Carry your umbrella half-open today. There is a 60 percent chance of occasional thundershowers with temperature highs reaching the 70s. Tonight's low will slump into the 50s.

Three-year-old Sammy Perkins of Williamston will be operated on next week to close wounds from a hay mower accident Saturday which severed both feet above the ankles. Surgeons at Edward W. Sparrow Hospital tried an unsuccessful one-in-a-thousand chance operation to reattach the feet.

Sammy, press both amused at meeting

By DENNIS PETROSKEY
State News Staff Writer

Surrounded by cameras and lights as he lay on his hospital bed, Sammy Perkins charmed newsmen Thursday morning as he met the media for the first time since his feet were severed in a farm accident.

The spirited three-year-old boy played with photographers and took microphones from interviewers as they asked questions during the hour-long session on the third-floor hallway of Edward W. Sparrow Hospital.

Though he did not talk much, Sammy appeared to be amused by the activity going on around him.

"Sammy's held up very well and has been very cheerful and playful, except when he gets extremely tired," said his father Allen Perkins.

"I think Sammy's holding up better than I have," said Gloria Perkins, the boy's mother.

Sammy's feet were severed just above the ankle last Saturday when he walked in the path of a haymower at the family's farm in Williamston. Doctors reattached the boy's feet during a six-hour operation, but were forced to amputate them Monday because of circulation problems.

The youngster's parents said they have been overwhelmed by the response from people all over the country who have wished the boy well and have sent hundreds of cards, toys and donations.

Meridian will fight de-annexation

By DEBBIE CREEMERS
State News Staff Writer

Meridian Township will "fight like hell" to prevent a petition to de-annex part of MSU's East Complex and add it to East Lansing from gaining a spot on the ballot, Supervisor Richard County said Wednesday.

County said he would consult with the township's attorney to find out what legal action can be taken to block the petition submitted Tuesday by Ingham County Commissioner Mark Grebner.

Ingham County Clerk Lingg Brewer said the 641 signatures approving the de-annexation of Akers, Hubbard, Holmes, McDonel and Owen residence halls from the township would be sent to East Lansing City Clerk Beverly Colizzi for validation.

Brewer estimated the validation of the signatures, almost 200 more than needed,

Township supervisor promises recourse through legal action would take two weeks "at most."

But County said the proposal, which would take away about 10 percent of the township's population and $120,000 in state and federal revenues, would not get on the ballot easily.

"I don't think the Meridian Township population will sit still for having their pockets picked and territory robbed," he said.

Grebner said the main reason for annexing East Complex to East Lansing is to eliminate the "headaches" at voter registration time.

"The split makes a mess out of voter registration and voting," Grebner said. "We have to get authorization from Meridian Township officials to register voters. When they move 20 feet down the hall — literally out of town — it gets frustrating."

Grebner said the proposal, which would affect 2,800 students, would solve many problems.

But County said the action would create new problems for Meridian Township.

"We operate on a five-mill limitation and sweat out the budget balance every year as it is," he said. County said he did not see registration of East Complex voters as much of a problem.

"Generally, administrative problems of this nature come to my attention," he said. The township will probably "be forced" to put out literature pointing out the benefits of Meridian Township residency to student voters, County said.

"Our parks, which allow the consumption of beer and wine in them, are available to students," County said.

The township backs up the East Lansing fire and police departments, he added.

"We are proud to be able to count MSU as part of our township," County said, "and will not give up that honor so that Mark Grebner can gain a few more supportive votes for his causes in East Lansing."

Carter denounces oil hike

By The Associated Press

President Carter in Tokyo today angrily denounced OPEC's latest increase in oil prices saying it will bring worldwide suffering.

He called for Congress to approve the expenditure of "billions of dollars" to develop alternative energy supplies with the goal of making the United States self-sufficient in energy.

The OPEC cartel raised world crude oil prices to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel Thursday in Geneva, Switzerland, the biggest increase in five years.

The price boosts — at a time of shortage, huge gasoline lines in the United States and frantic bidding-up of prices on the world market — are designed to "bring some stability" to the situation, said the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Experts estimate the OPEC decision by itself will add 4 to 5 cents a gallon to the retail price of gasoline and heating oil in the United States. And when decontrol of domestic oil prices and other factors are added, the price may climb as much as 15 cents a gallon by year's end, some economists say.

The president also had some good news for American motorists, saying gasoline allocations will be increased sharply in areas where there have been long gasoline lines.

He said supplies in these areas would be increased to 97 percent of last year's levels. Carter said it is "absolutely imperative" for Congress to enact his energy legislation to help reduce dependence on foreign oil.

The OPEC decision, announced after three days of tough bargaining between price "hawks" and "doves," establishes a multilevel pricing system, with Saudi Arabia at the bottom and such hawks as Libya at the top. It meant the various factions had failed in an effort to reach a new, unified base price.

The base price — for a 42-gallon barrel of Arabian light crude — was raised to $18 from the current $14.55, a 24 percent hike. Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar would stick with that benchmark price.

But the cartel agreed that any country could add surcharges up to $2 to the base price if market conditions permit. A $20-per-barrel base would represent a 37 percent increase.

On top of that, the OPEC countries, as they have always done, will add further premiums for higher-quality oil — up to a ceiling of $23.50 per barrel.

The United States imports about 8.4 million barrels of oil per day, about 45 percent of its needs. One-quarter of the imports come from Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the UAE, and about 55 percent from the other OPEC nations, those that may boost their prices to the new ceiling.

Meanwhile, new preliminary figures from the U.S. Department of Energy indicate that the decline in domestic production may be responsible for a larger part of the gasoline squeeze than a reduction in crude imports, blamed by industry and government experts.

Democrats pick New York for convention site

By DON MCLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — The Democratic Party, thinking kindly of the city where its wounds were healed and a winning candidate was chosen three years ago, decided Thursday to return to New York for the 1980 presidential nominating convention.

Also working in the Big Apple's favor with the site selection committee were such factors as the city's abundance of hotel rooms and its proven convention hall. Detroit and Philadelphia finished far behind.

The Republicans already have picked Detroit for their convention, which begins July 14, 1980. The Democrats will open in New York on Aug. 11.

The Democratic convention is expected to cost the financially strapped city $7 million in services and facilities. But it promises to pay New York a dividend amounting to approximately $30 million in new business.

The site committee's decision is final and not subject to approval by the Democratic National Committee. The GOP choice was settled only after a bitter floor fight before its national committee.

Although the White House exerted no direct pressure in connection with the Democrats' decision-making process, New York was known to be the sentimental favorite from the start. It was there that Jimmy Carter, the self-proclaimed outsider, was nominated as his party's standardbearer in 1976 and went on to win the White House.

It was also at the last New York convention that Democrats finally buried the hatchet on a decade of internal reform battles and joined ranks for a comeback that left them the dominant political force in the federal, state and local governments.

Michigan presidential primary is scrapped

By United Press International

The state House Thursday voted narrowly to scrap Michigan's troubled presidential primary.

Legislation repealing the seven-year-old primary was approved and sent to the Senate on a 57-46 vote after about an hour of debate. Bills must receive 56 votes for adoption by the House.

A move to reconsider the House vote, which split both parties, is expected.

The May election has been embattled since its inception in 1972 when former Alabama Gov. George Wallace embarrassed Democratic Party regulars by sweeping the state.

Critics charge the primary is expensive, unrepresentative and attracts little voter interest.

Further, the national Democratic Party has announced it will no longer recognize the results of "open" primaries, such as Michigan's, where cross-over voting is allowed.

Currently, the number of delegate votes a presidential candidate wins is roughly equal to his percentage of the primary vote.

If an open primary is held next year, it will not have a direct effect on how delegate votes are parceled out to presidential hopefuls. Delegates would be allocated via the old caucus system, which also will be the case if the primary is repealed.

Legislation has been introduced to bring the primary into compliance with the party's rules, but its prospects have been clouded by a veiled threat from Gov. William G. Milliken to veto any move to close the vote by forcing voters to declare their party preference.

Rep. Alfred Sheridan, D-Taylor, who sponsored the repealer, said the 1980 primary would cost the state $3 million.

SUPREME COURT SAYS SPECIAL TREATMENT ALLOWED

Minorities win affirmative battle

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a ruling that could affect millions of working Americans, said Wednesday that employers may voluntarily give minority workers special treatment in hiring, training and promotion.

Voting 5-2, the justices provided a momentous victory for advocates of affirmative action programs for minorities by allowing even employers with no proven history of racial bias to offer the special preferences.

Employers with a proven history of racial bias can be required by the government to offer special preferences.

The court said racial quotas may be used in the special preference programs, but sions decisions.

The Carter administration, civil rights groups, labor leaders, and Brian F. Weber's employer and union on Wednesday welcomed the Supreme Court decision that will keep Weber out of his company's on-the-job training program.

