Therapeutic marijuana bill becomes law

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

A bill legalizing the therapeutic use of marijuana for cancer and glaucoma patients was signed into law Monday, but the marijuana program will not begin for two months.

Lt. Governor James H. Brickley signed the legislation in the absence of Gov. William G. Milliken, who is leading a trade mission in China.

The new law establishes a Marijuana Controlled Substance Therapeutic Research Program which allows certain cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy treatments and patients suffering from the vision-improving disease glaucoma.

Under the law, physicians can prescribe marijuana when patients are involved in a "life-threatening or sense-threatening situation," and are not responding to conventional medical treatment. It can also be prescribed when conventional treatment is effective but causes severe side effects to occur.

Cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy treatments and suffering from the treatment's side-effects, which include vomiting, nausea and loss of appetite, may legally purchase marijuana from selected pharmacies for therapeutic uses.

THE THERAPEUTIC RESEARCH program, which will be administered by the state Department of Public Health, will not be put into effect "for at least two months," said Dr. John H. Isbister, disease control officer.

"Just because the bill was signed into law, that doesn't mean we're going to be distributing marijuana cigarettes tomorrow," Isbister said.

The health department must file an Investigational New Drug application with the Food and Drug Administration before the program can begin, he said.

"We have to file a research protocol report on exactly what we're going to do," Isbister said. "It is exceedingly difficult to write these; we have to explain the type of research we're going to do, how we're going to do it, the way we are going to distribute it (marijuana)..."

The signing of the bill is a very important step towards re-evaluation of all marijuana policies, stated Roger Winthrop, spokesperson for the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws, in a letter to The State News.

"The medical history of marijuana has been shrouded by fears and ignorances of other generations," he said.

"To return it to the physician after more than 40 years of prohibition is a magic moment in Michigan's legislative history," Winthrop said in the letter regarding the impending law.

THE THERAPEUTIC MARIJUANA bill, which was introduced by Sen. Stephen Monsma, D-Grand Rapids, was unanimously passed by the House two weeks ago and passed the Senate in June.

Marijuana used in the program will come from federal government sources. The National Institute on Drug Abuse has a five-acre marijuana field in Mississippi that will provide needed amounts of the drug.

The Public Health Department must report its findings and recommendations regarding the effectiveness of the program to the governor and the Legislature annually.

Energy alternatives examined; solar, wind make economic sense

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Editors note: This is the first of a four-part series dealing with energy, its alternatives, sources and implications for American society. The first part discusses the energy situation and examines solar and wind power alternatives.

Although most people in the United States would agree that energy is a major problem for the country, most do not realize their way of life may be in jeopardy.

The basic energy problem is that demand exceeds supply, and if that trend is not reversed people will likely have to suffer the consequences — and the stakes in the matter are very high.

"The energy problem is an ominous cloud over our future," said Bill Stout, professor of agricultural engineering and energy coordinator for the College of Agriculture.

"What I see at stake here is our way of life," he said.

"If you don't find substitutes for petroleum and eventually gas," Stout added, "then the industrialized society as we know it will fade away."

ALTHOUGH THERE ARE many disbelievers, Stout termed the energy situation as critical.

"There is one set of numbers that everybody agrees to," he added, "and that is the fact we're importing nine million barrels of oil a day."

"That oil is coming from unreliable sources. It's coming from countries that are not particularly friendly to the United States. It could be diminished or cut off tomorrow."

Even if the oil supply were not cut off intentionally, Stout said there is a physical limitation to the amount of oil available, so it's "going to run dry eventually."

Even the oil that is currently being imported creates economic problem, he added, because it costs $65 billion a year, "and that's sure to go up.

"So, this is the problem," Stout explained. "Nine million barrels a day costing us an exorbitant amount of money, resulting in all kinds of problems including inflation and dollar exchange rates going down every day. All of these problems are traceable directly or indirectly to our excessive imports of oil."

THE PROBLEM IS compounded, Stout said, because "our country is still practicing a policy of cheap energy."

Because the price of energy has been regulated to low rates, Stout said alternative energies such as biomass, wind and solar are unable to compete with today's price of oil and gas.

"That's why we don't see a big rush to solar energy, a big rush to use wind power, a big rush to use biomass or even coal," he said. "It's cheaper to use natural gas for most applications, even today, than coal."

Stout said, however, that all energy options that make economic and technical sense and are environmentally acceptable should be developed.

Basically, there are three main forms of alternative energies which fit into that category: Solar power, wind power and converting biomass (plant) materials to energy forms such as alcohol.

IN THE FIELD of solar energy, Stout said he did not think that solar space heating would be practical today, particularly in Michigan.

"But I think solar water heating, domestic water heating, is very possibly a practical thing to do," he added.

In Michigan, about 60 percent of the hot water needs of an average family can be met with use of a solar hot water heater, Stout said.

Fusion may ease future energy pinch, but feasibility still being examined

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Nuclear fusion — which is just on the horizon of scientific feasibility today — may produce some relief to the nation's energy situation by the end of the century, an MSU professor said.

Jes Asmussen Jr., professor of electrical engineering and systems science, said that people involved in fusion research hope fusion will be making an energy contribution by the year 2000.

He pointed out, however, that wind power and solar power will probably be making energy contributions before fusion.

"The scientific feasibility (of fusion) has not been demonstrated," Asmussen said. "It may be demonstrated in the next few years."

ASMUSSEN SAID HE expects someone to demonstrate the feasibility of fusion in the next five years.

From there, he said small test plants may be built, possibly producing some power by the end of the century.

The fusion process, is a slow, controlled H-bomb reaction in which two hydrogen atoms are fused together, unlike the nuclear fission process in which atoms are split.

The main barrier to fusion, he said, is confining a very hot gas, called a plasma, to a small area away from all external objects long enough for the fusion to take place.

There are many technical problems involved with various technologies for achieving fusion, he said.

ALTHOUGH THE FUSION process is more difficult to obtain, it is safer and "environmentally it looks a lot better" than fission, Asmussen said.

"A fusion system doesn't want to go into fusion," he added. "If you let it go, it just stops."

"If something malfunctions, you lose energy. The system decays down to a lower energy level when the reaction can't take place."

Asmussen cautioned, however, that at this time, "you can't put your money on it."

"In terms of development it's in the womb yet," he added, "but it has a big potential."

Meanwhile, Asmussen said that solar and wind power offer better energy alternatives for the near future.

WIND, FOR EXAMPLE, could be providing 3 to 5 percent of the nation's energy needs by the end of the century, he said.

"It's more of a real alternative than fusion," he added.

Asmussen also said that he foresees "solar competing with nuclear in many places" in the future, particularly in sparsely populated areas.

Whatever energy sources are relied on in the future, he said they will not only shape people's lives but also reflect people's values and how they believe technology should be used.

"Somehow we're going to have to shape technology to how we perceive our benefits and morals," he said.

E.L. City Council critical of mall proposal pamphlet

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

A pro-Dayton Hudson mall flier has taken statements of East Lansing City Council members out of context, Councilmember Alan Fox said Monday.

Citizens for a Better East Lansing began distributing a flier Sunday which claims that all council members and candidates for council support the mall proposal that will appear on the Nov. 6 ballot.

The proposed mall would be located on the northwest corner of East Lansing near Lake Lansing Road and U.S. 127 if rezoning is approved by city council.

The flier quoted segments of a letter written by Fox to Wayne Williams, CBEL chairperson, and portrayed Fox as a solid supporter of the proposal.

FOX SAID HE had asked Williams not to use his name in the flier unless it contained the entire letter expressing his views on the mall proposal.

Fox says he supports the mall not "because it is good but because it is better in East Lansing than in Lansing Township."

Williams said CBEL used the portions of Fox's letter that portrayed the "spirit of the letter."

