MSU reactor used only for experiments

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

The nuclear reactor at MSU is producing about half a cubic meter of radioactive waste a year — in the form of plastic bags, plastic gloves and vials, said James Carrick, reactor supervisor.

Carrick, responding to concerns about the reactor expressed by anti-nuclear protesters at MSU last Friday, said the only purpose of the reactor was to produce radioactive materials for experiments.

Unlike power-producing nuclear plants which burn 100 tons of fuel a year and produce 30 tons of nuclear waste, MSU's reactor only burns about one gram of fuel a year, he said.

It would take 15 or 20 years, Carrick added, for the reactor to produce enough high level waste to even have it removed from the reactor core. And then there would only be a few grams, he said.

"WE HAVEN'T HAD any shipments in or out in years," he said. "We only operate on the average of one hour a day."

Carrick added that the U.S. Department of Energy owns the fuel, so when it comes time to remove wastes it will be the department's responsibility.

Materials for experiments are placed in vials which are then put in the reactor core to be made radioactive — at low levels — for experiments, Carrick said.

When those materials come out, the vials are handled with gloves so radioactive particles, such as dust from the outside of the vials, won't get on people, he said.

"The basic rule for handling radioactive material is to handle them as though they were contaminated."

PLASTIC GLOVES AND bags are placed in a special waste basket, Carrick said, and when it's full they call the MSU Radiation Safety Office which comes and picks up the refuse.

He added that the Radiation Safety Office also picks up wastes from about 200 labs on campus that use radioactive materials.

All those wastes are then held until there are enough for a commercial hauler to take it to Nevada, Carrick said.

At the reactor, security is tight so no one can accidentally get into radioactive materials.

WE HAVE A security system so no one gets in after five o'clock," Carrick said.

The reactor itself is in a 25-foot pit which is filled with water to shield against radiation, he said, adding that radiation directly above the pit was about twice the normal levels.

If something should go wrong, Carrick said, "there is a whole radiation evacuation plan that gets rehearsed every year."

Trouble isn't likely, however, because MSU's reactor, unlike power producing reactors that are about 10,000 times larger, doesn't operate under very much stress or extreme temperatures when it does operate, he added.

"The reactor is 20 years old," Carrick said. "It's been here for 10 years — since 1969. It was at the University of Illinois for 10 years before that. There has never been any trouble with the core as far as I know."

Blaze hits Brody

An estimated $50,000 damage was caused by a blaze in a Brody Hall storage room Tuesday night.

Fire broke out at about 5:45 p.m. in the snack shop's storage room, located on the first floor just below the cafeteria where about 1000 students were eating dinner.

Firefighters extinguished the blaze in the snackshop, which was closed at the time, in about 30 minutes.

After the fire was put out, fans were turned on to air out vents in the building, Carl Eigenauer, safety engineer for the MSU Department of Public Safety said.

The fire started again when hot ashes shot up the ducts to the penthouse and an additional truck had to be called to the scene.

A ladder was extended to the roof where firefighters used hoses to flush the vents. Damage estimates ranged from $50,000 to $75,000, Eigenauer said, including damage to food, machinery, linens, paper goods and the WBRS radio station, all located on the first floor.

Cause of the fire is still under investigation.

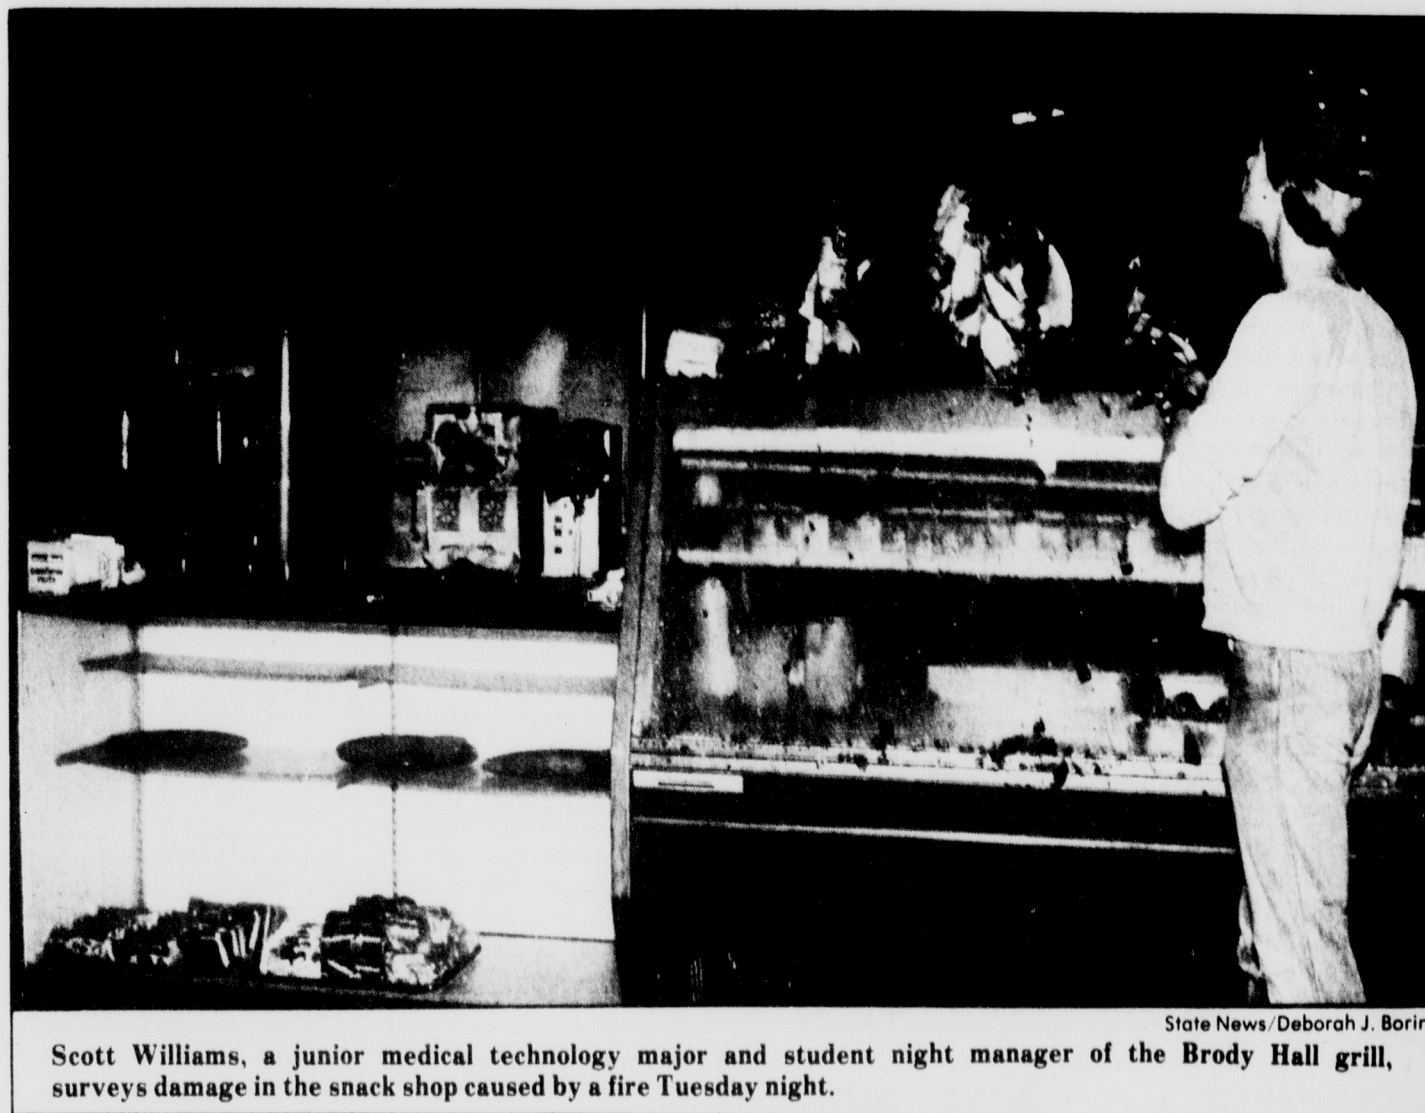

There were no flammable liquids in the storage room, but a Brody grill employee said paper and food products stored in the room could have been ignited, helping to spread the fire to the snack shop area.

The fire was discovered by Robin Karow, student supervisor of Brody cafeteria, who smelled smoke and had an employee call authorities.

Units from both East Lansing Fire Department stations responded to the call.

No one was injured in the blaze and Ray Hopper, Brody Hall manager said the cafeteria was evacuated in about five minutes when students eating dinner heard the alarm.

The grill will be closed for an indefinite time and no meals will be served in Brody Hall today.

Mackey defends swift selection; towing, parking resolutions tabled

By SUE ROBACH
State News Staff Writer

President Cecil Mackey said Tuesday that the desire to have a cooperative relationship was behind his decision to speed up the selection process of the vice president for student affairs.

At Tuesday's Academic Council meeting, several members questioned Mackey's decision to hasten the process and said that he may have violated the Taylor II guidelines, which pertain to the search and selection procedure for officers other than the president.

Also, the Executive Committee of Academic Council originally had requested that Mackey delay his recommendation to get faculty input for vice president of student affairs until the October Board of Trustees meeting.

Mackey said that he wanted to fill the position at the beginning of the academic year. His nomination, Moses Turner, was approved Friday at the Board of Trustees meeting.

THE BOARD ALSO approved Mackey's nominations of Connie Stewart as vice president of University relations and Joseph E. Dickinson as vice president for University development.

Mackey told the Academic Council that it was important to see who would be serving the post and move ahead with the decision.

"I am fearful that what happened may set a precedent," Zolton Ferency, associate professor of criminal justice said.

Ferency suggested that the Taylor II guidelines be examined to determine their effectiveness.

Ferency and Collette Moser, associate professor of agricultural economics, voiced disapproval of Mackey's selection process at Friday's Board of Trustees meeting.

MACKAY SAID THAT he did not feel bound by the Taylor II guidelines when he made his decision.

Also at the meeting, Provost Clarence L. Winder said that the College of Business is limiting its enrollment concerning students admitted to the college and the courses offered each term.

Richard Lewis, dean of the College of Business, said that courses offered by the College of Business are in great demand.

"Fashion merchandising majors, for example, rely heavily on business courses to meet their graduation requirements," Lewis said.

However, Lewis said that seniors majoring in business who need a certain course to graduate are given priority.

LEWIS ATTRIBUTES THE problem to the decreasing amount of doctoral candidates enrolled in colleges throughout the nation.

"It isn't a matter of shifting resources within the college," Lewis said. "It involves getting the supply of professors up to the demand of students."

Lewis said that members of the college are obtaining estimates from other institutions on the amount of doctoral candidates in business.