Weber, 31, who claimed he had been the victim of reverse discrimination, expressed disappointment at the ruling but said he would report for work as usual at 7 a.m. Thursday and expected no malice on the part of his employer, the Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co. plant in Gramercy, La.

Misgivings over the decision's impact were expressed by a constitutional scholar in Chicago, and by spokespersons for the Polish-American Congress and for B'nai B'rith, the Jewish service group which illegally excluded from a California medical school. Bakke was subsequently admitted.

The justices, by a 5-4 vote, struck down an admissions policy that made race the only factor in considering applications for a certain number of class openings.

If the voluntary use of affirmative action had been wiped out, civil rights leaders said, all government efforts to help minorities and women to improve their status in private industry could have been affected.

Because the court's decision was based on a federal law that bans sexual bias as well as racial bias in employment, the ruling also represents a big victory for the women's rights movement.

offered scant guidance for lower courts as to when quotas are permissible.

Specifically, the court said Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co. did not discriminate illegally against Brian F. Weber, a white Kaiser employee in Louisiana, by adopting a plan "to eliminate traditional patterns of racial segregation."

The on-the-job training program, begun by Kaiser in conjunction with the United Steelworkers union, was aimed at landing more blacks in higher paying positions.

The court's decision did not discuss sexual discrimination. But because it was based on a federal law that bans sexual bias as well as racial bias in employment, the ruling also represents a big victory for the women's rights movement.

Weber's case was seen by civil rights leaders as potentially far more important than last June's "Bakke" decision, in which the court upheld the idea that race may be taken into account in a university's admis-generally opposes all programs involving quotas, such as the one at Kaiser.

The court's ruling was welcomed by Vice President Walter F. Mondale, AFL-CIO President George Meany, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Urban League and women's groups.

They said the court had made it clear that firms may engage in affirmative action programs to give women, blacks and members of other minorities a boost up the job ladder without fear of being sued by those left out of such programs.

The decision was also hailed by Cornell Maier, president of Kaiser Aluminum, and officials of the United Steelworkers of America. They together developed the on-the-job program which Weber charged discriminated against him.

In last June's decision, the court ruled that Allan Bakke, who is white, had been

Activist asks for opposition to arms race

By MICHELE McELMURRY
State News Staff Writer

The Rev. Daniel F. Berrigan, human rights activist and Jesuit priest, Tuesday night urged the religious community to actively oppose the nuclear arms race.

Berrigan told an over-capacity crowd at Brody Hall that "religious people have to stop the weasel talk of SALT and arms limitation."

"Civil disobedience is at the heart of the matter," he said.

"We should announce to the Senate and our country that we will no longer pay taxes for killing," he said.

Berrigan, who gained national recognition for his opposition to the Vietnam War, spoke out against the recent SALT agreement, calling it "an open invitation to international suicide."

"SALT is increasing the possible and actual rate of nuclear violence on both sides," he said.

"Churches are being asked by congressmen to lobby in support of SALT II," he said. "Instead of lobbying for SALT, we should refuse to pay the military portion of our taxes."

Berrigan told his audience that American involvement in the arms race was "hideous and inhumane."

"We have to decide whether it will be bread for the world or arms for the world," Berrigan said.

"As far as America is concerned," he said, "we have made a chilling decision."

"The United States is the largest purveyor of international turmoil," he said.

Berrigan said the war economy was "producing nothing" and "bombs presented a Catch-22."

"The arms race inevitably aggravates unemployment domestically."

"We have lost a whole generation of highly-skilled technicians and scientists to the arms race — twenty-five years of skills stolen from the civilian sector," he said.

Berrigan accused Catholics of being "among the most enthusiastic supporters of this race to oblivion."

Many Catholics "serve in high places in the armed forces, high places in government and work in 'think tanks,'" he said.

Carter to chow with troops in Korea

CAMP CASEY, Korea (AP) — It will be grits and creamed beef on toast on the chow line Saturday morning when President Carter has breakfast with GIs of the 2nd Infantry Division and then peeks across the nearby Demilitarized Zone into North Korea.

He will stay in the base commander's white cottage, jog with the troops — and be shown first hand how near South Korea's booming capital is to the border which this base guards.

The 2nd Division's newspaper states the unit's mission bluntly: "to serve as a deterrent to communist aggression" from North Korea.

Carter must decide whether to go ahead with the withdrawal of 31,000 U.S. ground troops based in South Korea — among them the 6,000 here at Camp Casey, about 10 miles from the DMZ.

The Carter administration began pulling U.S. ground troops out of South Korea but stopped when intelligence reports suggested a rise in North Korean strength. U.S. officials say Carter will decide whether to resume the withdrawal after he finishes his Asian trip.

Younger Cousteau drowns in crash

ALVERCA, Portugal (AP) — A seaplane piloted by Jacques Cousteau's son Philippe clipped a sand bank while landing Thursday, capsized and sank in the Tagus River, drowning the 37-year-old son of the noted French oceanographer, officials said.

Police in this Lisbon suburb said seven persons managed to escape from the 33-year-old plane, but despite rescue efforts by fishermen, Cousteau drowned at the controls.

The surviving crew members, five Portuguese and two French persons, reported they were stunned by the collision. They said they thought Cousteau might have hit his head and lost consciousness when the plane capsized.

One of the crew broke an arm, while another was hospitalized for shock.

The World War II-era craft had been undergoing repairs here for several months and was purchased in 1974 by Cousteau's father to film bird migrations and study river courses.

Philippe Cousteau was a photographer, author and diver, but he devoted as much passion to flying as his celebrated father did to underwater research.

House leaders water down windfall taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Thursday to water down the proposed "windfall profits" tax, agreeing with Republican and oil-state lawmakers that the best way to spur domestic oil production is to leave more money with the oil companies.

By a 236-to-183 vote, the House cut the amount to be reclaimed from oil company profits resulting from decontrol of oil prices by at least $5.9 billion, according to congressional estimates.

The vote was a stinging defeat for Democratic leaders who had urged approval of a tougher "windfall profits" tax, arguing that OPEC's steep increase in world oil prices will pour billions of dollars more into oil company coffers.

The Organizations of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised the price for crude oil to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel. The base price had been $14.55 a barrel.

The weaker tax, sponsored by oil-state Reps. W. Henson Moore, R-La., and James R. Jones, D-Okla., is still stronger than the one that President Carter originally proposed.

Car plows through Chicago crowd

CHICAGO (AP) — Three black men, apparently enraged because they were ordered to leave a street party in a white and Latin neighborhood, returned in their car a few minutes later and plowed through the crowd, killing a woman and injuring eight persons, police say.

"It was the craziest thing I ever saw," said Thomas Casa, who lives in the neighborhood and was at the party Wednesday night. "They just came flying through at about 50 miles an hour and bowled them over like tenpins."

"This is a white neighborhood," Casa said. "It's Bridgeport. You know what that is."

James E. Burns, director of the Chicago Commission of Human Relations, said the incident was the first major racial flare-up to come to his attention this summer in the blue-collar South Side neighborhood, birthplace of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley and former Mayor Michael A. Bilandic.

"Nothing like this has happened before," said Gloria Rodriguez, a friend of the dead woman, Conchetta Chira, a 40-year-old mother of six. "A kid threw a beer can at the car when it was leaving, and they came back flying."

Bisexual denied entry to U.S.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — When Minneapolis customs officials found a copy of a gay-oriented magazine in his suitcase, they asked Karl Kinder if he was homosexual.

"No, I'm a bisexual," Kinder, 32, of Frankfurt, West Germany, said he replied. As a result, he said, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service inspectors denied him entry.

In an airport interview before his return to West Germany, Kinder said he was told by inspectors that his entry into the United States was prohibited by the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952.

He said inspectors told him a section of the 1952 act states that an alien "afflicted with psychopathic personality," may not enter the country. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that the term "psychopathic personality" was intended to exclude homosexuals.

"They say this country is free and everything. I feel like a criminal, but I've done nothing wrong," Kinder said.

Cave-in victim freed after three days

WAYNESVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Army Sgt. Kenneth Sekola says he's through spelunking after being pulled from a 40-foot-deep pit in a cave where he and two companions were lost for 3 and one-half days with no food and only muddy water to drink.

"I'm the type of guy, if I fall off a bike, I'll get back on. But no more of this cave-exploring stuff," Sekola, 22, of Bloomer, Wis., said after his rescue.

Sekola entered Indian Cave in the Missouri Ozarks on Saturday afternoon with Spec. 4 Steve Mercado, 20, a fellow soldier at nearby Fort Leonard Wood, and Mercado's wife, Lynn, 20. The two men had explored the cave together two or three times before.

They were rescued in the pre-dawn darkness Wednesday — cold, thirsty, scared and hungry — by members of a spelunkers' club at the University of Missouri-Rolla.

