JULY 11, 1979

WEDNESDAY

It'll be hazy, lazy, cloudy and hot today. Mostly sunny skies will push the temperature to the high 80s.

Skylab's probable final orbit will pass over Michigan early this afternoon. The space agency narrowed the predicted time of its plunge to earth to a 12 1/2 hour period ending about 6 tonight.

Skylab due to fall today, world awaits splashdown

By Wire Services

WASHINGTON — Skylab's six-year career as an orbiting laboratory and then as a space derelict comes to a shattering end today, its remains destined to plunge nearly unobserved into the briny deep of the south Atlantic.

"We'd like to see those predictions stay," said Richard G. Smith, head of the Skylab Task Force as he talked about a final orbit that would take Skylab and its debris only over water.

Meanwhile, a Grand Rapids reporter who filed suit to force federal authorities to prevent Skylab from falling back to Earth asked a U.S. District Court judge Tuesday for an immediate hearing in the case.

Bob Hendryx of WGRD radio filed suit Monday seeking an order directing the National Aeronautics and Space Administration either to destroy Skylab or take other action to prevent the space station's return to Earth.

In Port Huron, a family-owned oil company offered 500 gallons of free gasoline to anyone bringing in an authentic chunk of Skylab found in St. Clair County. Charles Lawrence, a vice president of By-Lo Oil Co., said the offer is good at any of the five gas stations the company operates in the county.

The North American Air Defense Command, which tracks the 77-and-one-half ton hulk on its 16 daily trips around Earth, said Tuesday evening that Skylab will fall between 7:50 a.m. and 4:14 p.m. EDT.

Despite American preparations to cope with an embarrassing catastrophe anywhere in the world, the demise of Skylab promised to be a harmless event, a celestial shower over wide stretches of open sea.

Skylab, host to three crews of astronauts, was launched May 14, 1973. It's been a piece of junk on the sea of space since the last crew left Feb. 8, 1974. When it breaks up, it will have been made 34,981 orbits during its 2,249 days as a moon, travelling around 1 billion miles.

The latest forecast served to narrow the time frame for Skylab's final plunge, but left the midpoint — statistically, the most probable time — unchanged from 12:02 p.m. EDT.

If Skylab crashes at that time, it will

In the event MSU and the Lansing area are in Skylab's re-entry path, area public safety officials recommend people seek cover in tornado shelters.

Officials also suggest basements, interior corridors and small interior rooms without windows as suitable places to seek refuge.

People are advised to listen to radios and watch televisions for updates on the progress of the satellite's fall to earth.

MSU officials will activate the tornado signal if there is an indication that Skylab could fall nearby, said Safety Engineer Carl Eigenauer.

Lansing officials will sound the air raid siren 20 minutes prior to impact to warn people should Lansing be a target.

splash into the Atlantic near the Equator off Africa's Ivory Coast. Its debris would scatter from that point forward, the heaviest going all the way into the Indian Ocean.

The 8-hour, 24-minute prediction period embraces nearly six orbits, all of them passing over the United States at some point. On those six orbits, Skylab also will pass over South America, Africa and Australia, effectively eliminating the rest of the world from any danger of falling debris, Smith said.

If the midpoint orbit turns out to be the one in which Skylab falls, the space station would begin burning somewhere over the Pacific or the Northwest United States and Canada.

But it will be daylight in the Western Hemisphere and the flaming satellite will not be visible.

Smith said that if the predicted time frame is accurate the splashdown would be "at regular banking hours if we're lucky."

Twenty-four hours before the predicted splashdown time, Skylab was orbiting at 107 miles. That's a drop of more than 10 miles in 24 hours.

When Skylab hits the 100-mile point, the tube-shaped craft will begin to glow from the heat of re-entry. At about 70 miles it will begin to break apart.

Ten pieces each weighing more than a half ton are expected to be among the 500 pieces that survive the flaming re-entry.

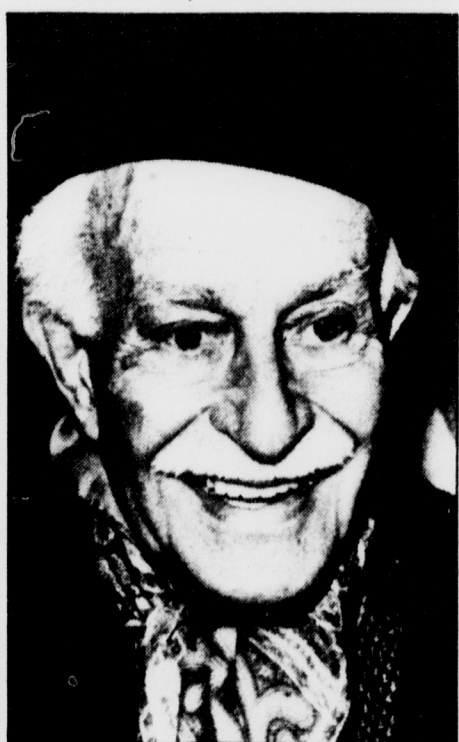

NASA has teams standing by to rush anywhere on the globe if there are reports of damage or injury, and the Federal Aviation Administration is prepared to warn airplanes out of Skylab's track in the last few hours.

Pops conductor Fiedler dies from heart attack; orchestra plans tribute

CARTER WON'T DEREGULATE GAS Price controls stay

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Carter has decided against lifting federal price controls on gasoline and feels it is too soon to consider using tax cuts to counter the anticipated recession, spokesman Jody Powell said Tuesday.

Carter and three Cabinet members met Tuesday at Camp David with business executives, union leaders, economists and investment bankers and discussed burgeoning inflation and the looming recession.

Afterwards, Powell, White House press secretary, told reporters Carter has made at least one decision during his week-long stay in the Maryland mountains: "The president has no intention to deregulate gasoline at this time."

In Kentucky Tuesday, the nation's governors, their thoughts dominated by the energy crisis, endorsed President Carter's windfall profits tax on oil companies and supported using part of the money to help the needy pay higher fuel bills.

Comparing the energy crisis to World War II, Gov. William Clements of Texas said, "We are in a crisis situation that exceeds Pearl Harbor."

Clements unsuccessfully urged his fellow governors to support a plowback plan that would require oil companies to use all new profits from the lifting of price controls on domestic oil to finance energy development and production.

But a majority of the governors backed Carter's position that some of the money should be used to help the poor and people on fixed incomes.

The debate on the windfall profits tax was the highlight of the closing session of the 71st meeting of the National Governors' Association held in Kentucky.

Powell said lifting federal controls on gasoline prices would do more to spur inflation, boost unemployment and damage the economy than almost anything Carter might do to deal with energy problems.

Lifting federal regulations on gasoline prices would "drain several tens of billions of dollars from the economy" and boost retail gasoline prices to between $1.10 and $1.50 per gallon, Powell said. He said every 10 cents per gallon increase in gasoline prices adds a half a percentage point to the inflation rate.

Earlier, an administration source had said the presidential staff was considering proposing that Carter remove controls on gasoline. The source said the plan would call for a tax on gasoline at the refineries, which would raise some $25 billion a year. He said the tax money would go to the Social Security System.

But Powell said the president reached a decision against gasoline deregulation "several days ago."

Powell also said there has been general agreement among those meeting with Carter at Camp David that it is too soon to consider federal actions to counter the expected downturn in the economy.

He said the administration would "need a better idea of the nature of the slowdown" before considering action to counter recession by such means as tax cuts. He said it could take several months before the nature of the economic downturn becomes clear.

Alfred Kahn, Carter's inflation adviser, told reporters Tuesday's three-hour session on the economy also touched on energy woes.

And he said the conferees discussed Carter's plight at a time of "people not believing their leaders, people thinking everything is the result of a conspiracy."

The presence of representatives of the financial community at the presidential retreat also suggested that finding money for a major alternative fuels program may have figured in the discussions.

With inflation exceeding 13 percent on an annual basis so far this year, and with a recession widely forecast, whatever decisions Carter makes following his dramatic domestic summit promise to have a major impact on presidential politics in the coming election year.

Douglas Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers and another summit participant, said that politically, the administration is "probably at the point of no return."

"The administration has to convey to the American people the problems confronting our society, and it has to be believable and it has to be acceptable," he said.