A RESOLUTION CONCERNING parking, towing and other issues of public safety was tabled.

The resolution urges the Department of Public Safety to publish policies concerning parking and towing.

COMMEMORATION NOT 'DRY'

State Capitol marks centennial

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

The 100th anniversary of the State Capitol was marked with pomp and ceremony, a steady drizzle and the absence of the Governor Tuesday.

Sen. Michael O'Brien, D-Detroit opened the ceremonies on the Capitol lawn by welcoming about 200 people who attended the event.

"We honor not the legislators whose pictures grace the walls, but the people of Michigan," O'Brien said.

Rep. Debbie Stabenow, D-East Lansing read a letter from Governor William G. Milliken, who was at a White House ceremony for the swearing in of Reubin O.D. Askew as a special U.S. representative for trade negotiations.

"I AM VERY sorry that I am unable to be with all of you today for the rededication of Michigan's State Capitol," Milliken stated in the letter.

"We need only to look at this building and reflect on the times in which it was built in order to gather lessons and strength to carry us into the coming decades."

"The Capitol, constructed out of honest materials such as sandstone, wood and copper, immortalized the nobler aspects and ideals of man," the letter continued.

"The men and women who pass through the halls of the Capitol and work within the framework of government will change," it said. "The building, and what it represents, remains constant."

During the ceremony, a "time capsule" was placed in the Capitol cornerstone, replacing the original cornerstone time capsule which was removed from the building last November.

THE NEW CAPSULE includes a 1979 proof set of United States coins, some 19th century documents replacing those which deteriorated in the old capsule and an electronic calculator.

The cornerstone was sealed by the Masonry Institute of Michigan in accordance with their "ancient rites," which included checking the stone to make sure it was "square, level and plumb."

The time capsule and stone were then consecrated with corn, wine and oil by the fraternity of Masons.

Engineers sealed the inner layer of the time capsule with nitrogen so that oxygen and moisture would not destroy its contents.

House Speaker Bobby Crim said that organizers promised him that it would not be the "usual dry ceremony."

"They delivered on that one," Crim quipped in reference to the steady drizzle.

CRIM SAID THAT people laughed when Lansing was nominated as the site for the Capitol of Michigan.

"It was described as a 'hole in the wilderness,'" Crim said. "Times have changed — neither the government nor the building is what it was in 1879."

Construction of the Capitol began in 1871 and it was completed and dedicated in 1879, Crim said.

The Capitol cost $1.4 million to complete, he said, and it would cost about $200 million to replace.

Some of the changes that have occurred in our society over the last hundred years are reflected in the items placed in the time capsule which future Michiganders will find in 2079, Secretary of State Richard Austin said.

"COINS MADE OF less precious metal and the Susan B. Anthony dollar reflect changes in our society," Austing said.

"Women were not invited to the ceremony in 1873. — I just had a terrible thought — we have a woman presiding over the ceremony today," Austin said, referring to Stabenow.

"I wonder if women will invite men in 2079," Austin said.

Programming Board to settle with Fiddle

By MELANIE J. KOTOWICZ
State News Staff Writer

Programming Board will decide today whether its former member, Ten Pound Fiddle, is entitled to revenues and equipment it accumulated as a part of Programming Board, but Fiddle members say there is much more to the issue.

Ten Pound Fiddle, a coffeehouse which sponsors weekly folk music concerts, withdrew from Programming Board in May 1979 because of the slow process of the complex bureaucratic system by which Programming Board operates, said Bob Blackman, who advises Ten Pound Fiddle.

Programming Board is one of three boards which makes up the Associated Students of MSU. Its function is to promote student programming such as films, concerts and theater.

Blackman said the group accumulates many low-cost expenses for items such as stamps and paperclips, and they were willing to keep Programming Board informed of its expenses.

BUT GRADUALLY THE group was asked more frequently to fill out forms and ASMSU was making too many demands, Blackman said.

The paperwork required so much time and effort on the part of the group, that it felt it was no longer worthwhile to be a member of the board, Blackman added.

"We don't want to fill out forms and then have to wait days for a check to be written to us to buy what we need," he said. "It seems foolish to have to get a check to buy 15 stamps."

After the group resigned from Programming Board, they asked for the revenues they had accumulated and the equipment they purchased with the revenues.

The group was aware that funds allocated by Programming Board had to be used as ASMSU dictated, Blackman said. But they also believed that the revenue earned and that merchandise purchased with the revenue would be the property of Ten Pound Fiddle.

"AT THE TIME we were invited to join Programming Board in 1977, we were told we would be able to have financial independence," he said.

The group was told that any revenue it accumulated and any merchandise it purchased would be owned by the group and not ASMSU, Blackman said.

Jeff Frumkin, assistant director of Student Activities said, "There isn't any question in my mind that that information was given to them."

Frumkin said Programming Board is faced with much difficulty in settling the dispute because it is the first time an issue of its kind has occurred.

Programming Board wants to be fair to Ten Pound Fiddle, but they must also consider their responsibilities to the students, Frumkin said.

"They want to be as right as possible and as fair as possible," he added.

THE GROUP PURCHASED a sound system worth $2,800, consisting of four microphones, an amplifier and four speakers, under the assumption that it would own the equipment.

Blackman explained that performers expect a coffeehouse to provide them with a sound system.

Blackman said that if Programming Board votes to keep the equipment and the revenues, the group would suffer a "significant" loss.

"I don't know if we still could afford to exist," he said. "And for a small organization that doesn't make that much money on any given concert, it is a significant loss."

This term, Ten Pound Fiddle sponsors two concerts a week. Without its money and equipment, the group would have to buy a new sound system and would also be forced to reduce the amount of programming they could provide, he said.

"We want the money back because we want to continue producing concerts," Blackman said.

Blackman added that no Ten Pound Fiddle staffperson has every received salary or payment for any of his or her services.

"We've always been a volunteer organization in the five years we've been operating," he said.

Jim Peterson, ASMSU Comptroller, has frozen all of the funds, totaling $1,808, until the dispute is settled.

But John Haytol, chairperson of Programming Board, still feels strongly against the idea of letting the group keep the revenues and equipment.

The reserves they acquired and the equipment they were using was a direct benefit of their membership in Programming Board, Haytol said.

They chose to voluntarily forfeit their membership after being offered a compromise in accountability that was acceptable to both sides, he added.

Since they chose to leave the board, they have to forfeit the benefits, Haytol said. "They can't have their cake and take it with them."

Programming Board will meet today at 4:30 p.m. in the Sun Porch Room of the Union to attempt to settle the dispute.

Ingham County files for suit dismissal against township; 'not properly placed'

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

Ingham County has filed a motion calling for the dismissal of a lawsuit filed against it by Meridian Township, which claims the annexation issue was illegally placed on the Nov. 6 ballot.

The county claims that it committed no legal wrong against Meridian Township when it filed for the election to annex part of east campus from the Township into East Lansing, Larry Salstrom, the county's attorney, said.

Ingham County Clerk Lingg Brewer scheduled the election to annex parts of East Complex residence halls to East Lansing after a petition was filed June 26. Sponsors of the annexation election petition claim that the municipal boundaries which cut through parts of Owen, McDonel, Hubbard, Akers and Holmes halls cause confusion during voter registration.

Meridian filed suit against the Ingham County Clerk and the election scheduling committee Sept. 7. Meridian claims Brewer was not acting within his jurisdiction when he scheduled the annexation election.

MERIDIAN CLAIMS BREWER should have followed Michigan Boundary Commission guidelines in scheduling the election. Brewer was acting under the Charter Township Act.

Meridian claims the call for the election should be voided because Brewer does not "represent" the county. Under the Township Charter Act, the County clerk is given that jurisdiction.

Meridian also claims that the civil rights of certain residents in the township would be violated because residents living outside the annexation area would not be allowed to vote in the election.

Ingham County claims Meridian Township's suit should be dismissed because it was not filed under the proper statute. The suit was filed as a declaratory judgment, Salstrom said, and should have been filed according to Michigan Compiled Law.

If the judge grants dismissal of the suit, the election would remain scheduled for Nov. 6. If dismissal of the suit is not granted, there would be court determination on the lawsuit, Salstrom said.

The county's motion will be heard Oct. 10 in Ingham County Circuit Court.

"Ripper" embarrasses English police

LEEDS, England (AP) — Police, angered and embarrassed by the elusive "Yorkshire Ripper," enlisted the public Tuesday in a countryside blitz to track down the man who killed 12 women in four years. Yorkshire Chief Constable Ronald Gregory said a million pamphlets would be distributed throughout Britain, huge posters would be put up asking for information, and special tapes — including an excerpt of a message from the Ripper himself — would be broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corp. and local radio stations.

All the murders have been committed in the Yorkshire area in northern England.

Tracking down the Ripper is not going to be a Sherlock Holmes detection," Gregory said. It is going to be in the hands of the public who see things, who have suspicions about someone down the road, even a relative, friend, business associate — someone they feel could be this paranoiac who hates prostitutes and who is determined to eradicate them."

Soviets say pensioners can keep working

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, faced with serious labor shortages and a need to support millions of old-age pensioners, announced new measures Tuesday to encourage older citizens to keep working.

The current retirement age in most jobs is 60 for men and 55 for women. But limited numbers of pensioners have long been a common sight in Soviet offices, transport services and factories, working to avoid boredom or to supplement pension income.

Seeking to increase this number, the decree published in newspapers Tuesday said "necessary conditions" — apparently financial ones — to keep more pension-age workers in the labor force had not previously been provided for.

The decree permits pensioners who stay on the job after retirement age to get larger pension payments in subsequent years. Other provisions call for the retention of all or part of a worker's pension income while earning wages from work.

The United States last year passed a law raising the legal mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70 for most workers, effective Jan. 1, 1979. The law also abolished entirely the mandatory retirement age of 70 for most federal employees.

Jackson carries Sadat's message to PLO

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson shuttled among Mideast capitals Tuesday bearing a message from Anwar Sadat calling on Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat to use diplomacy rather than war to settle his quarrel with Israel.

Jackson, who met earlier Tuesday with Sadat at the Egyptian president's home in Giza on the Nile, told reporters on arrival at Beirut airport that Sadat had told him: The PLO should assess its position in light of its increasing international acceptance and use diplomacy instead of warfare.

The impact of a PLO cease-fire would be as dramatic as was the Egyptian leader's trip to Jerusalem two years ago, Jackson quoted Sadat as saying.

Jackson told reporters that Sadat had said he was willing to aggressively pursue the peace process, involving the PLO as the only representative of the Palestinian people.

The American black activist arrived here on Sadat's private jet, lent by the Egyptian leader. The aircraft required special permission from the Lebanese government to land, since Egyptian planes are boycotted by most Arab countries.

Balloon downed in Ohio, just short of goal

SPENCERVILLE, Ohio (AP) — The hopes of four balloonists for a successful non-stop, trans-America flight ended early Tuesday when a severe thunderstorm forced them to scuttle their balloon and gondola in a soybean field.