"I used to drive a fuel truck in the mountains of Korea. It was a pretty hairy job... but I never worried about it. But you just can't compare this cave experience to nothing else," Sekola said.

TRUCKER VIOLENCE HITS MID-MICHIGAN

Two youths injured by gunfire

By Wire Services

In more violence related to the truckers' strike in Michigan, two Texas youths visiting the home of an independent trucker were injured by gunfire Thursday and an arsonist hit a diesel fuel storage area at Kalamazoo.

Later in the day in Lansing, state officials pledged to seek federal and legislative solutions to the fuel and regulatory difficulties faced by the independents.

Police said Michael Sabin, 13, and Rudolph Branham, 16, both of Port Aransas, Texas, were not seriously injured when an unidentified gunman fired shots at a car, pickup truck and semi-tractor parked in the yard of their uncle.

The boys were sleeping in the back of the pickup, police said.

The state police at Battle Creek have not officially stated the shooting was strike-related, but the boy's uncle, Richard Cable of Emmet Township, is an independent trucker.

"All three vehicles were hit by shotgun fire," said Sgt. Olin Stuck at the Battle Creek state police post. "The two boys were sleeping in the back end of the pickup. The uncle is an independent trucker but he is off the road."

"Neither he nor we can say it was strike connected."

Freshly filled tanker trucks rolled from two North Carolina oil terminals protected by more than 900 National Guards Thursday as striking independent truckers elsewhere fueled their protest with gunfire, nails and convoys.

Despite Vice President Walter Mondale's appeal for an end to the protracted shutdown, renewed highway violence and vandalism broke out in about a dozen states.

Sniper fire directed at moving rigs wounded a 14-year-old boy in Arkansas and a Maryland trucker, but neither was seriously hurt.

Interstate 10 at Mobile, Ala., was transformed into a mine field of roofing nails, which flattened tires and snarled traffic on the bridge over Mobile Bay and at Port City exits. Similar incidents were reported in North Carolina and California.

While there were signs of weakening support for the independents in a few states, drivers pressed on with protest convoys and demonstrations in Chicago, Maine, Connecticut and Tennessee.

Gas supply uncertain for holiday

Prices climb, 10 percent fewer stations will open this weekend

By United Press International

Millions of Americans approached the last weekend of June and the July Fourth holiday with uncertainty Thursday, as the flow from gasoline pumps slowed to a trickle.

An Associated Press spot check indicated that fuel will be hardest to find during the next week in the heavily-populated Eastern cities, many of which already restrict purchases.

But there were signs that the crunch is spreading. A survey by the Montana AAA, for example, showed that 10 percent fewer stations would be open this weekend than last. And the president of the Arkansas Gasoline Retailers Association said this Saturday and Sunday would be the "worst yet."

Prices continued their steady climb, with no relief in sight. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, announced it was raising crude oil prices to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel, a boost which is expected to add four cents to the cost of a gallon of gasoline in the United States.

The AAA, in its weekly survey on prices and supplies, said the average price of regular gasoline at full-service stations was 89 cents per gallon. Premium sold for an average of 94.3 cents a gallon and unleaded for 92.9 cents, the AAA said.

The auto club said prospects for the weekend were gloomy.

"Compounding the uncertainty were spot month-end shortages at the pumps, scattered delivery interruptions caused by striking independent drivers and the approach of the July Fourth holiday," the AAA said. Its survey of 6,833 service stations showed 10 percent fewer stations would be open this weekend than were open last weekend.

Right-wing Moslems executed in Damascus

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — President Hafez Assad's government executed 15 convicted terrorists at dawn Thursday as part of a crackdown on the right-wing Moslem Brotherhood.

The executions came less than 24 hours after Syrian warplanes clashed with Israeli jets in southern Lebanon. An Israeli Embassy official in Washington suggested that the Syrian air force challenged Israel's air force for the first time since 1974 to divert attention from Assad's domestic political troubles.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin on Thursday rejected U.S. criticism of Israeli bombing raids in southern Lebanon and said his pilots were flying missions of "legitimate defense... for the protection of our citizens" when they clashed with Syrian MiGs.

In Damascus, meanwhile, a top-ranking Syrian official told The Associated Press that Syria's air force has been ordered to intercept Israeli warplanes in the future whenever they raid Palestine.

In the Wednesday air battle above Lebanon, Israel claimed its highly sophisticated U.S.-made F-15 Eagles, in a world combat debut, knocked out five Soviet-made Syrian MiG-21s.

Heat, choking smog permeate air in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ten million Southern Californians sweltered under a blanket of hot, choking smog Thursday as automobile pollutants — blamed in part on the high cost of gasoline — mixed with smoke from brushfires and other airborne wastes in the stagnant air.

At midday, temperatures had reached 110 degrees in the desert and 89 degrees in downtown Los Angeles, where a brown, noxious pall hung over the area.

"If everything develops as we fear, we could pass yesterday's values," said Jim Birakos, a spokesperson for the Air Quality Management District, which has responsibility for air quality in a 6,400 square mile area. "It could not only be the worst pollution day of the year, but the worst of the 1970s."

Almost 2,800 businesses, industries and government agencies in the four-county area were ordered to begin anti-pollution measures. But spot checks for violations were to be conducted at only 400 to 500 sites because of inadequate staff.

Citizens to be polled on nuclear question

The Board of Water and Light will poll Lansing rate payers in an attempt to gather public input on the advisability of a possible nuclear buy-in.

An earlier request by the board to put the issue before the voters was rejected by the Lansing City Council last month.

A resolution passed at Tuesday's board meeting allows members to solicit bids from MSU and commercial polling operations to conduct the survey.

Persons in East Lansing, while users of the utility, would not be polled because they are technically not "owners" of the municipal power company.

The resolution called the City Council's decision to reject the advisory vote "unbelievable."

Board officials, who have warned of a possible electricity shortage in Lansing by 1984, have discussed the possibility of buying into either the Midland nuclear plant under construction by Consumers Power Co. or the Fermi II nuclear plant, a Detroit Edison facility under construction near Monroe.

Other options include buying into coal-fired plants of either company or expanding the board's own coal-fired Erickson plant in Delta Township.

Lansing City Council President Louis Adado said the board's request for an election had been denied because the public didn't have sufficient technical information to make an informed choice.

Council members had also feared that both pro- and anti-nuclear groups could have mounted "propaganda campaigns" to sway public opinion, Adado said.

Adado said he wouldn't consider the results of a poll to be a mandate to the board in making its decision.

"People take polls all the time," he said. "I would look at an election as a mandate, but a poll is something you just tie into a decision."

Boardmember Marvin Ray said the poll would serve as an advisory to the board, which legally must make the final decision.

"The poll might give a more balanced representation of opinion than we had during public hearings," he said. "I guess if the margin is overwhelming one way or the other, the advice will be taken."

Local drug arrests end four-month investigation

A four-month investigation into the trafficking of drugs in the Tri-County area has resulted in 36 arrest warrants issued by area prosecutors.

Tri-County Metro Narcotics Squad spokesperson Lt. Gene Wrigglesworth said 21 of the 36 people had been arrested by early Thursday morning.

The 36 persons named in the warrants were charged with 63 violations of the state's controlled substance act, he said. The charges were in connection with the delivery of heroin, cocaine, LSD, and valium, he said.

Many of the persons charged had extensive criminal records and had violated the controlled substance act in the past, he said.

Six persons were termed as "habitual criminals" by Ingham County Assistant Prosecutor Kim Eddie.

MSU Department of Public Safety officials, Lansing police, Michigan state police, and Eaton County, Ingham County, and Delhi Township authorities participated in the arrests, Wrigglesworth said.

Those arrested gave police authorities little trouble when taken into custody, he said.

Truck driver Billie Smith lost control of his vehicle at the intersection of I-69 and Abbott Road, Wednesday night. East Lansing firefighters washed away 100 gallons of diesel fuel which leaked from Smith's flatbed.

Rev. Jackson to speak Friday

The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson will lecture on "Celebrating the 25th Anniversary of Brown vs. Topeka Board of Education" Friday at 8 p.m. in the MSU Auditorium.

In the 1954 decision, the Supreme Court overturned the "separate but equal ruling" set in the 1896 Plessy vs. Ferguson case.

The 1896 decision allowed legal separation of facilities for blacks and whites.

Jackson is president of Operation PUSH, People United to Save Humanity, an organization he founded in 1972.

The primary purpose of PUSH is to help blacks get jobs, retain capital in the black community, and educate black consumers.

Jackson's appearance is part of the Unitarian Universalist assembly being held June 25 to June 30 at MSU. The event includes ministers and lay people from the United States, Mexico and Canada and examines current problems facing the church.

The assembly is being sponsored by the Unitarian Universalist Association, the MSU Committee on Church Related Programs and MSU's Lifelong Education Programs.