Walter Heller, a longtime chief economic adviser to presidents John F. Kennedy and

Vance: SALT II treaty necessary

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Senate rejection of the SALT II treaty would lead to "unlimited nuclear competition and a serious increase in U.S.-Soviet tensions," Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Tuesday.

He testified for the second consecutive day before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the treaty, which would limit long-range nuclear missiles and bombers through 1985.

Vance said it was impossible to predict with certainty what the Soviets might do in the event the treaty is rejected.

But, he added, "I see no reasonable basis for believing that if SALT II is not ratified, the Soviet Union will be induced to moderate its defense spending or become more cooperative in the Third World... In such an atmosphere, each crisis and confrontation could become more dangerous."

On the other hand, Vance said, "We do not suggest that SALT II by itself will carry us to a new world of prosperity and peace... Nor do we suggest that if SALT is not approved,

ATTORNEY SEEKS APPEAL

Judge nixes tow suit

By DENNIS PETROSKEY

State News Staff Writer

A class action suit demanding that MSU repay more than $140,000 in past towing charges dismissed in Ingham County Circuit Court will be appealed, said Lansing attorney Richard Kinkade.

The decision by Ingham County Circuit Judge Robert Holmes Bell to dismiss the suit "was not a surprise," Kinkade said.

An appeal will be filed after University attorney Byron Higgins submits a judgment conforming with Bell's opinion, Kinkade said.

Kinkade filed the suit in behalf of Karen Molony-Vierstra, 24, of 1302 University Village. The suit claimed the University had no right under state law to tow cars from restricted lots.

Bell said in an opinion sent to both attorneys last week, MSU has "adequate statutory and constitutional basis" for towing or removing vehicles improperly parked on University property.

The suit maintained that the MSU ordinance under which the cars were towed was not "in substantial conformity" with the Uniform Traffic Code as dictated by state law.

However, Bell wrote in his opinion, parking lots do not fall within the scope of the Uniform Traffic Code, which pertains to vehicle movement on streets and highways.

The judge also addressed the argument that the MSU ordinance allowing towing deprived persons of their Fourth and 14th amendment rights to due process of law. Due process does not apply to property when it is used in an "antisocial manner," so a hearing is not required prior to a vehicle being towed when unlawfully parked, Bell wrote.

Bell also maintained that the $5 portion of the $20 impoundment fee in excess of actual towing costs was "clearly revenue intended to cover necessary costs" of the impound lot.

The suit contended that the costs assessed against a violator should bear a direct relationship to the actual costs of towing.

A car belonging to Molony-Vierstra was towed at the request of the Department of Public Safety on Feb. 22 from behind the Plant Research Laboratory on Wilson Road.

The suit asked that towing fees be returned to more than 7,000 persons who had their cars towed under circumstances similar to those of Molony-Vierstra.

She was a supporter of the Student Coalition to Stop Unlawful Towing on Campus, an organization formed during spring term to protest the removal of cars from University parking lots. Kinkade was the coalition's unofficial legal advisor.

The debate over the legality of MSU's towing policy emerged after several persons were arrested while attempting to prevent cars from being towed.

Students in North Case Hall devised a "whistle system" to alert persons when tow trucks were in the area. After hearing the whistles, people from the residence hall would form a group in the parking lot to

Woman files suit claiming illegal strip

DETROIT (UPI) — A $1.6 million lawsuit has been filed by a woman arrested for driving with a suspended drivers license who claims police subjected her to a strip search and then kept her naked in a jail cell for five hours.

The woman's attorney, Michael Pianin, said his client is under psychiatric care as a result of the incident and asked that her name not be published.

Pianin acknowledged the amount of damages she is seeking is high — "almost as outrageous as what was done to her."

The suit, filed Monday in Wayne County Circuit Court on behalf of the Inkster woman and her husband, contends the woman was stopped in downtown Detroit for making an illegal right turn.

At the police station, the suit said, police discovered she was driving with a suspended license and then refused to let her call her husband to post $50 bond for her release.

The woman charges she was then taken to a small room where two matrons ordered her to remove her clothing for an extensive and unnecessary body search.

Then, the suit said, she got dressed but was taken to another floor at police headquarters where she was forcibly stripped and searched again.

After the second search, the woman "was then taken without her clothing and put in a jail cell by herself, with her clothes remaining on the floor just outside her reach beyond the bars of the prison cell," Pianin said.

HEW aid guidelines given standby status

By JEFF MINAHAN

State News Staff Writer

Between 500 and 1,000 MSU students who suddenly found themselves eligible for Basic Educational Opportunity Grants under new regulations have now been put on hold by the U.S. government.

Liberalized eligibility requirements announced June 22 by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will not go into effect because of a ruling by the U.S. General Accounting Office, said Henry Dykema, MSU director of financial aids.

The changes would have allowed 70,000 additional students nationwide to receive Basic Educational Opportunity Grants. Another 600,000 already receiving grants would have been eligible for increased awards.

The General Accounting Office informed HEW last Friday that amendments to the Middle Income Assistance Act allowing the changes could not go into effect until further technical amendments were adopted, Dykema said.

Until the amendments are passed, the original stricter requirements will be used to determine eligibility for basic grants, he said.

The amendments, called the Higher Education Technical Amendments of 1979, have been passed by the House Subcommittee on Post-secondary Education and the House Committee on Labor and Education. Floor debate in the full House on the technical amendments has not yet been scheduled.

In the Senate, the amendments have not yet received any consideration in committees or on the floor.

Between 500 and 1,000 MSU students who would have qualified for the grants under the new requirements are no longer eligible, Dykema said.

Many MSU students have already been notified that they would receive grants or increases and now must be informed of the change, he said.

Dykema said HEW acted on the assumption that Congress would pass the amendments. The General Accounting Office told HEW it could not do that, he said.

The technical amendments involve a broad range of educational programs, Dykema said. These include library assistance programs, construction of academic facilities and provisions on guaranteed student loan programs.

With the amendments awaiting scheduling in the House, and the Senate haggling over the SALT II treaty, it is uncertain when the issue will receive consideration in Congress, he said.

Dykema said he was confident the amendments would be approved, but was not sure it would be before fall term begins.

"Until then there is nothing we can do except go by the old formula," he said. The proposed changes would have altered the complex formulas used to determine an applicant's financial need.

Iranian military chief refuses dismissal order

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's tough military police chief, backed by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, stood firm Tuesday against a government dismissal order in a major test of strength for control of the armed forces.

Guarded by special black-clad security men and loyal members of his garrison, Brig. Gen. Seif Amir Rahimi insisted again to reporters that he would not follow an order to give up his command because the order had not come from Khomeini.

Defense Minister Taghi Riahi, who tried to remove the outspoken general from his post Monday night, admitted that "our strength is not even remotely equal" to that of Khomeini.

Riahi told The Associated Press: "Ayatollah Khomeini is above the government and the Ministry of National Defense." He said that if Khomeini was backing the general, "I am sure that he has his reasons for wanting Gen. Rahimi to remain the head of the military police."

Rahimi reported, meanwhile, that one of his special security guards, who he said were dispatched to him a few days ago by Khomeini, was shot and wounded Tuesday morning.

U.S. choppers ordered out of Costa Rica

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Costa Rica ordered the United States on Tuesday to withdraw two helicopters that have been on standby near the Nicaraguan border for possible evacuation of Americans from that war-ravaged country. It set a 24-hour deadline.

Two Air Force two-rotor CH-34 helicopters flew to an airport at Liberia, 10 miles from the frontier, Sunday as part of a contingency plan to remove Americans from Managua, Nicaragua, if their lives were endangered.

But the Costa Rican legislature declared the presence of the helicopters was an infringement on the country's sovereignty and on Monday night voted 29-20 to ask President Rodrigo Carazo to have the aircraft removed.

Public Security Minister Juan Jose Echeverria noted the helicopters were at Liberia "for humanitarian purposes" but added, "We must respect the decision of the legislative assembly."

'Tony Pro' sentenced to 20 years in prison

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — New Jersey Teamsters boss Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano was sentenced Tuesday to 20 years in prison and fined $20,000 for labor racketeering and conspiracy.

Provenzano, 61, a key figure in the investigation of the disappearance of ex-Teamsters boss James R. Hoffa, was former president and secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local 560 in Union City.

In imposing sentence, U.S. District Judge H. Curtis Meanor described Pro-venzano as a man "addicted to the abuse" of power.