The flight of the giant helium-filled balloon — DaVinci Trans-America — ended abruptly after it was pelted by rain, snow and ice and threatened by lightning, said pilot Rudolph Englemann of Boulder, Colo.

Chief pilot Vera Simons, of McClean, Va., broke a leg during the landing. She underwent surgery and was reported in fair condition at St. Rita's Medical Center in nearby Lima.

Englemann, along with Fred Hyde, an eye surgeon from Prairie Village, Kan., and NBC-TV photographer Randy Birch, suffered only bruises.

A successful flight had appeared certain for the DaVinci and its four adventurers. It was only four hours from surpassing the current endurance record of 139 hours, six minutes for a helium-filled balloon. It was less than 24 hours from completing the first non-stop trans-continental balloon flight — the goal the crew set when lifting off from Tillamook, Ore., 2,500 miles to the west, last Wednesday.

Pentagon keeps ideas alive - even old ones

WASHINGTON (AP) — Old ideas never die at the Pentagon. They just fade away. Then they are revived years later.

The latest example of this phenomenon is the Carter administration's plan to load transport ships with heavy military gear and "pre-position" them in friendly foreign ports near areas of possible crisis.

In an emergency, the United States would fly Army or Marine troops to the crisis scenes, where they would draw equipment from the ships and presumably be ready to fight.

The plan was outlined to reporters by a senior defense official Monday night. This official, who asked not to be identified, was explaining President Carter's reference in his Cuba speech to enhancing the capacity of our rapid deployment forces to protect our own interests "and to respond to calls for help from allies and friends."

The idea sounds much like an ill-fated proposal advanced by President Lyndon Johnson's administration 14 years ago. Then, the Defense Department wanted to build 15 to 20 special forward deployment logistics ships that would have been packed with combat equipment kept in ready-to-roll condition.

Strikers threaten force to prevent hiring

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — About 800 strikers, some with clubs and baseball bats, swarmed outside Olin Corp.'s firearms plant Tuesday and again blocked the hiring of replacement workers.

Mayor Frank Logue extended for a second day his emergency order shutting down the company's Winchester sporting arms facility, the main plant of the nation's largest gun manufacturer.

Late Tuesday afternoon, Superior Court Judge Donald Dorsey ordered the city to appear in court Wednesday to defend its action. Dorsey said the city should show cause why an injunction should not be issued against further shutdowns of the Olin plants.

Dorsey also is considering a company motion that the union be held in contempt for allegedly violating a court order limiting the number of pickets.

Police Chief Edward Morrone, who went to the scene with Logue, said there were no arrests or violence. He said, however, there were a few unconfirmed reports of some strikers trying to drag people out of their cars as they came to work.

CARTER PUTS TREATY IN PERSPECTIVE

Congress still unsettled on Cuba

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Republican leaders in the Senate said Tuesday the SALT II treaty cannot be ratified now, partly because President Carter has failed to separate the pact from the continuing furor over Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

But the Senate's democratic leadership fought to save the treaty, saying Carter has succeeded in demonstrating that the presence of 2,600 soldiers in Cuba no way overshadows the importance of a treaty to control the race in nuclear arms.

The debate over the future of the strategic arms limitation treaty continued despite Carter's effort in a nationally broadcast speech Monday night to defuse the issue and separate it from the Senate's consideration of the SALT accord.

IN HIS SPEECH, Carter said he did not win agreement from the Soviets to downgrade the status of the Soviet troops.

He said he planned to increase U.S. surveillance of military activities in Cuba, bolster U.S. naval and military presence in the area and speed more aid to Latin American nations that feel threatened by the Soviet-Cuban alliance.

But administration officials said Tuesday that Carter does not plan to take any steps against the Soviet Union and has decided against linking the troop issue to such matters as trade with the Russians.

In the Senate, Republican leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee said he found Carter's response to the Soviet troop issue "disappointing and inadequate" and said his count shows SALT II would attract fewer than 60 votes if a final test were held now. The votes of 67 senators are needed for ratification.

SEN. FRANK CHURCH, D-Idaho, chairperson of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was reported to be considering a reservation to the treaty saying the accord would not take effect until the Soviet brigade is withdrawn or dismantled.

But Baker, at a news conference, called that idea "dodging the issue and a cop-out." He said he would rather see the withdrawal of the brigade as a precondition to ratification.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairperson of the Senate Republican conference, said there is no chance now for ratification. He predicted that the Democratic leadership would postpone action on the treaty until next year and said the delay could extend to April.

But Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said he still intends to bring the treaty up this year.

Tower said that if Byrd does so, he will likely face an attempt to send it back to the Foreign Relations Committee, either until 1980 or indefinitely.

MEANWHILE, THE COMMITTEE is prepared to end its long series of hearings on the pact and to proceed to the consideration of possible changes. Its schedule has been set back while it waits for a report by the Senate Intelligence Committee on whether Soviet compliance with the pact is verifiable.

Soviets lash out at Carter on Cuba issue

AP — The Soviet Union lashed out Tuesday against President Carter's announced military moves to offset Soviet troops in Cuba, charging that Washington seeks to escalate "gunboat diplomacy" in the Caribbean.

Two of America's most influential allies, France and West Germany, said the Cuba issue is not so important that it should delay ratification of the SALT II arms limitation treaty. Debate over the troops has delayed U.S. Senate consideration of the SALT agreement signed by Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev in Vienna last June.

In the Kremlin's first detailed comment on Carter's Monday night broadcast address, Tass said the president and his advisers had been seeking to exploit "a myth that they themselves created" to exacerbate tensions and press for bigger military outlays.

Carter announced in his speech the temporary stationing of 1,500 Marines at the U.S. base at Guantanamo in Cuba and creation of a new permanent joint task force headquarters in Key West, Fla. A Pentagon spokesperson said Tuesday that starting in mid-October, 3,500 Marines and sailors aboard four amphibious ships would stage special exercises at Guantanamo for about four weeks. He said 10 light bombers would participate.

Tass, in a dispatch from Washington, said the controversy over the reported presence of Soviet troops in Cuba had been whipped up into a "noisy, propagandistic campaign."

NEW YORK — Pope John Paul II took his traveling ministry to New York's streets and towers Tuesday on a mission of diplomacy and prayer and kinship with the poorest of his American flock.

The diplomacy was at the United Nations, where the pope pleaded for a step beyond arms reduction — "an energetic effort to do away with the very possibility of provoking war."

The prayer was at St. Patrick's Cathedral and later at a mass for 70,000 in Yankee Stadium, and the pastoral visit was in the deteriorating South Bronx and Harlem — included because the pope insisted on seeing down-trodden areas as well as the cathedrals and the splendors of America.

CROWDS DID NOT appear as large as expected at the pope's arrival, but New York did not remain blasé for long. The streets were crowded in the area where the pontiff had lunch at the residence of the Vatican's U.N. observer, with hundreds waving handkerchiefs and serenading the pontiff with the spiritual "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands."

By midafternoon, too, Fifth Avenue below the soaring gothic spires of St. Patrick's was jammed with crowds awaiting the pontiff's appearance later in the day.

The pope spoke for an hour before the U.N. General Assembly, passing up parts of his prepared text. He received a 1 1/2-minute standing ovation from the delegates.

Near the end of his speech, he referred again to weapons, saying "Are the children to receive the arms race from us as a necessary inheritance?" And he added: "How are we to explain this unbridled race?"

THE POPE ALSO stressed that any solution to the Middle East problems must include a just settlement of the Palestinian question.

Later, the pope praised the United Nations as a "great and universal endeavor" in a speech to the U.N. Secretariat's staff. He compared the staff to the "carvers of stones," who along with architects and patrons had created great temples and cathedrals.

Pope John Paul, the supreme pastor of the world's 700 million Catholics, appeared more rested than he had been when he arrived in Boston Monday from Ireland for a 7-day tour of the nation. In New York, he saw his first American sunshine.

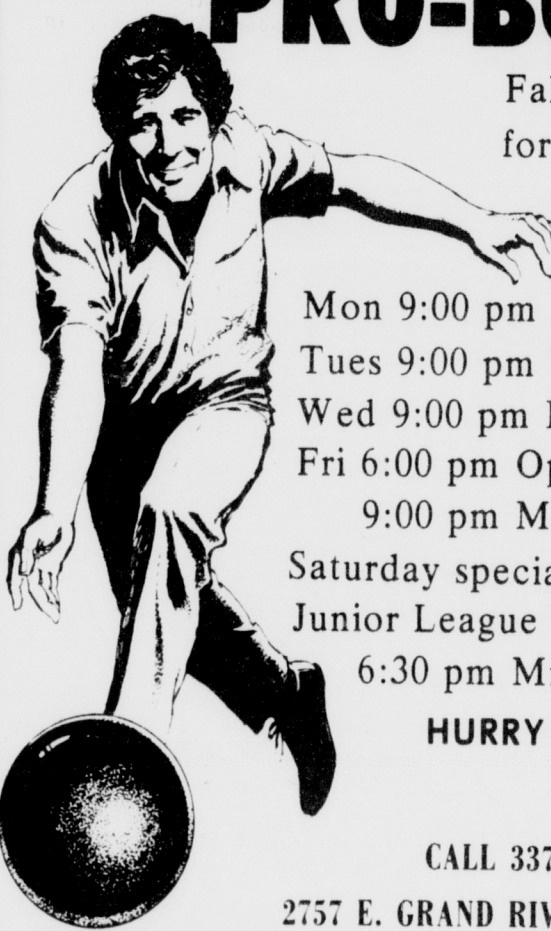

Greeted on arrival by United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, the pontiff expressed his hope that nations will recognize "that there is only one world and that is the home of all."

The pope was denied a uniquely American experience, that of seeing New York traffic. Police had cleared the roads between LaGuardia Airport and the United Nations and few people turned out along the motorcade route.

But the pope pulled back the sunroof of his limousine and stood, extending his characteristic palms up, two-handed greeting to a smaller-than-expected crowd that greeted him at the United Nations.

Council vote may cause a lawsuit

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

The Lansing City Council's split vote Monday night on a resolution to withhold $28,000 from a Grand Rapids law firm could leave the city open for a lawsuit, a city official said.

Deputy Finance Director Jan Lazar said the council's action leaves the city with an audit problem and the possibility of a lawsuit if the $28,000 is not paid.

The measure was defeated because the four opposing councilmembers refused to approve the payment without assurances that similar "cost overruns" would not occur again.

The law firm of Miller, Johnson, Snell and Cumisky was hired as "outside legal counsel" for labor negotiations with the Lansing police, firefighters and general employees.

"WE GAVE PERMISSION to Mr. Bodwin (Daniel Bodwin, personnel director for the City of Lansing) to secure the attorneys for labor negotiations," City Council President Louis Adado said.