Sleep aids recalled, perhaps carcinogenic

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Staff Writer

Sleeping aids and other drugs containing methapyrilene are being recalled by drug manufacturers following a recommendation by the Food and Drug Administration.

The recommendation was spurred by tests conducted by the National Cancer Institute Clearing House which found methapyrilene — a substance used in all sleeping aid products — to be a cancer-causing agent in laboratory animals.

R. A. Korsakas, supervisory investigator for the FDA in Detroit, said the administration sent out notices to drug manufacturing firms nationwide on June 15, recommending a voluntary recall of all products containing methapyrilene.

But Korsakas said it was too early to tell if all drug manufacturers would cooperate with the FDA recommendation.

Although the FDA has no jurisdiction to compel compliance, failure to heed the recommendation would prompt further action by the FDA, Korsakas said.

If firms manufacturing products containing methapyrilene failed to recall them Korsakas said, FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy would initiate legal action against those companies.

"There are over 300 firms involved nationwide," he said. "The FDA contacted all firms to check on compliance and to our knowledge all firms are complying."

Patricia Catto, chief pharmacist at the MSU Clinical Center, said she received a notice from the Lilly-Dista Company of Indianapolis, Ind. saying that that company was recalling all of its products containing methapyrilene.

"This recall will extend to wholesale and retail distributors and pharmacies throughout the United States," the statement said.

Catto also urged the general public to take the necessary precautions.

"People should go through their medicine chests and check the label on anything they buy and look for the name in the formula," she said.

In addition to sleeping aids, numerous other drugs — both prescription and over the counter — contain methapyrilene and are affected by the recall, she said.

Although many Lansing area drugstores reported taking the products in question off their shelves, others said they have not yet received notices about the recall.

Tanker crash spills diesel fuel

A double-bottom tanker truck jackknifed at I-69 and Abbott Road Wednesday night, hitting a light post and spilling about 100 gallons of diesel fuel onto the streets.

East Lansing police said truck driver Billie Smith, 45, of Ortonville, had tried to avoid hitting another truck which had stopped in front of him.

The road was damp from a light rain which fell just prior to the accident, causing Smith's trailer to jackknife, police said. The truck swerved and severed a light post.

Smith suffered only minor injuries to his head and right shoulder, said police.

East Lansing Fire Department officials were called to flush the streets of the diesel fuel, authorities said.

When the fuel was hosed off the streets, it filtered into the sewer system, police said. Department of Natural Resources officials were notified of the tainted water.

The tractor of Smith's truck was extensively damaged, officials said. Smith was driving for Saunders Leasing Systems of Grand Rapids, police said.

Professor made center director

Warren I. Cohen, professor of history and an authority on United States-China relations, has been named director of the MSU Asian Studies Center.

Cohen, whose appointment is effective July 1, will replace William T. Ross, who is retiring after 17 years as director.

Cohen joined the MSU faculty in 1963 and is also director of the Michigan China Council. The council is one of 12 established throughout the United States to conduct adult education programs on Chinese affairs.

Cohen was a visiting professor of history at National Taiwan University from 1964 to 1966 and a Fulbright Lecturer on United States-East Asian relations in Tokyo, Japan from 1969 to 1970.

Cohen has written three books, "The American Revisionists," "America's Response to China" and "The Chinese Connection."

Urban Options slates workshop

Urban Options will conduct a solar greenhouse design workshop at the Energy House, 135 Linden St., Saturday at 9 a.m.

Principles of passive solar design will be taught, with special emphasis on how solar greenhouses can be effective heat producers in Michigan's northern climate.

Urban Options plans to construct a solar greenhouse on the Energy House with a $10,000 federal grant received from the Department of Energy.

The greenhouse will be built in July during public workshops designed to give participants experience they can use in building their own greenhouses.

The grant money was part of $1.3 million awarded to 63 individuals and groups through the 1978 Midwest Appropriate Technology Program.

The design for the energy house greenhouse will be used as a model for the discussion.

The film "Build Your Greenhouse Soar Style" will also be shown.

There is a $5 workshop fee for non-members.

East Grand River traffic-flow trouble will be studied if MSU gives consent

An East Grand River Avenue corridor study which would examine the traffic flow problem along the area's main thoroughfare needs MSU approval to get underway, a Tri-County Regional Planning official said Thursday.

The study was adopted at Wednesday's commission meeting, planner Leo Bagley said. A resolution to submit the program to various funding agencies, was also approved, he said.

The study, to be conducted by the Michigan Department of State Highways, would take two years and encompass the area from Haslett to Mt. Hope roads and U.S. 127 to Van Atta Road, Bagley said.

Funding for the study would come from the U.S. Department of Transportation, Bagley said.

All other jurisdictions which would be affected by the study — East Lansing, Lansing, Meridian Township, Ingham County Road Commission, Michigan Department of State Highways and Transportation and the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission — have passed resolutions asking the state highway department to make the study.

"We're just waiting for a resolution from the MSU Board of Trustees," Bagley said, adding the commission has been asking MSU officials for approval "for a year now."

Jack Breslin, MSU executive vice president, said he did not see any problem with the resolution, but said he could not speak for the board of trustees.

"The Tri-County Regional Planning Commission should send us the resolution," he said.

Bagley said the completed study, with proposed solutions to the Grand River Avenue problem, would be examined in public hearings held by the highway department.

He said an area air quality planning study will also begin this fall.

"We are over the legal smog limit and have received a two-year grant award from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency," Bagley said.

Senate Finance Committee OKs tax bill, may lead to hikes in underassessed areas

By United Press International

The Senate Finance Committee Thursday approved legislation requiring that tax assessments on all classes of property be set at 50 percent of true cash value.

The bill, sent to the full Senate on a 3-1 committee vote, could lead to property tax hikes in areas of the state where home-owners are underassessed at the expense of commercial and industrial property.

Wayne County and the city of Dearborn are most frequently cited as areas where assessments on industrial land have been increased in order to reduce assessments to homeowners.

The practice is allowed because all classes of property — agricultural, residential, industrial, and commercial — can be lumped together in meeting the requirement that assessments be placed at 50 percent of cash value.

Those classes would be equalized separately under the committee-approved bill. In other words, assessors could apply multiplying factors separately to property classes that are underassessed.

One of the state legislature's perennial issues, the measure has passed the House on several occasions in the past, only to die in the Senate. The most recent foe was former Sen. Patrick McCollough, D-Deerborn, who managed to tie the bill up in the finance committee last year.

Backers argue that the measure is designed only to make the state's property tax system work the way it was intended. In places where local assessors have been doing their jobs correctly, the bill will have no effect, they said.

Opponents, however, said that there is a basic inequity in the tax system that the bill will aggravate.

Assessments on residential and agricultural property, critics said, are determined by studying the skyrocketing real estate market, while commercial and industrial land is spared that upward pressure because it is assessed on a more stable income-based approach.

Sen. John Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, who voted against the bill in committee, said the ultimate effect will be increased property taxes on homes and farms.

Nothing in current law prohibits equalization by class, he said, and overassessed industries have a right of appeal.

"If Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn is assessed over 50 percent, and if they felt they were overtaxed all they had to do was go to the state tax tribunal," he said.

County attorney's opinion necessary to decide de-annexation ballot question

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Staff Writer

Whether the drive to sever MSU from East Lansing stands a chance of reaching the ballot before November — or at all — hinges in large part on an Ingham County attorney's opinion promised to be ready by July 11.

In a letter received at the Ingham County Board of Commissioners meeting Tuesday, Attorney Peter Cohl said he is in the process of checking the law regarding the proposed de-annexation.

"There are numerous legal issues which must be thoroughly researched," he said.

Legal issues include the number of signatures needed to get the issue on the ballot for a general election and the number of municipalities that must be considered in determining that number, the letter stated.

Sections of the Home Rule Cities Act "seem to indicate" that the populations of Meridian Township, Lansing Township and East Lansing should be included in computing the figure, Cohl wrote.

Statutory interpretation and the history of the land in question will be the basis of the answers to those issues, the letter said.

The County Affairs and Policy Committee will meet July 11 to consider Cohl's recommendations and those of the East Lansing and Ingham County clerks.

In other action, the board approved a resolution renewing a contract with MSU under which physicians from the MSU Department of Pediatrics provide services at the Child Health Clinic operated by the county Health Department in Lansing.

The board also passed a resolution approving a collective bargaining agreement between the 30th Judicial Circuit Court and the Ingham County Employees Association.

A controversy between the board and the circuit court judges earlier this month almost resulted in a strike by 500 county employees.

Since that time the board, the judges and the ICEA have all come to terms.

OPINION

Keep the power within the voters

Two Michigan state Senators have jumped on the MSU trustees' inept handling of the presidential selection by introducing legislation that would allow appointment of trustees for MSU, University of Michigan and Wayne State University by the governor. Sen. John Engler, R-Mt. Pleasant, and Sen. William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, authors of the bill, claim the non-partisan legislation would eliminate such unprofessional practices as a faulty presidential selection.

