Union allows GM workers to walk out

By Wire Services

The United Auto Workers union authorized on Tuesday strikes at seven General Motors Corp. plants that could begin Aug. 30.

About 31,000 workers would be involved.

Union sources said the strikes would be part of the UAW's tactic of "mini-strikes" to put pressure on the company in negotiations for a local contract at the new GM assembly plant in Oklahoma City.

The union also told GM that none of the seven plants have enough workers to meet production standards.

"In each case it involves production standards issues," a UAW spokesperson said.

DISPUTES OVER PRODUCTION standards ordinarily involve the pace of production in relation to the number of workers — what the union calls a speedup.

The Oklahoma City plant, still without a local contract after the UAW's organizing victory in July, makes the popular front-wheel drive compact models. Some of the target plants supply key components for those models.

GM's supply of those fuel-efficient cars on Aug. 1 ranged from 11 days to 22 days, depending on the model. Those were among the slimmest inventories in an industry. Auto companies like to keep a 60-day supply of everything on hand.

The UAW is also bargaining for a new national contract to replace one expiring Sept. 14.

UAW asks for energy campaign

By JAMES V. HIGGINS

UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT — In what it calls an historic and unprecedented labor protest, the United Auto Workers Union will ask its 1.5 million members today to halt work briefly and campaign for a national energy policy.

The goal will be to send 6 million post cards to President Carter and each worker's congressional representatives in support of UAW energy goals — including formation of a government oil-producing corporation.

"The workers will lay down their tools and pick up their pens," UAW President Douglas Fraser said Tuesday. "It will be a disciplined, symbolic demonstration."

Union officials want workers to shut down assembly lines and other production facilities, sign four cards and perhaps pencil a personal note, and return to work immediately — stalling production for about six minutes or less.

LOCAL UNIONS WILL have the option of scheduling times for the protest.

The "Big Three" auto companies — who employ about 750,000 UAW members — say they will consider work stoppages a contract violation. Many of those joining in the protest could be docked in pay.

A union spokesperson said some smaller companies have agreed to give workers time to sign the cards, which will be distributed and collected by local union officials and hand-delivered next month in Washington when Congress reconvenes.

"We view it as a job security issue and certainly it is unprecedented and it is something that many of the companies that (continued on page 9)

East Lansing incorporates EDC

By DEBBIE CREEMERS

State News Staff Writer

East Lansing now has an Economic Development Corp. and 10 directors to govern it.

Council members unanimously approved an application to incorporate an EDC for the city from developer David Krause, appraiser Donald V. Whipp Jr. and Patricia Widmayer, 826 Sunset Lane, at a special public hearing on the proposal Monday.

The 10 appointed to the EDC's Board of Directors are:

- Mayor George L. Griffiths, Councilmember Larry Owen, former Councilmember Carolyn Stell and Gary Murphy, 4350 Arbor St., Okemos, who will serve six-year terms;
- Kenneth Ayotte, 1025 Shelter Lane, Lansing, who will serve a five-year term;
- Tom Carroll, 1852 Burrwood Circle, assistant director of the MSU Computer Lab and associate professor of social science research who will serve on the board four years;

• MSU Criminal Justice Professor Zolton Ferency, whose appointment lasts three years;

- Charles Rose, 4601 Turner Road, who will serve a two-year appointment;
- Ben Fedewa, 811 Oak St. and John Barnes, 1471 Donerail Place, Okemos, who will serve one-year appointments.

The EDC will help finance Krause's proposed $10 million Citgo block development and future building projects through the sale of tax-exempt, low-interest revenue bonds.

The eight-story Citgo complex unveiled by the city Aug. 2 would be built at the northeast corner of M.A.C. Avenue and Albert Street. The development would combine four stories of housing for 150 persons, three floors of commercial and office space and a 300-car parking structure.

City Attorney Dennis McGinty stressed the city will exercise approval and supervisory control over future projects the EDC may want to assist.

McGinty said the tax-free interest on the bonds would make them more marketable. "They're solely revenue bonds — the city has no liability for them," he added.

Krause and City Planner Jim Van Ravensway said the Citgo plan was presented to Housing and Urban Development officials in Detroit last week.

East Lansing must submit final application for an Urban Development Action Grant by Oct. 31. Krause said an application for eligibility determination has already been unofficially approved, by HUD.

Under the new HUD program, local communities can receive help for the development of downtown areas as long as private investment tops federal grant funding by a five- or six-to-one ratio.

Krause said HUD officials were enthusiastic about the project, but Van Ravensway said East Lansing will compete for the money with other cities across the country.

Mackey selects new assistant to act as minority affairs liaison

By DENNIS PETROSKEY

State News Staff Writer

MSU President Cecil Mackey has appointed Leslie B. Rout Jr. to serve as faculty intern and special assistant to the president to provide input on minority faculty and student affairs during fall term.

Currently a professor of history at MSU, Rout, 42, will also serve as a liaison between the administration and the various minority groups on campus.

"I want him to sit in on staff meetings and provide a faculty and minority perspective to the matters being considered," Mackey said.

Mackey said he decided to seek a representative for minority and faculty groups after observing the University programs during the past few months.

"After reviewing the situation and hearing the concerns expressed by the trustees in this area, I felt something should be done quickly," he said.

MACKEY SAID HE discussed the creation of the position with Provost Clarence L. Winder and asked him to recommend good, quality faculty members who were in touch with students, faculty and minorities.

Mackey said he is not certain how much time Rout will be able to devote to his position as assistant to the president because of research and other professional activities in which he is involved.

Rout said he will continue to teach as well as serve in the Office (continued on page 9)

Mideast developments provoke transatlantic debates

Israeli diplomat nixes proposal

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Carter may seek a delay in voting on the explosive Palestinian issue by the U.N. Security Council rather than risk a rift with Egypt and Israel, diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

Carter's senior advisers forwarded their undisclosed recommendation for dealing with the matter to the president, who is vacationing on a Mississippi River Steamboat after a meeting in the White House.

The recommendation was kept under wraps, pending a decision from Carter by Thursday when debate is scheduled to start in the council.

But three qualified sources, asking not to be identified, said the course probably recommended to the president is that he order the U.S. delegation to work for a postponement until mid-September.

"Among the range of options, postponement is far and away the most likely one," one U.S. official said.

BY MID-SEPTEMBER, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will have met in Haifa, Israel, with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

And Robert Strauss, the special U.S. envoy for the Middle East, will have completed a post-Labor Day trip to the region.

The initial U.S. approach to the debate was to promote a resolution supporting Palestinian "rights" but without defining them or declaring for statehood.

However, Strauss found out in his recent talks with Begin and Sadat that both leaders opposed any such move. Both were said to be convinced that the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks could be hampered by a row over the Palestinian issue.

Although he was unable to gain support for a U.S. resolution, Strauss found that the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks held out more hope for progress than he had anticipated.

Whatever course he chooses, Carter is faced with a dilemma.

Carter may delay U. N. voting

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS — Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum rejected a suggestion Tuesday from a U.S. civil rights group that Israel open negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

He told reporters the PLO is dedicated to Israel's destruction and "because of that the PLO will under no circumstances be a negotiating partner" for Israel.

Blum had met for two hours with 14 members of the Southern Christian Leadership Council. The Georgia-based civil rights organization opened its own Middle East peace initiative this week after America's U.N. Ambassador, Andrew Young, resigned under pressure because of a meeting he held with the PLO's U.N. observer. Young is a former SCLC executive.

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery, SCLC president, and his group met Monday with the PLO observer, Zehdi Labib Terzi, and expressed support for "the human rights of all Palestinians," including a Palestinian homeland, while urging that the PLO recognize "the nationhood of Israel."

A meeting also was scheduled for Tuesday between the SCLC and leaders of New York's Jewish community to be followed by a rally of black organizations at a New York City Church.

BLUM SUGGESTED AT his news conference in the Israeli U.N. mission that the SCLC leaders were naive. "They are less knowledgeable than the parties involved in the Middle East," he said. Referring to Lowery's call Monday for "reconciliation" between Israel and the PLO, Blum said, "Yesterday's statement by Mr. Lowery reflects a misconception on his part of the PLO's true nature," and such a misconception "could discourage the ongoing peace process."

Blum, upholding Israel's refusal to have any dealings with the PLO, said, "We have nothing to negotiate with the PLO except our own demise . . . and this is something we refuse to do."

Rabbi approves land division

By ARTHUR MAX

Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — One of Israel's two chief rabbis has ruled that Jewish law permits the government to relinquish part of the biblical Holy Land to Arab rule if it will prevent war, and the ruling has touched off a fierce debate with his counterpart. But what happens to the West Bank will be decided by political figures, not in a religious tug of war.

For many of the 700,000 religious Jews of Israel who conduct their lives according to ancient Jewish law or Halacha, the judgment by Chief Rabbi Ovadia Yosef to give up some of the Holy Land has all the weight of a pontifical encyclical to Roman Catholics.

Yosef leads Sephardic Jews, who descend from medieval Spanish Jewry. But his interpretation conflicts with that of Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren, spiritual leader of the Ashkenazi community, descendants of Central and Eastern European Jews of the Middle Ages.

Whether it is permissible under Halacha to return the occupied West Bank of Jordan intrigues rabbinical scholars, but no rabbinical decision is binding on the government even though Halacha is an official element in Israeli jurisprudence.

LIKE THE U.S. Constitution, Jewish law is open to conflicting interpretations. Unlike the U.S. Constitution, no single authority like the U.S. Supreme court can impose its interpretation on the government.

Although Prime Minister Menachem Begin relies on two religious parties in his coalition to keep his government afloat, his decisions on the future of the West Bank — which he calls by the biblical names Judea and Samaria — are unlikely to be influenced by either rabbi. Practical politics, negotiations with Egypt and pressure from the United States are more important.