"We tried to use as accurate a quote as possible," he said.

Williams added that Fox's letter referred to what CBEL calls the "threat approach" and that Fox's support of the mall is based on this approach.

THE "THREAT APPROACH" is the possibility that Dayton Hudson will move the mall to a site across U.S. 127 and Lake Lansing Road into Lansing Township.

Moving the mall would give East Lansing the bad effects of the mall without any of the good effects, Fox said.

The reason for Fox's support of the mall is public knowledge, Williams said, and there was no reason to include it in the flier.

Fox does not consider his view of the mall proposal public knowledge, saying different people have different reasons for supporting the proposal.

Fox said in his letter to Williams: "I do not think malls on the edges of urban areas are the sort of development any city should encourage. But if a mall will be built near U.S. 127 and Lake Lansing Road, I would support the proposed location and site plan as the best possible."

Fox said CBEL used the excerpts of his letter without his consent and used select portions of the letter in an attempt to make him appear to be an "enthusiastic supporter" of the plan.

OTHER COUNCIL MEMBERS said they either did not give permission to be quoted or they did not know that they were going to be quoted in a flier supporting the mall.

Councilmember Larry Owen said that he had never discussed the flier with anyone from CBEL.

"Joanne Miller (CBEL secretary) asked my permission to use quotes from the State Journal but she never said anything about a flier," Owen said.

Ralph Monsma, chairperson of the city planning commission and council candidate, said he knew the flier was coming out and had requested to check the accuracy of the information in it before the fliers were circulated.

"I told them I would very much like an opportunity to go over it with them," Monsma said.

But, he said, the advertising agency preparing the flier never returned his calls.

Candidate for council, Kim Capello said that, as far as he knew, no one from CBEL had ever asked his opinion of the mall issue.

Julius Hanslovsky, also a candidate for council, said the flier was "carelessly put together."

Hanslovsky said no one had ever said anything about the publication of the flier to him.

Councilmembers John Czarnecki and Joan Hunault could not be reached for comment.

DISMISSAL DENIED

Ruling puts annexation on ballot

By SUSIE BENKELMEN
State News Staff Writer

The question of whether to annex part of East Complex to East Lansing from Meridian Township will be on the Nov. 6 ballot, Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Jack Warren said Monday.

Warren denied a motion by Ingham County calling for dismissal of a suit filed by Meridian Township against County Clerk Ling Brewer and his election scheduling committee.

Another motion filed by Meridian Township, asking for immediate action, was also denied by Warren. Meridian had asked for that judgment to be granted in their favor, claiming that Brewer was not acting within his jurisdiction when he scheduled the election.

Brewer scheduled the Nov. 6 election in August after receiving the petitions circulated by County Commissioner Mark Grebner.

THE EXISTING BOUNDARIES cut through parts of Owen, Fee, Akers, Hubbard and McDonell halls, making some students in those halls residents of Meridian Township and some residents of East Lansing.

Petition advocates charge that the 33-acre L-shaped area should be annexed because the existing boundary lines cause voter registration confusion.

The Township's suit was filed on Sept. 7, and says that such elections can only be scheduled and approved according to Michigan Boundary Commission guidelines.

Brewer was acting under the Michigan Charter Township Act, which gives the county clerk jurisdiction to schedule such an election.

Brewer said the court's decision shows he acted with "apparent authority," and that Warren found his procedure proper.

The suit also claims that the Charter Township Act doesn't give explicit guidelines for validating the petitions and scheduling the election for annexations.

MERIDIAN ALSO CHARGES that certain civil rights of residents living outside the annexation area will be violated because they will not be able to vote in the election.

Larry Salstrom, attorney for Ingham County, said he doesn't anticipate any further legal action until after the election.

He said the suit will probably die if residents say "no" to the annexation question.

If voters approve the annexation, the legal questions will still be outstanding, he said, and the trial date will be set.

Both East Lansing and Meridian Township must separately approve the annexation before it can actually be considered.

Changes are if the case is heard either side would appeal if they lost, Brewer said.

"We would appeal it," he said, "and I can guarantee you that Meridian Township would appeal it."

BREWER SAID HE expects the case to eventually end up in the Supreme Court.

The annexation question will be in the Nov. 6 City of East Lansing ballot and will be presented as a special election in Meridian Township for those persons living in the area in question.

Annexation advocate Grebner said no big campaign for the issue will be started.

"I think that Meridian has done an excellent job of campaigning for the proposal," he said. "They have made it a matter of money and greed and have convinced East Lansing residents to vote for it."

Jackson speaks at MSU

The Rev. Jesse Jackson will speak on the future for minorities at 7 tonight at a banquet in the Kellogg Center.

The address, entitled "The Challenge of Now — The Future for Minority People," will conclude the seventh annual conference on Counseling Minorities which began Sunday.

Jackson, a Black activist and leader of Operation PUSH (People United to Save Humanity), worked with Martin Luther King Jr. in the 1960s. Since then Jackson has worked to raise money for "Excel" a PUSH educational project.

Earlier this month Jackson traveled to the Middle East to speak with Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) leader Yasir Arafat. Jackson was praised by Palestinians as a friend to the Palestinian cause.

Jackson also visited Israel but was not met by Israeli leaders who had earlier met with American singer Frank Sinatra. Jackson is being criticized by Israeli and American Jewish leaders for his meetings with Arafat.

Jackson was later criticized by National Urban League director Vernon Jordan. Jordan said Jackson should not have gone to the Middle East. He said Jackson should be more concerned with the immediate problems that face Black Americans in the U.S.

Jackson and Jordan met last week to discuss Jackson's trip.

The MSU Jewish Student Organization will be protesting Jackson's meeting with the PLO at 6 tonight in front of the Kellogg Center. The protest is organized by Rabbi Daniel Allen, director of the organization.

Six Czech activists go on trial

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Six human rights activists went on trial under heavy police guard Monday, and dissidents said more than a dozen of the defendants' supporters were detained by police in and around the courthouse.

Those taken into custody included a defendant's wife, expelled from the courtroom and seized after she began taking notes on the trial.

Dissident estimates of those detained ranged from 13 to about 25, including some in a group of supporters standing across the street from the court building.

All six defendants in the biggest Czechoslovakian political trial in seven years were accused of being founding members of a group formed in 1978 to aid other dissidents.

Czech authorities charge the group was illegal and that its members aided U.S.-guided propaganda campaigns against the country. If convicted, they could be jailed for 10 years.

Playwright Vaclav Havel, 43, and a government critic Petr Uhl, 38, had still not entered pleas, dissidents said, but three of the others pleaded innocent.

Insurance rates to increase for smokers

WASHINGTON (AP) — An insurance executive predicts that discounts for non-smokers will spread through the life insurance industry because of a study that showed smokers are a much riskier group to insure.

The study by the State Mutual Life Assurance Co., which pioneered non-smokers' discounts in 1964, marks the first time any company has made public death statistics about policy-holders who smoked.

"The differences between the mortality of smokers and non-smokers are too large to be ignored . . . in individual life insurance underwriting and pricing," the report concluded.

The report, released Monday, suggests that non-smokers, who are a 2-to-1 majority of adults, be considered the norm and that smokers be placed in a "substandard" risk category.

Approximately 50 of the 1,800 U.S. life insurance firms offer non-smoker discounts, but none of the 10 firms with the most business do. State Mutual ranks among the top 20.

State Mutual President W. Douglas Bell predicted the study will "rapidly" convince more firms to offer discounts, and ultimately will push the industry to change its standard life tables to put smokers in a risk category.

Jesse Bishop dies in Nevada gas chamber

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Jesse Bishop, the hardbitten killer who spurned all efforts to prolong his life, died in Nevada's gas chamber early Monday after telling authorities he was involved in up to 18 other murders.