It appears that both legislators have based their need for such legislation totally on the lengthy selection process that occurred prior to Cecil Mackey's appointment as MSU president. Their bill may appear to be a quick solution to the problems caused by popular election of trustees, but unreasonably singles out and attacks the MSU trustees for a job not well done. The trustees' handling of the presidential selection indeed left much to be desired. Engler and Sederburg, however, intend to change the electoral process for other state funded schools as well, using the MSU trustees as scapegoat.

Some of Engler's and Sederburg's arguments deserve attention. Party politics do play a large role in determining how governing boards are currently selected at state conventions. Also, the public, while paying attention to candidates running for House, Senate or gubernatorial positions, are usually too uninformed about candidates running for university governing boards. Their selections are too often based on the reliable party line, rather than the merits of each candidate. It is distressing to note that voting by the public is done in such a blind manner. But Engler and Sederburg's bill would allow the appointing task to rest with the state, denying voters the opportunity to participate in a direct popular election.

We wonder if this is fair to other Michigan schools. Is there a need for trustee selection by the state at the University of Michigan or Wayne State? If so, the bill may deserve attention. However, the bill could merely be a hasty measure finding fault with the popular election of governing boards by pointing to one recent incident. We would rather see the voting power remain in the electorate's hands.

You've come a long way, Detroit

Although Detroit lost out as the site for the 1980 Democratic convention, the city, as well as Michigan, has a lot to be thankful for.

The millions of dollars poured into the Detroit Renaissance plan in hopes of building up the city and its floundering image paid off. Detroit was able to secure one of the 1980 conventions, and the fact the it was almost considered for both gatherings puts the city far above other sites that were in the running before Thursday's decision came.

It seems that the Democratic Site Selection Committee's final decision was based more on superstition than actual advantages. The site seekers felt that since New York was the sight of the Democrats' successful 1976 rearmament against the Republicans, it would be a good place to try again in 1980. Detroit's go-getters, meanwhile, still came close to convincing the committee that the city which will welcome the Republican Convention in 1980 could accommodate the Democrats too. The committee felt otherwise, so much that the final vote was not even close, with New York receiving 23 votes on the first ballot while Detroit commanded only three.

But Detroit's competitiveness while in the running is quite an achievement for a city that was terrorized by uncontrollable crime and youth gang activity only a few short years ago.

Conference may improve relations

Our compliments go to the MSU School of Journalism and the other sponsors of the Hispanic Media Conference held this week at MSU's Kellogg Center. The program, which was attended by national and local media representatives and members of the Hispanic community, gave each group the opportunity to express their views concerning American media coverage of Spanish-speaking peoples. We feel the conference was an important first step in improving relations between the influential media and an important segment of our population.

These persons attending the meeting were primarily interested in destroying the stereotypes held by each group. The Hispanics sought to clear up their long-established "bandito" image, while the media representatives spoke of their proper responsibility as modern-day opinion-makers.

A dominant problem cited by conference members was the lack of communication between the Latino community and the press. Similarly, the poor quality of information exchange was mentioned as needing improvement. Hopefully, both groups have benefited from the day-long conference.

It would be most unfortunate, though, if the gains made at the meeting were regarded as an adequate solution to this communication problem. More programs of this kind, perhaps on a larger scale, are needed to uphold the high level of awareness this issue deserves.

We are not calling, however, for special media treatment of this group. No group should receive more coverage than they deserve. But bilingual minorities such as the Hispanics need the same efficient channels of communication other groups already enjoy.

MSU, we feel, has a vital role in improving this situation. The College of Communication Arts and Sciences, which includes the School of Journalism and the advertising and telecommunications departments, should promote programs that encourage the participation of Spanish-speaking students. Few Hispanic students are now enrolled in these curricula.

The involvement of Hispanics in college-level communication programs would unquestionably upgrade the media's coverage of Hispanic concerns here in Michigan and elsewhere in the nation. This minority deserves the same educational opportunities that have been afforded to blacks in recent years.

We believe this call for increased Hispanic student programs is especially appropriate, considering the University's decision to build an expanded communication arts facility. It seems only fair that the College of Communication Arts and Sciences allocate a reasonable amount of funds for the betterment of Hispanic/media relations.

VIEWPOINT: NICARAGUA

Compassion is the prescription

By Shashikant Gupta

The cold-blooded murder of ABC's Bill Stewart was a truly abhorrent act. The State News editorial regarding this incident (June 22) was necessary — its readers need to be exposed to a sensible discussion of such episodes, however sad they may be. But I find the editorial seriously deficient in both sense and logic.

The writer concludes that this incident is symptomatic of the "horrors that have become an all too common occurrence in the unstable Third World." This conclusion is a rash generalization, and a sinister one at that. It is indicative of the contemptuous attitude of some Westerners towards poor countries. Before one can generalize the Stewart tragedy to all Third World countries, the following need to be considered.

The West is not totally blameless. After all, it was Nicaraguan National Guardsmen, bearing U.S.-made weapons, who executed Stewart in such a dastardly way.

Cold-blooded killings are not confined to the Third World countries. Examples of equally saddening killings unfortunately also abound in the West. The United States has had its share of senseless political and social murders.

Nicaragua is in the process of a violent transfer of power, and this seems to be symptomatic of those Third World countries in which America has played a political or military role. Vietnam, Iran, Pakistan and now Nicaragua have two things in common — U.S. involvement and a transfer of power characterized by violence. Right in the middle of the first three nations is India, which has studiously avoided U.S. domination. Interestingly enough, India got rid of its so-called dictator (Mrs. Gandhi) in an enviably peaceful way in 1975.

I was as shocked, saddened and humbled by Bill Stewart's death as was The State News writer. But I believe that the reaction to this incident should be channeled in a more constructive direction, rather than to a condemnation of all poor countries. Maybe it's time for us to persuade the U.S. government to end its support of dictatorships. Such an action will mitigate, though it may not eliminate, conditions in the poor countries which lead to political violence.

Compassion, not stereotyping and contempt is the prescription for these Third World countries. An honest appraisal of the roots of their problems is as desperately needed as it is scarce. The reason may be that these roots would reach so close to home.

VIEWPOINT: CONCERT REVIEW

Vasconcelo's artistry slighted

By KAZADI wa MUKUNA

Since my arrival at MSU in January of 1978, I have been impressed by the quality of reportage in The State News. You are to be congratulated for keeping the community informed on local, state, national and world events.

However, I was stunned by Dave DiMartino's review of the concert (May 24) in McDonell Kiva. The review in question appeared in the May 29 issue of The State News. Unfortunately, I must say, DiMartino did miss the "Pelerinage Musical," suggested by Nana de Vasconcelo and his group during the second half of the concert. It was obvious that with the change of musical instruments came also the change in music material and tonality depicting the musical culture from where the instrument derived. To refresh DiMartino's memory, the pattern of the musical journey started with African-derived musical instruments such as the Berimbau (musical bow), Sanza (thumb piano) and the seven-string harp with a gourd resonator, providing a tapestry of musical harmony and timbre upon which melodic motif and a tightly knitted rhythmic interpolation were expressed. This segment of the journey was smoothly followed by the introduction of percussive instruments imitating sounds from the Amazon forest. I must emphasize that Brazil is yet to produce a musician whose interpretation of sounds from the Amazon would excel that of Mr. Vasconcelo.

Continuing with our musical journey, the third scale was India, clearly suggested through raga rendered on the cithar and the use of tabla. What DiMartino called in his review of wooden flute belongs to the family of Chinese end-blowned airphone which in fact defined the route of the journey before coming to the United States with the trumpet and piano and retiring back to Brazil with the Berimbau.

It appeared to me that the critic was biased in his writing. The greatness of Glen Moore and David Darling, according to our music critic, seems to have been based on the artists' pasts and not on the concert in question. DiMartino proudly boasted of David Darling and Glen Moore's past affiliation with Paul Winter, but deliberately, or out of ignorance, did not mention the value of Vasconcelo's artistry. Among other accomplishments, Nana de Vasconcelo has to his credit LPs and a film entitled "Berimbau" which will be shown on this campus during the festival of Brazilian films.

DiMartino stated:

"There's room for every kind of music in jazz today, one supposes, even for a trio that sits around chanting and banging on things. There's a lot of things I'd rather have been doing Thursday night than watching three men repeating 'NAH-DHA-NAH-NAH'."

ad infinitum while the audience clapped wildly in appreciation. Hate to sound like an old fogie, but really, who's kidding who?"

I believe that the selection of words used in the quotation, for example, and the overall tone were in bad taste, disrespectful to the artist's work, and a false discredit to men of such artistic status. Such lack of knowledge about other musical cultures as voiced by your music critic is unforgivable and should not have been tolerated by the editor, whose responsibility resides in maintaining the standard of the quality of news printed in the organ of communication of MSU.