Yosef, speaking Monday to a conference of Israeli rabbis, ruled the doctrine of "Pikuah Nefesh," the saving of lives, operates in the question of returning the territories captured in 1967.

Under this doctrine, any of the hundreds of laws and commandments handed down in the Bible and its commentaries can be violated if lives are at stake.

At least 51 die in Bangkok train wreck

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — At least 51 people, mostly school children and women going to market, were killed and 200 others were injured Tuesday when a freight train rammed a 300-passenger commuter train.

"I saw the people spilling out of the car like leaves falling from a tree," said Sriha Nitlun, a passenger whose sister died in the rail accident, which officials said may be the worst in Thailand's history.

Rescue workers said they found dozens of dismembered bodies covered with fruit and vegetables beneath four cars derailed in the wreck. About 500 people crowded around the station during the rescue operation looking for relatives, reporters said.

Officials investigating the tragedy said they were seeking the freight train engineer for questioning. One unconfirmed report said investigators were also looking for a railroad employee who fled the scene.

The freight train ran through a warning signal and hit the commuter train at Taling Chan station, 18 miles southwest of Bangkok, station manager Samrong Mongkolprasert said. Railway officials said the freight train struck the second car of the six-coach passenger train as it was being diverted to a side rail at the station.

Focus: Nation

Russian advisers ordered out of Nigeria

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia has been ordered to withdraw most of its military advisers from Nigeria, and thus seems to be losing ground in the Big African nation that is a major U.S. oil supplier, American intelligence officials are reporting.

The U.S. intelligence report said the Russian advisers have been accused by Nigerians of having "condescending attitudes" toward their African hosts.

The officials said the Soviet military training mission, which has been teaching Nigerians to fly and maintain their Russian-made MiG-21 fighters, has been told to cut back from 38 to only five advisers next year.

The report detailing this development arrived in Washington before the recent Nigerian election, which will return the African nation to civilian rule on Oct. 1 after 13 years under military control.

There has been no indication that this will change plans for forcing the cutback in the Soviet military mission, said the officials, who declined to be identified publicly.

Itinerant livestock worker picked up

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Authorities in three Midwestern states say an itinerant livestock handler picked up in Illinois as a fugitive may be the man they are seeking in connection with the deaths of five boys over the past four years.

William J. Guatney, 57, of Neosho Falls, Kan., was arrested Saturday in Pekin, Ill., where he was working as a handler at the Illinois State Fair, and waived extradition.

He was charged Monday in Topeka, Kan., with first-degree murder, aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sodomy in connection with the disappearance and death of Jack Hanrahan, 12, of Topeka.

Hanrahan's body was found in a creek bed southwest of Topeka May 30, 10 days after he disappeared from a bowling alley. Authorities say he died of multiple chest injuries, strangulation or other wounds.

Guatney was also to be arraigned here Wednesday on charges of slaying two Lincoln boys in 1975, authorities said.

Lincoln Police Chief Dean Leitner said Guatney had used several aliases and was known to friends as "Freight Train" because of his ability to imitate the trains he rode through the Midwest to work at fairs, cattle shows and carnivals.

Minor earthquake jolts California

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A minor earthquake jolted residents of this seaside city awake Tuesday, but there were no reports of damage or injuries.

The tremor, which registered 3.3 on the Richter scale, was centered about five miles north of here near La Cumbre Peak, said seismologists at California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

Some residents said the quake was a short thump, and did not give a rolling sensation. One man compared it to a sonic boom.

On Aug. 13, 1978, an earthquake measuring 5.1 on the Richter scale hit the Santa Barbara area.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

An earthquake measuring 3.5 on the scale can cause slight damage in the local area.

Gas price guideline outdated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Responding to howls of outrage from station operators, the Energy Department admitted Tuesday its list of maximum permissible gasoline prices, intended to help consumers make sure they're not being gouged, was out of date when issued.

But the department defended the idea of listing maximum retail prices, saying that within a few pennies a gallon they should reflect the highest prices gas station operators can legally charge.

They said they would try again Wednesday.

Jay Thompson, whose office compiles the price ceiling lists, admitted that the list issued Monday had too great a lag time between when it was compiled Aug. 6 and when it was issued.

Publication of the list Monday brought howls of protests from station operators across the country, who claimed they were being wrongly accused by their customers of price gouging because of the price list.

Paul Marron of the Bay State Gasoline Retailers Association in Massachusetts said one dealer got 65 calls Tuesday from customers irate about his prices.

Governor doubts nuclear hearing testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh said Tuesday he had no confidence in what he was told was happening during the first days after the Three Mile Island nuclear accident because "our reliable sources of information...dried up."

Thornburgh, who wrestled with a decision on whether to evacuate the area in central Pennsylvania near the nuclear plant, testified before a presidential commission investigating the March 28 accident.

The governor told the 12-member panel that only after President Carter sent Nuclear Regulatory Commission official Harold Denton to the plant site began did he begin to have confidence in information he was being provided.

Denton arrived at the reactor site near Harrisburg late Friday, two days after the accident began.

He said he was "jarred" when NRC officials at a news conference on March 29 said there was no further danger to areas off the reactor site when at the time there was serious damage to the reactor fuel.

Iran deports foreign reporters

Domestic newspapers, magazines closed under new censorship rule

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The Islamic regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini widened its crackdown on international coverage of the Iranian revolution Tuesday by ordering five more foreign correspondents to leave, bringing to 11 the number expelled this month.

The expulsions followed the closing of 22 newspapers and magazines, using a new censorship law to restrict domestic reporting.

Islamic revolutionary tribunals executed 18 Kurdish rebels early Tuesday in Kurdistan. Eleven others were executed Saturday during the latest uprising by Kurds seeking political autonomy.

ALI BEHZADNIA, HEAD of the foreign press section in the Ministry of National Guidance, gave no reason why correspondents of the London Financial Times, the British Broadcasting Corp., L'Express of Paris and two unidentified German publications were ordered out of the country.

The correspondents were ordered to leave after Khomeini directed government officials to act with renewed revolutionary spirit. Previously, the regime expelled reporters for The New York Times, and the Los Angeles Times and a four-member NBC-TV crew, for using material it said was unfavorable to the revolution.

THE EXPELLED CORRESPONDENTS included Towyn Mason of BBC, Andrew Whitley of the Financial Times, and Jerome Doumlin of L'Express.

Doumlin said he was expelled for an article on executions and the political climate in the country. He said officials told him the article was "insulting to the revolution and the people of Iran."

Tehran's Islamic prosecutor ordered the newspaper Mardum, organ of the communist Tudeh Party, other leftist periodicals and several satirical newspapers to stop printing, bringing to 44 the number of publications closed under a press law that took effect Aug. 11, said Mehdi Momken, deputy national guidance minister.

THE STRINGENT CODE bans papers which do not follow an Islamic line and are critical of the nation's religious leaders.

The official Pars news agency reported that firing squads executed 18 Kurds convicted by revolutionary tribunals of "corruption on earth and fighting against God and his prophet."

Thirteen of the Kurds were shot in Paveh on the spot where government troops died last week fighting the rebellion, Pars reported, and five were taken to the city of Kermanshah for trial and execution.

Rash of New York City holdups becomes 'open season on banks'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten more New York City banks were held up Tuesday, continuing a rash of robberies amounting to "open season on banks," the city's police commissioner said.

On Monday, five banks were held up and a 23-year-old teller was shot to death.

No injuries were reported in Tuesday's robberies, but there were two arrests.

"There is a sense on the street that it's open season on banks. We have to turn that around," said Police Commissioner Robert J. McGuire at the funeral of police officer Thomas Schimenti, gunned down last Friday by a fleeing bank robber.

McGuire said the police department would fight the outbreaks in three ways. He said a joint task force of detectives and FBI agents is being formed to investigate robberies, robbery-alert teams are being organized to cruise the city in unmarked vans and a two-week training course is being started to prepare officers to stake out banks so they can intervene in robberies.

MORE THAN 120 bank robberies have been reported in the city in the first 21 days of this month, compared with 84 in all of August 1977.

August 1977 had been the city's all-time record for bank robberies, but July 1979 smashed that record with 125 holdups. One FBI source said there had been 456 robberies in the first seven months of this year, an increase of 27.3 percent over last year's figures.

Among the robberies was the Aug. 3 holdup of a Banker's Trust branch that netted more than $530,000, the largest cash haul in the city's history. However, three people have been charged in the theft, and authorities say they have recovered less than $100,000.

BANK ROBBERIES HAVE been up nationwide in recent years, with such thefts up 12 percent in 1978 and officials predicting a 13 percent increase this year.

Law enforcement officials have given varying explanations for the "robbery explosion," ranging from the advent of a possible recession to the publicity that has been given holdups recently.

Depositors appeared undaunted by New York's rash of robberies. Several customers interviewed at a Citibank branch on Fifth Avenue said they could not avoid banks even if they were afraid.

"It's a necessity, to say the least," said one man, who asked not to be identified.

ARAFAT, HUSSEIN MEET

Militia shells Lebanese towns

By The Associated Press

Israeli and rightist Christian militia gunners shelled 26 southern Lebanese villages Tuesday in the heaviest barrage of gunfire to hit the war zone in years, Lebanese authorities said.

"Shells were falling indiscriminately, hitting the camps, the city's cemetery, and archeological ruins," a provincial official in the port city of Tyre said. Eleven persons were reported killed and more than 20 were wounded, sources said.

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli army spokesman said the attack was the work of Lebanese rightists, whom Israel supports. The targets were in an area of Palestinian and leftist guerrilla strongholds.

In Jordan, Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat held a reconciliatory meeting with King Hussein, who expelled his forces after bloody battles in 1970. It was their third meeting since then.

