

'Magic' Johnson agrees to million-dollar contract

By The State News and UPI

Earvin "Magic" Johnson left Lansing Tuesday afternoon for a press conference at 1 p.m. Wednesday in Inglewood, Calif. There, Johnson agreed to a long-term contract with the Los Angeles Lakers which will probably enable him to return home as a millionaire.

Though precise figures were not announced, there were reports that Johnson would get nearly $1 million for his first season in the NBA. MSU coach Jud Heathcote said he was notified that his former All-American had come to terms with the Lakers, who have the No. 1 pick in the NBA college draft next month, for a pact that would pay him $600,000 for the next four seasons.

"Some guy called me and told me that's what came out of the press conference out there today," Heathcote said. "That would be a kind of contract that might be worth leaving college basketball for."

Heathcote said that otherwise he would question whether it was wise for the "Magic Man" to go to the pros. He said he believed Johnson could have raised his value after playing another year at MSU and representing the U.S. in the 1980 Olympics.

Johnson laid to rest all hopes that he would stay at MSU last Friday when he announced that he would apply for the hardship and pass up his last two years at MSU. The proceedings in Inglewood Wednesday only confirmed rumors that the Lakers would select the 19-year-old MSU sophomore as their first draft choice. Johnson cannot officially sign a contract with the Lakers until they choose him in June, but now there is no doubt he will become L.A. property.

Magic, flanked by Laker coach Jerry West and general manager Bill Sharman at the press conference, made it clear that a factor in his decision to go with the Lakers was their center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

"First of all I'd like to say I'm happy and excited to be here," Johnson said. "I'm happy we came to terms and everything, because I probably wouldn't have come out of school if we didn't."

"This is a very good organization. They have probably the best one or two centers in the league and I feel that was important to my decision. They make it to the playoffs about every year and that's why I decided to come out of school."

Asked what he felt his role would be with the Lakers, Johnson replied: "I feel really whatever the coach wants me to do, that will be my job. I'll probably do a little bit of everything, sharing the point with Norm Nixon (L.A. guard). It just depends on the coach, what he wants us to do."

Meanwhile, back in East Lansing, Johnson's old coach had in mind filling the scholarship that he left open last Friday. Heathcote explained that he expected Walker D. Russell, one of the candidates for that scholarship, to be in town Wednesday night to talk about playing for MSU next season.

Russell is a Pontiac Central High School product who was signed by Heathcote last season but was declared ineligible under NCAA rules because of a below 2.0 grade point average.

911 REFUSES TAPE RELEASE

Director says info correct

By PAUL COX
State News Staff Writer

A 911 operator was given the correct location of a fatal sports accident Monday night, but the directions were garbled when sent through the Lansing Fire Central Dispatch to an East Lansing rescue unit, the 911 director said Wednesday.

Director Matthew Winger said a caller gave 911 the correct directions to the accident scene but the instructions became confused before being received by the East Lansing rescue unit.

Comments by MSU Department of Public Safety Maj. Adam J. Zutaut and Fire Central dispatch personnel confirm Winger's assessment of the incident.

Despite the inaccurate directions, the rescue unit reached the East Complex IM fields in a "normal" amount of time because of correct directions from the MSU Department of Public Safety, East Lansing Fire Chief Phil Patriarche said.

Steven Morganthaler, 20, of 472 N. Hubbard Hall was struck in the chest by a ball thrown in an intramural softball game and died later that evening in Edward W. Sparrow Hospital.

Winger said that a 911 operator received a call Monday night at 8:44 p.m. requesting a rescue unit at the East Complex fields because of an accident.

The caller identified the East Complex field and gave Conrad and Akers halls as clarifying landmarks, Winger said.

He refused to release the 911 tape recording of this call.

Winger said shortly before this call, 911 operators monitoring DPS and East Lansing frequencies had heard an accident report at the East Complex fields. A 911 operator then contacted Lansing Fire Central dispatch to make sure a rescue unit had been dispatched, Winger said.

The East Lansing police log shows that when the 911 report of the accident was received, it directed rescue units to "E. Wilson, diamond #1" — more than a mile from the actual accident site.

Winger said he has not had a chance to talk to fire central dispatch or review its tapes to find out where the directions were confused.

Lansing Fire Central Chief Dispatcher Elmer Weisenberger could not be reached for comment.

"There's a big investigation going on here," said Roger LaLonde, a fire central dispatcher. "Everybody has been told to be closed-mouthed about it."

DPS Maj. Adam J. Zutaut met with Winger Wednesday to discuss the incident and said he was allowed to listen to the 911 tapes of the incident. He said a review of the fire central tapes should reveal where the confusion of the accident location took place.

Three observation wells drilled to survey chemical disposal site

By DEBBIE CREEMERS
State News Staff Writer

Three observation wells were installed at the Jolly-Hagadorn roads chemical disposal site Wednesday in the first phase of a hydrogeological survey of the area, said a representative of a testing firm contracted by MSU.

James Mickam, a project geologist with Keck Consulting Service Inc., said the wells will be sampled for water quality "within the next couple of days."

Mickam said Keck will run an engineering survey today to determine the direction of water — and chemicals suspended in the water — seeping into the soil.

"After we get the samples, MSU will run the analysis," Mickam said.

Mickam said Grahame Larson, MSU associate professor of geology, will head the water quality tests on samples obtained.

Larson could not be reached for comment.

The drilling of observation wells is the latest in a series of steps the University has taken to comply with 10 Department of Natural Resources directives received by MSU President Edgar L. Harden three weeks ago.

A 16-page list of chemicals and other waste materials dumped into MSU waste disposal sites has been given to the DNR. University sources said Wednesday.

The list includes many compounds of unknown origin, which Keesler, assistant vice president of administration, said was understandable.

"The main reason the holding tank was finally conceived of as a way to dispose of waste is because the commercial disposal firm we'd contracted refused to haul away unknown chemicals," he explained.

Documenting waste materials, volumes and dates for each site where waste was dumped is a major DNR request, Keesler said.

Keesler said MSU has also complied with DNR directives to:

- cease dumping of chemical and radioactive waste materials;
- store all future wastes in a manner approved by the DNR;
- sample existing site wells near the disposal sites for appropriate parameters;

City Council adopts $13.4 million budget

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing City Council adopted a $13.4 million 1979-80 operating budget with one minor amendment Tuesday night.

The new spending plan, up $515,000 over this year's operating budget, was adopted unanimously after an amendment transferred $7,730 from a 1981 Coolidge Road widening project to the contingency fund.

The budget included a proposal to charge commercial properties a service fee for garbage pick-up. Council adopted the budget projecting $150,000 in revenues from the commercial pick-up fees, but did not adopt the ordinance which legally allows for the collection.

Commercial garbage collection fees are expected to be assessed to fraternities, sororities, co-ops, apartments, restaurants and other commercial properties.

Council could not adopt the ordinance at Tuesday's meeting because it is required to have two public readings of all ordinances before they are adopted, Councilmember John Czarniecki said Wednesday.

"Technically we have not adopted the ordinance," Czarniecki said, "but we are counting on the money."

Under the City Charter, the spending plan must be balanced and adopted by May 15 because it is illegal to adopt an unbalanced budget, Czarniecki said.

He said he was confident that the ordinance would be adopted at council's June 5 meeting, at which time the ordinance will appear on the agenda as a business item.

"People can still speak to it," he said, "but it will be adopted unless we have a windfall of $150,000."

Other council alternatives to the proposal include getting out of commercial pick-up completely or raising the tax base by .8 mills.

Dan Kelley, president of the Interfraternity Council, representing the PanHellenic Council and co-ops objections to the assessment fee at two council meetings.

But Kelley said City Manager Jerry Coffman and Group manager for Finance Gary Murphy were very helpful in explaining the process at later meetings with greets.

"Our major objection with the proposal is they did not take into account our capability of payment," Kelley said.

Coffman was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Greeks living units will have to pay an average of $300 per house over a nine-month period for the service, Kelley said.

The city is implementing the service (continued on page 14)

Florida House approves ERA

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida House voted Wednesday to ratify the federal Equal Rights Amendment in an unexpected move that set the stage for a showdown in the state Senate.

House members voted 59-49 for a proposal by state Rep. Elaine Gordon, D-Miami that would make Florida the 36th state to ratify the proposed constitutional amendment. The amendment, which would ban discrimination based on sex, must be ratified by 38 states to become part of the U.S. Constitution.

The Senate has been the traditional stumbling block for the ERA in Florida.

The House had not been scheduled to vote on the ERA, but the ratification proposal was added to an obscure Senate-passed bill just before the close of the session Wednesday. The Senate-approved bill would change the time limit for filing discrimination complaints with a state agency.

The ERA amendment and the Senate-approved discrimination bill face a routine final vote Thursday.

The package then goes to the Senate, where normal procedures call for a vote by the full Senate. But ERA opponents in the Senate say they hope to waylay the measure — sending it to the Senate Rules Committee.

Sen. Jack Gordon, sponsor of the ERA in the Senate, was asked about an apparent 20-20 deadlock in the Senate.

Asked if he had won additional support for the ERA, he said, smiling: "That's what we'll find out. I think we have a chance to get it passed."

The ERA must win the approval of 38 states.

Ward system would bolster student voice

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the third of a four-part series on three separate petition drives that could affect East Lansing and their relationship to MSU students.

Students will have a permanent voice in East Lansing if a petition drive which begins Monday is successfully placed on the November election ballot and approved by voters. The proposal calls for abolishing the existing five-member at-large council system and establishing five wards equally based on the city population, with four additional at-large seats.

City Council members would be elected from each ward with another four members elected from the entire five wards.

Planning Commissioner Lawrence Kestenbaum, who is also an MSU senior economics major, devised the proposal and is organizing the petition drive.

The proposal is designed to provide a "more equitable" representation system in city government, Kestenbaum said.

"It will virtually guarantee that three people on City Council will be representing students," he said.

Under Kestenbaum's plan, the city would be divided into five wards with about 10,000 people in each — two representing homeowners and three representing primarily students.

Kestenbaum's proposal does not include an established boundary proposal for the five wards.

If the ward system is successful, the existing City Council would be required to set up an apportionment commission that would draw up a set of wards based on an equally divided population, Kestenbaum said.

The proposal is, in part, being offered as a compromise to the move to de-annex the campus from city boundaries, Kestenbaum said.

A group called Citizens for Local Control has filed a petition asking for a public vote on whether to de-annex the part of the campus within city boundaries. Some political observers are calling de-annexation an effort to partially eliminate student influence in city affairs.

Kestenbaum said his proposal could lessen the growing antagonism between homeowners and students by providing residents with broader and more equitable representation in city government.

Under the City Charter, East Lansing is made up of a single ward. Kestenbaum's proposal would require an amendment to the charter.

All amendments to city charters in the state of Michigan must be reviewed by the governor and attorney general to determine their legality and constitutionality.

Legislature creates panel on N-plants

By United Press International

Lawmakers created a special committee to probe Michigan's atomic power industry Wednesday, while leaders of the state's anti-nuclear movement announced a series of demonstrations beginning next month in Monroe.

The state House gave final legislative approval to the nuclear investigation by accepting minor Senate amendments to a resolution creating a 10-member joint study committee.

The panel likely will be chaired by Rep. Mark Clodfelter, D-Flint, an outspoken critic of nuclear power.

It could begin work as early as next week and is expected to produce a report by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, leaders of a coalition of anti-nuclear groups outlined their plans (continued on page 11)

Major pro-Amin forces fall to government troops

LIRA, Uganda (AP) — Combined Tanzanian and Ugandan government forces have captured this northern district capital, one of the last major strongholds of forces loyal to deposed Ugandan President Idi Amin.