For his own cultural understanding and the future of his journalistic career as a music critic, I strongly recommend the course "Musical Cultures of the World" offered at the Department of Music at MSU.

Mukuna is an MSU assistant professor of music.

My budget can't stand the increase

My swim trunks have no pockets in them, even if they did, I wouldn't put the two-bit (and I do mean two-bit!) pool fee in them.

At times this esteemed University can get you where it really hurts — this is one of those. I survived a great deal of winter term secure in the knowledge that if summer arrived, I'd study poolside, placidly roasting into a deep, rich tan.

Obviously, I should not have been that secure: a 50-cent fee was slapped on the outdoor pool and my budget can't stand daily use of the pool. Perhaps the Scottish poet Robert Burns said it best when he wrote, "The best laid plans o' mice and men gang aft aglae." (Though I've never really cared about what went wrong for mice.)

This is just not fair! As a student, I've poured thousands into the health and welfare of MSU. I don't see why I can't have free and open access to the athletic facilities.

As for how much the University cares for student opinion, well this is just another indication. Not that much can or will be heard from summer's diminished student population — but then that's why tuition increases are invariably announced in summer.

Unfortunately, little can be done outside of boycotting the pool. I wouldn't ask that of any student braving the summer heat. If the heat starts melting my sanity, I'll go to the unofficial midnight swim and get a moon burn.

Rigorous exams protect citizenry

Compliments on your editorial of June 22 regarding the necessity of the Board of Law Examiners holding firmly to a reasonable competency level on the bar exam.

While a rigorous examination will not screen out the unscrupulous, it does serve to protect the citizenry from basic incompetence. Our regulating boards for all professional fields — medicine, public accountancy, architecture, engineering, to name a few — must continue to maintain standards that will help to assure competent professional services to the people of Michigan.

Bible's relevance still exists today

I marvel at the consistently shallow columns you write condemning religion. Surely it did not take much work to search through a book as old as the Bible and find customs and laws that sound silly by today's standards. This is especially true of the Old Testament with portions written over three thousand years ago. Yes, Bruce, even the Bible must sometimes be taken in context. Yet it is incredible how much of the Bible is still relevant today, helping millions of people live the abundant Christian life that was promised to us by Christ. It is too bad that you read your Bible solely to find ways to rebuke it. Otherwise you might not have missed these words, Christianity's personal answer to you:

"The man without the Spirit does not accept the things that come from the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him, and he cannot understand them." (1 Corinthians 2:14)

A bizarre theory

I write regarding the bizarre theory you express in the lead editorial of June 20. In that editorial, you write, "The trustees seem to have bided their time perfectly, rendering The State News helpless to adequately cover and report the appointment of Cecil Mackey." You further write that the timing of the board's decision "is too coincidental to be passed off as simple fate." We are to suppose, therefore, that the board delayed its decision and announcement because it feared the piercing investigative journalism of The State News.

If this is true, riddle me this: how could the board or anyone else fear a newspaper whose editors have time and again proved that they do not even understand the use of an apostrophe?

FDA reduces pesticide levels

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Thursday lowered the level of PCBs allowed in food because of suspicions the chemical causes cancer — a move that could cost commercial freshwater fishermen $6 million a year.

The FDA also asked the governors of 11 northern and midwestern states to warn consumers, especially pregnant and nursing women, not to eat privately caught fish with high levels of PCBs.

PCBs — polychlorinated biphenyls — are a widely used group of industrial compounds found in pesticides. During the past half century about 1.2 billion pounds were produced in the United States, of which 450 million pounds entered the environment.

Most of that is still intact in landfills, contaminated soils and bottom sediments of rivers, lakes and coastal waters. Environmentalists have estimated that half the U.S. population probably carries between 1 and 3 parts per million PCBs in the fatty tissues of their bodies.

The FDA ordered, effective Aug. 28, that fish, poultry or dairy products sold in interstate commerce — the only place the FDA has jurisdiction — must have lower levels of PCB than presently allowed.

Currently 5 parts per million of PCBs are permitted in fish and shellfish. The new level will be 2 ppm. The tolerance for milk and dairy products will be cut from 2.5 ppm to 1.5 ppm, in poultry from 5 ppm to 3 ppm, and in eggs from .5 ppm to .3 ppm.

"The highest levels of PCBs are concentrated in certain freshwater fish, such as coho and chinook salmon from the Great Lakes, freshwater trout and catfish," the FDA said.

"With few exceptions, saltwater species, which constitute most of the fish in the American diet, are rarely contaminated with PCBs."

The agency said it thinks "there could be a loss of about $6 million worth of fish a year" which will be banned from sale because they will contain higher levels of PCBs than the new rules allow.

Gas station pumps may become metric

By United Press International

With gasoline prices inching closer to the $1 mark, emergency rules were adopted by the Department of Agriculture Thursday to allow gas stations to price by the half-gallon.

The agriculture department, which enforces the state's weight and measurements law, approved the rules after premium no-lead topped $1 in some places. The majority of pumps in Michigan are incapable of computing a per gallon price higher than 99.9 cents.

It would be illegal for them to use the pumps when gasoline exceeds $1.

Under the emergency regulation, pumps will be allowed to compute the price based on the half-gallon price, provided certain information is placed on the pumps.

That means the price shown on the pump will be half the price which the customer will pay per gallon.

Agriculture Director Dean Pridgeon said customers who are uncertain about the procedure should ask for a written receipt from the attendant.

Pridgeon said the best statewide solution might be to convert all pumps to the unit volume "liter" system.

The price per whole gallon will be listed nearby.

PCB-tainted fish still a problem

By United Press International

Public health officials said Thursday the reduction of allowable levels of PCB in food will have no effect on the state's longstanding advisory against eating fish contaminated with the widely diffused chemical.

The statement from Public Health Director Maurice Reizen came in response to the Food and Drug Administration's reduction of tolerance levels of PCB in fish from 5 to 2 parts per million.

Since 1976, state health officials have cautioned Michigan residents about eating PCB-tainted fish. Those specific warnings will not change, at least immediately, despite evidence that PCB levels are declining in the Great Lakes.

Reizen said the health department has found no evidence to indicate a health or medical problem related to background levels of PCB in fish.

"Our department studies have included surveys of heavy eaters of fish containing PCB," he said.

However, the department is continuing its PCB surveys and could change its advisories when warranted.

The department advises against eating any fish caught in the south branch of the Shiawassee River, the Kalamazoo River from Kalamazoo to Saugatuck and Portage Creek in Kalamazoo County because of PCB.

Similar restrictions are applied to other streams in the state, but because of contamination by other chemicals.

The department also cautions against eating more than one fish meal per week of sport-caught fish in the Great Lakes because of PCB.

"We plan to continue our program as at present with fish and sports fishing locations."

You can deposit and withdraw funds anytime you wish. Every five-dollar share will earn dividends every day it remains on deposit — from the day it's deposited until the day it's withdrawn — as long as a minimum of $1,000 remains in your account.

We're able to offer this exciting new type of account as a result of the recent change from a state to a federal charter overwhelmingly approved by the membership.

The EVERYDAY ACCOUNT will be offered beginning June 1, 1979.

Robert Fripp speaks in Detroit

By DAVID MARTINO
State News Reviewer

Editor's Note: This was living rock legend Robert Fripp's only Michigan interview.

Robert Fripp is in his twelfth-floor room at Detroit's Pontchartrain Hotel, speaking with two curious — and late — interviewers who've just arrived. One of his hands holds a portable iron, the other smooths out the pair of trousers laid neatly across the hotel bed.

"When I do interviews and people show up on time," Fripp remarks, "I don't have the time to do this."

Soon after, Fripp sits down and explains why his only major performance in Detroit proper is taking place in scant hours at, of all places, a record store. He voices fears that the store may be larger than what he'd desired — and all this is coming from a fellow who's used to performing in crowded stadiums.

Robert Fripp, the interviewers soon decide, is an odd one.

An album entitled The Cheerful Insanity of Giles, Giles and Fripp was released in the fall of 1968 and went nowhere fast, thus providing guitarist Robert Fripp a simultaneous first-tasting of both success and obscurity. His next exposure, however, was considerably more grandiose. In a revamped grouping Fripp surfaced on one of the milestone albums of '60s rock — In the Court of the Crimson King — with one of the strangest and most influential bands England has ever produced. The band, of course, was King Crimson, and the music — well, it's still being played on the radio 10 years later. King Crimson was a major success story among the ranks of British bands; producing a series of inconsistent but never-less-than-astounding albums, the band became less a success story and more a way of life for its founder, Robert Fripp.