Councilmembers Richard Baker, Terry McKane, Robert Hull and James Blair voted to withhold payment to the firm.

The councilmembers said that they would not pass a resolution to pay the firm unless a measure was passed that would prevent legal help from being hired without a contract again.

Councilmember James Blair said that the $28,000 was a "cost overrun."

"This overrun was done without a contract," Blair said. "What I call a blank check. They (the attorneys) encumbered this city to the amount of $28,000."

"IT'S HORRIBLY IRRESPONSIBLE to approve a $28,000 cost overrun without assurance that it won't happen again," Councilmember Hull said.

Councilmembers Lucile Belen, Jack Gunther, William Brenke and Adado voted in favor of paying the firm without passing a resolution that would prevent overruns.

The proposed resolution would have required that the city attorney Stephen Sawyer review all plans for hiring outside legal counsel.

A SECOND RESOLUTION would have put a three-year limit on contracts with general counsel exempting those hired for specific cases.

In other action, the Council approved a pact with Teamsters Local 580, which will now represent about 400 city clerical and technical workers who were previously without a union.

A resolution was unanimously adopted that will extend dental benefits to retirees beginning Nov. 1. The benefits are part of the new Teamsters contract.

Overseas study aid applications ready

Graduate and undergraduate minority students interested in overseas studies may apply for government grants for international study projects, Leslie Rout, special assistant to the president, said Tuesday.

Minority students who would like to work on overseas projects related to their academic program should apply with Rout or Charles Glozko, director of overseas study, as soon as possible.

Rout's office is located at 450 Administration Bldg. and Glozko's office is 108 International Center.

"The government has told us to sue this money by Dec. 31, 1979, so any minority student who thinks he or she has a good proposal should definitely come see us," Rout said.

About $3,000 in grants from the International Communications Agency of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is still available for these projects, Glozko said.

Projects that are started before Dec. 31 will then have "a very good chance of being renewed," he added.

The International Communications Agency originally gave the overseas program $15,000.

"Overseas projects must be related to a person's academic program as well as career goals and objectives," Glozko said.

Unemployment up in Lansing, drops in Michigan during Aug.

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

Overall unemployment in Michigan fell slightly during August but rose significantly in auto industry areas, according to the latest Michigan Employment Securities Commission report.

Lansing reported 22,500 persons, or 9.2 percent of the labor force, out of work in August compared to the 7.8 percent unemployed in July and 10.7 percent in August 1978.

The automotive industry's model changeover is one cause for the increase in unemployment, Robert Sherer, Labor Market Analyst for MESC said. "Model changeover affects unemployment this time every year," he said.

SHERER ADDED THAT the largest groups to be affected by the sharp unemployment increases are the "experienced unemployed."

The experienced unemployed consist mainly of blue collar workers who have lost their jobs.

Other groups that have suffered from increased unemployment are those in clerical and service positions and new entrant and re-entrant employees.

New entrant employees are people who are entering the job market for the first time and (continued on page 14)

Judge postpones hearing to let negotiations resume

Circuit Court Judge James Giddings postponed a show-cause hearing Tuesday to allow striking Lansing teachers and the Board of Education to continue contract negotiations.

The two sides resumed contract talks Monday at 5:00 p.m. after being ordered back to the table by Giddings.

At the Monday hearing, Giddings said he was not satisfied with the effort of the two sides, noting that they had met for less than five hours between Thursday and Sunday.

The reason for the hearing was to determine if the 1,540 striking Lansing teachers were in contempt of court for defying Giddings order to return to the classroom last week.

Giddings issued the back-to-work order after determining that teachers were on strike in the legal sense of the word and that "irreparable harm" would be suffered by school children if the work stoppage continued.

Meeting at the Lansing Civic Center on Sept. 27, the teachers voted to stay out of the classroom until they had reached a contract agreement. They have been striking for four weeks.

An Oct. 15 deadline has been set by Giddings for the two sides to reach an agreement. Giddings said he might lift the injunction at the time, if he determined that the board was not bargaining in good faith.

Issues still being negotiated include a cost of living allowance and class size.

Case Hall resident dies of natural cause

An MSU psychology student died early Monday morning in Case Hall from what is believed to be natural causes.

Mark Lash, 22, a senior from Lexington, Mich. was found in his room by a friend early Monday morning.

Lash, a handicapper, apparently died from congestion in the lungs, according to a preliminary examination.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by the Pomeroy Funeral Home in Lexington.

The funeral will be 11 a.m. Friday.

Strike continues

Earlier this week, Circuit Court Judge James Giddings held a hearing to determine whether or not Lansing teachers were in contempt of court because of their refusal to return to work by Sept. 28.

Giddings set the date as a deadline for teachers to return before the Board of Education or the Court would have to pursue further action.

In a strike as lengthy as this one, there must be a time when both sides pause to re-examine the issues and the validity of their positions. All available options must be carefully studied to somehow accommodate those parties concerned. The time is now.

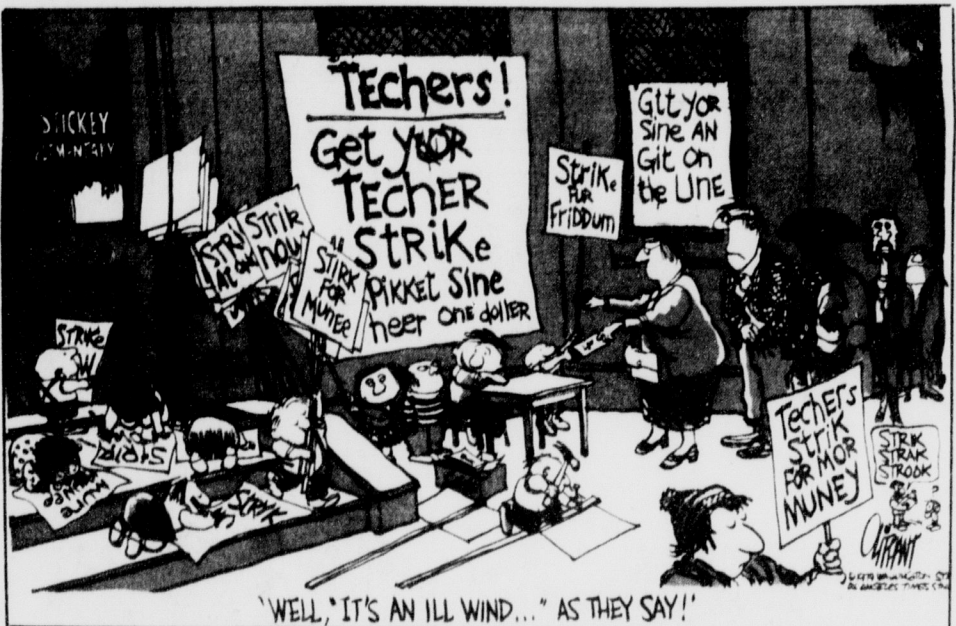

Probably the leading factor that made the strike inevitable is money. In their bargaining efforts, the teachers are trying to get a cost of living allowance included in their contracts. The allowance would enable teachers to maintain the standard of living achieved by a new contract, even though the inflation rate may rise annually. Another major roadblock obstructing a solution is the debate over classroom size. Teachers want to see defined limits for the number of students allowed in classrooms. At the moment, teachers receive extra pay if they have to teach a class where the number of students exceeds the allowed maximum.

Judge Giddings ruled the strike would cause irreparable harm to many students as part of his back to work order. What about harm done to the teachers involved? It would be ridiculous to assume that teachers will come out of this battle unscarred, for they will undoubtedly suffer the most in this type of situation; not the children.

If teachers are not paid a salary reflective of their professional standing — one must remember teachers are professional people just as doctors and lawyers are — teachers will not be able to give their best performance in the classroom and their fullest attention to the well being of their students. It is terribly difficult to concentrate on ABC's when one has to wonder where the next meal is coming from or how the monthly bills are going to be paid.

Adding to the teachers financial worries, the raise the Board of Education offered falls frightfully short of adequate. Latest figures offered by the Board show they are willing to grant the teachers a pay increase of 6.5 percent. That would put annual starting salaries from $11,053 to $11,771. An increase of this magnitude would do nothing for the teachers except imply that their strike was virtually non-productive.

In this, the fourth week of the strike, several observers have asked if the Board has been negotiating in good faith, since the Board is seemingly trying to place the burden of settling the strike on the Court. Of course, this tactic is entirely unacceptable on a variety of counts. It undermines the true value of the legal system, it circumvents many of the main issues involved in the strike (more money), and it places the teachers in a most unfavorable public image. And public support is one of the most crucial links in a successful educational system.

Policy fills gaps

MSU President M. Cecil Mackey's recommendations for hiring principles in executive/management positions should come of no surprise to anyone. After a series of upper level affirmative action appointments which Mackey initiated a few weeks ago, one would easily suspect the president to come down just as hard on future executive/management appointments. And because the Board of Trustees have been ecstatically overwhelmed with his performance in this area thus far, we have every reason to believe that Mackey's recommendations will soon become law.

Mackey's reason for formulating the proposed policy are obvious for, while other sectors of the University received new affirmative action hiring procedures last year, nothing has yet been said about upper-level appointment procedures. Under the proposed hiring principles, Mackey outlined some general guidelines for associate and assistant vice-presidents, assistants to the President and assistants to a vice-president. As has already been demonstrated, the President will be responsible for suggesting vice-presidents to the Board of Trustees for approval — a procedure which has not changed and is not likely to in the near future.

What Mackey proposed for these positions is to have any nominations forwarded directly to him. If, for example, a vice-president finds what may be a suitable assistant for her/his office, Mackey would intervene to see all efforts have been made to find a competent woman or minority for that position. The administrator's report will include a list of various candidates' credentials, plus an assessment of the many interviews conducted during the search. Mackey also intends to be involved in the process from the start, as he would approve the search process before it is initiated.

Mackey's plan is a good one. If adopted, this policy would fill what many consider to be the only logistical gap in a strong University affirmative action hiring process. However, Mackey concedes this procedure is not applicable in all instances, including those where an acting position must be filled immediately.

As if to assure us that any past mistakes will be rectified, Mackey included a provision to insure that all positions will first be posted with the University, unless a special exception is made by the President. While some fear an outsider's take-over of the administration (and that may be true), this provision at least allows for posting within the community before outside efforts are made.

Our one concern is this: what if when Mackey leaves the presidency, a less-than-competent leader takes his place? If this were to happen, the policy could be volatile to the progress of affirmative action at the University. While we have good faith in Mackey's intentions — there is little doubt that the man is exceptional — we fear what this policy could create in the wrong hands.

PAC should bear the name of its distinguished originator

Now that the MSU Board of Trustees has approved a $17.5 million contract for construction of the State Center for the Performing Arts, it should be just a matter of time before it bears the name of its originator.

This discussion might seem overdone, but the most logical thing for the Board of Trustees to do now is to name the center The Clifton R. Wharton Jr. State Center for the Performing Arts.