Troops said 65 pro-Amin troops were killed Tuesday in a surprise attack on the town, one of three district capitals in northern sectors still under the control of Amin troops. They said 15 pro-Amin soldiers were captured while three Tanzanian soldiers were killed and two were wounded.

About 1,000 combined government forces moved through dense swamps toward Lira after launching a heavy artillery barrage on the town, district capital of the Acholi tribal area, 125 miles north of Kampala, correspondents accompanying the troops said.

The Amin forces fled before the attack, looting most houses and stores, nearby villagers reported. The forces were steadily being pushed back towards Gulu and Arua. Amin's hometown in the West Nile district.

The whereabouts of Amin, whose dictatorial regime controlled the landlocked country for seven years, has not been confirmed since the forces of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere took Kampala, the capital, last month.

Senate vote for Zimbabwe pressures Carter

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Black and white leaders Wednesday hailed the U.S. Senate vote calling on President Carter to lift sanctions against Zimbabwe after a black-led government is installed. One black leader said the vote would pressure Carter to act.

Following the vote, the Zimbabwe situation must change permanently for the better," said a statement from the office of Zimbabwe's first elected black prime minister, Bishop Abel Muzorewa.

The vote, the statement said, would also force the externally based anti-government guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe "to adopt a more realistic attitude" toward negotiating with the new government.

If Carter lifts the U.S. embargo, it would amount to a de facto recognition of the incoming Zimbabwean regime, making the United States the first major power to do so. He had promised to decide by June 15.

Wombless woman bears five-pound baby girl

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — A woman whose womb was surgically removed eight months ago to prevent her having any further children gave birth here Wednesday to a healthy baby.

Doctors hailed the birth to Margaret Martin of Hillsborough, Auckland, as a one-in-a-million chance.

Martin had a hysterectomy at National Women's Hospital here in September after she and her husband, Greg, a gas station attendant, decided they did not want any more children.

Doctors said Martin must have become pregnant about two days before the operation. A fertilized egg was already on its way from the ovary to the uterus and was still in the Fallopian tube when the uterus was removed.

The egg fastened itself to the woman's bowel and other organs in her abdomen, doctors said.

The five-pound baby girl was removed by surgical operation. She was a month premature and was kept in an incubator overnight.

Harvard completes first curriculum overhaul

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard's first major overhaul of its undergraduate curriculum in 34 years — requiring graduates to prove they can write, do math and read a foreign language — was greeted enthusiastically Wednesday by the nation's top education official.

The core curriculum unveiled Tuesday also abolishes required general survey courses in favor of highly focused subjects that stress the process of thinking. Instead of taking such courses as "Survey of American History," next fall's Harvard freshmen will fulfill their history requirements by picking from

"The Christianization of the Roman World," "The Emancipation of the Jews" and "The Darwinian Revolution."

Harvard Associate Dean Phyllis Keller said the purpose of the highly focused courses is to show students how scientists and historians think, rather than giving them a smattering of knowledge about a general subject.

"The emphasis is more on approaches to knowledge than on facts and information," said Keller, who helped develop the new program with Henry Rosovsky, dean of arts and sciences.

House passes 100-million acre Alaska land bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed the conservationists-backed Alaska land bill on Wednesday, setting aside more than 100 million acres for wildlife refuges and wilderness.

House passage came on a 360-65 vote shortly after members had thrown out a rival measure backed by industry.

The bill now goes to the Senate. A similar measure, which would have set aside about one-third of Alaska for national parks, wilderness areas and refuges, died in the Senate last year.

House approval of the bill, sponsored by Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., marked a significant victory for President Carter and for a wide coalition of environmental groups. Carter had called the measure his top environmental priority.

The measure sets aside 110 million acres of Alaska land for national parks, preserves, wild river areas and wilderness. It would roughly double the size of the national park system.

Carter proposes bill to weed out water projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter proposed to a skeptical Congress Wednesday that states be required to pay 5 to 10 percent of the cost of future federal water projects.

The aim of the administration is to weed out uneconomical or overly controversial dams, waterways and other projects by requiring state legislatures to approve them, and requiring state taxpayers to foot part of the bill.

The proposal drew instant opposition from some key legislators on grounds that it would hurt poor states and delay construction of water projects.

Rep. Ray Roberts, D-Texas, said he would try to cut out key features of the plan when it reaches the public works subcommittee he heads.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus said the plan wouldn't cut down on the amount of money the federal government spends for water projects, and he denied it would delay construction.

He said construction could be speeded by heading off environmental lawsuits through debate at the state and local level.

Soviets exploit U.S.-Saudi rift

An AP News Special

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union will make every effort to exploit the rift in delicate relations between Saudi Arabia and the United States, Western analysts here say.

According to diplomatic sources, the Soviets — who have no diplomatic relations with Saudi Arabia — have been in contact with the Saudis recently through third parties, said to be Morocco and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Direct contacts reportedly have been made by the two nations in European capitals, but the exact nature of these contacts is not known.

Middle East rumors that Soviet-Saudi relations might be resumed seemed more substantial recently following strong Saudi opposition to the Egyptian-Israeli peace pact and U.S. intelligence reports on a supposed split inside the Arabian kingdom's ruling family.

Saudi Arabian Crown Prince Fahd gave an upbeat comment on the Soviet Union in an interview this week with the Paris newspaper Le Monde.

"We are aware of the important role played by the Soviet Union in international politics and we appreciate that this role sustains the just demands of the Arabs," Fahd said.

"I don't think that it is necessarily correct to interpret the absence of the diplomatic relations between two countries as a sign of hostility," Fahd said. "Regarding the re-establishment of diplomatic relations, that is a question which will be settled in view of subsequent events."

Fahd, half brother of the ailing King Khaled, has maintained a significant power base in the monarchy and has run the kingdom's day-to-day affairs. But he is one of about 40 princes with varying degrees of power who must consult with one another on decisions affecting the nation of 7 million.

Fahd canceled a meeting with President Carter earlier this year and has not rescheduled it. That was widely viewed as an indication of Saudi displeasure with the U.S. peace initiative in the Mideast.

Moscow diplomats see little chance of full-scale Saudi-Soviet ties at least until 1981. But lesser links could be initiated.

There have been rumors here that the Soviet Union plans to open a bank branch in Saudi Arabia. And the small number of Soviet Moslems allowed on the pilgrimage to Mecca every year will be bolstered.

The Saudis' traditional close relationship with the United States is threefold: as America's chief oil supplier in the Mideast, as a major arms buyer from Washington, and as a moderating force at price-setting meetings of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which wins it U.S. gratitude.

This has always prevented any Soviet influence from taking hold, especially since the conservative kingdom is vigorously anti-communist and resentful of the repression of Soviet Islamics.

Support urged for guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government urged a federal judge Wednesday to reject the first direct challenge to President Carter's wage-price guidelines, saying the administration needs powerful tools to fight inflation.

But an unusual coalition of labor leaders and Republican lawmakers argued that Carter is wielding a club in violation of the law to enforce his anti-inflation effort.

The two sides squared off at a hearing before U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, who must decide whether the president has overstepped his authority in threatening to deny large federal contracts to companies found in violation of his guidelines.

A ruling in favor of the coalition — the AFL-CIO, nine member unions and 24 GOP congressmen — would not overturn the anti-inflation program. But it would strip the administration of a principal weapon of enforcement.

Parker, acknowledging the "importance and urgency" of the suit, promised a swift ruling on what government attorneys argue is a question of whether Carter is acting unconstitutionally.

AFL-CIO attorney Laurence Gold argued that Carter's threat to deny contracts worth $5 million or more to companies that exceed his guidelines turns his so-called "voluntary" program into mandatory controls, which can only be invoked by an act of Congress.

But the government countered that the program is purely voluntary despite the possibility that a company could lose a federal contract.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Barbara Babcock said that under a mandatory program, the government tells a company "I'll hit you with a stick" if it doesn't comply, but under Carter's program, the government is saying, "I may not give you a carrot."

"Even a rabbit knows the difference," she said.

The judge responded by asking whether the only difference is, "I'll hit you with a steel rod or I'll hit you with a two-by-four."

The government estimates between $40 billion and $56 billion a year in federal contracts are at stake under the wage-price guidelines.

The wage standard calls for a 7 percent annual ceiling on wage and fringe benefit hikes, although it has been stretched to accommodate larger settlements, such as the estimated 9 to 10 percent annual increases the Teamsters union claims it won last month.

The price standard is less specific, but generally seeks to slow the rate of inflation, currently running well above 10 percent a year. Under the price guideline, companies generally are required to hold their price increases to 0.5 percent below their average increases during the previous two years.

Medical decision bill killed by House tie

By KIM CRAWFORD
State News Staff Writer

Legislation which would allow adults to appoint agents to make medical decisions for them should they become unable to make judgments for themselves died in a House committee Wednesday.

The bill, called the Medical Treatment Decision Act, failed to gain approval of the House Public Health Committee when the vote to report the bill to the House ended in a 5-5 tie.

Rep. David Hollister, sponsor of the bill, said he was "devastated" by the defeat of the legislation.

"This was four years of work," he said. Right-to-life organizations, which called the bill "right-to-die" and "euthanasia" legislation, opposed the measure.

Hollister said the bill would affirm the right of competent adults to accept or refuse medical treatment when they are unconscious or otherwise unable to make a decision by authorizing another to do so.

Michigan has no law governing medical decision-making when a patient is incapable. These cases are decided on an ad hoc basis by physicians and family members. Hollister said the state should adopt a policy sanctioned in law.

Hollister also said the legislation would protect the rights of a patient in the decision-making process by appointing an agent who would see that the patient's wishes were honored.

"I'm beginning to wonder whether the Legislature can deal with a controversial issue," Hollister said. "Do we have to wait for a Karen Ann Quinlan case here in Michigan before we address this?"

Quinlan went into a coma in April 1975 from a mixture of tranquilizers and alcohol. A long legal debate broke out over whether her parents could have her taken off life support systems so she could "die with dignity."

Hollister said that the bill was not "right-to-die" legislation but allowed individuals "freedom of choice."

A similar bill proposed last year by Hollister also died when the Legislature refused to take the matter up.

Hollister said the lack of a clear policy on medical treatment decision issues in Michigan is "unsatisfactory" and that it will be left up to the courts to decide these kinds of matters.

Both the Michigan Catholic Conference and Michigan Citizens for Life opposed the legislation.

The measure could have passed the House committee had Rep. Bela Kennedy, a Republican from Bangor, been present to break the tie.

Hollister appealed to committee member Rep. Claude Trim, a Davisburg Democrat, to vote in favor of sending the legislation to the House floor. Hollister last year voted in favor of sending a laetrile-legalizing bill, sponsored by Trim, to the House. Hollister said he was not in favor of the bill, but that it allowed the individual the freedom to decide whether to use the unproved and controversial cancer drug.

Trim defended his "no" vote saying that Hollister's medical treatment decision bill "was not well written" and that he had received equal numbers of responses from constituents for and against the bill.

The medical treatment bill was the work of a task force including physicians, lawyers, clergy, senior citizens, housewives, students and hospital administrators.

ASMSU Student Board calls for Wright to resign

By KYOWEN
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Student Board unanimously called for the resignation of Kathy Wright, College of Education representative, Tuesday night.

Shortly after the board passed the bill to have the board chairperson ask for the resignation, Wright arrived at the meeting — the first she has attended this term.

Wright told the board she has been commuting from Battle Creek two nights a week and has not been able to attend meetings because of "time conflicts."

"I'm trying to remedy the problem," she said. "It's not that I haven't been interested." "I plan to do some soul-searching this week and I'll be here next Thursday (at the meeting)," she said.

Wright said she had originally planned to have classes on Monday and Wednesday nights and stay overnight to attend the board meetings, but her Wednesday class was moved to Thursday.