They met for four hours in the northeastern city of Mafraq. No specifics of the meeting were revealed, but the official Jordanian news agency issued a statement by Arafat saying: "The difficult circumstances in the area require that Arab leaders and officials meet to discuss the best ways of confronting them, especially Camp David, the accords that led to Israeli-Egyptian peace, its negative effects and the autonomy conspiracy."

Arafat's reference was to ongoing efforts by the United States and Egypt to persuade Israel to grant autonomy to Palestinians living the West Bank of the Jordan River.

At the United Nations in New York, black supporters of outgoing U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young met Israel's U.N. ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum after telling reporters they were getting an "excellent" response.

ADMINISTRATIVE EMPLOYEES CITE LOW SALARY

Group wants collective bargaining

By JEFF MINAHAN
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Administrative Professional Association, upset about the inadequacy of recent pay hikes, has asked its membership to authorize it as their collective bargaining agent.

The association, which represents approximately 1,000 administrative and professional employees on campus, is seeking salaries comparable to those in subordinate positions, said association President Ray Hopper.

"The people we supervise received a larger salary increase than we did for two years in a row," Hopper said.

The organization sent out cards to its members last Thursday asking for the authorization to represent them in collective bargaining.

Should the association receive approval from at least 30 percent of its members, it could ask the University to voluntarily recognize it as those employees' sole bargaining agent, according to the regulations of the Michigan Employment Relations Commission.

If the University refused to recognize the association, the matter could be turned over to MERC, which could conduct an election.

Hopper did not have an exact count of the number of cards returned so far.

The MSU Board of Trustees approved the pay hikes at their meeting in July. Administrative and professional employees received an average 3 percent raise and 4 percent in merit increases.

ADMINISTRATIVE AND PROFESSIONAL pay raises would have to be increased a minimum of another 5.5 percent this year to achieve parity, said Hopper, who is manager of the Brody residence halls complex.

A negotiating team from the association has been meeting informally with the administration to work on pay scales and other benefits, he said. But Hopper said those negotiations have been one-sided, with the association in a listening role.

Sam Baker, director of employee relations at MSU, said the University voluntarily recognized the association in 1968 as a collective bargaining agent. However, there is now some question as to precisely who is represented by the association, he said.

"The problem is they never got it into any kind of written agreement or defined their unit," Baker said.

Before the association can be recognized as a collective bargaining agent, officials from MSU, the association and MERC must meet and specifically determine whom such a union would represent, he said.

Hopper said he did not know how soon an election, if necessary, would take place.

"The overwhelming response from the members was that they did not like at all the pay increase, and worse yet, the method of distribution as dictated by the administration," Hopper said.

When living in the city and there's no room for a garden, do what Greg Martin, an MSU graduate in plant genetics, and Carol Ann Penfold, MSU senior, and a few others do. Grow the plants in your front yard. The garden contains sunflowers, corn, other vegetables and flowers.

'U' workers to pick union representation

By DEBBIE CREEMERS
State News Staff Writer

Nearly 1,050 MSU custodial and service workers will vote Oct. 5 to determine which union will represent them in contract negotiations with the University.

The two union options workers will choose from are the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 1585 or the University Employees Union Local 1.

A pre-election conference held Monday between MSU, UEU-1, MERC and AFSCME officials determined how and when the election will be held, UEU-1 president Richard Kennedy said Tuesday.

The election will be conducted by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission in Demonstration Hall, Kennedy said.

The election will settle a long debate over union representation between UEU Local 1 and AFSCME, a government workers union affiliated with the AFL-CIO which currently represents MSU employees.

The conflict began in early March when 800 union members signed cards expressing desire for a union election to determine who the exclusive bargaining agent for employees represented by Local 1585 would be — AFSCME or UEU-1.

AFSCME subsequently filed a blocking charge with MERC alleging unfair labor practice charges which delayed the election, said Michael Kluck, an attorney with the law firm representing UEU-1.

MERC dismissed the charges, but then had to review briefs and exceptions filed by both sides before ruling that an election could be held.

In the meantime, the full-time hourly workers' contract with the University expired July 31.

University management bargaining officials have agreed to extend the employees' contract until the issue of representation is settled.

Kennedy said AFSCME representatives rejected a University offer for release time with pay which would have ensured employee participation at the polls.

Kennedy said AFSCME rejected the offer because of an attached stipulation that all parties agree not to deface MSU buildings with flyers and posters.

"Getting them to the polls will be our only challenge now," Kennedy said, adding that a simple majority will assure a UEU-1 victory.

Merchants debate meter rates

By MICHAEL STUART
State News Staff Writer

Proposed increases in Lansing parking meter rates and parking ticket fines brought many downtown merchants to a public hearing at Monday's City Council meeting.

Most business people objected to the proposed change, while some argued in favor of the rate increases as an interim measure until free parking could be arranged through a special assessment of downtown businesses to be combined with city funds.

Angelus Vlahakis, owner of Jim's Tiffany Place, 116 E. Michigan Ave., objected to the rate increases and said the lack of area parking caused bad feelings in his customers.

"They are doing the logical thing — going to the malls," he said. "The public, which is helping maintain the vitality of downtown, is getting short-tempered."

Pat Rich, manager of Touch of Craft, 234 S. Washington Ave., agreed with Vlahakis.

"DOWNTOWN LANSING IS DYING," she said. "People are not coming downtown."

"The malls are filled with people. Downtown Lansing is not. At 5 p.m., all downtown is cleared out," she said.

Bill Boettcher, owner of Leiber's, 107 S. Washington Ave., supported the rate increase, saying he favors the price rise as an interim measure until a free-parking plan can be implemented.

Boettcher said merchants should participate in the "park and shop" program in which business owners give validation stamps for free parking to their customers. Only 25 of some 200 downtown merchants currently participate in the program.

Paul LaMacchia, owner of Mac's Pipe and Liquor Store, 207 S. Washington Ave., said the construction of the downtown mall had decreased the number of parking spaces along Washington Avenue.

"The mall is a great idea but 40 percent of the parking will be lost," he said.

"Parking is at a premium. The few customers who will find parking, will pay a fortune for it," he added.

LaMacchia suggested downtown parking ramps be free for the first couple of hours with a steep increase in rates after two hours.

Councilmember-at-large James D. Blair said the rate increases are needed to meet increased maintenance costs of Lansing's parking ramps.

He argued that the public did not want to subsidize downtown parking facilities through higher taxes and said rate increases would allow the city to maintain the ramps without raising taxes.

BUT VLAHAKIS DISAGREED with Blair and said that while the downtown area is only one percent of the city's land area, it generates over 10 percent of the city's annual budget and thus deserves special consideration.

He added that downtown improvements such as the Washington Square Mall and free parking could increase the city tax base.

Mabel Kregul, owner of Strand Beauty Salon in the Michigan Theater arcade, complained that her customers were retired and some were not physically able to walk from ramps to her business.

"It's a shame to think of adding costs. This is one good way of chasing people out," she said. Councilmember-at-large Richard Baker said the city was obligated to use meter funds alone to maintain parking ramps and could not use general-fund money or tax increases to pay for ramp upkeep.

"It's a constraint we don't have any way around. These bond covenants cannot be changed," he said.

In other council action: Baker cast the lone dissenting vote against a measure which would have made council President Louis Adado the city's 911 policy board representative.

Since only five members of the council were present at the meeting, Baker's vote negated the resolution.

Baker suggested that the mayor be sent to represent the city at 911 board meetings.

A proposed pay raise for Lansing District Court judges was dumped for the time being when Blair voted against the increase.

Coin machines to cost a nickel for services

You know inflation is bad when it costs you a nickel to get change for a dollar.

In order to avoid raising the cost of using copy machines, dollar bill changers at the MSU Library are now returning 95 cents on the dollar, library officials said.

The charge is a result of the rising operating costs of copiers in the library which are used extensively, said Charles Rettke, business manager of MSU libraries.

Rettke said the charge was necessary to cover the costs of 22 new copiers being used in libraries around campus. The new machines will produce better copies and be able to handle more paper efficiently, he said.

Operating expenses also include maintenance and rapidly rising paper costs, he said.

Library officials discussed various alternatives with representatives of the Purchasing Department, which handles the contracts for the change machines, Rettke said. Charging a dime instead of a nickel for copies was not considered an acceptable choice, he said.

Richard Chapin, director of MSU libraries said "There is no such thing as a free lunch. I object to this, but considering the other alternatives, this was the best way to go."

Chapin said other alternatives were for the library to subsidize the increased cost of the copiers or to seek bids from other companies.

The Library could not adequately subsidize the machines, and the Purchasing Department did not feel new bids could be secured, he said.

A Library employee who asked to remain anonymous said many employees were upset about the charge because they feel library services should be free.

"It doesn't seem fair to me," the employee said. "I feel library services should be as free as possible."

Debbie Jo Hofess, 22, an MSU graduate, sits in her Maverick Monday after her car was hit on Grand River by Jean Wesley, 17, who explains the accident to Larry Byan of East Lansing Police Department.

Capitol Commons development plans will be presented tonight

Four plans for proposed housing on the Capitol Commons 28-acre site in downtown Lansing will be presented at a special public meeting tonight on the 10th floor of City Hall.

The site near the state office complex will be sold to one of the four developers at a bargain price, but construction costs are expected to exceed $25 million for the project's completion.

A joint proposal presented by Amurcon Corp. of Southfield and Hatcher Development Corp. of Okemos offers $1 million for the 28 acres and construction of 604 living units with 807 parking spaces.

Plans submitted by the Oxford Development Corp. of Okemos offer $650,000 for the land and propose building 200 senior-citizen apartments, 360 garden apartments and 50 townhouses.

Three Lansing-area men, Joel L. Altman, Robert Green and Francis N. Fine are offering $500,000 for the land and would construct 554 housing units with 713 parking spaces.