Let us not forget that it was Wharton who traveled around the country raising funds and making presentations to possible backers. It was Wharton who organized the University's first enrichment drive and invited many people to Cowles House to discuss the PAC.

But this is not the only reason why Wharton's name should grace the center. For Wharton came to MSU at a time of social crisis — when most universities were in turmoil over the Vietnam war, the Kent State and Jackson State killings and the trial of the Chicago Seven.

During his first six months, Wharton showed his strength when he dealt with student demonstrations, sit-ins, the student strike of 1970 and a phenomenon now referred to as People's Park. People's Park was a camp-in rock concert near the river banks where hundreds of students pitched tents and slept in sleeping bags for two or three days. When Wharton arrived, three of the University's trustees openly admitted they did not want him to come to MSU.

But Wharton overcame his adversaries and met with students on the steps of the Union to quell an episode of window smashing and vandalism that was sparked by the Chicago Seven verdict.

During Wharton's stay here, this University saw five Rhodes Scholars selected from its ranks. He was offered various positions within President Carter's cabinet and was considered by 13 different colleges as a possible president. In fact, a recent article by columnist Chuck Stone suggested Wharton replace Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

As Stone put it, "Rather than worry about a successor for Andy Young, blacks ought to be demanding a black successor for Cyrus Vance. One who would continue the brilliant diplomatic tradition established by (Ralph) Bunche is Dr. Clifton R. Wharton Jr., a distinguished economist and president of the nation's largest university, State University of New York, and son of one of the foreign service's ablest diplomats."

It appears that everyone else realizes Wharton's talents except the people at MSU. Former Trustee Pat Carrigan-Strickland said it best when she stated that MSU has grown in size and stature because of Wharton's leadership and the MSU family owes the Whartons a debt of gratitude.

The Whartons were East Lansing's link to the cultural arts. Dolores Wharton often displayed the works of local artists at Cowles House during their stay at MSU. And the Whartons allowed students to view their collection of Picasso's and other fine art works.

The Whartons were a big plus to this University and the institution owes them a bit of thanks. To continue listing the numerous contributions that Wharton made to MSU would be obvious. But even his critics, when they seriously and objectively look at Wharton, must agree he did more for this University than most people will admit.

Shortly after President M. Cecil Mackey arrived at this University, he asked why a large and "prestigious" college like MSU does not have a law school. Wharton asked the same question. He also fought, with the state Senate on numerous occasions, about receiving funds for a law school. Wharton was told that there was a law school in Ann Arbor so there was no need for one here. But it did not stop him. He continued to fight for it.

And now it is time for the Board of Trustees to recognize his efforts and acknowledge what he did and tried to do for this University. They can do it at their next board meeting. Various trustees have said it was premature to consider naming the PAC after Wharton because the board had not approved a bid for the construction. On Friday the board accepted that bid.

VIEWPOINT: FURRY FRIENDS

MSU makes way for small animals

By SCOTT FISHER

My good friend Randy Bob asked for some space. Randy?

"Michigan State University has an extensive network of squirrel paths; the squirrel paths are those skinny concrete sidewalks that often run parallel to the fat people sidewalks (i.e., fat sidewalks). These squirrel paths are a marvelous and splendid idea. A squirrel can walk to the Baker Woodlot, the Natural Science Building, or to either asexual intramural building, semi-confident he won't be smushed. Smushed squirrels are not attractive, especially to relatives and close friends. Say, for example, Ed, a squirrel, is smushed on the sidewalk by a jogger because there are no squirrel paths, and Ed's squirrel bowing buddy Tim, a different squirrel, happens by and sees Ed lying there all smushed. Tim might well be overcome by vengeful hatred and yell, 'I hate all humans. I'll get them all.' Tim's small delicately balanced squirrelbrain would then, most probably, snap and he would start doing destructive and nasty things like sniping at jogging associate professors with a tiny handgun and calling small, gullible children and telling them they were adopted."

"The squirrel paths are a fabulous and clever idea."

"Now and again, a bicyclist can be seen riding on a squirrel path, but, by and big, the bicyclists are very considerate; most ride in the street, on the fat people sidewalks, in the grass, into each other, over pedestrians, through Berkeley, up the down staircase — anywhere but on the squirrel paths, which is very nice of them."

"The squirrel paths are a tremendous and swell idea. I'm sure the squirrels appreciate them."

"But I have a question. What about the ducks? If a duck wanted to go to the Computer Center to run his program, seeing that there are no duck paths, would he have to take the bus? Most ducks can't come up with the change, and even if they could, how would they carry it? Ducks don't have pockets."

You'll have to forgive Randy Bob; he tends to be sarcastic. He's bitter because he was run down yesterday in the john by a bicyclist.

Normally, if a duck remains in the Red Cedar River for too long a time, his legs dissolve. Gliding gently to shore after dozing off in the Red Cedar, the duck, as of yet ignorant of his loss, readies himself for beaching, only to tumble as he touches ground and remarks, "Good gravy gus. My legs have been pilfered by the shucky, slimy sludge waters." But ducks are not wont to panic (unless chased by desperate residence hall cafeteria diners; my good friend Randy Bob wanted to nab a duck and jam him into the toaster oven) and he, with considerable effort, rolls himself to the canoe rental, where he can rent artificial duck legs by the day or lease them for extended periods.

Brad, a duck, suffered duck-leg-dissolution but, never one to bemoan his losses and set against artificial locomotion (financially and as a matter of personal leaning; he is an accomplished roller), he jokes, "At least I never get tripped." He also feels someone should clean up that seum trench.

We're really mad about the tickets!

The first week of this term, freshman and incoming transfers were greeted with a rude awakening to big university life. They were not allotted football tickets.

To make matters worse, some 600 students were sold tickets to seats which did not exist. This perhaps being the major contributing factor resulting in the seventh largest crowd in history at the Miami of Ohio game.

Even taking into account the MSU administrative foul-up, the ticket department has overstepped the bounds of casual ineptness.

The bottom line, of course, is money. It almost always is. Regular ticket prices are double that of students. Plus, a happy alum is a generous one when it comes to making contributions to the university. Clearly, it doesn't take a PhD to see who is going to get dumped on.

About those 600 seatless student ticket holders. I have a simple solution for what to do for the upcoming sold-out Michigan game — put them with the freshman.

WKAR treated its applicants poorly

I would like to call to your attention an unethical business operation here on campus that State News readers might be interested in.

In March 1979 I took a production test at WKAR Radio, here on campus. I was told I would be informed of the results the next week. When I was not called, I called them. I was told that since not all of the applicants had shown up for their appointments, I would have to wait until they had been given interviews. It was approximately five weeks before I learned I was not hired.

On Sept. 19, I submitted another application to WKAR Radio, this time in the promotions area. Having worked in television promotions, I wasn't too hesitant to enter more of a business related area of radio. I was granted an interview for Tuesday, Sept. 25. I was also asked to bring a tape of my previous work, which I sent away for almost immediately. The day before the interview, I received a phone message that WKAR had called. I was unable to contact the promotions department at WKAR the following morning because they simply were not in the office. When I did reach them, they informed me that someone else had been hired and that all further interviews were canceled. If whoever was given the job was more qualified, then they certainly deserve the position. However, to have all other interviews canceled is simply not right.

My question to you is this: was it ethical for WKAR Radio to treat applicants in this manner? I think not.

Meal tickets part of capitalist plot

I'm totally outraged at the brilliant administrator who decided to make I.D. and meal tickets separate this year. I.D. is the greatest visible University capitalist plot that I've ever seen. The reason they require us to have two I.D.s is because there will be more of a chance to lose one (or both of them), therefore the University collects on replacement charges. Notice how the one that the students use most often (and therefore most likely to lose) — the meal ticket — cost an abominable $15! What happened — did the plastic company go bankrupt this summer? I don't understand how last year's I.D. was able to be used for everything (RHA movies, IM activities, meals, etc.) and that was only $6, whereas this meal ticket is only used for one purpose and it's $15. Add on another $6 if you lost the virtually useless I.D. card within five years, (which you know will happen), and the University is raking up $21 on a lot of college students who are helpless to do anything about the situation.

Senate asks Kelley to revive primary

By United Press International

The Senate Tuesday approved a resolution directing Attorney General Frank Kelley to file suit in an attempt to revive the state's Democratic presidential primary.

The resolution-sponsored by Sen. Thomas Gusstello, D-Mount Clemens — asks Kelley to sue the Democratic National Committee and the National Democratic Party to "uphold the integrity and validity" of the state's Democratic presidential primary.

The state's deadline for bringing meeting DNC requirements expired Monday after several legislators failed in attempts to close the election.

A panel of high-ranking state Democrats announced it will recommend that the party replace the primary with a partisan caucus system which would begin next April 26.

Michigan is one of three states which hold open primaries. The DNC ordered the election closed to prevent crossover voting.

"These rules are clearly in infringement on the state's right, as founded in both the federal and state constitution, to determine how the voters can meaningfully participate in the electoral process," the Senate resolution said.

Senate approves House bill ensuring striking districts aid

By United Press International

The Senate Education Committee Tuesday unanimously approved a House bill ensuring that strikebound school districts do not lose out on state aid payments.

The bill allows striking districts to delay their annual student count until the second or third Friday after classes resume. Nine districts missed the Sept. 28 count.

The student count is used as a basis for state school aid payments. The committee recommended passage of the measure, which now goes to the full Senate.

"EVEN THOUGH ADULTS have failed to reach an agreement, we shouldn't penalize the children," said Rep. Joe Conroy, D-Flint, who sponsored the measure.

New direction for Vonnegut

In the prologue of his new novel, author Kurt Vonnegut gently reflects upon a letter he received from a young Indiana high school student. According to the student, who asserts that he has read nearly everything the author has written, there is "a single idea" at the center of all of Vonnegut's work.

The idea, writes the student, is: "Love may fail, but courtesy will prevail."

Vonnegut concurs. "... I am now in the abashed condition," he writes, "... of realizing that I needn't have bothered to write several books. A seven word telegram would have done the job. Seriously."

However, the author notes, the student's shrewd observation reached him too late. He had almost completed another book. The insight, by the way, holds true for it as well.

The book, Jailbird, is Vonnegut's ninth novel. Much of the elaborate promotion of the book by publisher Delacorte Press/Seymour Lawrence has so far been keyed to an excerpt from a favorable notice in Time.

"Jailbird," declared reviewer Paul Gray, "is his best book in years." True enough, but the novel is also the writer's first book in years — his last, Slapstick, was published in 1976.

One can't — I can't, anyway — much begrudge the best and extensive efforts of the publisher to promote the book. Some time has passed since Vonnegut was last widely described as "topical," and perhaps the publishing house feels the shine has somehow worn off the best-selling author of Slaughterhouse-Five and Breakfast at Champions. (There is something unsettling about the possible need for a writer of prose to be "topical.") Jailbird may indeed prove a tough sell. It's a winding, comic, bitter and occasionally dreamlike work, in some ways a step in a new direction for the writer.