Bishop was led into the two-seat gas chamber, last used in 1961, shortly after midnight and was strapped into a freshly painted death seat. He smiled at a reporter through a glass window and then gulped the lethal cyanide gas with several deep breaths.

"He is now in the hands of the Supreme Authority," said Gov. Bob List in a statement from the governor's mansion.

Bishop, 46, convicted of murdering a man who tried to stop him from robbing a casino in Las Vegas, was the second man to be executed in the United States this year and only the third in the past 12 years.

Later, Nevada Prison Director Charles Wolff Jr. said he had learned of "rumors" from undisclosed sources that Bishop "had killed as many as 18 others" before receiving the death sentence for the 1977 murder of David Ballard, 22, a newlywed from Baltimore.

Judge Paul Goldman of Clark County District Court, who sentenced Bishop and later visited him in prison, said the inmate told him "about having committed a number of homicides."

Maine bans billboards in name of beauty

TOPSHAM, Maine (AP) — After years of court battles, an eight-man highway crew started enforcing Maine's billboard ban Monday, using a torch and a backhoe to knock down ads for a pick-up truck and a new brand of cigarettes.

"What the hell is this, beautification?" asked a man across the road.

"Yep, Lady Bird," smiled Hollis Bailey, the ruddy-faced supervisor of the road crew.

Lady Bird Johnson was a strong advocate of highway beautification during her husband's years in the White House. And she is generally credited with the nationwide ban on billboards along federally financed interstate routes.

But Maine's ban, like the tough law in Vermont, is much broader and will eliminate around 3,000 existing billboards. Signs will be taken down if they can be seen from any highway, but an advertiser can keep his sign if it is on his own property.

And what happens to the signs? The state will use the galvanized steel to build a storage shed, Bailey said. "We don't throw anything away," he said.

Ohio man dies of malnutrition

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A 37-year-old man who died of apparent malnutrition may have been confined in his room for most of his life without proper attention, authorities said Monday.

"The only thing I've ever seen to compare with his state of malnutrition is a concentration camp photograph," said Dr. Gary Stabler, assistant Lake County coroner.

The skeleton-like body of Arthur Arnold Riihimaki, weighing about 70 to 80 pounds, was found Saturday by police. Officials said he had been dead about eight hours.

Parking lot sniper kills two—no motive

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Police said Monday that they still had no motive or suspects in a sniping that killed a couple in a crowded shopping center parking lot as the woman's three children watched.

"We're just checking out anything and everything trying to establish a motive and a suspect," said Sgt. Mike Heath. "We don't have any suspects or a motive yet."

Detectives questioned witnesses who said they saw a blond-haired man leave the area in a dark sedan after the shooting Sunday. Investigators said they believe the man might be the sniper.

Jesse Eugene Taylor, 42, and Marion Vira Bresette, 31, were loading grocery bags into a car shortly before 5 p.m. when someone opened fire with a high-powered rifle from across the street.

"It appears as though these were his intended victims. He obviously was well-versed in the use of a high-powered rifle because of the distance," Sgt. Tom Mundy said.

The sniper fired four or five shots from a hiding place in a grove of cedar and evergreen trees, investigators said.

GOVERNMENT FILES CHARGES

Sears sued for discrimination

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government took Sears Roebuck & Co. to court in five cities Monday on charges that the world's largest retailer practiced illegal job discrimination against women and minorities across the United States.

A nationwide suit filed in federal court in Chicago accused Sears of job discrimination against women in the 48 contiguous states in violation of the Civil Rights and Equal Pay acts.

Four other suits filed simultaneously in New York City; Atlanta; Montgomery, Ala.;

and Memphis, Tenn., charged the retailer with discriminating against minorities in hiring at seven facilities in those four areas.

The suits, brought by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), are among the largest employment discrimination cases ever launched by the government and likely will be the biggest job bias suit to be fought in court.

SEARS IS ONE of the nation's largest employers, with a workforce of 400,000 in the 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. The company has 850 retail stores and nearly 3,000 other selling locations, such as catalog centers.

The suits were filed more than six years after the federal agency first accused Sears of racial and sexual discrimination in its employment practices.

Court action has been expected since January, when the commission broke off 14 months of negotiations with Sears on an out-of-court settlement, charging the discussions were fruitless.

After the negotiations broke off, Sears filed a novel suit against the EEOC and nine other federal agencies in an attempt to hold the government responsible for job discrimination in the workforce.

The suit charged that federal policies, such as veterans preference laws, created a workforce that is dominated by white males, thus preventing employers from providing equal job opportunities to women and minorities. The suit was later dismissed by the trial judge as being without merit.

company's employment record concerning women and minorities as among the best in private business.

"We welcome this opportunity for a fair hearing before the courts, something we have not had in six years," he said of the EEOC action. "We are proud of our record in affirmative action."

According to Sears figures based on 1977 employment, 20 percent of the company's employees are minorities. Among "officials and managers," 10 percent are minorities and 36 percent are female.

The EEOC gave no estimate of how many employees and job applicants might be affected by the suits, but total claims for back pay and other relief are sure to climb into the millions of dollars.

AT SEARS HEAD-QUARTERS in Chicago on Monday, company spokesman Ernest Arms repeated earlier contentions that the company had not violated the law, and he again defended the

LAND MUST BE ABANDONED

Israeli gov't overruled

By AUTHOR MAX Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Supreme Court, in a landmark decision that surprised the nation, ruled Monday that the government had illegally seized private Arab land for a Jewish settlement and ordered that the hilltop outpost in the West Bank be abandoned.

The ruling, the first in which an Israeli court found a settlement in the occupied territories to be illegal, came just a day after Moshe Dayan resigned as foreign minister in a deep-seated dispute over the settlement policies of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government.

and its tough line on Palestinian autonomy.

The developments dealt a one-two punch to Begin's ruling coalition, and hopeful speculation raced through Arab capitals Monday that they might foreshadow major changes in Israel.

THE GOVERNMENT WILL face several motions of no-confidence in the Israeli Parliament on Tuesday. But it is expected to survive them, and Begin probably will reject the opposition Labor Party's call for new elections.

The five-judge Supreme Court ordered that the settlement at Elon Morah, near the Arab-populated town of Nablus in the West Bank of the Jordan River, be dismantled within 30 days.

The 50 or so ultra-nationalists who have settled there indicated Monday they would resist efforts to remove them.

The court, acting on an appeal by 17 Arabs whose land was expropriated for the settlement, ruled that the site was chosen by Begin's government under pressure from right-wing settlers. It rejected the argument that it was needed for security reasons.

THE DECISION WAS a clear warning to the government that the plea of national security will no longer be automatically accepted as a reason for seizing land for settlement.

In Cairo, Egypt's top peace negotiator, Butros Ghali, called the court decision "a positive step" and predicted it would encourage West Bank and Gaza Strip Palestinians to end their boycott and join the U.S.-Egyptian-Israeli talks on autonomy for the two occupied territories.

West Bank Palestinian leaders also applauded the ruling but said all Jewish settlements should be removed. "All settlements must go," said Mayor Elias Freij of Bethlehem.

Funds embezzled from project kitty

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the desperate year of 1967, with America's cities aflame, Lyndon Johnson's "War on Poverty" helped a pioneering bootstrap effort called Pride, Inc., provide jobs and self-confidence to Washington's ex-convicts and black teen-agers.

One of Pride, Inc.'s founders, civil rights militant Marion Barry, is now in city hall as Washington's elected mayor. And the Washington Post, after a year-long investigation, charges that Barry's former wife, Mary Treadwell, enriched herself in a Pride, Inc. project.

Under front-page banner headlines Monday, the Post said at least $600,000 was skimmed off from slum buildings owned by a Pride, Inc. enterprise, P.I. Properties, Inc., while rats roamed the halls, garbage accumulated for weeks, broken windows were ignored, and tenants often were without hot water, heat and electricity.