EJS Housing Partnership of Lansing is offering $512,000 for the parcel and would build 170 mid-rise apartments for senior citizens, 126 luxury apartments, 60 townhouses and 219 garden apartments.

EJS partners include Joel L. Ferguson, Sol L. Steadman and former MSU President Edgar L. Harden.

After tonight's public meeting, a selection committee will make recommendations on a developer to complete the project. The committee will present its recommendation to the City Council in September, said Ronald Stonehouse, Lansing deputy director of redevelopment.

Former prof Reeves, 88, dies

A former MSU professor and presidential consultant died Monday in East Lansing.

Floyd W. Reeves, 88, came to MSU from the University of Chicago in 1944. He served as professor of education administration and consultant to former MSU President John A. Hannah from 1953 to 1962.

Reeves played an important role in the organization of MSU's University College, in addition to serving on MSU projects in Pakistan and Vietnam.

Before coming to MSU, Reeves served as an adviser to the federal government in the areas of education, administration and personnel.

From 1933 to 1935 he was director of personnel and social and economic planning for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Reeves was born in Castalia, S.D., and received his master of arts and doctoral degrees from the University of Chicago.

He authored a number of books and was an active member in the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

He is survived by his wife Hazel, two sons, a daughter, six grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held, with the date to be announced.

Contributions for scholarships may be made in Reeves name to the MSU Development Fund.

Black concerns focus of area's new newspaper

A new newspaper founded in Lansing earlier this month is providing a variety of information for and about the black community.

The Community Gazette, the area's second black-minority publication, was founded by publisher Tyrone Robinson and its third edition will be printed this week.

The paper is a weekly tabloid geared towards the black community, said editor-in-chief Mike Gallagher.

It focuses on issues facing the black community, such as affirmative action and high suicide rates. The paper also contains features on prominent area blacks in fields such as politics, sports, and business.

The Gazette's subscription price is $4 for a six-month subscription or 5 cents a copy.

VICTIMS RECEIVE MORE HUMANE TREATMENT

U-M study shows '74 rape law accomplishing goals

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — A two-year University of Michigan study concludes that Michigan's pioneering 1974 rape law is achieving one of its main objectives — more humane treatment of rape victims.

The study praises law enforcement officials and police departments for responding to both the letter and spirit of the new law, although it notes that some officials still hold outmoded views.

"The law has definitely improved things, but the battle is far from won," said Jeanne Marsh, an assistant professor in the School of Social Services Administration at the University of Chicago and a co-director of the study.

"Those in the criminal justice system recognize that even prostitutes can be raped," Marsh said. "Now that's progress. It's a great change from the past."

The $100,000 study, sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health, is soon to be released by the U-M Institute for Social Research, which aided the research.

Researchers based their findings on personal interviews with 170 police officers, judges, prosecutors, defense attorneys and rape crisis center staff members in six Michigan counties — Wayne, Oakland, Kent, Ingham, Genesee and Calhoun.

One of the researchers, Alisen Geist, said she and her colleagues were particularly pleased with the response of police departments to the new law.

"THE POLICE TURNED out to be better than we anticipated given the literature on police treatment of rape victims," she said. "There were some police who conformed to the villain stereotype, but there were many others who, if I were a victim of rape, I'd be quite happy to have them take my case."

Michigan's 1974 Criminal Sexual Conduct Statute revolutionized rape investigations by shifting the burden of proof from the victim to the defendant, codifying the crime in four categories, giving prosecutors a wider range of sentencing options and classifying rape as a crime of violence rather than passion.

Major findings in the study included:

- Reports of forcible rape, first-degree criminal sexual conduct rose 30 percent from 1972 to 1977, indicating victims are less afraid to report attacks to police.

- Arrests and convictions for rape rose from 62 percent in 1972 to 90 percent in 1977.

Some negative attitudes still prevail, however, the researchers found.

For example, the study said "the victim's sex past continues to have a tremendous influence" despite the law's intent. And half the defense attorneys and more than one-fourth of the police officers think rape charges are often false.

The researchers also said they feel the use of lie detector tests are used far too routinely to verify a rape victim's story.

OPINION

Diplomacy must involve Palestine

Increasing nationwide support for the Palestine Liberation Organization has, in effect, rendered academic America's long-standing policy forbidding formal talks with the organization because of its refusal to recognize the state of Israel. Since former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young's resignation last week, The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, known for its moral commitment to upholding human rights, has concerned itself less with the PLO's terrorist acts against Israel, and more with commencing negotiations between the United States and PLO representatives. The conference's commendable efforts may help to usher in a new era of diplomacy, concerned primarily with finally dealing with the volatile issue of Palestinian self-determination.

Andrew Young has already spoken out on what he termed the "ridiculous" policy of the United States toward the PLO. Young was apparently coming to grips with an indefinite standstill between two adversaries, a stalemate that will not be resolved under current U.S. policy toward the PLO. The conference's meeting with PLO representatives suggests that Young and the Arabs are not the only ones in favor of altering U.S. policy to recognize an organization undeterred by land sanctions imposed by the now faltering peace agreement. The issue is now more at how to go about redressing the Palestinians' grievances without rocking the diplomatic boat.

Perhaps that was America's intention all along. The State Department scoffs at such reports, but cannot deny the overwhelming Arab world support for the PLO. It also cannot deny Special Ambassador Robert Strauss' failure to present a modified version of the U.N. resolution that mentions the Palestinian question as only a refugee problem. The resolution, the foundation for all Mideast negotiations, is still a far cry from the reality of Palestinian self-determination.

If the United States does reconsider its stand toward the PLO, the move should not be viewed as a sellout to the Israelis. Rather, it should be considered a possible new direction in resolving the Mideast controversy. The United States, if it is to remain a mediator in Mideast diplomacy, must recognize the PLO's existence and its grievances, just as it has asked the PLO to recognize Israel as a precursor to conducting further negotiations.

Such action may lead to peace in the Mideast as well as on the domestic front. The Palestinian policy reassessment issue, spurred by Young's departure, has sparked a rift between the black and Jewish communities. When President Carter steps off the Delta Queen, he will have to deal with growing animosity not only in the Mideast, but in his own country as well.

Mercury hazard still unconfirmed

The recent findings by several MSU professors investigating campus soil samples reveal potentially harmful levels of two chemicals. Mercury and lead have been discovered in some samples obtained near waste pits and wells in the southeast portion of campus. But because of incomplete analyses on the part of MSU researchers and the Department of Natural Resources, these findings have not yet been substantiated.

Controversy has emerged from the soil sample findings. Boyd Ellis, MSU professor of soil chemistry and one of the persons conducting the study, has indicated that differences between some of the samples did not conclusively point to contamination levels. But he also said samples taken from a site near Power Plant 65 showed high levels of mercury.

Other researchers have stated they do not believe there is currently a situation hazardous to humans or the environment. We are not sure whom to believe at this point.

The Department of Natural Resources will ultimately have to determine the severity of this situation. That agency was designed by the Legislature to perform such analyses and must be viewed by all interested persons as the group that can make the most accurate judgment. However, the DNR cannot begin the inspection process until all the data accumulated by the MSU researchers is processed. In the meantime, a harmful situation is literally sitting in our backyard.

A similar predicament now plaguing Oakland County residents reveals the need for prompt and effective action. Two waste dumps there have been oozing possibly carcinogenic chemicals for the past 10 years. Ordered corrected in 1971, the dumps have never been cleaned up. The DNR, in this instance, was negligent in fulfilling its commitment to the health and safety of Michigan residents. We certainly hope it does not compromise basic human needs in its handling of the MSU situation.

This most recent incident again brings up the question of chemical disposal in Michigan. The Hooker Chemical Co. and other toxic substance producers have been given little or no restrictions as to where they can dump their industrial byproducts. Subsequently, the taxpayers have had to do the dirty work of cleaning up our precious environment. The Carter administration's proposal to tax such chemical producers may be the most efficient means of insuring a safe and healthy chemical-free environment.

We hope the MSU situation does not evolve into the type of catastrophe experienced in Oakland County. The DNR should promptly take all necessary actions to eliminate this dangerous hazard. Regardless of the cost, the agency should use its powers to insure the safety of this area's inhabitants.

VIEWPOINT: THE PRESIDENT

What's wrong with Jimmy Carter is his poorly-conceived image

By KENDALL WINGROVE

President Jimmy Carter recently informed his top aides that he is disappointed with the image the American public has of him.

The president feels many Americans think he is fuzzy and indecisive and that he is incompetent to run the government. To counteract this mood, the president recently instructed his top aides to begin a massive campaign to boost his popularity and demonstrate that he too, can be a "tough guy."

Firing Cabinet members was the first of several "tough guy" decisions for Carter. When his top aides, Press Secretary Jody Powell and Hamilton Jordan, met recently to finalize plans for the "image rehab," their conversation might have sounded like this:

"We've got our work cut out for us," said Powell. "Between OPEC, gas lines and rising inflation, the president's popularity is lower than McLean Stevenson's. The press is out to get him."

"Believe me, Jody, you don't have to tell me about the press. I never even spit on that gal."

"Really, Ham. You get roasted almost as much as Billy does."

"Now that's our biggest problem," Jordan said. "We've got to get the press to disassociate the president from his southern family, especially his brother. He must resemble any eastern business executive. Jimmy must look and act like a typical corporate president."

"That means no more denim jackets," Powell said. "A president should wear a business suit with a tie and vest."

"That's a good start," Jordan said. "Now we've got to improve the 'fireside chats' the president gives. They've gone over like a lead balloon. From now on, we'll call them

"blazer briefings." To show the new leadership image, we'll put pictures of great leaders like Washington and Lincoln behind him. The background of a president must illustrate a he-man image to the television audience."

