.S. still hold Puerto Rico as a possession?

a) for economic reasons
b) for humanitarian reasons
c) for military purposes

ANSWER: It depends on who you ask. The government says it needs Puerto Rico for military purposes, and it has one of its largest naval bases on Puerto Rico. But the tiny island is also the sixth-largest market for U.S. goods in the world.

4. Why does the U.S. Navy bomb the inhabited Puerto Rican island of Vieques?

a) because the U.S. is at war with Puerto Rico

b) because they want to control over-population

c) for practice

ANSWER: c. The Navy practices "invasions" and other war maneuvers over the organized protests of the inhabitants, and was prevented from continuing the same practices on the island of Culebra by its inhabitants.

5. Puerto Rico is a tropical paradise. True or False?

ANSWER: True and False. It is a natural paradise, but paradise is being lost to pollution and poverty, with the help of U.S. corporations who go there to avoid minimum wage, health, and pollution guidelines in the U.S.

6. I don't need to take this stupid test because conditions in Puerto Rico don't affect my life. True or False?

ANSWER: False. The average wage in Puerto Rico is about $2.63 as compared to about $6.15 in Michigan, making it a tempting harbor for runaway shops. The lower labor safety standards also attract capital intensive industry, leaving many Puerto Ricans unemployed. Real unemployment is currently about 40 percent.

7. Given the high unemployment and the low average wage, how do the people live?

a) on fish and fruits
b) on roots and berries
c) on food stamps

ANSWER: c. About 75 percent of all Puerto Ricans are eligible to receive food stamps. Many are the working poor; others lost their jobs through the destruction of our agriculture and the entrance of capital-intensive industry.

8. Why are there so many Puerto Ricans in the U.S.?

a) they love to travel
b) they love snow
c) they need to make a living

ANSWER: While Puerto Ricans tend to make less than any other minority group in the U.S. they can still make a living more easily in the U.S. than in Puerto Rico, because of lower unemployment and a lower cost of living and inflation rate.

Well, how did you do? Not too well? That's OK. Much of this information is not common knowledge in the U.S. even though the U.N. Decolonization Committee has been dealing with the status of Puerto Rico, and the ramifications that status has for the lives of the Puerto Rican people, for years.

There is much more that we would like to show you about our country and its people, to help you understand the unusual situation that we are in. But it can't be done in one article. So we invite you to participate in a week of activities we are sponsoring April 9 through 12. Each evening at 7:30 in 336 Union, we will be presenting lectures and programs on the history, culture, and current issues of Puerto Rico. We hope you will be entertained and enlightened by this presentation.

Earvin will make the right choice

Earvin Johnson may have thought that two years of generally beautiful basketball, topped off with the NCAA championship would leave everyone satisfied, but no. Some people expect more.

The full-page ad placed in the State News on Tuesday was unbelievable: We want more donations. We want more star basketball players. We want a new stadium. We want a gold medal at Moscow. And we want Earvin Johnson to stay and get them all for us. But we also have his own well-being in mind. We know a college degree is worth much more than a few million dollars — see how college has helped us to become such sensitive and intelligent individuals.

I think many MSU students and fans see Earvin Johnson's choice much differently. We know the value of a college education and it would be an easy choice if we were in Earvin Johnson's position. He has realized a level of excellence in one of his pursuits which most of us will never approach. We feel very fortunate to have shared in his accomplishments and he has our support and best wishes whatever his decision may be.

Beetle Bailey's bimbo bothering

We have been repeatedly disgusted by your running of the blatantly sexist Beetle Bailey comic, where "Miss Buxley's" body turns men into drooling simians. This is degrading to women by perpetuating and promoting views of us as mere hunks of flesh. It is also insulting to men by assuming that a woman's physical characteristics are enough to immobilize them. We demand an explanation or a removal of this so-called comic. We urge you to replace it with another that is both non-sexist and humorous. Beetle Bailey fits neither bill. Surely you would not print a comic as equally insulting to blacks and minorities.

Group calls traveling on trustees

We of Michigan ERAmerica are pleased that the MSU basketball team was victorious. However, we must protest MSU's Board of Trustees' decision to use public monies to attend the game in Utah, a state which has not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

Michigan ERAmerica is a coalition of 35 state organizations, representing women, labor, religion, civil rights and both political parties, who have come together to pro-note passage of the ERA.

We are deeply distressed that the Board of Trustees violated their own resolution (May, 1978) not to spend public funds to travel to or attend meetings in unratified states. They used taxpayers' money not only for themselves but for their spouses to attend a game in a state which would deny women equal rights.

The trustees' personal pleasure has taken precedence over equality and justice. Their decision is an insult to the women of MSU and to the women of the state of Michigan.

The members of Michigan ERAmerica have taken note.

Laura Callow
Co-Chair Michigan ERAmerica

Character call clocks crocked

In this Einstein centennial year, credit should be given to MSU for making Einstein's theory of general relativity known to all students. I refer, of course, to the many different times the campus clocks show.

For example, stand in Berkeley's first-floor vestibule. Down one hall the clock reads 1:05, down the other the clock says 1:03. Or simply look at both faces of Horticulture's vestibule clock: 1:14 on one side, 1:10 on the other. Relativity in action; you are going faster than the speed of light.

Even more fascinating is the fact that you can leave Kedzie at 8:55 (Kedzie time), walk to Kresge Art Center in five minutes, and Kresge's clock will say 9:04. A grand case of time dilation.

I'd list more data, but my watch has stopped. I need not mention the five-minute difference between on-campus time and off-campus time, for the point has been made. MSU has demonstrated it leads the nation in physics education.

Therefore, by a unanimous vote of our Board of Directors at the General Meeting last Sunday, I take great pleasure in presenting MSU with the Albert Einstein Memorial Digital Hourglass Award.

Yours very truly,

Violators of 55 mph speed face tougher penalties if bill passes

(UPI) — Motorists caught exceeding the 55 mph speed limit could face five days in jail under legislation introduced in the state Senate Thursday.

The bill's sponsor, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairperson Basil Brown, said it would "put teeth" into the mandatory speed limit imposed to save lives and gasoline.

Currently, those violating the 55 mph limit on highways which once had 70 mph maximums may be fined, but are assessed license "points" only if they exceed 70.

"Michigan's approach to the 55 mph speed limit has been ineffective and fails to give serious consideration and respect to that law," Brown said.

"While the limit was lowered nationwide from 70 to 55 mph, we have essentially told drivers that they can violate the law without incurring any substantial problem.

"It is time we put teeth into this law if it is to realize its full potential in saving lives, saving energy and reducing accidents," he said.

State police statistics show the average highway speed limit gradually has been creeping up.

Specifically, Brown's bill would amend the Motor Vehicle Code by eliminating its so-called "energy speed violations." Those provisions assess points against a driver's license only for violations over 70 mph with fines levied for speeds between 55 and 70.

The measure would eliminate all points and replace them with mandatory jail terms and a possible fine.

Brown said Michigan could lose its federal highway funding unless it enacts a stricter approach to speeding. The state currently receives between $150 million and $200 million in federal highway and transportation funds.

"In 1977, the Michigan State Police issued 111,581 tickets for violations over the 55 mph speed limit," he said.

"This, coupled with national figures showing a significant increase in the number of traffic-related deaths from 1974 to 1977, indicates the Legislature is not protecting the public safety and welfare by allowing this law to go literally unenforced."

PROGRAMS INCLUDE TRAINING SKILLS, SPORTS

African nations women's advance lauded

By ANNA BROWNE
State News Staff Writer

Southern African women are pushing for training and skills and are trying for integration, said a woman who had recently returned from the area.

Candice Wright, speaking on "Women in Southern Africa Today" at the International Center Thursday, had recently returned from a two-and-a-half month trip to southern Africa sponsored by the Liberation Support Movement.

During a slide show/lecture presentation, Wright illustrated how women in southern Africa, particularly Zambia and Mozambique, are making progress in changing their role in society.

"Many times people in this country don't appreciate what it's like to be in an underdeveloped country," Wright said.

"They also do not understand the conditions people have to change and transform throughout society."