Intercampus, a student organization involved in student government, along with Henry Sosa, College of Arts and Letters representative, began circulating petitions to recall Wright Tuesday.

The only way to remove a board representative is to obtain a petition with signatures of 10 percent of the students in the college and then a special recall election will be held. Bob Carr, College of Business representative, commended Sosa for his efforts and said, "I'm sorry we can't do anything more stringent."

Fletcher Spears, University College representative, told Wright, "Maybe it would be better for you to relinquish your appointment."

"Apparently I'm the only one interested," Wright said. She ran unopposed in the spring term election.

A bill to call for a referendum in November for a constitutional amendment allowing the board to remove representatives for not attending meetings was also approved.

In other action, the board passed a resolution to oppose the sale of nonreturnable cans on campus.

Spears, who introduced the bill, said the bill was aimed at stopping the sale of Hi-C, a Coca-Cola product, on campus. Since Hi-C is a non-carbonated beverage, no deposit is collected on the can and it is not returnable.

CATA cuts Saturday service by half on two low-usage routes

By JAMES KATES
State News Staff Writer

Saturday service on the Haslett and Okemos routes will be cut in half effective July 2, the CATA Board of Directors decided Friday.

Under the resolution adopted by the board, Capital Area Transportation Authority buses on routes 22 and 23 will run once an hour instead of every half-hour.

The cutback in service was prompted by a low usage of the routes on Saturday, said Richard Leonard, CATA planning and grants director.

The two routes average only 3.7 passengers per trip, Leonard said.

"It was felt that the ridership didn't justify continuation of these runs," he said.

One bus will now alternate between the routes, Leonard said. Estimated savings will be about $5,230 per year.

In other action, CATA Executive Director Clare Loudenslager told the board the organization would not be eligible for an increase in capital improvement funds from the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Under the 1978 Surface Transportation Assistance Act, funds for capital improvement are distributed on the basis of population and population density, Loudenslager said.

"Lansing got stuck with the smallest amount of money because the dollars are allocated by population," he said. "It's Washington telling everyone what to do again."

Because funds for capital improvement for the coming year will be the same as they are now — about $500,000 — CATA will improve existing buses rather than buying new ones, Loudenslager said.

Leonard said funds from the U.S. Urban Mass Transit Administration and the state will allow the purchase of 27 accessible buses, but the buses will not be delivered for about a year.

"For right now we've got to put all our eggs in the renovation basket," he said.

The board also heard from Al Eby, a representative from UAW Local 602 who asked CATA to provide more routes to lessen the time required to get to work for Oldsmobile workers who need to transfer buses downtown.

"People taking routes from the south end of town sometimes take two hours to get to work," Eby said.

Board member Duane Allen told Eby he would like to see "buses running every 15 minutes on the major routes," but said that demands from pressure groups — including handicappers — had created "diversions" which slowed CATA's growth.

"We've all got to work together if we want more buses," Allen said.

In other action, the board:

- approved a resolution of intent to apply for state financial assistance for fiscal year 1980-81 and appointed Loudenslager as liaison to the state; and

- approved a resolution to request an additional $54,000 in state grants to fund cost increases incurred in purchasing new buses.

PART OF GAY PRIDE WEEK

Blue Jeans Day set for Friday

By CARRIE A. THORN
State News Staff Writer

Gay Blue Jeans Day, instituted as part of Gay Pride Week at MSU, is set for Friday.

The controversial event, sponsored by Lesbian/Gay Council, is expected to draw between 200 and 500 "uncloseted" gays and many gay sympathizers wearing blue jeans pants or shorts, a council member said.

The purpose of designating Friday as Gay Blue Jeans Day is to heighten general awareness about the existence of homosexuality and to give "straight" people who refuse to wear jeans a chance to examine why they feel this way, he explained.

Most gay people will not participate in it, the council member said, because of social and academic pressures.

"What we really want to do is make straight people see what we go through," he said.

"If indeed they have come to grips with their own sexuality, what makes them afraid of somebody thinking they are gay?" he asked.

It is societal pressure, which can be recognized as the same type of oppression that gays are forced to deal with every day of their lives."

Gay Blue Jeans Day was held for the first time in October 1977. At that time, it was organized and instituted as a nationwide effort by the National Gay Task Force.

The task force chose not to sponsor the event again this year because of a lack of participation in the first one, the council members said, so Lesbian/Gay Council made it part of their Gay Pride Week.

It is impossible to estimate the number of gay people at MSU, he said.

"There are just too many uncertainties in determining the number of gays here," he said. "A lot of people cannot come out of the closet and many people aren't sure of it themselves."

Also, there are differing degrees of gayness, just like there are differing degrees of straightness," the council member said.

Applications considered by Programming Board

All seven minority councils applied to Programming Board and will be considered for membership, Board Chairperson John Haytall said Wednesday.

Last term the councils were transferred from Student Board to Programming Board, contingent upon their acceptance to Programming Board.

Wednesday was the deadline for the councils to apply to Programming Board. The deadline was set because the board is working on its budget for next year and needs the requests from councils which will join the board.

Haytall said the board will give the applications to board members at tonight's meeting but does not know if it will yet take action on acceptance of the councils.

Baker seeks re-election to Lansing City Council

Incumbent Lansing Councilmember Richard Baker announced his decision to seek re-election at a press conference Monday morning.

Councilmember-at-Large Baker is the first candidate to announce intentions to seek one of the four open council seats in the Aug. 7 primary.

Baker said he wants to see the promises he made in 1975, when he was first elected to the city council, realized.

The promises he made in 1975 were long term goals for revitalizing the city, Baker said. The goals are being realized now but will continue throughout the decade.

He said he will continue to work to have "public meetings in public" and more openness in city government.

Several other candidates have acquired petitions for the council openings which include two councilmember at large berths and two ward council positions.

Those who have received petitions for the openings have until the June 19 deadline to file for spots on the ballot.

The election is Nov. 6 for each of the four year terms.

Boston prof speaks on meaning of U.S. strategies in Mideast

The United States has adopted a modified neo-colonial foreign policy since imperial interests in the Middle East were undermined by the Iranian revolution, said a professor of history at Simmons College in Boston.

Since the overthrow of the Shah of Iran, Egypt has become a supplicant, client state of the United States, said Mark Solomon at a speech Tuesday sponsored by the Organization of Arab students.

The unfolding scenario in the Middle East reflects the U.S. foreign policy of protecting strategic military and economic interests within the "framework of a contracting imperial order," Solomon, a specialist in history, told a crowd of 70 people, mostly Arab students.

The rapidly accelerating revolutionary situation in developing countries which is constantly bringing about a realignment of forces has created a serious dilemma for the United States' empire, Solomon said.

In 1974, 54 percent of U.S. foreign investments were in the Middle East and garnered a 366 percent rate of profit, he said.

"Imperial interests in the Middle East were undermined by the Iranian revolution," Solomon said, adding it became imperative for the United States to have a "client" state in the region "under control."

Egypt is this client state and this relationship was formalized at Camp David, where the Middle East Peace Treaty was signed, he said.

This "bi-lateral agreement" between Egypt and Israel precludes the possibility of a Palestinian state as "the United States will not do anything to make Prime Minister Menachem Begin unhappy," Solomon said.

"What kind of peace is Camp David when (President Anwar-el) Sadat is calling for $20 billion in military equipment and $15 billion in U.S. corporate investment," Solomon said.

The Egyptian situation — a country with a weak infrastructure, infiltrated with U.S. investments and saturated with U.S. arms — sounds like the Iranian situation but Sadat, a "neo-Shah," doesn't even have oil, Solomon said. Egypt is more fragile than Iran, he added.

However, this situation does not stop the United States from rearranging its military alliances, Solomon said adding Egypt is now "virtually isolated" from the rest of the Arab world.

"The frenzy of Camp David reflects the political and economic dilemmas the United States must face," Solomon said.

Solomon explained the "movement toward indigenous control of valuable natural resources" and the "accelerating movements of national liberation in developing countries that possess raw materials" have caused the U.S. "sphere of strategic resources to contract."

Solomon explained the United States has

Man leaps onto x-way

A 20-year-old local man jumped from the Grand Avenue bridge onto westbound I-496 traffic Wednesday afternoon and was pronounced dead at the scene.

A witness told Lansing Police the man jumped from the bridge and was struck by two vehicles traveling on the expressway. Police believe it was a suicide.

The name of the man will be withheld until relatives are notified, police said.

Police are investigating.

TROUBLE SHOOTER

If you have a problem you can't solve, or a question you can't answer, write Trouble Shooter, 343 Student Services Bldg., MSU, East Lansing, 48824, or call 355-8252, between 10:00 a.m. and 1 p.m. Ask for Trouble Shooter, the State News service which guns down problems, sticks up for your rights and shoots for answers.

My fiancé and I are getting married June 3 in the horticulture gardens behind Student Services Building. The MSU Physical Plant has agreed to set up chairs for us, but we need to start an account with the University to pay for the service. It's been over a month and we still have no established account. We've been shuttled from the physical plant to Student Services and then to the Administration Building. Time is running out and I'm afraid that we'll be married long before they find chairs for the wedding.

Wedding bells will still ring June 3. Trouble Shooter called Assistant Controller Kenneth Schram, who will set up the account for you. Schram said he only needed to see a memo granting you permission to use the gardens. But the problem began to compound about who can authorize the use of the gardens. After contacting four persons, who were each believed to have authority, Trouble Shooter finally reached Doug Badgero, a greenhouse technician, who said he would grant permission and work out any other details. The only remaining problem you need to solve is scheduling good weather.

I paid my reservation for a single room ($38) in the Hyatt Regency Lexington, in Lexington, Ky. I was planning to be there on April 27, however, it became impossible for me to go. I canceled the reservations more than two days in advance to qualify for a full return of my reservation money as they specify in their policy. The woman at the cancellation desk assured me that my $38 check would be returned soon, but I still haven't received the money.

You should receive check within one week. Joaquin Rodgers, the accounting paymaster at the Hyatt Regency Lexington, said the check was dated May 4 and that you should have received it by now. He thinks the check was probably "lost in the mail," so he is mailing another one.

I was a hostess for a housewares demonstration for Andrian Industries on Jan. 18. For doing this, I received a coupon for a discount weekend in a Florida hotel. I chose the Daytona Beach deal and sent in a form with a $21 deposit to Sunward Holidays in Miami Beach. About two weeks later I received a letter saying that the whole area was booked during the time I wanted to take my trip. I replied that I would wait and use the coupon for some other time. They said that I would have to send them my original request form in order to get my money back. I sent it Feb. 25, and I still haven't heard a thing. Can you help me get my money back?

Trouble Shooter contacted Rosemarie Welstead, supervisor of Sunward Holidays, who said your check had somehow been "overlooked." She apologized for the delay and mailed your check for $21 Wednesday morning.

MSU should get out of 911 system to avoid confusion in emergencies

On two previous occasions, The State News has editorially questioned the effectiveness and advisability of the regional Ingham County emergency telephone system known as 911. On those occasions, we lamented a loss of local control in emergency situations and the dangers inherent in centralizing dispatching responsibilities.

But we no longer have to deal with ideas and theories that philosophize about what could go wrong. A concrete example of the basic flaw of 911 was apparent during Monday night's incident involving the death of Steven Morgenthaler on an IM field. And although it does not appear at this time that 911's confusion contributed to Morgenthaler's death, the tragic potential is clear.

A tape recording of the incident, provided by MSU's Department of Public Safety, demonstrated that the best people to deal with and direct operations are those with the best knowledge of the area — in this case DPS. It was, in fact, the Department of Public Safety who had to take the time — the precious time that 911 was supposed to save — to straighten out misinformation by the 911 dispatching center.