Tenants who complained were told there was no money for repairs, the newspaper said.

The paper said P.I. Properties, under Treadwell's direction, kept two sets of books, one secret and one for auditors from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Post said its findings in no way implicate Barry, 43, the former national chairperson of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Barry and Treadwell lived together during three years when the alleged irregularities occurred, but Barry was not directly involved in the P.I. Properties management. They were divorced in 1974.

Grebner assails sheriff

By SUSIE BENKELMEN
State News Staff Writer

Charging the Ingham County sheriff with corruption, County Commissioner Mark Grebner will present two resolutions tonight to the Board of Commissioners for putting strict limitations on employment and compensation practices in the sheriff's department.

County Commissioner Mark Grebner, D-East Lansing, has charged that the sheriff has illegally gained about $19,000 a year since he took office in 1961. Grebner claims Sheriff Kenneth L. Preadmore's wife, Jacqueline, has been getting paid for working 40 hours a week as a correction officer. Grebner charges that she has only been working on Thursdays.

Grebner said he has seen time cards with Preadmore's name that were obviously signed by the sheriff himself.

He also said the cards were filled out for time when Preadmore was not working.

"THE BOARD HAS never clearly told the sheriff his wife is to work," Grebner said. "If the resolution passes, she will not be paid unless she works." "It's all petty corruption," he said. "But it's money."

Another resolution to be presented will prevent the Preadmores from using county gas money for unofficial trips, and from drawing on jail food stores for home use.

Grebner charged that the sheriff has signed gas receipts while vacationing in Kentucky. "He was using a gas credit card from the county," he said.

GREBNER ALSO SAID the sheriff has been abusing his right to draw from jail food stores by ordering "luxury items" such as crabmeat.

"I don't think there's anything prosecutable," Grebner said. "We are not going to worry about the past, but in the future, he is going to play by the rules."

"There's no racketeering involved," he said. "The sheriff has been corrupt in a petty way, but the department is nearly spotless."

Preadmore said Grebner's claims are "nothing unusual." "He's doing his usual job of spreading lies and false accusations," he said.

"My wife works for the County of Ingham 24 hours a day," he said.

Grebner will present the resolutions to the Board of Commissioners at 7:30 tonight in the Ingham County Courthouse.

Civil rights activist may ask Milliken to block Mississippi extradition

GRAND RAPIDS (UPI) — Civil rights activist Ronald Jimmerson was considering Monday whether to ask Gov. William G. Milliken to block his extradition to Mississippi, where he faces an eight-year-old marijuana charge.

Jimmerson, 35, a counselor for Project Rehab, was arrested last week on a fugitive warrant and released on personal recognizance bond.

Jimmerson pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana while visiting Jackson, Miss., eight years ago, but, he said, the pot was planted on him by police because of his civil rights activities.

Mississippi authorities were expected to seek Jimmerson's extradition, a process that could take four to six weeks. The only way for him to avoid facing the charge was for Milliken to grant him clemency.

"If they are so red hot to get him back down there, I have a hunch it's for something other than justice," said Donald Langworthy, Jimmerson's Kent County probation officer.

"We had a talk about what transpired down there and frankly if you can believe what Ron said, there was a lot of abuse and he was fearful for his life," Langworthy said.

Jimmerson said he is afraid to return to Mississippi because, he claimed, he was arrested on a trumped-up charge. He said police arrested him in front of the Jackson headquarters of the Republic of New Africa, a group dedicated to establishing a black nation within the United States.

"We were specifically told not to bring any contraband with us because the city was hot at the time," Jimmerson said of his 1971 visit, shortly after the deaths of two police officers in a shootout with RNA members.

He claimed one of the arresting officers held a gun on him while the other placed something in his pocket.

"They never searched me, just handcuffed me and threw me in the cruiser," Jimmerson said.

Mississippi authorities said their records indicate Jimmerson, also known as Chema Halisi, never reported for probation, but Langworthy said he filed papers indicating Jimmerson was fulfilling his obligation in Grand Rapids.

Langworthy said he recommended Mississippi discharge Jimmerson but they refused.

Langworthy said Mississippi authorities informed him in 1976 that a fugitive warrant had been issued but the paperwork did not arrive at the Kent County sheriff's department until last August.

CAPACITY IS LAGGING

State's prison population is rising

By United Press International

Michigan will have to open at least one new prison per year for the next decade to keep up with the growing number of inmates, state Corrections Director Perry Johnson said Monday.

The major source of the state's burgeoning prison population is a voter approved law barring inmates convicted of serious crimes from using accumulated good time to win parole before their minimum sentence.

He said the inmate population also is rising steadily due to a trend toward longer prison sentences and the impact of the state's felony firearms law, which carries a mandatory two-year term.

State prisons currently house about 15,000 inmates but a population of up to 19,200 is predicted by the end of the 1980s.

The mandatory sentencing law has increased the average sentence length of those convicted of serious crimes by about 9.6 months and affects 66.2 percent of all persons incarcerated.

Most judges are not reducing terms to allow prisoners to serve about the same length of time as when they could reduce their sentences through good time.

Milliken backs aid for ailing Chrysler

By United Press International

Gov. William G. Milliken Monday told a congressional committee he strongly backs federal aid for struggling Chrysler Corp. and promised to do "all I possibly can" at the state level to save the No. 3 automaker.

Milliken made the comments in a telegram prepared for delivery to the House Banking Committee hearings on aid to Chrysler.

Milliken, who is touring China, expressed regret at being unable to attend the session in person.

"I want to be sure that you know of my firm support for federal assistance to permit Chrysler to help itself," Milliken's telegram said.

"I also want to convey to you that I plan to do all I possibly can at the state level to assist Chrysler."

Bomb deserves no secret status

The fine line between censorship for the purpose of national security and censorship to perpetuate the power of a few designated nuclear experts has finally been established, and none too soon for the American press and its readers.

While Howard Morland would be the first to laugh at the notion that his "leak" of the H-bomb secret threatened national security, his article "The H-bomb secret: To know how is to ask why" was held by the government until charges that the article threatened national security could not be substantiated in court.

Morland, speaking at a press conference in Lansing last week, said the landmark censorship battle between the Progressive magazine and the federal government was a deliberate test case of governmental power. Though the article Morland wrote for the Progressive was not a "how to" article on building a bomb, it was misinterpreted by many as such.

A bomb would be beyond any person's capacity without the resources of a medium-sized government. Morland, an amateur journalist with only a smattering of courses in physics and chemistry, wrote the article more as an attack on secrecy, "especially the power of a few designated 'experts' to declare some topics 'off limits.'" The veil over the article contributes to a political climate in which the nuclear establishment conducts business as usual, protecting and perpetuating the production of these horrible weapons.

Morland's description of 30 years of self-censorship on nuclear weapons by the press is a point which can be praised and criticized. The press never posed any questions about the working technology of the bomb, accepting the experts' words instead as bible truth.

While nuclear power may at one point have been a national security issue, this self-imposed silence coming twenty years after China, the United Kingdom, India, and a host of other nations developed hydrogen weapons, is hardly admirable; resulting in a lack of knowledge and understanding about the issue.

The effect of secrecy is to stifle debate about the costs and consequences, as well as benefits of nuclear policy. It also results in ignorance, as exemplified by the case involving the city of Oakridge, Tenn., where Morland grew up. The people who live there do not even know they live next to a 500-acre nuclear weapons factory.

Abzug asks voters to seek the issues

Finally someone is coming out and asking presidential candidates to start facing the issues in the upcoming election. Bella Abzug told her audience last Thursday night to elect delegates who will be committed to issues, and not to select delegates because they represent a particular party. Too many candidates are getting away with avoiding the issues and simply basing their candidacies on party affiliation.