Before southern African women decided to try and change their roles in society, Wright said, they were just considered objects by their husbands.

Wright said now, if a man is a candidate for a political party position, how he treats his wife is taken into consideration as well as his credentials.

Much of Wright's presentation featured the OMM, which translated from Portuguese, means Mozambique Women's Organization. OMM is in Mozambique operating cooperatives and work programs and trying to help women learn training and skills.

Wright said through the schools, young women are getting more political education and skills. OMM is also bringing the women into sports and athletics, she added.

"This gives the women a chance to leave the kids with the old man for a day and get out and kick a ball around," Wright said.

Wright said the men she talked to at the top of the political organization were committed to changing the role of women in their society.

"Their procedure is to fully integrate women into leadership positions," she said.

"They are being very careful with the change and going slowly with it," she said. "They want to make sure the people understand it."

Wright said the men she talked to at the top of the political organization were committed to changing the role of women in their society.

"Their procedure is to fully integrate women into leadership positions," she said.

RESULT OF SMAB-COGS SPLIT

Graduate media funding vote set

By BOB STARR

The Council of Graduate Students appointed a committee of five members to develop a media funding referendum Wednesday.

The referendum, concerning the use of the 50-cent graduate tax, will be distributed to graduate students for a vote.

Currently, COGS is withholding the tax money — about $16,000 per year — from ASMSU's Student Media Appropriations Board.

Chuck Goeke, COGS president, said the organization has withheld the tax money from SMAB since January because the council felt it was not being used to sufficiently aid graduate students.

A second reason for withholding the tax money is a change in SMAB's constitution which excludes COGS from its Code of Operations.

Undergraduate approved the change in SMAB's code at spring term registration.

The legality of withholding the graduate tax money from SMAB has been questioned by University officials since a graduate student in 1974 instructed the council to give its tax money to SMAB.

Goeke considers withholding the tax money a legal move, without a referendum.

"The COGS Constitution says money collected by COGS will be used for the benefit of graduate students," Goeke said. "Since COGS is not included in SMAB's code of operations, the money is not helping graduate students."

The council also voted to recommend the removal of the asterisk statement in the Graduate Rights and Responsibilities document which was approved by the Board of Trustees in 1971.

The asterisk statement essentially excludes medical students from protection under the document. The bylaws to University governance define professional students as graduate students.

A new COGS recording secretary was also elected at Wednesday's meeting for this term.

speaker.

The conference will include workshops to help women pursue excellence in their relationship with God, their personal lifestyle, their relationship with others and their influence in the world.

Coyote bounty repealing bill passed; awaits Milliken OK

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

On a surprisingly lopsided vote, the Senate Thursday swept aside an Upper Peninsula lawmaker's objections and sent to Gov. William G. Milliken a bill repealing the bounty on coyotes.

Milliken is expected to sign the measure, removing from Michigan law books the last vestige of a predator control method wildlife biologists say is ineffective and outdated.

The repeal, however, is extremely unpopular in the U.P., where most of Michigan's coyotes are found. Sports groups from the region say the bounty is needed to protect livestock and game from coyotes.

Sen. Joseph S. Mack, D-Ironwood, made one last attempt to kill the bill, but accepted the defeat calmly.

"I have no intention of belaboring the subject," Mack said. "We won't rise or fall in the Upper Peninsula on the $15 bounty."

"We certainly don't live on coyote bounties in the U.P. and our people don't need it as a substitute for relief, as has been said here," Mack said.

Mack attempted to introduce a substitute bill, but it was ruled out of order.

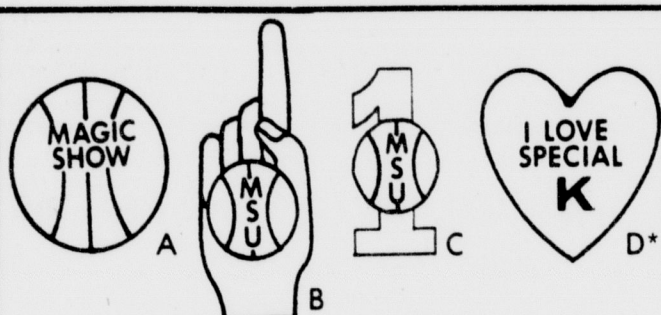

If the Senate has added an amendment of any type, the measure would have to return for a vote to the House, where U.P. opponents of repealing the bounty have the issue under their control.

After dismissing Mack's substitute, the Senate approved the bill on a 28-6 vote. "No" votes were cast by Mack and fellow Democrats Mitch Irwin of Sault Ste. Marie, David Holmes of Detroit and Basil Brown of Highland Park.

The bounty was set up 42 years ago and currently pays $15 or $20 per animal, depending on sex.

Wildlife biologists told lawmakers coyotes are not a threat to livestock or game animals in the U.P. Even if they were, the bounty would do nothing to solve the problem, they said.

The only effective control method is a chemical eradication program, which in other states has entirely cleared large areas of coyotes, specialists said.

Victor Borge: pianist and comedian who's classically entertaining

By MATT OTTINGER

"Mozart wrote this piece for four hands, but who has four hands? I play it with two hands so it should take twice as long, (smiling) but I play it twice as fast."

"When I was eight my father always criticized me. He'd say, 'When I was your age, I was 12.'"

"My grandfather gave me this watch just a few minutes before he died . . . for $20 . . . plus tax."

"Do you care for piano? Too bad!"

It wasn't too bad if you were in the MSU Auditorium Wednesday night. There, Victor Borge delighted a near capacity audience with his dazzling ability both as a humorist and as a gifted concert pianist. For over two and a half hours, the Danish-born entertainer proved that classical music can be enjoyed by everyone, and that "the shortest distance between people is a smile."

Borge was at MSU to present his long-running Broadway show, "Comedy in Music," as part of the MSU Lively Arts Series. On Broadway, over 25 years ago, his one-man program ran for a staggering 849 performances. Today, with the addition of soprano Marylyn Mulvey to the show, Borge is entertaining audiences throughout the world with his amusing blend of comedy and music.

It would be impossible to limit Borge to one kind of comedy, but everything he does, from slapstick to subtlety, hinges on one action: doing the unexpected. In that regard, he opened the show by saying, "We are going to have an intermission pretty soon." He then introduced his first selection, but it took 20 minutes of comedy and two selection changes before his first serious piece, the Liszt etude, "Un Sospiro." The show continued like that throughout the evening. Borge would announce a selection, then, almost as an afterthought, he would stand and tell jokes. Finally he would sit and play, usually something other than his original selection.

Although much of Borge's comedy comes from his unwillingness to play the piano, he can and does play superbly, having performed in concerts since he was eight. The best indication of his talent, however, is his uncanny ability to use the piano as a comedic tool. What other concert pianist could be playing "Moonlight Sonata" and deftly turn it into a weird minor-key version of "Happy Birthday?"

Unlike most of today's comedians, Borge can use any number of comedy styles effectively, including ad lib. Some of his finest moments came through ad-libbed lines based on something happening in the audience. When a couple arrived late, Borge first criticized them ("I came from Denmark and I got here before you"), then went into a five-minute retelling of the part of his routine they missed. Amazingly, the audience seemed to enjoy it even more the second time around. Borge's tremendous talent allows him to move from comments about his family and his homeland to comments about Michigan weather and North Central Airlines (a popular target for comedy locally) without losing the audience somewhere along the way.

Even when his material was weak, Borge's flawless timing and low-key delivery made it work. A good example of this is when Borge, who is fluent in four languages, began pointing out the many flaws in the English language. A typical Borge comment: "A lady stopped me earlier and said, 'I'm looking forward to seeing you.' I said, 'Fine, but why aren't you listening forward to hearing me?'" He also spoke of a friend he called his next-door neighbor "because we don't have a door on that side of the house." Lines like that would be total flops for most comedians, but for Borge, they work.

Although Borge was at his best, the show did have its flaws. Mulvey has a beautiful singing voice, but her part of the program was, to say the least, confusing. She didn't finish a single one of her operatic selections without Borge interrupting her at one time or another, casting questions about just how important Borge thought her performance was. In what was apparently her encore, Mulvey sang a few measures of "I Could Have Danced All Night." It was nice, but following those arias it seemed a bit out of place.