Those who have ever tried to find their way around this campus knows that the geography can be confusing. In an emergency, especially of the nature of Monday night's incident, a communication dispatcher must be aware of landmarks and layout of the campus to near perfection. According to DPS Maj. Adam J. Zutaut, DPS dispatchers are required to ride with officers on patrol to familiarize themselves completely with the campus. In some cases, Zutaut said, dispatchers who could not grasp the complexities of the campus geography have been dismissed. Unfortunately, DPS cannot require the same from operators at 911 dispatch headquarters.

It is understandable, yet inexcusable, that dispatchers in downtown Lansing do not know all the intricacies of the MSU campus — not to mention the whole of Ingham County. When a 911 operator tried to confirm the accident location with DPS, the operator became so confused with the directions she had been given, that in order to straighten out the situation, she had the caller transfer directly to DPS.

One of the major arguments supporting the 911 system is that it eliminates the need for duplicate handling of emergency calls. Luckily, as it turned out, that caller was reporting the same accident that DPS was already responding to, but we shudder to think of the time lost in transferring the call had that not been the case.

The city of East Lansing's decision not to become involved in the 911 system has never looked better than it did Monday night. We commend East Lansing officials in an earlier editorial and continue that support. As it stands now, on-campus callers using the University's 1-2-3 emergency number are automatically switched to the 911 center in Lansing. We urge the MSU administration to begin immediate efforts to discontinue the 911 relationship and once again have 1-2-3 emergency calls sent directly to DPS.

In the meantime, we urge students to commit to memory the DPS business number 5-2221, and use that should emergencies arise. Or at the very least, if one makes an emergency call to 911 immediately follow up that call with a confirming call to DPS.

There is no doubt the possibility for human error exists in any system, but in emergency situations we firmly believe the path of least resistance is the best path to follow.

Recognize harassment — expose it

Sexual harassment of women is an act whose damage has so far been virtually ignored in the state's lawbooks. Penalties for sexual harassment are currently non-existent, and victims fearful of coming forward to report abuses makes the problem appear unimportant from a statistical view.

But there is no denying that most — if not all — women on the MSU campus have been sexually harassed at some time. The severity of the harassment varies, but acceptance of even the mildest forms of harassment — be it whistling or references to one's physical appearance — has managed to legitimize the most common forms of sexual harassment and has led to an uncaring attitude regarding the assaults women face every day.

A lack of legal recourse only compounds the problem. Working women, whose numbers are on the rise, have a difficult time fighting back against sexual harassment without the aid of the courts. Yet sexual harassment by employers or co-workers poses a constant threat to a woman's security as well as her job. Verbal assault is already an illegal act, but the law is inconclusive when defining the crime. Assault must be in the form of a threat to one's personal being. However, many other forms of assault are carried out on women — acts that the law should recognize as violations of one's right to be left alone.

Sexual harassment might carry some consequences in the future. A bill is pending in the Michigan house that would define sexual harassment and establish its illegality. At MSU, the Human Relations Department is offering legal counsel for sexual harassment victims, but has so far received only a minuscule number of cases. Women should take advantage of this University office and flood it with calls and letters spelling out offenses, both past and present. If more cases are reported, the public cannot help but become more aware of the prevalence of sexual harassment.

LETTERS

Think on Friday

Friday is Gay Jeans Day. This can be a positive occurrence if we let it. It provides a time for contemplation about probably the most significant aspect of our lives: sexuality.

Being gay is difficult in today's society. The gays need our support, not our condemnation. They are some of us! The more conscious we are of this, the easier it will be for them.

Philip Boyer
175 W. Holmes Hall

Taste is private

In response to all the letters concerning the benefits of either meat-eating or non meat-eating diets, it seems to boil down to "drawing the line" on priorities. Just how far does an individual go before being uncomfortable with eating what was once a living, thinking, and breathing animal? I believe it is a question of sensitivity. If people can morally justify eating an animal, more power to them. Perhaps they have the capability of repressing any connection between a thick, juicy steak and a living, breathing cow grazing in a field.

It gets very tiring trying to convince people what they should and shouldn't eat. Logically, if one doesn't eat meat because it was once a living animal, on the same grounds how can one eat vegetables? They too are living. If one follows the argument to the end, there is unfortunately nothing left to eat at all, unless we speak of inanimate objects. Obviously man cannot survive on these. So where do we "draw the line?"

Diet is a very individual thing. People are undoubtedly going to eat what appeals to them. The point is, the line is arbitrary, based on each person's sensitivities and tastes. One will eat what is morally and justifiably acceptable to that individual. Why try to convince anyone otherwise?

P.J. Schenck

Sorry 'bout that

I would like to apologize to anyone who was in the least bit offended by my flagrant letter about the outdoor concert behind Shaw Hall. I was deluged by responses from people, many of whom are connected with WMSN, DPS and the Shaw Hall Student Government. They pointed out where my argument was faulty: the conclusion was based on premises not completely researched. My letter also may have left people with an uncomfortable feeling, partly because the concluding one-third was deleted, but probably because of my ludicrous choice of words. In any event, if any feelings were hurt, please accept my sincerest apology.

Tuschak is great

Beth Tuschak's column on Chicago baseball was one of the most refreshing pieces to appear in the sports section of The State News this year: how unusual for someone to write about the sport they are covering rather than themselves. Seriously, she is obviously a writer of great potential and I hope to see more of her stuff during the coming months.

Faded jeans day

As a self-proclaimed spokesman for thousands of other good of fashioned heterosexuals like myself, I would like to designate this Friday as Happy Heterosexual Faded Blue Jeans Day. In support of this joyous occasion it will be recognized that heterosexuals and their sympathizers will be wearing FADED blue jeans or shorts on this special day of celebration.

Rights vs. might

John Davenport's letter on aggressive pedestrianism must have been quite a treat for all of you people into logical fallacies. He made a rather hasty generalization to the effect that all drivers are cowards. He then goes on to say that that's why people drive, because they are afraid. Not only does his argument have no apparent basis, it also makes no sense! (At least without some explanation of what he means.)

He has thoughtfully turned an accident into a murder, a label which the driver of the van must appreciate immensely. I'm sure that the driver didn't hop into his van with the intention of running down a pedestrian.

East Lansing's problem rides first with the attitudes of the pedestrians. Have you ever tried to drive on campus between classes? It's totally frustrating to try to make a turn in busy traffic and be stopped in the middle of the road while some inconsiderate pedestrian walks in front of you. It seems that whenever the traffic clears you still can't go because of the people in the way. Usually, by waiting a few seconds before walking, the traffic would have time to clear and no problems would be caused.

Sure, pedestrians have, by law, the right of way in every situation. When I'm walking so do I. However, it's a right that should not be exercised. I walk on the premise that cars are bigger than I am and that they can't always stop in time. I've had too many close calls and value my life too much to walk down the sidewalks with a powerful attitude of having the right of way. As you lie in your hospital bed or even in your grave, the knowledge that you had the right of way will be of little comfort.

On the other hand, motorists must accept the fact that this pedestrian attitude is present and remain patient. Aggressive drivers and aggressive pedestrians are not the answer. Both sides must try to look at the situation from the other's point of view. Maybe every non-driving student should be forced to drive around campus between classes. I'm afraid Davenport's suggestion that we walk in front of cars may result in another "Death Race 2000" (a movie where people were run down for points in a race). While he may wish to take risks to prove his point, it is not necessary that he instill the same risks in others.

VIEWPOINT: AFRICA

Who is to blame for false images?

By A.D. AYITE

"Recently I previewed a film on Africa in our media library and I was appalled. Had I not known better, the film would have led me to believe that in the Union of South Africa, blacks and whites work together mining gold and diamonds and prospering from each other's labors..."

These are the words of James A. Harrison, director of general education at the Shiawassee County Intermediate School District, one of the panelists at last week's Images of Africa Conference at MSU.

This is a deplorable example of false images portrayed now and again by Western media on the Third World in general and on Africa in particular. As pointed out at the conference, these images are nothing but a tissue of lies, over-generalizations, deliberate suppressions of fact and displays of utter ignorance.

Who is to blame? The first criminals, if you may excuse the term, are mass media owners and communicators — including journalists and filmmakers. Their utmost preoccupation is money-making, whatever the cost. The sensational overrides the search for truth and what people really need to know about a particular subject or country.

Thus, when questioned about their people's ignorance of the outside world, Western communicators often pretend their compatriots are only interested in what directly concerns them. They cannot, however, explain in what way the misdeeds of boxing Idi Amin are linked to the fate of Europeans and Americans. Surprisingly, they also appear to ignore the fact that the primary duties of the journalist are to inform and educate. If, then, most Americans are oblivious to what is taking place outside the frontiers of their continent, I feel it is greatly due to how American communicators play their role as educators and agents of information. It is also due to their masters' morbid greed for money. They are to blame for shutting up the American cholesteral society in a hamburger castle with peepholes looking no farther than the baseball fields. In their own interests, they make the American people feel that beyond the United States and perhaps Europe, there is nothing worth serious attention other than simple entertainment.

Producers of audiovisual materials are particularly concerned. For, as Harrison said, "our films reveal myths, misconceptions and downright lies and deceptions. They present only the white man's version of the history of Africa. This is not unlike the white man's history of America without the Indians' story anywhere in evidence."

However, it would be unfair to put all the blame on Western communicators. African journalists share equal responsibilities in the erroneous presentations of images of their continent. Many of them have stayed in Western countries long enough to be assimilated and to lose contact with their own countries' realities. Such communicators are no better than their European counterparts. It is high time for everyone to rise to new levels of awareness and rectify the wrongs already done. The resolutions of the images of Africa conference are there to serve as guidelines for filmmakers and other communicators sincerely committed to achieving something positive in the interest of humankind.

VIEWPOINT: THE DRAFT

The onus is on all of us

By RICHARD G. OWENS

A doctor might tell a patient that a good way of preventing a cold is to stay away from drafts. Preventive medicine may include this within its boundaries. There are, of course, many kinds of drafts: updrafts, downdrafts, and the military draft. The latter is undoubtedly the most potentially fatal. The others might make you seriously ill, but usually won't kill you. The "you" here should be taken both personally and collectively. The draft affects each and every one of us, and it will take all of us to see that we are not led down another camouflage and booby-trapped garden path.

The sleeping giant of the late '60s has been getting too much sleep lately and needs to be awakened. The protesters, radicals, activists, liberals, or what have you, are all still out there and should be reorganizing. The people who had enough of the conflict in Vietnam are still everywhere, but we are older and hopefully wiser. We inherited the draft laws from an earlier generation, and had to do some serious kicking and screaming to see the time when the laws that forced people to carry guns to another country were put where they belonged. It seems that in the very near future we may be in a position to pass the same form of disease onto our children.

Wake up! Why the hell would we want to do something like that to our children? The government is attempting to reinstitute the issuance of the tiny cards that will possibly allow my child to receive a personal invitation to a senseless war in some far-off land for no particular reason. I do not believe that less than .0000018 percent of the population of this country should be allowed to enact a law which will make it possible for that to happen. We (everyone who protested the Vietnam War) owe it, not just to ourselves, but most especially to our children, to never allow the draft to exist again. If the military were actually a good thing they wouldn't have to force people to join, now would they? Get your old draft card out and take a good look at it and ask yourself if you really want a whole new generation to be carrying one just like it. If you don't carry it anymore, find it and put it in a visible spot in your wallet just to remind yourself. I carry mine and every time I open my wallet it jumps up and smacks me in the face and I get angry.

Any politician who votes in favor of the draft should be signing his or her own political suicide note. We have to flood congressional and senatorial offices with letters and telegrams letting them know, in no uncertain terms, that we will not allow this to happen again. "Power to the People" is sleeping and needs a kick in the slats. The sleeping giant must rise up and put a stop to anything that will endanger the children. Write the congressmen, the senators, the president, the politicians in general and let them know we are all still here, and that we plan to keep a very watchful eye on what they do. We did it before, and, by thunder, we can do it again.