Meanor sentenced Provenzano to two 20-year prison terms to be served concurrently with a four-year sentence from his conviction last year in a Teamsters fund loan kickback conspiracy.

Meanor said Provenzano continues to wield "undesirable" influence over the labor movement and is "immune to rehabilitation."

'Son of Sam' slashed in prison

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Confessed "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz, who terrorized New York City for more than a year, had his throat slashed by a fellow prison inmate Tuesday.

Officials said 50 to 60 stitches were needed to close the wound.

Berkowitz, who refused to identify his assailant, was in good condition at the Attica state prison infirmary.

Corrections services spokesperson Lou Ganim said the wound was in the left side and rear of Berkowitz's neck.

Ganim said Berkowitz, who confessed to killing six New York City residents and attacking seven others with a .44-caliber handgun between July 1976 and August 1977, was carrying hot water for about a dozen other prisoners when he was attacked at about 8:15 a.m.

Berkowitz, 26, works as a porter in the reception building, a special protective housing area.

A spokesperson for prison Superintendent Harold Smith said the warden would not comment on the incident or Berkowitz's recent activities as a prisoner.

Eastern pumps close over gas allocation

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Independent gasoline station dealers in Pennsylvania and Delaware, disgruntled over federal fuel allocations, voted Tuesday to shut off their pumps indefinitely at the close of business Thursday.

The executive board of the Pennsylvania-Delaware Service Station Dealers Association voted 86-1 for the strike, despite federal officials' efforts to avert the shutdown.

"We will not re-open again until the Department of Energy or the White House takes appropriate action to relieve our situation," association executive director Tom Anderson said Tuesday.

"They are driving us out of business — no ifs, ands or buts about it. We've got to take a stand," he said.

He predicted 95 percent of his 3,756 members would join the shutdown. The association represents less than 30 percent of the 13,000 gas stations in the two states.

"We have no idea how many will be going out," said Mark Khouse, spokesperson for Lt. Gov. William Scranton III.

Atlantic storm first with man's name — 'Bob'

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical storm Bob — the first Atlantic storm to carry a man's name — is likely to become a hurricane by the time it reaches the Louisiana coast Wednesday, the National Hurricane Center says.

But it won't be a major storm, forecasters say.

With 55 mph winds and a northbound pace of 10 to 15 mph, the season's third tropical storm was 360 miles south-southwest of New Orleans Tuesday afternoon, forecaster Gil Clark said.

He said Bob was expected to become a minimal hurricane, with 75 to 90 mph winds, coming ashore at mid-morning today.

"Present indications are that it can't get into any kind of major storm," Clark said. "But we think it probably will reach hurricane strength."

Gale warnings were posted from Vermilion Bay, La., to Biloxi, Miss. Small craft warnings were issued from Port Arthur, Texas, to Pensacola, Fla.

Although some Pacific storms carried male names in 1978, Bob is the first storm to bear a man's name in the Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico or Caribbean. Claudette, David, Elena and Frederic will be the names assigned to the next four Atlantic storms.

BEGIN, SADAT IN EGYPT

Mideast talks start

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin waded into a cheering and jostling crowd of Egyptians Tuesday, then held a first round of talks with President Anwar Sadat on Palestinian autonomy.

Begin and Sadat embraced upon meeting at the president's summer residence and chatted amiably about the spontaneous demonstration by thousands of afternoon shoppers who had mobbed Begin in downtown Alexandria.

"I saw the results of peace today," Begin told Sadat as they settled into garden chairs. "It was like when you were in Beersheba," he said, referring to the Israelis who lined the streets to cheer Sadat at their last meeting in May.

After sitting briefly for photographers, the two men went alone inside Sadat's "Mamoura" seaside rest house for less than an hour's talk. They then adjourned for an official dinner and were to resume talks today.

Earlier, after an emotional visit to the Prophet Elijah Synagogue, Begin ordered his motorcade to stop and surprised his nervous bodyguards by crossing the narrow street to shake hands with the crowd that had gathered opposite the synagogue.

The 66-year-old Begin was pushed and jostled by blue-helmeted Egyptian riot police and by Israeli security agents who surrounded him. But Begin beamed with pleasure as he grasped hands for a few seconds before his guards cleared a path back to his limousine.

Begin received a jolt on his arrival to the synagogue when a security car hit the official limousine from behind. Both cars were slightly damaged, but the prime minister was unhurt.

Neither Israeli nor Egyptian officials expected dramatic results from the two scheduled meetings of the leaders, but indicated the summit was to demonstrate slow but steady progress in peace negotiations and in the normalization of relations.

Life insurance 'poor investment'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The most commonly held life insurance policy is a bad buy from an investment standpoint, but most Americans don't know it, the Federal Trade Commission asserted Tuesday.

In a report culminating 2-and-one-half-years of study, and immediately raising the ire of the industry, the commission said these "whole-life" policies yield an average annual return of only 1.3 percent.

If they had yielded only 4 percent interest — a full percentage point below that paid on bank savings accounts — consumers would have had an additional $3.7 billion to show for their investments, the commission said.

The 1.3 percent estimate for the insurance industry compares to bank accounts that usually pay at least 5 percent interest and bonds that often yield 9 percent.

The FTC staff focused on the whole-life policy, which combines payments on death with savings the consumer can claim by surrendering the policy.

In revealing the commission staff findings to the Senate Commerce Committee, Michael Pertschuk, FTC chairperson, said few consumers know what the rate of return on their whole-life policies are.

"No other product in our economy that is purchased by so many people for so much money is bought with so little understanding of its actual or comparative value," he testified.

Planes collide in Windsor, five dead

WINDSOR, Ont. (UPI) — Two small planes collided in flight Tuesday over a heavily populated residential area near the Detroit River, exploding on impact and killing all five persons aboard.

Debris from the crash littered a three-block subdivision and police said it was a "miracle" there were no injuries to persons on the ground.

Two engines landed in the street at locations a block apart and one of the burning wings dropped on a garage — the only instance of property damage reported.

The planes — a twin-engine Cessna 310 en route from Grand Rapids, Mich., to City Airport in Detroit and a Cessna 150 two-seater bound from Windsor to Toronto — collided in flight at 9:45 a.m.

The American plane crashed in a field just east of a high-rise apartment complex and the wreckage burned for more than a half-hour. Hours later, the remains of the victims still had not been removed from the charred heap.

FBI report shows national crime rate heightened by 11%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's crime rate is soaring this year, with dramatic increases in murders, rapes and robberies across the country, the FBI reported Tuesday.

The FBI, which bases its statistics on reports from most local and state police agencies, said violent crime surged by 17 percent during the first three months of 1979 compared with the same period a year ago, and property crimes rose by 11 percent.

The overall increase in serious crime was 11 percent, with property crimes far outnumbering violent crimes.

The report prompted concern among federal officials and uncertainty as to the reasons for the sharp increase.

"There have been indications in recent quarters that the level of crime was rising, and this significant upswing is very disturbing," said Attorney General Griffin B. Bell. "The need for vigorous efforts at all levels of law enforcement to reduce the volume of crime, especially violent crime, is evident."

FBI spokesperson Homer Boynton said there were no clear-cut reasons to explain the increase. But he said weather conditions during the first three months of 1979 were considerably milder in many sections of the country than in the past two winters and that may account for some of the upswing.

"When the winter is very severe, crime goes down. This winter it wasn't," he said.

But Boynton said there were no clear-cut reasons to explain the increase. But he said weather conditions during the first three months of 1979 were considerably milder in many sections of the country than in the past two winters and that may account for some of the upswing.

But Boynton cautioned that other explanations may be just as plausible and may have contributed to the increase.

Pooh's Place offers child care at no charge for kids under six

By DEBBIE CREEMERS
State News Staff Writer

Ah, to be a kid again! Of course, with Pooh's Place right around the corner, area parents don't have it bad either.

Pooh's Place is a non-profit, drop-in center which provides free, short-term child care for children aged 1 month to 6 years.

The center, which opened June 12, holds three three-hour sessions a week at University Reformed Church, 4930 S. Hagadorn Road, and offers six free-of-charge visits per month.

Parents who want to bring their children in more often may do so in exchange for volunteer help in the center, or by bringing in suggested nutritional snack items for the children.