To counteract this, voters must start crossing party-lines and become more concerned with the issues at hand. Only those candidates that are able to face the issues and present solutions to those problems are worthy of taking office.

Women could prove to be a valuable asset to the political process because they sometimes offer a refreshing new dimension to political campaigning. Some women don't seem to be afraid of voicing their opinions in the public spotlight. They have been shunned from the political arena for so long that the chances for having their grievances heard will be minimal. These issues that women are concerned with may also provide some refreshment to political thought. Women sometimes tend to deal with issues that are on more of a humanitarian level. It must be pointed out, however, that women are capable of performing tasks and making policy decisions for issues other than traditional "women" concerns.

If women want to see the policies that concern them be implemented, then they must make sure that the candidates they support have faced those issues. The last presidential elections brought into office a man that pledged equality for all. Despite his lip service for the support of women, Carter came out against public funding for abortion and cut the budget for displaced homeworkers in half since he has been in office. Most importantly, the women that Carter initiated into his administration are not able to have much of a say in any policies other than traditional "women issues." When Abzug spoke out on budget policies and the curbing of monopolies in transportation and housing, Carter fired her.

We can see now in this age of rising women consciousness that there is a problem of undemocratic policies being carried by our government. The problem we see is that men are for the most part making decisions that concern the majority of our nation's population, women.

Fuel aid to needy

With winter's arrival just around the corner, the U.S. Senate is considering a bill to aid the poor and elderly in paying their rising fuel bills. The Senate's proposal will grant up to $400 to needy families that are having trouble paying their monthly heating bills.

This proposal will obviously help some of the nation's poor in paying this winter's fuel bills, but the program fails to correct the many wrongs that virtually stifled last year's program. Last year's aid program was centered in such an extensive array of problems involving mismanagement and inadequate or delayed payments that many of the program's administrators were hoping the program would not be revised or reinstated for another year.

Well, the program has been slightly revised, but this winter's version does not make the situation any better than it was last year. This is so because the Senate has been extremely vague on several key points of the legislation. Firstly, what is the Senate going to declare as its definition of a poor or needy family? In the past, Congressional definitions of needy have been so inadequate that they only included those below the poverty level. While it is most imperative to help those below the poverty level, a plan of this magnitude should not ignore millions of needy Americans above the poverty level — and they are the ones the Senate said it would like to help. Of course, many people above the poverty level are dirt poor by most conventional standards. Secondly, what will $400 do for a family that has a monthly fuel bill around $1,000, and has to pay that bill within a relatively short period of time?

This bill is essentially nothing more than a token gesture to passify the nation's poor, and lead them to believe that they are actually being helped.

'LASH' LARROWE

Young did something right

I'm stompin' out of the Auditorium after Andy Young's speech as this James Madison student collars me.

"Wasn't it stupid of Carter to fire a great man like that?" he asks.

"I have to go with Jimmy on that one," I says. "Andy shouldn't have talked to the PLO in the first place, and after he did, he shouldn't have misled the State Department about it."

"You aren't saying he lied, are you, Lash?" he sputters.

"Isn't it obvious?" I says. "Of course he did, and he got what he deserved when the president gave him the boot."

"Carter's hardly the one to make a big deal out of it," he says. "He lied to us himself during the campaign. Remember he promised to cut military spending? Look how it's gone up since he's been in the White House. Look at his human rights promises, too."

"It's one thing to lie to the American people," I tells him. "Every politician does that. It's different when you lie to your boss. Carter's got enough troubles trying to run the government without having to worry about one of his team straying off the plantation, the way your pal Andy Young did."

"I hadn't thought of it that way," he admits. "But even so, don't you agree it was sensible of him to meet with the PLO, Lash?"

"Negative!" I says sternly. "I don't see why a representative of a peace-loving, law-abiding country like the U.S. of A. should meet with people who have blood on their hands, some of it from innocent children they blew up on a school bus."

LETTERS

Musical diversity is very important

I feel a need to respond to John Raymond's letter regarding Bob Dylan's album, Slow Train Coming, which appeared in The State News Oct. 18.

In America, as in the rest of the world, people hold a great diversification of beliefs on religion, politics or whatever.

I believe that popular music should not serve as a soapbox for a dogmatist and amateur lyric interpreter (Mr. Raymond) to impose his beliefs on others. Implicit in the proclamation that Jesus is America's "only Savior" is the denial of the beliefs of those people, and there are many, who may not quite see this matter as Mr. Raymond does.

To make such an absolute statement is simply disrespectful of the beliefs of others. I believe that all denominations are entitled to that body of tenets they deem as their own, and I am greatly offended by anyone who attempts to deny them.

All human rights must be respected

If the Israel Awareness Group attempted to view all of the people in this world as having a set of human rights, Jesse Jackson's visit with the Palestine Liberation Organization would cease to be a confusing mystery. In the excerpts extracted from the Palestinian National Covenant concerning "recognition, conciliation, secure borders," etc., what makes one think that the only reference is to Israel, rather than to every country in the world that exercises a set of sovereign rights protected by the United Nations?

Jesse Jackson understands that American Black people have no rights which are bound to be respected in the United States, and since those rights are not respected in a domestic situation, then what is the case of Black people in reference to the entire

"What about the U.S. meeting with representatives of Iran, Brazil, the Soviet Union, the People's Republic, just for starters?" he asks. "Amnesty International says every one of those countries has an awful record on human rights, Lash. Isn't talking to them just as bad as Andy Young talking to the PLO?"

"If you knew your economics," I scolds, "you'd know the answer to that question. Iran's got oil we desperately need, Brazil's our main source of coffee, the Bolsheviks are buying our good Midwestern Wheat, Red China's a vast untapped market for all kinds of U.S. products."

"I hear what you're saying, Lash," he says. "If we're going to get the oil we need so badly, there has to be peace in the Middle East, even if that means meeting with people we don't approve of."

"We don't have any choice, do we? We have to talk to the PLO. The problem of the Palestinians sure isn't being solved by letting 'em rot in the refugee camps. That only creates more rebels who'll start a war if they have to force Israel to let 'em have their land back. We could get sucked into that war, too," he says.

"You still don't get the big economic picture, sonny," I tells him. "There's more than oil at stake in the Middle East. We sell mucho military hardware to all those countries, you know. Plenty of jobs are created building all those P-15 fighter jets and those tanks, bazookas, personnel carriers and missiles, right?"

"If we don't keep the Middle East pot boiling, you're going to see lines of laid-off workers waiting for their unemployment checks."

"I can see that," he says. "But surely it's in the Israelis' interest to get along with their neighbors. I should think they'd want the U.S. to talk to the PLO, find a way to settle the Palestinian question, even if they don't want to talk to them themselves."

"It don't work that way," I explains. "The Israelis weren't speaking to the PLO even before the terrorism started."

"I didn't know that," he says. "Why weren't they?"

"They learned how to deal with their Palestinian hotheads from us," I tells him. "You don't see Uncle Sam pow-wowing with Comanches about self-determination and claims to their homeland, right?"

"Renegade Indians gave us trouble, we sent the cavalry out to round 'em up, herd 'em onto reservations out in the boonies. They squawked for awhile, sure. Then they quieted down, got used to it."

"That sounds barbaric to me," he objects.

"Maybe so," I says. "But you gotta admit, junior, it got the job done."

"The Israelis can see it worked for us, they figure it'll work for them."

Andrew Young is no sideshow

I take it you felt the same way when Gerald Ford taught (or side-showed) at University of Michigan. If it's genuine concern you have for the students, thanks, but instead of worrying about what may be, check out what is. Have you looked at your own colleagues lately? Insofar as delivering those items you claim are necessary for a lifetime of learning, they leave so much to be desired that I suggest you not hold your breath. If you can't find any such type in philosophy, come over the the College of Business for a tour. We've got lots of "sideshows." One thing you will be able to say about the College of Urban Development when Andrew Young gets here is they won't have a sideshow, but the "main attraction!"