"You're right. Maybe we could capture the gutsy appearance of Teddy Roosevelt. What if we put some stuffed animals behind Jimmy? How about a giant moose head above the bookshelf?"

"No way. Some nearsighted viewer might think Jerry Ford is still president."

"Yeah, I guess you're right. So, how else is Jimmy going to toughen up?"

"Well, Tuesday I've scheduled Clint Eastwood and James Coburn to hold a seminar in the Oval Office to share their secrets on being tough with the president. You see, I wanna make Jimmy like Clint. He can be 'The Enforcer' of our laws. I've also ordered a dozen old Cagney and Bogart films for the president to watch."

"Do you think any of this is really going to help? Just watching a few old films isn't going to make Jimmy tough."

"He doesn't have to BE tough, just SEEM to be. That's your job Jody. You have to make sure the press gets pictures and articles of him being a firm and aggressive leader. Get some shots of Jimmy practicing his new 'tough guy fist.'"

"But Ham, the American people elected Jimmy because they thought he was more like one of them. Now we're trying to make him something different."

"Jody, the American people want a leader, not Ozzie Nelson. Believe me, once this new 'tough guy' image catches on they'll like it. Americans want a president who can whip Kennedy's hind end. Jimmy the country farmer will be forgotten. Remember, the public has a short memory."

"Ya, but what if their memory is short during the 1980 election?"

"Are you kidding? With all the dumb mistakes we've been making that's all we can hope for. It's the only chance Jimmy has."

LETTER

Committee was denied its rights

I would like to express my appreciation for the great amount of effort which the board of directors of Health Central has recently devoted to the development of a plan for the restructuring of Health Central. While I am not entirely satisfied with the results, particularly with the loss of full member control, I am grateful for your work and your concern.

I would, however, like to express my dissatisfaction with the way in which members' participation was handled prior to the meeting of Aug. 16. I feel that in an organization run by members, responsible members should, legally or otherwise, be granted the full cooperation of the administration and the board in the deliberation and search for solutions to the organization's problems. Such efforts, even in dissent from the board's decisions, should be welcomed and made known to the organization's membership. I feel that a responsible group, the Committee for Community Control of Health Central, was denied these rights. Specifically the committee was denied use of mailing lists and the right to distribute literature freely at Health Central. The committee should rather have been offered mailing privileges at the expense of Health Central as well as a place to meet.

I understand that the request for these rights was denied to avoid "politics." This denial is politics of the worst sort, authoritarian; it has no place in a public, democratic organization such as Health Central.

I request that:

- letters of apology for the denial of member rights be sent to the committee and to members of Health Central; and
- the committee, led by Paul Brown, be reimbursed for expenses incurred in the printing of information concerning its proposals and for the rental of meeting space to discuss the issues of Health Central.

We will not know what might have happened had the committee been given its rights. Its expenses should be paid and the denial of its rights acknowledged.

VIEWPOINT: POTTER PARK'S PACHYDERM

Bingo was a victim of boredom and unhappiness

By AMY C. SCHUMACHER

I breathed a sigh of relief and felt a little bit happy when I heard that Bingo the elephant had died. It is not lack of compassion on my part, but perhaps a bit too much which makes me glad that the poor thing is no longer subjected to such poor and unhappy living conditions. I sincerely believe her unhappiness ultimately led to her death because she had nothing to live for.

I strongly protest the purchase of another elephant to be condemned to the same unhappy fate. Bingo was forced to exist in a small cubicle with nothing but a tire chained to the floor for her only entertainment. I saw her do nothing but pace in a circle while cooped in this building in the manner of something trying to maintain some sanity. She was not allowed out of this building for months at a time during the winter as she could not take the cold. Her yard, when she was let out, is small and mostly barren. There is hardly room for an elephant to move with any freedom in a place like this.

I cannot believe that this animal did not experience loneliness, sadness, or boredom. To believe otherwise is to think that animals are stupid, and research has shown that they are far from that. Animals are living, breathing creatures who have emotions and feelings similar to those of humans. Unfortunately, they are not able to express themselves so that we, as humans, are able to understand. If they could, perhaps we would be much better aware of the cruelties which we unknowingly subject them to.

I believe that if the children of this community were made aware of the indignities and unhappiness that Bingo suffered, they would not wish this same condition on another elephant. If the Potter Park Zoo is so determined to have another elephant I plead that they wait until they can create a better environment in which it can exist. Ideally, there should be room for two elephants so that the poor creatures at least have another of their own kind to communicate with. They should at least attempt to simulate the natural environment of these animals. If we are to steal the animal's freedom, can't we provide as decent an environment as possible?

"I believe that if the children of this community were made aware of the indignities and unhappiness that Bingo suffered, they would not wish this same condition on another elephant. If the Potter Park Zoo is so determined to have another elephant, I plead that they wait until they can create a better environment in which it can exist."

If the children raised the money for Bingo, they should now work on raising the money for a better place for the zoo animals to live. I seriously believe another elephant would die as quickly as Bingo if put in these same conditions.

I beg every person who cares about life and freedom to have a little empathy for these creatures. Please join me in voicing your protest to the purchase of another elephant to be put in these poor conditions. Let's all try to improve the homes of the animals already existing in the zoo instead of bringing more into the presently bad environment. I cannot believe our community is doing its best when it allows these living creatures to suffer so unnecessarily. If you wish to protest the present zoo conditions and the purchase of another elephant, please write to the Friends of the Zoo, P.O. Box 16278, Lansing, Mich. 48901. Let them know you care.

Registration for high schoolers pleases activists, state educators

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

School officials and civil rights workers say they are pleased with the new state law allowing 18-year-olds to register to vote in their high schools.

Charles Bennett, president of the A. Phillip Randolph Institute, said that although the law was much needed, an educational program informing students how to use their vote was necessary.

"You arm people with a weapon and don't show them how to use it, you haven't done much," he said.

Bennett said his organization, which fights for civil and workers' rights, might put together some type of educational program provided there were enough funds.

John Dobbs, assistant superintendent for schools and community affairs with the state Department of Education, said the law was long overdue.

Dobbs said he would like to see a set of instructions for schools to abide by in the registration of students, adding that he did not see any big problems developing out of the new law.

Matthew Prophet, superintendent of Lansing schools, said the impact of the law would be "considerably less" on the Lansing school system than on others because it already registers students. Prophet said every eligible student is approached by school officials in an attempt to get them to register.

John Marrs, director of information services for Lansing schools, said about 200 of 1,600 seniors registered last year, adding that many of those who had not registered were not eligible.

Senator Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, who sponsored the bill, has been appointed chairperson of a special committee that will monitor the number of high schools taking part in the registration of students.

Vaughn said he would visit various high schools throughout the state in an attempt to "encourage and excite" schools and students to take part in the program.

Although the legislation is part of a drive by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Vaughn insisted that his bill was directed at all students, not just blacks.

Michigan was the first of 20 states targeted by NAACP to adopt legislation allowing 18-year-olds to register to vote in their schools.

Cathy Butler and Thomas Esquina reminisce about their years here at MSU now that they have graduated. Buttons is more interested in what's going on in the horticultural gardens.

PSC revises gas purchasing clause

By United Press International

The state Public Service Commission Tuesday approved a major overhaul in Consumers Power Co.'s purchased gas adjustment clause, which allows it to automatically recover increases in the cost of gas it buys and produces.

The revisions are the second step in a two-part inquiry by the PSC to revise the utility's clause because it consistently collects too much money from its customers.

The adjustment clause allows utility companies to pass on to their customers increases in the cost of gas it buys and produces, if the costs exceed a level previously set as a base. If the company collects too much, it must make refunds to its customers.

If its collections are less than the increase, the utility is not allowed to charge customers an additional amount to make up the difference.

THE REVISIONS APPROVED Tuesday make changes in four areas.

One deals with the question of whether production costs at Consumers' Marysville plant, which makes synthetic natural gas, should be included in the monthly adjustment clause.

The commission ruled the Marysville feedstocks — liquids which result from the production of natural gas — should be considered as purchased gas costs or fuel costs, and therefore

"are properly subject to an automatic adjustment."

The PSC also modified the clause to better reflect actual costs of the Marysville plant. The standardized clause presently in effect for Consumers considered the past 12-month history of Marysville production volumes and the related feedstock costs in calculating the clause factor for the current month.

DUE TO A reduction in the production levels at Marysville in the past, the clause factor resulted in the recovery of too much for gas expenses.

The modification approved Tuesday will include Marysville production in the clause at the actual value in the previous month.

That will eliminate the possibility for significant over- or under-recoveries.

The PSC voted to include the effects of stored gas in calculating Consumers' adjustment clause. The revision will insure there will be no over- or under-recoveries due to those effects.

Variations in costs have occurred in the past because the company purchases gas at a certain price, puts it in storage and then sells it at a higher price to customers at a later date, thus creating over-recoveries.

The effects of gas in storage were not computed in the company's former clause.

Utility customers to get refunds in September

By United Press International

The Public Service Commission Tuesday approved a $24 million refund for Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. customers because its supplier is charging the utility lower rates.

The refund, which will average $10.50 for residential heating customers, will appear as a credit on September bills.

Mike Kitt of the PSC's Gas Division said the refunds generally are not of this magnitude, but impending federal gas price deregulation caused the pipeline company to overestimate the size of its refund request.

Unlike PSC rate increases which are subject to months of hearings before they receive final approval, the energy commission allows pipeline rates to go into effect automatically five months after they are filed.

When the final order rate increase order is issued, pipeline companies must refund any overcharge to their distributors.

On March 30, 1979, the Federal Energy Commission lowered rates charged the gas company by its supplier, Michigan-Wisconsin Pipeline Co.

The commission ordered Michigan Consolidated to refund to its customers the higher rates it collected from November 1977 through February 1979.