The church offers Pooh's Place staff the use of its facilities rent-free, but Kerry Olson, the center's coordinator, stressed the group is not a church-sponsored center.

"We're dependent upon private donations and volunteers," she said.

The center recently applied for a Comprehensive Employment Training Act grant to pay five staff salaries. Olson said she expects a decision on the grant from the Ingham County Board of Commissioners by late August.

The center is licensed to care for 43 children in three separate programs and staffs one volunteer to every two infants, one to four toddlers, and one to every six pre-schoolers.

"The number of children we can take depends on the number of volunteers we have," Olson said.

She said the center goes beyond the state's adult-child ratio requirement "because we want a more personalized program."

But the policy may pose future problems.

"We haven't had to turn anyone away yet," Olson said, "but also have not gone out of our way to attract publicity."

"We've taken it easy with the public relations."

It isn't easy to keep news of a free, quality child-care center from spreading fast. Olson said word-of-mouth may do the center in.

"Last Thursday we had 12 pre-schoolers, six infants and three toddlers," she explained. "It was kind of hectic but we handled the programs well — we can take up to 25 children with the number of

Former Star editor arraigned for drugs

Former Lansing Star newspaper editor Peter Travis was arraigned in Lansing Circuit Court Monday on a three-count grand jury indictment charging him with violations of narcotics laws.

Travis was arraigned in connection with an incident which took place in 1976, when eight ounces of cocaine were seized at the newspaper's office, Ingham County Assistant Prosecutor Kim Eddie said.

The indictments came as a result of testimony given to Circuit Court Judge Ray Hotchkiss during a one-man grand jury probe into county narcotics activity, Eddie said.

Travis was charged with conspiracy to deliver cocaine, delivery of cocaine, and possession with intent to deliver, Eddie said.

Travis was released on a $5,000 surety bond.

Arena study to proceed

By JAME KATES
State News Staff Writer

The proposed downtown Lansing exhibition hall-arena complex was given the "go-ahead" Monday night when the City Council approved a resolution authorizing further study into the project. The resolution authorizes the mayor's arena committee to examine the economic feasibility of a 125,000 square-foot exhibition hall and an 18,000-seat arena to be located east of the Grand River and north of Michigan Avenue.

Construction of the arena portion of the complex would be dependent on the city's ability to sell the Lansing Civic Center and a commitment from MSU to hold basketball games and other events downtown.

The arena committee's report to the council recommended that the complex be developed in stages — the first stage being construction of the exhibition hall only. The exhibition hall would be partially funded by an Urban Development Action Grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Councilmember-at-large Richard Baker asked Planning Director Alan Tubbs to make sure "we don't have a white elephant on our hands if the exhibition hall is built and the arena is not."

Joel Ferguson, chairperson of the mayor's arena committee, had earlier said that work on the exhibition hall would be started "with or without a commitment from MSU."

The only "no" vote on the resolution came from Councilmember-at-large James Blair, who argued that the proposed 125,000 square-foot exhibition hall, which includes 75,000 square feet of free-span space, was "selling the city short."

At least 130,000 square feet of free-span space, he argued, was necessary to make the exhibition hall a prime attraction in the Midwest convention marketplace. The arena committee's original resolution calling for 100,000 square feet of free-span space was scaled down to 75,000 because of an anticipated lack of funding.

Planning Director Tubbs assured the council that feasibility studies would encompass all suggested sizes for the exhibition hall and the final decision on the size of the facility "would be left up to you."

"We just want to get the facts in hand," Tubbs said.

The study, estimated to cost about $225,000, will be financed by local private sources.

Dayton Hudson still wants store

By R. W. ROBINSON
State News Staff Writer

Dayton Hudson Corporation officials showed off their newest store to the local media Tuesday and reiterated that the company is still interested in developing a mall east of the Lansing metropolitan area.

At a media tour of the corporation's new Lansing Mall store, Joseph L. Hudson, chairperson and chief executive officer, said the firm plans to build the center in the "not too distant future."

However, downtown Lansing has been ruled out as a possible site for a mall because it does not fit into the firm's market plan for the area, Hudson said.

Representatives from the Lansing Downtown Business Council and Lansing Planning Director Alan Tubbs made a promotional presentation to Dayton Hudson officials in Minneapolis April 25.

The Lansing Mall store is the company's 16th major department store in Michigan and northeastern Ohio. The 103,000 square-foot shopping facility on the west end of the mall will open July 26.

Merchandise will include men's, women's and children's fashions and accessories plus cosmetics and home furnishings.

The Lansing store will not have a furniture section or some of the other departments found in most of the company's stores.

Kenneth Gruber, general manager of the Lansing Hudson's, said the store's motto is "You never get a second chance to make a first good impression."

Peter Hutchinson, director of Dayton Hudson properties, said in (continued on page 8)

MSU can help Thuy's journey

The plight of the Indochinese may be incomprehensible to most Americans. Most of us have never sailed across hundreds of miles of open sea in search of freedom. Those that are faced with that task, however, remain faceless sufferers for whom the government does little.

One of those sufferers is Nouyen Van Thuy, a former MSU student currently stranded in Jakarta, Indonesia along with his family. A committee of MSU faculty members has been formed to help Thuy and his family return to America. We hope the University will respond to Thuy's needs, and facilitate the family's journey home.

The experiences Thuy has encountered since he witnessed the fall of Saigon over four years ago are similar to the countless refugee stories that have graced American newspapers and magazines in the past few months. Thuy, a native of South Vietnam, returned to his homeland, hoping to help plan a new university. Instead, he was imprisoned by the North Vietnamese when they overran Saigon in 1975. Not unlike many other refugees who lost their homes, Thuy and his family were sent adrift on the open seas to battle the elements of weather and the terror of sea piracy. Although Thuy and his family are currently stationed in Jakarta, they cannot stay indefinitely.

Thuy and his family, however, are luckier than most refugees. They have the support and concern of MSU, which can surely exercise its influence with the Indonesian government to provide a safe return for the group. MSU already has affiliation with Indonesia and its Jakarta International School, which is partially funded by MSU and staffed by MSU education majors and graduate students.

The University, while it can do little to solve the plight of the boat people, can see to it that everything possible is done to help Thuy's family reach safe ground.

Fines may deter housing violations

Last week the East Lansing City Council approved a newly-revised minimum fee schedule that assesses fines to negligent landlords for structural damages found in their units. The schedule substantially raises the amount of property violation fines.

The Housing and Community Development Commission recommended the new schedule in response to East Lansing's unresolved housing code violations problem. Landlords have been neglecting their properties for several years and then ignoring the improvement demands of city officials. The fact that East Lansing is a seller's market for property has not helped the situation.

The new schedule will alter the housing code fine system. When licensed area properties are inspected (which will supposedly be done yearly), any discovered violations will be reported to the East Lansing housing department. If the respective property owners fail to correct the situation within 90 days, they will be issued a non-compliance ticket and must appear in court. The new schedule may then be used by the judge to fine the property owner. It calls for a $100 penalty for major housing code violations and a $50 penalty for minor infractions. These fines are larger than those previously assessed.

We commend the City of East Lansing for its sincere attempt in relieving the undue problems experienced by many tenants when renting in the city. Also, we hope the courts will invoke the stiffer penalties. Surely they are aware that property owners have easily evaded housing code requirements in the past. Negligent landlords have taken advantage of renters, many of whom are students with neither the time or the knowledge to obtain the needed improvements.

We urge the 54-B District Court to approve the new schedule immediately. Student residents need the assurance and protection this plan will afford them.

Points legislation harsh and unfair

The Michigan Senate, in an attempt to shake up the public and convince them that the energy shortage is real, has created and approved legislation that would assess points to speeding drivers. The measure, if approved by the House, will give up to four points to drivers who exceed the both the 55-mph and pre-1974 speed limits. While the ends this proposal seeks to achieve are just, the means it seeks to utilize them are not. For several reasons, we feel this legislation is unfair and not in the state's best interest, unless imposed as an emergency measure by the governor.

Although we believe assessing points may curb speeding violations on Michigan's highways, we feel the Senate's bill is unduly harsh. The bill allows the state to penalize drivers for the smallest speed violation. Instituting the points system will make it easy for the state to rack up points against a driver who poses no real serious threats to the safety of others while on the highway.