ENTERTAINMENT

Count Dracula rises again!

By WILLIAM BARNHARDT
State News Reviewer

The BoarsHead Theater in the Lansing Center for the Arts has brought the off-Broadway sensation The Passion of Dracula magnificently alive and breathing for the Halloween season. The production succeeds as a Victorian farce, a comedy of gothic manners, a psychological glimpse at the motivations of the evil Count, and most of all a chilling evening of deliciously macabre entertainment.

The play is roughly based on the Bram Stoker novel, complete with broadly drawn English lords, a Freud-like Austrian psychologist, a young inquisitive journalist, and of course an ever-so-fair maiden destined to be... the Bride of Dracula. Rather than taking itself too seriously, the play is humorous and often ridiculous. And I'm sure the author intended it to be played that way for the co-author Bob Hall is also the play's director — and a good one at that. But despite the humor, the play can readily provide the shocks and scares through its brilliant stage effects — crosses that burst into flames, stakes through hearts, mysterious creeping fog, and, best of all, a most baffling transformation of the Count into a bat with a flash of lightning and fire. Wish I knew how they did it...

Why do you suppose there's been such a lurid interest in the blood-thirsty Transylvanian as of late? One reason for sure, I overheard two women at one of the intermissions discuss:

"God, what about William Lyman as Dracula? Not bad, huh? He can bite my neck any time..."

"You know I remember him on Ryan's Hope and One Life to Live. Isn't he great? I heard he played Dracula in the off-Broadway version, too."

Aha! Bob Hall and his partner-writer David Richmond have stumbled upon the erotic angle. Why should the Count be an ugly Nosferatu type or some old codger like Bela Lugosi? No, the true Vladimir Dracula was a charmer, a real ladies' man. And William Lyman plays that to the hilt.

Lyman is of course the center of attention, you can't take your eyes off him. His voice grazes the edge of a proper Rumanian dialect, with a bizarre resonance that distinguishes his Dracula from the others. He's even perfected the ballet of the Count — the sweep of the cape, the whisking of lovely Wilhelmina off her feet, spinning her around, and reclining her gracefully to prepare for the evil consummation. What a showman!

The other horror-movie archetypes excel beyond the given dimensions of their roles. Betsy Marmon plays Dracula's intended bride and John Beem plays the inquisitive reporter who, ah yes, falls in love with this fated victim. That couple as well as the doctor's assistant (Laura Merlington Schirner) are adequately supportive, but are sometimes outshined by the intensity of their fellow actors on stage. Among these superb professionals are the stodgy British Lord Godalming (John Peakes) and the psychologist-genius Professor Van Helsing (Doug Schirner) who both shine masterfully in their thoroughly-professional interpretations of these stock roles. John C. Bowman as Renfield and James Cleveland as the doctor-in-charge both turn in remarkable and devoted character portrayals.

Count Dracula (William Lyman) moves in for the bite in the BoarsHead Theater production of The Passion of Dracula.

Explaining his philosophy of Dracula, Bob Hall said, "We need the Dracula's of our imagination, we cultivate them and pass them down for generations... for without them we will have nothing to fear but ourselves."

"The question Dave Richmond and I are asked most often is 'Why Dracula?'... The answer, I think, is that people love to be scared. They ride roller coasters, swim into deep water, tell tall tales around campfires and drive too fast on narrow highways... and they love Dracula."

I love Dracula too. You other Dracula fans owe it to your sense of entertainment to take in The Passions of Dracula at the BoarsHead Theater in the Center for the Arts, 425 S. Grand Avenue.

It plays Thursday through Sundays, now through Nov. 4. Curtaintimes are Thursday and Friday at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 6 and 9 p.m., Sunday at 2 p.m., and a special Halloween show Wednesday Oct. 31 at 10 p.m. See it for Halloween!

Holly Near brings warmth to activism

By CARRIE THORN
State News Reviewer

Holly Near could have been a star. I left the Lansing Civic Center Sunday night fully believing that. She is an excellent vocalist and songwriter, with a style reminiscent of — and this description does not do her justice — Anne Murray, Joni Mitchell and Joan Baez. She makes it clear, right from the beginning, that she has no dreams of grandeur — wealth and fame are obviously unimportant to her.

Holly Near is "On Tour For A Nuclear-Free Future," or that's what her billing said. Actually, during the course of the evening Near dealt with a myriad of political and humanistic issues, from feminism to the problems of the disabled and aurally impaired; from gay rights to, of course, nuclear power.

The impression she makes is profound — she is kind and caring, strong, encouraging, energetic, intelligent, attractive, very feminist, very lesbian and very proud. To give you an insight into Holly Near's character — she walked on the stage amid ecstatic cheering and clapping (these people were obviously loyal fans), and she responded by clapping for the audience.

Near began her concert with a bouncy song which she had written the words for, entitled "Don't Take My Sunday Paper." The audience got in step with her almost immediately as she sang "Don't you think the world is looking bad/But do I have a right to feel so sad?"

She continued with a song lamenting the hassles faced by working women. "And I'm not your girl and you know it/At home I'm a woman and a poet," she sang to the partially-filled auditorium. Her clear, high soprano voice was alternately pleasant and harsh, depending on the mood she was conveying with the song. The only — infrequent — problem with Near's presentation was that the emotion in her voice occasionally made the words hard to understand. Otherwise, the musical tone and quality of her voice was precise and melodious.

LOSE TO PURDUE IN FINALS

Stickers place second in Big Ten

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's field hockey team finished second in last weekend's Big Ten tournament in Ann Arbor, losing to Purdue University, 4-2.

The fifth-seeded Spartans began the tournament Friday when they squared off against the University of Michigan, a team that had beaten the stickers 3-2 earlier in the season.

FOUR MINUTES INTO the game, Jennie Klepinger sent a pass on a penalty corner out to Marie Herman. Herman stopped the ball for Doreen Roudebush, who put the Spartans on top 1-0.

After taking the 1-0 lead at halftime, the stickers got their second goal ten minutes into the second stanza, this time on a pass from Connie Seymour to Klepinger.

With five minutes left in the contest, the Michigan fullback illegally stopped the ball, allowing a penalty shot for the Spartans, which Barb Shannon converted into the stickers' final tally.

"We played just like we did last week against Western Michigan University, when we played Michigan," Kajornsin said. The Spartans beat Western 3-1 in a game last week, and one of Kajornsin's goals for the Big Ten meet was for his team to play as it had against the Broncos.

THE STICKERS RAN into the number one seeded team in the tournament next, facing the University of Wisconsin in a Friday afternoon contest.

Six minutes into the Wisconsin game, Shannon scored on a penalty stroke, the goal coming after the Badger fullback had illegally stopped the ball.

Six minutes later, Shannon scored again to stake the Spartans to a quick 2-0 lead.

WISCONSIN SCORED

NEXT to cut the margin to 2-1, but the trio of Klepinger-to-Herman-to-Roudebush proved positive again on a penalty corner shot, and the Spartans led at halftime, 3-1.

Wisconsin scored first in the second half to close the gap to 3-2, but Julie Johnson slammed (continued on page 12)

Spartan icer quits team

MSU hockey coach Ron Mason reported Monday afternoon that junior left wing Dave Gandini has left the team to devote more time to academics.

"He's responded well to us and he definitely had the ability to play," the new Spartan mentor said. "But he realized that hockey is not the end result of life and he wanted to spend more time on his studies."

Gandini came to MSU as a highly-regarded recruit after a 56-goal season for the 1976-77 Detroit Junior Red Wings. In his first season at MSU, Gandini recorded 10 points on four goals and six assists. As a sophomore, he scored 25 points on 10 goals and 15 assists.