The gas company also had been allowed to charge the higher rates during the 16-month period with the stipulation that it would refund the money if the federal government reduced its supplier's rates.

The refund cost Michigan Consolidated only $786,000 in interest earned between time of the pipeline company's refund and the credit to customers.

A Michigan Consolidated spokesperson characterized the PSC's action as routine and said the pipeline company would be refunding the overcharge, which would be passed on to gas company customers.

State appeals court nixes nude dancing

By United Press International

The Michigan Court of Appeals Tuesday upheld the constitutionality of a state Liquor Control Commission rule prohibiting bars from allowing nude dancing.

The appeals court's decision came in the long-simmering dispute between Walled Lake's Camelot Inn and state and local officials.

In other action, the appeals court said state and local governments may be sued for injuries incurred by persons using parks and recreation areas.

In yet another assault on the "governmental immunity" statute protecting governmental units from liability suits, the court said operating a park or recreation area is not a governmental function and not immune to lawsuits.

Twice raided by police for allowing dancers to perform in what the court called "the altogether," the Camelot said the Liquor Control Commission's rule barring nude dancing violated the First Amendment right to free expression.

THE INN ALSO said the rule was invalid because it conflicted with less stringent state law.

The appeals court said Michigan's obscenity laws address the distribution of obscene films and printed materials while the commission rule focuses on conduct in state-licensed bars.

It said the regulation of film and liquor licenses are different and, therefore, the more liberal state statute does not override commission rules.

Camelot's owners also alleged nude dancing is a constitutionally protected expression as long as it is not obscene.

The appeals court said the Liquor Control Commission may prohibit nude dancing — obscene or not — when the combination of dancing and drinking "increases to an unacceptable level the likelihood of illegal and/or disorderly conduct."

THAT NUDE DANCING may have been "entirely tasteful" is irrelevant, it said.

The court's ruling on the governmental immunity question came in the case of Vincent Daugherty, who sued the state and the Department of Natural Resources when he was paralyzed after diving from a bridge into the Huron River at Proud Lake Recreation Area.

Daugherty said the bridge was in "a state of disrepair and abandonment." He was paralyzed below the shoulders after he dove from the bridge in 1973 and struck his head on an object hidden beneath the water's surface.

'BREAKING AWAY'

A celluloid masterpiece

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

Granted, when you see such strained, weary descriptions as "warm," "human," "funny," "original," "endearing," "honest," "spirited," and "thoroughly engaging," rolled together within a film review, you may grow sort of suspicious. After all, few motion pictures ever really live up to the promise collectively expressed by such words.

So, trust me. Breaking Away (Twentieth Century-Fox; at the Spartan Triplex) is an absolutely terrific movie. Never mind that you've likely never heard of most of the cast or the screenwriter, that the film's director has spent the past 10 years making resolutely mediocre movies, and that — at first glance, anyhow — you'd probably prefer sitting home and watching the tube to going out and plunking down good money to see a picture ostensibly about a bicycle racer in Bloomington, Indiana. Forget about all that, and listen to me.

Breaking Away is some kind of small masterpiece. There's scarcely a false note in the picture; it's filled with the sort of freshness, sensitivity and distinction indicated by the words quoted above.

Written by playwright Steve Tesich, the movie focuses on the adventures of four Bloomington teenagers. They're late out of high school, and college seems pretty much out of the question for them, and it's hard for them to relate to the lack of structure out in the "real world." Bloomington is a particularly tough place for them to be, too — home of Indiana University, the city is filled with college students, and there is, at best, an uneasy peace between the students and young members of the community.

There's Mike (Dennis Quaid), a football star in high school, now having some severe problems adjusting to life away from the glory days of team sports; Cyril (Daniel Stern), a gangly, likable guy who has grown fairly philosophical about personal failure; Mocher (Jackie Earle Haley), a short, kind, intensely private fellow, and Dave (Dennis Christopher), who has solved most of his problems — for a while — by retreating into an innocent, romantic fantasy — he longs to become an Italian bike racing champion.

The movie centers on Dave's obsession and ability to live out his dream. He surrounds himself with all things Italian: posters, music, clothing, food, even to the extent of studying the language. "Bonjourno, Papa," he greets his dumbfounded dad (Paul Dooley). "Papa," he sputters, "I'm not your papa! I'm your goddamn father." His mother (Barbara Barrie) is rather more understanding — she begins to add Italian dishes to the family menu, and enjoys listening to the arias blasting from Dave's record player — but his pop is adamant. "There's something seriously wrong with that boy," he storms.

Dave is a whiz on his bike, though, and his prowess gives the four lads a hope of somehow evening the score between them and the college students. They plan to enter the annual, prestigious Little 500 Bicycle Race (bicycling, by the way, is especially big news in Indiana), and with Dave's skills, win.

Breaking Away is an extremely difficult film to describe properly; it deals in people and feelings and ideas rather than in story points. Tesich's script is freewheeling but extremely realistic — his characters are gently, yet vividly drawn. They seem like people you've known for a long time. Yates' direction is just right, somehow. He captures all the emotional tones, the little moments, the hopes and disappointments of the characters in a delicate, winning way. Interestingly, both Yates and Tesich are from other countries — Yates, first a Briton, came here in 1967 to direct Bullitt, and Tesich was born in Yugoslavia, and moved to America in the mid-'50s — and they have brought some extraordinary insights as to life in the Midwest and the general mood of America to their film.

The cast is excellent. Christopher is wholly effective as Dave, making the character charming, sweet, and redeemably naive. Dooley and Barrie are fine as his beleaguered parents, and Quaid, Stern and Haley are extremely good as his friends. Robyn Douglass is very pretty and apt as an Indiana student demagogue, and Hart Bochner is strong as her somewhat jealous and pig-headed boyfriend.

Anyway, go see Breaking Away. Movies like this one don't come around very often, and a moviegoer would have to be something of a sucker to miss it.

Dennis Christopher as Dave in Breaking Away.

Summer LPs: rock 'n roll round-up

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

A few we nearly missed this summer . . .

With The Naked Eye — The Greg Kihn Band (Beserkley/Elektra HZ-10063): This — Kihn's third — is easily one of the best (and perhaps most overlooked) rock LPs of the summer. Kihn recorded Springsteen's "For You" on his last LP, and the Boss was so impressed with the Beatlesque arrangement that he gave Kihn the previously unreleased "Rendezvous" to open this one. While Kihn's version doesn't quite match the passionate intensity Springsteen gives it in concert, it's a great rock 'n roll recording, nonetheless. The title track is a bona fide rock classic, and there's a cover of Jonathon Richman's "Roadrunner" which is as good as — if not better than — the original. The rest is kind of like power pop's answer to California folk rock. A very enjoyable LP.

In Style — David Johansen (Blue Sky/CBS JZ 36082): I have to disagree with my friends who call this the best thing to ever come out of the New York Dolls. Johnny Thunders holds that title by remaining truer to the Dolls' original spirit. Still, Johansen sang "let's bring back something that is funky but chic" on his last LP, and this record comes closer to that aim than almost anything released in the last few years (and it helps to illustrate what a joke that "funky" disco music actually is). Johansen offers two sides of Motown-like rock 'n roll, and the end result is sorta like the Four Tops meet the voice of the Dolls. There's some great party material here ("Wreckless Crazy," "She"), and cameo appearances by Sylvain, Ian Hunter and Mick Ronson. "Justine" would be a number one AM hit if this was 1966. Let's bring back something . . .

Fearless — Tim Curry (A&M SP-4773): This is a terrible record. After a mediocre debut LP, Curry has decided that he is a rock lyricist. "I Do The Rock" wins the award for the stupidest rock lyrics of the year, while "Paradise Garage" mixes Springsteen-like street jargon with disco and is as ridiculous as it sounds. He may have been great as Frankfurter, but this LP reveals that — as a solo performer — Tim Curry is nothing more than a hot dog.

Mistakes — Gruppo Sportivo (Sire SRK 6066): Comedy-rock might be the best term to describe this record, since the material here is funnier and more original than anything Frank Zappa has done in years. Ironically enough, "Superman" — one of the album's eighteen cuts (there's an EP included) — begins with an instrumental solo of Zappa's "Take Your Clothes Off When You Dance" from We're Only In It For The Money before bursting into a combination Ronettes, Shangri-Las, Del Shannon ("Runaway"), Abba, Mamas & the Papas sounding masterpiece. The band members are as brilliant as Nick Lowe in their theft of hooks, riffs and formulas from the past 25 years of pop music, running the gamut from the Spector girl groups to reggae. "Mirror A Paris" is the definitive Abba parody, and "Blah Blah Magazine" pokes fun at the critics who will compare the band to Abba, Blondie, etc. . . as I just did. A truly absurd rock 'n roll wit ("You've never seen a gangster cry/But CIA-gents do!"), and a simply marvelous rock 'n roll LP.

Jumpin' In The Night — Flamin' Groovies (Sire SRK 6067): If Shake Some Action and Now were the Groovies' answer to the British Invasion and Merseybeat, this is the band's folk-rock LP, including a Dylan Blonde On Blonde cover version, two Byrds covers, and even a Warren Zevon cover. Yet I'm sorry to say that this is one of the band's weakest LPs ever. By recording "Absolutely Sweet Marie," the Byrds' tunes and Beatles' "Please Please Me," the band makes the same mistake they did by recording "Paint It Black" on their last LP — the songs are too familiar and the originals too great to ever be topped. Still the Groovies are never really bad, some of the band's original compositions really soar here, and the "Werewolves Of London" cover (which is also too familiar) could still possibly give Warren Zevon a run for his money. Ironically enough, the band included "Down Down Down," a tune Dave Edmunds & Rockpile often use to open their shows, even though this is the first Groovies' LP in some time that Edmunds didn't produce. His absence is evident. If you own the band's other LPs, you'll probably pick this up eventually. If you don't own anything by the Flamin' Groovies, do yourself a favor and pick up Shake Some Action. No rock collection should be without it.