Another relevant consideration is the proposed law's effect on insurance rates. Michigan drivers are now paying exorbitant rates for no-fault insurance; an increase in the number of penalized drivers will undoubtedly contribute to higher automobile premiums for all. And to equate punishment for speeding violations with punishment dealt for negligent driving, drunk driving and other serious offenses is absurd and unjust.

We agree, however, with the need for assessing points for speeding when and only when an energy shortage honestly requires them. Governor Milliken's recently-expanded powers that include the levying of points for speeding is a justified measure in an emergency. We do not feel though, that our present situation is of emergency proportions.

The Senate-passed measure calls for two points to be assessed to drivers who exceed the 55-mph speed limit by less than 10 mph. Currently, many Michigan motorists — if not all drivers in the state at some time or another — drive faster than the 55-mph speed limit. The enforcement problem this proposal would create if passed is overwhelming. The time and funds required to issue the points makes the proposal impractical.

VIEWPOINT: THE DRAFT

Capitol Hill supports draft revival

By STEVEN WACHSBERG

Recently ASMSU sent a delegation of three to Washington, D.C. to lobby against registration and the draft. Since we were there for a full week, we were able to obtain optimum exposure for the student viewpoint. So that we might have some influence on legislators from states other than Michigan, each school in the Big Ten was notified, and asked to send us letters of support. Those schools that did send us letters also had their delegations contacted. The point of this request was to show legislators from Michigan, as well as those from other states around the country, that students are very much concerned with the military-oriented mood that is sweeping the Capitol.

The reception we received from legislators while in Washington was indeed mixed. There does appear to be a great deal of support in the Legislature for a grandiose mobilization capability over and above what exists today. This is not to say however, that there is no support for us among the legislators. In the course of our endeavors we determined that three general attitudes prevailed.

There were those hard-core militarists such as Sen. Sam Nunn who publicly favor not only a renewal of registration, but a renewal of the draft as well. While this is not the prevalent attitude in Washington, many legislators feel it is our dutiful obligation to be forced to serve our country in this manner. While I for one would likely aid our country voluntarily in a time of national crisis, to be forced to do so in time of peace would, in my estimation, not only be distasteful but would also make it that much easier for us to become involved in another Vietnam.

This attitude of a renewal of the draft, especially in time of peace, they do feel we need to upgrade our mobilization capabilities. They generally feel our reserve forces are too few in number to maintain a major war of attrition with the Soviet Union. The fact of the matter is that renewed registration would have no effect on our reserves.

While we were in Washington, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown stated that a peacetime registration is not necessary to increase our mobilization capability. All that is needed, he stated, is to upgrade the selective service computer system. This alternative would cost less and take less time than registration for any mobilization of forces that may be necessary in a national emergency.

The general attitude in favor of registration is perhaps the most prevalent attitude on Capitol Hill. If both these legislators and those with a more hard-core point of view band together, registration could well become a reality.

Some of you may see no problem with registration, but many in Washington disagree. This brings to focus the third general attitude that many legislators maintain — that registration is merely the first necessary step toward a renewal of the draft.

Pro-registration arguments seem to negate a few simple facts that should surely be taken into account;

Currently we have over two million men in the all-volunteer force. In addition to our military capabilities, is this not enough to discourage the Soviets from instigating an armed conflict? If not, perhaps we should prepare every man, woman, and child for potential battle, for it would surely be unimaginable in scope.

Since the quantity of our reserve forces seems to be a worry among some, and indeed a prime pro-registration argument, consider the fact, as I stated earlier, that registration would not increase the size of our reserves. Also, those in the reserves receive no compensation or pay for their time. There is no incentive for joining the reserves, so how can one expect its ranks to be bulging?

Since this is, after all, a time of peace, talk of renewing registration with our forces already so sizable makes me wonder what our government leaders have in mind with respect to the future direction of this country.

What is needed is for you to write your senators and hometown representative. Tell them how you feel and how you wish them to vote. We have a concise fact-sheet available in Room 334 Student Services that may help you in your letters, or merely for your own information. If you don't know who your representative in Washington is, we can help you there too. Call us at 355-8266, if you have any questions.

VIEWPOINT: NICARAGUA

A client state is supplying Somoza with ammunition

By SAMI ESMAIL

The people of Nicaragua are today involved in a struggle to overthrow the fascist Somoza dictatorship, one that was imposed by none other than the United States.

Where the United States is officially stating that it has ceased all military aid to the Somoza regime, we witness a U.S. client state, Israel, supplying the bulk of arms and ammunition Somoza is using to prolong the existence of his repressive regime. This includes naval patrol boats, Sherman tanks, and various types of submachine guns including the Uzi. Were it not for this Israeli aid, many innocent lives could have been spared, and Somoza's regime would have long ago collapsed.

This criminal act by Israel against the people of Nicaragua in particular, and the people of Latin America in general, provides still further evidence concerning the racist, militaristic, and imperialistic nature of Israel. Israel also supplies arms to the fascist regime in Chile, the racist regimes of South Africa and Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. (Most recently the Israelis have supplied the Zimbabwe-Rhodesians with 12 U.S.-made helicopters to be used against Black African freedom fighters.) This is not to mention the attempted genocide being carried out by the Israeli military machine against the Palestinian and Lebanese people.

What is very interesting is that the State Department, along with the U.S. media corporations, seem to have deliberately avoided mention or criticism of Israel on this matter. Rather, they have been busy trying to find traces of Cuban involvement, and unsuccessfully.

We can do something to help the people of Nicaragua during this crucial stage of their struggle for freedom. Israel literally survives on the taxes of the American people, which amounts to around $80 a year per family of four. In addition, donations to Israel through American Zionist Organizations are tax exempt. These donations amount to hundreds of millions of dollars each year. It is imperative that we re-examine this country's existing relations with Israel.

Esmail is a graduate student in electrical engineering

Lansing needs another Amtrak

It seems to me that it is about time we had another passenger train serving Lansing and MSU. Another passenger train at different hours really would be convenient to have. We at least could have a choice of travel times which is not the case now. Since the "Blue Water" goes west to Chicago in the a.m. and east to Port Huron in the p.m., the second train should probably go east to Port Huron in the a.m. and west to Chicago in the p.m. This would give a p.m. and a.m. departure in either direction.

Also, since the Detroit to Chicago route, which serves Ann Arbor and U-M, has a passenger train called the "Wolverine," I think that a second train on the route through Lansing should be called the "Spartan." This would be very appropriate and fitting since Lansing is probably the biggest producer of passengers on this route.

Speaking of passengers, you only need to view the crowd at the Lansing Amtrak station when the "Blue Water" arrives to see that a second train really would be a very good idea.

Repeal the law if it isn't working

I'm one of the many sore losers since the drinking age was raised to 21 last November.

Your editorial on the progress of the new law provided me some solace over temporarily lost (legally anyway) drinking privileges, but your comments did not reach a logical conclusion.

If the law hasn't met its goal of delivering young Michigan adults from demon rum until they have God-given maturity at 21, then what good is it? The new law certainly hasn't curtailed drinking near as I can tell; it's just an unwanted inconvenience.

If the drinking age law has only caused more problems, isn't it a bad law? Problems like legal drinking in area parks, enforcement (I would sure hate to enforce the drinking age in a district that voted 74 percent against), and the fact that alcohol problems still persist (especially among Michigan's older adults) are not worth the space presently taken up by the drinking age law in Michigan's Constitution.

If the new law is indeed a bad law, then one must take the only rational and responsible course of action available in a democratic society (which fortunately includes Michigan) — REPEAL THE DAMN LAW!

BILL CONFORMS WITH DEMOCRATIC GUIDELINES*Senate committee sets primary rules

By United Press International

A Senate committee Tuesday approved legislation that might salvage Michigan's endangered presidential primary by requiring voters to declare themselves Republicans, Democrats or independents.

Michigan's primary currently does not conform to national Democratic party rules because it is "open." Voters need not declare party preferences and may "cross over" — that is, Democrats may vote in the GOP primary and vice versa.

The national Democratic party has ordered Michigan to close the primary to guarantee that only Democrats decide how the state's convention delegates will vote next summer in New York.

State Party Chairperson Morley Winograd said the Senate bill, approved on a 4-0 vote of the Municipalities and Elections Committee, conforms with the national Democratic party's rules.