Now Robert Fripp is on his own. He's made friends with rock's elite, most notably Brian Eno, Robert Wyatt, David Bowie, Peter Dinklage and a host of others, several who appear on Exposure (Polydor PD-1-6201) and several who don't. He's received nothing but raves for his superb production work on the Rothes newest album, and he's played guitar behind Linda Ronstadt and Phoebe Snow on a recent Saturday Night Live segment. His talents are extended in all directions, and despite this odd habit of performing unannounced in strange record stores, Fripp's importance and influence are being felt more every day.

"I don't work rationally," Fripp tells the two reporters at the Pontchartrain. "I present my ideas rationally, because I find that, on the survival level, if one can articulate and seem to be sensible it's a lot safer than if you just come out with oddball ideas. And since I do come out with what people consider to be oddball ideas, ideas that only become sensible after the event, it's a survival matter. So I work intuitively and instinctively and then discover — by examining what I've done — just what it is I'm doing. And my instincts are pretty hot. I know what I'm doing is the right thing."

What exactly is it that Fripp is doing? To hear him tell it, he's taking his music to the people, to the street level. This current tour, he mentions, is costing his record company $25,000. Strictly a non-profit venture. He's doing it to give Exposure exposure, and, he says, he's doing it because it may be the last time he's allowed to do it. Allowed not so much by his record company as by what he views as a collapsing economic system in a swiftly-changing world. He hasn't brought a band with him for a number of reasons, he says, and among those reasons is the fact that he hasn't a quarter of a million dollars to lose.

"This seems to me to be a very good way of combining a number of different factors," Fripp says of his current low-key tour. "This seems to me to be the most human marketing campaign I know of. I simply go into the record shops, play to people and persuade them to buy my record. That seems a great idea to me."

Fripp's musical and political views have merged into one, he says, and even the most basic of musical questions asked of him are answered in political and philosophical terminology. This current tour and Exposure are all part of his comprehensive world view and his "drive to 1981" campaign, which he readily defines:

"The drive to 1981 is two things really, two levels. On one level it's a campaign in the marketplace — but not incorporating the values of the marketplace. In other words, it's not cynical. On another level, it's a way of promoting in an implicit fashion a number of ideas which are very close to my heart. I think they're very important."

"It doesn't seem to me that if I know more about the workings of the marketplace it makes me grubbier or nastier or a degraded human being. It enables me to do my job in a better fashion. I believe in the records I make, and I don't compromise my work with the records — but I don't have to go and sell them. Initially, almost everything I do doesn't have a format; consequently I have to get by an initial prejudice not only in the industry, but also in the media and in the public. Therefore, what I have to do is persuade people to listen to the record."

Fripp's comments are inevitably laced with interesting terminology, the most notable term being 'Frippertronic', what he uses in reference to his present-day playing approach. The current tour, he says, is his Frippertronics tour.

Frippertronic is a musical experience, resulting at the crossroads between Fripp, his guitar, the Fripperboard — which is 'Fripp pedal board' contracted from 'Frippdalboard' — two Revoxes and a public address system. It's a combination of intermediate and appropriate technology — to wit, Fripp.

"As a form of music you can divide it into two categories: pure and applied Frippertronics. Applied Frippertronics is an alternative to traditional orchestration or the use of synthesizers; pure Frippertronics — for example 'Water Music 2' or 'Urban Landscape' — divides into two categories. The first has an imperative for listening, a demand upon the ears which must be met. The other branch can be considered 'ambient', in Eno's sense of the word. I'm thinking here of my going and playing in restaurants, where the music is deliberately constructed not to interfere with the digestive processes of the people eating. I consider eating to be a fairly sacred activity, and I don't wish to intrude upon the digestion. I was eating at a restaurant in Paris, for example, where they played disco music. The bass drum disturbed my digestion on every one of its 126 beats-per-minute. I consider that a folly."

This whole concept of Fripp's playing in restaurants and record stores appears to tie in with his perception of his present role being that of the Troubadour. He is the musician, bringing the music to the people without need of a middleman. Almost without a middleman, that is. It all ties in with his view of the next five years. "At the moment, the dinosaurs have all the resources," Fripp says. "The small units have all the intelligence, and therefore a compromise is needed. I need Polydor's resources and they need my intelligence. But since dinosaurs by definition don't have intelligence, since by definition they're a doomed race, this liaison, this period of transition is very important to enable small units to become independent in the genuine federal sense."

"My picture of Europe — and America, though there's a different situation here because of the size involved — is that soon instead of London, Birmingham and Manchester being the centers of activity, it's more likely to be the small towns. Just as it was 500 years ago, each of them being marketplaces as it was back in Roman times, all within 10 miles of each other — where it would be quite possible to cycle between them, quite possible to go there by horse."

Fripp points to the current gasoline shortage as an indication of economic and social difficulties to come. Already things are changing, he says, already he's had to alter the usual patterns. He's flying from city to city on this tour, when clearly it would be less expensive to drive. Yet the chance that gasoline might be unavailable during the tour was sufficiently large that Polydor deemed it best that he fly. And this isn't in two or three years, Fripp emphasizes, this is now. In America.

Lifestyles will change, Fripp says, and thereupon comes his role of the Troubadour.

"Imagine the situation in 10 or 15 years where the Troubadour is the role one accepts as part of, if you like, one's sense of commitment to a large view of society. There are different approaches. In my hometown of Wimborne, I shall return as part of the second three-year campaign. The first three-year campaign, the drive to 1981, expires on September 11 concurrently with the second three-year period beginning, the decline to 1984. With the increasing geographic immobility at that point — difficulties in transport which will be substantially generated in the autumn of 1981 — I shall have to establish myself in a fixed geographical sense."

"This is when I'll pay more attention to establishing a guitar school and taking my part in the cultural life in Wimborne. Wimborne will have to accept its own responsibility for health, education, sewage disposal, garbage disposal, and a cultural and entertainment life as well. And it seems reasonable to me, in addition to participating with garbage disposal and the other things which will be an inevitable part of any community, to participate in the cultural life."

One of the reporters thinks through all Fripp's comments and brings up a question. — Why all this pre-planning? Why all this anticipation of the way things will be? Why schedule your life in three-year block intervals and then act accordingly when you might easily be killed in a car wreck on your way to Peaches later this afternoon? You, of all people, must put great value on spontaneity — what's the deal?

"Well," Fripp replies, "it's a situation of perceiving a number of different levels working simultaneously. Some situations are fixed, so you might as well accept them and learn to live within them. For example, at this moment I have no choice but to be here in this context because the tour's been set up in a certain kind of way."

"And," Fripp chides with a smile, "although you're late and might

Hoop, ice schedules out

By DAVE JANSSEN
State News Sports Writer

A season-opening clash with Athletes in Action at Jenison Fieldhouse and a trip to the Silverdome highlight the 1979-80 schedule for the defending national champion men's varsity basketball team while MSU hockey fans will have an opportunity to see the play of two East Coast teams at Munn Arena this season.

The basketball and hockey schedules, both just recently released, show a combined total of 30 home and 27 away contests and three tournaments.

The basketball slate shows 12 home and 11 away dates and a mid-December confrontation with University of Detroit at the Silverdome, that will feature the MSU vs. U-D women's game as the preliminary contest.

Coach Jud Heathcote's team will play in two tournaments this season after playing in only the Far West Classic last year. Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 the team will be in the Lapchick Tournament in New York and will be competing against St. John's, Oral Roberts and Princeton universities. Dec. 27 and 28, MSU will be in Las Vegas for the Holiday Classic that features Nevada-Las Vegas, Weber State and Loyola universities.

As usual, the cagers will play each of the Big Ten teams twice (once at home and once on the road.) Both the Indiana University game at Bloomington on Jan. 12 and the Northwestern University contest in East Lansing Feb. 23 will be regionally televised as the Big Ten Game of the Week.

MSU's hockey schedule for the 1979-80 season includes 18 home games, and 16 away contests. First-year coach Ron Mason's club will also compete in the Great Lakes Tournament once again, after a five-year absence from the prestigious event. Besides MSU, the tournament, which will be played at Detroit's Joe Louis Arena, will consist of University of Wisconsin, Michigan Tech and University of Michigan.

Walsch also pointed out that MSU will play teams from each of the college hockey conferences, the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC), Central Collegiate Hockey Association (CCHA) and Western Collegiate Hockey Association (WCHA).

Princeton and Boston College are members of the ECAC, and Western Michigan and Ferris State universities are members of the CCHA whereas MSU and the rest of its scheduled opponents belong to the WCHA.

Hubbard inks pact with NBA Pistons

PONTIAC (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons announced Thursday the signing of Phil Hubbard of the University of Michigan, their third first-round pick in the NBA draft, to a multi-year contract.

The 6-foot-8, 215-pound Hubbard had another year of college eligibility after missing the 1977-78 season with a knee injury, but decided to skip his senior year of competition to turn professional.

Hubbard, a native of Canton, Ohio, was a consensus All-America selection as a sophomore in 1976-77 and also was a member of the U.S. gold-medal winning Olympic team in 1976.