DOONESBURY

TO BENEFIT CAMPUS ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS

Service facilities meeting tonight

Costs and plans for the proposed human service facilities will be subject to public comment 7:30 tonight at the Spartan Village School gym, 1460 Middlevale Road.

The facilities, to be built at the Spartan Village School and the Red Cedar School, would cost $1,147,000 for initial construction, according to the feasibility study report.

East Lansing has allocated $500,000 for construction in its 1979-82 Community Development Block Grant program.

The human service facilities feasibility study group, which was organized last fall, has said in its report that the centers are feasible based on the cooperation of the University, East Lansing Public Schools and the city.

The group has also indicated that the involvement of Ingham County through either funding or the provision of health care services would benefit the facilities.

Annual operation and maintenance costs of the facilities would near $100,000 for personnel, insurance and utilities, according to the feasibility report.

The report, which was developed with the assistance of consultant Donald J. Leu, places child care as the primary service to be provided for the area at both facilities.

Other services to be available at the Spartan Village School — which is the main facility of the project — include health care, library facilities and meeting rooms.

Services to be available at the Red Cedar School, the satellite facility, include a community meeting room and an expanded play area.

Comments made at the public hearing tonight will be considered in the planning process of the facilities, city planner Marcia Horan said.

Reports of the feasibility study have been sent to University officials, East Lansing City Council, Ingham County representatives and the East Lansing Board of Education, Horan said.

Before construction can begin, funding commitments must be made from the participants, she said.

Copies of the report are available at the Department of Planning, Housing and Community Development in City Hall, 410 Abbott Road; the East Lansing Public Library, 950 Abbott Road; the Red Cedar School, on Sever Drive; the Spartan Village School, 1460 Middlevale Road; the MSU Urban Development Reading Room, 28 Owen Hall; and the University Apartment Office, 1205 S. Harrison Road.

County, circuit employees await ratification of salary increases

By MARCIA BRADFORD
State News Staff Writer

Salary increases for county and circuit employees will be implemented by the end of the month if approved by the Ingham County Board of Commissioners.

The Finance Committee Wednesday voted to grant raises negotiated in a contract which has been in effect since January, but failed to approve the contract in its entirety.

If the resolution is approved, the employees will receive raises they have waited for since January. They will also be granted the fringe benefits allowed in the contracts.

Commissioner Mark Grebner said the action will remove the 22 employees from the center of a dispute between the circuit court judge and the county clerk.

The dispute centers around Michigan Supreme Court decisions which indicate that the courts may now have sole authority over persons working for both the courts and the county clerk.

A single contract for all employees was ratified in March but the Board of Commissioners failed to approve it because it feared loss of economic control over the employees working for the county.

Commissioner Patrick A. Ryan said the board did not have a chance to review the contract before it was put to a vote at the last board meeting.

The Lansing Democrat said he has now reviewed the contract and has several questions about the wording in the agreement.

Ryan also said he was never given an adequate reason for the change in the supervision of the employees. County employees previously had a separate contract and were the responsibility of county clerk Lingg Brewer.

Circuit Judge Jack W. Warren said the primary reason for the change concerned the integrity of the court files, and said he had explained this at least twice on television.

He said he has not commented publicly on the deficiencies in the court system because it would diminish the confidence of the citizens of the county.

Commissioner Grebner said Judge Warren had only attended one subcommittee meeting of the board's personnel committee although he had been asked to several meetings.

"The board has the right to review whatever issues it deems necessary and important," the East Lansing Democrat said. "We should resume contract negotiations with the board as a party to those negotiations."

The committee also discussed the possibility of shutting down the county newspaper recycling program. Employees are presently funded through the Comprehensive Employment Training Act, which will be phased out by October.

Richard Sode, director of the Public Works Board, said he currently has no one to handle the bookkeeping responsibilities which are necessary for the program.

Committee members decided to designate a CETA employee from the county controllers office to take over the bookwork temporarily.

Pepsi sued for damages

CHEBOYGAN (UPI) — The mother of a 9-year-old girl testified Wednesday she stood by helplessly as a 16-ounce bottle of Pepsi-Cola exploded in her daughter's hands, blinding her in one eye.

Betty Lou Leslie testified as the $50,000 damage suit against Pepsi-Cola, a bottler, the bottle manufacturer and a local grocery store moved into its second day.

Tiffany Sakeriska, who was 4 years old at the time of the accident at her parents' Pellston home, underwent eight major operations without success, Leslie testified.

Leslie, the first witness called by noted attorney Marvin Belli of San Francisco in the Cheboygan County Circuit Court trial, described how she watched as the bottle blew up as young Tiffany held it.

Anti-towing group takes new tack

By CATHERINE RAFTREY
State News Staff Writer

MSU's Anti-Towing Coalition will take on a new perspective next fall, said coalition organizer Paul Schwartz, a freshman James Madison College major.

At a meeting Tuesday, attended by only eight coalition members, Schwartz outlined new goals for the upcoming year.

He said the organization will gear itself toward taking action on civil rights issues, including protesting legislation that might reinstate the draft.

The coalition would also work toward lowering the present drinking age and concern itself with East Lansing annexation and de-annexation elections as well as campus-related civil liberties issues, he said.

The freshman Case Hall resident organized students earlier this spring to combat what they believed were unnecessary towing policies enforced by the University. Since its origin, the coalition has been strongly supported by Ingham County Commissioner Mark Grebner.

Lansing Attorney Richard Kinkade also joined forces with the organization by giving free legal advice to concerned students. Both Grebner and Kinkade are former Case Hall residents.

Although the meeting was attended by only a handful of the over 300 registered members, Schwartz said, "It shows we're doing our job," adding on-campus towing had considerably subsided.

"I think activism is here to stay," Schwartz said.

He said what bothers him the most about the towing issue is the fact President Edgar L. Harden has remained completely silent on the subject.

"He's the only one who has real power to make permanent changes," Schwartz said.

The coalition organizer also talked about plans to establish better communication between the Department of Public Safety and MSU students. He said he has already started to discuss ways to improve relations with DPS Capt. Ferman Badgley.

Schwartz said he would like to see more involvement from campus minorities when the coalition re-organizes next fall. The coalition offers a unique opportunity for all students to work together and initiate changes, he said.

Seeing double

ST. LOUIS (AP) — At St. Luke's Hospital West here, three mothers gave birth to twins in four days recently.

Luke and Scott were born to Ruth and Gary Jacobs; Anastasia Marie and Catherine Renee were born to Connie and Jim Wright; and two girls, not named immediately, were born to Nanette and Ronald Moore.

Except for the Wrights, the twins came as a complete surprise to the parents.

PIRGIM to hold annual elections

Nominations are now being accepted for the Board of Directors of the MSU chapter of PIRGIM and will be accepted through Tuesday.

A workshop for all students interested in serving on the board is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the PIRGIM office.

Students may be nominated by other students or by themselves. Nominees must be MSU students during fall, winter and spring terms. Directors serve for one year on the board.

The election for the board will be May 30, with polls open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Polling places will be the International Center and the Student Services Building.

Only students who paid the $1 PIRGIM tax may vote in the election.

Carol Linteau, campus coordinator for PIRGIM, said students interested should expect to put in a minimum of five hours per week.

The group is looking for graduate students, since there have not been any on the board in the past few years, but undergraduates are also needed, Linteau said.

For more information, students can contact Linteau, Vivian Valdmans or Mike Ignatowski, election commissioners, at the PIRGIM office.

Weekend health fair at Lansing Mall set

Several area health service agencies will participate in a Community Health Fair from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Lansing Mall.

The fair will feature health displays by groups including the Easter Seal Society, the Michigan Heart Association and the American Cancer Society.

Groups at the fair will also offer free hypertension and vision testing, glaucoma checks and plaque tests.

Other displays will include an ambulance and an electrocardiogram machine.

The fair is free and open to the public.

Urban planner lectures on cities of future today

A University of Wisconsin professor will lecture on "The Future American City" at 3 p.m. today in the Kellogg Center Auditorium.

Harold M. Mayer, who has served on the planning commissions of Chicago and Philadelphia, will present the lecture sponsored by the MSU chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

Mayer is a University of Chicago Ph.D. and has taught at Kent State University as well as serving as the associate director of the Center for Great Lake Studies.

Practice law school entrance exam and test workshop held

People interested in law can take a practice law school admission test and attend a related workshop at 7 p.m. in B106 Wells Hall. The practice test will cost $1 for members of MSU Pre-Law Association and $2 for non-members. The test is sponsored by the MSU Pre-Law Association.

Questions for the test will be taken from past sample examinations and will be similar in style to the actual LSAT. The test is only expected to last about one and one-half hours.

Answers to the sample test and a discussion on test taking will follow the examination.

'Manhattan': romance vs. reality

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

Manhattan is a grand cross-breeding between Woody Allen's serious and comedic elements. It is also the culmination of Allen's two previous films, Annie Hall and Interiors. Like Interiors, there are so many themes and motifs running throughout that the serious viewer is tempted to analyze it scene by scene. But like Annie Hall, it is best to experience Manhattan as a whole, judging it solely by the gut reaction its entirety evokes.

Following the lead of Interiors, Manhattan seems to lack the type of warm romanticism and beautiful sentimentality that were Annie Hall's crowning graces. As such, it may stir mixed emotions in even the most dedicated fans of Allen's comedy. That isn't to say, however, that Manhattan is totally devoid of romance. In fact, the death of romance at the hands of contemporary society is one of the film's most important themes.

Isaac (Ike) Davis, the Allen character in Manhattan, is a hopelessly incurable romantic, and the film's powerful opening sequence is a romantic tour de force. The sequence displays cinematographer Gordon Willis' stunning black-and-white montage of Manhattan's most famous landmarks, accented by the New York Philharmonic ever, as always, Allen's characters achieve universality, each representing the various self-centered problems which constitute Neurosis and Anxiety, circa the 1970s.

Allen's screenplay (co-written with constant collaborator, Marshall Brickman) is a modern merry-go-round of interpersonal love/hate relationships. Twice-divorced Ike's most recent ex-wife, Jill (Meryl Streep), has left him to live with her lesbian lover, a woman Ike may or may not have once tried to run down with his car. Ike is not only disturbed by his son being raised by lesbians, but also by the fact that Jill is writing a trendy "confessional" book about their failed marriage, entitled Marriage, Divorce and Selfhood.

Ike's current relationship is with Tracy (Mariel Hemingway), a 17-year-old schoolgirl who adores him. But Ike, feeling guilty due to the social unacceptability of his fling, leaves this wonderful relationship to carry on a tortured liaison with Mary (Diane Keaton), a pre-schizoid pseudo-intellectual whose own "literary" career is comprised mainly of adapting movies into trashy paperback novels.

Prior to Ike, Mary had an affair with Ike's best friend, Yale (Michael Murphy), an extremely narcissistic English instructor who can't seem to symbol of innocence and a naive-yet-pure psyche. By comparing her definition of love ("We have laughs together. I care about you. Your concerns are my concerns. We have great sex.") to Mary's definition of self during her first break with Yale ("I'm beautiful, I'm young, I'm highly intelligent, I've got everything going for me except I'm all f--- up!"), Allen's message becomes crystal clear.

Allen's most important message, however, comes late in the film when Ike states an idea for a future story: "People are constantly creating these real unnecessary neurotic problems for themselves that keep them from dealing with more terrifying unsolvable problems about the universe." Manhattan illustrates this point better than anything else. Any Woody Allen fan knows that the artist views death as the most terrifying unsolvable problem, since Allen realizes that death permeates everything. Unlike his past achievements, however, the sense of death in Manhattan is only hinted at in subtle terms. This is especially graphic in a scene where Ike and Yale carry on a neurotic argument in a classroom surrounded by skeletons of prehistoric humans.