It is not certain, however, whether the bill meets Gov. William G. Milliken's demands. The governor said he will veto any legislation that disenfranchises the state's independent voters or forces them to declare a party affiliation.

Here is how the complicated Senate bill works: A section will appear at the top of the ballot entitled "National Convention Delegates" and a section on the bottom will read "Advisory Preference."

Each voter will be asked by a poll worker in which primary he or she wishes to vote. Voters may choose Democrat or Republican or declare themselves independents or members of a minor party.

Only citizens who declare themselves Democrats or Republicans will be allowed to vote on the top half of the ballot. Those votes will be used by the parties to allocate their national convention delegates to presidential candidates.

Poll workers will keep a tally of how many persons pick the Republican and Democratic parties but they may not keep an official listing of how individual citizens vote.

If a voter refuses to tell poll workers in which primary he will vote, or if he declares himself an independent or aligns with a minor party, the voting machine will be locked in a way that will allow him to vote only on the lower section of the ballot reading "Advisory Preference."

The votes of independents voting in the Democratic column of the advisory preference section will not count toward the selection of convention delegates.

But the votes of independents who vote in the Republican column of the advisory preference section will count, since the national Republican party does not discriminate against states with open primaries.

Tisch supporters to try for tax cut in November

By United Press International

Undaunted by their failure at the polls last November, proponents of the Tisch Tax Cut Amendment say they'll try again to cut property assessments in half and give voters renewed control over their taxes.

The Tisch Tax Cut Coalition, led by Shiawassee County

Drain Commissioner Robert Tisch, said Monday it has all but finalized plans to conduct another petition drive for lower taxes.

The group, which collected an astounding 364,000 signatures in 10 weeks last year, said it hoped to gather 1 million signatures to get the new proposal on the 1980 ballot.

Tisch supporters blamed last year's defeat of the amendment on a well-heeled "slick advertising barrage of distorted half-truths."

Subject to final approval by the coalition members, the new version will be even tougher than the Tisch Tax Cut Amendment, which would have cut property taxes by about 50 percent.

It retains the property tax provision, but also focuses on other taxes.

The new proposal would limit the annual increase on property taxes to 2.5 percent, abolish the State Tax Commission, limit school millage elections to one a year and require that schools receive all profits of the state lottery.

U.K. black film to be tonight

A documentary film about blacks in Great Britain will be shown tonight at 8 in 105 S. Kedzie Hall.

"Blacks Britannica" is the first film in which black Britons describe the forms of racism and oppression they have been subjected to all their lives.

The film's producer, David Koff, of WGBH in Boston, said the documentary "reflects the increasingly militant response within the black community to the continuing attacks upon it, both by the fascist elements on the streets, and by the state itself."

The film is sponsored by the MSU African Studies Center and is open to the public.

Volunteers wanted for cable TV board

Interested in the opportunity to develop quality local television programming?

The Meridian Township Cable Commission needs volunteers to serve on a public access programming subcommittee.

The panel will assist the commission in developing local programming to be aired on the township's public access television channel.

Public access programming may include public affairs, art, sports, drama, music, education or any topic of interest in the community, said Erling Jorgensen, chairperson of the commission.

"We know there are a lot of bright and creative people in the township who might be interested in TV programming," Jorgensen said, "and I'm sure their talent and energy could help the Cable Commission develop the kind of public access programming that would serve our community well."

Meridian Township residents interested in serving on the subcommittee should send a letter stating their background and interests to Jorgensen at 5100 Marsh Road, Okemos, Mich. 48864. Jorgensen said he would like to appoint residents to the subcommittee in August or September. He urged those interested in serving to apply for appointment as soon as possible.

De-annex bid to be examined

Whether the drive to sever MSU from East Lansing makes it to the ballot depends largely on an Ingham County attorney's opinion to be presented tonight to a committee of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners.

Attorney Peter Cohl will present his opinion on the legal issues surrounding the de-annexation petition at a meeting of the County Affairs and Policy Committee at 7:30 in the Courthouse in Mason.

The committee will make a recommendation to the Board of Commissioners regarding validation of the petition based on Cohl's opinion, Ingham County Clerk Lingg Brewer said.

If the petition is validated by the board, Brewer said he would meet with the Election Schedules Committee to set a date for an election.

Brewer said if he was asked for an opinion, he would recommend that the petition be placed on the regular November ballot instead of setting a special election. The cost of a special election in East Lansing would be upwards of $10,000, he said.

Ice cream social offers bit of old-fashioned fun

The fifth annual community ice cream social will be held tonight at 6:30 on the Orchard Street Pump House green.

Homemade ice cream, children's theater and a concert by the East Lansing Community Band will highlight the evening's activities.

Participants are urged to bring a large, homemade dessert to share.

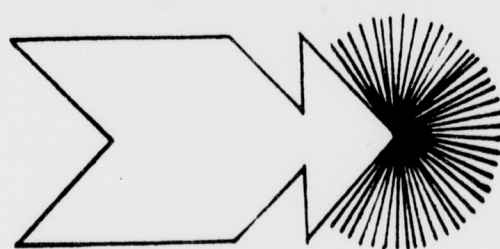

People may also bring a picnic supper to eat on the green, and are encouraged to walk or ride their bikes to the festivities if possible.

The event is sponsored by the Bailey Community Association in an effort to promote and raise funds for the renovation of the depression-era Pump House, located at 368 Orchard St. in East Lansing.

Although the Pump House is a city-owned facility, Bailey community residents use donations to provide for the upkeep of the Pump House as a neighborhood center.

In a related event, the "ELPD Blues," East Lansing Police band, will stage a free concert at 8 p.m. at the recreation center at Valley Court Park.

The public is invited to attend both events.

Don Quixote rides again

By ROSANNE SINGER
State News Reviewer

Men of illusion and lunatics are one and the same, according to the award-winning Broadway musical, MAN OF LA MANCHA, which features the most famous man of illusion, Don Quixote. In his quest to "add some measure of grace to the world" Quixote espouses belief that "too much sanity may be madness."

This musical by Dale Wasserman, Mitch Leigh and Joe Darion opens when 16th century author Miquel de Cervantes is thrown into prison during the Spanish Inquisition. To save his manuscript about the idealistic knight Don Quixote from his fellow prisoners, Cervantes enacts his story with the prisoners assuming various roles.

The BoarsHead Theater production of MAN OF LA MANCHA does not enchant or convey with any conviction Quixote's impossible dream. Richard Thomsen does not bring nobility or heartfelt belief to the demanding role of Quixote in such a low-key, uninspired manner that the audience is not drawn in. Thomsen expresses little delight in the transition whereas Cervantes is a master of make-believe and would come alive at the opportunity to perform. Cervantes so identifies with his fictional character that he would bring devotion and energy to the recreation which Thomsen does not. When Thomsen sings he seems to concentrate too heavily upon getting through the number rather than conveying the song's meaning.

Mary Martello as Aldonza/Dulcinea possesses a clear, controlled singing voice which, perhaps due to sound difficulties, comes across inconsistently. In the reprise of "Dulcinea" she sings with a heart-breaking, beautifully controlled quality, however, "Aldonza" lacks power and clarity. Her transformation from the hardened, mocking Aldonza to the radiant Dulcinea lacks some force because Martello's initial bitterness is not impressive enough. She speaks with an unpleasant edge to her voice, but the underlying unhappiness is not evident enough.

Bill Koza is a physically perfect Sancho Panza with an expressive face. However, he does not make the most of this attribute and plays the role too subtly. Koza's rhythm does not substantially differ from Thomsen's, detracting from Sancho's humorous traits. Like Thomsen, Koza's voice has a strained quality that is occasionally distracting. His number "I Really Like Him", however, has charm and humor.

Richard Servis is weak in the role of the Padre and has difficulty projecting vocally, particularly in the number, "To Each His Dulcinea." His voice has a pleasing, warm tone but lacks force.

Of the muleteers only Mike Stewart as Pedro projects any sensuality and overtly threatening quality. The others look and act boyishly which is inappropriate in the setting.

F. Thom Spadaro makes an excellent appearance as the barber, imbuing the part with spirit and concentration. He and Carol Reich work effectively and humorously together in their eastern scene as they hoodwink Quixote.

The show's chorus looks conspicuously uniform with all members being young and physically not differentiated enough. An Inquisition dungeon should contain more of a cross-section of society, and the sameness here is particularly jarring and uninteresting to watch.