The big problem, however, had nothing to do with the performers. The sound system sent an echo through the auditorium that kept the balcony audience, and many in the back of the main floor, from hearing the program clearly. Although the sound of the piano was somehow not affected, Borge's comments were — especially his one-liners that went by too garbled to be understood — and his mummings at the keyboard, which were often missed all together.

Overall, though, Borge was the show. His warmth and genuine joy in what he was doing was evident throughout. It was easy to see how he has survived as an entertainer for so many years. The first law of Borgean geometry is "the shortest distance between people is a smile," and that's a law we can all live with.

Many apologies to SN staffer Bill Holdship, whose disco column was mangled beyond comprehension yesterday due to a paste-up error and the carelessness of his editor. Those who still have the article can take its fifth column and paste it between "switchblades, and all Polish" and "band is a rock 'n roll unit, and" in the first paragraph of the fourth column to make sense of it all. Those who don't still have the article, take our word for it — originally, it made a lot of sense.

J. Geils Band is coming

Want your face blown out? If so, don't miss the return to the Lansing area of the J. Geils Band. The show will be held Monday at the Lansing Civic Auditorium, and the opening act will be Head East.

While the group has taken their name from their lead guitar player, the J. Geils Band's focal point is actually singer & jiver Peter Wolf. His onstage stream-of-shuck patter has been one of the band's constant attractions since their origins in Boston almost 10 years ago.

One reviewer's opinion of the band after seeing the perform last year at the Civic Center:

"Though the band has been playing for a bit too long, they still haven't forgotten the basics of rock and roll. They know all the moves, they know what's right and wrong, and they know how to get the crowd moving. If I had a chance to see 'em again, no doubt about it — I'd go in a minute!"

The J. Geils Band recorded their debut album in 1970, and it was divided almost evenly between re-done blues standards and originals done in a similar vein. Their second album, The Morning After, also came from this mold, and it produced the band's first hit, "Looking For A Love."

The band's live album, Full House, however, probably did the most to break the band nationwide. It was a steamy recording taken from an appearance at Detroit's Ciderella Ballroom, and the widespread airplay it received made the band a coast-to-coast concert favorite.

A string of best-selling albums followed, including Bloodshot, Ladies Invited, the double-live set Blow Your Face

J. Geils Band

Out and Hotline. Monkey Island and its accompanying hit single proved that the J. Geils Band is still live and kicking, and their concert here should drive that point home to their fans.

Tickets for Monday's show are available for $7.50 and $6.50 at the Civic Center Box Office, Campus Corners, and Sounds & Diversions. Showtime will be at 8 p.m.

Can you handle Can's 'Can' LP?

By DAVE DIMARTINO
State News Reviewer

Can is the best-kept secret in rock 'n' roll.

Who knows about Can? Oh, a few thousand people here and there who've seen their albums in bargain bins, I suppose, but not many more. You talk about cult bands — sales-wise, Can makes Pere Ubu look like the Beatles at record stores. Figure that any band at all associated with "New Wave" will sell a few thousand records somewhere in the world; Can isn't "New Wave" at all — so where does that leave 'em?

I'll tell you where it leaves 'em: in SPACE. This band has been my favorite group for years now, and if I feel like a dope raving about a band no one has ever heard of, I guess that's my loss. But it'll be your loss if you never hear a Can album, especially their newest. It's great!

In all, Can (German Harvest 1C 066-45 099) is the German band's 13th album and the first to be named after the group. To date, only four of Can's LPs have been released in the U.S., and there's little chance that this new one will be picked up by an American distributor. But it's available as an import, and I'd sure as hell rather have one of these than five copies of the latest single by X-Ray Spex of the Port Dukes, if you catch my drift.

A brief recapping of the band's history:

Can began as an avant-garde quintet in Cologne, Germany sometime during 1968. Their first LP was called Monster Movie — and 11 years later, it remains one of their best, an odd combination of the Velvet Underground, Pink Floyd, Jonathan Richman, and other, stranger things. Consisting of bassist Holger Czukay, keyboardist Irmin Schmidt, drummer Jaki Liebeck, and guitarist Michael Karoli, Can began with a black American lead vocalist named Malcolm Mooney who, as far as I know, flipped out and was replaced by Damo, an interesting fellow indeed. Damo's concept of appropriate lyrics included a smattering of Japanese, German and English, all whispered and generally unintelligible. great stuff, in other words, all of it lasting till Future Days, a classic LP which may be the best Can album ever.

Damo eventually left the band to become, of all things, a Jehovah's Witness. Immediately, guitarist Michael Karoli took over vocal chores, and managed quite well by himself. From Soon Over Babaluma to Flow Motion the band continued as a quartet until Czukay departed and bassist Rosco Gee and percussionist Reebop Kwaku Baah joined, producing the band's three most recent LPs, Saw Delight, Out of Reach and Can.

Can features Can at their unrivaled best. Extended improvisations, fully-structured songs and a touch of humor — as in their version of "Can Can," the funniest thing I've heard them do since their "Silent Night" Christmas single. The band is simply tremendous. The initial quartet is still intact after 11 years, and the tightness and interplay the band displays truly borders on the telepathic. Newcomer Gee and Reebop are finally fully assimilated into the band's sound, and, quite simply, Can has never sounded better.

The opening track, "All Gates Open," shows the band to be at its finest. While guitarist Karoli mumbles a very strange lyric, the Gee-Reebop-Liebeck rhythm section percolates with a typically hypnotic beat around which both Karoli's guitar and Schmidt's keyboards randomly float. The sound of the band is incredibly refined: everything flows, more so than ever before, and the image the song paints is simultaneously disturbing and attractive — two qualities which may well be Can's greatest attributes.

"Sodom" and "Safe" are other superb tracks, and "Ping-Pong," and 25-second "traditional" intro to "Can Be," incorporates a Pink Floydian ping pong effect — an interesting and humorous touch, which to my mind separates Can from old sourpusses like Tangerine Dream who think their every note is a valid electronic composition.

Can is a versatile-enough band to appeal to just about anyone who enjoys modern music. Punk fans would much enjoy Monster Movie and Landed, space-music types would especially appreciate Future Days and Soon Over Babaluma, and disco fans — honestly — might even enjoy some of the less-complex rhythms the band employs. Jeez, I dance to Can all the time when I hear 'em, and I don't even know how to boogie.

So: if you're ever in the mood to take a chance on an album you've never heard before, pick up Can and you'll be glad you did. Can fans, all three of you, be advised that the Disc Shop has a few copies of the import left. Believe me, it's worth looking for.

MSU softball team drops opener, 11 - 4

By DAVE JANSSEN
State News Sports Writer

After having their game canceled on a perfect day Tuesday, the MSU women's softball team was forced to play in the rain and cold for nearly three hours Thursday, dropping an 11-4 decision to Western Michigan University.

The Spartans never led as the Broncos struck immediately with two runs in the first inning. Back-to-back doubles by leftfielder Janice Nichols and pitcher Ann Kasdorf produced one score and a two-out triple by shortstop Patty Rendine gave WMU a 2-0 lead before MSU even got a chance at the bat.