Last weekend, Gandini contributed two assists to help MSU gain a split with Western Michigan University in the season-opening series for both teams.

SPARTANS BEAT TOP-NOTCH COMPETITORS

Spikers adjust in tough tourney

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

Playing against some of the toughest competition it has faced this season, the MSU women's volleyball team won two of its five matches in last weekend's Southwest Missouri State University Autumn Classic Volleyball Invitational in Springfield, Mo.

The Spartan spikers opened play Friday in the 11-team tourney with a match against the University of Alabama, which the Spartans lost in three games in the best-of-three, 15-7, 8-15 and 7-15.

"They were strong," said head coach Annelies Knoppers, "but a lot of the points they got were on our errors."

The University of Nebraska was next for MSU and again Knoppers spoke of the strength of the Spartans' opponent.

"They were very good also, and they had a very good blocking team. MSU lost to Nebraska 10-15 and 8-15.

THE UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS at Arlington, the defending champions in the tournament, dealt the Spartans a very convincing defeat in the following match, beating the spikers 15-2 and 15-9.

"They were in the top 12 in the nation last year," Knoppers said, "and we knew they would be extremely tough."

Knoppers said poor passing and a lack of good play on substitutions spelled defeat for the Spartans in Friday's play, and called for a few changes for Saturday's action.

"Saturday we played really well and we started to play what I would call 'smart volleyball,'" Knoppers said.

First for the spikers on Saturday was Illinois State University, "one of the strongest teams in the nation" according to Knoppers.

THE SPARTANS BEAT Illinois State in three games in the match, 7-15, 15-3 and 16-14.

"Becky Lukens really played well in the match," Knoppers said, "and Cheryl Vanderhorst started hitting the ball much better also."

In the final match of the tournament, the spikers squared off against Oral Roberts University, a team that had just beaten powerhouse Illinois State.

MSU won the match in three tough games, 15-13, 7-15 and 16-14 and Knoppers praised the play of the Spartans in the match.

"In that third game we were way behind, but we just kept fighting back. I put Karen Keener back into the match when we were down 14-11 and we got five points in a row."

THE LOSS FOR Oral Roberts put MSU out of competition for top honors and sent Texas at Arlington and Illinois State into the semi-finals to represent the Spartans' pool No. 1.

"We always seem to have a hard time changing our game when we play against better competition," Knoppers said. "This tournament featured some tough, highly skilled teams and although we started poorly, we adjusted and played well for the most part."

"The competition here at home isn't nearly as tough as when we go to these tournaments, and since we did play so well over the weekend, we just hope we can keep it up and play well in the Big Ten meet this weekend."

MSU will host the Big Ten tournament beginning Thursday night at the IM Sports-Circle.

Women harriers third in Big Ten

By CHRIS HANSEN
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's cross country team bolted past seven of its opponents to place third at the Big Ten Championships held at the University of Iowa, Saturday.

Finishing just behind first-place University of Wisconsin and second-place Purdue, the female Spartans became part of a triumvirate that will clearly dominate the upcoming regional championships, one-and-one-half weeks away.

Cynthia Wadsworth, Lisa Berry and Kelly Spatz took the first three MSU spots, placing fifth, seventh, and ninth with times of 18:16, 18:23 and 18:31 respectively. Jill Washburn, suffering from a bad cold, placed 18th in 19:03 and Candy Strobach took the 21st spot in 10:07, producing a total team score of 60.

Wisconsin, which accumulated a score of 30, was led by 1st place finisher Rose Thompson, a 27-year-old freshman from Kenya, who promises to help make the Badgers a powerhouse for the next three years.

The first-year Purdue harriers proved to be very strong, according to MSU coach John Goodridge. Goodridge expects the Boilermakers to be dominant contenders in the national championships, Nov. 17. Purdue finished with a score of 46, placing runners in second, third, 12th, 13th and 16th places.

The University of Iowa finished fourth in the event with 155, followed by Ohio State University, the universities of Minnesota, Indiana, Michigan and Illinois and Northwestern University with scores of 159, 171, 176, 176, 208 and 293 respectively.

Saturday MSU will host a triangular meet with the universities of Minnesota and Michigan. This event, after Saturday's performance, should prove only a mild challenge to Goodridge's team.

Women sailors No. 2 in Midwest ratings

The MSU women's sailing team is ranked No. 2 by the Midwest Collegiate Sailing Association after competing with five university teams last weekend.

Ohio Wesleyan University hosted the 1979 MacDonald's Cup Women's Regatta where MSU placed second in total points. This is the only regatta in which the women's team competes this fall.

The A team, skippered and crewed by senior Sandra Schairer and junior Jean Stewart, placed third in its division. The B team, skippered and crewed by freshman Margo Ariagno and senior Bernadine Falk, tied for first place in its division.

The women's sailing team is a part of the MSU Sailing Club, which will continue to practice every Thursday as long as weather permits. Ice sailing will begin in the winter.

The Sailing Club meets Tuesdays at 6:30 p.m. at America's Cup Restaurant. All new members and interested sailors or nonsailors are welcome to attend.

Bianchi sentenced, cousin arrested for 'Hillside Strangler' murders

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Kenneth Bianchi, quiet and calm, was sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty Monday to five slayings in the "Hillside Strangler" murders that for six months terrorized Southern California women.

"I wish I had the power that it be ordered that your sentence . . . run consecutively," Superior Court Judge William B. Keene told Bianchi after imposing six life sentences.

Bianchi, 28, had quietly answered, "Yes, I did," as Deputy District Attorney Roger Kelly asked him if he killed each of five victims in a string of 10 slayings from September 1977 through February 1978. He also pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy.

Later in the day, Bianchi's cousin, Angelo Buono, 45, of Glendale, made a five-minute court appearance. Buono, who is charged with murder in all 10 deaths, has claimed he is innocent.

Municipal Judge Gabriel Butierrez delayed Buono's arraignment until Nov. 5 after the defense sought the continuance. Buono will remain in custody without bail.

KEENE SENTENCED

BIANCHI to six life sentences, one each for the five murders and the sixth for conspiracy to commit murder. The six life sentences, Keene said, must run concurrently with the two consecutive life sentences given him Friday in Bellingham, Wash.

Just minutes after Bianchi's appearance in Bellingham, Buono was arrested. The complaint against Buono filed by the district attorney's office alleges "special circumstances" in the killings, meaning the death penalty can be sought if he is convicted.

Bianchi agreed to plead guilty and testify against his cousin in return for an agreement by Los Angeles and Whatcom County, Wash., authorities not to seek the death penalty in his case.

Bianchi's appearance Monday was in marked contrast to his tearful session in Bellingham.

At that session, Bianchi admitted strangling Karen Mandic, 22, of Bellevue, Wash., and Diane Wilder, 27, of Bremerton, Wash., both students at Western Washington University.

"I HAVE TO take responsibility for what I've done, and I have to do everything I can to get Angelo Buono," he sobbed.

After Monday's session, Kelly said he was satisfied with the agreement.

"Now we will be able to prosecute Mr. Buono, and that gives me a great deal of satisfaction," he said.

Authorities had originally linked 13 slayings to the "Hillside Strangler."

"It appears now the other three slayings may have been committed by other persons," District Attorney John Van de Kamp said.

BIANCHI AND BUONO first discussed the idea of murder in September 1977. Van de Kamp alleges, when they "had one or more conversations about having sex with a girl and then killing her."

On Oct. 17, 1977, the cousins "decided to pick up a girl and have sex with her," Van de Kamp said.

That night, according to the complaint, they encountered Yolanda Washington at an undisclosed place, and Kenneth Bianchi put handcuffs on her. Then, it said, the men raped and killed her.

In nine other "Strangler" murders, the complaint alleged, Bianchi and Buono either kidnapped or coerced young women to Buono's Glendale house. It said all of the women were raped and some were sodomized before they were slain at Buono's residence.