In a film that lampoons and reduces everything about our society from culture to education, Allen seems to be saying that human compassion is all we have left to rely on. Unfortunately, like the concept of love, there isn't much compassion portrayed in Manhattan. In the film's final line, Tracy tells reaching crescendo after crescendo on a rendition of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Over this breathtaking landscape, the viewer hears Ike's voice narrating the opening paragraph to The Castrating Zionist — a novel about his mother which, the film later reveals, he quit his television writing job to pursue.

The opening scene sets the film's tone, and Ike's lines encapsulate the character's romantic disposition, in addition to the direction the rest of the film will take. "He was too romantic about Manhattan, just as he was about everything else. He romanticized it all out of proportion. For him, New York still existed in black-and-white, surrounded by the music of George Gershwin." However, as Ike continues to verbally rewrite the paragraph, he reveals a startling dichotomy in his perception of the great city: "He viewed it (Manhattan) as a metaphor for the decay of contemporary culture." Allen later symbolizes this struggle between romance and reality in what is the film's only visual gag. As Ike cruises in a canoe through Central Park with his current lover (the epitome of romantic interludes!), he sticks his hand into the water, only to bring it up covered with goopy, black crud.

Manhattan is a continuous mental and emotional battle between Ike's romanticism and the dispassionate, wrenching effects of modern cosmopolitan society — both its people and its culture (or cultural junk food, as Allen terms it). Allen's cast of characters are all literary cosmopolitan types, and most of them could only be found in New York City. How-decide exactly what he wants out of life. Yale's wife (played by ballerina Anne Byrne, who also happens to be Mrs. Dustin Hoffman, if that really matters) knows what she wants, and she longs for Yale to get down to the "important" things in life, particularly producing children. Yale uses his pending biography of Eugene O'Neill (which he never writes) and spends their livelihood on a trendy foreign sports car to forswear her desires.

It comes as no surprise when the masochistic Mary and the undecided Yale decide to reunite near the film's conclusion, leaving the totally all-alone Ike with his romanticism practically wrecked from its core. But, despite the odds, the character still CARES. In what is perhaps the film's most poignant moment, Ike sits with a tape machine to record a list which answers his own question, "Why Is Life Worth Living?" The list includes Groucho Marx, Willie Mays, Mozart, and Cezanne, among others, but no matter where the viewer's own interests may lie, one can't help but totally understand.

Despite the numerous relationships that make up the film, Manhattan is not a love story. The characters spend a great deal of time talking about love and some even attempt to enact something that resembles love, but — with one exception — there is no real love in Manhattan. (The Gershwin score, including "Someone To Watch Over Me," "S Wonderful," and "He Loves She Loves," is often effectively used to sardonically comment on the film's action.) The sole exception is Tracy, the child-woman who is Allen's

Director Roman Polanski will return to United States

CANNES, France (UPI) — Director Roman Polanski said today he would return to the United States to face sentencing for statutory rape after his latest film opens in Paris Oct. 24. "I moved to France to complete my movie, Tess," Polanski said during a news conference at the 32nd International Cannes Film Festival. "Now that it is finished, I want to return to America to be at peace with myself and my conscience."

It was Polanski's first news conference in three years.

The Polish-born film director fled the United States a year ago after pleading guilty to statutory rape in California. The mother of a 13-year-old girl had charged Polanski drugged her daughter during a photography session and had intercourse with her.

Polanski, who moved to Europe before he was sentenced, said he had been driven out of the United States by an equivocating judge whose reversals of sentencing decisions "interrupted my every artistic undertaking."

THE BOSE 901 SERIES IV: The most innovative new speaker since the legendary 901 direct reflecting speaker was introduced in 1968.

The original 901 set a standard for reproduction of sound with concert hall realism. The 901 IV brings this high standard to a new level of perfection with improved bass reproduction, frequency response and spatial characteristics.

Yet, due to its new ultra-high efficiency drivers, it can produce the same sound volume with a 20 watt amplifier as the original 901 with a 70 watt amplifier.

This is accomplished by advanced technology consisting of the unique injection-molded acoustic matrix enclosure (shown in the above cutaway illustration of the 901IV) combined with the new high performance driver and a far more sophisticated electronic equalizer.

To fully appreciate the 901 IV spectacular performance, you must experience it for yourself. Come in for a live demonstration and hear the incredible impact of sound unlike any other.

'Three Penny Opera' explores world's lack of honor

By ROSANNE SINGER
State News Reviewer

No honor exists among thieves or prostitutes or pimps or gangsters or merchants or lovers or anyone for that matter. At least in the cynical Three Penny Opera, the current Performing Arts Company production now appearing at Fairchild Theatre. The theme of this Bertolt Brecht-Kurt Weill musical is beautifully summed up by the merchant Mr. Peachum: "The wickedness of the world is so great that you must keep running or your feet will get stolen out from under you."

Macheath, a thief, murderer and philanderer, is the focus of the show as he progresses from crime to crime and from woman to woman, landing in jail twice in the process. The beggar merchant, Mr. Peachum, trails Macheath throughout and wants him hung.

The PAC production of Three Penny is interestingly staged on bare, gray scaffolding and features strong performances by Mark Voland as Macheath and Gary Martinez as his adversary, Mr. Peachum. The first act in particular builds excitingly and contains excellent renditions of some of Brecht and Weill's most famous songs.

Mark Voland projects all the sensuality, sleaziness and cruelty essential to the character of Macheath. Physically he commands attention and provides a suitable focal point for the show. He changes expression at lightning quick speed whenever required, from pleading to hatred or from loving to cruelty, for example. His expressions are appropriately broad and carry well to the audience as, for example, when Lucy Brown tells Mack she'd rather see him hung than in another woman's arms and Macheath turns to the audience. Voland's singing voice has the cold, strong quality necessary for the part.

Gary Martinez performs equally as strongly in the part of Mr. Peachum, providing a good balance with Voland's Macheath. Physically the two are well-matched, and while Peachum cloaks his actions in respectability he displays the same phoniness and unscrupulousness as Macheath. His expressions of outraged virtue and concern look as falsely assumed as Macheath's displays of love. Martinez captures Peachum's smugness and self-satisfaction as he nearly waddles contentedly across stage.

Susan Chekaway plays the supposedly respectable Polly Peachum who disobeys her parents to marry Macheath. Polly initially adores Macheath but quickly catches on and displays the same phony emotion as the others. Chekaway enacts Polly's transition excellently culminating in a prison cell conversation with Macheath after which she exits gaily with the line, "Look after yourself Mack and never forget me." The part demands a strong voice, and Chekaway almost consistently projects excellently, particularly in the "Barbara Song." She and Holly Monson share a riotous number in "The Jealousy Duet."

Juliette Gay portrays Peachum's drudge of a wife who looks hysterically out of place as she enters the world of Macheath's prostitutes. Her dry sense of humor comes across particularly well when Peachum says about their daughter Polly, "she's hot for anyone" and Gay replies, "well she certainly didn't get that from you."

Linda Goetz, the understudy for Jenny Diver, lacks hardness as the woman who betrays Macheath and inadequately projects her song.

One of the occasional problems with the show is difficulty in hearing certain songs, on the whole, however, the actors are understandable. Because the scaffolding provides various levels, stage action is almost always interesting to watch. The opening number builds well with people gradually converging onstage from all directions and levels. With the addition of only a few effects the bordello scene comes alive beautifully with an expertly choreographed sensuality and balance. The prostitutes move with a heightened awareness of one another and luxuriate in their every action. The final scene, reminiscent of the opening one, materializes effectively and provides one of the strongest statements of the show. The second act fails to maintain the degree of interest of the first, partly due to less interesting songs. Transitions also seem to slow down.

Three Penny Opera continues through Saturday in Fairchild Theatre. Curtain time is at 8:15 p.m.

Gary Martinez as Mr. Peachum instructs his crew of beggars in the PAC production of Three Penny Opera, which continues through Saturday in Fairchild Theatre.

Polanski to return to U.S.A.

He specifically blamed the American press. He said the exposure and pressure from journalists caused the judge to reverse his initial decision to set Polanski free on probation after 42 days in jail.

Polanski faces a sentence ranging from release on probation to three years in prison. The film director said he has not set a firm date for his return, but that it would be sometime after the premier of Tess, a film based on Thomas Hardy's 19th century novel.

Polanski's previous films include Chinatown, Rosemary's Baby and Repulsion.

'Manhattan': romance vs. reality

Like, "You should have some faith in people." After all he has been through, the suggestion seems remotely impossible and has an ironic effect.

Woody Allen has extreme compassion for the characters he's drawn in Manhattan, but the film's action illustrates that he seems to have less faith in people and life as we currently know it. (Like his two previous films, future generations will view Manhattan to understand what life was like during the mid-'70s.) Allen's lack of faith is why Manhattan is less satisfying and more disturbing than Annie Hall, a film Allen may spend the rest of his career trying to top. Like Annie Hall, we see ourselves in the film's action, and this is what makes us laugh. However, due to the film's fatistic qualities, it is also what may leave us feeling extremely empty as opposed to Annie Hall's romantic melancholy in the end.

Still, when Tracy delivers her final line, the Allen character goes through a series of facial emotions which encapsulate every possible emotion known to human beings, and which proves that Woody Allen is not only one of the greatest writer-directors in motion picture history. He is also one of its greatest actors. In short, Woody Allen is one of the greatest filmmakers of all time, and Manhattan stands as a strong testament to this fact.

Willitts; a prolific scorer for MSU lacrosse team

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Sports Writer

The lacrosse program at MSU has been one of growth and success since its inception in 1970. Slowly but surely the necessary factors combined, producing a better team each year and peaking this past season with the best MSU team ever.

It would be difficult to point to one single overriding factor

Willitts' statistics speak for themselves. In each of his three years, he has broken all scoring records, giving him almost an outright monopoly on the record books. This past season the senior from Laurinburg, N.C. set a single-season scoring record and moved into first place on the all-time scoring list with 70 goals and 28 assists for an impressive 98 points.

The secret of Willitts' success is basically experience. After picking up on lacrosse in high school in Rhode Island in the center of the lacrosse stronghold of the U.S. — the East — he lettered three years in the sport but in his own words was not a lacrosse superstar.

"I never got good at lacrosse until I came here," he said. "Wrestling was my major sport in high school, and nobody ever recruited me for lacrosse."

When Willitts did decide to come to MSU his mind was on academics and a career in veterinary medicine, which remains his primary concern at MSU. He never planned on playing lacrosse, or any other sport, for that matter.

"When I got up here, something was missing. I needed something to get me away from studying," he said.

It was about that time when Willitts met Nevin Kanner, current MSU lacrosse coach who was then a member of the team. Shortly after he joined the team and promptly proceeded to set a single-season scoring record. The lacrosse team had begun a magic era of its own.

Willitts admits that the earlier years when the team was losing were frustrating for him. But with the team's improvement, which he calls "incredible," his game and the enjoyment of it increased markedly. Willitts said that the acquisition of more experienced players, together with an improved attitude, caused the success.

"We had more experienced players, and we knew we could play with any team we walked onto the field with, where before we had simply hoped we would score a goal," he said.

Willitts recognizes his talents but adds that he never felt any pressure to carry the team. In fact, he says the team's improvement helped his own game quite a bit.

"There was a lot of individual talent when I first came here," he said. "But as the team has gotten better, with that has changed. We still have all of the individual talent, but there has been an incredible improvement in team play, and that has been the key."

in this success story, but a likely candidate would have to be Kevin Willitts, who is, simply and undeniably, the most productive player in the history of the program. He may be the best.