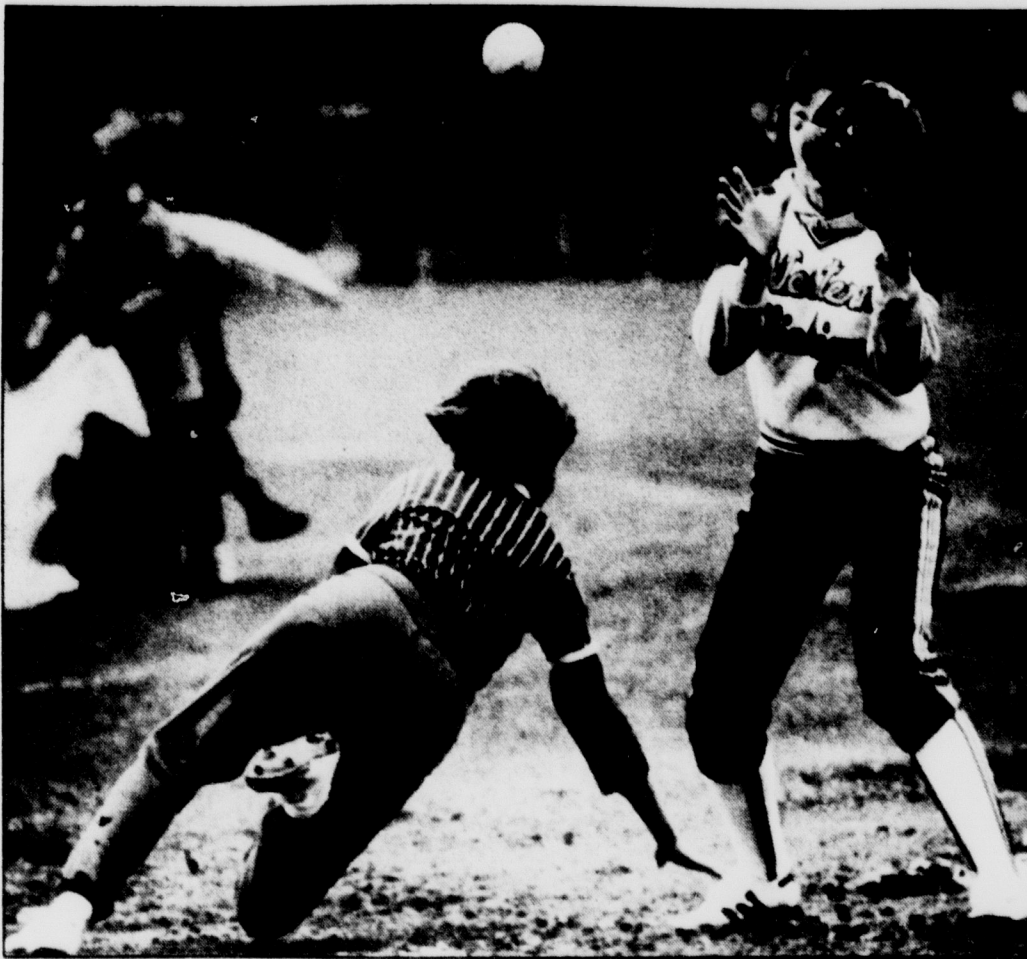

It wasn't long, however before the Spartans got right back into the game. Michel Van Howe, third base, and DH Joan Ferguson singled to start off the second inning for the Spartans. After Nancy "Lizzy" Forester, first base, hit into a force out, MSU got a break as the WMU catcher dropped a high fastball to shortstop Carol Hutchins, allowing the runners to move up to second and third. Hutchins popped out to shortstop leaving it up to centerfielder Cheryl Ritz, who beat out an infield single that scored both MSU runners and tied the game at 2-2.

The score remained knotted for the next two innings as Spartan starting pitcher Cheri Sprangle had little trouble with the Broncos in the third and fourth frames. Sprangle's MSU teammates filled the bases in their half of the third but were unable to score.

In the fifth, WMU grabbed the lead and put the game out of reach of the Spartans. With the aid of three walks, two errors and a passed ball, the Broncos scored four runs after two were out. By the time MSU's second pitcher Wendy Greenwood came to the aid of Sprangle and struck out WMU's Denise D'Angelo, the Broncos were out in front 6-2.

Ferguson singled again and Forester tripled her home and scored on an overthrow as the Spartans cut the WMU lead to 6-4 in the fifth. Western added five more meaningless runs in their sixth to close out the scoring.

MSU next plays Ohio State and Ball State universities in a pair of games scheduled to start at 10 a.m. and noon Saturday in Columbus, Ohio.

MSU centerfielder Cheryl Ritz dives back after overrunning third base in the Spartans' 11-4 loss to WMU Thursday. Bronco shortstop Patty Rendine awaits the throw that was not in time to nab Ritz.

Spartans face stiff competition again

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

It hasn't been an easy week for the MSU women's tennis team.

The Spartans dropped an 8-1 home decision to Northwestern, the region's No. 2 team last year, on Saturday. Then on Tuesday, they traveled to Ann Arbor to meet the defending state champion University of Michigan Wolverines. The results there weren't much better: U-M 9, MSU 0.

Things won't get any easier in the next week, either. The Spartans host defending Big Ten champion Ohio State University on Saturday at the Greater Lansing Racquet Club. Play will begin at 1 p.m.

"Ohio State will be a tough team to beat," head coach Earl Rutz said. "They were tough last year and may be even tougher this year."

On paper this may be true, but on the court the Buckeyes are only 2-5, as compared to the 2-7 record for the Spartans. However, all but one of OSU's matches have been played against Southern teams and their record should get better after making the rounds in the Big Ten.

Although it may not have made any difference in the won and lost columns, the rubber surface that the Spartans played on at U-M was new to them. "We need to get into Jenison (where the surface is similar to the one played on at U-M) and practice because we haven't had the chance to play on the surface that we played on at Michigan," Rutz explained.

Mike Kruger, the senior from Oakbrook, Ill., agreed with her coach. "The rubber surface we played on at Michigan was very different. They practice on it all year and it was new to us," she reasoned. "That explains the 9-0 loss more than anything."

Any way you look at it though, the Wolverines soundly beat MSU. Of the nine matches, only two went to three sets. Heather MacTaggart, the Spartan's No. 6 singles player, was the only one to take her match to three sets in singles. MacTaggart won the first set 6-3, but lost the last two, 6-0, 7-5. Debbie Mascarin, No. 1 singles for MSU, lost her second match in a row when she lost to Kathy Karzen, 6-4, 6-4. Kathy Karzen was playing as well as I've ever seen her play," Rutz said.

The doubles team of Mascarin and MacTaggart took U-M's No. 1 team of Karzen and Barb Fischley to three sets, but again, after winning the first set at 7-6, the Wolverines came back to win the last two sets 6-4, 6-3, and the match.

Injuries have bitten the Spartans lately. Janice Lukaciewicz went down with a knee injury against Northwestern and had to sit out the U-M match. Rutz still wasn't sure whether she will be able to play against OSU.

MSUNGS: Proclaiming it the best recruiting year that MSU women's tennis has ever had, Rutz announced Thursday that he had signed three top freshmen for next year, with a fourth coming into the fold as a walk-on.

New additions for 1980 include Monty Gettys from Melbourne, Fla. Gettys was ranked No. 28 in the nation and recently beat the No. 1 tennis player in Florida. "Our top recruit," Rutz exclaimed.

The other two signees were Jill Ginsberg of Pittsburgh and Diane Dunn of Holmdel, N.J. Both were highly-sought prospects.

Patsy Coash from Kalamazoo Hackett High School is the walk-on.

"We hope this will be able to put us back on top," Rutz said. "I can guess that freshmen will be playing number 1 through 5 for us next year."

Rutz concluded that he may be able to sign one more top-notch player for next year, and that they may be a couple of more walk-ons.

Laxers in league debut

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Sports Writer

With mother nature practicing her yearly tradition of creating havoc for Spring sports, many MSU teams have encountered difficulty in getting their seasons started. Wednesday she struck the MSU lacrosse team.

The Spartans scheduled game with Bowling Green State University in Ohio was canceled due to inclement weather, forcing the Spartans to turn around and begin concentrating on an important two-game weekend series.

Soon after arriving in Bowling Green, the team encountered blizzard conditions and the game was called off.

Coach Nevin Kanner said that there is a possibility the game will be made up later in the season if budget conditions allow.

With the Bowling Green contest eliminated, the Spartans will now begin preparation for this weekend's games, including their league opener on Saturday with Oberlin College beginning at 1:30 p.m. in Spartan Stadium.

Kanner said MSU and Oberlin are very equal teams talent-wise, and that, in the past, most of the games between the teams have been settled by no more than two goals.

"We're pretty equal," Kanner said. "They are in the same position as us. They are on a limited budget and their kids are just going to school and want to play lacrosse for the enjoyment."