Hubbard averaged 19.6 points in his sophomore season at U-M but only 14.8 this past season as he slowly rounded into shape from his knee injury.

"Phil was the premier forward in the country three years ago, not just one of the best, the unanimous choice of the NBA coaches for their All-American team," said Pistons Coach Dick Vitale.

"I am really delighted to have him with us this year and I know he can make the transition from Big Ten center to NBA power forward," the Pistons coach said. "He's a great rebounder on either end and really gives us some depth at the forward spot and some maneuverability in terms of personnel."

Leinenkugel Open race on Saturday

Area runners can show their stuff against some competition Saturday in the fourth annual Leinenkugel Open road race.

The race, beginning at 10 a.m. at Okemos High School on Okemos Road, will cover 11.2

kilometers (seven miles) over paved roads and sidewalks.

What makes this race a bit different than regular road races is the award system. The order of finish within each division will determine the order in which the finishers pick their prizes from the prize table. Among the prizes being offered is a case of Leinenkugel Beer from Wisconsin. Since the entry fee is a prize contributed to the prize table or $2, there should be enough prizes for everyone.

Entry deadline is just one minute before the scheduled start of the race. In case of unusually warm weather, the race may be shortened to 6.4 kilometers (four miles).

Court to decide on voter issue

By United Press International

The Michigan Supreme Court said Thursday it will decide whether state voters may vote on a 30 percent increase in license plate fees and a two-cent hike in the gas tax.

The increased weight and gas taxes are on the list of complaints of independent truckers.

The high court said it will hear oral arguments July 17.

At issue is the legality of petitions demanding a public vote on increased license plate fees and gasoline taxes approved by the Legislature last year. Those hikes went into effect this year.

Revenues are to be used as the major funding source for a $168 million statewide transportation plan.

But a group called People Against Higher Taxes, spearheaded by Republican state Sens. Harry DeMaso of Battle Creek and John Welborn of Kalamazoo, gathered more than 340,000 signatures demanding a public referendum.

Advocates of the statewide transportation plan, including the County Road Association and the Michigan Road Builders Association, challenged the legality of the petitions.

In an effort to prevent a referendum, they filed suit to prevent the Board of State Canvassers from certifying the petitions and therefore giving the issues a spot on the 1980 ballot.

The road groups claim the bills which raised the taxes also appropriated funds. The Constitution stipulates that appropriations bills are not subject to popular votes.

Kelly tries to block ADC cut

By United Press International

Michigan Attorney General Frank J. Kelly Thursday filed suit against the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to block a proposed $831 million cut in federal funds for Medicaid and Aid to Dependent Children programs.

Kelly was joined in the suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, by Maryland Attorney General Stephen H. Sachs.

The suit stems from HEW's proposal to cut Michigan's funds by $54 million — or about 20 percent of the state's Medicaid and ADC budgets — and to reduce Maryland's federal welfare funds by $23 million.

Kelly filed the suit at the request of state Social Services Director John T. Dempsey, who said the proposed cutbacks would necessitate "drastic" cuts in Medicaid coverage and ADC grants.

HEW said it is making the reductions because of a congressional mandate to slash its expenditures by preventing waste, fraud and abuse. HEW proposed to reduce each state's quarterly grant award based on past alleged erroneous payments by the states in connection with their Medicaid and ADC programs.

The suit filed Thursday, however, claimed HEW's threatened action violates the Social Security Act and congressional intent, because it would reduce the assistance grants to which recipients are entitled and conflicts with federal regulations concerning reductions in federal financing participation due to assistance payment errors by the states.

Kelly said Michigan "has been in the forefront" of states working to eliminate fraud and should not be punished by HEW.

He said he has initiated criminal action against welfare recipients, doctors, dentists and others who illegally have received Medicaid and ADC funds.

not have arrived here — you might have been killed in a car crash ... Sorry, the interviewer immediately apologizes, sorry for bringing up the imagery.

"No, not at all," Fripp asides, "it gave me the opportunity to press my trousers. I'm grateful. No, that was my free choice — I could have gone to sleep, I could have wasted my energy waiting but I used it as an opportunity to do something else."

"A number of different levels go on simultaneously," Fripp continues without the slightest pause, "and part of any psychological discipline, I suppose, is to try and understand in a practical kind of way how that can be used. So, to use an analogy with music, the so-called classical composers in the classical period — Schubert, Haydn, Brahms — the musical forms that they worked within were considerably more limiting than those of writing a six-minute disco single. Their limitations were a lot more severe, but it didn't prevent them from coming up with something."

"Now some situations may be more fluid, and seemingly offer a greater opportunity for choice, but that's not necessarily so. There's always the possibility of choice even in a seemingly rigid situation. And although on the mechanical level of making plans for the future," he smiles, finally getting to the initial question, "yes, this all seems very well planned and documented — it breathes and lives and develops of its own. Every new plan for the future has been generated in part by something which has happened so far. One does have to make a decision to begin, and how you begin will determine, to a degree, the outcome. But if one can accurately predict what will happen, then, for me, it's not worth doing."

Fripp talks some more about the 'hazard' factor, about speaking to Eno over the phone just an hour ago, about the top of his head blowing off and a lot more. He tells the interviewers that the already-recorded collaboration with Daryl Hall has been officially scrapped by RCA and will never see the light of day. Not only that, he says. He's been told that the master tape for the album has been mysteriously removed from RCA's hallowed vaults. Nobody knows where it is, he says, or if they do they're not telling. "A very nasty, shabby, disgusting episode," Fripp calls it.

Soon it's time to leave. We take separate cars and arrive at Peaches, where a few dozen lucky people manage to hear two hours of Robert Fripp's superb guitar playing. The loyal audience of Fripp fans asks many questions, most of them dealing with Eno and/or King Crimson. Fripp is well-mannered, extremely courteous and quite insistent that he'll be happy to autograph any copies of his new LP that the audience would like to buy. Fripp — the Troubadour — is taking his music to the people.

Convention

New York got its majority of 23 votes on the first ballot, with Detroit getting only three and Philadelphia two. Dallas, which had been an initial bidder, had withdrawn before the voting.

The promise of 100,000 hotel rooms within walking distance of the convention site at Madison Square Garden made New York's bid virtually unbeatable, all parties conceded after the decision.

The convention will draw more than 5,000 delegates and alternates alone, plus up to 2,000 reporters, broadcasters, photographers and technicians to cover the event. In addition, the quadrennial political carnivals always attract untold thousands of interested onlookers.

Boy amused

Sammy's hospital bed was adorned with toys and puppets donated by well-wishers.

Nearly $1,300 in donations have been sent to the family since the accident, the boy's father said. All donations made to the family will be put in an educational fund for Sammy.

One real estate agent has even offered to let the family use a cottage for a week after Sammy is released.

"The response has been unbelievable," Gloria Perkins said. "I didn't know so many people really cared."

She said they explained to Sammy before surgery on Monday that the doctors were going to have to remove his feet.

"We asked him yesterday if he wanted to go outside and play, and he said, 'I can't because I don't have any feet,' — so he knows," Sammy's mother said.

A traction device with weights is attached to the boy's legs in position while they drain, said Ann Heglin, hospital public relations director.

Sammy is given a mild sedative to ease the pain, but does not appear to be uncomfortable, she said.

"I haven't seen him cry, but he does whimper occasionally when we change his bed," she said.

Heglin said additional surgery will be performed on Sammy sometime next week to close the wounds. He will probably remain at the hospital for a few more weeks, she said.

Perkins said he has been extremely happy with hospital officials and their treatment of Sammy.

"They have treated us like royalty and we love them for it," he said. "They have done everything they could for us."

Perkins said even with Sammy's accident, he and his wife feel they have been fortunate.

"We believe God does things that don't always appear to be good at first," he said, "but are for the best eventually."

The Perkins' other children, Lisa, 11; Nathan, 10; and Holly, 7, have been staying with their aunt for the past few days, he said.

Sammy's father had a final request to other parents: "Please make sure you know where your children are when farm equipment is operating nearby. You never know what might happen."

The parents thanked people for donations and suggested that those who wish to contribute money send it to the Crippled Children's Fund, the Edward W. Sparrow Hospital expansion fund, or to the family.

Berrigan

Over the past 25 years of Cold War, three popes and the Vatican Council "have cried out loud and clear against the arms race," Berrigan said.

"Yet no pope or council has been able to dissipate this insanity," he said.

"The sin is larceny of time, money and environment, which belong to the people of the world," he added.

Berrigan, who was sent to prison in 1970 after being convicted on charges of destroying Selective Service records in Catonsville, Md., urged his audience to actively protest the arms race.

Berrigan's appearance was part of the 18th annual Unitarian Universalist Association assembly being held at MSU. Ministers and lay people from the United States, Mexico and Canada are examining issues facing the church today.