W-rowers host regatta

By BRIAN HAGGERTY

Amid this year's Title IX fever, MSU has been chosen to host a rather different event in women's athletics. The National Women's Rowing Association has picked Lansing as the site of the 1979 Midwest Regional Regatta, the first step in the selection of the women's olympic crew.

Between 200 and 300 women from a dozen Midwest crews will compete in the regatta, scheduled for Saturday. There are 14 events, including individuals and two-, four-, and eight-woman crews in three weight classes.

The MSU crew will host the regatta, the largest ever held in Lansing, and the women's crew will compete in varsity and novice eight-person events and the varsity four-person race.

Heats will begin at 7 a.m., and the racing will continue all day. The races are sprints of 1,000 meters, or 0.6 mile.

MSU's race course is located on the Grand River just below the Waverly Street bridge. Good places to view the NWRA regatta include Frances Park, on Moore's River Drive, and Grand River Park, on M-27, where MSU's boathouse is located.

The NWRA decided to move its regional regatta away from its traditional home in Minnesota because of a request from the U.S. Olympic Committee. The Committee hopes that wider interest in intercollegiate rowing will be sparked by holding major regattas in cities that have never seen such a competition.

Some crews that will be represented at the regatta are: Notre Dame, University of Chicago, Grand Valley State College, Kansas State University, University of Michigan and University of Wisconsin.

For more information, the MSU crew may be contacted at the IM Club Sports Office, 231 IM Sports West.

Football tickets go on sale

MSU's Athletic Ticket Office will conduct sales of 1979 Spartan away football tickets to MSU students, faculty and staff beginning Monday (May 21) and running through Friday (May 25).

During the same period, additional tickets to home games for guests of students, faculty and staff will also be available for purchase.

For the away contests at Notre Dame Sept. 29 and at Ohio State University Oct. 27, there'll be a limit of one ticket per student. Married students with proper identification can buy a second ticket for a spouse. Faculty and staff members can purchase two tickets for these away contests. Purchasers must hold full-time MSU status.

For additional tickets to home games, there will be a limit of two per person for the University of Michigan game Oct. 6, with a drawing to be held if the demand exceeds the supply.

Purchasers must show in person and have the entire week to buy their tickets.

The ticket office at Jenison Fieldhouse will be open from 8:30 a.m. through 4:30 p.m. each day next week.

MSU home game tickets are priced at $9 each. Notre Dame tickets are $11 each and OSU tickets are $10.50 each.

Ruggers split two games

MSU Rugby Club 'A' Team was beaten 6-0 by Battle Creek Rugby Football Club while the 'B' team was victorious, 24-4, last week.

The 'A' game, played in a downpour on a very soggy pitch, was a hard tackling competitive contest by both teams. Forward play tended to dominate with MSU losing much of the ball in set and loose play in the first half. In the second half, a much fitter MSU pack started to control the game. Battle Creek scored two penalty goals, one in each half, which resulted from offside play by MSU players.

For the 'B' game, the rain had stopped, resulting in the MSU forwards providing Brian Smith and his backs with the ball more often. The Battle Creek 'B' team did not tackle or cover as well as its 'A' team. The MSU forward's play resulted in an early classical back-row break by Marvin Burns, who handed to Bill Greg for the first score. Shortly before the half, a swift inside break by Mark Smith gave MSU its second try. The front row of Jim Gell, Mike Broczinski and Doug Garrity continued to work the pack to advantage, providing much ball for the backs.

The next action for the ruggers will be against Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Ertl named top athlete

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer
"Maybe my name will be above hers some day," commented MSU golfer Sue Ertl Tuesday night at the fifth annual Women's Sports Banquet held in the Big Ten Room of Kellogg Center.

Ertl was a freshman when Nancy Lopez won the Association Intercollegiate Athletics for Women's (AIAW) national golf tournament, which was played at MSU's Forrest Akers West Golf Course. Now, Lopez is one of the top players and money winners on the Women's Professional Golfing Tour.

Since that time, Ertl has been making some headlines of her own in collegiate golfing and she was honored for all of her accomplishments at the banquet by being named the Sports-woman of the year by the MSU Woman's Sports Booster Club. It was the first time the award was given and the Booster Club plans to make it an annual presentation.

The senior from Ionia captured the Big Ten individual title as a sophomore and tied for the same honor last season. In her first three years, the Spartans won the team title (sharing it last season with University of Minnesota) extending their streak to five straight crowns, but this season, Ertl and the team gave up their strangleholds on the titles.

That didn't matter, though, to the packed house of 450 supporters who honored Ertl, the golf team and the other nine woman varsity squads.

Each team selected its top athlete and awarded the Outstanding Athlete Award. Ertl was selected for golf, Carmen King, a senior from Hamtramck was selected for softball. Lorraine Hyman, a Livonia senior, received the basketball award, Kathy Konlon, a senior from Southfield was honored as the top swimmer and senior Nancy Babcock of Bloomfield Hills was selected as the field hockey team's top athlete.

Cheryl Gilliam, a senior from Detroit was honored by the track team, sophomore Lori Boes from Troy captured top honors in gymnastics, Lil Warnes, a senior from South Porcupine, Ont., was selected as the cross country's top athlete, Grosse Ile's Mitzy Hazlett, the only senior on the volleyball team, was honored as that squad's top performer and Debbie Mascarin, a senior from Grosse Pointe Shores, captured top honors on the tennis team.

Debbie Pozega, a senior from Lansing, received a check for $100 in honor of being the graduating senior with the highest grade point average.

It was the first time the banquet was held in the Big Ten Room and before such a large crowd. Athletic Director Joe Kearney said he is hoping that in the future the women can take over Long's Convention and Banquet Center, where the MSU football and basketball teams hold their banquets.

"We used to start with paper plates and the awards they gave us was pens," Ertl said about the banquet. "They (the Boosters Club) really did an excellent job."

"I look back and it's hard to believe four years are over so quickly," she continued. "There wasn't one weekend or a player I played against that I didn't learn something."

Ertl isn't quite done with her college career yet. Although golf coach Mary Fossum learned late Tuesday night that her team didn't make the qualifying standards to get into the AIAW nationals which will be held in mid-June, Ertl, plus senior teammate and fellow co-captain Suzie Conlin will participate individually.

Before that, Ertl will play in an amateur tournament and then will try to qualify as one of the six amateurs in the Lady Strohs professional tourney which will take place in early June at Dearborn Country Club.

The night was a success for women's athletics at MSU, now Ertl, after taking top honors, will try to carry on that success. Look out, Nancy.

Racquetball tourney set for June to battle MS

Chuck Ross, a member of Sigma Chi, is sponsoring a racquetball tournament June 14-17 at the Dearborn Indoor Racquet Club.

Those interested in participating can sign up at Sigma Chi Sports Illustrated Court Clubs, First Down, Sports Meister and Frank Shorter Sports. Entrance fee is $20 and all proceeds will go toward combating multiple sclerosis.

The divisions include men's A, B and C; women's A, B and C; and seniors 35 and older. There will be trophies for the first three places in each division and for the consolation winners.

Prizes for the first five finishers will be memberships in Sports Illustrated Court Clubs, shoes, racquets, warmup suits, bags and dinners for two.

For more information, call Chuck at 332-3315. After the end of the term he can be reached at (313) 565-3154.

Bastien aims for Big Ten title

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

When MSU's baseball team battles University of Michigan for the Big Ten title this weekend, the series will have special significance for shortstop Rodger Bastien.

Bastien has just about done it all in being the only four-year varsity player on the squad. Yet, this weekend will be his last chance to obtain the last ingredient he is looking for — playing on a Big Ten title winner.

"All of my expectations when I first came here have been realized except for winning the Big Ten title," Bastien said. "I'm not worried about motivating myself for this weekend. It would be the perfect farewell to beat Michigan for the title. It would kind of be like frosting on the cake in ending my career."

Whether or not the Spartans win the crown, Saturday's game at Kobs Field will be a poignant one for the senior from Grandville.

"It will be the saddest day of my life when I play my last game in front of all those people at Kobs Field," Bastien said. "The four best years of my life have been here. There's no better place to play ball than here. I love Kobs Field."

For Bastien, Kobs Field has been an escape.

"Everyday, I would come down here early to get away from the pressure of school,"

Bastien said. "I would just come out whenever I could and forget about myself. So I'll miss coming out here every day and playing baseball for MSU."

And while he played at Kobs Field, Bastien led an illustrious career in which he may have established himself as the best MSU shortstop ever.

Last year, he was selected to the first-team All-Big Ten team and second team All-District Four squad. Bastien is currently MSU's all-time career leader in runs scored and is second in career hits.

"If we go to the NCAA tournament, I should have a shot at breaking the hits record," Bastien said. "When I first came here, I looked at these records and set up to break them as one of my goals. What has meant the most to me about breaking the records is that it puts me up there with an elite group of players. Records are nice for a short time, but you know somebody is going to break them. I think I will realize more about it when I am not playing."

And Bastien doesn't plan on leaving his baseball endeavors after the season finishes, either. He hopes a major league team will draft him even though none of the major league clubs drafted him after last season.

"I wasn't disappointed in not being drafted last year because I wouldn't have signed anyway, but I was surprised," Bastien said. "I had not accomplished what I wanted to do, which was winning the Big Ten. That was one of the many key factors. I will be disappointed if I don't get drafted this year though."

Bastien is currently leading the Spartans in 10 different individual categories. The most surprising category may be his home run leadership with five.

"I still don't consider myself a power hitter, but I feel capable of hitting homers when the team needs it," Bastien said. "A lot of the credit has to go to Gary Boyce. He worked with me all winter and had my arms and legs work better together. Since we don't have a lot of power on the team this year, I've been going for home runs more than I used to."

Not only is Bastien the only four-year varsity player on the team, but he also has started every game since the spring trip of his first year. With all this experience, he is one of the leaders on the team.

"I try to lead by example in giving a 100 percent," Bastien said. "I get on people once in a while, but I don't like to do it. I do it just to help the team."

If Bastien, who considers himself a complete ballplayer, does end up in the pros, he expects the atmosphere to be different.

"Pro ball doesn't have the innocence that I feel in college baseball," Bastien said. "In the pros, there is more pressure on you because you're playing for money. But here, baseball gives me a chance to forget about things for a few hours." But hopefully, the U-M series will provide a weekend that Bastien will never forget.

Senior shortstop Rodger Bastien is winding up his four-year career at MSU.

Willitts owns record books

While Willitts may be the best individual on the team, his unselfish play has been a catalyst in this growth of MSU's team approach, as he led the team in assists this spring.

Willitts said he probably could have gone to an Eastern school and played on the second or third line at attack, which is indicative of the wide gap between lacrosse in the East and the Midwest, but adds that he has no regrets about coming to MSU or his association with the program.

There is a chance that Willitts will return next year if an abundance of red tape can be cleared up. But he says his studies are becoming pressing and if he plays he would like to be able to play full time.

The Spartans will be losing talented players to graduation, but Kanner and coach Boku Hendrickson have landed some quality recruits with experience in high school lacrosse. Nevertheless, the team would surely miss Willitts' scoring power at the attack position.

Hopefully, one of the new players will be able to duplicate Willitts' approach from behind the net followed by the characteristic juke, jump shot and the inevitable score.

Carter offers plans to lessen California gasoline shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, saying no illegal oil industry activity has been tied to the California energy crunch, offered proposals Wednesday that an adviser said could cut the state's gasoline shortage by 50,000 gallons a day.

Carter also said he had asked the Justice Department to launch an investigation to make sure oil companies are not illegally withholding oil from the market to await higher prices.

In a report prepared by the Department of Energy, Carter recommended environmental standards, and stricter enforcement of the 55 mph speed limit, among other proposals.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California flew to Washington to plead his gasoline-starved state's case at a White House meeting with political overtones for the two potential rivals for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

Following the meeting, Carter told reporters his proposals, along with a change in gasoline allocation rules, "will have a beneficial effect" in dealing with California's gasoline shortage.