Kanner said that the unscheduled layoff could have a negative effect on the team, but added that it could also have a positive effect in that the team will be anxious to play.

Immediately after the game against Oberlin, the team will leave for Bloomington, Ind. for their game Sunday against Indiana University.

Kanner said that Indiana is "new to lacrosse" after beginning their program only a few years ago.

Last year the Spartans were easy 21-2 winners over the Hoosiers, but Kanner said that he does not expect this year's contest to be as lopsided.

Kanner said the physical strain of playing two games in two days on top of traveling could become an important factor in the Indiana game.

With the Spartans now 2-0 on the season and their first league game at hand, Kanner said that it is important for the Spartans to win both games this weekend.

Saturday's game is free and will be televised by cable Channel 11 for a tape delay broadcast.

Women golfers in tough tournament

By DAVE JANSSEN
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's golf team has completed what coach Mary Fossum calls its most difficult week of the season and is off to compete in the tough Lady Buckeye Invitational at Ohio State University this weekend.

Fossum said the team lost a week of good practice because of cold temperatures that made it hard for the golfers to concentrate. With the Forest Akers Golf Course still closed, the team was also forced to find an alternate course to practice this week.

Added to that, Fossum was forced to hold playoffs for the spots in the tournament Saturday and Sunday. That competition ended in the snow on Wednesday.

Three Spartans, however, did not have to put up with the weather that day. Those golfers were co-captains Sue Ertl and Susie Conlin plus Lisa Speakers, all of whom were exempt from the 36-hole playoff. Ann Atwood and Nina Spatafora won the open slots, rounding the five player squad that will represent MSU this weekend.

After arriving in Columbus, Ohio today the Spartans will play a practice round on the tournament course. The 17-team invitational will follow with 18-hole rounds on both Saturday and Sunday at OSU's Scarlet Golf Course.

MSU, which won the tournament two years ago and placed third in 1978, should get its toughest competition from Georgia and the host Lady Buckeyes. These two teams finished 1-2 in the Lady Paladin Invitational where MSU took 11th last weekend.

Fossum believes that MSU is a bit behind both Georgia and OSU at this point in the season but feels the Spartans will be able to ward off other tough teams such as Minnesota and North Carolina. She hopes MSU can finish among the top five teams in the tournament.

The Spartans will again be led by Ertl, Conlin and Speaker, who Fossum claims is hitting the ball real well of late. The MSU coach also expects fine performances from Atwood and Spatafora. "Ann is hitting the ball better than ever in her three years here," Fossum said. "And though this is Nina's first real competition, I still look for her to do well."

Though Fossum admits that it is easy for the Spartans to look ahead to hosting the Big Ten Invitational April 20 and 21, she is confident that her golfers will be ready for the coming weekend. "We'll take every tournament separately," Fossum said. "Every tournament means a lot to the girls."

Baseball opens at EMU

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

Is MSU's baseball team better than its 4-12 Spring training record indicates?

This question should be answered Saturday when the Spartans open up their northern season with the difficult task of opposing Eastern Michigan University in a double-header.

The Hurons were rated fifth in the country prior to Spring training and are the defending Mid-American Conference champions.

"In Texas, we were just down there to train, but we'll be ready to win Saturday," coach Dan Litwhiler said. "Our team may be starting its baseball season, but our real season doesn't open up until next week when we start Big Ten play. But this weekend, though, is still important when you consider won and lost situations. Like the Spartans, EMU didn't have an impressive record in Spring training with a 8-12 mark.

"These games should be a battle, which it is like every year," Litwhiler said of the upcoming contests in Ypsilanti.

Last season, MSU took three out of four games from the Hurons. The Spartans swept them to open the year at Ypsilanti 3-2 and 2-1. Later on in East Lansing, MSU split with them, winning 12-2 and falling in extra innings, 8-7.

"I would be tickled to death if we could beat them three out of four games again this year," Litwhiler said.

MSU is scheduled to throw four pitchers at the Hurons in Brian Woolcott, Mark Pomorski, Jim Cotter and Jay Strother for the two games. Litwhiler may also throw Greg Butzirus and Steve Kruse.

"We probably won't schedule any of our pitchers to go the distance until we get into Big Ten play," Litwhiler said. "But I might change that idea against Albion Tuesday or Aquinas Wednesday."

Besides being MAC champions with a 12-3 mark, EMU has all of its starters at every position returning except for first base.

Their top player is shortstop Brian Stemberger, an All-MAC and Mid-east regional team selection last season. He played in all 63 games last year, compiling a .319 hitting average and batting in 43 runs.

EMU also features All-MAC outfielder Audie Cole and MAC second team selections, Pat Sheridan and Gordon Chretien.

JOY L. HAENLIN

'68 Series
now memory

If you were alive and in Michigan about 11 years ago, you probably have fond memories of the 1968 World Series between the Detroit Tigers and the St. Louis Cardinals. Especially if you're a Tiger fan.

The hysteria that smothered the city of Detroit on the evening of Oct. 10, 1968 had only one rival — the hysteria that stormed MSU on March 26, 1979 as the Spartans won the NCAA basketball championship.

But this isn't a column about the Spartans. There have been enough. It is, instead, an opening day baseball column about what it's like to be on the losing end in a clutch situation — what the Indiana State Sycamores faced last week and what the St. Louis Cardinals faced the 1968.

Not that we all don't know what it's like to be disappointed. Probation, especially in light of the MSU football team's fine show of strength this past season, has shown sports fans what it's like to be so good but still not make it.

Ah, the '68 World Series. The year of the pitchers. A series full of emotion and sentimental favorites. Seven contests of heartaches and elation, depending on what side of the coin you were on.

The St. Louis Cardinals had already won the 1967 world championship in seven games against the Boston Red Sox. They were looking to duplicate the feat and with the near-perfect precision pitching of Bob Gibson — who boasted a 1.12 Earned Run Average for every nine innings he pitched during the '68 regular season — they seemed to be the on-paper favorite.

But then you had the Tigers — An underdog's choice, a home-run club who had hit 182 home runs that year against the Card's 72. The first time in 34 years Detroit had a chance to take the world championship. The Tigers had been hot all season.

I was in fifth grade in 1968. I had just moved to Michigan from New York, complete with a thick New York accent. That made it hard enough to be accepted by my new classmates. But I had another factor working against me. I was a Cardinal fan in a school which smelled blood, surrounded by a sea of live-or-die Tiger punks.

In a very real way, my social success hinged the series. If "we" won, my constant bragging would be somewhat justified and the kids would maybe, just maybe, forget the way I talked and leave me alone. My neck was on the line. My mouth had gotten me there.

The kids at school were so into the series, in fact, that we declared a strike against our school work unless our teacher let us watch the series. What could she do? The set was on for every game, with every student in the room save me and a shy, soft-spoken fellow Cards fan, sporting a blue baseball cap.

There were three games which will probably be remembered forever by everyone who watched the series, regardless of affiliation. Game one, which was hailed as the battle of the pitchers between Bob Gibson and Denny McLain (the first 31-game winner in the major leagues in 34 years) and games five and seven.

Critics suspected game one would answer the question — which pitcher was better. And it did very quickly, as Gibson made mincemeat of the Tiger line-up with his sixth consecutive shut-out. The score was 4-0.

Game five was one of the most vivid memories of my life. You may recall the controversial play at home plate between Lou Brock, the greatest modern base stealer and Bill Freehan, Tiger catcher, in which Brock failed to slide. He sure looked safe to me. But Brock was called out and my name was mud for the rest of the year.

And then we had game seven, which spelled the final blow for the Cardinals, as the tiger's won, 4-1.

I watched the game at home. Before my eyes, I saw my social life fall and then crumble at my feet. My Mom wanted to go to Pennys.

All I wanted to do was cry. After reminding me what a baby I was, she dragged me out of my room and I cried in the cab all the way to Northwood Shopping Center.

Here it is, 11 years later, and the series still brings a smile to my face. Eleven years from now, the NCAA basketball Championship and the ensuing romp in front of Dooleys will prompt the same reaction.

And while it's a shame that students can't seem to get fired up for anything except sports, at least we know we've got the power to do something if we ever want to.