MAN OF LA MANCHA continues through Sunday July 22 at the BoarsHead summer theater in Fitzgerald Park in Grand Ledge. Showtimes Wednesday through Saturday are at 8:30 p.m. and the Sunday performances begin at 7 p.m.

Richard Thomsen in the dual role of Miquel de Cervantes/Don Quixote attempts to dream the impossible dream and searches for the nobility that all men possess in the BoarsHead Summer Theater production of Man Of La Mancha.

Gazzara excellent in character study

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

Director Peter Bogdanovich appears to be finally curbing his annoying penchant for intentionally imitating his most beloved cinematic stylists. His new film, an adaptation of Paul Theroux' novel Saint Jack (New World; at the Meridian Eight Theaters) is offbeat, often fascinating and, most of all, original. This atmospheric, well acted little movie owes little to the canons of Hawks, Ford, Lubitsch or anyone else. It is, for once, Bogdanovich's own picture, and worth seeing.

Ben Gazzara gives one of his best film performances as Jack Flowers, an American drifter who has washed up in Singapore at the start of the '70s. Jack's Singapore is a hotbed of imaginable vice, and teems with refugees, thugs and derelicts of every race and nationality. The town also enjoys a constant — and abundant — influx of U.S. dollars and American military personnel, owing to its inviting but secure proximity to the Vietnam war zone. Jack, a charming guy of loose but definite moral fiber, wants his piece of the pie. Jack is a pimp.

"People make love for lots of reasons," Jack declares. "Why shouldn't money be one of them?" Indeed, in a city where people are bought and sold daily, Jack's sin — of simply renting them out — seems small in contrast. His women are loyal, well paid and apparently happy; his customers, satisfied. Jack is liked and respected all over the city. He's content in his field. He provides a service.

Through Gazzara's warm and tremendously charismatic portrayal, Jack is an admirable if nervy fellow. He obviously cares about people, and procuring is one way for him to both achieve success and circulate among his friends and acquaintances with aplomb. Jack's tough, certainly — ready to defend himself and his name, and prepared to try to stand up against the pressure from local mobsters — is, at heart, a pragmatic, compassionate man. He's seen enough of life in Singapore and elsewhere to

IM sponsors ultimate tourney

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer
Ultimate frisbee players, get out your frisbee and sharpen up for the Intramural department's ultimate frisbee tournament. The tournament, a one-day affair, will be played on Saturday, July 14.

Cheryl Gibbard, a member of the IM staff and the coordinator of the tournament, got the idea for the tournament because of the popularity of frisbee.

"Frisbee is a growing idea on college campuses," she explained. "You take a walk across campus and you can see everyone playing frisbee." Gibbard continued, "it is a big thing now."

Ultimate frisbee itself is a very simple game. It is like football with strains of basketball. The object of the game is to score by passing the frisbee to a teammate in the end zone. A team may only advance the frisbee by passing it. No player may walk, run or take steps while in possession of the frisbee and the frisbee may not be handed from one player to his or her teammate.

Gibbard said that one of the reasons that the IM opted for an ultimate frisbee tournament was because it involves total recreation. "Most other things offered by the Intramural department are competitive and have fees to play them and have awards. Ultimate frisbee is informal and basically a social type thing."

As Gibbard said, there will be no charge to play in the tournament and it will be open to all students, faculty, staff, and their spouses. Seven players will be on a team and teams may be co-rec or all single-sex. The games will consist of two 15 minute halves and the tournament will start at 10 a.m. Saturday on the Demonstration Hall Field. In case of rain the tourney will be moved back to Sunday.

This is an excellent opportunity for those interested in learning ultimate frisbee. Members of the MSU frisbee team will be on hand to help out.

Interested individuals and teams can sign up in either the IM Sports-West or IM Sports-Circle offices or call in their entires at 355-5250.

IM NOTES

The deadline for the student, faculty and staff intramural 18 hole golf tournament is noon today. For further information contact the IM office, 201 IM Sports-West, 355-5250.

Vance requests SALT ratification

we could not survive. We could."

Vance said the ratification of the treaty was essential to further progress on a number of arms control issues, including a comprehensive nuclear test ban, force reductions in Europe, banning anti-satellite weapons and restraints on conventional arms transfers.

He said he had modest hopes that ratification of the treaty would encourage the Soviets to adopt policies of restraint in other areas. But he said he could not be certain they would not devote more resources to conventional arms if strategic spending was effectively limited by the treaty.

Vance said he felt the Soviets had four basic interests in SALT: a general desire to avert nuclear war; a more stable relationship with the United States; a symbolic equality with the United States; a need to divert economic resources from military spending to domestic needs.

volunteers we have now."

Olson said the center hopes to hold parent workshops and circulate a newsletter in the fall, but added the center will concentrate on building a solid corps of volunteers first.

Volunteer training sessions will be held next week with child care provided. An orientation and play workshop will be held July 18 from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. A training session on guiding young children will take place July 19 from 10 a.m. to noon.

Olson said she feels the program is unique because there are not many area programs for toddlers and infants.

"We provide parents with respite without cost," she said. "Many of our volunteers are studying child development or education, others are parents who just want to get their children into group settings — some neighborhoods don't have an abundance of playmates."

Pooh's Place is open from 9 a.m. to noon and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Tuesdays, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. every Thursday. A coffee hour for parents is provided during the last hour of each session.

Olson also has office hours from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 Thursdays.

a telephone interview, he did not know definitely when the company plans to build a mall or on which specific site.

"In the east metropolitan area you are going to see a Hudson's sooner or later," he said. "Mr. Hudson wants to see a store there."

The company has recently been in contact with township officials in the greater Lansing area, Hutchinson said.

Hudson would make no comment on what the company plans to do with the 200 acres the corporation owns at the corner of Lake Lansing Road and U.S. 127.

The firm had proposed building a mall on the land, but the residents of East Lansing voted it down in an advisory election in November.

Hutchinson said the company learned from past experience in trying to get a mall in the area that "it needs the right plan and the right place."

Arthur Fiedler, Pops conductor, dead at age 84

public podium. Friends said he was beginning to realize he never again would conduct the orchestra that had become his life.

Fiedler was found dead at about 7 a.m. Tuesday on the floor of his Brookline bedroom by his wife, Ellen Bottomley Fiedler.

Harry Ellis Dickson, Fiedler's assistant for 25 years, quoted Ellen Fiedler as saying, "What a relief for Arthur" after the maestro's death.

"I can't imagine the Pops without him," said Dickson.

The world of music mourned Fiedler, who was one of the first conductors to play the music of the Beatles in a symphony hall.

"Arthur Fiedler was a tremendous force in making millions love music," fellow conductor Andre Kostelanetz said. "He was heard and seen probably by more people than any other conductor."

Word of Fiedler's death came from his personal physician, Dr. Samuel Proger of Tufts New England Medical Center, who said the maestro died of cardiac arrest.

An orchestra spokesperson said burial would be private, with a memorial service to be scheduled.

The tributes to Fiedler came from figures in Boston's cultural and political life, as well as from around the nation.

"Arthur Fiedler was a Boston institution, a man whose nerve and talent transcended generations," said Boston Mayor Kevin H. White.

This year, for the first time, Fiedler was not on hand to hear the applause of 50,000 music lovers assembled at the concert shell he had helped build on the Charles.

Fiedler recalled he conducted his first such concert on July 4, 1929, before 5,000, "mostly rubbernecks." Up to 400,000 jammed the river bank for the 1975, 1976 and 1977 Independence Day concerts.

Probably the biggest audience of his career was on the night of the Bicentennial Fourth of July. He led violins, horns, a row of cannons and the bells of a nearby church in a rousing version of the "1812 Overture."

Over the course of 50 years, Fiedler molded the Pops into a Boston institution that lovingly fed classical music to people who swore they did not like classical music.

For 10 weeks each spring, he channeled the sometimes forbidding virtuosity of Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians into the musical tastes of the man on the street. For most people, he was the Pops.

Strip search

"Those matrons putting her clothing just beyond her reach is one of the most frightening things I ever heard," the attorney said. "She kept trying to reach them with the matrons taunting her that she couldn't get to them. She injured the muscles in her arm trying to get her clothes."

Another prisoner in the cell block eventually called the woman's husband and she was released in his custody some six hours after her arrest, Pianin said.