Carter said in a White House press room announcement that "we have not found any evidence of collusion or illegalities among the oil companies."

By United Press International

Legislation creating a Michigan Department of Energy to draft a comprehensive state energy plan was reintroduced Wednesday in the Senate.

The measure revives a debate last year that featured three rival energy agency plans promoted by the Senate, the House and Gov. William G. Milliken.

This year's Senate version is co-sponsored by Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Jerome T. Hart, D-Saginaw, and Senate Democratic Leader William Faust of Westland.

"This legislation has been introduced to provide Michigan with a strong, centralized planning agency which we believe is needed to spearhead the state's energy policy," Hart said.

"Because of the critical need to develop new energy resources it is imperative that we establish energy planning, implementation and research programs that will lessen the impact of energy shortages in the future."

"This can best be handled by a centralized agency," Hart said.

Under the bill, the new department would be charged with promoting long range alternate and renewable energy resources.

gy resources.

The bill also includes provisions for an Office of Energy Ombudsman, a State Energy Review Board and a Power Plant Siting Commission within the department.

Hart said the Ombudsman would represent consumer interests in energy planning.

The review board would be made up of representatives of local government, business, industry, labor, senior citizens, farmers, environmentalists and other organizations and would give those groups representation in setting energy policy.

The siting commission would regulate the location, construction and modification of power generating plants.

In addition, the bill would establish a fund to provide financial aid to public intervenors in cases before the siting commission and the Public Service Commission, using as its source a small consumer assessment.

"Because every Michigan resident is directly affected by the activities of the energy department it is necessary that we include mechanisms to ensure their participation as well as protection," Hart said.

Board calls for Wright resignation

"Coca-Cola is trying to get around the bottle bill," Spears said.

The bill was killed in committee two weeks ago, but Spears reintroduced the bill last week.

Sosa, a policy committee member, said the bill was originally killed because it suggested a restraint of trade and "if students don't want to buy, they won't."

"Who are we to tell them they shouldn't buy it?" he said.

Carr said the board should "leave it up to the students' judgment."

"I don't believe we can tell students they can't buy Hi-C," he added.

Kirk Messmer, College of Natural Science representative, said the bill is not a restraint of trade and the sale of Hi-C "undermines the bottle bill."

The bill was approved by a 7-6 vote with one abstention and it marked the first time the board chairperson has voted to break a tie since the position was instituted.

Debate over Interfraternity Council Representative Jim Combust's right to vote came up again during the resolution vote.

Dan Kelly is the regular representative, but Combust occasionally comes in his place.

continued to increase military spending overseas to foil national liberation movements determined to claim political and economic leadership.

"The entire fabric of the United States, the most industrialized society in the world, depends on continuing access to raw materials," Solomon said quoting Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

"Young is a guileless servant of empire," Solomon said.

The United States continues to invest heavily in developing countries because economic penetration is seen as means to insure the current governments remain favorable to Western interests, Solomon said.

The Tri-Lateral Agreement between Japan, the United States and Germany, "uses its power to deal with emerging liberation movements not falling into the neo-colonial trap," Solomon said.

"Those undermining revolutionary change can't be overestimated," Solomon said.

Flaming facts

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The world's worst fire record in terms of deaths, injuries and property destruction is held by the United States, according to a Honeywell report.

The report said some 8,700 persons had perished in fires during 1977, the latest year for which figures are available.

Two weeks ago when Combust came to the board meeting there was debate over his right to vote.

Spears objected to Chairperson Karen Passiak's ruling that Combust could vote and a move to overrule the chair failed.

Sosa said Spears actions were "an absolute waste of time. I'm sick of going through this at every meeting."

In other board action:

• A bill to oppose the procedure used by the Department Public Safety for inventory of damages to cars which have been towed was approved.

The board's DPS advisory committee will look into the matter.

• Representatives voted to move next week's meeting to Thursday because the Bad Company concert is scheduled Tuesday night.

The rationale for moving the meeting was to support Programming Board and Pop Entertainment.

• A bill to appoint two persons to a steering committee developing a survey originated by PIRGIM was approved. The survey will consist of questions on general campus topics.

• Spears was officially appointed by the board as University College representative. Since no one ran for the position in the general election, the board had to appoint a new representative.

• Glenn Sugiyama, a junior psychology major, was appointed Director of Special Projects.

IM accident location message garbled

Zutaut said there have been confusions with the 911 operators about campus locations in the past because the operators do not know the campus as well as DPS dispatchers.

Ingham County Assistant Medical Examiner Dr. Richard Schultz said Wednesday that the autopsy results on Morgenthaler are still inconclusive and no cause of death has been officially determined.

Schultz said his office is waiting for a toxicology study on Morgenthaler and said it could be several weeks before a cause is determined.

Witnesses said Morgenthaler was running from first to second base when he jumped in the air to block a throw to prevent a double play. The victim then walked a few steps towards third base on intramural field no. 11 and collapsed.

Teammates and IM officials gave Morgenthaler mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until rescue units arrived.

Earnest C. Wong, 20, of 359 N. Hubbard Hall called DPS at 8:46 p.m. from the Conrad Hall library and reported the accident.

A DPS dispatcher sent two DPS patrol cars to the accident scene and called the East Lansing Police Department, which dispatched a rescue unit to the scene.

While en route to the accident, East Lansing rescue squad reported to DPS that it was being directed by 911 to an accident site near Wilson Hall. The rescue unit requested a clarification of the accident site and was directed to the East Complex field by the DPS dispatcher.

An Ingham County Paramedic unit arrived at the field about 10 minutes after DPS had called 911 requesting the unit in response to Wong's call to DPS.

The East Lansing rescue unit arrived at Sparrow Hospital with the victim at 9:42 p.m. and Morgenthaler was pronounced dead at 9:59, Schultz said.

The 911 system was implemented in February to provide emergency service for the entire county, except for the city of East Lansing. On-campus callers dialing 1-2-3 are automatically switched into the 911 system.

Intramural Director Frank Beeman said his employees at the scene of the accident reacted well. IM employee Steve Parker called the 1-2-3 number shortly after the accident and gave the 911 operator the correct location.

Beeman said Morgenthaler's death was the first in 33 years of scheduled IM competition.

Three observation wells drilled

and develop and submit to the DNR a proposed hydrogeological investigation plan for each of the sites.

MSU has also been asked to locate all past and existing sites, provide copies of previous University studies of waste disposal, describe the current MSU disposal program for hazardous wastes disposed of at on-campus sites, identify all sources of chemical and radioactive waste within MSU as well as persons directly involved in disposal operations and secure existing disposal sites to exclude public access.

A DNR charge, reported in Wednesday's State Journal, that MSU has yet to respond to some of the points raised, notably the securing of existing disposal sites to exclude public access, was dismissed by Keesler.

Keesler said the pit which caused the DNR most concern has a cable across its entrance to keep people out.

With MSU employees and Keesler consultants currently drilling, Keesler said it would be difficult to keep people out of the area.

"When tests are done and the storage tank is emptied and removed we will consider other means of keeping people out. It is in the relatively remote, posted area," Keesler said.

Keesler announced a third University well checked last week for possible chemical contamination has also been cleared by the Department of Public Health.

The well in question, located roughly one-half mile from the Jolly-Hagadorn roads chemical disposal site, was tested for organic contamination upon the health department's request.

An inorganic analysis of the well initiated by MSU before the Department of Public Health request had already showed it to be clean, Warren Malechmann, director of MSU Radiological, Chemical and Biological Safety, said.

not need the Fermi plant.

Nuclear foes have planned "a number of demonstrations over the coming year to call attention to our goal of bringing an end to nuclear power in Michigan," said Michael Moore, a coalition spokesperson.

Moore said the coalition chose the Republican convention as a target because the next president "is going to be one of the major decision-makers."

"If that person is going to be a Republican, we definitely want to have some sort of impact," he said.

The special legislative committee is charged with studying the health hazards posed by nuclear power, the reliability of safety and evacuation systems, the alternatives to nuclear power and their economic consequences and the feasibility of phasing out existing plants.

Clofelter said he has serious questions about nuclear power and plans to look closely at the operation of atomic plants in this state. But he decided he has preconceived ideas about the outcome of the investigation.

Michigan has operating nuclear plants at Bridgman, Charlevoix and South Haven.

State to probe N-plants

which include a June 2 demonstration at Detroit Edison Co.'s unfinished Fermi 2 nuclear plant near Monroe, an October rally in Lansing and a protest at next year's Republican National Convention in Detroit.

The more than 60 groups, now called the Michigan No Nukes Coalition, organized last month's demonstration which drew a record 5,000 protestors to the site of Consumers Power Co.'s unfinished nuclear plant near Midland.

Spokespersons said they expect more than 2,000 to attend the Monroe protest and it may even outdraw the Midland march.

Although that march sparked a local counter-demonstration, coalition spokespersons said they will have a substantial number of supporters in Monroe.

Problems experienced with the original Fermi plant have left area residents jittery about a new one, they said.

Ron Wilson of the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan claimed Edison has overestimated the growth in electric power demand and does

City attorney Dennis McGinty said the petition to alter city government and amend the city charter requires signatures from at least five percent of the registered voters in the city.

Kestenbaum's proposal could go on the ballot only after the required signatures are gathered and the proposal is reviewed by the governor.

The proposal will be reviewed by the governor and the Attorney General's Office after the signatures are gathered, and before the question goes on the ballot, said Assistant Attorney General Rod T. MacGillis.

The governor sends a copy to the attorney general, who reviews it and makes a recommendation to the governor's legal staff where approval or denial of the amendment proposal is granted, MacGillis said.

The actual wording of the ballot must be derived from the petition and cannot exceed 100 words, MacGillis said.

"If it gets on the ballot the proposal will be successful," Kestenbaum predicted.

After the initial filing procedure is followed, City Council would be required to put the question on the ballot during the next general election. If no general election is to be held within 90 days of the proposal's approval, a special election must be held, McGinty said.

A majority of City Council members surveyed are not supportive of the proposal.

"It would almost begin to make the split (between students and homeowners) even greater," Councilmember John Czarnecki said.

But Kestenbaum disagreed with Czarnecki.

"I don't think the split could be any wider than it is now, he said. "The conservative homeowners and students contend over issues, with liberal homeowners kind of mediating between the two."

Kestenbaum said the political atmosphere in East Lansing is just right for his proposal because of the growing tensions between students and homeowners.

"I'm looking for a peaceful atmosphere where students are an accepted part of the community," he said. I think it will improve everyone's representation - homeowners and students.

The City Council consensus is that city residents are being equally represented and that the proposal is not necessary for a community of East Lansing's size.

TOMORROW: A State News

analysis on all three proposals and how they will affect students and their relationship to East Lansing government.

City budget approved

charge to balance a $150,000 deficit in the budget and to offset an inequitable distribution of pick-up costs currently assessed to non-commercial properties.

The largest increases in the budget are for police and fire protection, which rose 7 percent to $3.5 million, and administrative staff, which is slated to receive $1.4 million.

Council held the budget belt on city-subsidized service agencies except a 6.4 percent increase for the Drug Education Center, which was allocated $52,343.

Listening Ear was funded an additional $350 over last year's budget of $9,050. The Tenants Resource Center was allocated $8,500; Council on Aging, $3,770; and the Council on Alcoholism, $3,000.

At a budget meeting two weeks ago, council decided to void the city manager's recommendation to increase CATA bus fares in the city 10 cents and decided to subsidize the transit authority with an extra $9,000 over this year's $123,325.

City department heads will receive a 6 percent pay increase and other city employees pay will be raised 6.6 percent.

East Lansing's property taxes have not risen for four years and have remained at 17.55 mills.