But for me and my Dad, another staunch Cardinals follower, 1968 will always be a memorable year. We had more fun just talking about those seven games. And we still do.

Men tracksters hope to remain healthy

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

Because of the cold weather, the MSU men's track team hasn't been able to practice in an "all-out" manner during the past week.

But the Spartans open up the outdoor season at Purdue Saturday, and coach Jim Bibbs just hopes his team can come away healthy and get some preparation for the — hopefully — upcoming warm weather.

"Naturally, we always hope to win, but that is secondary to coming out healthy," Bibbs said. "If we come out healthy, we'll be OK for the Dogwood Relays next week, and after that, the weather should be OK and we can work from there."

Because Bibbs hasn't been able to run his tracksters at full steam, he isn't sure what to expect from his runners.

"We've run the best we can so far under these conditions," Bibbs said. "We've just got to see what we've got. If the weather is half-way decent, I expect our kids to do well because they are experienced and are quality athletes. But there is no way of estimating how they'll do."

Nevertheless, Bibbs feels the meet against the Boilermakers, who took sixth in the Big Ten indoor meet while MSU took fourth, will provide beneficial experience.

"Every race gives our runners a chance to get some experience under their belts, which is better than no experience at all," Bibbs said. "We're not going to have anyone meets so early in the season because the weather just makes it a waste of time and money."

The Purdue meet will also open up the Big Ten outdoor season, and Bibbs hopes they can get some momentum for the rest of Big Ten action with this one.

"Indiana is the favored team to win the title, but there should be a real dogfight for second between us, Ohio State, Michigan and Wisconsin," Bibbs said.

Everyone will be healthy for the meet except for sprinter Randy Smith, who will not run because of his nagging injuries.

The top performers MSU will face are Derek Laing in the long jump and the sprints, Ken Sumbry in the half-mile, Ken Cammack in the hurdles and Bruce Bentor in the quarter-mile.

MSUINGS: While the Spartans are on the road this weekend, Jenison Fieldhouse will still host plenty of action in the 16th annual Spartan Relays.

An estimated 2,400 youngsters from 140 high schools are expected to compete in the two-day meet, featuring Class B and C performers today and Class A Saturday.

Doors open each day at 11 a.m.

Outdoor opener tough

By CHERYL FISH
State News Sports Writer

According to coach Nell Jackson, the MSU women's track team is in for a "heck of a good meet" this weekend down in Knoxville, Tenn.

The Spartans will be competing against University of Tennessee, Maryland and Penn State.

MSU came out ahead of Penn State in previous meetings, while the Terrapins of Maryland narrowly defeated the Spartans in the Pittsburgh meet during the indoor season.

Jackson and long-distance coach Eric Zemper both told the women that this meet is a good chance for them to work on qualifying times for the nationals. "All that good competition and nice weather will be quite an opportunity," Zemper said.

Now that the outdoor season is starting, the distance runners have more events to compete in. The 5,000- and 10,000-meter races are not run in the indoor season. "Running indoors and outdoors is almost like two different sports," Zemper said. "It's easier to run outdoors because the turns are wider." However, there is the weather to contend with.

The 10,000-meter event has also been added to the nationals, which will give the distance runners more incentive in the next few meets.

"Indoor season is preparation for the outdoor season for the distance runners," Zemper said.

But the distance runners had some good performances during the indoor season, to balance out top showings by the sprinters. Sophomore Kelly Spatz qualified for the nationals in the two-mile run in the MSU Invitational meet in February, with a winning time of 10:39.4. Lisa Berry was the first Spartan to qualify, in the Pittsburgh meet, with a time of 16:46 in the three-mile race.

Sprinter Cheryl Gilliam is expected by Zemper to keep up her record-breaking runs. Gilliam broke her own MSU record during the MSU Invitational in the 300-yard dash.

Other top-notch performers are Kim Hatchett in the hurdles and Lynn Barber, the Spartan's shot-putter.

This weekend's meet is the first since the March 17 Lady Gator Relays in Gainesville, Fla. In that meet, no scores were kept, as it was an open meet for Eastern teams and individuals.

But the beginning of the outdoor season means the time is approaching for the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) Nationals, which will be held at MSU. That should be added incentive for the women, who will be on the road most of the term.

"Of course you want a big group from your own school for the nationals," Zemper said. He added that a lot of time will be spent to get ready for the event, which will take place on May 23-26.

Before that happens, the team must psyche themselves up for each meet, including this weekend's. "If we rise for the occasion, there's a good chance of qualifying," Jackson said.

Crime punishment discussed by panel

By JULIE HARRIS

Imprisonment is a "non-solution" to the crime punishment problem, a nationally known prison authority and a panel of leading criminal justice professionals said Wednesday at the Union.

William G. Nagel, executive vice president of the American Foundation Institute of Corrections, chaired a panel which discussed whether Michigan should build more prisons.

"Michigan prisons are terribly overcrowded," Nagel said. "We have a capacity for 13,000 prisoners, yet there are 16,000 stuffed into the system."

Nagel said though it appears Michigan needs more prisons, he does not believe more prisons would solve the problem.

"More prisons breed more imprisonment," he said, adding that in states where new cells were built, crime and imprisonment rose correspondingly.

"If you have a cell, you fill it," Nagel said. "This is a serious social problem — out-of-sight, out-of-mind is no solution."

Nagel said the present prison system is destructive to the individual.

"Besides the obvious drawbacks of overcrowding, there is the problem of a few people having to control a lot of people," he said.

Nagel said there are ways in which prison authorities attempted to control the inmates.

"Guards use strategies such as humiliation and segregation, among others," he said, "to blunt such qualities as initiative and leadership in the inmates."

Nagel said these "strategies" create a way of life inside the prison that leaves prisoners unable to cope with the outside world once they are released.

Alternatives to jailing, Nagel said, may include such things as "fines, community service, restitution to the victim, probation or other residential programs," depending on why the person was imprisoned.

Panelist Rosemary Sarri, from the University of Michigan, called prisons mainly "holding operations" and said "people do not improve while they are in prison."

Sarri estimated expenses of recent proposals to build and operate four 600-bed prison facilities in Michigan at close to $6 billion, even leaving out inflationary factors.

"It is obvious we need alternatives," Sarri said.

Panelist Frank Donley, of the Michigan Department of Corrections, said the prison system has elements of "brutality and cruelty."

"The prison where I worked was overcrowded to the extent that you were afraid to turn your back at any time of the day or night," he said.

The panel discussion was sponsored by the MSU School of Criminal Justice and the Michigan Council of Crime and Delinquency.

PARKING REVIEW URGED

Planners advise haste

By SUSAN TOMPOR
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing advisory committee recommendations such as sealing down parking spaces for smaller cars must be dealt with immediately, the Planning Commission agreed Wednesday.

At its work session Wednesday night, the commission requested that the city planning staff outline specific proposals from the Transportation and Land Use advisory reports that cannot wait for the completion of a new Comprehensive Plan.

Two recommendations that should be fulfilled immediately are a proposal for the inclusion of bicycle facilities in the proposed Lot 9 parking structure and another for the restriping of parking lots to provide special spaces for smaller cars, Planning Commission Chairperson Ralph Monsma said.

Bradford Pryce, group manager of the Department of Planning, Housing and Community Development, said plans are being made for restriping lots without meters by next month.

Parking studies indicate that nearly 30 percent of the cars in city parking lots are small cars, he said.

Pryce said figures were not available regarding how many extra spaces would result from the restriping procedure.

The commission also discussed a request for rezoning of land on Lake Lansing Road between Coolidge Road and Rolling Brook Drive.

Vernon L. Sayers, an East Lansing developer, has requested that the land be rezoned from residential to business.

Sayers has proposed rezoning in order to permit the construction of a doctor's office on the land bordering Rolling Brook Drive and Lake Lansing Road.

A general office building has been proposed for the remainder of the site.