SPORTS

Spartans a factor in run for Roses

By ADAM TEICHER

State News Sports Writer
Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of ten rundowns on Big Ten football teams. Today: the MSU Spartans.

With MSU coming off probation and a Big Ten championship season, many Spartan backers are counting on another conference title and a trip to the Rose Bowl.

Spartan Coach Darryl Rogers is quick to point out that it is too early to be making plans for Pasadena. "This season we hope we can continue the success that we had last year, but that's just speculation at this point," he said. "When you talk about our team, we have some excellent talent, but we do have some question marks."

Specifically, Rogers is worried about inexperience at quarterback, the tackles on each side of the line and depth at certain positions.

AT QUARTERBACK, ROGERS finds himself having to replace the greatest passer in MSU history and the starter for the past three seasons in Eddie Smith. The coach has tabbed sophomore Bert Vaughn as his new signal caller and since Smith also started his sophomore season, there's bound to be some comparison between the two.

"When you compare Eddie Smith to Bert Vaughn, you have to remember that Eddie Smith was in dead cold as a sophomore," Rogers said, explaining the fact that Smith had to learn the system of a new coach (the started during Rogers' first season at MSU) while learning the position of quarterback. On the other hand, Vaughn has had two years, so he should have learned the system by now.

"Vaughn has been in our program two years, so he is way ahead of Smith as a sophomore as far as awareness and knowledge of our offense," explained Rogers. "There's no doubt he's ahead of where Smith was three years ago unless he's wasted his last two years here."

Head Coach: Darryl Rogers
 1978 overall record: 8-3
 1978 Big Ten record: 7-1 (tie for first place)
 Enrollment: 43,744

Vaughn played in two games last fall, completing 21 of 40 passes for 346 yards and two touchdowns.

AT OFFENSIVE TACKLE, Angelo Fields, a part-time starter on defense in 1978, and Ted Grabenhorst have the inside tracks on starting jobs left open by the departure of last season's starters Craig Lonce and Jim Hinesly. Others that may see action include Dave Whittle and Regis McQuaide.

On the defensive side of the line, the new tackles should be Ike Griffin and Tanya Webb. They will be pressed by Pat Mitten and Jack Kirkling.

The depth in the secondary is another concern of Rogers. Cornerbacks Jim Burroughs and Mike Marshall and safety Mark Anderson were starters a year ago, but the remaining position has yet to be filled.

Al Davis and Rick Milhizer should battle for the strong safety spot. Neither has seen much game action. Milhizer was a walk-on who impressed Rogers enough last spring to earn a scholarship.

But Rogers stressed the fact that these problems will soon be resolved. "These positions are question marks only because of inexperience, not because of size or ability," he said. Other than these positions, the Spartans are loaded. Fifteen of 22 starters are back from last season.

THE 1978 SPARTANS piled up an average of 481 yards in total offense and 37 points per outing en route to finishing the season with an 8-3 record and a 12th place finish in the final Associated Press poll. Probation was the only reason the Spartans did not meet the University of Southern California in the Rose Bowl.

"Last season we had the most prolific (scoring) team in the history of the Big Ten," Rogers remarked. "I don't anticipate that again. If we do it again, we'll be a very good football team."

With Vaughn learning the ropes early in the season, the Spartans may run the ball a bit more than they did a year ago. And MSU has enough runners to stock half of the Big Ten.

Last season's leading rusher, tailback Steve Smith, returns for his junior year. Alternating with three other backs, Smith gained 772 yards on only 115 carries for a 6.7 yards-per-carry average, tops in the conference. Rogers also has two more than capable tailbacks behind Smith in sophomore Derek Hughes and junior Bruce Reeves.

Quarterback Bert Vaughn takes a break from the rigors of practice, which began Monday for the Spartans.

"They will all play to keep them as healthy as possible," Rogers said. "Of the three, only Hughes is big in size, so for the other two, 30 to 35 carries a game wears them down. But having three outstanding tailbacks is a nice problem to have."

THE FULLBACK WILL be

Lonnie Middleton, a senior from Orangeburg, S.C. Andy Schramm will see duty as the reserve.

All-American wide receiver Kirk Gibson has left MSU to make his fortune playing baseball for the Detroit Tigers. But there is enough talent at wide receiver to make Spartan fans forget all about Gibson.

Flanker Eugene Byrd returns for his senior season after leading the team in catches a year ago. Samson Howard or Jim Williams will fill in for Gibson, with Howard having the inside track at the start of practice.

But the most respected of all the Spartans in 1979 is tight end Mark Brammer, an All-American last season. Brammer was third on the squad in receptions behind Byrd and Gibson last fall.

Veterans Rod Strata, Mike Densmore and Matt Foster will join Fields and Grabenhorst on the front line. They all will be candidates for all-league honors.

THE DEFENSE SHOULD be stronger than a year ago, according to Rogers. All four linebackers return, including All Big Ten choice Dan Bass. In addition to Bass, Rogers feels

Piston promoters have 'Magic' plan

Former MSU cage hero and current Los Angeles Laker rookie Earvin 'Magic' Johnson will be featured in a Detroit Piston ticket program mini-plan called "Magic in the Wild Wild West" this winter, according to the club's public relations director Bill Kreifeldt.

Kreifeldt, speaking by telephone from his Pontiac Silverdome office Monday, said purchasers of the plan would get to see 10 games and would have an option to buy additional tickets for the Jan. 11 Los Angeles Lakers-Pistons game, in which Magic will perform. If the Pistons were to qualify for the playoffs, mini-plan holders would also have an option to purchase tickets for those games. Sales of the mini-plans will end Sept. 30.

Regular public sale of single tickets will begin sometime in early October, Kreifeldt reported. The Pistons are not yet certain how many tickets will be available to those fans that hold neither season tickets nor mini-plans.

For basketball games in the Silverdome, 22,366 reserved seats are available at $8, $7, $6 and $5. There are an additional 12-15,000 general admission seats which sell for $3.50.

"There have been a number of calls about tickets for the Jan. 11 game," Kreifeldt said. "I would think that it might set the record for a regular season professional (basketball) game in Detroit."

If so, the attendance mark would surpass the current record set last season, when Julius Erving and the Philadelphia 76ers played before a Silverdome crowd of 14,404.

Crew ends season with Chicago win

Last Saturday the MSU Crew team swept past crews from South Bend, Ind., Lincoln Park, Ill., and Milwaukee, Wis., to win the men's novice four event, the only competition it entered, in the Chicago Lakefront Festival Regatta in downtown Chicago.

Representing the MSU Crew were: bow-man, Tom Dziablenski; two-man, Al Bay; three-man, Tom Bachelor; stroke, Tom Perkins; and coxswain, Brian Isles.

A skeletal crew has been rowing throughout this summer for MSU. During the past few weeks, workouts have intensified and according to crew president Bay, the guts of an early season crew have been recently complemented by the necessary but often hard to achieve timing which is the mark of a good crew.

Having ended the summer season with a convincing victory in Chicago, the crew looks forward to the upcoming fall season.

Cawood joins MSU's NCAA cage champions

MSU basketball coach Jud Heathcote has announced the last member of his 1979 recruiting class with the addition of Bill Cawood, a graduate of East Lansing High School.

Bostic, Derek Perry, Evaristo Perez and junior Kurt James as the new Spartans for 1979-80.

IM NOTES

"He can play guard or forward and can develop into a valuable swing man," Heathcote said of the 6-foot-6 Cawood. Cawood, whose father played for the Spartans from 1943-1947, averaged 17 points and 8 assists as a senior for East Lansing.

Cawood joins freshmen Herb

There will be no early bird swim at the IM Sports-Circle pool Aug. 27-31. All afternoon IM swims Aug. 27-31 in the IM Sports-Circle will be in the upper pool due to the cleaning of the lower pool. The IM Sports-Circle building will close at 5 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 31 and reopen Monday, Sept. 17.

IM may lose tennis tourney champ Stone

By ADAM TEICHER

State News Sports Writer

The end of an era may be coming in the fall for the Intramural Department tennis tournament.

Dave Stone has won five consecutive IM tennis championships, including this summer's tournament, but the fall tournament may be his last. "I will defend my MSU IM championship in the fall, but I think that will be it," said Stone, a Ph.D. candidate in mechanical engineering. "If I get my studies done on time, and I think I will, then the fall term will be my last."

It would seem logical that Stone had been playing tennis since he was young, but he insists that he didn't start playing tennis "seriously" until he was a freshman in college. That was back in 1970. I always played baseball when I was a youth."

And it didn't surprise him that he picked up the game and excelled almost immediately. "I've always been a good athlete so I knew I could be good in tennis," Stone explained. "It was just a matter of learning the game and practicing until I became a good player."

His streak of five consecutive tournament wins in IM competition began in the spring of 1978 and extended to five with a win in the tournament this summer. He also won the Haslett open tennis tournament in 1978.

Because of commitments to his studies, Stone has had to cut down on his tennis playing. "I had to forego my tennis this summer, except for the IM tournament, for the sake of other things this summer, including my studies," he said. "I have been real involved with my research in laser physics."

Stone is a captain in the Air Force and has been "assigned to go to school and get my doctor's degree and go back to the Air Force," as Stone described it. His travels have taken him to different parts of the country and he says the Lansing area has many good tennis players.

Cheerleaders practice precision

On the field in front of MSU's Demonstration Hall, cheerleaders wearing their high school colors and letter sweaters scrambled to take their places in designated squads. As the shrill sound of a whistle echoed through the air, they began another day's workout. Leg-lifts, sit-ups and back-bends helped limber up tired bodies for another day of cheers, chants, mounts and pyramid-building. Despite sore muscles and strained voices, shouts of "fight team fight" could be heard loud and clear.