The attorney said his client was so upset she could not provide detailed descriptions of the matrons who searched her.

'Saint Jack'

know the score.

Gazzara's ballsy, witty, weary and extremely realistic performance is almost the whole movie, here — the screenplay, by Howard Sackler, Theroux and Bogdanovich, doesn't translate enough of the author's unique narrative style into cinematic terms to make Jack's story really add up. Denholm Elliott is very effective as a slowly dying accountant befriended by Jack, and Bogdanovich, who hasn't acted in one of his own films since Targets, is remarkably good as an American gangster who has some shady deals for Jack. Bogdanovich and cameraman Robby Muller (who shot Wim Wenders' The American Friend) give Jack's tawdry, decadent milieu a luminous and curiously enticing feel. It's a character study, well and vividly made.

Judge nixes towing suit

prevent wreckers from towing cars.

Following several confrontations with Department of Public Safety officials, students met with police and legal advisers to establish the legality of the University towing policy.

Phil Dean, chairperson of the Lansing American Civil Liberties Union, said at the time the best way to determine the legality of MSU towing regulations would be to file a suit and let the judge decide its constitutionality.

No gas-price decontrol

Lyndon B. Johnson, said of Carter and the Camp David consultations, "He's very much involved in this process. It's not a window-dressing operation."

Kahn had no word on when Carter will unveil the new energy and economic programs that have kept him cloistered at his retreat in Maryland's Catocin Mountains for the past week.

Among those who met with Carter, Kahn and others was Vermont Gov. Richard Snelling, a Republican, who was invited after he appeared on national television criticizing the president for not conferring with more Republican state executives.

The initial announcement of the president's marathon consultations, which will continue today, hinted at a followup period of deliberation that could delay the unveiling of any new programs at least until the weekend.

Public hearing on zoning plan

A public hearing on advisory reports for the new Comprehensive Plan will be held at an East Lansing Planning Commission meeting at 7:30 tonight.

The hearing to gain feedback on the commercial, energy, housing, environmental quality, and public facilities and services portions of the plans, will take place in 54-B District Court, 301 M.A.C. Ave.

Lawrence Kestenbaum, chairperson of the Housing Advisory Committee, called his committee's plan a "carefully worked out compromise."

"Taken as a whole, it will be acceptable to many," he predicted. One problem which the committee addressed was the lack of construction of student housing. Almost no student housing has been built in the past ten years, Kestenbaum said.

The committee recommended changing zoning provisions to allow for the development of residential space in business structures, and higher density levels in some apartments in the City Center commercial and residential neighborhood zones to encourage construction of housing closer to campus.

Kestenbaum said the advisory committee plans, which have been developed over the past year and a half, are much more flexible than a comprehensive plan adopted in 1967.

"That plan was too specific, and ran into problems early on," Kestenbaum said. "There was no public participation when it was drawn up, and because it made a lot of assumptions which didn't happen and was essentially unmodifiable, it was unofficially put on the shelf."

The new plans have options for potential changes, he said.

Kestenbaum called the commercial plan "ambitious," and said the commercial advisory report was likely to run into opposition over its claim to many unsettled boundaries for the business district.

FIRST BREWERY OUTSIDE COLORADO

Virginia site for Coors

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Adolph Coors Co. has gotten the green light for a $500 million brewery in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley, and an attorney for the firm said Tuesday that construction could begin as early as 1982.

Henry C. Clark, a Harrisonburg lawyer who represents Coors, said the Golden, Colo., brewer regards Rockingham County as "unquestionably" the primary site for its first beer-making expansion outside Colorado.

On Monday night, Rockingham County's Board of Supervisors voted 4-1 to approve the rezoning of 236 acres of farmland near Elkton, in the eastern part of the county, as a possible brewery site.

The Coors initiative has been a controversial matter here since the company's plans became public in January. An unprecedented public hearing in the Courthouse Square in May attracted some 1,500 people.

Much of the opposition came from organized religious forces which object to the consumption of alcohol. Some opponents also said they feared the brewery would contribute to pollution in the scenic region and cause a flood of outsiders to move into the area.

Apparently under pressure from well-organized and vocal anti-Coors forces, the county Planning Commission last month recommended that the necessary rezoning be denied.

But the supervisors ignored that recommendation, as predicted, and even replaced a non-voting supervisor with a pro-Coors man to make sure the rezoning would be approved.

Clark said Coors soon will begin a program of environmental tests to determine the feasibility of applying for state and federal air quality permits.

The testing, he said, should take about four months, giving Coors executives plenty of time to reach a decision on making an initial $100 million investment.

Coors holds options on about 1,900 acres of land bordered by Norfolk & Western Railway tracks and U.S. 340 — options that expire Dec. 31, Clark said.

Coors also is considering another possible site for the brewery — in Anson County, N.C.

Rockingham County Supervisor William Sipe owns the 236-acre parcel that constitutes the heart of the proposed Coors complex, which would include the brewery, bottle and can manufacturing plants, recycling facilities and water and sewage treatment plants.

Sipe was barred from voting on the rezoning under conflict-of-interest regulations, raising the possibility of a tie vote that would have shelved the request for a year.

But last week, Sipe resigned, and on Friday the board appointed pro-Coors insurance agent Norman Workman to fill his spot on the board.

Workman said he studied the issue over the weekend. And at the crowded meeting Monday night, he said he was ready to vote.

Opponents of the brewery said, however, they hadn't given up the fight against its location in Rockingham County.

Scholarships created in memory of MSU graduates killed in crash

By MICHELE McELMURRY
State News Staff Writer

Two scholarship funds, to be used as grants for MSU students, have been established in memory of two former MSU graduates killed in the May 25 DC-10 plane crash at Chicago's O'Hare Airport.

Friends of Douglas L. Ruble and Marcia E. Platt have established the scholarship funds.

The Douglas L. Ruble Science Fiction Scholarship will be used to encourage promising science fiction writers, said Alan P. Suits, president of Suits News Co.

The Marcia E. Platt Scholarship will be used to support creative writing students, he said.

Ruble and Platt were killed in the American Airlines crash Memorial Weekend while en route to the American Booksellers' Association Convention in Los Angeles.

Ruble, chief book buyer for Suits News, was a 1971 fine arts graduate of MSU.

Platt, assistant book buyer for Suits News, received her bachelor of arts degree from MSU and was planning to begin graduate work in creative writing this fall, Suits said.

About $4,000 in contributions have already been made to the scholarship funds, he said. They are hoping to raise about $20,000.

Contributions will be divided equally between the two scholarships, Suits said, unless the donor indicates which scholarship he prefers the contribution to go for.

Contributions for grants to higher education are tax deductible.

Both memorial scholarships are to be administered by the MSU English department.

Checks should be made payable to MSU and mailed to Suits News Co., c/o Alan P. Suits, President, 5601 Enterprise, Lansing, Mich. 48910.

A separate memorial fund has also been established by the family and friends of John Robison, the owner of Jocundry's Books, 210 M.A.C. Ave., and his two assistants, Gail Dhariwal and Margaret Stacks.

The three were also victims of the Memorial Day plane crash. Madra Robison, the widow of Douglas Ruble, who is working on the memorial fund, said they are uncertain at this time what the contributions will be used for.

Cheerleaders' threat changes porn ads

Representatives of 19 adult theaters in Michigan agreed to modify advertisements of a controversial pornographic movie Tuesday in federal District Court in Detroit.

A spokesperson for Cinema X in Lansing said the theaters were being sued by the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders for improperly using the cheerleaders' trademarks in the movie "Debbie Does Dallas."

The attorney representing the cheerleaders, Ted T. Amsden, said Judge Robert De Mascio made no comment on the case.

Amsden would not comment on the possibility of further action against the theaters.

E. L. tenants group to train volunteers

The Tenants Resource Center in East Lansing will hold an eight-hour training session this weekend for volunteer housing counselors.

The training will take place in two sessions: Friday from 6:30 to 10 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Both sessions will be held at TRC, 835 Grove St. Michael Jusick, training director, said volunteers would learn how to aid tenants and landlords with housing problems such as security deposits, maintenance and leasing.

Volunteers will be requested to work for TRC at least one term, for two hours a week.

There is no charge for the training session. Volunteers are asked to pick up a packet of materials at TRC prior to the session.