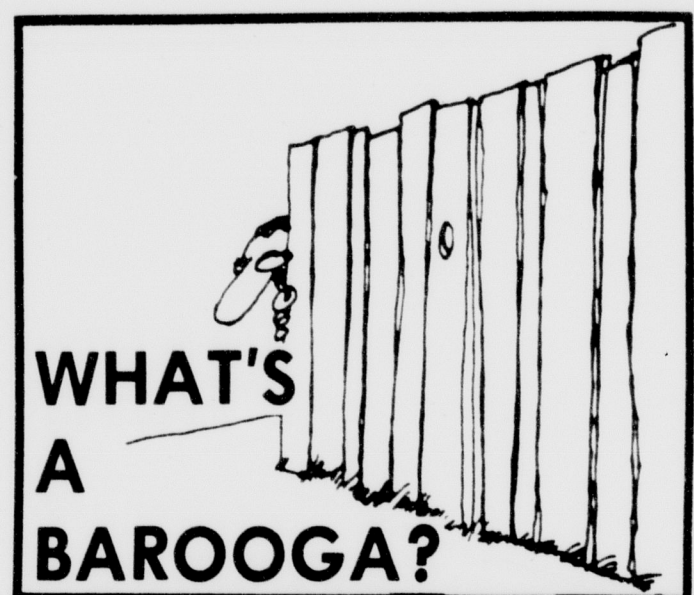

The planning staff recommended that rezoning be approved for the construction of the general office building, but recommended that the commission not rezone land bordering Lake Lansing Road and Rolling Brook Drive.

A traffic median on Lake

Lansing Road would prohibit left-hand turns onto Lake Lansing Road from the complex, city planner Glenn Remus said, and would increase traffic on Rolling Brook Drive.

Commission members discussed a single driveway onto Lake Lansing Road and the cutting of the median to allow left-hand turns as possible solutions to traffic problems.

A public hearing on the rezoning issue will be held at the Planning Commission's regular meeting April 11.

Mountaineering #4.

THE OPTIMUM MOMENT.

Mountaineering<sup>1</sup> is a skill of timing as well as technique. The wrong moment, like the wrong method, marks the gap between amateur and aficionado. So the key to successful mountaineering is to choose the occasions wisely and well. When, then, is it appropriate to slowly quaff the smooth, refreshing mountains of Busch Beer?

Celebrations, of course, are both expected and excellent opportunities to test your mountaineering mettle. Indeed, on major holidays it is virtually mandatory to do so. Imagine ushering in the fiscal new year or commemorating Calvin C. Coolidge's birthday or throwing caution to the wind during Take-A-Sorghum-To-Lunch-Week without the benefit of Busch. A disturbing prospect at best.

On the other hand, not every event need be as significant as those outlined above.

Small victories like exams passed, papers completed or classes attended are equally acceptable. Remember the mountaineer's motto: matriculation is celebration.

Interpersonal relationships are also meaningful times. There are few things finer than taking your companion in hand and heading for the mountains, transcending the hum and hum-drum in favor of a romantic R & R. Naturally, couples who share the pleasures of mountaineering run the risk of being labeled social climbers. But such cheap shots are to be ignored. They are the work of cynics, nay-sayers and chronic malcontents.

Similarly, the ambience of an athletic afternoon (e.g. The Big Game) is another ideal moment. Downing the mountains elevates the morale of the fan and, hence, the team. Therefore, if you care at all about the outcome, it is your duty to mountaineer.

When should one not enjoy the invigoration of the mountains? Here, you'll be happy to learn, the list is much briefer.

Mountaineering is considered declassé with dessert, improper during judicial proceedings and just plain foolish while crop dusting around power lines. Otherwise, as the hot-heads of the sixties used to say, "Seize the time!"

Mountaineering is the science and art of drinking Busch. The term originates due to the snowy, icy peaks sported by the label outside and perpetuates due to the cold, naturally refreshing taste inside. (cf. lessons 1, 2 and 3.)

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH
INVITES YOU
TO A SERVICE OF RECONCILIATION

Easter is a time of NEW LIFE, and the Sacrament of Reconciliation (we used to call it Penance) has always been closely associated with our sharing in the Resurrection of Jesus.

So, we are inviting all, ESPECIALLY THOSE WHO FEEL ALIENATED FROM THE CHURCH, to come back and share in Christ's healing and forgiveness of sins.

On Monday, April 9 at 7:30 PM at St. John's Student Parish, the Pastoral Team and the Members of the Parish will celebrate a service of Reconciliation to welcome back home all of us who feel alienated from the Body of Christ.

For this occasion to be a genuine sign of God's grace here in East Lansing we need the prayers of the entire community. Please pray with us and for us.

We ask you to pray, to join us, and to invite others who have turned from the Church to return and then, with us all united, we shall begin our celebration of Christ's New Life in Easter.

ASMSU pay referendum to be held

and representatives would receive $100 per term.

The similar proposal defeated last year would have paid board representatives $125 per term.

In 1966, a constitutional amendment was passed which set up a Compensation Committee to set the amounts Student Board members were to be paid. In 1969, compensation was abolished and did not surface again until last year.

Stouffer said job descriptions have been approved by the board so students can remove their representatives for not doing their assigned jobs.

If representatives were compensated, the board "would get a higher caliber of people," Stouffer said.

Sosa said "paying them (the Student Board) right now would be criminal" because board representatives "have to get their act together."

The increase in ASMSU refunds has prompted consideration of restricting ASMSU services to students who have not received refunds.

Stouffer said Programming Board is considering giving students who have not received refunds priority in terms of buying concert tickets and may begin "tiering" ticket prices — with students receiving refunds paying more.

Students who have received refunds are "supposedly" not allowed to use any ASMSU service, Stouffer said.

ASMSU services include Programming Board events such as concerts put on by Mariah, Showcase Jazz, Pop Entertainment, Ebony Productions and Ten Pound Fiddle.

Classic Films, Great Issues and Travel Council are also part of Programming Board.

Legal services and short-term loans provided by ASMSU are only available to students who have not received a refund.

In the past, ASMSU has not been concerned with students receiving refunds and taking advantage of some ASMSU services because there were so few, Stouffer said.

Students who receive refunds are no longer members of ASMSU and have their I.D. cards punched.

Clerk foils robbery

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A man described as in his early 20s entered a Grand Rapids grocery, keeping his right hand in his pocket as if holding a gun.

"This is a holdup," he announced to a clerk, according to the police. "Open the cash register."

The 52-year-old clerk studied the man and shook his head. "No way am I going to open it up," he said.

"Do you want to die?" the man asked.

The clerk thought about it briefly and shrugged. "We all got to die some time," he said.

The man stared back at the clerk in disbelief, then grabbed a bag of potato chips, slapped a quarter on the counter and left, police said.

U-M grad school talk

A representative from the University of Michigan School of Public Health will talk to students interested in its graduate program today at 3 p.m. in 104 Natural Science Bldg.

Emphasis areas will include biostatistics, community health, environmental and industrial health, epidemiology, health planning and administration, population planning and toxicology.

CABLE TV RATE INCREASE REQUESTED

E.L. regulators want profit information

By LAURA M. PORTER

More information will be needed before a request for an increase in cable television rates can be acted upon, the East Lansing Cable Communications Commission agreed Wednesday.

Dan Backus, of National Cable, and Emmett White, Eastern Regional Manager of United Cable Co. — the parent company of National Cable — requested an increase in the basic service rates.

They propose raising the monthly charge from $7.45 to $7.95, the cost for an additional outlet from $10 to $12.50 and the monthly charge on that outlet from $2 to $2.25.

White said these increases are needed to cover the rising costs of gasoline and maintenance for their installation trucks, new services such as the Madison Square Gardens channel and WTCG in Atlanta, operational costs, advertising and postage.

Commissioner C. Patric "Lash" Larowe said before he votes for the increase he needs to know the company's profit record.

"Just knowing the costs you (National Cable) have isn't enough," Larowe said. "I need to know that your profits aren't going up accordingly to compensate for them before I can justify an increase."

The other commissioners agreed with Larowe that National Cable must provide the commission with more information before they can recommend the increase to the City Council.

In addition to the rate increase proposal, National Cable is requesting the commission to abandon rate regulation.