During the summer, students from across the state have been perfecting their skills in MSU's Cheerleading Sports Schools.

Carol Underwood, co-director of the cheerleading school, said the one-week session is designed to help cheerleading squads develop their skills and learn new cheers.

The teaching staff is essentially composed of present and former MSU cheerleaders, many of whom were part of the squad which took first place in national competition in March, Underwood said.

There are three one-week sessions over the summer, each of which attracts about 180 cheerleaders.

Past cheerleading squads have been "very happy" with the school, Underwood said.

Cheerleading is not the only program offered in the MSU Sports School. There are 20 other areas of instruction for both boys and girls.

The sports school, started in 1972, is both the oldest and largest school of its kind operated by any university.

State acknowledges unlimited Indian fishing rights treaties

KINROSS (UPI) — A Milliken administration official said Tuesday the state will drop its appeal of a federal court ruling guaranteeing unlimited Indian fishing rights if the Indians allow the state some say in resource management.

The statement by Kenneth Frankland, legal aide to Gov. William G. Milliken, was a significant departure from past policy statements in which the state claimed the right to control fishing in Michigan.

"We are willing to rely on Indian catch reports," Frankland said. "We would like them to be on a more timely basis. They are extremely helpful."

Frankland said any fishery management plan should have the goals of preserving the resource and helping to improve economic opportunities for Indians in a manner compatible with sports and commercial fishermen alike.

Frankland's statements came at a task force meeting on a comprehensive Great Lakes fisheries management plan.

Also at the hearing were state Natural Resources Director Howard Tanner, Bay Mills and Sault Ste. Marie Indian leaders and representatives of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs and other sport fishing interests.

Last May, U.S. District Court Judge Noel P. Fox, after a year-long trial, ruled that two 19th century treaties prevent the state from regulating Indian gill net fishing.

If a comprehensive Great Lakes fisheries management plan could be reached, Frankland said, there would be no need for the state to pursue its appeal of Fox's ruling.

He cautioned, however, that total agreement would mean state regulation and monitoring of Indian fishing activities.

Thus, religious soldiers, who ordinarily are forbidden from traveling on the Sabbath, are allowed to ride to war or to other duties involving state security.

REFUSING TO RELINQUISH the West Bank, Yosef argued, could cause another

Arab-Israeli war. "If it is true, as the politicians say, that this would endanger us in a coming war — God forbid — and much blood — God forbid — would be spilled . . . The return of territories is permissible."

Goren disagrees. Jews are forbidden from transferring to non-Jews any part of the Holy Land, he has ruled.

that Anderson, Burroughs and middle guard Bernard Hay have all-star potential.

MSU fans see all this talent and think the Spartans can win the Big Ten title. Rogers doesn't say no, but at the same time doesn't necessarily agree.

"People have us going to bowl games and we just started practice," he said.

Soon, all the talk will be academic. On Sept. 8, the Spartans open up defense of their Big Ten crown with a game against the University of Illinois at Spartan Stadium.

Diplomat declines offer

He said it was the PLO's vow to destroy Israel that excluded the Palestinian group from the negotiations at Camp David last year that produced the U.S.-sponsored peace pact between Egypt and Israel.

Adding urgency and firmness to Israel's stand was the scheduled introduction Thursday in the U.N. Security Council of an Arab-backed resolution that would express the council's backing of Palestinian rights.

ALTHOUGH YOUNG RE-SIGNED because of the authorized meeting with Terzi last month, a successor has not been named and he is serving as the Security Council president for August.

Young said it was because of his anticipated council presidency and the upcoming resolution on Palestinians that he met with Terzi, despite the U.S. policy banning direct negotiations with the PLO.

Both Israel and Egypt, in weekend meetings in Jerusalem and Cairo with America's Mideast envoy Robert Strauss, disapproved of U.S. proposals to offer an amendment to the existing Security Council Resolution 242 that would refer only to Palestinian rights. Israel insists Resolution 242, passed in 1967, is the cornerstone of the current peace talks with Egypt and must not be altered.

Carter considers U. N. voting delay

other Arab governments are insisting that the United States join the pro-Palestinian tide in the United Nations.

Returning Monday from his talks with Begin and Sadat, Strauss indicated the United States may abandon any idea of playing an active role in the debate.

Reports of discord between Strauss and the State Department over Mideast policy complicated the situation further.

Strauss denied on his return from the Mideast Monday that there is serious disagreement within the administration on an approach to the Palestinians or Mideast negotiations.

Secretary of State Cyrus R.

Vance, in the same vein, said the recommendations to Carter were made unanimously. Vice President Walter F. Mondale was chairperson of the strategy session. Attending were Vance, Strauss and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the U.S. national security assistant.

Asked who is in charge of U.S. policy, Vance said, "that has always been the responsibility of the secretary of state and remains the responsibility of the secretary of state."

THE QUESTION AROSE because The New York Times had reported Tuesday that Strauss was angered over being forced to carry out strict instructions that he felt were counterproductive. The report said he wanted a new commitment from Carter that he, and not Vance or Brzezinski, was in charge of Mideast policy.

of the President. "I'll just be sitting in on meetings and making recommendations," Rout said. "I don't feel it is cause for a revolution. If I can slip in something edge-wise which will make it easier for the constituency I'm done my job."

"We have an agreement that whenever either one of us is not satisfied with my position, we can decide to end it," he said.

Rout joined the MSU faculty in 1967 and became a professor in 1976. He served on the Committee Against Discrimination from 1970 to 1973 and was appointed this year to be a member to the U.S. Commission's Committee on Education to the Organization of American States, he said.

ROUT SAID HE is "serving at the request of the president" and if the program is successful, he may continue representing. I will feel I have

Auto workers to write legislators

we have bargaining relationships with are not greeting warmly. But we think they ought to join with us," a UAW spokesperson said.

AUTO WORKERS' JOBS were placed in jeopardy by slumping big car sales after this spring's gasoline crunch. The union believes there would have been no sales dropoff if the gasoline flow had not been impeded.

"There's over 60,000 UAW members laid off," Fraser said. "You can make the convincing argument that, had we had gasoline availability during the previous months, there simply would not be layoffs in the auto industry."

"The whole lack of an energy program has cost the auto workers 60,000 jobs and I'm afraid that's not the end of it." The cards carry a preprinted message which says: "I'm tired of being ripped off by the oil companies, OPEC and the lack of an energy program. When Congress returns, I want them to enact an effective energy program."

THE UNION SAID the write-in campaign is part of a larger push for enactment of energy legislation which will be joined later this year by several other labor and consumer groups.

UAW energy goals include a government-owned energy development company to compete with private oil producers, re-imposition of price controls on crude and heating oil, public control of oil imports through sealed bids, a strong windfall profits tax and measures to force oil companies to refine at full capacity.

General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. all said unauthorized work stoppages would violate labor agreements. Ford and GM said they do not object to employees engaging in political activity — on their own time.

"Ford Motor Co. has a long history of encouraging involvement by its employees in civic affairs," said Ford Labor Relations Vice President Sidney F. McKenna. "Nevertheless we have informed the UAW that we think its plan to have employees write letters on the energy situation is a poor idea for the work setting."

Said a GM spokesperson: "GM has informed the UAW International Union that any employees who stop work to participate in the 'write-in' scheduled for Aug. 22 will have their pay docked."

State News/
Deborah J. Borin

During the summer, many jobs are done on campus that most of us would not know about. One of these is the replacement of 1,000 greenhouse windows. Rodney L. Brown, left, and Michael Wilson who work for the physical plant, have this duty which takes approximately one month.

'No Turn on Red' signs debated

By United Press International

State transportation officials Tuesday asked local governments to reexamine the need for "No Turn on Red" signs placed at some intersections.

The request stemmed from a national study which revealed right turns on red reduce by about 12 percent the total number of accidents and save motorists time and fuel.

The study found there were fewer rear-end collisions, side-swipes, right-angle wrecks and vehicles running off the road because of right-on-red turns.

In addition, the average motorist saves six seconds driving time for every turn on red, which could average to a savings of about one-fifth of a gallon of gasoline in an hour.

"That may not sound like much, but just in Michigan that averages out to a fuel savings of 10 and one-half gallons each year," said Donald Orne, engineer of the state Department of Transportation's Traffic and Safety Division and chairperson of the national task force that did the study.

Michigan adopted turns on red in 1976. Although all 50 states have adopted the right-turn-on-red, Michigan is one of the few states which also allow motorists to turn left on a red light from a one-way street onto another.

"On the national level, the right-turn-on-red showed a significant decrease in accidents," Orne said. "Here in Michigan, however, the law has not been in existence long enough to get an accurate assessment — motorists are still adjusting to it."

He said Michigan has not shown a change in the number of accidents, "we are predicting a significant decrease in the future."

March of Dimes volunteers needed for annual fund-raiser

Volunteers for the March of Dimes will take to the streets in November for the annual Mothers' March against Birth Defects, the organization recently announced.

The Capitol Chapter of the March of Dimes has set Nov. 8 to 15 as the dates for its annual fund-raising campaign.

The march will take place in Ingham, Eaton and Clinton Counties and will be conducted door-to-door by area volunteers.

"We desperately need volunteers in all phases of the march," said Shirley Lowery of the Capitol

Chapter-March of Dimes. "You don't have to be a mother to work in the Mother's March."

Lowery encouraged MSU students to volunteer for the drive, even if only for one night of door-to-door collection.

Last year's drive netted approximately $15,000 for the March of Dimes, said Lowery, and the organization is hoping to reach $25,000 this year.

Interested persons can volunteer by calling the March of Dimes at 482-1249.