Vonnegut's book takes the form of the memoirs of Walter F. Starbuck, who notes with benign dissatisfaction late in his story, "nothing about me has ever been original."

Nonetheless, Starbuck's life — a lopsided panorama of many of the century's lowlights — has encompassed a hatful of noteworthy, if not particularly pleasant, experiences. He graduates from Harvard ("Not even in prison," reflects Starbuck, "is there anything special about Harvard men."); joins the Communist Party for a while in the thirties; works as a public servant, appears before the infamous House Committee on Un-American Activities in the late forties; serves as President Nixon's Special Adviser on Youth Affairs in the seventies ("I was paid $36,000 a year. I had an office, but no secretary . . ."); is arrested and convicted on trumped-up Watergate-related charges, and eventually becomes an important vice president of the RAMJAC Corporation, the largest conglomerate in the free world.

There is, of course, more (there is always more). The memoir flows well, if in a scattered fashion, and much of the 66-year-old Starbuck's remembrances are amusing, in an ironic, depreciative manner. Too, almost all of his comments are rueful.

"I still believe," the character writes with reluctance, "that peace, plenty and happiness can be worked out some way. I am a fool." And, so on . . .

Vonnegut's prose, incidentally, seems as sharp, clear and deceptively simple as ever. He writes beguilingly of Starbuck's life, and renders him an intriguing, idiosyncratic and original protagonist.

The other characters, however, are off in the distance. Jailbird has a large and mostly checkered cast, including Alexander Hamilton McCone, a stuttering Cleveland multi-millionaire who befriends the young Starbuck and sends him to Harvard; Ruth, Starbuck's beloved wife, a concentration camp survivor; Leland Clewes, an acquaintance sent to prison by Starbuck's HUAC testimony; Mary Kathleen O'Looney, once a great love of Starbuck's, now a Manhattan "shopping bag lady" with a terrible secret, and assorted extras and walk-ons like Nixon, Roy Cohn, a distant cousin of Jimmy Carter's and — in a sneaky way — Kilgore Trout. And, so on.

BOOKS

The supporting cast is sporadically vivid, and loony, but difficult to appreciate. Starbuck, however unoriginal, inadequate and hopeless he may feel, cares deeply for or about almost all of these people. At any rate, he is frequently telling the reader so. But his feelings for the other characters don't really rub off on the reader, at least likely not in the way Vonnegut may intend.

Much of the book's tone seems to share this curious detachment. Ah, Vonnegut trundles out a new collected batch of various inhumanities — the Sacco and Vanzetti case, HUAC, the Nixon administration and a detailed description of a terrible labor riot/massacre fictitiously decanted from actual events. These are, of course, fairly horrifying, but (forgive me) they lack punch, immediacy. For a while, it all just seems like rhetoric.

Admittedly, Jailbird flawlessly depicts the deflated spirit, demeanor and malaise of Walter F. Starbuck. But the book alas, doesn't achieve this in a manner which effectively transcends that weary mood.

ENTERTAINMENT

The Records are pleasant but trite

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

Here, by popular demand, is a guaranteed-effective fool-proof formula for becoming The Next Big Thing in the record world circa Fall '79:

Start with a non-descript band of four (at most, five) young musicians. Scrub them up until they sparkle, give them fashionably Mod-ish haircuts, and — here's the clincher — dress them alike.

So much for the "look." Next, lock them in a closet someplace with a little stereo and a stack of Beatle albums — especially all those that preceded Sgt. Pepper. Keep them there until they have assimilated every conceivable Merseybeat chord progression and have their four-part harmonies down pat.

Now, before you unleash your budding superstars on the record-buying public, you have to give them a name. For best results, it should be something along the lines of "The _____" (as in the A's, the Pop, the Beat, the Shoes, the Motels, the News, the Reds, the Bottles, the Romantics, etc.).

If you have followed these directions to the letter, and the band has even the slightest amount of songwriting (or song-borrowing) talent, they should be able to hit the top of the charts in a few weeks time. Just like The Knack. Or The Records.

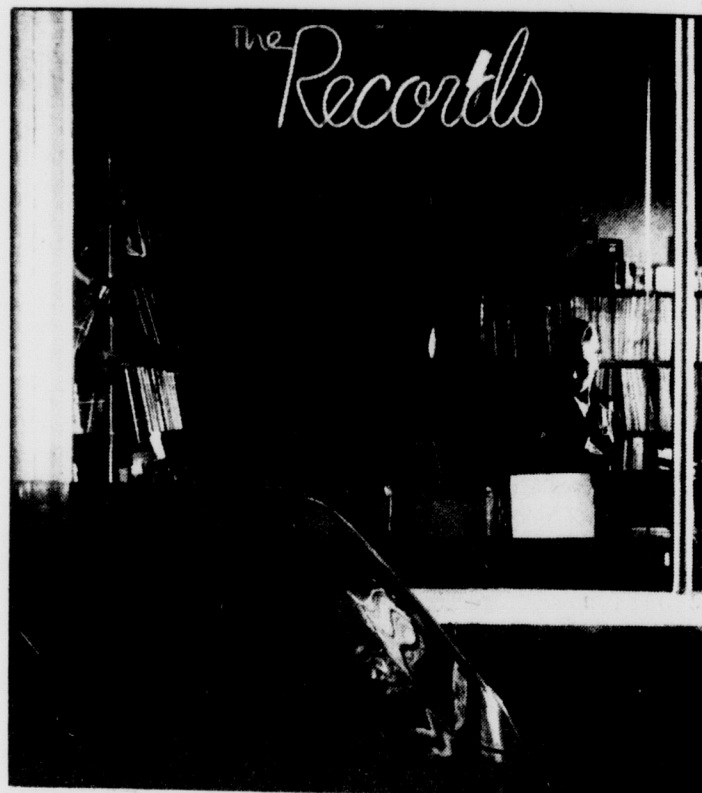

The Records made their name on the strength of "Starry Eyes," which is a pleasant enough song that sounds remarkably like Bram Tchaikovsky (who in turn sounds a lot like the Byrds and Paul McCartney's old band). Come to think of it, it sounds remarkably like a lot of songs that are new and getting airplay. As for their debut album — ingeniously called The Records (Virgin VA 13130) — that sounds remarkable like "Starry Eyes."

There is nothing inherently wrong in admiring the Beatles. After all, they were truly great. Then again, so was Elvis, but the Beatles were able to turn their admiration for Presley into music that was new and all their own. If on the other hand the Fab Four had done nothing but imitate their idol, they'd all be raising cows someplace today.

Enough moralizing!! Suffice it to say that despite (or is it because of) the group's flawless recreation of '60s pop styles, The Records sound tired and samey after a listen or two — not as tired as the band sounded on the Midnight Special last week, but tired nonetheless. Few of the songs on the album have the same spirit that made the single enjoyable, and John Wicks' breathy vocals lack real punch. Huw Gower plays some sparkling '60s-style lead guitar, but then that's not exactly a rare commodity any more, is it?

Included with the early pressings of the album is a four-song EP containing covers of such songs as the Stones' "Have You Seen Your Mother, Baby?," Spirit's "1984," and the Kinks' "See My Friends." It's worth noting that, despite their flaws, these songs have more energy than anything on the album.

The Records is not a bad album. It is never less than pleasant, but then again, it never gets much more than just pleasant, either. The main problem with this album is that it is thoroughly innocuous, and a perfect example of a trend that will probably bore the daylight out of us before the year is up.

'Rust Never Sleeps' is all for the love of rock 'n roll

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

Ever since 1965's The T.A.M.I. Show, the celluloid screen has offered rock 'n rollers numerous filmed concerts. Woodstock and Gimme Shelter (both released in 1970) are probably the granddaddies of them all, but — over the past several years — we have seen film concerts and documentaries from bands as varied as Led Zeppelin, Yes, the Grateful Dead, the Faces, Pink Floyd and the Band.

But if any concert ever deserved to be filmed and preserved for posterity's sake, it would unquestionably be Neil Young & Crazy Horse's 1978 "Rust Never Sleeps" tour. This reviewer caught Young's opening night performance at Pine Knob during September 1978, and — although it was totally WEIRD — it remains one of the greatest rock 'n roll shows I've ever seen.

Rust Never Sleeps (International Harmony; at the State Theater) is a visual recreation of the concert in its entirety, filmed in San Francisco near the tour's end. (Bernard Shakey — the film's director — is actually a pseudonym for Young.) Unlike most rock documentaries, the film features no interviews nor other forms of explanatory material. And yet — taking into account Young's esoteric stance — the film speaks vividly to a chosen few. In other words, Young's message will be more than clear to anyone who loves rock 'n roll and everything the music represents.

The concept behind Rust Never Sleeps, according to Young, was to put rock 'n roll and its popular culture elements into a grand perspective or panorama. "It's about American rock 'n roll, the whole trip," he told Newsweek magazine in November 1978. Hence, the concert (and the film) feature such diversified rock items as Jimi Hendrix's "The Star Spangled Banner," the Beatles' Sgt. Peppers LP, Chuck Berry's "School Days," and the LSD stage announcements from the 1969 Woodstock festival. "When I play the Woodstock announcements, I want the audience to be aware that something really did happen, that we started something new back then," said Young.

Young's message will be more than clear to anyone who loves rock 'n roll and everything the music represents.

The term "rust never sleeps" was written by a member of DEVO when he was working as a copy writer for Rustoleum during the late '60s, and this may explain the presence of a man in a DEVO rubber suit onstage midway through the concert. In addition to DEVO, Rust Never Sleeps includes such other recent pop culture characters as the Jawahs from Star Wars, Saturday Night Live Coneheads, and Close Encounter scientists, all of whom serve as Young's roadies or "road-eyes" as they are referred to in the film's credits.

Taken all together, it would seem that Young is commenting on the stagnancy of recent American culture. "Our motto is 'Rust Never Sleeps,'" he told Newsweek. "The thing is to constantly fight the decay that is going on. Musically, the promise of the '60s was that we were going to put out. Now, most of the people who were capable of delivering are just rusting."