The lengthy complaint filed by the district attorney's office also alleges that Bianchi and Buono operated a prostitution ring from as early as June 1977, but indicates that none of the women in the ring were victims of the stranglings.

UAW, Chrysler still bargaining contract

DETROIT — United Auto Workers union leaders Monday reported progress in bargaining with ailing Chrysler Corp., yet complained of the company's failure to respond to a sealed down UAW contract offer.

"UAW President Douglas Fraser said 'The time is passed for them to react.'

"We're getting a little impatient, but we can't make them respond, I suppose," he said.

Faced with a wide-ranging union contract offer covering wages and pensions, the UAW said Chrysler so far has made only one counter offer on pensions. It was rejected as inadequate.

Fraser expressed his first doubts about the automaker's determination to meet a negotiating deadline set for Thursday at noon.

"Certainly there's more doubt in my mind today than there was yesterday or the day before," Fraser said. "But, you know, we have time yet."

However, the union reported several lesser issues had been resolved and intense bargaining continued on other outstanding items.

Fraser said he would not bargain past the deadline and reiterated the company would be forced to explain to Congress — from which it is seeking financial aid — the reasons for its failure to reach agreement.

Energy alternatives examined

Tax credits available from Michigan and the federal government make solar hot water heating a particularly attractive alternative, he added.

Roland Zapp, professor of electrical engineering and systems science, has helped to design the largest solar water heating system in the country.

That system, located at the Ingham County Medical Care Facility, 3860 Dobie Road, Okemos, saves about 20,000 gallons of oil a year, Zapp said.

THE SYSTEM HAS about 10,000 square feet of solar collector surface and is expected to provide 25 percent of the hot water for the facility.

Water in the system is heated to 180 degrees, but temperatures have surpassed 200 degrees, said Vern Alshider, maintenance supervisor at the facility.

Zapp added that the facility is being monitored over a five-year period by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to determine how effective solar energy is in this area.

Another type of solar power system Zapp has been involved with is solar photovoltaics, which makes a direct conversion of sunlight to electricity.

He added that photovoltaics is the "most promising thing we have coming on the horizon."

A solar photovoltaic cell consists of a semi-conductor, which is usually specially coated silicon crystals, and convert sunlight into electricity.

ZAPP IS CURRENTLY involved in a project which will partially power an expressway rest area near Niles, Mich., with photovoltaics.

"The one we're putting together here (in Niles) will be the biggest in Michigan," he said. The photovoltaics will provide about 5 kilowatts of power.

Photovoltaic cells were first developed for the space program in the late 1950s, Zapp said, and the electricity they produced cost $200 a watt.

Today photovoltaics can produce electricity for about $10 a watt, he added, and it is figured they will be cost effective when the reach 50 cents a watt (in 1975 dollars).

"But that's still in the future," Zapp added.

However, it may not be too far in the future. The Department of Energy projects 1986 as the year photovoltaics will become cost effective, Zapp said, and so far the development has followed DOE's predicted trajectory of cost reductions.

UNDER PEAK CONDITIONS a photovoltaic cell could produce 100 watts of electricity per square meter, he added.

An average house with 120 square meters of roof space could produce more electricity than would be needed for an entire day in about two hours, Zapp said.

Back up energy sources would still be needed, however, since no energy would be produced on cloudy days, he warned.

Zapp also said that solar energy couldn't be brought into use fast enough to meet the energy needs of the nation for many years.

ANOTHER FORM OF energy which will be providing power in the future is wind. Wind is considered a solar energy because the sun creates wind by heating and cooling the atmosphere.

"The best (wind) system that we've analyzed right now is a 45 kilowatt system," Stout said of wind research done in agricultural engineering.

IF, HOWEVER, AN attempt is made to store the energy for later use, "your economics fall apart," Stout said, so all that energy has to be used as soon as it comes in.

"I should point out that I'm looking at small scale wind power," Stout added. "Other people are looking at the megawatt generators."

One of those other people is Jes Asmussen Jr., an MSU professor in electrical engineering and system science.

Asmussen predicts that wind power could be supplying between 3 and 5 percent of the nation's energy by the year 2000.

"But to do that would require 40,000 to 80,000, 300-foot, 2.5 megawatt wind machines," he said.

Right now there are some obstacles to wind power: It is costly for the homeowner and it is risky for utilities because it hasn't been proven yet, he added.

"Those impediments are likely to change in the next few years because there's quite a bit of research and development being done," Asmussen said.

A few years ago, he said no one was making wind turbines in the United States, but today there are between 25 and 30 wind turbine manufacturers, and in the 1990s they expect to be producing 100,000 wind machines a year.

Tomorrow: an examination of the potential and problem of obtaining energy from biomass materials.

Holly Near sings in Lansing for a 'Nuclear Free Future'

J.T. Thomas, who accompanied Near on the piano, also backed her up on some of the numbers. The entire concert was performed exquisitely in American Sign Language by Susan Freudlich, interpreter for the aurally impaired. Freudlich was especially good on a number called "Fight Back," written by Near. Her quick, short movements portraying a woman "fighting back" set a dramatic background for Near's words. "Some have an easy answer. Buy a lock and live in a cage. But my fear is turning to anger. And my anger is turning to rage. And I won't live my life in a cage — no!"

Near said the reason she and her company are on tour against nuclear power is because "we looked into our own lives and decided that this is what we do best. I urge you to look into your own lives to see what it is that you can do best to tear down the destruction of nuclear power, nuclear weapons and the nuclear mentality which has put this planet on a death trip."

Near and her company will see, before they are through in December, more than 30 cities on their nation-wide tour against nukes. She told the Lansing audience some of the horror stories she has heard about nuclear power, including ones about exploitation of Native Americans, cancer, leukemia, stillbirths and women rushing to get abortions after exposure to radiation.

"The stories we hear range from ones about workers' health to horrendous stories of unborn children. We want to help in the solution," she added. "Some of us will survive this struggle and some of us won't. But we don't have any choice."

The concert was excellently staged, with Near's more intense numbers followed by original ragtime pieces, composed and played by Thomas. Near sang several numbers without music, and received standing ovations for many songs.

One of the highlights of the evening was Near's rendition of "Imagine My Surprise," a celebration of lesbian love and the title cut of her latest album.

Near is well-versed in almost all of the entertainment media: she did films, TV and Broadway (Hair) during the '60s, and she has produced four albums since. Like I said, this lady could have been a star. For the sake of all of us who are counting on her to say the things that need to be said, however, I'm glad she's not.

Coach praises stickers' performance home the insurance goal on a pass from Klepinger with eight minutes to play in regulation time.

The two victories on Friday meant the stickers would play for the championship Saturday against Purdue who had beaten the Spartans, 42, earlier this year. Purdue was defending its Big Ten crown in this year's tournament.

"We attacked well for the first seven minutes," Kajornsin said, "then Purdue scored on a penalty corner to go out ahead 1-0."

TWELVE MINUTES INTO the game, Klepinger took a pass from Seymour and went the length of the field to beat the Boilermaker goalie with the equalizer.

With 18 minutes left in the opening half, Klepinger passed to Barb Oakley, who slammed the ball home to give the Spartans a 2-1 halftime advantage.

"The first half was our whole game against Purdue," explained Kajornsin.

Purdue scored three minutes into the second half and Kajornsin said that "something was wrong at this point."

"Our passing got very bad from then on and we committed a lot of errors."

PURDUE SCORED TWICE more, both goals coming as a result of penalty corners, and MSU was denied its first conference championship in field hockey since 1976.

"We played well for two-and-a-half games," Kajornsin said. "Overall though, I was very pleased with the play of the team, and by beating Michigan, that will help when it comes time for seeding in the state tournament. I think we accomplished a lot."