In August 1976 the Federal Communications Commission rescinded all federal regulations respective to regulation of CATV rates and charges. The FCC has left the decision up to the individual city.

According to a report submitted by National, if deregulation is adopted by the city, National will continue to maintain a tariff on file with the city, setting forth both rates and charges to be made to subscribers for basic cable television services.

"If adopted, a notice of rate changes will be filed with the city and subscribers 30 days in advance of effective date," the report states.

Commissioner Robert Muhlbach suggested a partial deregulation under which the commission would review the performance of National Cable annually.

National Cable will provide the commission with more information in both of these areas at the next public hearing on April 18.

Engineering open house

Persons interested in engineering opportunities can view exhibits and talk with representatives from the MSU College of Engineering during the annual open house Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Engineering Building.

The program is sponsored by the College of Engineering and the Student Engineering Council.

"This is the one time each year when we show interested people the facets of our program and engineering career opportunities," said Les L. Leone, assistant to the dean. "We'll also show some new developments in several fields."

The open house will include exhibits from fields including computer-aided design, biomedical engineering, wind energy and nuclear power, Leone said.

Advisers from each department will be available to answer questions, Leone said. Information will be available on opportunities for women and minorities.

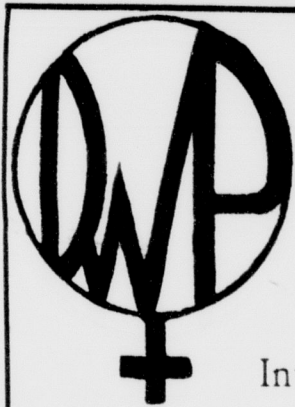

Both events are open to the public and there is no admission charge.

PBB cattle incineration

Diane M. Carlson, of the DNR, told a subcommittee of the Agriculture Committee that the MSU incinerator could be converted for burning the remaining animals.

One of MSU's two incinerators and a similar controlled-combustion incinerator at the Detroit Zoo are some of the only facilities in Michigan large enough and of good enough design to handle the incineration, Carlson said.

If the MSU incinerator was chosen by the state, she said, it would require several modifications including construction of another chamber of equal size to the existing one.

She said it would also need improved insulation and temperature sensors to handle the increased thermal stress caused by the high degree of heat necessary to destroy PBB.

However, Keahey said MSU's newer incinerator behind the Physical Plant is capable of reaching the high temperature — over 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The older MSJ incinerator was used between 1974 and 1978 to burn 216 pounds of PBB in dead animal matter. The practice was halted in 1978 when state agencies discovered that dioxins or chemical vapors were released when PBB was burned at temperatures below 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The incinerator that had been used on campus to burn the contaminated animals could not then and still cannot reach 2,000 degrees.

While state officials decide whether to continue burying or to incinerate the contaminated animals, the DNR is researching chemical vapors released in the air and found in the waste ash when PBB is burned.

Carlson said the DNR is studying a new compound recently found to be created when PBB is burned — furans, or brominated dibenzofuran.

"Furans are more toxic than PBB," she said, adding that the DNR has no data on how harmful to humans the new compound actually is.

She said the concentration of PBB in the remaining animals is low enough that with proper incineration at the high temperature, the dioxins and furans would not be released or cause health problems.

She cautioned, however, that if incomplete combustion was attained, the dioxins and furans would be released in air emissions and in the waste ash produced.

She estimated an incinerator would need to run continuously for half a year to burn the remaining contaminated cattle.

Pet health tips offered

How to care for turtles and hamsters at home will be one of several presentations at the Vet-A-Visit open house beginning 9 a.m. Saturday at the Veterinary Clinical Center on Wilson Road.

Local veterinarians will give tips on home health checks for pets and career information will be available.

MSU engineers sponsor model bridge competition

Local high school students will display their models of bridges beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday in 100 Engineering Bldg.

The display is part of the Second Annual Model Bridge Contest sponsored by the MSU

American Society of Civil Engineers Student Chapter.

Over 147 high school students representing 30 local schools have worked for six weeks in preparation to have their bridges tested for design, appearance and strength, for which there will be awards.

Towing demonstrators arrested

When officers began to move students away from the wrecker, one DPS officer grabbed a woman by the collar, and then asked her to get out of the way. Kathy Dorr, 18, of 360 Phillips Hall, said she is not concerned about how she was moved by the officer.

"I am very mad about what is going on here, and I want to do something about it," she said. "I really think they have forgotten who makes this place run and who they are working for."

While the officer was talking to Dorr, others nearby were continuing chants of "We respect the law, but not the DPS."

One student, who asked not to be named, said "As long as they (DPS) have time to come over here to protect wreckers, we've got time to make it difficult for them."

Miller trial

However, Katherine Miller testified she came home from the party at 1:30 a.m. and said that both her parents were asleep.

The next morning Martha Sue Young was discovered to be missing. More than two years of intensive searching have turned up nothing but her clothing and purse.

The preliminary hearing will continue today at 9:30 a.m.

Miller faces arraignment in Ingham County Circuit Court April 12 on charges of second-degree murder in the disappearance of Kristine Rose Stuart, a 30-year-old Lansing schoolteacher.

Miller also faces a preliminary hearing April 30 in St. Joseph on charges of raping a 14-year-old Delta Township girl and attempted murder of her and her younger brother.

Evans' sentence stayed

John Carroll, attorney for the killer who had said he wanted to die, said less than six hours before the scheduled 12:01 a.m. CST execution that the Supreme Court justice had delayed it until April 13.

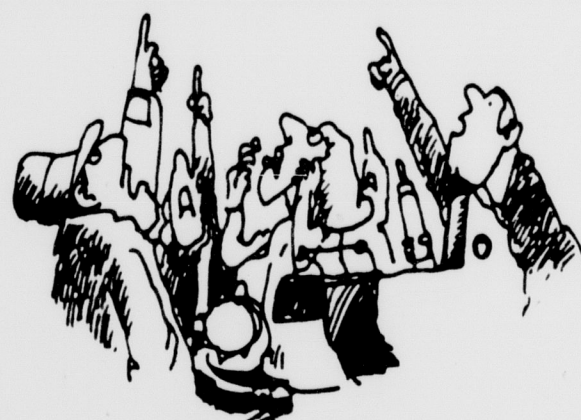

"All we know is that the electrocution is off," said Carroll. "We have no details yet."

Rehnquist said in Washington that the sentence was stayed for "further consideration of the application of Betty Evans."

mother of the convicted murderer.

Since Evans had said he would rather die in Alabama's yellow electric chair than spend the rest of his life in jail, his mother had made the last minute appeal for his life.

Prison officials said Evans would probably not be available for comment Thursday night and Alabama Gov. Bob James said he would have no further statements on the case until it completes the judicial process.

Tech Hifi gives you guarantees other stores don't.

It's reassuring to know that when you buy quality components from Tech Hifi, your investment is protected.

Our 7-Day Moneyback Guarantee protects you if our components don't sound as good in your home as you'd hoped they would. You can return the equipment within seven days and get your money back. No questions asked.

Our 1-Year Loudspeaker Trial lets you live with your speakers for a year. Then, if you decide to upgrade, we'll give you a very substantial trade towards more expensive speakers. (And you can get full credit towards speakers costing twice as much).

At Tech Hifi, you'll also get a 90-Day Full-Credit Trade on any components you buy, plus a 60-Day Defective Exchange, and warranties on parts and labor.

We even guarantee our prices

Thanks to the buying power of the 67 Tech Hifi stores, we can guarantee our prices. If any authorized dealer advertises a lower price than you paid within 30 days of your purchase, let us know. We'll refund the difference.

You can't get these guarantees at most stereo stores. But you get them all at Tech Hifi. Because we have confidence in the quality of our components.

Take Tech Hifi's featured $649 system, for example. It's built around JBL L-19 loudspeakers. Their accuracy, efficiency, and output capability are amazing. The receiver is an elegant Onkyo TX1500 Mk. II with Servo-Lock tuning. For you records, there's a precise Marantz 6110 semi-automatic turntable with a record-saving Audio Technica cartridge.

Tech Hifi. The store where you get great sound, low prices, and great guarantees.