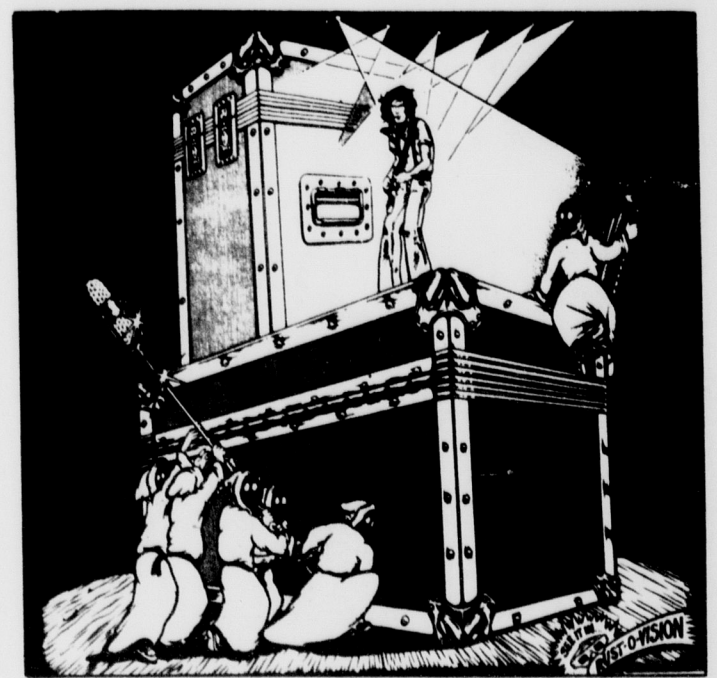

But more than anything, the film's grandest celebration of rock music and culture is portrayed through Young's music, which features his elemental folk-rock, country-rock, and primal "punk" rock ("Is this the story of a Johnny Rotten?"). The opening portion of the film/concert features Young performing such classic gems as "Sugar Mountain," "I Am A Child," "Thrasher," "Comes A Time," and "After the Goldrush." Throughout the set, Young portrays a "child"-like persona, amidst the huge props on a surreal stage. "I'm going to get an electric guitar when I grow up," he tells the audience.

And sure enough, Young returns with electric guitar and Crazy Horse to perform a rousing, hard-rock set, including more Young greats like "When You Dance," "Cortez The Killer," "Like a Hurricane," "Lotta Love," and the entire electric side of the Rust Never Sleeps LP (last summer's best rock album). On his guitar strap, Young wears peace signs — which speak for themselves — and a large Jimi Hendrix button. The latter is especially fitting, since Young's scorching guitar work is the closest thing we have to Hendrix today. This part of the film is stunning, and to see Young and the band wailing through "Cinnamon Girl" — while assorted Coneheads and Jawahs dance across the stage — is a sight that will quite literally blow you away.

I haven't seen Rust Never Sleeps at the State Theater yet. (I saw it in Detroit, since the film is meant to be seen in Dolby sound.) However, several friends have informed me that the film isn't being played loud enough during its East Lansing engagement, something that might be remedied if future audiences would simply yell — "Turn it up!"

Whether or not Rust Never Sleeps will be enjoyed by people unfamiliar with Young's work is something I really can't judge. You see, I'm prejudiced 'cause I know that Neil Young will eventually be remembered as one of this decade's most important and influential rock artists. Let's put it this way — if you love rock 'n roll, you owe it to yourself to see this film. After all, there's more to the picture than meets the eye.

Here's how to eliminate 18 hours of study time each week.

If your study technique is typical, you spend 26 hours each week buried in your books. 66 2/3% of this study time is wasted on an antiquated set of procedures. Procedures that have remained unchanged for over a hundred years.

What's worse, you presume there is nothing you can do to improve. The prevailing attitude on campus is "You either have it or you don't!"

What nonsense!

Any student with average intelligence can improve his reading and study skills at least 3 times with a) better techniques, b) expert coaching, and c) controlled practice. And he can do it quickly—in time to dramatically increase his grades in the current semester.

For this is precisely what the Evelyn Wood course offers, and backs it up with an iron-clad, no-nonsense, written guarantee.

THE GUARANTEE

Any student who attends every Evelyn Wood class, completes the required practice, yet does not improve reading and study skills at least 3 times will be eligible to receive a full tuition refund.

Over 1,000,000 Graduates
Over 95% SUCCESS!

Since 1959, three Presidents have invited Evelyn Wood instructors to teach their staffs how to read better. All in all, the list of famous graduates reads like Who's Who.

Birch Bayh U.S. Congress	Daniel K. Inouye U.S. Congress	Julie Newman Actress
Jackson Betts U.S. Congress	Edward Kennedy U.S. Congress	William Proxmire U.S. Congress

Why Do So Many Students Enroll?

This question was posed to several thousand college freshmen who had just enrolled in the Evelyn Wood course. The answers were varied, but mostly on the same wave length: 1) They wanted to reduce their study time. 2) They wanted to feel more confident in class, more in control. and 3) They wanted to learn more, to achieve better grades.

At the end of the course, each student was asked if his goals were met. Over 95% said yes. The other 5% received their tuition back.

Why Do Most Students Read Slowly?

Most students have no idea what their reading ability is. If they are typical, they read about 300 words per minute (or one page of a novel). Why is it that students read at virtually the same speed, considering how very different they all are?

The cause can be traced back to the First Grade. When we were taught to read, we were asked to read out loud, word by word. Later, in the Second Grade, we were asked to stop saying each word out loud. But we never really did. Fact is, you're saying these words right now—not out loud, but to yourself. one word at a time!

This means you read only as fast as you talk—about 250 to 300 words per minute. (As if to prove the point, Guinness's Book of World Records lists John F. Kennedy as delivering the fastest speech ever at 327 words per minute).

How Do You Learn To Read Faster? With The Same Comprehension?

At the Mini-Lesson you will find out how the Evelyn Wood course eliminates the habit of reading only one word at a time. How you can learn to read 3 or 4 words instead of only one. To see how natural this is, look at the dot in the middle of this phrase:

the grass • is green

Try as you may, you can't help but see the other words. With training, you learn to use this natural, but un-used potential. You learn to see groups of words simultaneously. This will double, triple, possibly quadruple your present ability.

This concept is diametrically opposed to the old-fashioned speed reading technique of picking out key phrases. In the Evelyn Wood course, skimming is a dirty word!

The PRICE BOILS DOWN TO $2 AN HOUR.

Read what the University of Illinois student paper said (Ed Sejud): "If a student avails himself of all the facilities by the (Evelyn Wood) Institute and attends all the class sessions, the price boils down to only about $2 an hour, cheaper than any private tutoring you'll ever find. Spread over four years, the course can save thousands of study hours and can probably affect a boost in a student's grade-point average. Assignments which once took days can be accomplished in a matter of hours, leaving much more time for other pursuits. The Institute estimates that it can save average students 350 hours of study time each semester—probably an understatement."

Just a little, but enough to know what it's like. At the Mini-Lesson you will find out how the Evelyn Wood technique handles difficult textbook material. How it improves memory and concentration. How it makes reading a pleasure instead of a chore. Let's face it, if the Evelyn Wood course is for real, you ought to know about it.

Andersen gets his kicks with seven-for-ten start

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Those who follow MSU football probably don't recognize Morten Andersen this season.

The sophomore placekicker still wears No. 8 and he hasn't grown any since a year ago. But the leftfooted sidwinder has improved quite a bit since the 1978 season.

It's not that Andersen was incompetent last season; he hit on seven of 16 field goal attempts a 42-yarder against Northwestern University his longest. It's just that this season, with a mark of seven for 10 and three field goals longer than 50 yards, any time he steps on the field is like money in the bank for the Spartans.

So what did he do in the off-season? "Nothing," Andersen said with a laugh. "Really, I ran a bit in the sand over the summer. That's probably the main thing I did to get my leg stronger."

MORE IMPORTANTLY THAN just strengthening his leg is his frame of mind. "I'm more mentally prepared this year," he acknowledges. "I think I can make every kick. Kicking is more mental than it is physical. You have to have a strong leg, but you can talk yourself out of making a field goal and you can talk yourself into making a field goal."

Andersen also says part of his approach is to treat all field goal attempts, no matter the distance, the same. "If you have the technique down, the rest takes care of itself," he said.

He learned his technique himself. "It's just an individual thing," explained Andersen. "Coach (Darryl) Rogers checks on us (the kickers), but he really doesn't know how to teach kicking. No one else on the team knows what I have to do."

What had to have a positive effect on his kicking was his soccer playing background. "I played soccer since I was five and I think that has really given me an advantage over some American kickers," the Struer, Denmark native said.

ANDERSEN SPENT THE first 17 years of his life in Denmark coming to the United States as an exchange student. Until he began kicking at Ben Davis High School in Indianapolis, Ind. his senior year, he had never seen a football. He thought the pigskin looked like "a funny looking pumpkin."

Andersen was hampered earlier in the season with a severe muscle spasm in his back. It forced him to miss the Miami of Ohio University game.

"It had been sore during the pre-season, but it hadn't bothered me to the point where I couldn't kick," Andersen explained.

But on his first attempt of the season's second game against the University of Oregon, Andersen slipped after making his kick and aggravated the injury. "On Sunday after that game, I couldn't walk," he recalled.

HE WENT INTO the hospital the night before the Miami of Ohio game and was put into traction for a couple of days. He was ready for last week's contest with the University of Notre Dame and his 53-yard field goal, the longest of his career, accounted for all of the MSU points that day.

Now, he insists, the back problems are behind him. "I'm 100 percent," Andersen said.

And it's a good thing for the Spartans that he is healthy because the University of Michigan game is next up. Even though Andersen does not come from the state of Michigan, he realizes the game's importance.

"You catch that Michigan fever and you want to beat the hell out of them," he said. "I think Michigan State has made a name and the importance of the game is big. Notre Dame kicked our tail and the best thing that could happen would be for us to beat them."

He's a bit excited about playing on national television. "It's gonna fire us up," Andersen predicted. "Michigan has been here before and gotten more publicity. Now it's State's turn."

IF HE KEEPS up his current pace, Morten Andersen has All-Big Ten and All-America potential, not just this season, but the next two as well. Beyond that, there's always pro football.

"My future I try to live day-by-day," Andersen said. "I want to get my goals accomplished and be as consistent in my field goals as possible. Realistically, I could be an All-Big Ten. For sure, if the pros want me, then I want them. That's a one-time opportunity and I'd have to try it."

Wouldn't he like to go back to Denmark? "I hope to go home this Christmas," he said.

Andersen quickly changed his mind. "No, I hope I don't go home this Christmas. I want to go to the Rose Bowl. What I would really like would be to move the Rose Bowl to Denmark."

Kickers host U-M; hope for revenge

The MSU soccer team will have a new image to live up to when the Spartans host the University of Michigan at 4 today.

After their impressive showing at the Loyola Invitational Soccer Tournament last weekend, the Spartans have established themselves as a resurgent soccer power.

The Wolverines, however, would like nothing better than to knock the Spartans off their pedestal.

"Emotion will be running high in this game," MSU coach Joe Baum said. "We thought we were the better team last year but we didn't prove it. We'll be ready this time."

U-M defeated MSU 1-0 at Ann Arbor last season for its first victory in the 10 meetings between the two schools.

Mark Neterer continues to lead the Spartans in scoring with six goals. Eric Wostl is second with four points on one goal and three assists.

MSU has a season mark of 5-2.

Show spirit at pep rally

A pep rally for the MSU-University of Michigan football game will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday on the grass field in front of Demonstration Hall.

The rally, sponsored by the MSU Student Foundation, is open to the public and will feature Spartan head coach Darryl Rogers, the MSU Marching Band, Spartan cheerleaders and a number of MSU players.

Bob Berry, WVIC radio disc jockey, will be master of ceremonies.

Stop treating your feet like dogs.

Feet are human, too. And therefore have an inalienable right to a pair of good, comfortable shoes. Like the one you see below.

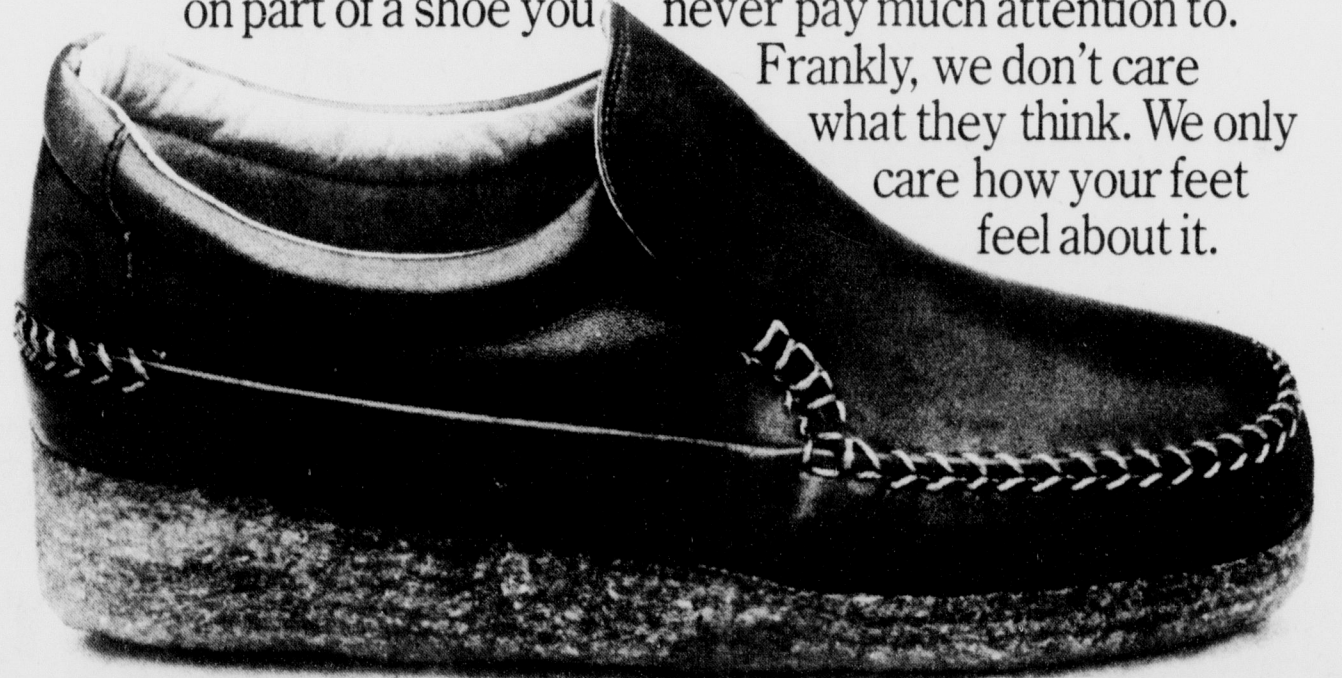

It's a Rockport. And it knows how to treat men's and women's feet with respect.

Take the inside for example. With most shoes, the inside is just the other side of the outside. We consider that callous treatment. And so do feet.

So we put a foam cushion insole inside. And a full leather lining. One that's been specially tanned to make it soft and comfy.

Some companies think we're foolish to work so hard on part of a shoe you never pay much attention to.

Frankly, we don't care what they think. We only care how your feet feel about it.

Feet have feelings, too. Rockport

Legislature stalls legal actions against largest cereal producers

By MICKI MAYNARD

United Press International
LANSING (UPI) — The nation's largest cereal makers received a vote of support from the Legislature Tuesday in their fight against a shared monopoly suit brought against them by the Federal Trade Commission.

The Legislature approved a resolution sponsored by Sen. Harry DeMaso, D-Battle Creek, calling on the FTC to halt legal actions against Kellogg Co., General Foods Corp. and two other firms.

Both houses approved the resolution without debate.

The commission has accused the four of maintaining a "shared monopoly" that precludes competition by smaller grain millers.

Millers working for the large cereal firms picketed the FTC in Washington several weeks ago to demonstrate their opposition to the suit.

In addition, the city of Battle Creek and Calhoun County are planning their own suit in an effort to block the commission action.

At a news conference, a Kellogg official said the only "sin" committed by the cereal makers is that of "bigness."

"They aren't charging us with any abuse under anti-trust laws or any alleged acts or practices," said Chris McNaughton, the company's senior vice president.

"The only thing they've charged us with is just bigness. It seems that if you're too successful, you're going to be penalized for it."

Union officials said the FTC proposal could mean a loss of 1,400 jobs at a cost of $35 million annually. One official said the layoffs would be a disaster for industry pension plans.

Harry Hamblin of the Retail and Wholesale Department Stores of America said younger workers, who contribute most to retirement programs, would be fired first, leaving a "hard core group" of older workers.

"This could make the whole thing actually unsound," Hamblin said. "By not having young workers' pension payments, this could scuttle the entire pension program."

Hamblin noted the issue has drawn management and labor together in the fight against the breakup.

CREDIT UNION MEMBERS:

Now... funds in your

- SHARE ACCOUNT
- SHARE DRAFT ACCOUNT
- CHRISTMAS/VACATION CLUB

earn dividends from day of deposit to day of withdrawal at an annual rate of 6½%!

That's right! Every $5 share in your credit union now works harder for you TWO WAYS. First, they earn dividends from the day of deposit until the day of withdrawal.

Second, they earn dividends at an annual rate of 6½%.

Best of all, there are no minimum deposit requirements, special accounts, or maturity periods. Funds in your regular share account, Christmas/Vacation Club, EVEN YOUR SHARE DRAFT ACCOUNT earn dividends at an annual rate of 6½% for every day they're on deposit.

And because dividends are paid directly to your accounts quarterly, THE EFFECTIVE ANNUAL YIELD IS 6.66%!

If you have an EVERYDAY account, your balance has been transferred to your regular share account automatically so you're already earning the new, higher rate.

If you're employed by the university but haven't yet discovered your credit union, there's never been a better reason - or time - to join.

If you are a member but have some of your savings in other financial institutions, there's never been a better reason - or time - to bring ALL your savings to your credit union. Why be content with 5¼% or 5½% when you can now earn 6½%?

FEDERAL REGULATIONS PROHIBIT PAYMENT OF DIVIDENDS IN EXCESS OF AVAILABLE EARNINGS.

FEE SCHEDULE SET FOR SHARE DRAFT ACCOUNTS

For three years your credit union has provided share draft accounts at no charge. Because of inflation and the mounting costs of supplies and labor, we are no longer able to provide this service at no charge. Effective Nov. 1, 1979, the following fee schedule will take effect:

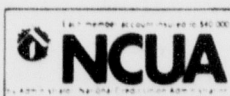

LOW MONTHLY BALANCE	MONTHLY FEE
$300+	No Fee
$200-$299.99	$2
$100-$199.99	$3
$50-$99.99	$4

The following policies remain in effect:

- There is no charge for drafts.
- No minimum balance is required.
- Overdraft protection is provided on all draft accounts.
- Unused funds earn interest - now at an annual percentage rate of 6½% from day of deposit to day of withdrawal.

Graduate council meeting tonight

The Council of Graduate Students will meet at 5:30 tonight in the Con Con Room in the International Center to discuss problems graduate students are having concerning enrollment policy with the College of Business.

The problem revolves around the fact that college graduates who need various courses offered by the business college were closed out of those courses, the same as undergraduate students, said Sharon Cogdill, president of COGS.

James Rainey, associate dean of the College of Business, will be at the meeting to talk to the graduate students about the college's enrollment policy, its history and the solutions it offers.

The College of Business closed its courses before registration began this term, Cogdill said.

"There were no more adds and of course no one dropped," she added.

The graduate students claim that this action by the business college is not progressive.

Since then, the anger has somewhat subsided, she added.

A point worth noting, Cogdill said, is that only 40 percent of the graduates pre-enrolled for fall term courses while more than 90 percent of the undergraduate students pre-enrolled.

English skills improving

By LOUISE A. WHALL

Despite prevailing opinions, Johnny really can read and write, said Jay Ludwig, MSU associate professor of English. "The literacy crisis is an expression of concern among parents and educators to say that English is an important aspect of education," Ludwig said. "It is a notion which has surfaced on a regular basis during the 20th century."

Ludwig has taught freshman composition courses at MSU and other schools for 18 years. He currently teaches science writing and freshman honors writing courses. Besides denying that a literacy crisis exists, Ludwig sees an improvement in the writing skills of his students over the past years.

"Training in English has gotten better in a gradual way," Ludwig said, although he admits there is room for more improvement.

He attributes the improvement to the greater emphasis placed on the teaching of English at the secondary level.

Writing, like many other skills, improves with practice and feedback, he said. His best students are those who have had a "rich opportunity to write" before entering college-level courses.

Ludwig tries to help his students see the relationship between writing and talking. One technique he employs is an exercise in which the students write non-stop for 10 minutes on a certain subject. Students usually have more ideas than they thought they would, Ludwig said.

"This serves to develop the continuity between oral and written language by capturing the simplicity of oral language," he said.

This technique also helps students' writing skills develop so that they eventually write for an audience in an interesting and effective way.

Ludwig added that he doesn't see the influence of "Black English" in writing classes as a "super-specialized" problem.

PROBLEMS WITH BLACK ENGLISH would be similar to ones that all writers have in one form or another," he said. Most students whether they realize it or not, have some kind of dialect, he added. A regional or urban dialect is a phenomenon common to everyone.

Meet with candidates

Lansing residents have a chance to meet City Council candidates at 7:00 tonight in the community room of the Marshall Street Firestation, 815 Marshall St.

Attending the meeting will be Ted DeLeon Sr., and Pat Lindemann, both First Ward candidates. Also scheduled to attend are the three candidates for the two councilmember at-large positions. They are Louis Adado and Dick Baker, both incumbents, and Sidney Worthington.

Councilmember Terry McKane, from the Third Ward, is running unopposed for re-election to that seat and was not invited to the meeting.

The election for the four year positions takes place Nov. 6.

The 1979-80 M.S.U. Ad Club will meet Wednesday, October 3 at 7:00 PM in the green room of the Student Union Building. All interested students are encouraged to attend. Find out what's in store for you—in the new 1979-80 Ad Club. For more information contact Neil Swiacki 337-0528.
